U. OF M. IMPROVEMENTS.

WHAT THEY ARE DOING ON THE CAMPUS.

The Laboratories—Brewer Bailer Room—Medical Building—Other Repairs.

Secretary Wade is one of the busiest men in the city. Instead of sojourning for a month or two at a summer resort, as many of those connected with the University do, he is to be found at most any hour of the day, hustling around the campus looking after a small army of men who are engaged making needed improvements on the different buildings, and on the grounds. For a man who has to work six days out of every seven, and at the end of each year finds fifty-two weeks to his credit, he bears up well and is always ready to give the reporters an audience. Sometimes he gives the information wanted, and sometimes—well, he has a nicer way of getting around it than any person we know of. About $75,000 will be expended this year for new buildings and improvement, and all of this is done under Mr. Wade's personal supervision. The building on which the most money will be expended is the new

PHYSICAL LABORATORY.

The contract for this has not yet been let, but will be within the next few days. The Messrs Pond, of Chicago, are the architects, which is a guarantee that it will be both handsome and convenient. This, it will be remembered, is the building over which the regents had such a time, and finally appropriated the sum of $30,000. It is to be a three story brick. The first and second floors are to be used for the chemical laboratory, and the third floor for the hygienic laboratory, of which Dr. Vaughan is at the head. On the first floor the instruments which are used in the physical laboratory, will be located, and on the second floor will be the lecture room, and an office for Prof. Carhart. The building will be located about 90 feet southeast of the library building.

THE ENGINEERING LABORATORY

is to be a two-story brick and basement, 34x56 feet, will be located by the side of the present building, and when completed will give the department of mechanical engineering all the room and the facilities which are needed to teach this important branch in the University. The basement will be used as a storage room; the first floor will be arranged for engine-room, wash-room and office and the second floor for drafting, blue printing, etc. An addition will also be built in connection with this, which will be 36x80 feet, one story high, which will be used as a foundry. For erecting these two buildings the regents have appropriated $12,000. Gordon W. Lloyd, of Detroit, drew the plans, and the contract for building has been let to D. J. Ross, of this city.

ANATOMICAL BUILDING.

This new building will be located about 150 feet south of the medical building, and will be two stories high with basement, 32x60 feet. There will be nothing fancy about it, and will cost about $6,000. In the basement will be deposited the anatomical material. On the first floor will be an office and wash room and cloak room, besides two large rooms, one of which will be used for the study of pathological anatomy and the other by the ladies as a dissecting room. The entire second floor will be used as a gentlemen's dissecting room. The building will be ventilated throughout. All offensive odors which arise from the anatomical material will be conducted through an underground pipe to the smoke stack of the new boiler house, where it will be consumed. This is an improvement which will be hailed with delight by the medical students, as heretofore they had to do their work in the presence of this odor. Under the new arrangement it is expected that all this objectionable and unhealthy smell will be carried off.

THE NEW BOILER HOUSE

will be 40x60 feet, one story high, and will cost $8,000. On the north side will be an addition built 20 feet wide, which will in reality make the building 60 feet square; this addition will be used for storing coal. A fourteen-foot cellar will be excavated. The necessity for such a deep basement arises from the fact that low pressure boilers will be put in. The smoke stack will be 00 feet high, with a H-foot flue, and will require 117,000 brick. The object of such a large flue is to furnish ventilation for the new medical building spoken of above. D. J. Ross has the contract for building it, and is under contract to have it completed by the first of October.

These four buildings are all that are to be erected the present summer, but there is much other work that is being done in the way of

MAKING REPAIRS.

Among the buildings which the workmen will invade, none will receive as much attention as the medical building. It will be completely overhauled and thoroughly renovated, and by the time college opens it will have the appearance of a new building, on the inside. The three rooms which have heretofore been used for dissecting will be fitted up, and will be used by Dr. Sewall. The museum will be removed to another room, and the space devoted to Dr. Stowell's department. This is just a brief outline of the changes which will be made in this building. To go into the matter in detail would require too much of our space.

Both of the hospitals have already been repaired to some extent. In the Homoeopathic hospital a new hard maple floor has been laid in the wards, and a dining-room fitted up in the basement under the main building. In the Allopathic hospital a new hard maple floor has been laid in the wards and in Dr. Dunster's room. The museum will require a few repairs. The roof needs repairing and the floor at the east entrance. Some of the steam pipes also need repairing, and some of the lights will be changed.

The laboratory will be fixed up where the fire occurred last spring, and will be put in as good condition as before. A new receiving vault will be built for storing chemicals. The whole amount of repairs on this building, including the vault, will amount to $1,200 or $1,500.

In the main building the secretary's room will be overhauled to some extent. The president's room will also be touched up somewhat. In the various rooms in the building where repairs are needed, they will be made.

A HOMOEOPATHIC DOSE.

DR. JAMES C. WOOD ACCUSED OF MALPRACTICE.

Mrs. Lamreaux, of Livingston County, whom He Treated at the Hospital last Winter, Wants $10,000 Damages.

The usual quietude into which our city had fallen for the past few weeks, was unexpectedly broken last Monday evening, when it was announced that Dr. James C. Wood, of the Homoeopathic College, of the University, had been sued for $10,000 by a Mrs. Lamreaux, of Livingston county, upon whom he performed an operation last winter at the hospital. Monday morning he was called to northern Michigan to perform an operation, and in going passed through Howell, the home of the complainant. When the train stopped there, a gentleman entered the car and inquired in a loud voice if Dr. James C. Wood, of Ann Arbor, was in the car. The doctor, thinking that perhaps a telegram had been sent him from home, promptly answered. The person proved to be a deputy sheriff with a summons, requiring him to appear in the Livingston county court on the sixth of September, and answer to a charge of malpractice. The doctor was all "broke up" over the matter, but pursued his journey northward, to his destination, performed the operation, and returned home Tuesday afternoon.

Last winter Mrs. Lamreaux came to the Homoeopathic hospital, suffering from a cancer of the uterus, and which Dr. Wood successfully removed, being over an hour performing the operation. After he got through, the patient was immediately turned over to the hospital attendants to be cared for, as all other cases are. She was taken into the ladies' ward, and while yet under the influence of anesthetics, hot bottles were placed around her to restore animation. Mrs. Lamreaux alleges in her complaint that she was so severely burned that the flesh fell off to the bone. She further alleges that one of the burns on the bottom of one of her feet caused a muscle to contract, which will make her walk a little lame for the rest of her life.

When the doctor returned home he was seen by a REGISTER reporter, to whom he made the following statement:

"During the holiday vacation this Mrs. Lamreaux came to the hospital a complete physical wreck. She was hardly able to walk, being a victim of one of the varieties of cancer of the uterus. Her countenance was extremely pale, indicative of profuse haemorrhages, from which she had been suffering for over two years. The characteristic cancerous discharge made her an object of disgust, both to herself and to those with whom she came in contact. She presented herself as a charity patient, wishing to be treated as such, and saying that her physicians at home considered her case a hopeless one. It is unnecessary to go into those details in which the public cannot possibly be interested. Suffice it to say that in my judgment, and in the judgment of my colleagues, there was but one chance to prolong life for any length of time, and that was the entire removal of the uterus, and if necessary, its appendages. After relating to her in the presence of witnesses the possibilities and probabilities of her case, were an effort made to do this, the great chances she would have to run, etc., the whole responsibility was left with her and her friends. To use her own language, "she preferred a death under the knife to an inevitable lingering one." Accordingly, during the latter part of February sometime, with the aid of my colleagues and the presence of the two higher classes of our school, I removed the entire uterus and the appendages of one side through the vagina, an operation which, if ever before performed in this state, I have been unable to find in the literature of recorded instances. At any rate, the operation was a long, difficult and tedious one, the patient being under the knife for over an hour. After the performance, as is customary, the case was turned over to my regular assistant, who, with the aid of the class assistants, removed her to a room adjoining the operating ward, and placed her in bed, under the supervision of the regular nurse of the ladies' ward. Before I again reached the patient, the accident for which she seeks damages in some way happened, to contend with which measures were at once instituted, but owing to her low vitality the blistered surfaces developed into quite good-sized sores. Various unforeseen complications arose, in connection with the operation, and a somewhat tedious convalescence followed. I watched her case very carefully, giving her much of the personal attention which the house surgeon alone, and not myself, is compelled to give. She gradually rallied, and before leaving expressed herself as feeling better than for years before. Indeed, she looked like another woman. Many were the expressions of gratitude paid to me personally and expressed to others. The last benediction received from her before leaving the hospital was an apparently sincere regret that she would be ever unable to repay me for what I had done for her. I little realized at the time that her generosity would reach a ten thousand dollar malpractice suit. I certainly think that she cannot hold me responsible for an accident which happened after she passed from my hands. If she can, it is well for myself and all other operators on the campus to know it; for if we are to be held accountable for the action of the assistants and hospital attaches, the patients would indeed have a hard time to find men to fill the chairs. Very frequently one, two, three and even four operations, necessitating the use of anaesthetic, are performed during one clinical hour. It will readily be seen that it would be utterly impossible for the operator to personally watch each patient while passing under or rallying from the anaesthetic. The woman's ingratitude is simply incomparable."

The doctor received a letter from the complainant some time ago, wherein she stated that she would bring the above action, regretting, however, that she should be compelled to cause him trouble after he had done so much to save her life.

The doctor has the sympathy of every one, and their only wish is that this woman whom he took almost out of the grave and restored to life, will be unsuccessful in her attempt to collect any damages. It looks more like a persecution than a prosecution.

HE WANTS A CHANGE.

One Delivery Per Day to all Within the City Limits.

To the Editor:
The above heading indicates the principal subject of thought and conversation in our city during the hot month of July. There has been and is dissatisfaction and irritation, and there is reason for the same. Can we find a remedy that will be practicable, and just to all? When a city is large enough, and does business through the postoffice to reach a certain point, it is entitled to free delivery. Ann Arbor having reached that point, free delivery was announced from and after the first day of July. Not for those merely living within a limited circle around the post-office building, but for the whole city. Free delivery continued through the city for about a week, when it was found impracticable without additional carriers. Though much criticism has been expended on the postmaster of this city, I do not see what else he could do than to cut off a part of its people from free delivery, so long as the postoffice department refuses to give him a sufficient number of carriers for the whole. The simple fact is, that Ann Arbor covers an uncommonly large territory for a city of its number of inhabitants. Probably the government now furnishes as many carriers as is usual for our number of inhabitants, and the remedy for our present unsatisfactory condition, if we are to have any, must come in part from our own action. The present number of carriers, and even an additional one, might prove entirely insufficient after the first of October, when we have an addition of some 2,000 students, who write and receive more letters than double the number of our ordinary adult population.

What the city needs more than anything else is uniformity and certainty. One of the supervisors* who happens to have the misfortune to reside a few feet outside of the charmed circle of the present free delivery, told me that he had lost for the city, in his official capacity, $120 00, in consequence of the late sudden changes in relation to the delivery of letters. I see no other way to obtain this uniformity and certainty, except free delivery once per day only, to every resident within the city limits. If free delivery is a boon to any one, it is especially so to those living at a distance from the postoffice. The business man whose store, office, or shop is on or near Main street cares little about it. He likes a little walk to the postoffice to vary the monotony for himself or clerk. In fact it has been charged that the business men in the central part of the city opposed free delivery on the ground that it would diminish their trade from outsiders going to and from the postoffice. I cannot believe our respectable business men would from such an unworthy motive now oppose free delivery once per day to all living within the city limits. We are all equally taxed for the privileges of the city. And should we not all have equal privileges? That was the principle for which our fathers fought in the revolution. Nothing is really settled till it is rightly settled. The poorest man or woman living on the outskirts of the city, and paying their proportion of taxes, is, on every principle of equity and justice, as fully entitled to free delivery as those living in palatial residences near the postoffice.

Let us place ourselves on the solid and equitable foundation of one delivery per day to every resident within the city limits. Let us unitedly petition for this to the postoffice department, and then, after we have obtained it, get from this or a succeeding administration free delivery in its full extent as soon as we are fairly able to do so.
P. L. PAGE.

In all probability the next congress will pass an appropriation for an industrial school in Michigan for the education of Indian children. From the Flint Globe we clip the following on the subject: "Indian Agent Mark W. Stevens says there are 1,000 Indian children of proper school age in Michigan. He thinks 500 of them would go to an industrial school and learn trades if such a school were established in the State. The superintendent of this bureau of the Interior department at Washington was in Flint a few days ago and had a conference with Mr. Stevens in reference to the matter, and will strongly urge the establishment of a training school and farm in Michigan. He thinks the farm ought to consist of not less than 250 acres of good land, with as much variety of soil as can well be found on such an area. The school should teach farming, carpentry, blacksmithing, and other manual trades to the boys, and household arts to the girls, and the elements of a good English education to both sexes. Mr. Stevens thinks that the president will recommend such a school for Michigan, and that congress will make the necessary appropriation. He further says that the school will be located near some large town, like Flint, which will offer the greatest inducements in the way of lands, railroad facilities, etc."

Forest Fires.
DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 2.—Dispatches from St. Louis, Clare, Fairwell, Haiguel and other points in this State report great damage through fires in the forests. Valuable tracts of pine and hardwood timber have been destroyed. The fires continue to spread.

BABASAC, Mich., July 31.—Julian P. Mills was recently arrested on a charge of drunkenness, and in consequence his sweetheart discarded him. He claims that his arrest was unjust, and has sued the town for $20,000 damages for alienating the girl's affections.

A Boom in Tobacco.
NEW YORK, July 30.—There is much excitement among tobacco dealers and manufacturers at present, such as has not been known in years. Prices for leaf tobacco have increased from 50 to 100 per cent, during July and are still tending upward.

Mercury Climbs Up to Over 100 Degrees—Several Deaths from Sun-Stroke—The Hottest July in Seventeen Years.

PERSIMMON HEMAXITY.
NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., July 31.—The thermometer registered 110 at two o'clock p. m. Friday, with a scorching hot wind from the south. Several persons were overcome by heat, but none will die. Reports from all points in Otoe county say that wells and creeks are dry, cattle suffering and the corn crop ruined. The people are praying for rain.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., July 31.—The thermometer touched 102 degrees Friday. No sun-strokes are reported.

KANSAS CITY, MO., July 31.—The thermometer stood at 102 in the shade for three hours Friday afternoon, which means 106 or more on the sidewalk. A refreshing breeze afforded some relief, however, and only three or four cases of sun-stroke were reported.

NEW YORK, July 31.—Mercury reached 93 degrees Friday afternoon, and there were five fatal sun-strokes.

OMAHA, Neb., July 31.—Friday was the hottest experienced in this city since 1874. The signal-service reported 103 degrees at three o'clock. The sun was assisted by a hot dry wind from the south.

Birtbolfil-8 Great Work.

The statue of Liberty enlightening the world, which stands on Bedloe's Island, in the harbor of New York, is one of the most sublime artistic conceptions of modern times. The torch of the goddess lights the nations of the earth to peace, prosperity and progress, through Liberty. But "liberty" is an empty word for the thousands of poor women enslaved by physical ailments a hundredfold more tyrannical than any Nero. To such sufferers Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription holds forth the promise of a speedy cure. It is a specific in all those derangements, irregularities and weaknesses which make life a burden to so many women. The only medicine sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. ## The Five Sinters.

There were five fair sinters, and each had an aim. Flora would fain be a fulfionable dame; Scholarly Susan's election was books; Coquette's Cora cared more for good looks; Anna, ambitious, aspired after wealth; Sensible Sarah sought first for good health. So she took Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and grew healthy and blooming. Cora's beauty quickly faded; Susan's eyesight failed from over-study; Flora became nervous and fretful in striving after fashion, and a sickly family kept Anna's husband poor. But sensible Sarah grew daily more healthy, charming and intelligent, and she married rich.

M'GARIGLE IN CANADA.

He Reaches Point Edward in Safety—But Present Whereabouts Unknown—Warnings Out for His Arrest—Sheriff Matson's Opinion.

BARNIA, Can., Aug. 1.—McGarigle, the escaped Chicago hoodler, was landed at Point Edward, Can., opposite Port Huron, yesterday, from the schooner Blako. He was taken off the schooner in a small boat, in plain sight of a tug containing officers, who boarded the vessel Marsh, which was in the same town as the Blako. McGarigle had adopted no disguises, and readily admitted his identity. He proceeded at once to Sarnia, where he lodged with a friend last night. To a reporter he said that he would at once open communication with his friends in Chicago, and that he hoped to arrange matters in the near future so as to admit of his return to that city.

SARNIA, Can., Aug. 2.—McGarigle has disappeared. At midnight Sunday night the chief of police visited the place where he was supposed to be staying, for the purpose of arresting him, but found that he had fled. McGarigle is at present at Sarnia, where he is under the care of some friendly farmer in one of the adjoining townships, where he can easily communicate with his friends and avoid detectives and reporters.

Warrants are said to be awaiting McGarigle at Montreal and Quebec. Lawyers here do not think the fugitive can be extradited except on a charge of forgery.

CHICAGO, Aug. 2.—Sheriff Matson said yesterday: "We have not asked the Sarnia officers to arrest M. G. McGarigle. I don't see how we could. His case is not covered by the extradition treaty, and his deliverance into our hands would only be a matter of international courtesy. If a request of that kind is made it must come from the State Department at Washington, not from county and State officials."

CHICAGO, Aug. 2.—Dr. St. John, who is charged with complicity in McGarigle's escape, was arrested yesterday and taken before Justice White, who fixed his bond at $2000, which was secured, and he was released.

ticularly that of the day previous, was covered at the road-side by the guns, knapsacks, canteens, broken wagons and extra garments of the Confederates.

Shortly after on the morning of May 18 the bluffs of Black river were reached and the remains of the burned railroad bridge came in sight.

A little later the writer's regiment was found inside of the Confederate works of the day previous. The writer soon had from his comrades, who had been participants in the battle of Black River Bridge, a full account of the whole affair.

It was almost a bloodless victory. A bayou circles around to the east from Black river at the railroad bridge, forming a sort of horseshoe, one-half to three-quarters of a mile in extent; just within this the Confederates, with cotton bales from the neighboring plantation, had extemporized breastworks. These were well manned, and at convenient intervals cannon were planted.

Upon the hills just west of the river the Confederates were in force. Lawler, with his brigade, charged the left flank of the rebel line, when the whole of the enemy either surrendered or sought safety in flight.

Seventeen hundred prisoners were taken, many of whom, when the charge was first made, became panic-stricken, tore out little bunches of cotton from the bales in the breastworks and hoisted these upon the points of their bayonets in token of surrender.

The writer spent some time in visiting the works lately occupied by the Confederates; they seemed strong, and the whole position was very similar to that occupied by the Federals eighteen months later at Franklin, Tenn.

Having lost, since the first day of May, 1863, the battles of Port Gibson, Raymond, Jackson, Champion's Hill and Black River Bridge, all in the vicinity of Vicksburg, the Confederates on the 17th of the same month retired within the works of that stronghold.

As soon as the position at Black river was lost, the bridge at that point was burned. The pioneer corps, however, fell to work most energetically, and by ten o'clock of May 18, the bridge was ready for use.

Eighteen guns were captured at Black river. Many of these were handsome and finished in a most beautiful manner. Several had painted upon them in gilt letters, names of popular Confederate officers, but qualified with the word lady.

Thus there was the "Lady Davis," "Lady Price," "Lady Beauregard," etc.

Before noon nearly the whole command was across the Big Black and headed for Vicksburg, ten or twelve miles distant. The way was for the most part lined with farm houses.

The Thirteenth Corps bore to the left and at nightfall was within about ten miles of the works that encircled Vicksburg. Orders were given to make fires only in the ravines with which the region was well supplied.

Early next morning the whole command advanced. As the Confederates had so far been defeated and had in the last engagement yielded what seemed a strong position with so little resistance, the opinion came to prevail throughout the Federal army that Vicksburg would yield without further resistance.

Filled with this idea the Union forces confidently approached the outskirts of Vicksburg on the morning of May 19, but found the Confederates without these in line of battle. They soon retired, however, and meantime the Federals, by this time convinced that the foe in front intended to fight, approached cautiously but determinedly.

The division established its hospital about four miles from the Confederate works at the house of a man named Sweet. The house was built mainly of logs into a center of a large yard that sloped down in nearly every direction.

Every thing was got in readiness at this hospital to receive the wounded. The surgeons had their instruments all ready for use; long, bright, razor-edged knives for cutting through fleshy parts in amputations and sharp-toothed, shining saws for sawing bone. Then there were strong forceps for extracting bullets, bone pliers for snipping off jagged ends of bone and tourniquets for arresting hemorrhage.

Sponges for washing wounds and lint and bandages for dressing them were in plentiful supply.

Among the more prominent drugs were morphine, for alleviating pain, chloroform and ether for producing anesthesia (insensibility to suffering), brandy, wine, whiskey and quinine for exhaustion, and perchloride of iron, a powerful astringent, to stop bleeding.

To be used in the way of nourishment there were beef essences, condensed milk, strong coffee, beef soup, broths, crackers, etc., etc.

The yard at Sweet's was filled with shade trees, and under these it was proposed to put the wounded. Ambulances were sent to the front and every thing was in readiness at the hospital to make as comfortable as possible the injured.

Towards noon the writer went forward a couple of miles; since eight o'clock there had been firing, and this grew heavier and heavier as the day advanced. As yet, however, there was but little in the immediate front, but nearly all was to the right.

Sherman with the Fifteenth Corps was on the extreme right, McPherson (Seventeenth Corps) was in the center and McClelland (Thirteenth Corps) was on the left.

At noon the firing to the right became very heavy, the musketry was incessant and this was very frequently punctuated with the boom of cannon.

Gradually the incessant report of musketry and frequent boom of cannon crept round to the left, and in the afternoon the whole line was engaged. Toward evening the ambulances commenced coming in loaded with the wounded. These poor fellows had to be lifted carefully from the ambulances and laid around upon the ground till the surgeons could examine and care for their injuries.

Two or three operating tables had been extemporized with boards; at each of these surgeons were soon busily at work amputating legs and arms, probing wounds and otherwise operating upon the injured.

The great majority of injuries came from musket balls, a few came from pieces of shell, and occasionally one from a grape shot.

Nearly all were perforating wounds, though occasionally only a bruise was found. This usually came from a piece of shell. Where bones of extremities were seriously injured amputations were nearly always resorted to. In the case of the arm, however, especially between the shoulder and elbow, if the joints were not involved, the wound was enlarged and the ragged ends of bones pared off smoothly, the arm put in a splint and if the case resorted fortunately, a sort of gristle first and later a bony structure took the place of the original hard bone.

This operation was called a resection. All sorts of wounds were received. One poor fellow was shot in the face in such a way that the whole lower jaw was taken off, the wound however was not necessarily fatal.

VICKSBURG, SHOWING COURT-HOUSE.—From an Old Photograph.

A bullet passed through a man's skull and into the brain cavity; for days he lived, walked about and waited largely upon himself. He seemed dazed however from the first, and after awhile became stupid, helpless and died.

Some that were brought in were so severely injured that there was no hope of doing any thing for their recovery; such cases if there seemed to be much suffering were made as comfortable as possible and laid upon the ground and the attention of the surgeons given to those whose injuries were likely to receive benefit.

One poor fellow was shot somewhere in the base of the brain and when taken out of the ambulance one side of his face was in convulsions.

His case was deemed hopeless, and he was placed upon the ground. All night and till noon next day the convulsions continued; one eye was in constant motion and the muscles of the same side of the face jerked and twitched in horrible contortions. But at last death came to his relief.

All were kept busy till away in the night caring for the wounded. Blankets were spread upon the ground under the trees, and upon these, side by side, the injured ones were laid. Towards morning others of the wounded were brought in that could not be reached till nightfall protected the rescuing parties from the bullets of the enemy.

The next day, May 20, was occupied in perfecting the care of the injured. Many operations were of too delicate a character to be performed after night; these were made the morning following.

Sometimes in the army, however, very delicate operations were from necessity performed after night. In the medical supplies were little wax candles that gave a pretty light, free from smoke and without much dripping, as from tallow candles.

When working after night a number of these were lighted and held for the convenience of the operator. The night after the battle of Champion's Hill the writer remembers coming upon some surgeons who were amputating at the shoulder-joint the arm of a poor fellow who had been wounded near the shoulder.

Just as he came up the surgeons were turning the bone out of its socket and adjusting the flap. This operation in the army was considered a very critical one and was not often performed, when other means would avail.

At the front the lines were advanced as near as possible to the enemy's works, and at night the spade was used freely, thus making rifle-pits to secure protection from the enemy's bullets.

The casualties were comparatively few the 30th and 21st of May, yet throughout both these days wounded men were from time to time brought in from the front.

Meantime preparations for the care of the wounded were made on a much more extended scale. When the trees in the yard failed to give shelter from sunshine by day and dew at night, limbs heavily laden with leaves, cut from the timber near by were laid upon poles that rested upon others set in the ground.

While engaged in this work a cannon ball came whizzing through the air and buried itself in the ground in the center of the yard.

One of the men, curious to see what character of missile it was, got a shovel and excavated the ball. It proved to be a conical steel ball about two and one-half inches through and seven or eight inches long.

Meanwhile full rations were now received for all, from a base of supplies established on the Yazoo river, upon Sherman's right; from this point a wagon road in the rear of the army was made, and over this were conveyed supplies of all kinds to the troops.

For a day or two after the investment about six miles below Vicksburg, had been used as a base.

But the new base upon the Yazoo save direct communication with the great North and its limitless supply.

SECTION XI. ASSAULT AND SIEGE OF THE CONFEDERATE STRONGHOLD. At two p. m., May 19, an assault was made on the Confederate works at Vicksburg.

This assault was unsuccessful so far as capturing the stronghold was concerned, but resulted in giving the Federals an advanced position, which position was made secure by the use of the spade the succeeding night.

Believing that the Confederates would not hold out against another determined assault, a second one was ordered at ten a. m., May 23.

This was opened by a terrific cannonade from all the Federal batteries; following this was an incessant rattle of musketry.

It was known at the hospital this charge was to be made, and the constant boom of cannon and continual roll of musketry firing after ten in the forenoon, all knew would soon bring in a frightful harvest of mangled and wounded.

The slain would, of course, for the time at least, be left on the field.

About two p. m., through the trees was seen a long train of ambulances approaching, all heavily loaded with mangled humanity. Upon reaching the hospital grounds, two or three ambulances were backed up at once, and the wounded lifted or assisted out.

One of the first that the writer assisted in taking from the ambulance was a tall, slender man, who had received a terrible wound in the top of his head, a minnie ball had, so to speak, plowed its way through the skull, making a ragged, gaping wound, exposing the brain for three or four inches.

He lived but a moment after removal from the ambulance.

The Captain of the company in which the writer enlisted was in another ambulance, mortally wounded, with a bullet in his brain.

He lived a day or two in an unconscious stupor—a comatose state as the doctors say. But the majority of the wounded were boys, young, brave, daring fellows, too often rash, and meeting death, or next to it, oftentimes from needless exposure.

One nice young fellow of eighteen the writer can never forget. He had been wounded in the bowels, and was sitting at the root of a large tree, resting his head against its trunk.

His name was Banks, and knowing the writer well, he recognized him, and calling him by name, laid: "Ah, I'm badly wounded."

Already his lips were ashy pale, a clammy sweat was upon his face, and from the wound in his abdomen a long knuckle of intestine was protruding. A few hours more, and young Banks was resting in the sleep of death.

Ho danger from enemy's bullets now; the poorsenseless clay a little time before the dwelling-place of joyous young life, nothing could harm more. By the quiet form sat the father, sad and heart-broken, himself a soldier, but the balance of his term of service would now seem lonely and tedious.

Arms and legs of many in the ambulances were hanging useless and lying powerless by the sides of their owners, and soon the several tables were kept busy, removing mangled and useless limbs.

As on all such occasions when there was a great many wounded on hand at one time, but little was done for the mortally injured, save to lay them in a comparatively comfortable position; those having mangled limbs and broken bones were first attended, while those with unextensive, simple flesh wounds, were passed by till more serious cases were attended to.

Judgment, however, in this direction was not always unerring. The writer remembers one man with what seemed a slight wound of the foot. He was rather persistent in having immediate attention, but the number of dangling limbs and gaping wounds calling for immediate care seemed to justify the surgeons in putting him off for a time.

His wound did not do well, and later he was sent to a general hospital in Memphis, when gangrene attacked the foot and death was the result.

All the afternoon and till late at night on May 22 did the surgeons work with the wounded; amputating limbs, removing balls, cleaning and washing wounds, mending them of broken pieces of bone, bandaging them up and putting in the best shape possible.

A few were bruised from stroke of spent balls or piece of shell and recovered in a few days. Long lines of wounded now occupied the shaded places in the yard, and to attend to the wants of these kept all busy.

Carbolic acid and other disinfectants were at that time not in use and all wounds were at first treated with simple water dressings. Old muslin cloth or lint was saturated with cold water and applied to fresh wounds.

As soon as these began to matter, simple cerate, a mild soothing ointment consisting of two parts of fresh lard and one of white wax, was applied. In most bullet wounds, the ball in entering the body carried before it little pieces of the clothing, leather of the belt or cartridge box, tin of the canteens or any such substance first struck by the missile.

In nearly all instances these foreign substances were discharged in the form of little dark colored bits of debris.

Every day the wounds were washed and freshly dressed. But as the weather was warm many wounds became infested with maggots. This looked horrible but was not specially detrimental.

Two or three days' extra work was made by the large number of wounded resulting from the assault of May 23.

After this then was a constant accession of wounded man at the hospital, but only a few at a time.

One man received a wound from some sort of a large missile that made an extensive opening at the place of entrance, the fleshy part of the thigh, in which it buried itself deeply and could not be reached.

In a day or two the limb all about this wound began to assume a greenish-yellow hue and later the man died.

Cutting into this wound after death, revealed the presence of a copper-tap, more than an inch across, from a shell.

About a week after the seizure began a young man from an Ohio regiment died from a wound resulting from his own imprudence. The first day of the investment, while his regiment was drawn up in line three or four miles from the enemy's works, there being some delay in the advance, the young man got some loose powder, ran it along in a little trail, covered this with dust and tried to fire it.

As it did not ignite he was stooping over with his face close to the ground when the charge took fire. His face was badly burned, and later was attacked with erysipelas, from which death resulted. This seemed an inglorious way of yielding up one's life when the opportunities for dying for one's country were so plentiful.

As soon as communication by the Yazoo was opened up with the North, supplies in great abundance came in for the sick. In the way of eatables were delicacies of various kinds, fruits, mild, home-made wines, etc. Clothing for the sick and wounded was furnished in full quantities.

This, for the most part, consisted of cotton garments for underwear—shirts, night-shirts, drawers, gowns, etc. Most all of bleached muslin.

Cotton goods were at the time expensive in the market, from the fact that the supply of the raw material by the South was stopped for the period during which the war continued.

Nearly all these things were donated by individuals and communities. Very many of the garments had the name of the donor stamped upon them with stencil plate. Quite a number of the articles seen by the writer had the name, BOW forgotten, of a lady with post-office address at Janesville, Wis.

The assault of May 22 convinced all officers and men, that Vicksburg was much more securely entrenched than had been supposed, and that the only way to capture it would be by siege.

Accordingly all made up their minds to await the result patiently, but of the final fall of the stronghold no one entertained a doubt. Indeed, of ultimate triumph every man seemed from the start to have full confidence.

All Summer Silks that wore 50c and 60c, now 35c.

12-1-20 Sateens. American, of course, but when before could you see such a 12-1-2c worth in Sateens? There's witchery in the blended tints, in the odd forms and in the soft, shiny finish. Twenty, maybe fifty patterns, new, neat, varied to suit every taste.

Batistes, dainty as ever, well liked as ever, as fine as ever were made, 12-1-2c; they have been 16c. A dozen Styles: Blocks and dabs and pretty pat3bes of color scattered on white and cream grounds. At the Parasol counter, yesterday, it looked as if the season were just opening. New Parasols at about half price. Don't go a begging.

Ladies' Linen Handkerchiefs, woven colored borders, 10c each. You have paid 20c each for no better.

Ladies' colored Collars and Cuffs at half price.

SEERSUCKERS.

There are dozens of styles in which beauty seems to have been the last thing thought of. You'll think so when you see them in the piece; but who ever saw an ugly Seersucker when made up? The 9 cent Crinkles have been 12) and this week the 12) were 15 cents last week. Plenty of Creams at 5 cents. Plenty more at 6 cents. Battling good quality: either of them, for much more than the price.

CORDED GINGHAMS.

Among the newest, nattiest, neatest of the Cotton novelties. You'll likely think they're from Paris. The idea is; there's French fancy in every pretty thread, but the word is Yankee. Price 124 cents from 20.

PERCALE. The tough, yard wide "shirting" so many ladies are buying. Forty to fifty styles. 12) cents from 16.

The editor of the Sault Ste Marie Democrat is a "boomer." Here is his latest concerning the boom at the Soo: Mary had a little lot, and thought she'd better sell; she placed it on the market, and the way that lot did—well, it sold four times within a week, and every time it went, the lucky man who bought it cleared ninety-nine per cent. "What makes town lots go flying so?" the eager buyers cry. "The Sault is on a boom, you know," the agents do reply. A meeting of the Business Men's Association was held in the council room Tuesday evening. On taking the chair President Kyer thanked the association for the honor conferred on him by electing him president. After the minutes of the previous meeting had been read by Secretary Frueauff, H. J. Brown, chairman of the committee on capsule factory, reported that the required amount of stock had been subscribed, and all that remained to do now was for the stockholders to hold a meeting and perfect their organization. A letter was read from a firm who wanted to start a machine shop some place where there was a good field for such a concern. Many questions were asked in the letter about an opening in Ann Arbor, its location, etc. The corresponding secretary was instructed to communicate with the gentlemen and inform them of the location and natural facilities Ann Arbor offered such a factory, and to ascertain how much would be required to induce them to locate here.

A 93,000 Blaze.

Early Wednesday morning fire was discovered in the alley in the rear of Duffy's grocery store. By the time the alarm was sounded and the people aroused, the frame barn of James Kitson, occupied by Sheriff Walsh, the barns of John Schneider and of A. R. Hall, were engulfed in flames. The fire, however, soon caught in the building owned by Hiram Kittredge and occupied by G. Snow as a livery stable. All of the buildings were burned to the ground, excepting the latter, which was of brick, but the wood-work WJS all burned.

Sherff Walsh, who occupied the Kitson barn, lost his fine black horse, valued at $200, also his carriage, buggy, cutter, harness, robes, feed, etc., entailing a loss all told, of about $500, on which he had $250 insurance.

Gil. Snow saved all his horses, carriages, harness, but lost his fine coupe, all his cutters, and a quantity of hay, grain, etc. His loss is about $1,500, which is fully covered by insurance.

The other losers were John Schneider, barn, $200, no insurance; James Kitson, barn, $100, no insurance; A. R. Hall, barn, $100, no insurance; Tony Schiappacasse, a shed, $50.

There is no doubt that the buildings were set on fire by some one. It has long been the practice of tramps and others to crawl into these barns to sleep nights, and it is thought that carelessness on the part of some one who was in there that night caused the fire. A fellow named Keegan was arrested early in the morning on suspicion, he having been seen about the premises just before the fire broke out.
