SALA HAD A HOT TEMPER.

London's Great Journalist Frequently Gave Rein to His Passion.

From the Troy Times: The late George Augustus Sala was a man of exceedingly irascible temper, quickly aroused to anger, but as quickly pacified. His character is best described in two stories told of him by Sir Henry Irving, who was for many years his friend. After Sala's return from his ecturing tour in Australia Irving gave dinner in his honor, and one of the company was Lord Rosebery, an old riend of Sala's. Lord Rosebery made speech, gently bantering the guests of the evening. To the general astonshment Sala took this very ill, and delivered a terrible tirade in reply. He began by rolling out the stateman's names in his full, resonant voice: Archibald Philip Primrose, earl of roads. any full-rigged ship were necessarily athletes, says a writer in the North American Review. The "upper yardmen" in a line-of-battle ship or a frigate were exceptional men in this way, and much more so, perhaps, just about the time that sail power was receiving its death warrant than ever before, These young men had to race aloft to nearly the highest points, at top speed, eight or ten times a week, when the ship was in harbor, to keep their heads and maintain their breath while "holding on by their eyelids," as the phrase went, and manipulating with a careful and measured order of action the various and intricate arrangements for "crossing" or "sending down" the royal and topgallant yards. It was all done at full speed, for it was universally held that the upper yardmen gave a character to the whole ship, and that one which was foremost in the exercise was ever considered "the smartest ship in the fleet." The upper yardmen were always the coming men. They had the most opportunities for distinguishing themselves, were the best known and were most under the eye of the authorities. They developed great muscular power in chest, shoulders and arms. Their lower extremities suffered and one always knew the men who had been upper-yardmen by their tadpolelike appearance when they were bath-

But in the modern steam line-of-battle ship and frigate these extremely athletic specimens formed a very small minority of the "ship company," and none of them could lose his turn at being upper-yardmen so long as the ship's reputation depended upon the speed with which the upper yards were crossed and sent down. In harbor the rest of the blue jackets had the handling of the yards and sails for exercise once or twice a week, but at sea the use of sails for propulsion grew less and less important, and most of the work aloft was more of an exercise and less of a necessity.

AN ENGLISH JAIL CHAFEL.

View of the Prisoners at the Sunday After breakfast nothing much happens until the chapel hour. Now those prisoners who have "gone sick" are visited by the surgeon or his assistant, and if the case is urgent are sent across I sat on a pile of firewood near by, and to the infirmary at once, says a writer in the Quiver. There is no regular cell inspection, the governor or his deputy makes no round; there is no "taking of fight with two bears as he worked reports," no adjudication of pains and away with his knife, when Mrs. Dis- penalties for misconduct. All this will stand over until Monday; even those awaiting punishment, unless it is for outrageous acts of violence or defiance, turn out to go with their fellows to chapel. About 9:30 the chapel bell rings for the first service, that of the Roman Catholics, who in large prisons are usually "located" or lodged in one part of the prison, near their own chapel. The bell for the church of England service follows at about 10 a. m. Both on marching to chapel and when seated within it the various classes and categories of prisoners are kept strictly separate from each other. Males and females approach the chapel by different roads, enter by different doors and occupy different divisions, pews or places apart. Among the males, too the convicted are kept from the unconvicted, and the debtors from both. The women are generally seated first, behind a screen or within a curtainedoff, railed-in inclosure. They are, of course, visible to the chaplain, but to no one else but their own officers. Except for their treble voices heard in responses and hymns, their presence at the service would be unknown. Now and again, however, an attempt to signal or communicate has been tried by individuals of opposite sexes; when a dry cough, persistently repeated, in the female pew, finds an answer in another part of the chapel, it affords a shrewd suspicion that friends are trying to use some code made up outside before imprisonment.

One other class is unhappily to be found at times in the jail chapel, a very distinct class, but seldom containing more than one representative. This is sometimes a "condemned" man in prison, one on whom the extreme penalty has been passed, and who, by the usual custom, is allowed "three clear Sundays" before the awful sentence is accomplished. A condemned convict, although he is never left alone, being ssociated day and night with two wardens as guardians, is never permitted to see or be seen by other prisoners.

Mayor Pingree, of Detroit, in his contest for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, will have a hard time to combat the capital interests of the state. The Republican party generally has little use for a candidate who openly espouses the cause of the people against monopoly. Senator Burrows is strongly opposed to Pingree's candidacy, and so are most of the leaders in the Republican political Roger Q. Mills' strong support of the Cuban insurgents in Congress has met with general approval. Fortune also seems to be on the insurgents' side, when we read of the destruction of the Spanish soldiers by one wing of their army firing into the other, mistaking their own men for their enemies. It is now stated that Great Britian will recognize the insurgents and will make overtures to the United States to join her in this action. This would put the two great English speaking nations on a friendly footing, and might help to an amicable settlement of the Venezuelan controversy.

The jealousy felt by France and Russia concerning the British expedition up the Nile caused the protest issued against this project by the porte. This jealousy might result in open war if England should be successful in extending her dominion in the Soudan. It is thought that premier of England designs to bring the entire length of the Nile under British control, and France and Russia will do all they can to prevent such an event. In the meanwhile, the friends of humanity are anxiously waiting for something to be done by one or all of the powers to prevent the Turks from inflicting further atrocities on the Armenians. A $200,000 GLASS OF BEER. A few years ago a surgeon with the English army in India found that the great heat of the country made the horses perspire very freely, and this made sores under their leather collars. One-fourth of all the horses used for work were laid up with "sore neck."

The doctor found that a treatment of sulphate of zinc was the best remedy, but it was difficult to use it because the horses had to rest while it was being applied, or the collar would rub it off and then there was no chance for cure It occured to him that a pad might be made of zinc and fitted under the horse's collar, and help, at least to remove the trouble. But the doctor was a drinking man and had no money to carry out his thought. He stood at a bar one day talking with an Amercian drummer about the disease among the horses, and in the course of the conversation said he believed he knew a remedy for the trouble The American asked him what he would take for the idea.

"Well," said he, "I'm so hard up that I can't get a drink on trust. I'll give you the idea for a glass of beer."

"Done!" said the other. The more the American thought of the plan the better he liked it, and although his business would have kept him in Bombay some months longer. he took the steamer to Liverpool in a few days, and thence to Boston. There he threw up his engagement with the leather house, patented the idea, and went into the manufacture of zinc pads is buried. These are now used in every country on earth, and are one of the greatest blessings the farmer has. The owner of the idea is now worth $200,000. SECOND DISTRICT W. C. T. U. CON-

OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN.

He Sees About Everything and Talks About Everything He Sees.

Our Man is glad to see that the movement to establish a convalescents' cottage home in connection with the University hospitals is meeting with a good reception in the cities of the state. In Detroit, Monday evening, a union meeting of the King's Daughters was held, and Miss Kate Bond, national vice president of the order, addressed the meeting. In the course of her remarks she urged on the societies the needs of such a home here, and they are seriously considering ways and means of raising a sufficient sum of money for the purpose.

Our Man read this paragraph in Wednesday's U. of M. Daily: "A distributor for the Athletic Association was caught burning the bills turned over to him last week. He was merely indulging in a common practice of distributors which should be universal; at any rate no one is the loser by it. The usual spring flooding of the campus with handbills might be prevented by the agitators who are casting about for some practical mission. The senior literary class of the University will present a complete set of casts of the statuary groups which form the Emperor Trajan's triumphal arch at Bento, Italy. These casts will be secured by the School of Archeology at Rome and the universities of Michigan, Harvard and Princeton will be the American purchasers of the casts. The arch will be 60 feet high, 40 feet wide and 12 feet thick. Eighty human figures will be represented, together with 100 other figures. Many of these will be over life size. It is the purpose agreed that habitual drunkenness has of the class to purchase the casts and keep them after they arrive here next fall as an art and archeological collecports show unmistakably that inebriety tion until the proposed art building is erected, when the complete arch will be built under a glass dome in the to the account of intoxication show in center of the building. Hood's Sarsaparilla has achieved great success in warding off sickness which, if allowed to progress, would have undermined the whole system and given disease a strong foothold to cause much suffering and even threaten death. Hood's Sarsaparilla has done all this and even more. It has been taken in thousands of cases which were thought to be incurable, and after a fair trial has effected wonderful cures bringing health, strength and joy to the afflicted. Another important point about Hood's Sarsaparilla is that its cures are permanent, because they start from the solid foundation of purified vitalized and enriched blood. But it is not what we say but what Hood's Sarsaparilla does that tells the story.

THE LEGS KICKED.

Surprise of an English Visitor Who Thought He Was Rescuing a Man.

Frank Hyatt, who has long enjoyed an income of £3,000, derived principally from his vocation as a "booking agent' for London Thespians, two weeks ago landed in the American metropolis for the purpose, as he said, of seeing what on earth Mr. J. A. Bailey could do with so many men and beasts as he had been shipping to him. New York and its ceaseless rush amazed him. Mr. Bailey's winter quarters at Bridgeport Broadway cars, "a lot of trams pulled New York World.

His idle moments "at 'ome" are spent upon the race-courses of England and there, in times past, he has met many of his friends. Recently, at an uptown into Broadway he shouted:

"Hold on here! Don't start that car! Here, somebody, call an ambulance!" foremost under the car and began tugangry voice of the conductor saying:

you think we want to block Broadway bible story.

Moreover, he is quick to avail himself of an opportunity to partake of the homely fare of the country people, and he shows a liking for

'roughing it." Mr. Harrison, when he was in the white house, was quite as fond as is Mr. Cleveland of shooting and fishing, but he did not devote as much time to that sort of enjoyment. There is a great difference between the habits of the two men when in the field, the boat, or the blind. Their difference in temperament is very conspicuously shown in the manner of handling a gun and taking a shot. Harrison has more of the recognized traits of a sportsman. He is a quick shot and takes chances. He is ready to risk an almost impossible shot rather than let it go without the trial, and often gets his game on just such a slim chance. He does not wait for a sure thing. Consequently, when he has been duck shooting, he has made more misses, but at the same time bagged more game than has Cleveland.

Cleveland seems to be more anxious not to miss than he is to get the shot. He will permit any number of chances to pass without pulling the trigger which Harrison would take, hit or miss. He will wait for hours, possibly half the day, for a sure thing, and let fair chance opportunities go by. He shows neither impatience nor fatigue in waiting. He brings his gun firmly to his shoulder, gets a deliberate sight along the barrel and when he is perfectly sure of his aim pulls the trigger. Very general response is being made by the commercial and manufacturing interests of the country to the circular letters addressed to them by the house ways and means sub-committee on reciprocity and commercial treaties, inviting expressions of opinion from them as to the advisability of endeavoring to renew the reciprocity agree-ments made with many foreign countries under the terms of the McKinley tariff act. There is an unquestionable preponderance of desire for the renewal of the reciprocity agreements.

During the debate on the Cuban question in the United States senate, nany allusions were made both by Senator Sherman and Senator Hill as to the attitude of President Grant and Hamilton Fish, then secretary of state on the question, which was an important one during the former Cuban war. On the authority of diaries in the pos-session of Hamilton Fish, son of the late secretary, it is shown that President Grant had at one time, under the rcumstances of a pending negotiation at Madrid, been inclined to recognize the belligerency of Cuba; but on June 13, 1870, the opinion of the President and the cabinet was unanimous that there were not facts to justify the declaration of belligerency, and that the satisfaction of the President with the Cuban policy of his administration and its effects upon the country and

A document which will have an important bearing on the Venezuelan dispute has been submitted to the Venezuelan commission. This document is a geographical work of two volumes, published in 1822, and is by Prof. Myers, of the Royal Military academy, Woolwich, Eng., and an officer of the British government. By virtue of his official position, he had access to all British archives, and published his work just eight years after the cession made to England by Holland, of the three settlements marara, Berlice and Essequibo. In this geography, which is a very exhaustive and complete work, and which was the standard authority of its day, it is both stated on the map and re peated several times in the text that
