Michigan Quill Drivers Go on a Joyful Excursion.

A Delightful Trip Through the Northern Summer Resorts.

A combined meeting of the Michigan State Press Association and the Western Michigan Association was held at Traverse City last week, and the Michigan editors with their wives and some with their wives and children were out in full force armed with railroad and steamboat passes and invitations to banquets and receptions, "too numerous to mention;" and a jolly crew they were, numbering at one time nearly four hundred persons and representing just about 200 enterprising newspapers.

The birds sang sweetly; the crystal dew drops sparkled like diamonds in the early sunlight; the air was fresh and dustless and the turmoil of traffic had not begun when the writer of these lines, with the little lady who has shared his printer's fare for fifteen eventful years, boarded the early morning train for Wayne, where they were to meet a special train of excursionists on the Flint and Pere Marquette road. About nine o'clock, after we had waited two hours, the special came along from Monroe, and here we found on board Hon. Chas. S. Hampton, of Harbor Springs, president of the state association, who had come down to look after his numerous family, which he did all the week in most excellent manner, with perfect patience and good humor, although myriads of times asked the most useless and unnecessary questions. D. Edwards, assistant general manager of the road was also along, and to his especial oversight and gentlemanly courtesy the excursionists are greatly indebted for much of the comfort and pleasure of the trip. A dozen or more editors with their wives and families were on board when the train left Wayne, and at nearly every station additions were made to the party, until by the time the train had reached Reed City, 179 miles northwest, the number had reached nearly 200. At Reed City the excursionists left the F. and P. M. and went on board a special train from Grand Rapids, kindly furnished the press gang by the Grand Rapids and Indiana railroad, and were carried over the intervening miles to Traverse City in quick time, arriving there at 7:30 in the evening.

A reception committee of the leading citizens, headed by a fine band of young musicians, escorted the wearied excursionists to the elegant Park Place Hotel, where they shook their dusty linen, washed the cinders from their eyes and sat down to an excellent supper, for which the favorite dish always sought for and scarcely ever found lacking, was the delicious white fish or trout. The commodious and finely-managed Park Place Hotel accommodated 250 guests; nearly a hundred slept and took their meals on the steamer City of Traverse, and fifty more stopped at the Occidental and Locust Grove hotels, and some enjoyed the hospitality of their friends at private houses. All this crowd of newspaper men and their wives were entertained free of expense, from supper time Monday evening until after breakfast Wednesday morning, by these generous-hearted Traverse City people in a right royal manner. If there is one town in all this wide world upon which is centered the good wishes, and for whose prosperity and happiness the editors of Michigan will ever pray, it is Traverse City, with its honored Hannah, Lay & Co., and its other generous-hearted citizens, whose liberality on this occasion must have cost them over a thousand dollars.

Traverse City has a population of 3,500, is located at the head of the west arm of Grand Traverse Bay, and is the largest town on the bay. Its location is one of rare beauty and healthfulness. The people are noted for their public spirit and liberality; the business men are wide-awake and pushing, and the manner in which they use the advertising columns of their excellent newspapers, the Herald and Eagle, shows that they appreciate the advantages of the press in building up their town. The wealthiest firm of the city, one which has done more than any other in building up the place, is Hannah, Lay & Co., who own fine steamers, have a large and beautiful four-story brick block containing seven stores, and costing over a hundred thousand dollars. They also own the elegant Park Place Hotel, of which the popular Col. J. D. Billings is manager, and besides all this they have two great saw mills, a large grist mill and manage other enterprises, all of which seem to be adding daily to their great resources.

Tuesday morning the ladies of the party with a few gentlemen rode about the city, and the surrounding country in carriages provided by the citizens, visiting, among other interesting points, the new and still unfinished asylum for the insane, which is beautifully located on the banks of the bay a short distance from the city.

A brief business session of the State press association was held in the forenoon; afterward the Western association held their literary exercises, consisting of a spicy paper entitled "C. O. D." by Ed. E. Smith, of the Howard City Record, an essay on "The Duty of an Editor" by Geo. Wm. Buckley, of Battle Creek, an essay on "Rules for Display" by Major Long of the Mt. Pleasant Times, a humorous poem on "The Knights of the Quill" by the original and facetious Farmer Reynolds of the recent Grand Rapids Cyclone, and a talk upon "Pen, Ink and Paste-Pot" by Hiram Potts of the Grand Haven Courier-Journal. Potts drew out, with a most serious and unemotional cast of countenance, a quantity of dry humor that kept his audience in a constant roar of laughter. He was voted "a brick."

The State press association held their literary exercises Tuesday afternoon. Tom S. Applegate of the Adrian Times, read an interesting address upon "Random Thoughts about the Newspaper Business." S. F. Cook read a paper upon "The Press as an Educator," prepared by Hon. Wm. Van Buren of the Lansing Republican, who did not arrive to join the excursionists until the evening of this day. D. B. Ainger's paper on "The Mission of a Country Newspaper," was read by his partner, Chas. E. Baxter, of the Charlotte Republican; "Hints on the Preservation of Type" was a timely and well received article by Mr. Lee of the firm of Schneidewind & Lee, of Chicago. A "Press Song" written in a fit of inspiration by Major Long, was sung with great desperation and some perspiration by Orno Strong and the other members of the press choir. This song of about a dozen verses, written to the old tune of "Marching Thro' Georgia" was sung repeatedly and the ending always met with hearty applause. All Northern Michigan is amazed at the wonderful musical capacity of the Michigan editors—those who could sing at all—and that monotonous old tune probably goes jangling through this day through every editor's wearied brain, with its tramp, tramp, like Mark Twain's "Punch, Brothers, Punch."

A number of the leading citizens of the city called upon the members, at the parlors of the Park Place in the evening, and a very pleasant social time was enjoyed, band music, singing, and recitations by a talented lady elocutionist from New York adding to the pleasure of the occasion.

At about eight o'clock Wednesday morning the excursionists embarked on the steamers City of Traverse, Faxton and City of Grand Rapids, and with bands of music playing beautifully, and flags unfurled, sailed down the bay side by side about forty miles to Charlevoix. It was one of the happiest, whittiest, most intelligent and well behaved crowds ever seen in this or any other state, and the sparkling scintillations of wit as they escaped from each "punacious" editor were only equalled in brilliancy by the sparkling water in the bright sunlight of the beautiful day.

At Charlevoix a committee of citizens with a fine band of music escorted the editorial procession to the opera house, where an address of welcome was delivered by A. D. Cruikshank and responded to by President Hampton. The "Hurry" victims again submitted to the "Press Song" after which the gang was divided into three sections and made double quick time to the Fountain City hotel, Chicago Club house and Belvidere house, to partake of the abundance of good things provided by the generous citizens for this occasion. A two-o'clock dinner preceded by a long boat ride after an early breakfast. Oh beautiful Charlevoix! paradise on earth! when shall we ever forget the delicious brook trout, the lake trout and the toothsome white fish, that satiated our appetites on this memorable occasion? And these delicacies were only a tithe of the good things that the hungry excursionists sat down to and devoured.

Charlevoix is unsurpassed for beauty of situation and healthfulness of climate, and the village and country around is rapidly developing into one of the richest portions of the state. Its enterprising, intelligent and kind-hearted citizens cordially welcome to their midst all who would come and lend a hand in building up and improving their various enterprises that have already been well begun. Here in a beautiful home with three bright children we met Mrs. Lawyer Green, nee Lulu Matthews, a former Ann Arbor girl, who went to Charlevoix seventeen years ago. A tribe of Indians is located not far from the village and several interesting specimens of the aborigines were lounging about the streets gazing with open-mouthed curiosity upon the wild editorial hordes that were invading the soil they originally called their own.

After a couple hours spent in "dodging" the town the well feasted editors crowded into the Faxton and Grand Rapids and started for Petoskey. One famous gentleman—made famous by this episode—and his estimable wife, were nearly left behind, so engrossed had they become with the beauties of the fair town. When this well known Lowell Journal man was afterwards summoned at the bar of the association to answer to the charge of desertion, he got even and perhaps a little ahead of his chief tormentors, President Hampton, and Kelley of the Pontiac Bill Poster, by declaring that it was conspiracy on their part to leave him there, for had he not the day before loaned the President some money, and also loaned Mr. Kelley a clean shirt? Applause.

Attractive Petoskey, one of the most famous and popular of all the numerous resorts of Michigan, was reached about six o'clock, and the excursionists took their choice of the four leading hotels, the Arlington, Cushman, Occidental and Clifton. The two associations held business meetings in the evening, and elected their officers for the ensuing year, as follows: Western Press Association—President, L. M. Sellers, Cedar Springs Clipper; vice-president, J. W. Long, Mt. Pleasant Times; secretary, C. S. Hampton, Harbor Springs Independent; treasurer, Wm. P. Nesbitt, Big Rapids Herald; executive committee, J. W. Long and L. J. Merchant. The Michigan Press Association elected—President, A. J. Aldrich, of the Coldwater Republican; vice-presidents, Jesse Minchin, Evart Review, F. Moore, St. Clair Republican and O. W. Rowland, of the Paw Paw Northerner; treasurer, J. W. Fitzgerald of the Ovid Union; secretary, Robert Smith, of the Ithaca Journal. Committees on resolutions from the two sections indulged in the usual compliments, noting especially the generosity and thanking the managers of the F. & P. M. and G. R. & I. railroads for the two societies to buy a gold medal to present to Perry Hannah as a testimonial of their gratitude for their kind treatment at his hands.

Wednesday evening the citizens gave a complimentary ball at the Arlington to those of the party who cared to dance, and refreshments were served in the spacious dining rooms.

Thursday forenoon the excursionists roamed at will around the city and Bay View lying a mile away, and along the shores of the bay, a large number delighting themselves as happy as children in seeking for beautiful lake stones which are in abundance along the edge of the clear water. The agate shops where the stones are ground into all sorts of shapes, including pins, watch charms, etc., were visited and the proprietors drove a thriving trade with the wealthier members of the craft who were fortunate enough to be able to raise any amount from ten cents to a dollar.

In the afternoon about 300 joined in an excursion to Harbor Springs, and Harbor Point,—a charming ride on the cars of about nine miles around the banks of the little Traverse Bay. The first place we pass is Bay View the beautiful summer resort of the Methodists; then about a mile from Harbor Springs, Pequetonsing, another pretty but more recently located resort of the Presbyterians is called out by the conductor. We stretch our necks here to see the cottage of our friend Dr. C. L. Ford, and did not discover him standing in the crowd until the train was moving away, too late for us to grasp his friendly hand and offer him greetings from his Ann Arbor home. Two hours or more were spent at the Springs, the citizens putting their carriages at the disposal of the ladies. The heights back of the town were climbed and grand views of the region enjoyed. An old Indian mission church founded half a century ago by the Catholics was an object of great curiosity, and not the least of the lions of the city was the well appointed printing establishment of President Hampton, where it is probable great wealth is constantly rolling in upon him, in the shape of "advance pay" subscriptions, and cash for advertising.

Some of the more venturesome spirits went out to sea in a couple of sail boats that were offered for the occasion, each capable of carrying from 25 to 30 persons. The first part of the ride was delightful as the boats skimmed safely along over the sparkling water in the still breeze, but a rain storm with a hard wind came on quite suddenly and made the affair almost too interesting, especially for those in one of the boats who did not get back to the wharf until they had experienced a lively tossing about and a thorough sprinkling, although partially protected by one of the sails that was spread over them as they lay huddled together in the bottom of the boat.

The Harbor Point Association, of Lansing, feasted the company at their club house at about six p. m. and showed them about their attractive grounds, where are already about sixty beautiful cottages, the inmates of which mostly take their meals at the beautiful and commodious club house situated near the center of the grounds. One of the best caterers from Detroit has the management of the club house, and furnishes most excellent food at very reasonable prices. Good looking and intelligent lady school teachers act as table waiters during the summer months. We lack space for a description of this beautiful resort and must content ourselves with saying it is indeed a very near approach to "a little paradise on earth."

Some enjoyed a cool "moonlight excursion" on the steamer Van Raalte back to Petoskey, while others went by the cars. Most of the excursionists left for home Friday morning, having a cool and delightful ride back to their several homes, all of them greatly benefited by this short respite from their daily duties at home, the intercourse with their fellow newspaper men, and the generous hearty people they met at every point, and the ennobling inspiration of grand views of nature as seen in beautiful Northern Michigan.

No Cause For Alarm.

Mrs. De Blank: "Oh! Henry, you must send for the doctor at once. I believe I am getting the dropsy. Now don't delay a moment."

Mr. De Blank: "Why, what put that idea into your head?"

"Dear me! will you never be satisfied that what I say is true? I got weighed to-day, and oh, its awful! I weighed 500 pounds."

"Great St. George! Where did you get weighed?"

"Around at your coal yard."

"Calm yourself, my dear. Your weight is exactly 180 pounds."—Phil. Call.

A Terrible Mistake.

"What makes you look so sad, Brother Hopeless? Have you lost your wife?"

"Yes, poor soul, she is dead; but that is not my worst misfortune. I made a fearful mistake."

"Made a fearful mistake? Why, man, what fearful mistake did you make?"

"I married her mother!"—Newman Independent.

The First American Marriage.

To the Editor of THE REGISTER.

I send you an item, clipped from THE REGISTER of July 2nd which reads thus: "The first wedding in America, was that of Edward Wilson, and Susanna White, at Plymouth, Mass., in 1621 and the custom has been increasing in popularity ever since."

Now, Mr. Editor, you are surely mistaken in the name. Edward Winslow came over from Holland in the Mayflower in 1620, accompanied by his wife, and two servants; the maid's name I have forgotten, but the boy's name was George Soule of whom the late Bishop Soule of the M. E. church, was a direct descendant. Mr. William White and wife also came over in the Mayflower. "After arriving at Plymouth-rock, and while the explorers were searching for a landing place, Mrs. White gave birth to a son—the first Englishman born in New England. They named him Peregrine; the cradle, in which he was rocked is yet preserved. He died at Marshfield in 1704." Many of the pilgrims died during their first year in this country. Mr. White died about four months after the birth of his boy. Three months after his death the lovely but frail Mrs. Winslow, sickened, died, and was laid in the silent grave, (her little ones were buried in Holland.) A few months after Edward Winslow, a young widow, with two servants and plenty of means knowing Mrs. White was helpless and alone with the care of her baby boy, proposed to Mrs. White that she and he should travel the remainder of their life's journey together hand in hand, side by side. Mrs. W. consented and Edward Winslow and Susanna White, were married by Elder William Brewster 1621, the very first marriage in America.

I am a direct descendant of Edward Winslow, of the eighth generation, hence I am posted on the subject. At some future time should you wish it, I can give you more facts and information. Mr. Sutherland and myself think your paper the best we receive for local news from our old home.

MRS. ANDREW J. SUTHERLAND, Evanston, Ill., July 10, 1885.

As Seen by an Outsider.

From the Coldwater Republican, July 1.

It is always pleasant to visit Ann Arbor. There is always an atmosphere about it, social and otherwise, that is different from the ordinary village, which is, of course, entirely owing to the University and the work in which it is engaged.

How He Won Her.

A young editor, bright, poor and punsterious, had won the affections of a rich man's daughter, and they fixed a day for him to call on the father, and on that day he was promptly in the old gentleman's office.

"Good morning, sir," he said, confidently, but ready to run, "I have called on a matter of—"

"We don't want any advertising to-day," interrupted the old gentleman looking up over his glasses.

"I'm not on that business, sir. I came to ask you for your daughter."

"What do you want with her?" "Marry her."

"For better or worse."

"What does the girl say?" "She says she will be my wife."

"Ugh! You haven't got a cent in the world, have you?"

LITERARY NOTES.

Yielding to the demand for cheap editions of the most popular authors, Messrs. Fords, Howard, & Hulbert, the publishers of "On a Margin," by Julius Chambers, have just brought out an edition of that brilliant novel in paper covers.

Prof. David Swing, in the Current of July 11, writes of "Woman's Style of Dress." He believes that woman changes the style of her apparel too frequently, estimating that many women spend as much as ten thousand hours in the course of their lives adapting themselves to the mandates of mysterious dress potentates.

Ada C. Sweet, the pension agent at Chicago, has an exquisite poem in the Current of July 11, entitled "Summer in Town." Miss Sweet is a poet of fine taste, and these graceful verses will be appreciated particularly by those who may be city-bound these summer days.

The third paper of William Cabell Bruce's series on "The Duel in America" is given in the Current of July 11, the principal feature being the famous affair between Commodore Deatur and Barron.

The New York Nation printed in its issue of June 25 a retrospect of the twenty years of its existence which were completed with that number. The Nation was founded in July, 1865, in recognition of the new order of things which was sure to follow the end of the war and the abolition of slavery.

Boy life in the United States Navy. By a naval officer. Boston: D. Lothrop & Co. Price $1.50. It is difficult to write a book of boy's adventures without falling into what is popularly called sensational writing, that is, the description of improbable incidents to arouse and excite the imagination without any purpose beyond that result.

A SAD DISASTER.

Terrible Fate of a Pleasure Yacht on Lake Minnetonka.

A Gale Sweeps Over the Water, Capsizing a Steam Yacht—All on Board, Numbering Ten, Lost—The Bodies Recovered.

LOST IN A FIERCE GALE. MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., July 14.—When ex-MAYOR RAND, his family and a few friends, started out for an excursion in the little steam yacht Minnie Cook, Sunday afternoon, the clouds hung dark and low.

Friends tried to dissuade them from embarking. Mrs. Rand, as she stepped off the St. Louis onto the frail little craft with its flapping tarpaulin shades, laughed at the remonstrances and replied gaily that she had braved worse weather on lake Minnetonka. Her two sons followed and took seats by her side. The yacht started off to the upper lake. It was scarcely out of sight before a terrible wind-storm swept over the lake from the northwest.

Thunder followed in rapid and reverberating peals. The usually calm water rolled in high billows that came beating over the boat-houses and quays, and to complete the disturbance the rain began to fall in torrents. It was like a New England lake squall, coming with no warning save the leaded clouds, and raging with blinding force for only a brief spell.

The huge passenger steamers whistled hoarsely as the rain clouds settled down, and high above the din could be heard the seemingly tragic shrieks from the whistles of the steam yachts, many of which were crossing from the St. Louis landing to the Lafayette pier when the hurricane struck them.

Although the storm only lasted a few moments, it is impossible at this hour to tell the extent of the loss of life and property.

The first evidence of disaster was found in pieces of trimmings from the Minnie Cook which floated in on the waves at the east shore of Wauzata Bay. The news was not slow in passing along the lake shore clear to Lafayette. Large, sturdy boats went in search of the ill-fated little craft. It was a further trace of her could be had. It was at last determined that she sank and that the ten passengers, who embarked on their perilous journey in such happy spirits, had perished.

Later a boatman named James Carroll, who had miraculously escaped in weathering the tornado in a yawl, appeared on the Wauzata Bay beach, dragging his miniature craft after him. When he had recovered sufficiently from his fright and exhaustion to speak coherently he told of having passed the Minnie Cook just before the squall struck the bay. He thought and was quite certain that Engineer McDonald had been on the yacht from her course into the bay; the next moment his boat raised heavenward, as if lifted out of the water by some supernatural agency, and then he was enveloped in spray. Soon afterward he heard a shriek like that of a woman in acute distress, and looking off through the almost blinding mist to the spot where the yacht was a moment before floating, nothing was to be seen but the white caps and the waves rolling mountain high. He is sure the shriek he heard was that of Mrs. Rand, and that the Minnie Cook at that moment capsized. For safety he fell into the bottom of his yawl and there clung until the squall had passed.

The following is a list of the passengers on the yacht: Ex-Mayor Rand, aged fifty-six; Mrs. Rand, aged fifty; Mary Rand, aged sixteen, daughter of the above; Harvey Rand, aged thirteen, son; Frank Rand, aged eighteen, a nephew; J. E. Coykendall, aged twenty-seven; Katie Coykendall, aged four, daughter of the above; engineer George McDonald; Robert Hussey, aged ten, employed on the yacht.

The bodies of Mrs. Rand and Engineer McDonald were recovered and brought to Minneapolis by special train at ten o'clock Sunday night.

Mr. Rand's two terms as chief magistrate of the city were served previous to the incumbency of Mayor Ames. The ex-Mayor was quite wealthy. John Coykendall was a member of the firm of Coykendall Brother & Co., which owns one of the largest and best-known dry-goods stores in the city. The two families belonged to the highest business and social circles in the city.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., July 14.—Divers and a large force of men worked all day yesterday endeavoring to recover the bodies of the ten people who were drowned in Lake Minnetonka Sunday evening. Last night several large steamers and a number of parties searched under electric lights. It is feared that the bodies not yet recovered will be buried beneath the mud which is being drifted by the strong current. Dynamite and cannons have also been procured from Fort Snelling, and with the aid of these it is hoped to raise the bodies. The bodies of Mary Rand, Frank Rand and Katie Coykendall were recovered yesterday morning from about a hundred feet of water. Mrs. Rand's body was found floating face downward. Ex-Mayor Rand's body was brought up with grappling hooks out of fifty feet of water. His vest was off. The steam yacht was found imbedded in the mud at a depth of sixty feet. Miss Coykendall was clinging to one of the seats. The divers report the mud very deep, and say that the work of recovery is exceedingly difficult.

LATER. By the use of dynamite the remaining bodies of the victims were brought to the surface and recovered last night. The bodies were those of Coykendall and wife, Harvey Rand and Robert Hussey. The remains were brought to Minneapolis on the midnight train.

Prefer High License to Prohibition. DUBUQUE, Ia., July 14.—The Key City Democratic Club, composed of leading business and professional men, has adopted a resolution in favor of having the State Democratic Convention adopt a plank declaring for the repeal of prohibition and the adoption in its stead of a uniform license law of five hundred dollars, with proper bond and restrictions similar to the Nebraska law. This action is significant, coming from Dubuque, where an intense anti-prohibition sentiment prevails.

The Balance of Trade in Our Favor. NEW YORK, July 14.—The Journal of Commerce prints a statement of the commerce of the United States for the first eleven months of the past fiscal year, which shows the total imports to be $70,295,764; total exports, $71,181,023. The excess of exports, $161,258,259. The June commerce will probably show a further moderate excess of exports, leaving the balance of our foreign trade for the whole country in our last fiscal year toward $165,000,000 in favor of the United States.

MABLEY was insured for $40,000. It was one of his characteristically good investments, for it probably did not cost him one quarter of what his family will receive.

It is reported on good authority that the Normal School authorities at Ypsilanti will make a strong effort to secure Superintendent Perry of this city for the vacant principalship of the Normal School. While Ann Arbor would mourn the loss of Prof. Perry as irreparable, yet if he were called higher his best friends here—and their name is legion—would interpose no serious objection. Prof. Perry, more than any man we know of in educational circles, would adorn the place, bringing to it, as he would, matured and acknowledged abilities. There is no high school in the union which can surpass our own and to Prof. Perry's energy and ability more than to any other thing is this due. We can hardly afford to lose him.

The Lansing Republican says: "The resignation of Chief Justice Cooley was filed in the office of the secretary of the state on June 30. By this event the state is deprived of the services of the ablest jurist and legal writer of this generation. He retires from the position loaded with the honors which indomitable energy and perseverance always bring when conscientiously guided, whether it be in the judicial field or in the common walks of life. Although still in the height of mental vigor, few writers can point to greater results accomplished, and his well-known industry should be a gospel to every American youth who feels like lagging by the wayside in the battle of life. His public labors are too well known to bear repetition. It is enough to say that his name will ever remain in the front rank of Michigan's illustrious men."

The Adrian Press, in commenting on Duffy's appointment to the postoffice in this city, says: "We trust that Capt. Manly will be properly recognized yet by the administration, as he is a competent deserving man, and Washtenaw democrats can't receive too much." Well, we should say not—that is too much to satisfy the organized appetite. As for Capt. Manly's receiving "something good," if the democrats know on which side their bread is buttered, the gallant captain will not be allowed to remain with his nose out of the public trough very long. His friends, while perfectly satisfied with Duffy as a postmaster, are highly indignant over the way Capt. Manly has been treated by Col. Eldredge. The latter owes his election to Manly and if another election were to be held tomorrow, so deep is the indignation against Eldredge, that Allen would be elected by a large majority.

The important provisions of the new postal law enacted by the last congress, are: First, That the unit of weight for letters at the two-cent rate of postage shall be one ounce instead of half an ounce, making our system as to weight of letters and rate the same as that of England. Second, That the rate on newspapers sent to subscribers from the office of publication shall be one cent per pound instead two cents. Third, That an immediate delivery of letters can be secured in the larger cities by placing an extra ten-cent stamp upon them. The experience of the past in similar reductions of the postal rates have always been that each reduction was followed at once or very soon by a corresponding increase in business and the revenues of the department. Prior to 1845 it cost fifty cents to send a letter from New York to San Francisco, and there are many who will read these lines who can remember when it cost twenty-five cents to send a letter any distance. The next step should be to reduce the rates on letters to one cent each for an established weight, and then it would seem that as far as price is concerned no further change would ever be sought or needed.

THE RIGHT KIND OF A PROCLAMATION.

Gov. Alger visited the scene of the Saginaw Valley strikes, and Tuesday issued the following ringing proclamation. Every law-abiding citizen will rejoice thereat and be glad to support the governor in his determination to enforce the laws of the state:

To THE PEOPLE OF THE SAGINAW VALLEY:—Knowing of the existing condition of things in the valley and the means by which your great industries have been stopped, I deem it proper to say:

First—To those who have been engaged in acts of violence and lawlessness, who have taken part in tumultuous and unlawful assemblages, one and all, I appeal to you to take the sober second thought. You know that law and order must be enforced.

You know that had any person been killed in the closing of any of the mills while resisting your unlawful acts every man connected with the assemblage could have been tried and held accountable therefor.

You know that all concerned in these unlawful assemblages are responsible for any act which any of you may commit, and many of you have wives and families who will suffer in consequence of your misdeeds.

I appeal to you all to assist the proper officers in the support of the law and the enforcement of order, in your interest, and in the interest of your families.

You have no right to enter upon the premises of another without his consent.

If you enter with force and prevent any man from carrying on his business, or prevent any laborer from pursuing his accustomed employment; or if by intimidation such result follows, you are guilty of offenses for which you are liable to imprisonment.

And your unlawful conduct not only injures yourself and endangers your personal liberty, but injures the cause which you espouse.

Second—To all the officers in the Saginaw valley charged with the execution of the laws:

I enjoin upon you to see that the law is faithfully executed without fear or favor, and I assure you that you shall have the whole power of the state, if necessary, to support you.

See that the leaders in these unlawful measures are apprehended and prosecuted according to law, that they may receive their just deserts.

Should complaint be made to me that any official is guilty of neglect of duty, inefficiency or misconduct in office, I shall not hesitate to use the powers reposed in me for the suspension, removal or punishment of such official as prescribed by law.

Third—To all: Sufficient force is now on hand to insure the preservation of order. Further unlawful assemblages will not be permitted. Acts of violence and intimidation will be promptly punished, and all workmen and others will be protected in the enjoyment of the rights guaranteed by law.

Every citizen is requested to aid in the support of the law by his peaceful and lawful behavior and by giving information of any infraction thereof which may come to his knowledge.

RUSSELL A. ALGER,
Governor of Michigan.

THE UNIVERSITY HONORED.

Election of Prof. Chas. K. Adams to the Presidency of Cornell University.

At the meeting of the trustees of Cornell University Monday Prof. Charles Kendall Adams, '61, the well known professor of history in the University, was elected to fill the vacancy left by the resignation of President White. While this action was by no means unexpected, Prof. Adams' wide circle of friends will be surprised and delighted at this recognition of his splendid abilities. To every friend of the University, however, the news must bring at the same time a pang of regret that one of its most illustrious lights is to be taken from the beloved institution. The University suffers a keen and not easily repairable loss in Professor, now President, Adams' removal to Ithaca. For the second time the University has furnished Cornell a president, and this time he is of the pure Michigan breed, having been connected with the University as under-graduate, instructor and professor since 1857—a period of 28 years. His services to his alma mater have been of inestimable value, not the least of them being his efforts at founding and building up a school of political science and providing it with an ample and suitable library. Of late years he had gone to Ithaca every year for a brief period and lectured on history and political science to the Cornell students, with whom he was immensely popular. To his new position President Adams will bring a breadth of culture and a depth of learning commensurate with the dignity and importance of his duties.

At the meeting of the regents to be held August 24, action will be taken toward filling the vacancy which will be made by Prof. Adams' acceptance of his new position. His salary will be $10,000. Following is a brief biography of Prof. Adams.

Charles Kendall Adams was born at Derby, Vermont, Jan. 24, 1835. His parents moved to that state a short time before his birth. His early education was obtained in the schools and the academy at Derby. In 1855 he left his native state and went to Iowa. After a year of preparatory study he entered the University of Michigan as a classical student in the year of 1857. In 1861 he was graduated and received the degree of B. A. He remained at the university the following year, pursuing a post graduate course. In June, 1862, Prof. White, who then filled the chair of history at the University, obtained leave of absence for European travel; and Mr. Adams was appointed instructor in history with roll-charge of the classes in that branch of study. The next year he was appointed assistant professor of history and Latin, holding that position until Prof. White resigned to become president of Cornell university in June, 1867.

Mr. Adams was then appointed to the professorship in history, which he has since filled. Prof. Adams has been a frequent contributor to the North American Review and other literary journals, and is the author of numerous historical and political works as well as of "Democracy and Monarchy in France," published in 1874, which led to the charge of plagiarism being made against him in the newspapers. This charge resulted in a hot and somewhat celebrated controversy, and the matter was pretty thoroughly ventilated and disproved at the time, to the satisfaction of all of Prof. Adams' friends.

THE ANNUAL REPAIRS.

Secretary Wade Overseeing the Summer Overhauling of the Campus.

Secretary Wade is busy arranging and directing the annual overhauling of the buildings on the campus. The repairs this year owing to the legislative appropriation, are more extensive than previously. The contracts for outside painting were let last week as follows:

Building	Contractor	Amount
Main building	A. Sorg	$125.00
Law building	A. Sorg	51.25
Medical building	O. Sorg	178.44
Chemical laboratory	O. Sorg	131.60

THE MAIN BUILDING.

The outside painting here is well under way, and it will probably take all of three weeks to finish it. The dome is to receive four coats and the rest of the building two. On the inside, new floors are to be laid in the lower main hall and all through both wings except in Rooms 21 and 24. Daniel Ross has the contract for putting new floors and new stairways in all the eight halls of the north wing.

OTHER BUILDINGS.

The law building is to have a new roof and new floors in the halls besides a number of minor repairs.

The president's house will have a new roof and new plastering in the parlors and hallways. The underground kitchen is to be repaired.

The chemical laboratory will have new floors and the outside brick work will be stained a uniform color.

In the hospital's work of renovation has been commenced by the University workmen.

The university hospital, which is to be used for a huge restaurant during the science meeting, has received a coat of kalsomine throughout. The plastering in the rooms leading off from the amphitheatre has been replaced and Dr. Dunster's room has been enlarged. The homeopathic hospital will be given the same course of treatment.

The medical building will have new floors and stairways where needed.

MECHANICAL LABORATORY.

It is expected that the $10,000 mechanical laboratory will be built this summer. Regent Shearer is now waiting for the plans from the architects in Detroit. The building is to be of brick and is to abut the present brick building on the east end. About four feet of space will be left between the two so that in the future when necessary the present buildings can be torn down and replaced by better ones.

Those who hold diplomas from the Milan high school are to be admitted without examination to the second year in the agricultural college.

Saline Observer: A dog belonging to A. H. Howard, accidentally or otherwise, swallowed some poison one day last week and died soon thereafter. The children of the family, who were greatly attached to him, gave the animal respectful burial, and many bitter, scorching tears fell into the grave as the remains of the pet canine were covered with earth.

Milan Leader: Eugene Gregory left Milan Wednesday for Detroit, where he will assist the school board in the purchase of new books for the library; he will then go to Niagara Falls and New York, and from the latter place will embark for the "Old Country," and spend a couple of years in the colleges of Great Britain.

Milan Journal: The ladies interested in the refurnishing of Union church, met at that edifice on Wednesday afternoon, to sew and fit the new ingrain carpet for the pulpit and front part of the church. Hemp carpet will be purchased for the aisles and vestibule. Union church will soon present a very neat and handsome appearance, and compare favorably with the other places of divine worship in the village.

Chelsea Herald: J. L. Gilbert's mother, who is totally blind, has just completed a parlor rug, of woolen yarn in colors, sewed upon a piece of sheeting, which is very remarkable piece of work. The colors are very systematically and tastefully arranged. The aged lady did the work entirely alone, at odd spells, and the family knew nothing about it until it was presented to her son, J. L., who sent it to his brother at Glenn Falls, N. Y.

Dexter Leader: As Mrs. Wm. Stevens and Mrs. Stanley were riding on Monday, they drove up to the Stebbins House and stopped a moment, when a gust of wind blew a piece of drapery from the carriage, frightening the horse, which commenced running, throwing both ladies out, bruising them considerably and smashing the buggy very badly before the horse was stopped. For the ladies it was a narrow escape.

Dexter Leader: Last Sunday a party of six of our young people—of equal gender—started for a quiet excursion to Whitmore Lake, to recuperate from the effects of the 4th. The driver—a well-known salesman, with an habitual "getting lost" propensity—after spending the afternoon in driving devious ways—all but the right one—pulled up at Northfield, where a cheap guide was procured, and the excursion proceeded. After several minor "catastrophes" the lake was reached, and a boat-ride indulged in; but fortune did not favor the brave, for a rebaptism was the result, and a very wet couple the outcome. The ride home was eventful for its various ways, beautiful music, and very drowsy excursionists.

Manchester Enterprise: Lambert List claimed that John Cowan owed him $10, which debt the latter denied. Cowan claims that List followed him upon Ann Arbor hill on Monday, got him down and by force and intimidation took his watch away from him. On Tuesday, Cowan went before Justice Perkins and swore out a warrant for List charging him with the theft of the watch from his person. The latter was arrested by Officer Kelly and taken before the justice. The examination was continued till Friday morning when it is expected that Prosecuting Attorney Norris will be here to attend to the matter. List claims that Cowan gave him the watch as security for the $10.

VENETS OF A PECULIAR ORDER OF RELIGIOUS PEOPLE.

A Visit to the Communities Who Follow the Doctrines of Mother Ann Lee—Industries at Lebanon—Disintegrating Influences.

[Cor. Boston Herald.] Elder Frederick put on his broad-brimmed hat, then a knitted scarf across his shoulders, took his staff and led the way.

"Our community, you understand, is divided into families," he explained, "and each is entirely separate, having its own government and its own property. All property is held in common in these families, but the families are entirely distinct from each other. Ours is called the North family; the others are the South, the Central, the Second and the South families."

The elder then piloted his visitor through the extensive buildings of the North family. The laundry was first visited, where the machines for cleansing the linen are driven by water power. In a room adjoining the laundry were several large churns in active motion, also driven by water. In a large, airy, and light room above were several quilted figures clad in soft bonnets, with close-fitting lace caps and muslin kerchiefs, all engaged in ironing. The next building is the grist mill, where is ground the meal and flour used by the family.

"You make your own flour?" was asked in some surprise.

"Yes. The flour you buy and we isn't fit for human beings to eat. Just look at this wheat. It has been washed in three waters. If you could see the second water it runs off, you would be surprised at the amount of dirt you eat. Now that wheat is fit for a Christian's stomach. The wheat you eat is only fit for heathens. Just look in that hopper. You don't see any dirt there. Yes, we believe in keeping clean. Now I am a vegetarian. I haven't tasted meat for more than forty years. It isn't fit to eat any more than it is dirty wheat. When that wheat is ground into flour we bake it without leaven. That's the bread that Moses fed the children of Israel with."

The barn was the next objective point, and its long line of well-kept stalls for horses and cattle and its two enormous silos were thoroughly examined. Next the kitchen, with its great range; the closets as clean as soap and water could make them, and the wonderful refrigerating chest, surrounded by iron pipes, through which flowed streams of ice-cold spring water, were shown and admired.

Then Elder Frederick led the way up the steep side of the mountain, past a thriving grove of sugar maples planted twenty-five years ago, until about the height of the roofs of the buildings, was found a well-constructed reservoir, from which pipes descended the mountain side to supply the power in use in the buildings visited. This reservoir was filled from a lake in the mountains, a mile beyond and above.

Descending the mountain, the shirt factory was visited, where were more brown-robed, white-capped figures, and half a score of clattering sewing machines engaged in turning out shirts for a large New York manufacturer.

"We do this work in our spare time, when we have none of our own to do," explained Sister Margaret. "We turn out perhaps twenty or twenty-five dozen a week. It is remarkable how much work there is in a shirt, and it is remarkable how little they pay us for making them."

Throughout these explorations Elder Frederick interspersed his explanations of what was seen, with a dissertation upon the tenets of the order, chief among which is a belief in the dual nature of God, combining attributes of both male and female, the rejection of the idea of Christ's divinity and of the resurrection of the body.

"It has been said of us," said Brother Daniel, "that celibacy is one of our cardinal principles. It is simply a condition growing out of the whole system. We believe in and practice a celibate life, because it alone is consistent with the higher angelic life, which is attainable by this system alone."

A stroll was next taken among the other families of the community. At the Church family was found the most extensive and costly dwelling in the settlement, built of brick, and with every appliance for comfort and to facilitate labor. Here also the utmost plainness and neatness prevailed, though here and there an upholstered chair, a picture upon the wall or a well-filled shelf of books displayed a refined taste, and suggested the idea that the waves of the outer world are beating restlessly against the shores of this island of asceticism, and threatening to irrigate it not to overwhelm its fields and meadows. Here also are well arranged works, bringing a supply of water from the mountains; a tannery, and a large and fertile garden, where is conducted the business of raising vegetable seeds for sale throughout the country. A large building furnishes accommodations for putting up and selling these seeds.

Across the way, a large laboratory and manufactory of proprietary medicines is conducted by the Central family, in which industry the very young and the very old are alike employed.

By the South family a large manufactory of the beautiful and unique Shaker chairs is conducted, the exquisite fabrics with which they are upholstered being woven by themselves, from wool raised in their own mountain pastures.

"Your numbers are gradually lessening, Elder Frederick," was remarked to a brother to whom the writer was presented.

"Yes, we have been growing less for twenty years. Sometimes there will be a revival, just as there frequently is in other religious societies. At such times our order receives an impetus, and accessions are made. But the reaction comes, and it always leaves our numbers a little less than before the revival."

HOW SHE LIVED EIGHTEEN YEARS ON A DESERT ISLAND.

The Story of the Lost Woman of San Nicolas—Her Ingenuity and Fertility of Invention—A Wonderful History.

[Cor. Rochester Democrat.] Seventy miles from the shore is San Nicolas island, the sixth of the group that clusters around the bay of Santa Barbara, California. It is celebrated for having been the residence for eighteen years of "The Lost Woman of San Nicolas." As her name is famous, and as her story has been told in romance, I will give the bare facts about her as I found them to be, without any added ornament, and leave the fiction to the pen of the novelist.

The island of San Nicolas was once densely populated. This is attested by the skulls and bones and other evidences of human abode that are found there. The Alaska Indians frequently visited the island to hunt for the furs of the sea-otter. They took their women with them on these hunts, and on returning after the hunt was over they left them on the island to their fate. By order of the government, in 1835, the Indians were removed from the island. Just before they were to embark and carry away every human inhabitant, as it was supposed, a white Indian woman begged the privilege of going ashore for her child, which she had accidentally left. She was gone a long time in a fruitless search for her offspring. The wind blew a gale, the water was shallow; there was no one who was seeking the lost one. They set sail, intending to return for the lost woman of San Nicolas, but the boat becoming unseaworthy, she was left to her fate. It was generally known that there was a woman abandoned on the island, but what attempt was made for her deliverance. As the world soon forgot, so the woman of San Nicolas was forgotten, and the years passed away. After a lapse of sixteen years a man who landed on the island found that it was inhabited by some one. The footprints of a human being sunk deep in the ground were seen. The hardness of the ground was an indication that they had been made a long time. From their size they evidently belonged to a woman. Circular inclosures made of brush, six or seven feet through, were seen, where some one had lived. Near the huts were sticks driven in the ground and dried blubber hanging on them, thus prepared for food.

In 1852 San Nicolas was visited again and another hunt was made for the long-lost woman. The huts were seen that had been taken away, and new food of the kind hung in its place. Wild dogs were found which ran away at the approach of civilized man. In a basket covered with seal skins that they found in a bush-heap was a dress made of shag skins, cut in square pieces, a rope made of seal and several smaller articles, such as dishes and tin articles. The discoverers of these proofs that they lived on that island a human being returned them on the ground, and on their return they found them gathered together and placed in the basket again.

In 1853 San Nicolas was visited again and another hunt was made for the long-lost woman. The huts were seen that had been taken away, and new food of the kind hung in its place. Wild dogs were found which ran away at the approach of civilized man. In a basket covered with seal skins that they found in a bush-heap was a dress made of shag skins, cut in square pieces, a rope made of seal and several smaller articles, such as dishes and tin articles. The discoverers of these proofs that they lived on that island a human being returned them on the ground, and on their return they found them gathered together and placed in the basket again.

The Catholic fathers of the "Old Mission," the foremost in every good word and work, offered a reward to anyone who would find the lost woman, and a third effort was made in 1853 to discover the prodigal about whom there was such a mystery and in whom the world of this coast was beginning to take an interest. Fresh tracks of the woman were found. They belonged to very small feet, and were like those that were seen in the first attempt to find the woman. Huts made of whole ribs and covered with brush were discovered. At length an object was seen in the distance that appeared to be moving. Going toward it they saw the woman that for eighteen years had reigned queen of San Nicolas, her subjects being the wild animals, her robe a dress of birdskins she had made, and her throne the hut she had built. She was seated in an inclosure, so that only her head and shoulders could be seen. Two or three dogs were about her, and she appeared to be the command of their sovereign. She was seated on some grass that covered the ground and served her as a bed. Her dress was neatly made of birdskins, extending to her ankles, the feathers of which were pointed downward. Her head was covered with a thick mat of yellowish-brown hair, and her shoulders were bare. She was occupied in stripping blubber from a piece of seal skin which she held across her knee, and for that purpose a knife made of an iron nail. In her hat was a fire, beside which she sat, talking to herself, and occasionally shading her eyes with her hand, looked at the men that were in search of her.

She received them with much courtesy, bowing and smiling and showing that this lost child of nature had much of the politeness of a true woman. She took some roots in the bag, roasted them in the fire, and gave them to the men to eat. She gathered up all her food, which was her chief concern, owing to the families she had experienced, and herself sat to the spring, and followed the men cheerfully to the boat. On being taken to Santa Barbara, she manifested great delight in seeing the sights of civilization. She became a universal favorite, and was presented with many gifts. Passengers on the Panama steamer that landed there all wanted to see the lost woman of San Nicolas. She related by signs her experience on the island, as she spoke a language that none of the Indians knew and none of the Spanish fathers, who were in Indian dialects, could understand. Civilization, which prolongs the life of some, shortens that of the woman of San Nicolas. An excessive love of fruit led to her death in Santa Barbara at the age of 50. She was buried with the honors of the Catholic church by the Franciscan fathers, and her dress and trinkets were sent to Rome and placed in that receptacle of the world's curiosities.

The story of the lost woman of San Nicolas will always remain a wonderment. Her ingenuity is seen in the paths she made of grass, made to hold water by smearing with birdskin melted asphaltum, and in her birdskin dresses, her bone needles, her knife of iron hoop, and the language she invented and spoke. It is inexplicable to all who have learned her story how a woman could live eighteen years on an island around which the waves were beating a requiem to hope, getting her food and cooking it without even those facilities which are common to the savage, and making her dresses neatly without the aid of needles except what she carved out of bone. She laid aside one dress for eighteen years, to be worn when the white man should come, of which she had a presentiment. She built her own house, protected herself from the cold, gained supreme control over the wild beasts about her, and preserved her love for man and woman for well nigh two decades of human life alone in the wild. With no previous knowledge of civilization, she appeared to have educated her for it. An ordinary woman would have perished with despondency in such a desolate, hungry, naked, shelterless outlook.

A BABY ESKIMO MARKSMAN.
The Arms and the Marksman—Ship of the Arctic Nursery.

One of the first toys that a little Eskimo has is a small bow of whalebone or light wood, and sitting on the end of the snow bed he shoots his toy arrows, under the direction of his father or mother or some one who cares to play with him, at something on the other side of the snow house. This is usually a small piece of boiled meat, of which he is very fond, stuck in a crack between the snow blocks; and if he hits it, he is entitled to eat it as a reward, although the little fellow seldom needs such encouragement to stimulate him in his play, so lone and long are the dreary winter days in which he lives buried beneath the snow.

These toy arrows are pointed with pins; but he is also furnished with blunt arrows, and whenever some inquisitive dog pokes his head in the igloo door, looking around for a stray piece of meat or blubber to steal, the little Eskimo, if he shoots straight, will hit upon the nose or head with one of the blunt arrows, and the dog will beat a hasty retreat. In this sense, the little Eskimo boy has plenty of targets to shoot at, for the igloo door is nearly always filled with the heads of two or three dogs watching the baby's mother closely; and if she turns her head or back for a moment, they will make a rush to steal something, and get out as soon as possible before she can punish them on the head.

In these exciting raids of the half dozen hungry dogs, the little marksman is liable to get, by all odds, the worst of the encounter. He is too small to be noticed, and the first big dog that rushes by him knocks him over; the next probably rolls him off the bed to the floor; another upsets the lamp full of oil on him, and while he is reeking with oil another big dog, taking him for a seal skin full of blubber, tries to drag him away, when his mother happens to rescue him after she has accidentally p-moaned him two or three times with the club with which she is striking at the dog; and if it were not for his hideous yelling and crying, one would hardly know what he is, so covered is he with dirt, grease and snow. Thus the dogs occasionally have their revenge on the young sharp-shooter.

He Expected a Change.
[Hartford Post.] The revision of the Old Testament has revived the hopes of some people who expect to have things smoothed for them all through this life. It was this interesting fact that induced Shuttle to attend church yesterday. "How did you like the sermon?" inquired a friend, as he passed out of the vestibule.

"Never was so disgusted in my life. Why, the man took 'Thou shalt not steal' for his text."

"That's a good text."

"It's the same old text. I thought the new version would read, 'Thou shalt not commit promise for 30 cents on the dollar.'"

The "Arkansas Traveler."
[The Current.] Professor Tasso, the composer of the famous tune "The Arkansas Traveler," and also the author of the dialogue which accompanies it, is still living in Covington, Ky., at the age of 83. It is curious to note that this musician, whose well meant humor did so much to hinder the growth of a great state by his extravagant caricature of an alleged Arkansas citizen—which came to be accepted as a truthful type by people abroad—was born in the City of Mexico, of French and Italian parents.

True to Nature.
[Boston Beacon.] "Squire Pummel—I tell you, deacon, my daughter Sue is going to be a first-class artist. Her cattle pictures are so natural you can almost hear the critters low."

Deacon Pummel—Pooty good. But my daughter Sal can beat that. She hasn't no faith in cattle pieces. But she's painted some green cowbumpers so nat'ral that the hull family came mighty near havin' chol'ra morbus.

Cure for a Balky Horse.
[Exchange.] There is a colored preacher who lives near Jasper, Ga., that rules his horse by butting him. If the horse is fractious or stubborn, he takes the knicks out by deliberately seizing by the ears and butting it squarely in the forehead until it falls to its knees. This it generally does at the second or third butt, when the old parson steps behind and drives ahead again.

They'll Get Him.
[Courier-Journal.] "Is that the crowd going out to the races, or is it a ratification meeting?"

"Neither; stranger; that man walking so fast in front is a country merchant; the 700 other fellow; you see are drummers. They'll get him, stranger."

Tree-Planting.
[Chicago Herald.] The day is not far distant when it will everywhere be considered a duty to plant a tree for every one that is felled. If civilization cannot show its superiority over savagery in ways like these it will have much to answer for.

Virtues of a Credit Balance.
[Hugh Conway.] I am informed by those who ought to know, that a credit balance at one's bankers possesses great virtues as an elevator of both morals and character.

Memphis Avalanches. It is a wise law in this world that men may boast and communities brag, but nothing goes for more or less than it is worth.

Happy Thought in the Night.

For years Mr. Jas. R. Akeley, of 163 West Fayette street, Baltimore, has suffered with neuralgia so that he could hardly sleep. But he writes: "One night I was suffering very much, and the thought struck me that Brown's Iron Bitters would do me some good, and perhaps cure me. It was a happy thought, and to my great joy it has entirely cured me after using two bottles. After three months I have had no return of the symptoms. I cheerfully recommend it as the best tonic I have ever used." Neuralgia sufferers, take the hint!

Aristocrats.
"Look here," said one Galveston gentleman to another, "those De Smiths that have moved into my neighborhood must be one of the toniest families in the state."

"What makes you think so?"

"Well, about fifty people called on them one day last week."

"Pshaw! that was on the first of the month; they get everything on credit."

The Voice of the People.
The people, as a whole, seldom make mistakes, and the unanimous voice of praise which comes from those who have used Hood's Sarsaparilla, fully justifies the claims of the proprietors of this great medicine. Indeed, these very claims are based entirely on what the people say Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for them. Read the abundant evidence of its curative powers, and give it a fair, honest trial.

S. B. Durfee, mate of steamer Arizona, had his foot badly jammed. Thomas' Electric Oil cured it. Nothing equal to it for a quick pain reliever.

An old toper, in a discussion with a temperance lecturer, triumphantly asked, "If water rots your boots, what effect must it have on the coats of your stomach?"

Mr. Jay Taylor, son of Jay Taylor, Esq., of this city, sang a solo in the M. E. church last Sunday morning. He is the fortunate possessor of a tenor voice of unusual sweetness and compass. His selection was from the oratorio of "Elijah," and was sung with fine expression. Mr. Taylor was formerly a member of the choir with which he sang Sunday morning, and will, we hope, find frequent opportunity of filling his accustomed place in the gallery. He is under contract with the Emma Abbott opera company for next season.

The seventeen year locusts have disappeared from the vicinity of Ann Arbor as suddenly and mysteriously as they came; they have left evidence of their visit, however, in the immense egg deposit, as indicated in the dead and dying twigs of the oak and hickory. From the Catholic cemetery to the water works fountain, the forest looks as if a fiery flame had passed over it. The small limbs are literally stung full of eggs. The locust is an insect of very poor judgment or it would not try to establish a hatchery so near Ann Arbor. It should have located at Dexter or Ypsilanti.

One of the saddest events of the summer was the accidental drowning late Friday night of Freddie Gause, aged 14. The boy was bathing in the race with some companions, and, not knowing how to swim, got in beyond his depth. The darkness—it was after nine o'clock—prevented aid from reaching him and he was drowned. Search for his body was immediately commenced but it was not discovered until ten o'clock. The boy was a son of Frederick Gause, shoemaker on Liberty-st, and was a bright lad. The funeral services were conducted by the Rev. H. S. Belser at the Zion's Lutheran church Sunday afternoon and were attended by a large concourse of people.

Rev. Mr. Erpp commenced his rectorship at St. Andrew's last Sunday morning by an eminently plain and practical sermon to the large congregation present. In the afternoon accompanied by about 25 of his parishioners he went down to the county house and sided Bishop Gillespie in conducting a service there. The bishop returned with the party and at evening service spoke a few words of encouragement to his old parishioners. He complimented Mr. Erpp highly and congratulated the parish on its new rector. The parish, he said, compared with its condition when he was its rector, was in very prosperous condition. All it needed now was a guild hall for social purposes—a need which would soon be supplied.

Miss Birdie Dunster and a young man named Gunn had a remarkably narrow escape from death or at least serious injury Saturday evening. They were driving on the Whitmore Lake road and had reached the railroad crossing when the fast New York express came through. The horse had just time to draw back as the train passed and in his haste the whole equipage was precipitated down the bank about ten feet. Luckily neither the horse, the carriage or its occupants were found to be seriously injured when they were extricated from their perilous position by the neighbors who came in response to calls for help. The darkness of the night was the cause of the mishap.

Sheriff Walsh had quite an adventure last Friday as he was taking Joseph Hunter, the Ypsilanti house-breaker, to Ionia for a year's imprisonment. Just as the train had got fairly started out of Portland Joseph thought he saw his opportunity and made a wild break for liberty. The sheriff pursued hotly hoping to catch him before he could jump from the train. Hunter, however, reached the steps first and, with his hands pinioned, jumped from the train. Billy, nothing daunted, promptly jumped after him, pulled out his big self-cocker and yelled at the fugitive to stop or be shot. Joseph stopped. When the sheriff had time to examine himself he found that he had sustained a number of slight bruises. He now congratulates himself that his injuries were no worse and that the wily Joseph is safe behind the bars.

He Shouldn't Go to France.

A member of the Illinois legislature, who is so full of conceit that his "bump" of egotism sticks up through his hat like a lightning-rod, remarked to another member yesterday:

"I do wish we could adjourn. I want to go to Europe."

"What countries will you visit?" inquired his friend.

"All of them."

"What! You surely won't dare to visit France?"

"Certainly I will. Why not?"

"Because the French people eat jack-asses!"—Newman Independent.

A FINE EXCURSION.

Fraternity Lodge, F. & A. M., and Washtenaw Chapter, R. A. M. Announce One.

Perhaps the finest excursion of the season will be that given by the above masonic bodies on the thirtieth of July to the islands of Lake St. Clair. A special train will leave this city early on that morning via the Michigan Central and will land the excursionists in Detroit at a seasonable hour. Here the party will take the elegant excursion steamer, the Garland, and steam up the beautiful Detroit river through Lake St. Clair, and the ship canal to Star Island. Returning, a stop will be made at Belle Isle where those who desire can spend the afternoon. Others can continue to the city to see the sights, or their tickets will entitle them to ride to and fro on any of the company's boats. This will give a trip on the water of about 75 miles. An Ann Arbor caterer will accompany the excursion and feed the hungry. Tickets for the round trip have been placed at the exceedingly low sum of $1.25, with a half-fare rate for children under 12.

Following are the committees which have the matter in charge: J. L. Stone, C. E. Hiscok, W. C. Hollands, W. G. Doty, W. W. Watts, Z. Roath and W. F. Pett. To the People of Ann Arbor and the Surrounding Country.

Having graduated with the class of '84 in medicine and surgery of the University of Michigan, I shall now retire from the general practice of veterinary medicine and I take this opportunity of thanking my many friends and the public in general for the liberal patronage I have received while acting in the capacity of a veterinarian. I also thank the professors in the college of medicine and surgery also members of the profession outside of the college, for valuable advice given me many times, and for which I shall ever feel grateful. As I have now notified my friends that I have given up the practice of veterinary medicine, they naturally ask, "what is your intention for the future?" and in reply I say, Ann Arbor will be my home; but I intend to travel this summer with an anatomical cabinet and lecture on comparative anatomy. I trust I shall not overestimate myself, but be guided by that discreet conduct that shall never bring discredit to the University of Michigan or dishonor to the men who have honored me with their names.
