CHAPTER XIII.

With admirable self-possession Mario advanced toward the intruder, and said in a calm, clear voice:

"May I ask, Signor, to what cause am I indebted for your unexpected visit?"

Before replying, Scarpa cast a quick glance about the room, taking in, as was his wont, the measured tones:

"I beg to apologize," he began; then, as his eyes fell upon the trembling Francois, "First, however, I dismiss your servant! What I have to say I prefer to say before him."

Mario motioned to Francois to leave the room. As the door closed behind him, it seemed to Cavaradossi that a short snuffle took place outside. But the door spoke very quickly.

"I beg to apologize, Signor Cavaradossi—I believe that is your name?"—Mario bowed.

"For my somewhat unceremonious appearance, but my business is grave, and I hope," with a slight accent upon the word, "that it may be accomplished without unpleasant consequences."

"I trust," replied Mario, "that you will be able to account to me satisfactorily for your extraordinary behavior. Be kind enough to explain your business in as few words as possible, as I am engaged."

"So I perceive," observed Scarpa, with a disagreeable smile, turning to La Tosca, who was calmly seated near the table. In the presence of danger she could be as cool and collected as her lover.

At the words and smile Mario's face flushed deeply. He had entirely forgotten for the moment how compromising was La Tosca's position.

"I sincerely hoped," went on Scarpa, advancing a step or two towards La Tosca, "to have the pleasure of seeing you again, madame, and I can only express the deep delight it affords me to find you here. I see the Marchesa's fan upon the table. Was it to return that that you came?"

"Signor Scarpa—" began Mario, angrily. But La Tosca, rising haughtily, interrupted him.

"Signor Scarpa," she said, in her clear, trill-like tones, with glance of superb disdain in her dark eyes, "do not me your sarcasms. Why am I here is a matter between this gentleman and myself and can in no way concern you. As you say you have some business to transact with Signor Cavaradossi, you will pardon me if I retire."

"Pardon me," rejoined Scarpa, "but that I cannot allow. Your presence I request, or demand, if it suits you better."

Mario started, but Florida placed her hand upon his arm.

"Never!" came the firm reply. "Men, do your duty!"

Florida flung herself at his feet. "What you are doing is shameful! For the love of God, have mercy, have mercy!"

"Do your duty!" came the pitiless answer.

Two of the agents advanced and bound Mario's arms behind his back, while a third fitted the murderous-looking cap to his head. He made no resistance, knowing that it was useless and that no mercy was to be expected.

With the scream of a mad woman, her eyes dilated, her lips like ashes, Florida started to her feet and sprang like a tigress toward her lover, but the agent of police was too quick for her. Seizing her arm in a vice-like grip, he forced her back. She sank, half-fainting, to the floor, her long, gleaming hair unloosed, and her rich robes trailing behind her.

"Are you still obstinate?" said Scarpa, in the same calm, passionless voice.

"Wretch!" cried Mario, shaking with rage. "You shall know nothing, I swear. Do you think with bits of wood and iron you can make a gentleman speak? I defy you! Do your worst!"

Scarpa raised his hand as a signal. One of the agents gave a turn of a screw which compressed the cap tighter about the victim's head. Mario said for the pressure of the little steel points with which his hand was lined. The beads of perspiration stood out upon his face.

"Will you speak?"

"No more," said the pitiless voice. "Ah! demon! brigand! assassin!"

At this Florida lost all control of herself. Her only thought was of her lover's agony. All else was swallowed up in this.

"Stop! stop!" she grasped, wrenching herself loose and trying to get to her feet. "For the love of God, stop! I will tell you all! Go—go to the foot of the garden! The cistern! The cistern!"

A look of triumph came into Scarpa's face. This was what he had

CHAPTER XIII.

Scarpa's manner changed instantly. "This is my business, Signor Cavaradossi," he said, in measured tones:

"This morning, a prisoner, named Cesare Angelotti, escaped from the castle of St. Angelo, and took refuge in the chapel of Saint Andrew of the Quirinal, where, I believe, you are engaged in painting a series of frescoes. Am I correct?"

Mario had been expecting this, and not a muscle of his face changed.

"I do not deny that I am painting in Saint Andrew's chapel, yes. But I fail, utterly, to see how this man's reported escape can interest me."

"You will see presently," returned the agent of police, significantly. "I accuse you, Signor Cavaradossi, of having connived at this young man's escape."

"The charge is ridiculous," replied Mario, calmly. "If your only excuse for coming here to-night is an absurdity like that, I must request you to relieve me of your presence at once."

"It is not an absurdity to trifle with me," retorted Scarpa, savagely. "I have positive information that Angelotti was aided by you to leave the chapel, and more than that, is at present concealed in this house."

Florida turned a shade paler and instinctively drew a little closer to her lover, an action which was not lost upon the quick-witted baron.

"Do you deny that?" he asked. "Slendie mendax, Mario replied: 'Absolutely.'"

Scarpa smiled, a smile half scornful, half pitying. "This is folly, worse than that of Signor Cavaradossi, and you are simply jeopardizing your own liberty. I have keen eyes, Signor, and those curtains were drawn just a trifle too late. What have you to say now?"

Mario made no reply. He saw that further denial was useless, but he was determined more than ever not to give up the young man who had thrown himself upon his mercy and protection.

"Come, come, Signor," continued Scarpa, in a tone that was meant to be conciliatory. "As I said before, this is worse than folly. It means danger to you. Give up your resistance, and I guarantee you will be unmolested."

Mario looked the police agent full in the face, and said, boldly: "Never!"

"Think twice, I warn you. Where is Angelotti?"

"You shall never hear it from my lips."

"I shall be sorry to be obliged to proceed to extremities," said Scarpa, opening the door which led into the hall.

"Mario!" said La Tosca, in an agonized whisper, clinging to her lover's arm. "What does he mean?"

"Have no fear, Florida," he returned. "I shall know how to do my duty."

Scarpa waved his hand and four agents of police quietly entered the room. One held in his hands a coil of rope, and another a peculiar machine, shaped something like a cap, made of wood and leather and with a narrow iron band running round the rim.

As Florida saw this she uttered a stifled cry, but at a word from Mario she drew herself up proudly, pale and silent.

"Zaccone," said Scarpa, addressing the leader of the men. "Have you searched the house?"

"Yes, your excellency, but we have discovered nothing. He is not in the house."

"Have you interrogated the servants?"

"Yes, your excellency. 'With what results?' that Angelotti has been here, was here, in fact, just before our arrival."

A smothered malediction broke from Mario's lips.

"Never!" came the firm reply. "Men, do your duty!"

staying; the concierge told her that that gentleman had gone out fully an hour before, but as to where he was, she had no information. This was a terrible blow to Florida, as she had counted much upon the Chevalier's assistance. What to do next? Suddenly she thought of Prince Kalisch.

The old Russian always professed himself her devoted friend, and with his influence at court could doubtless, if the choice, be of great advantage to her.

She was fortunate enough to find Kalisch at home. At her first words he assured her that she might rely upon him to do all in his power. He was not in the least deterred by the fact that she was in a deep study.

"My dear madame," he said, finally, "this is a most unfortunate occurrence. The whole thing is very queer, and the harboring of political refugees, and after the news of last night, the authorities, I fear, will not be inclined to be lenient."

"What do you mean, Prince?" she asked, her eyes dilated with fear.

LABORS OF GREEN ONES.

Byron spent the leisure hours of nearly four years in the preparation of the first two cantos of "Childe Harold." Locke is said to have spent over six years in the preparation of his essay on the "Human Understanding."

Francis Jeffrey commonly spent two or three weeks on each one of his articles in the Edinburgh Review.

Grote is reported to have spent fifteen years in the work of preparing and writing his "History of Greece."

Goldsmith wrote "The Vicar of Wakefield" in six weeks. It is said to have been a story of his own recollections.

Charles Lamb would write one of his essays in an evening after a day spent at his desk in the East India office.

Newton spent over eight years in experiments and the collection of data for his "Principles of Natural Philosophy."

Young wrote his "Night Thoughts" in less than six weeks, as a means of comforting himself under his bereavement.

Machiavelli was many years in gathering material for "The Prince," but the actual work of writing was done in six months.

It has lately been ascertained that the humming noise made by telegraph wires is not due to wind as it can be heard in time of dead calm. The most tenable explanation is that it is caused by a tightening of the wires, owing to atmospheric changes.

ABOUT PERFUMES.

A slab in the great palace of Nineveh represents a lady fainting and an attendant holding a smelling bottle, probably of perfumes, to her nose to revive her.

At the court of Louis XIV. the use of perfume was so general among both gentlemen and ladies that throughout Europe it was known as the "Scented Court."

Perfumes are now extensively manufactured in the United States, and the native articles are said by experts to compare favorably with foreign manufactures.

From the gaster, repulsive in its original condition, the art of chemistry has developed an immense variety of essential oils and essences of fruits and flowers.

The use of perfumes became so extravagant in Athens during the time of Solon that he issued an edict forbidding Athenians to use them except in certain specified cases.

Many perfumes are believed to be antiseptic in their qualities, and some physicians entertain the opinion that a more liberal use of them in the sick room would be beneficial.

The perfumers of Rome lived in a special quarter set apart for their use, and whole streets were lined with their shops, which were lounging places for wealthy young nobles.

The fruits and flowers which attain greatest perfection and the highest fragrance in South Europe afford favorable facilities for the manufacture of perfumes and essences.

OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN.

He Sees About Everything and Talks About Everything He Sees.

There have been many complaints from various sources, about the way in which our streets are torn up by the sewer trenches. Our Man falls to see why the contractors are to blame, when they have evidently pushed the work as rapidly as possible.

Our Man saw an old horse standing in front of a house in our city last Saturday during the cold, drizzling rain which was so disagreeable to all who had to stand it.

There is a leak in the gutters on the roof of Harris hall, and water runs in a large stream from this during every rain, or melting of the snow.

Our Man was walking down S. State st. the other morning, when he saw an elderly lady making her way along the slippery, slushy sidewalk with evident embarrassment.

"A sense of gratitude and a desire to benefit others afflicted as I have been prompt me to recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla to all who have Catarrh. For many years I have been troubled with catarrh, indigestion and kidney trouble. The first bottle relieved the pain in my head and I began to get better. SYPHILIS EMISSIONS STRICTURE CURED

Wm. A. Walker of 16th Street says—"I have suffered untold agonies for my 'gay life.' I was induced into young and ignorant. As 'one of the boys' I contracted Syphilis and other venereal diseases. I suffered in the month and throat, bone pains, hair loss, pimples on neck, finger nails came off, eruptions, became thin and despondent. Several doctors treated me with Mercury by mouth, etc. They helped me but could not cure me. Finally I tried the 'Golden Monitor' and was cured in a few weeks. Their treatment is wonderful. You feel yourself gaining every day. I have never heard of their failing to cure in a similar case."

Representatives of a publication called the "Headlight" have been in Ann Arbor for a few weeks to induce our city fathers to spend several hundred dollars for half-tone cuts, to adorn an edition of that publication issued as a special Ann Arbor number. This scheme has been attempted in Ypsilanti and was so shown up by the Commercial, of that city, that it failed to succeed. The idea of the promoters of the scheme, is to insert write-ups of the business firms here at exorbitant rates, but as most of our business men are convinced that the publication will have a very limited circulation they will hardly enter into the scheme, any more than we believe the council will.

He at that time deposited a certified check with the cashier of the Ypsilanti savings bank for $1,405, but with the stipulation that this was not to be cashed by either himself or the city officials until he deposited an equal sum. Last Saturday McKinstry demanded the check of the cashier, but an injunction was issued by the city officials restraining the cashier from giving out the money. A hearing was had before Justice Childs Tuesday, and McKinstry furnished $2,000 bonds, until an examination which was set for Dec. 16.

The success of Hood's Sarsaparilla in conquering scrofula in whatever way it may manifest itself is vouched for by thousands who were severely afflicted by this prevalent disease, but who now rejoice over a permanent cure by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Scrofula may appear as a humor, or it may attack the glands of the neck, or break out in dreadful running sores on the body or limbs. Attacking the mucous membrane, it may develop into ear-nar or lodging in the lungs lead to consumption. Come as it may, a faithful course of treatment with Hood's Sarsaparilla will overcome it, for working upon the foundation of all diseases, impure blood, the system is clarified and vitalized, and vigor, strength and health restored to the body.

Your Teeth

Should be thoroughly cleaned by a dentist once a year; then you can keep them clean and white by using some good tooth powder or paste. Once a day is enough but if you brush them oftener, use a good mouth wash or clear cold water.

We prepare a tooth powder which is not injurious and is recommended by dentists. You may use a bottle for two weeks on trial and if you are not perfectly satisfied you can have your money back. It is worth twenty-five cents a bottle. Our Turkish Tooth-Paste is only 15c and is a delicious dentifrice.

We import our tooth brushes direct from Paris and guarantee them to hold their bristles.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

[OFFICIAL.]

COUNCIL CHAMBER.

Ann Arbor, November 20th, 1935. Adjourned Session.

President Hiseock being absent the Council was called to order by Glen V. Mills City Clerk.

Roll called. Quorum present. Absent Ald. Butterfield, Pres. Hiseock.

On motion of Ald. Laubengayer, Ald. Brown was chosen President pro tem.

COMMUNICATIONS AND PETITIONS.

FROM THE BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS.

To the Honorable Common Council of the City of Ann Arbor:

Gentlemen:—The Board of Public Works desires to call your attention to the fact that the Hill street, and Huron street, lateral sewer systems which are about completed, and to which a large number of houses are already connected, are without flushing facilities, and to the further fact that this condition is due to the refusal of the receiver of the Ann Arbor Water Company to connect the automatic flush-tanks now completed upon those systems to the mains of said company.

The franchise which grants the Water Company exclusive privileges in the streets of Ann Arbor provides as compensation for these privileges, among other things, that "the said Company shall furnish water for the purpose of washing gutters, and flushing all sewers that may be constructed for $100 per annum."

Acting under the provisions of this contract, between the City and the Water Company, this Board has, promptly upon the completion of each lateral sewer, requested the Water Company to connect the flush-tanks upon such lateral with its mains. In the case of the Liberty street and Washington street laterals, this request was complied with, and the flush-tanks upon those sewers are properly connected and furnished with water. The receiver of the Water Company, however, declines to make the proper connections upon Hill street and Huron street laterals, alleging as a reason for such action that the contract between the city and the Water Company did not contemplate the use of the automatic flush-tanks, and that the Company cannot afford to furnish water for the stipulated sum.

As the Water Company, through its receiver, has already made a demand upon your Honorable body for extra compensation for this service, the Board of Public Works deem it expedient to submit to you the following upon this subject:

The language of the contract is plain. It admits of but one construction. The Water Company is to furnish water for washing gutters and flushing sewers, and the city is to pay for that service $100 per year. The quantity of water is not limited, and the manner in which it is to be applied is left open, probably with the intention that both parties would reap the benefit likely to accrue from the rapid improvement of mechanical devices. Such at least has been the result. The automatic flushing system adopted for use upon our sewers has the merit of a high degree of efficiency, with a minimum consumption of water and expense of maintenance. In no other way could the sewers be so cheaply and so effectively flushed with the same quantity of water. Instead of imposing a hardship upon the Water Company, the automatic flush-tanks effect a saving over the water consumption of any other system of flushing that would do the required work in a reasonably efficient manner and the actual expense which the Water Company will be placed under in furnishing the water needed for the proper flushing of sewers already constructed, and those whose construction is contemplated in the near future, will be more than covered by the stipulated price of $100 per year.

With the completion of the Hill street lateral there will be a total of 97 flush tanks, distributed as follows: Liberty street, 9; Washington-st., 14; Huron street, 11; and Hill street, 63. These flush tanks hold 250 gallons each, hence it will require 24,250 gallons of water to fill them all once. Figuring on the basis of discharging each tank twice a week, or 104 times a year, which will be sufficient to keep the sewers clean, it will take only 2,512,000 gallons to flush the entire system for a whole year, about one-half of one per cent. of the quantity which the company now claims to be pumping for the supply of this city. In other words, the work upon the Water Company's pumps, machinery, and men will be increased 1-200th part by the task of flushing sewers.

At the rate of ten cents per thousand gallons, at which the Company rents quality water to private consumers, this quantity would only cost $251.20 per year.

But in computing the extra expense, consequent upon the pumping of this water for flushing sewers, the Water Company cannot fairly charge more than the cost of extra fuel. Its plant is established upon a basis of domestic consumption, and the municipality is already paying a large sum towards its maintenance. The force of engineers and others necessary for the working of its plant will not be increased, nor their hours lengthened by an increase in the consumption of water one-half of one per cent. A few extra strokes of the pumps per hour, and the task is accomplished. And in this connection it may be proper to state that the draught made by the flush-tanks will be evenly distributed to the manifold benefit of both machinery and mains while the method of flushing with fire hose, in addition to a greater consumption of water, would cause periodical disturbances of pressure in the mains with its attendant flow of iron sediment of which every household knows the inconvenience.

After making due allowance for friction in pipe and machinery six tons of good soft coal will furnish the steam necessary to pump to a height of two hundred feet the 2,512,000 gallons of water necessary to flush the sewers now completed for a period of one year, six tons of soft coal will not cost to exceed $15.00, and this $15.00 represents the actual burden at present placed upon the Water Company by exacting a full compliance of its contract with the city for the relief of which burden that company draws $100.00 per year, a new profit of $85.00.

In proof that this estimate of expense is a liberal one for the Water Company we refer you to a recent report of the Secretary of the Detroit Water Board, which places the cost of pumping 1,000,000 gallons of water, so low as $1.98, when using oil for fuel, and $2.68 when using coal, so that to pump this 2,512,000 gallons of water required to flush our sewers for one year would cost with coal for fuel at the Detroit rate, only $7.00 per year.

The exclusive right of furnishing the citizens of Ann Arbor with water for domestic purposes at the present rates, even were that service of a first-class character, constitutes a valuable franchise, and the contract with the Company for water for public purposes is exceedingly liberal as it stands. In addition to a high charge for the school and other public buildings, the city is now paying $5,800.00 per year for hydrant rentals, which service is merely a nominal expense to the Water Company, and further, the building of sewers is a public improvement which has already increased, and will continue to insure the domestic consumption of water, and will consequently increase the revenues of the Water Company. For each gallon furnished for the flushing of sewers, many additional gallons will be sold to private consumers.

Therefore, this Board would recommend that your honorable body take such steps as you may deem proper, most effective and expeditious to secure water service for these flush-tanks under the existing contract before cold weather renders it impracticable to make the connections.

A. M. CLARK, President Board of Public Works. Referred to the Water Committee.

A petition signed by L. Gruner and 22 others asking for the suspension of the building of the lateral sewers on Main street north of Catherine street was read and referred to Sewer Committees.

South University Avenue from Washington street to Packard.

Walnut from South University Ave. to Geddes Ave.

The impassible condition of these streets makes it necessary that this work be done as soon as possible.

University avenue and Hill, would report that he has visited said location and consulted with the parties interested to gather with the City Engineer.

From the statement of the Engineer your member of the committee is of the opinion that there is sufficient fall to make the connections work properly, and owing to the lateness of the season your member of the committee would recommend that nothing be done in the matter this fall with the understanding that if the sewers fail to do their work in a proper manner that the city then lower the sewers as asked by your petitioners and that the additional expense caused by the adopting of an imperfect grade thereof be borne equally by the Board of Public Works and Common Council holding office at the time the plans and specifications of the Hill street sewer were adopted.

Lost as follows: Yeas—Ald. Moore, Maynard, Allmendinger, Koch, Snyder, Laubengayer, Brown, Ferguson, Taylor, Shadford, Coon, Butterfield, Cady—13. Ald. Maynard moved as an amendment to the first minority report that the cost of lowering the sewer be assessed against the Hill Street District.

KILLING A BIRD.

How the Act Affected a Boy with a Toy Gun. A ten-year-old boy of Newtonville was given a toy gun by his father, who laughingly promised him a dollar for every crow he would shoot. Highly elated with his gun, and sanguine of earning a small fortune by shooting crows, the young sportsman spent a day watching for the birds. At a distance of about 100 feet, a crow came near him, greatly to his disappointment, and he reported his ill-success to his father, who said, to comfort him:

"Well, never mind the crows. I'll give you half a dollar for any kind of a bird you can shoot."

Early the next morning the boy, gun in hand, took up his position in the back yard to watch for sparrows. A half-dozen or more unwary birds soon appeared to pick up the crumbs that he had thrown out to lure them within reach of a shot. At a movement on his part the sparrows rose, and the boy fired.

One of the birds was hit and fell to the ground, where it lay for a minute fluttering its wings, and then became motionless. The boy went forward, picked it up and looked at it. The poor little head hung limp—the shot had broken the sparrow's neck. For a moment the boy stood contemplating the dead creature in his hand; then he turned and fled to his home.

"Oh, I've killed it! I've killed it," he cried, in a shocked tone. "It can't fly any more!" and all that day his lament was, "Oh, I wish I hadn't done it! I wish I hadn't done it!"

His father, who had not supposed the boy in any danger of hitting a bird, tried to solace him with the half-dollar and suggestions of what might be bought with it.

"No, papa," was his sorrowful answer. "I don't want it. I wish it could make the sparrow alive again. I never thought it would be like that to kill a bird."

"And," said his father, in concluding the story, "I was more pleased at the tender feeling my boy displayed than I should have been had he become the best shot in the state."—Youth's Companion.
