Mrs. Dr. Stowell is now editor of the Microscopical department of the Pharmaceutical Era, published at Detroit.

Prof. E. L. Walter's paper on Victor Hugo, read at the Unity club, Monday evening, is said to have been masterly.

It is stated on good authority that a freshman co-ed on Ingalls-st sat up nearly all night, Saturday night, to witness the eclipse of the moon.

Mark Twain's patent-right comedieta, "The Meisterschaft System," will be given by the Unity club as soon as the German can be thoroughly learned.

Prof. Henry C. Adams left Monday evening for Philadelphia where, last evening, he delivered a lecture on the National Surplus, before a society in the University of Pennsylvania.

Twelve hundred dollars have already been subscribed to the Gym. Among the more recent donors are the three fraternities, Beta Theta Pi, Delta Tau Delta, and Delta Upsilon. Prof. T. C. Trueblood also comes to the front with a $100 pledge.

Prof. Alexander W. Winchell, of the University, will give the Graham lectures in Brooklyn Institute, Brooklyn, N. Y., Sunday evening, Feb. 5, 12, and 19, on "The Certainty of the Suprasensible," "The Mode of Government of the Natural World," and "God Revealed in Evolution."

The Political Science association met in room 24, Friday night, and elected the following officers for the ensuing term: President, Prof. Henry C. Adams; vice president, M. Rosenthal; secretary and treasurer, F. Abbott. Prof. Adams read a very instructive and comprehensive paper on "Our National Surplus."

Prof. Gibbs, who is to occupy the chair of pathology in the U. of M., arrived yesterday with his family from London, Eng., and is stopping at Dr. Herdman's residence. He will reside at 33 Ann-st., in the house belonging to the Dr. Palmer estate. Prof. Gibbs has been engaged in Westminster hospital, opposite the famous Westminster Abbey.

Dr. Mary Weeks Burnett, who was in the Homeopathic department of U. of M. last year, is now lecturer in the Barton hospital and Training school for nurses, Chicago. Drs. O. A. Baldwin and Arabella Merrill, both of '87 Homeopathic, are also connected with the same institution, the former being instructor in sanitary science, and the latter in physiology.

Dr. Vaughan and F. Q. Novy's important and valuable researches, on typhoid fever and its germ and ptomaine appear in the current number of the Medical News. It is an interesting article even for a non-professional to read. The doctor is now engaged on the examination of the water supposed to have produced the many serious cases of typhoid fever at the Jackson penitentiary.

At the meeting that organized the University branch of the Michigan club last Saturday, the following officers were elected: President, H. B. Dewey; vice president, C. A. Ailing; secretary, D. K. Cochran; treasurer, G. L. Cramer. Several committees were appointed and another meeting called for next Saturday afternoon. The club starts off with a membership of nearly one hundred.

A University club, composed of alumni of various American colleges, was organized in Detroit Tuesday evening, under the laws of the state. The principal spirits seem to be Richard SCOTTS Willis, 8. M. Cutcheon, Henry M. Duffield, Allan H. Frazer, Dr. Henry F. Lester, and others. It is hoped by most of the members that it will have a higher purpose than that merely of social intercourse.

The University Chronicle also comes out for prohibition in Washtenaw county. It says: "We sincerely hope that the vote which will take place on Feb. 27 will be favorable to the moral interest of this county, and that local option will be given a fair trial in Ann Arbor. Surely the results of such a trial would be of the utmost importance, and would have an influence throughout the whole country." The Argonaut says that even aside from the moral question, those interested in the material welfare of the University will vote for prohibition Feb. 27.

THE GREAT BOTANIST, ASA GRAY.

First Professor in our University.—A Tribute by one Botanist to Another.

The scientific world has met with an irreparable loss in the recent death of Dr. Asa Gray, Fisher Professor of Natural History in Harvard University, and for more than half a century one of the foremost investigators and writers on the subject of systematic botany.

The University of Michigan has special occasion to render a tribute to the services and the illustrious career of Dr. Gray, inasmuch as he was the first professor appointed to a position in this institution, having been elected to the chair of botany in the summer of 1838. He was granted leave of absence immediately after his appointment, and spent this and a portion of the following year in Europe, during which time he purchased for the University the books that made up the beginning of its library. Unfortunately for us, although infinitely better for him and the science to which his life was devoted, he was soon called to the position in Harvard college which he continued to hold until his death.

An adequate review of the numerous and highly important contributions made by him to botanical science would fill many pages, and can hardly find a fitting place in a brief notice like this. He is best known to the general public as the author of a series of text-books that have made his name familiar throughout the schools of this country and that have never been equalled in the clearness and accuracy with which their special subject matter was treated. These, however, represent the least part of the productions of his intensely active life. He was the author of many special papers published by the American Academy, the Smithsonian society, the Linnaean society of London, and other learned bodies, and at the time of his death had in hand the Flora of North America, upon which he had been engaged for many years, and which still, to the deep regret of his co-workers, remains unfinished.

In addition to his special work in systematic botany, Dr. Gray was recognized authority on the subject of plant distribution, and among his papers published in the New York Nation and the American Journal of Science are some of the fairest and most judicious reviews that have ever appeared of the questions discussed in the Origin of Species. These and other papers relating to the same subjects are collected in a volume entitled Darwiniana, published some years since. They are especially interesting and valuable to those who care to see the relations of religion and science discussed by one who is broad enough to see both sides of a question, and honest enough to accept fearlessly and loyally the whole truth wherever it may lead.

For his many rare personal qualities Dr. Gray had endeared himself to a wide circle of friends, and many even of those who have never seen him face to face will deeply mourn his loss.

V. M. SPALDINO.

ALL IN YPSILANTI.

Washtenaw County Sunday School Association holds its first meeting.

One of the pleasantest, most enthusiastic, and profitable gatherings ever held in Ypsilanti, has just adjourned, and those who missed this first meeting of the Washtenaw county Sunday School Association have lost much that was interesting, entertaining, and instructive. As was announced, Tuesday evening, by the president, Prof. W. S. Perry, of Ann Arbor, the purpose of this organization is to gather authentic information concerning membership, methods of work and results of earnest work in every Sunday school in the county; to ascertain how many children are outside of Sunday school teachings and influence, and to devise and consider the best possible means of reaching these children. Rev. McLean, of the Episcopal church, stated that there was an enormous percentage of the children and youth in the county entirely without religious training, either at home or in school, and that as the original purpose of the Sunday school work had been to gather in and teach these waifs, it was now fitting and most needful that enthusiastic men and women take up the work with its original meaning and purpose, hunt up these uncared for ones, and work.

At the morning session yesterday there were forty-six delegates, representing different denominations from Ann Arbor, Augusta, Milan, Saline, Salem, Stony Creek, York, Worden and Webster. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, E. C. Warner, Ypsilanti; vice president, W. J. Canfield, Ypsilanti; secretary, K. Kittredge, Ann Arbor; treasurer, W. S. Perry, Ann Arbor. Delegates to the annual convention of the state association, to be held in Saginaw next December, were chosen as follows: Andrew Campbell, Mrs. Hopkins, W. J. Canfield, Ypsilanti; L. Palmer, Dexter; Mrs. Pear, Salem; E. Childs, Augusta.

The constitution was accepted as presented by M. W. Reynolds, state statistical secretary, of Owasco. This provides among other things that all pastors, Sunday school superintendents, teachers and other officers, also adult members of Sunday schools shall be held as members of this county association; that there shall be branches of the association in every town, district and precinct; that the officers of each and all of these divisions shall regularly visit all the schools in their charge, reporting to the president all work being done and all that is needed to be done.

It was voted to hold the next annual meeting one year from the present month, and to hold also a semi-annual meeting some time in the summer. Mr. Reynolds stated that of the 13,208 children of school age in the county, it was estimated that fully 9,000 were yet without religious influence of scarcely any kind; demonstrating clearly the need of systematic county work. The afternoon session was made very interesting by talks and papers by a number of Sunday school workers. At both sessions the question box was found to hold many pertinent questions which were satisfactorily discussed and answered by different experienced workers.

Last evening's session was filled by addresses by Prof. Barbour, of the Normal, D. A. Waterman, of Detroit, Dr. McCorkle and Andrew Campbell of Ypsilanti.

Forty-three dollars were pledged by representatives of different Sunday schools toward the $100 that the county is pledged to raise for the work. The next meeting will be duly arranged for by the executive committee, and it is confidently expected that the work so fully planned will be prosecuted to the utmost throughout the whole county.

Rev. John C. Eccleston, D. D.

This gentleman will carry with him to his home in New York the best wishes of the many Ann Arbor people whom he led through wonderland in Hobart hall during his stay here. In his three lectures last week, he took his hearers along the lines marked out by Dante's wonderful imagination. One evening was given up to hell; the second to purgatory; and the third to heaven. The stereoscopic views were, of course, an indispensable feature of such lectures; but Dante's life and temper, his theology, and the meaning of his great "Divina Commedia," were well told. Rivalling those lectures in interest, and far more interesting to many, was his lecture Monday evening on "Westminster Abbey." Mr. Eccleston was well acquainted with Dean Stanley, and enjoyed great advantages for learning about that great building which contains English history for many centuries. The origin, history, architecture, and the great dead it contains, were all told, and beautifully illustrated.

Engine and Boiler Works.

The Ann Arbor Engine and Boiler Works started last August. They have made one boiler for G. W. Bullis & Co., and one for their own use, as well as a tank 35 feet long and 40 inches in diameter, for the Ann Arbor Gas Works. They are now making a six-horse power engine, and when fairly working expect to make three kinds of engines. This six-horse power engine is probably the first one ever made entirely in Ann Arbor. Another engine that they are now making was invented by Dr. Krehbiel. It is said to be a new kind, and is simplicity itself. It can be used at 12 1/2, 25, or 50 horse power. The model has been sent to the patent office in Washington. The engine will probably be completed in two or three weeks, when a public exhibition will be made of it. It is already sold to a party in Kalamazoo. The proprietors have high hopes of building up a large industry in Ann Arbor making this new engine.

The Lunar Eclipse.

The eclipse of the moon Saturday evening was very pretty. The color was pink or about that of red-hot iron. The moon was already totally eclipsed when it arose, and the total eclipse lasted about half an hour after it was first visible. It was prettiest when the lowest edge of the moon was first tipped with the light of the sun. Although total lunar eclipses are somewhat common here, it is seldom that one is so well seen as was this one.

The New York World has the following to say of a gentleman who is well known in Ann Arbor: "David Henning, 'The Michigan apple king,' began his career as a journeyman cooper. He is the most distinguished man in his line in the world, and frequently buys and distributes as many as 125,000 barrels of apples in a season. His figure is very much like that of the late Vice President Hendricks, and he has the same sort of features as the Indian had."

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

School Meeting Feb. 10.

The school board held a special school meeting Tuesday evening to consider a proposition made by Prof. M. L. D'Ooge as president of the board of trustees of the students' Christian association. The association desires to add to their lot by purchasing of school district No. 1, a strip, one rod front, which adjoins their lot on the north. It is on State-st. The school board passed the following which calls for a school meeting Feb. 10, at Fireman's hall, to see whether the district will authorize the board to sell one or two rods of land:

WHEREAS, The students' Christian association has made application to purchase land off from the south side of the premises owned by the school district on the south side of State-st. between William and Jefferson St., and

RESOLVED, That the secretary call a meeting of the qualified voters of the district at Fireman's hall, on the 10th day of February 1888, at 7 p. m., to act upon the question whether they will authorize the trustees to sell one or two rods of land off from the south side of the premises owned by the district on State-st. between Jefferson and William, to the students' Christian association of the University upon such terms as the board of trustees deem just and proper.

Local Option Notes.

A local option meeting will be held in Geddes school house, Saturday evening.—Capt. L. L. James and Rev. W. W. Ramsay, of Ann Arbor, will speak on local option in the Dexter rink on Wednesday of next week.—On Feb. 24 there will be an "all-day" local option mass meeting in Ann Arbor, to be addressed by Geo. W. Bain.

Lafayette Grange of Lima township will discuss the local option question next week Friday at the house of Walter H. Dancer.—Nearly all the townships now have local option committees, and the campaign work will be pushed.—On Tuesday, gentlemen from York, Webster and Scio townships expressed confidence of the result of the election as regards those townships.—Rumored on the streets of Ann Arbor that the saloons have raised $1,000 to fight prohibition. Some think that amount insufficient to stay a flood.

LOCAL OPTION ALI-KI-KISS.

"In that Civilization which Manhood is destined to reach, there will be no Place for the Saloon."

The local option executive committee has issued an address to the citizens of Washtenaw county, of which the following is a copy.

To the Citizens of Washtenaw County.—The voters of Washtenaw county are called upon to decide, under the law, whether, after next May, the saloon business shall be legal within its borders.

We urge all citizens to ponder this question carefully, if they have not already done so, and especially the following considerations: Prohibition lessens the saloon influence immediately, when applied over so large an area as one county.

2. Although prohibition may not entirely stop the drinking of intoxicating liquors, yet it is the best method of dealing with the saloon. Any thing that is so wrong as is the saloon is prohibited by law. Society cannot afford to let any business that panders to the lowest human passions go without condemnation. The gambling houses, dives, all kinds, and saloons, should all be prohibited, and the laws should be enforced.

3. Because laws against an evil thing are not as well enforced as we would like, is no reason why the laws should not exist. If that were to hold, our legislature would have to repeal our laws against all forms of vice. But laws have a powerful influence. The rising generations are sure of being free of the saloon influence if we apply prohibition now. Do not be diverted from the point by assertions that prohibition cannot be enforced. It will be enforced well enough to drive the liquor traffic out of sight. The open saloons will stop entirely.

In view of these considerations we call upon all the temperance people of Washtenaw county to vote against the saloons on February 27th. We urge that on the Sunday preceding the election a temperance service be held in every church in the county.

The committee believes that prohibition can be carried in Washtenaw county if the temperance people of all parties will unite in the effort.

We would suggest that to far as possible at least one meeting be held in each school district, to be addressed by men from all the parties. In order to do this, the township committees should see that district committees are appointed.

Every legitimate effort should be put forth to carry the election. Victory for prohibition in the county containing the Normal school and the Michigan University would be heralded abroad as a very auspicious event, it would add to the numbers who attend those institutions, and increase their influence.

Nearly all intelligent citizens desire to place themselves in accord and harmony with the upward movement of mankind. In that civilization which mankind is destined to reach, there will be no place for the saloon. Let us destroy it now! By order of the county committee.

B. J. CONRAD, Chairman Ex. Committee.

ANOTHER VIBW OF DAKOTA.

Wheat, 44 Cents—land Jorlntificd. Water Alkaline, and Sells at Hi Cent* per barrel--Poor Timber—Don't 4-0.

To the Editor of THE REGISTER:

SIR—I notice in your issue of Jan. 23 a letter from Sargent county, Dakota, which, in my opinion, does not fairly represent Dakota. I have lived in Washtenaw county, and graduated from the University in 1860. I have been traveling in Dakota for the past year. I am now using my sixth one-thousand mile ticket, and have driven by team nearly 5000 miles. So I think I have a fair knowledge of the territory.

My friend from Sargent county does not tell you that when he went to Dakota, wheat was worth 1.25, and that this fall it sold for 44 cents and was docked from three to six pence for cleaning. He did not tell you that land was cheaper in his county now than when he went there, but such is the case. Eastern loan companies have a mortgage on three-fourths of all the land proved up in the territory, and are now withdrawing their money. It is not easy to secure a loan on any terms.

Running water is very scarce, and the water is poor and in many places so strongly alkaline that cattle cannot drink it. A good sweet river like your Huron cannot be found in the territory. Cattle do well in the summer, but they range large yet, but if at any time the land should be so occupied as to give 100 acres to each farm, then grazing will be uphill work. The winters are so long, and feed and stock are so cheap that there is but little money in raising it there. Fat steers are worth 10 to 2 cents live weight, and no market at that.

Corn does not do well in Dakota. The drawbacks in Dakota are many. All fuel, lumber, fruit, clothing and all machinery must be freighted a long way, and everything they raise must be freighted a long way out. There is very little timber in the territory, and that of poor quality. Planted timber does not well; the climate is too dry and winters too cold. Snow was from three to ten feet deep when I left there a few days ago, and with the thermometer down to 61, and trying to climb lower. It takes many of the roses out of the territory.

One word to the young men and maidens of Washtenaw: if you can get a fairly good living, and by industry and economy lay up a little thing for a rainy day, do not hastily rush to the great plains of Dakota. To you who are older: when you leave a country like Michigan, you go from home and many comforts of life which you will not find in Dakota. I know many families who buy all the water they use for cents per barrel, and ice by the load which they melt in winter over straw fires. I have eaten many a dinner cooked with hay. Gio. SADLER, SALEM, MICH., Jan. 20, 1888.

Charles Sumner Again.

To the Editor of THE REGISTER:

SIR:—Your correspondent, referring to the lecture of Charles Sumner, given before the Students lecture association several years ago, and the indignities to which the lecturer was repeatedly subjected from the rowdy element in the audience, omits to mention the fact, that Mr. Sumner refused to accept payment for his services, requesting that the money, which he would have taken under other circumstances, be turned over to the library fund.

On the occasion referred to Mr. Sumner was not unduly sensitive to the interruptions which he received during the delivery of his address: a much less sensitive mortal even than Charles Sumner would have been justified in leaving the platform. ONE WHO WAS PRESENT, Ann Arbor, Jan. 30, 1888.

COUNTY NEWS.

T. J. Van Gieson, of Bridgewater, has rented his farm to Ernst Bros.

The Southern Washtenaw Farmers' club will meet today at J. F. Spafard's, in Manchester.

Christian Saley and Hiram Martin, of Bridgewater, recently sold a carload of sheep to Ann Arbor parties.

Martin Dewey, of Bridgewater, is better, and went to Manchester, Monday for the first time in three months.

Lafayette Grange, of Lima township, discussed the tariff question last Friday, at the residence of E. A. Nordman.

L. D. Watkins, of Manchester, read a paper before the forestry convention in Grand Rapids, on utilizing waste places for forest growth.

Mrs. Ludice Bailey died very suddenly Monday. She has always resided in or about Manchester, and leaves a great many friends and relatives to mourn her loss. Prosecuting Attorney Norris and wife, of Ann Arbor, attended the funeral. Mr. Norris is a brother of the deceased.

The Lansing Republican says: Hon. Henry D. Platt, of Ypsilanti, State Oil Inspector, is in the city preparing his annual report for publication. During the year 238,254 barrels were inspected, $30,972.98 in fees collected, $19,981.26 salary paid deputies, and $2,927.28 expended in defraying the deputies' expenses. The office expenses for the year are $1,855.94. Twenty-four deputy oil inspectors are at work and their salaries are from $300 to $1,200 per annum.

The Milan Leader intimates pretty strongly that a certain person whom it names carries on a gambling den in that village. The editor gave the right signal at the door of the supposed g. d., and it brought the keeper to the door, who denied him admission. He says: "Perhaps its none of our business—there may be no doubt of it; there are lots of mysterious things going on all time that is no affair of ours. We don't ask an explanation; if there is anything wrong about it, and Milan society can stand it, we can."

Miss Helen Stone, who wrote to Postmaster Duffy some time ago from France, inquiring in regard to her relatives, found that William Bogardus, of Milan, was her uncle. Mr. Bogardus wrote to her, and she replied, under date of Jan. 4, in which she says that there is no doubt that he is the brother of her dear mother who was drowned near the isthmus of Panama; that it is a great blessing to her to hear from her family. Her father had given her up to the care of Mme. Plauel. She lived 21 years in a small village in Spain, was well taught and became a good pianist. The lady was ruined financially in mining speculations, and Miss Stone must now provide for herself. She had never written before because Mme. Plauel did not approve of it, fearing that she would desire to return to America. She had been permitted to forget English, but had since learned to speak it, although with the French accent.

Webster.

The New England supper at Geo. W. Phelps, Friday evening, was the event of the season. Old-fashioned costumes, songs, hymns and speeches, together with dishes served as our grandmothers knew so well how to prepare, were some of the attractions of the occasion. The Michigan crop report for January relates to the cost of producing the wheat, oat, corn and hay crops raised by crop correspondents in 1887. The whole number of reports received were 775, representing 600 townships, mostly from the southern four tiers of counties. The averages from these reports can be relied upon as pretty accurately showing the truth, as whatever errors of judgement were made, were very sure to balance each other. The total cost of producing and marketing one acre of wheat is, on the average for the state, $13.06. It is less in the northern counties than in the southern. The total cost of producing and marketing an acre of wheat in Washtenaw county is placed at $14.69, more than the average. After deducting the value of the straw, etc., the net cost is $12.43. The average yield of wheat per acre in this county is placed at nearly 15 bushels, making the cost about 83 cents per bushel. Verily, how can a farmer raise a mortgage on his farm by raising wheat on it? According to the crop report, the net cost of producing and marketing oats in this county is 31 cents per bushel. They sell for 30 to 35 cents. The number of bushels of wheat reported marketed in Washtenaw county since Aug. 1, 1887, is 162,122.

Content vs. Discontent.

One, satisfied with what must be her lot— 'Twas not a corner lot,—serenely meant Never to wander from her humble cot. Made beautiful by wise and sweet content. And one, dissatisfied with all he had, Roved from his place into the world's mad whirl. What did he find? Well, it was not so bad.— The fellow found that cottage and that girl. A. W. H., in The Century.

Next to his children, the most important members of an Eskimo's household are his dogs, they being essential to his hunting in summer, and his traveling in winter. They are very wild, frolic animals, only half domesticated, and possessing marvelous digestive powers. A pup that Mr. Ashe was rearing, being let to amuse himself in the house one day, did so, very effectually, by devouring stockings, gloves, the greater part of a top boot, and many smaller articles of a similar nature, none of which, apparently, disagreed with him.—F. Macdonald Oxley, in The American Magazine for February.

Deafness Can't be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way of curing Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucus lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucus surface? We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that we can not cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. S-nd for circular, free.

Can a Man Swallow a Cannon-ball? Well, "that depends." He can if his throat is large enough and the cannon-ball not too large. The question really seems worthy of some consideration in view of the size of some of the pills that are prescribed for suffering humanity. Why not throw them to "the dogs" and take Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets? Small, sugar-coated, purely vegetable, perfectly harmless, in glass and always fresh.

To place salt on the free list; to abolish the tax on oleomargarine; for the issue of fractional silver certificates; providing for bounty on wheat, corn and flour exported from the United States; to prevent combinations for the purpose of regulating the prices of produce, stock, bonds or labor; to prevent the creation of trusts; fixing the salaries of Supreme Court Justices and Cabinet officers at $15,000 a year; to regulate the manufacture and sale of adulterated lard; instructing the Committee on Ways and Means to report a bill repealing the internal revenue laws and revising the tariff so as to abolish specific duties; for the further coinage of silver and for the redemption of National bank notes; prohibiting aliens from becoming officers of corporations or accepting employment on steam or street railroads, on any Government or State contract work, or on any vessel wholly engaged in navigating United States waters, and to prevent aliens from pre-empting or entering homesteads.

Mr. Cutcheon (Mich.) offered a resolution declaring that in any proposed revision of the tariff the principle of protection to American industry and maintenance of wages of American workmen at the American standard ought to be firmly adhered to; authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to issue fractional silver certificates in denominations of ten, fifteen, twenty-five and fifty cents.

The great sources of the extensive curative range of Dr. Jones' Red Clover Tonic are its great blood purifying qualities and its gentle aperitive action, thereby removing all restraint from the secretive organs, curing promptly and thoroughly dyspepsia, costiveness, bad breath, piles, pimples, low spirits, sick and nervous headache, ague, malaria, and all stomach, liver and kidney troubles.

Two hundred thousand infants under two years old are believed to be famel out in France.

THE effect of using Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup is unlike all medicines containing opiates or poisons, it being entirely free from them. It cures by purifying the blood.

Catarrh is disgusting. Pneumonia is dangerous. Consumption is death itself. The breathing apparatus must be kept healthy and clear of all obstructions and offensive matter. Otherwise there is trouble ahead.

Kansas City wants a vigilance committee and a few lamp-post executions.

The American press generally appears to have lost conceit of Mr. Twain. One reason for this change of feeling may be that Twain has grown rich. It is an unardonable error for a humorist to be rich. He ought to live in a garret, like James Triplet, be the happy professor of one thread bare coat, and shoes that let the water in. SALOON-KEEPERS WARNED.

No one has ever charged the Lansing Republican with strong leaning towards prohibition. It opposed the constitutional amendment. The following, however, occurs in its issue of Dec. 31:

"The saloon-keepers of Ingham county, and particularly of Lansing, will have themselves to blame if Ingham county goes overwhelmingly for prohibition, as it probably will, in the coming election under the county option law. They have had warning upon warning, which they have refused to heed. They had and have a good regulating law, which they have refused to obey, but have continually violated. They have disgusted good citizens by their lawlessness. Every man of them knows the provisions of the law relative to closing, relative to paying the tax promptly, relative to selling to minors and known drunkards, etc., but they have not obeyed the law like good citizens. They can rest assured that the State Republican, backed by hundreds of good citizens, will, if prohibition carries the county, insist upon and make every possible effort to have it sternly and remorselessly executed."

This extract from the Republican illustrates what we have said before that the people are becoming weary of the saloons and desire to see them driven to the cellars. It is not alone prohibitionists and church people who want this, but even many drinkers will vote to shut up the saloon.

In all kindness of spirit, we say to the saloon-keeper that the law will, sooner or later, utterly frown upon his business.

THE NEW EXPERIMENT STATION.

A bill granting Federal aid to the states, for purposes of agricultural experiments, passed congress last session and received the president's signature. The stations were not established, and very little has been heard of the matter since. The reason is that when the call came for money, one of the comptrollers in the treasury department ruled that the law nowhere directed him or gave him any authority to pay out money. There was a technical flaw in the wording of the bill. Nothing could be done about it until this session of congress.

Early this session an amended bill passed the house, and last week it passed the senate, so we suppose there will be no further hitch. After a year's delay the experiment stations will become a fact.

The new law gives to each state $15,000 annually for the establishment and maintenance of an experiment station. This is to be associated with the state Agricultural college, but no part of the appropriation can be used to defray college expenses. It must be used exclusively for the furtherance of scientific investigation as related to agriculture.

How will this money be expended? Undoubtedly an effort will be made by struggling institutions in some of the states to use a part of it, at least, in ways clearly violating the spirit, if not the letter, of the law; but the proviso put into the bill by Senator Edmunds, making it necessary to bring it up each session like an ordinary appropriation bill, will exert a wholesome restraining influence. The live stations—those desiring to make genuine contributions to the science of agriculture—will also act as checks upon the others, because all must stand or fall together. Assuming then that the money will be expended as the law directs, we may inquire how are we to get the most out of it.

The danger of frittering away the comparatively small appropriation by undertaking to establish and equip several distinct stations, is very considerable in some states, but may be passed over as not likely to affect Michigan. The experimental studies should touch live problems, and should be for the most part along lines of inquiry too expensive for private enterprise. There are several distinct kinds of work which ought to be taken up. In many states, experiments in chemistry and stock-breeding will, undoubtedly, absorb a large part of the appropriation, by reason both of their prestige and the personal feeling of the directors in charge of stations already at work under state auspices. Boards of directors, and the public generally, being more familiar with these two lines of inquiry, will think first of them as worthy of special consideration. We may therefore neglect these subjects and consider some newer lines of investigation, not less important but more likely to be overlooked. We allude to the study of diseases of domestic animals and of cultivated plants.

Some excellent work on diseases of animals has already been done in this country under government direction, and but very little we believe has been accomplished by private enterprise. Indeed, so broad is the field, and so rigid are the demands on the investigator, not only in the way of time and money, but also in the way of preliminary training, that it would seem the work could not be carried on to any extent without some such aid as these stations will provide. We need especially full knowledge of the communicable diseases of animals—to know not only what germs cause them, but to know under exactly what conditions these germs live outside the animal, so that we may protect our flocks, herds, and studs from infection, or stamp out a disease already started with a minimum loss of time and money. It is not too much to hope that by and by our veterinarians will have glanders, blind staggers, contagious pleuro-pneumonia, foot and mouth disease, swine plague, and other fatal animal diseases under reasonable control.

What is true of diseases of animals is true also of diseases of plants. The loss by rot in peaches, plums, grapes, and potatoes; by mildews on the vine; by smut on the grains; by blight on celery, strawberries, etc., aggregates every year more than the whole appropriation many times over. These also can probably in a measure be prevented, when we have learned the full life history of the fungi which cause them. If this cannot be done altogether by undiscovered fungicides, then by other means, only one of which need here be named, and that is the production of varieties less subject to attack. This is one important and very promising field for experiment, almost wholly untrod, what little knowledge we have being fragmentary and empirical. As in the case of animal diseases, the perplexities are such that, private munificence excluded, little progress can be made except by state or national aid.

Observation alone will not answer here, but crucial experiment in field and laboratory, even at the expense of much time and money, must go hand in hand with it, if satisfactory results are to be obtained. That progress has been very slow in the past is partly due to this very fact that experimentation has not gone along with observation, owing to a lack of necessary facilities. Here then is a good place for Michigan to take hold and stick a stake, if she would be in the van.

THE DECISION AND SYMPATHY.

We did not doubt what Judge Kinne's decision would be. An election under the local option law might have been prevented by some sort of unexpected obstruction, but that a judge of Mr. Kinne's well-known ability and honesty would grant an injunction upon such a plea was incredible. It is no light matter to defeat the intention of the legislature. The presumption is always that the laws are constitutional, and no reputable judge will try to annul them unless their unconstitutionality is clear.

In this case, even if the local option act were clearly unconstitutional, it is preposterous to ask that the election be set aside by the court. The unconstitutionality of the act was not properly before the court. If the law is really unconstitutional, it would be well not to hold an election; but it will not do for a judge to prevent an election before the question is determined by the highest authority. It would be a dangerous precedent, which Judge Kinne ably pointed out.

It is not certain what the supreme court would do with the local option law should it come before them, but that local option, if put in proper legislative form, will bear the test, there can be no doubt. Although our present local option law was a little carelessly drawn, the main purpose is undoubtedly sound, and the supreme court is not likely to throw it out on account of some slight technicality. The citizens of Washtenaw should proceed with the election accordingly.

The complainant, Mr. Hardinghaus, had no case whatever. The highest judicial authority has decided that the plea of destruction of property is not good. Any one can see the wisdom of that, however great may be their sympathy with a man in Mr. Hardinghaus's situation. THE REGISTER feels such sympathy. He is evidently sincere, and his education has been such as to preclude his believing that his business is harmful. But such sympathy ought not to prevent the upward tendency of man. If the personal fortunes of a few men were to be permitted to obstruct the will of the people, there is not a movement for fiscal or moral reform that would not be stopped. Every change in the tariff is liable to affect some one's business, and may even wipe businesses out; yet it is preposterous to suppose that congress can be enjoined from changing the tariff laws as it deems best. Every one who enters business does so presuming with the full understanding that it is liable to be affected by legislation. It is one of the many chances he takes. In this case, the people are coming to believe that the liquor business must be stopped, and those engaged in it have known of the tendency for a long time. Those who have the greatest discernment see clearly that all Michigan will, in a few years, be covered by a prohibitory law against the liquor business. There has been plenty of warning for those engaged in it to get themselves in a safe financial condition.

THE FORUM IS becoming almost indispensable to one who studies the political and economical questions of the day. Its February number contains an article by Senator Cullom on "The Government and the Telegraph;" one by Judge William D. Kelley on "How Protection Protects;" "The Torrid Zone of our Politics," by Murat Halstead; "Bribery and its near Relative," by Rev. Dr. C. A. Bartol; and "Impediments to our Domestic Commerce," by Darius Lyman.

COURTY CLEEK HOWLETT'S call for the local option election fixes Feb. 27 as the date, as announced in THE REGISTER last week. The following is an interesting part of it:

All electors voting at said election that the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors for use as a beverage shall be prohibited, shall have printed or written, or partly printed and partly written on their ballots, the words, "Against the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors"; and all electors voting at said election that such manufacture and sale shall not be prohibited shall have printed or written, or partly printed and partly written on their ballots, the words, "For the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors."

The following officers were installed for the present term by the Del. Lodge of good templars last evening: O. T. D. Jos Davis; V. T. Laura Davis; Sec'y, M. Plough; F. S. Walter Tubbs; Treas., Mrs. Riley; Marshl., Fred. Weinberg; Chap., H. Dwight; S. W. J. T. Rebecca Tubbs. A delegation of 17 members of Washtenaw lodge of this city was present and added interest to the occasion.

Beware of Scrofula

Scrofula is probably more general than any other disease. It is insidious in character, and manifests itself in running sores, pustular eruptions, boils, swellings, enlarged joints, abscesses, sore eyes, etc. Hood's Sarsaparilla expels all trace of scrofula from the blood, leaving it pure, enriched, and healthy.

"I was severely afflicted with scrofula, and over a year had two running sores on my neck. Took five bottles Hood's Sarsaparilla, and am cured." C. E. LOVEJOT, Lowell, Mass.

C. A. Arnold, Arnold, Me., had scrofulous sores for seven years, spring and fall. Hood's Sarsaparilla cured him.

Salt Rheum

Is one of the most disagreeable diseases caused by impure blood. It is readily cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier.

"William Spies, Elyria, O., suffered greatly from erysipelas and salt rheum, caused by handling tobacco. At times his hand would crack open and bleed. He tried various preparations without aid; finally took Hood's Sarsaparilla, and now says: 'I am entirely well.' My son had salt rheum on his hands and on the calves of his legs. He took Hood's Sarsaparilla and is entirely cured." J. B. Stanton, Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

THREATENED WITH DISASTER.

Great Dangers Said to Be Lurking in Gas from Petroleum.

BLITFAIX, N. Y., Feb. 1.—Recent explosions of and havoc wrought by naphtha-gas in sewers in Rochester and Binghamton have caused an inquiry to be made regarding the danger in this city from similar causes. There is not much to fear from naphtha, but Buffalo is menaced by a danger almost as great in the petroleum pipe lines. Should a break occur at any point a vast quantity of crude oil would be discharged into the sewer system of the city in a very short time, and the result might be a series of disasters which would cause the Rochester calamity to sink into insignificance. Crude oil, exposed to the air, will become reduced one-fourth in volume by the escape of the light and volatile gases. If 20,000 barrels of crude oil should flow into a sewer at East Buffalo from a broken pipe, and thence make its way into the entire sewer system of the business heart of the city, pouring its gases into cellars and apartments of houses through sinks, wash-bowls, and defective sewer connections, it would finally come in contact with the gas-jets, and something terrible would be sure to ensue.

BEGINNING TO WEAKEN.

Reading's Striking Miners Are Faltering, and Some Return to Work.

READING, Pa., Jan. 27.—While there are no signs of a general disintegration among the Schuylkill miners yet, there are visible evidences that they are not as solid as they were a week ago. They have already virtually broken away from the railroads and there are now several small individual collieries in operation. It is estimated that the four weeks of the strike have cost the miners and the operators $4,000,000.

READING, Pa., Feb. 1.—Since the beginning of the strike nineteen of the forty-three furnaces in this district have gone out of blast, and others will close down this week.

A Fire in New York.

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—Yesterday morning fire broke out in the store of Henry Rogers & Co., No. 548 Broadway, and extended on either side until eight buildings had been destroyed. Thirty firms were burned out, and the stocks of other merchants were damaged by water. Several firemen were hurt by falling walls, one of the victims dying of his injuries. The loss is figured at $1,400,000, while the insurance reaches much higher figures.

Miners in Luck.

CHICAGO, Jan. 28.—On Wednesday night at 5:30 o'clock a party of seven prospecting coal miners struck oil on E. S. Harris' farm, eighteen miles southwest of Carini, Ill. A short time after the withdrawal of the drill crude petroleum was gushing to the surface at the rate of over fifty barrels an hour and has shown a steady increase ever since, the last report stating that the flow was at the rate of eighty barrels per hour, or about 500 barrels per day.

Great Storm in the New England and Middle States.

Snow 14 Mt Mountain High—Railway Traffic Effectually Stopped—Fierce Gales on the Coast—Stocks Froze to Death.

A GREAT STORM. NEW YORK, J. I. 27.—Report from New England, Pennsylvania and portions of this State and Canada state that a severe storm is raging. The snow piled up on mountainous drift on country roads is impossible to pass, and accommodations are snow-bound, in many cases being buried as high as their smoke-stacks in the snow. Along the coast a fierce gale is raging, and many vessels are reported in great peril. At Newport, R. I., alone thirty vessels are reported in the ice, while at other points many craft are living signals of distress, but the life-saving crews find it impossible to render assistance. Long Maat, iking is tightly packed with ice, and in-coming steamers are much behind time.

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—The wind has been whistling around the Government station at Sandy Hook for the past three days at from forty to sixty miles an hour. The Penjland and the Wisconsin were the only liner* that made the port Friday. Their captains tell stories of waves mountain high and howling gales. A large number of sailing vessels were bound in when the storm set in, but they were forced to turn about and scud out to sea before the gale. No serious accidents have so far been reported, and the off-shore breeze is not expected to do much damage.

The delay in the arrival and departure of mails, owing to the snow blockade, continues, and was worse Friday night than during the preceding twenty-four hours. The trains have not been so irregular for several years. One thousand six hundred East-bound loaded freight cars are stalled at East Syracuse, and 800 at West Albany. AUBURN, N. Y., Jan. 29.—The hotels here and at Ganajohar e are crowded with snow-bound guests, and there is but little prospect of their being able to continue their Journeys for some days. Eleven passenger trains are stuck in Irlite within fifty miles of this city. A snow glow with the engines has been sent into the New York Central road, but its labors are useless, as the wind drifts the snow back on the track as soon as it passes. The snow in the cuts near Cato is over thirty feet deep.

OSWEGO, N. Y., Jan. 21.—All the trains on the Home, Watertown A O'neansburg road have been abandoned. The Delaware, Lackawanna & Western road is badly blocked, and the trains that are running are making very poor time. The blockade is the worst in years, and every effort is being made to raise it, but with little effect, as the high winds till the cuts up as soon as cleared.

BOSTON, Jan. 27.—Reports from Northern New England indicate an uninterrupted continuance of the very cold weather, with a limited movement of trains. The snow is badly drifted and it will take some time to clear the tracks so that travel may be resumed.

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—Advices from the upper part of the State show that traffic is still held fast in the grip of Jack Frost. Hundreds of freight-cars are stranded at East Syracuse, and live stock is being unloaded to save it from starvation and freezing. Fourteen trains are stalled west of Skaneateles. At Bidgebury the funeral of Margaret Decker, which was set for Thursday, is still postponed for want of a coffin. The undertaker lives six miles away and can not get there. On the Phil* Isl* and* ranca of the Erie three powerful engines are still stalled, and farmers are carrying fuel and water for the purpose of maintaining the fires and a BOSTON, Jan. 30.—Diaptoches from numerous points in New England do not indicate any substantial improvement in the state of affairs resulting from the blockade. The weather remains cold, high winds continue to prevail, and the snow is still drifting to such an extent that the efforts of the large gang of shovelers and the most powerful snow-plows, driven by many locomotives, are practically useless.

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—The fury of the storm which began Thursday and which swept the railroads of Northern and Eastern New York with snow was not spent until Saturday afternoon, and the railroads up to that time completely at their mercy, began a vigorous fight against the drifts, which ended in a complete victory. Unless more snow falls to-day the blockade of New York by snow may be said to have ended.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Jan. 31.—Sunday an idea of the fury of the three-days' blizzard was obtained. On the New York Central road, between Buffalo and Syracuse, there were several live-stock trains when the storm came on. An effort was made to run them to points where the track could be sheltered, but in spite of all efforts nearly fifteen car-loads of cattle and hogs, destined for Boston and New York, were frozen to death near Palmyra, and several car-loads at other points.

An Kinnrnnii Cigar Factory. KIT WEST, Fla., Jan. 31.—Eduardo H. Gato, the "king of Havana cigar manufacturers,* will shortly build in this city the largest cigar manufactory in the United States. PLEURO-PNEUMONIA.

Views of Commissioner Cullum Regarding Its Suppression. WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—Commissioner Colraan has written a letter to Senator Palmer, chairman of the Senate Agricultural Committee, regarding the suppression of pleuro-pneumonia. The Commissioner expresses the belief that the plan of State cooperation is preferable to the one which relies solely upon National authority, and says that the work of exterminating pleuro-pneumonia, which is now being done by the bureau of animal industry, is going on smoothly, harmoniously and effectively by means of State co-operation. He thinks that this work should be continued upon the same lines where it is now moving, and that it will be unfortunate and ill-advised if any new and untried plan be adopted.

Teacher and Pupil Died Together. MANDAN, D. T., Jan. 30.—The remains of schoolteacher George Patrick have been sent to Peosta, near Dubuque, Ia., where his mother and sister live. Patrick and five pupils were caught in a school-house on the prairie when the last blizzard raged. It was death leave the frail building, and for three days and nights they suffered from cold and hunger. The brave man broke up the desks and floors for fuel, and with a rescuing party reached the school-house they found that teacher and pupils had died together.

Sixty-Two and a Half Million Souls. NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—The Tribune publisher a carefully-prepared estimate of the probable population of the United State at the present time, and puts it at 62,523,597 persons. This figure is arrived at by allowing the ratio of deaths and birth* which past experience has revealed, and adding the excess of births and the influx by immigration during each year to the population given by the census of 1880, which was 50,155,783.

Tariff-Keforn Meeting. PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 28.—A large meeting of friends of tariff reform was held in this city last evening. "MAY GOD BLESS YOU!"
A Boston Paper-Hanger's Trouble and How He Got Out of it—Plain Words from the Sunny South.

When we are in trouble we cry for help. When we are relieved we often forget to be thankful. But not always. Mr. W. W. Griffin, of Trout Creek, St. Clair Co., Ala., writes: "I had a bad attack of chills and fever. My system was full of malaria. For two years I was scarcely able to work at all. Some times my heart would palpitate for two hours at a time. My legs would get cold to the knees, and I fully expected to die. In September, 1881, I bought a bottle of Shaker Extract of Roots, or Seigel's Curative Syrup, of your agent, Mr. R. M. King, and before I had taken the first bottle I felt better, and in a short time was able to go to work. May God bless you for the good you have done."

Mr. Wm. J. McCann, 99 Randall-st., Boston, writes: "Six months ago I began to throw up my food after eating. I thought I was going into consumption. I soon began to have pain in the chest, stomach and sides. I got little sleep and woke all tired out. Once I lost five pounds in four days. I began using Shaker Extract of Roots, or Seigel's Syrup, and when I had finished the sixth bottle I could eat three square meals a day, and go to sleep the minute I struck the bed. I am a paper hanger by trade, and have worked every day since I took the second bottle, and gained eighteen pounds. I ought to be thankful and I am."

This remedy opens all the natural passages of the body, expels the poison from the blood and enables nature to rebuild what disease has destroyed.

Mr. Michael Long, Jr., with the Strohbridge Lithographic Co., Cincinnati, Ohio, writes: "I suffered for two years with a terrible itching and painful sores on my neck, arms, hands and fingers. No physician could help me. S. S. S. relieved me perfectly and I feel like a new man."

Mrs. Amanda Ingie, of Gastonia, N. C., writes: "My baby, when four months old, developed scrofula. He had two severe risings and sores on the neck. I sent for our family physician, who pronounced it scrofula, and prescribed S. S. S. for it. I gave the baby S. S. S., and it soon got the disease under control. The sores are healed, and the baby in well and healthy. I know S. S. S. saved its life, and I told our doctor so. He is a regular physician, and prescribed S. S. S. for the baby as soon as he saw it had scrofula."

THE LOVED AND THE LOST.

The loved and the lost! Why do we call them lost?

Because we miss them from our onward road? God's unseen angel o'er our pathway crost. Looked on us all, and loving them the most. Straightway recalled them from life's weary load

And this we call a "loss"; oh, selfish sorrow Of selfish hearts! Oh! we of little faith! Let us look round, some argument to borrow Why we in patience should await the morrow That surely must succeed this night of death.

Ay, look upon this dreary, desert path. The thorns and thistles wheresoe'er we turn; 'What trials and what tears, what wrongs and what

What struggles and what strife the journey hath! They have escaped from these, and lo! we mourn.

Ask the poor sailor when the wreck is done, Who with his treasure strove the shore to reach. While with the raging waves he battled on, Was it not joy where every joy seemed gone, To see his loved ones landed on the beach?

A poor wayfarer, leading by the hand A little child, had hailed by the well To wash from off her feet the clinging sand And tell the tired boy of that bright land Where, this long journey past, they longed to dwell!

When lo! the King who many mansions had Drew near and looked upon the suffering twain. Then pitying spake: "Give me the little lad; In strength renewed, and glorious beauty clad, I'll bring him with me when I come again."

Did she make answer selfishly and wrong—"Nay, but the woes I feel too must share!" Or, rather bursting into joyful song, Go on her way rejoicing and made strong To struggle on, since he was freed from care?

We will do likewise; death has made no breach In love and sympathy, in hope and trust; If outward sign or sound our ears ne'er reach, There is an inward spiritual speech That greets us still, though mortal tongues be dumb.

It bids us do the work that they laid down— Take up the song where they broke off the strain; So journeying till we reach the Heavenly town, Where are laid up our treasures and our crown, And our lost loved ones will be found again.

Adventures of Tad;

—OR THE—

HAPS AND MISHAPS OF A LOST SACHEL

A Story for Young and Old.

Tad knew nothing about playing a trout, and if he had it would have made no difference, owing to his primitive fishing tackle. He pulled vigorously; so did the trout, and "snap!" went the end of the alder pole, leaving Tad in a mad frenzy of excitement, with three-fourths of the rod in his hands, dancing madly on the rocks.

Joe was equal to the situation. Dropping his own pole, he made a dive for the broken fragment, which was floating in sight. Gathering the slack line carefully in his hands, a vigorous tug landed high and dry the largest trout ever caught in Mill brook.

"There!" Joe exclaimed, as Tad regarded his prize in an amazement too deep for words, "you've caught the one real trout you've wanted to—now, I guess we'd better be getting home, without doing any more fishing."

"All right," returned Tad, mournfully, "but you caught him, after all, Joe." But Joe stoutly asserted that Tad hooked him first, while he—Joe—only helped to bring the big fish safe to land. And, in the discussion of the exciting episode, the walk home was accomplished in a surprisingly short time.

Tad's big trout was baked for supper, and it was generally agreed by the four who partook thereof that the flavor was particularly fine. Tad himself secretly thought he had never eaten anything so delicious in his whole life. But it is not unlikely that the knowledge that he himself had furnished this important adjunct to the evening meal gave it an additional relish for Tad.

By this time Tad had begun to feel very much at ease with these quiet, home-like people. As they gathered about the open lire-place, with its smoldering back-log, after the teachings were cleared away, and the big kerosene-lamp was lighted, he opened his heart to their kindly questioning and spoke freely of his past life. There was really little or nothing to keep back, for, as I have said, thanks to the memory of his mother's teachings and a natural uprightness of character, Tad had escaped the evil ways which a homeless, friendless boy is so apt to fall into, and though he had faults in abundance, he was, on the whole, a more upright young fellow than many whose surroundings and advantages had been far more favorable than Tad's.

"So you're to begin ship's duties to Miss Smith o' Monday—eh, Tad?" remarked the Captain, thoughtfully, to break a little silence which had fallen upon the group.

"Yes, sir," was the reply, "and I do hope she'll like me."

"She'll be hard to suit if she don't," returned Mrs. Flagg, clicking her needles emphatically together as they flashed in and out of the meshes of a blue yarn sock that she was knitting for the Captain. For the good lady, whose heart was large enough to take in at least half a dozen motherless boys and girls, had begun to regard Tad with considerable favor.

"I know she'll like you," said Tolly, contently, as she looked up from the fascinating pages of "Little Women," which she was reading for the first time, while Bounce slumbered peacefully in her lap.

"You just go on and do your duty unto Miss Smith accordin' as you'd have it done to you, Tad," remarked the Captain, oracularly, "and you needn't have no fears. Miss Smith," continued Captain Flagg, with upraised finger to command attention, "is a female that's had a tempestuous v'yage in life, as it were, a-losing of every relation she had, which has gone to make her a bit cranky; but she's good-hearted and God-fearin', and once you get into her good books, you're always there."

"They say she's got a han'sum property that her folks left her—somewheres nigh ten thousand dollars," Mrs. Flagg observed, in a voice indicative of considerable respect for the possessor of such wealth. For in Bixport the person with an unencumbered estate and a thousand dollars was "well-to-do"; he who had five thousand was well off; while the owner of ten thousand dollars was regarded in the light of a millionaire.

CHAPTER X.

On the following morning, when Tad, having opened his eyes to the glad sunlight which streamed in at the east window of his little room, began to pull his drowsy ideas together, he remembered that it was Sunday.

"They'll want me to go to church, and I don't look decent," thought Tad, disconsolately, with a glance in the direction of the chair where he had placed his threadbare clothing the night before.

But what was this? A partly worn suit of serviceable tweed cloth—the very counterpart of that in which Joe Whitney was arrayed when he sprang aboard the "Mary J.," hung over the chair-back. And that was not all. In the chair itself lay all the other essentials of a boy's toilet, neatly folded, even to a coarse white linen collar, a whisp of black neck-ribbon, a pair of but little used lace-up boots, and a "second-best" straw hat.

Scarcely able to believe the evidence of his astonished eyes, Tad slipped out of bed and proceeded to investigate. On the top of the pile was a bit of paper, whereon, in an irregular, boyish scrawl, were written the words: "To Pay for makin' Miss Smith think you was deaf and playin' i was a bare.—J. Whitney."

After Tad had gone to bed on the previous evening, Mrs. Flagg slipped over to Deacon Whitney's, and ably seconded by the special pleadings of Joe, succeeded in enlisting the full sympathies of the family in behalf of shabbily-dressed Tad. Joe's wardrobe was overhauled, and a selection made, resulting in the surprise to Tad which I have mentioned.

"Well, he's what I call a nice-looking boy," was Mrs. Flagg's inward comment, as Tad, with hair neatly

"WELL, HE IS WHAT I CALL A NICE-LOOKING BOY." combed and face and hands scrubbed till they fairly shone, came shyly downstairs dressed in his new suit.

Polly smiled upon him approvingly; the Captain remarked that he didn't know about taking such a dandified-looking chap to church along of such plain-dressed folks as the Flagg family; and Mrs. Flagg gave him a motherly kiss.

"That's so much like Joe," laughed Polly, as the display of the paper which Tad had found with his little gift necessitated an explanation of Joe's previous performances.

"Always remember, Tad," counseled the Captain, with a grave shake of the head, as they sat down to the table together, "what Solomon says about a wise son makin' a glad father—and he that is not warned thereby is not wise." conclude Captain Flagg, who was sometimes a little hazy in the correctness of his quotations.

After breakfast, the Captain read a chapter from the New Testament aloud, making comments upon the text, for the edification of Tad and Polly, who listened with respectful attention. And then, after awhile, at the summons of the rather unmusical church-bell, the whole family decorously made their way to the meeting-house, close by.

The Bixporters were, generally speaking, a church-going people; and, on the pleasant April morning of which I speak, the church was well filled.

To Tad's secret joy, Deacon Whitney's pew was next Captain Flagg's, and soon he had the extreme satisfaction of seeing Joe tiling in ahead of his sister, followed by Mrs. Whitney and the deacon. Joe sat at the extreme end, and thus the two boys were divided only by the slight partition between the pews.

Joe greeted Tad with a wink, and clasping his hands together, rolled his eyes upward, as through in rapturous astonishment at Tad's festive appearance.

"Poh, that's all right," returned Joe, shrugging his shoulders carelessly; and a whispered conversation ensued, which was only checked by the entrance of the minister; whereat Joe, duly admonished by a poke of his sister's fan, and a glance of mild rebuke from the deacon, subsided into a temporary attention, with his hands being plucked deeply into his pockets and his eyes fixed steadfastly upon good Mr. Allen. But, I am sorry to say, Joe's thoughts were by no means in keeping with the place. He was cherishing, and even planning, a dire revenge on unconscious Samantha Nason—who sat directly in front of him, in Miss Smith's pew—for what he called her "tattling" of the previous day.

The service proceeded in the good old-fashioned way peculiar to country churches. All denominations worshipped under the same roof, and Mr. Allen's words were but a plain and simple talk about the lesson taught by One who once walked upon earth, and spake as never man spake. There was very much in it that Tad perfectly understood, and, as he listened, a dim desire to fashion his young life after the teachings of the great Master began to take form in his mind. True, it was only embodied in the simple thought, "I'll try to be a better boy," yet from such beginnings oftentimes comes the real success of a true Christian life. And when the sermon closed Tad felt that he should never be tired of listening to a minister who made things as plain as did Mr. Allen.

Now, it was Samantha Nason's invariable habit to sit through the singing, while the others rose. "I work hard all the week, and I'm going to make Sunday my day of rest," said Samantha once, a little defiantly, "an' I guess I can worship the Lord as well settin' down as standin' up."

As the closing hymn was being sung, Tad noticed that Joe, who all through the service had kept his right hand persistently in his pocket, slowly withdrew it, though without removing his eyes from the pages of the hymn-book, and, seemingly holding something in his grasp, slipped his closed hand gently along on the ledge of the pew before him, till it was in close proximity to the back of Miss Nason's neck. Then he stole a sly glance in the direction of his father and mother, who were too intent upon following the words of the hymn (in which their daughter Nellie's voice uprose as clear and sweet as the notes of a woodland bird) to notice the movements of their son. Slowly Joe's fingers unclosed, and after a moment his hand stole back to a place beside its fellow.

"Now what is he up to!" thought Tad, warned by the shadowy grin on Joe's features. And, following the direction of his friend's eyes, Tad's unspoken question was answered. Clumsily clambering over the back of the prim ruffle about Miss Nason's neck was a brown wood-beetle, as big as the end of Tad's little finger. But before he could decide what to do Miss Nason bounced to her feet with a stifled exclamation, and clutched frantically at her back hair. Unfortunately she caught hold of the innocent beetle itself, and, giving vent to a shrill scream that made the rafters of the house ring, she threw it violently from her, to the great consternation of every one in the house, many of whom imagined Miss Nason had discovered a mouse in the pew.

Mr. Allen pronounced the benediction and dismissed his congregation. And naughty Joe Whitney, holding his cap before his face, choked and gasped, in the agonies of suppressed laughter, all the way to the door.

CHAPTER XI.

The promise of April had given place to the fulfillments of June, tilling the air with summer sunshine and beauty. Tad, under the supervision of Miss Smith, whose angular features were shaded by an immense garden-hat, was weeding the pansy-bed in the front yard. Miss Smith, who was a great flower-lover, made somewhat of a specialty of cultivating sweet-peas and pansies, which she gave away in their season with a liberal hand.

You would hardly have recognized Tad in the brown-faced boy, in blue overalls, bending lovingly over the quaint, upturned (lower-faces that peered into his own. He had taken to his new vocation with surprising readiness, and Miss Smith secretly congratulated herself on having at last found a boy after her own heart, though she seldom allowed her satisfaction to show itself in the form of words.

"Here comes that Forrest chap again," muttered Miss Smith, discontentedly, as she glanced toward an elaborately-dressed young man who was sauntering along the elm-shaded street; "I wish he'd kept away about his own business, and not come idling round, taking your attention off'n your work."

For Mr. Paul Forrest was one of John Doty's city boarders, who had scraped an acquaintance with Tad very soon after coming to Bixport. He seemed to take a singular interest in Tad, which, as he explained to Miss Smith, arose from the boy's strong resemblance to his youngest and only brother, who had died a year previous—"the last one, excepting myself, of a family of seven," he said, with a sad smile. For Mr. Forrest did a great deal of smiling, first and last; and, curious enough, Tad, in some vague way, was reminded by it of the genial Mr. Jones, whom he had met in Boston, before coming to Bixport. Of course, this was simply an absurd fancy on his part. The fraudulent Jones was a smooth-faced young man, with gold-tipped teeth—while Mr. Paul Forrest sported a very glossy black mustache.

that had a purplish tinge in certain lights, and the whitest and most even teeth that were ever seen outside a dentist's establishment; neither was the little blueish scar visible upon MF. Forest's white forehead, that Tad had noticed upon the intellectual brow of Jones. Yet, all the same, he often unconsciously connected the two in his mind, even while he laughed at his own folly in so doing.

"My boss, how good-morning—Tad, my boy, how are you?" exclaimed Mr. Forrest, with his effusive smile, as he lounged idly up the garden-path, and, with a coolness peculiar to himself, sat down on the edge of the garden piazza.

Miss Smith stiffly acknowledged the greeting, and Tad, glancing up shyly, said he was pretty well. He was a little flattered by Mr. Forrest's evident interest in himself—though he was not quite sure that he liked it, after all. He had nothing in common with the city-bred gentleman, and was rather puzzled to know what Mr. Forrest could have in common with himself.

"Come into the house after you get through weeding, Tad; I want you," said Miss Smith, stalking past the unabashed Mr. Forrest, who sat quite at his ease, with the ivory head of his cane between his lips.

"Yes'm," was the meek reply, and Tad silently continued his work, wishing that Mr. Forrest would go, for he was very well aware that Miss Smith did not at all approve of the gentleman's frequent visitations.

In a small village like Bixport, where every body's business is public property, the story of Tad and his traveling-sachel was generally known, as was also the fact that his attention had ever been paid to Captain Flagg's advertisement. So it was not strange that Mr. Forrest should be in possession of the same knowledge. He had referred to the matter casually in conversation with Tad, declaring that it was a mighty interesting incident in real life—come, now!

"So you never opened the little alligator-skin sachel, to see what was in it—eh, Tad?" suddenly asked Mr. Forrest, after a short pause.

"Why, no, sir! I haven't a key—and, if I had, I don't think it would be just the thing, either," replied Tad, a little surprised at the unexpected question.

"Oh, I don't know," remarked Mr. Forrest, coolly; "there might be something in it that would give you a clew to the real owner."

"That's true," murmured Tad, who had never thought of this before.

"I think it's your duty to try and open it," continued Mr. Forrest, seeing the impression he had made.

"But I couldn't without breaking the lock, and I should not like to do that," Tad answered, with a perplexed look.

"I suppose you keep it in your possession?" inquired Mr. Forrest, carelessly; and Tad nodded. "Then, why not bring the bag over to my room this evening—I dare say some of my keys will unlock it," suggested the gentleman, blandly.

"I'll think about it, sir," replied Tad, cautiously, for he was not quite sure that it would be just the right thing to do; and, moreover, he wanted to ask the advice of Miss Smith, in whose good judgment Tad had the firmest confidence, before taking any such decisive step.

RHEUMATISM.

The Case Stated.—January 17th, 1883. Messrs. George C. Osgood & Co., druggists, Lowell, Mass., wrote to the undersigned as follows: "Mr. Lewis Dennis, No. 196 Moody street, desires to recommend St. Jacobs Oil to any afflicted with rheumatism, as he has obtained benefits by using it, but he desires especially to say that"

"ORIN ROBINSON, of Granville, Mass., a boy of 12 year, came to his house in the summer of 1881, walking on crutches, his left leg being bent at the knee for over two months, and could not be bent back. He could not walk upon it. Mr. Dennis had some St. Jacobs Oil in the house, and gave it to him to rub on his knee. In six days he had no use for his crutches, and went home well without them, as he has been well since. St. Jacobs Oil cured him."

Corroborative and Conclusive Testimony.—Lowell, Mass., July 5, 1887: "Gentlemen: Mr. Lewd Dennis has just called upon me, and informs me that the boy Orin Robinson, who was a poor cripple on crutches, and was cured by St. Jacobs Oil in 1831; the cure has remained permanent. The young man has been and is now at work every day at manual labor; a case certainly which proves the efficacy of St. Jacobs Oil. Mr. Dennis tells me also that he had rheumatism in his knee; tried many remedies, but of no use; and it cured the rheumatism permanently, as it has not troubled him for years.—DR. GIBCO. C. OSGOOD M. D.

Summing Up.—By this showing St. Jacobs Oil cures the worst chronic and crippled cases; cures promptly; cures permanently; in this case without recurer.ce of pain in six years intervening since 1881.

The Tappan Hall.

On Monday there was brought to the register of deed's office for record, the deed given by H. Louise Sackett, of her property on corner of Huron and State-sts., to the Tappan Presbyterian Hall association. It contains the articles of incorporation of the association. It is given on the condition that in five years the association erect a main or additional building on the premises such as it may need. In 90 days after the death of the donor, there must be inserted in the front exterior wall of the building, near the main entrance, a stone tablet inscribed as follows: "This edifice and lots were donated by H. Louise Sackett in the use of the Tappan Presbyterian Hall Association as a permanent memorial of her dear departed and only son, Waller A. Sackett."

The object of the association is stated to be to bring the Presbyterian students of the University into closer acquaintance and most intimate union with each other; to confirm the laith of students coming from Presbyterian families; to promote the spiritual welfare of the members of the a-association, and increase the influence in advancing the cause of Christianity; to secure an eligible site in the city of Ann Arbor upon which to erect a building to be known as "Tappan Hall," and to support therein a library, to provide courses of lectures and other means of advancement of knowledge and to secure the endowment and support of lectureships, chairs of instruction, and other means of education connected with literary, benevolent and Christian topics, and also in preparation for the Christian ministry.

A Burglary.

Monday morning, probably between one and two o'clock, Stafford's merchant tailoring establishment was robbed of some Scotch imported goods which were marked last Saturday, some valuable lining, a suit of clothes, a coat belonging to Edward Guinon, a pair of tailor's shears, and a hand-sled—in all amounting to about $650. It is generally supposed that only one person was engaged in it. He took out two panes of glass in the rear window, crawled in and opened the door, which he impolitely left wide open in leaving. The visitor pried the cash drawer open, but found nothing; and played with the combination of the safe, probably desiring to know its mysteries. The hand-sled he evidently used in drawing away his ill-gotten wealth, and the shears were probably taken to use in cutting the cloth in desirable lots for selling. OQ Monday the sheriff and city marshal examined the premises carefully. The sled was returned to Mr. Stafford Monday evening. It had been left on the stoop of a Washington-st. residence, and the youngster of the house had a good time with it all day Monday.

Captain Janes and Local Option.

We are authorized to say that this public educator, of whom Ann Arbor may be proud, has just brought a series of lecture appointments in western Michigan to a close, and deferred others, in order to return home for the express purpose of working for the abolition of the liquor traffic in this county. Captain Janes needs no introduction to people here. He had a reputation for power as a speaker on general Oriental topics before his interest in the subject of intoxicants,—which he has studied on both sides of the earth,—became known here. He is as modest as he is talented and eloquent, and as fearless in the utterance of truth as he is modest. He speaks for humanity and as a citizen of the world, not only, but as a father who has brought sons and daughters to be educated and to make a permanent home in Ann Arbor. Many will be glad of this chance to hear him. Arrange your meetings promptly with

B. J. CONRAD,

DEPARTED GLORY.

The Glories, Power and Wealth of the Venice of the Fast.

It is actually refreshing to turn aside for a moment from the decay and decadence of the Venice of the present and dwell on the glories of the Venice of the past. What strikes one particularly in contemplating the checkered career of her who was once mistress of the Adriatic is that, after the fall of the Roman Empire, she was the only city that remained free, and that continued for thirteen centuries, amid her lagoons, the traditions and the regime of the republics of the Old World. It was a little colony from Padua, driven from the homes of their fathers by the conquering legions of Alaric and Attila, that first founded the republic of Venice. Slowly but surely did it rise to the giddy height of its greatness and prosperity. No German King, no Saracen monarch dared to interfere with her liberties. The son of Charlemagne crossed swords with her, but had to retire from her canals defeated and discomfited. She had no feudal laws or customs. Equality reigned here at the very time when such a thing was quite unknown from one end of Europe to the other. It soon became a great naval power, and its merchant ships swept the distant seas and called at every port. Bronzes from the East were wafted hither in their glowing argosies. The body of the Apostle Mark was seized on by the Venetians at Alexandria and brought here to sanctify the fatherland, just as that of CEdipus sanctified and protected the soil of Athens. Greek, Turk, German and Genoese bowed alike in those days to the power and magnificence of Venice.

Venice, however, fell much like ancient Rome did. Purple robes stilled the force of muscle, and luxury gave her over eventually into the hands of her enemies. Her age of luxury was, however, a long and a prosperous one.—Venice Cor. San Francisco Chronicle.

—Little Dot—"Mamma, can I get married to Dick when I grow up?"
Mamma—"Why, I suppose so, pet, if you want to." "I think it will be a good plan." "Why?" "Cause we can get all our quarrelin' over while we's little."—OmahaWorld.

PERSONAL AND IMPERSONAL.

—The Bangor Commercial says that a letter addressed to "Skaarr Eggine" has puzzled the route agents as to its proper delivery, but an agent resolves it by forwarding it to Skowhegan.

—Heraldry seems to have had its origin from the necessity of some distinguishing mark on the armor-covered participants in the tournaments and combats. From the use of these devices on garments is derived the phrase "coat of arms."

—A writer upon racial characteristics says the Irish type is distinguished by light eyes, combined with dark hair, a long, low and narrow skull, prominent cheek bones and the flat, level eyebrow. The average stature of Irishmen is about five feet seven inches.

—Joseph Hoffman, the infantile pianist, rules the whole family, as prodigies are very apt to do. Happening to take a meal on an ocean steamer before he started, he refused to cross on that vessel because the cooking did not suit him, and his father had to have the baggage carried back to the pier.

—Ex-Secretary Manning lives a very quiet life. He is constantly under a physician's care. The latter will not permit him to walk any great distance or climb a single flight of stairs. Mr. Manning has, therefore, had an elevator placed in his new home on Fifth avenue. He always rides in his carriage to and from his office.
