The temperature and rainfall during february were both below normal. In the southern four tiers the ground has been practically bare of snow since about the middle of February, and a succession of freezes and thaws is undoubtedly damaging the wheat.

Keports have been received of the quantity of wheat marketed by farmers during the month of February at 330 elevators and mills. Of these, 318 are in the southern four tiers, which is 68 per cent. and 55 are in the fifth and sixth tiers of counties, which is 64 per cent. of the whole number in these sections, respectively. The deduction is that somewhere near 1,500,000 bushels, besides what is necessary for their own needs, remain in the hands of the farmers of Michigan, to be placed upon the market later.

By order of Committees.

Our farmers who are wool growers, might learn something about the sheep and wool industry by reading the history of Spain. That country used to have the monopoly of the merino fine wool product. The industry was "protected" in every possible way by law, prohibitory duties prevented the importation of wool from any other country, besides, the exportation of merino sheep was absolutely prohibited. The first merino sheep that well, and treat them all alike if you wish to be well treated yourselves. ever came to this country were smuggled out of Spain in violation of law. Spain was determined to make her wool growers rich and supposed she was doing it at the expense and inconvenience of all the rest of the world. Here was "protection" of the wool industry of Spain pure and simple and with a vengeance. Enlightened and progressive Spain still adheres to the "protection" policy, and to-day rejoices and prides herself in having the most perfect and beautiful "pro-tective system" of any country in the world except Russia and China. What has been the result of her beneficent system? The wool industry of Spain is a thing of the past. Mannfacturing has ceased. Agriculture is Jead. Labor is unemployed—the country a desert. If "protection" to native industry would make a country rich and prosperous Spain ought to be the richest and most prosperous country in the world. Labor in protected Spain brings about 161/2

Ann Arbor if —. Now, I sav, go to work business men's association and see what you can do about. Dou't let it go to Kalamazoo. Adrian, or any other city, but have it here.

In my wanderings I hear very little politics discussed. Of course there are always men ready for city offices, but I say let our best men turn out and attend the ward caucuses, and see that the right men are elected delegates to the convention. Don't stay away until after election and then find fault with officers who have been elected, but do your duty by seeing good men nominated. I mean both democrats and republicans.

In conversation with Mayor Smith a they should expend over twenty-five the city annually. Even the Council that you elect this spring may be the very one that will expend one hundred thousand dollars. Sewerage. One of the great wants of this city to-day is a proper and complete system of sewerage. It wants the best men and all of the best wisdom of such men to adopt a plan that will not prove a total failure after you have expended thousands of dollars in its construction. If the system of using two sewer pipes, one for refluse and the other to carry off the surface water of the streets, should be adopted for the whole city, it is my opinion that it will prove a failure. Too many sewers fail on account of being too small to carry off the amount that is thrown into them. If this is not soon at-Lelie de Lusan made an instant and ronounced success at the Fifth avenue theatre, as Marie in Donizetti's opera "The Daughter of the Regiment." Her cleverness as an actress combines with her remarkable vocal powers, giving to her rendition of the role a fascination as marked as it is unique. M'lle de Lusan nas well-nigh crerted a part in this opera for herself. She sings the score that Donizetti wrote but she plays the Marie shs has herself conceived. Her voice is a rich and sympathetic soprano, and is managed with artistic skill. The comany is well balanced.-At the grand next londay evening.

THE GOVERNESS.

BY J. E.

CHAPTER I.

Margaret Crewe sat on a stile in the nome meadow, staring dreamily, almost moodily, at Oak Hurst, whose red rook and queer twisted chimney-stacks were wreathed in ivy, while the sunlight fell in bars of burnished gold on the windows, making them flash like polished copper, and streamed between the trunks of the giant oaks that gave the place its name, and glanced on the sil ver-birches and budding beeches, and other monarchs that studded the land around the forest house.

It was a pretty place always, and looked its best illuminated by the cherry spring sunshine, that woke into life the modest violet and pure snowdrop; and the girl sitting on the stile felt a sob rise in her throat at the thought of leaving it-her home of three years.

They had been happy yearsmoderately, temperately happy only; after the brilliant and stormy ones that had gone before, they seemed full of peace and quiet to the storm-tossed girl. However, there was no help for itshe must go.
Henry Locksley's new wife hated

Margaret Crewe, the governess, be ause she was beautiful, and she Mrs. Locksley, was plain; and she was jealous of the good honest fellow whose affections she had won. Why she need have pitched on Margaret as the object of her ealousy was a mystery, for if the master of Oak Hurst meant making love to her, surely he woul : have done so when she first came to his house three years boy, and not after he had taken to himself of his own free will another wife.

Unly the green-eved monster took firm possession of Gertrude Locksley's heart. and nothing would exorcise this demon save the departure of the governess.

Harriet Locksley, Henry's sister, flatly declined to see any fault in the girl, who had so honestly discharged her duty towards little Jim, and as it was hardly a subject on which the new made wife could consult her bridegroom, she set herself silently and steadily to work to make Miss Crewe feel herself de trop at Oak Hurst, and miserable and unwelcome, as one woman so well can make another, if she is spiteful and choses to do so. Margaret struggled on bravely for the sake of the child for a while, also because the Locksleys, brother and sister, were unfailingly kind to her; and being friendless and poor, she dreaded just a little facing the world

Each day Mrs. Locksley became more rude and insulting in her manner, found fault with everything she did—her mode of teaching the child, her dress, her manners, etc. - and lost no opportunity of lowering and humiliating in the eyes of the servants, who readily took their cue from their new mistress, and were insolent to the dependent governess, who, after all, they argued, was little better than themselves, and really a servant for all that she dressed like a lady and had her meals with the

Mrs, Locksley altered this, and after her arrival Margaret breakfasted in lonely state in the schoolroom. Henry Locksley made a feeble protest against this, but he was completely under his wife's thumb, and gave way

It galled her to dwell on those peaceful days, full of calm, ere Gertrude Rayner came to reign at Oak Hurst as mistress, for all was so sadly changed since she held the reins of management and she felt that she was being driven been receiving."

"Very liberal," she murmured.
"Will you think it over? They would want you at once," he continued, divining there had been a storm in teacup, and that it would be a relief to Margaret to get away soon from Oak Hurst; 'so you could go this week. You can have a holiday. Will you think it

Its opening on the surface of the ground was probably ten feet in diameter, but four or five feet from the ground it spread out, as I afterward discovered, for twenty or thirty feet, making a big chamber. This spot was two or three miles from the 'nills,' and, marking it as best I could, I returned to my shack, intending to return and explore it further.
