THE GIRLS THEY LTKE.

EASTERN COLLEGE HEN TELL AM ABOUT THE GIRLS THEY LIKE.

Harvard, Yale, Columbia, Union, Amherst, and Others.—'What Kind of a Girl does a College Man Like Best?'

A New York social club discussed: "What kind of a girl does a college man like best?" It led the New York Press to invite undergraduates of the eastern colleges to send in letters in answer to the question. The invitation met with a surprising response. A few of the letters have been published. Only two of the many contained any coarseness, and the result demonstrates, The Press thinks, that the "standard of womanhood of the growing men of America is as pure and lofty as our mothers could wish."

The number of Ann Arbor girls annually borne away as wives of students or alumni of the University is large. It has been suspected as one reason why the city does not increase faster in population. Plenty of new people come to reside here, but the marriageable daughters are taken away as fast as they become marriageable. Whether this is a reason worthy of mention or not, the number is so large as to demonstrate that U. of M. students don't forget the heart in their endeavor to enlarge the mind. They evidently don't believe that "the first sigh of love is the last of wisdom;" for they keep right on falling in love with Ann Arbor's daughters and growing in the wisdom and knowledge of our great school.

What kind of a girl a U. of M. man likes best is not answered in the letters to the New York Press; but it is to be presumed that the average Ann Arbor girl fills the bill, and for the benefit of anxious mothers and sisters who are afraid that their darling sons and brothers will be snapped up by some "horrid girl" before they graduate, THE REGISTER would attempt to describe that average girl if human ingenuity were equal to the task. Jackson and Lansing girls might be described, but Ann Arbor's never!

As it is, we must be content with finding out what other colleges think on this interesting question. Some of the letters would anger the objects of their remarks; but the sweet creatures would have sweet revenge if the letters were published. For instance, one Yale undergraduate wrote that he could not "indure" an educated girl; neither can "the majority" of his sex. One college representative declares that the average college boy likes best the girl described by Suckling:

She is pretty to walk with,
And witty to talk with,
And pleasant, too, to think on.
Another from New Brunswick gives his sentiments in the following:

Azure eyes, perfect nose,
Hair of gold, graceful pose,
Dimpled chin, full of mirth,
For such a girl I'd give the earth.
These letters exhibit great scorn for "co-eds" which make them not so reliable as they might be. The blondes, too, do not seem to be a favorite among eastern college men. The brunette, with her darkly glorious attributes of hair and cheek and lip, is described with all the varying degrees of ardent incident to freshmen, sophomores, juniors and seniors.

"Billy Benford," of Columbia, comes into sharp conflict with another Columbia man. "Billy" is a very enthusiastic admirer of American girls, but the other one—who probably is vain and has had some slight from a gay and graceful girl,—declares that "American girls are stuffed with vanity and ignorance." "Billy" bursts out in this passage: "A college student would have but a rude, unfinished education were his associates confined to his own sex. His endeavors to please the opposite sex polishes and refines him. He loves women for the beauty of their characters and the charms of their wit, and he loses no opportunity to declare that American girls excel all others as much in virtue and good sense as in loveliness."

Paul C. Phillips, of Amherst, has some very decided views: "A college man's ideal is high. He is foolish enough to like a girl who is natural. We say it without fear of contradiction. The sentiment in favor of the waspish waist, frizzled hair, and high heeled boots, is not of his creation. Neither is he charmed by décolleté dresses and the abeccc of sleeves. We like a girl who is spirited, yet modest; aspiring, but not politically so; religious, but not sectarian; social, but not steeped in society."

One student writes:
Now, down at Johns Hopkins another sort takes—
There they fancy a girl from the land of corn cakes;
She's a tall, slender creature, with a wealth of dark tresses,
And a sweep in her walk that bedrags her dresses.
Her clothing is rich and is gracefully tossed on.
Not at all like her spectacled sister from Boston,
But in her dark eyes there's an inkling of power to hold and entrance a poor sorph by the hour.

How this girl from the "land of corn cakes" would affect a freshman, junior, or senior, the verses say not; but the writer tells of his own preference as follows:
I shan't say what college I hail from, but then
We're not quite exempt from the follies of men.
There's one little girl I admire myself,
And that not because of her learning or pelf.
She's not very tall, she has bright wavy hair,
She's not very dark and she's not very fair.
Her complexion is more like the down of a peach;
She has lovely brown eyes, half a tear drop in each.
She moves like a queen, with her straight little
And when she's offended I'm glad she's no bigger.

A New England student admires the vigorous girl. He writes: "I saw my ideal a few days ago after the great snow storm. Her sickly brother, a clerk in one of our large manufacturing establishments, was too feeble to remove the ten feet of snow that had fallen during the night. His sister undertook the task. Words are too weak to picture her as she worked away with the great wooden shovel. Her hair hung in a long, loose braid down her back. She wore a rough jacket, mittens and a jaunty little Tam O'Shanter on her head. The strong wind powdered her face and hair, and the exercise made the color mount to her cheeks. The heartiness with which she refused assistance from a gentleman showed she really enjoyed the exertion, nor did it detract from my ideal accomplishments for a lady."

Of Harvard, it is claimed that

The girl that they think the right sort to admire is a prim little maiden in neat drab attire,—an opinion which was probably expressed under the desperate necessity of saying something and of making a rhyme.

A Pennsylvania University man was not very discriminating until his father shortened his allowance. Then the girl who could find favor in his eyes was the one who takes no pleasure in ice cream and costly flowers; whose eyes don't glisten at the sight of theater tickets, and who is made sick by the sight of candy. Such a girl, he says, is hard to find, as they are not indigenous to American soil.

Union college has the prevailing sentiment very strongly that "the society of women is the element of good morals." Union college men go through the freshman year "chippie hunting," and make most of their acquaintances without the formality of an introduction. But they soon forget that class of girl acquaintances. They go through the whirl and excitement of parties, and then they make their choice in plain view of a very high ideal of perfect womanhood.

While these letters are interesting and more serious than one would expect, yet they display no astonishing amount of originality. An equal number of bright young women ought to produce a better batch of letters in regard to their preferences.

CONYX COUNCIL MEETINGS.

Liquor Bonds, 93,000.—John I. Soibon wants the Agreement Kept—Policemen.

The common council held a meeting Monday evening. A communication from J. J. Robison was read, which set forth that in the spring of 1886 the street committee under direction of the council, unanimously agreed to lower the street along his premises on N. Main-st to a grade as agreed upon by the committee and the city engineer. In consideration of this agreement he had erected two brick buildings, and the street has not been lowered, to his great damage. It was referred to the street committee.

The committee reported favorably on the matter of a side-track across Washington-st just east of the T. & A. A.

The police committee recommended that two patrolmen be put on for the ensuing year, and recommended Michael Clark and James Murray for the positions. There was some opposition to this. Aid. Allmendinger got a motion through, 8 to 6, that only one patrolman be employed. There was something of a squabble, and no patrolman was elected.

The bonds of the recorder and three constables were approved.

The recorder was given permission to use any room or rooms in the city building not otherwise occupied.

An allowance of $6 per month was granted Mrs. Evans as in the past two years.

The following was carried:
Resolved, That a special committee be appointed by the mayor to continue during the present council year, and to be composed of the mayor, three aldermen, and the city attorney, which committee shall have charge of all disputed matters of fact and all disputed matters of mixed law and fact, and to take such action thereon as shall seem to said committee best to protect the city's interests in all such cases, subject, however, to the action of this council.

The aldermen appointed were Messrs. Sutherland, Miller and Allmendinger.

Aid. Allmendinger was changed from the finance committee to chairman of sidewalk committee. Mr. Kerns was put on finance committee in place of Mr. Allmendinger.

On motion of Aid. Spokes the drain across Depot-st from the gas house into the creek was ordered repaired.

A resolution was adopted that the matter of fire limits on State-st be referred to the fire committee and city attorney with instructions to report an ordinance at a session of the council to be held on Wednesday evening.

On motion of Recorder Bach, the liquor bonds were placed at $3,000 for the ensuing year.

Last Evening's Session.

Liquor Bonds.

Aid. Allmendinger, as chairman of the liquor bond committee, said that the law relative to liquor bonds is much more stringent now than heretofore, and he desired an expression of the will of the council as to its strict enforcement. He moved that it be strictly enforced, and demanded a vote by yeas and nays. Aid. Ware moved to lay the motion on the table, and it was promptly done.

NO MONEY, NO PAT.

The city treasurer was instructed "not to pay any orders on funds which are now or may become exhausted."

CITY FINANCES IN BAD SHAPE.

A committee reported that the city might squeeze along on $15,172 during the ensuing year, after deducting the ward funds. The probable receipts during the year, less the ward funds, will be $21,000, leaving a probable deficit of $4,172.

CITY TREASURER'S BOND.

The bond of City Treasurer John Moore for $80,000 was presented and accepted. His bondsmen are: Benj. Brown, $5,000; B. J. Conrad, $10,000; Alpheus Felch, $20,000; Aretus Dunn, $10,000; S. G. Miller, $30,000; G. M. Henion, $5,000. Fred. Siple's bond as marshal, and Thomas F. Leonard's and John Earle's as constables, were accepted.

HE WANTS $150.00.

A bill from A. J. Sawyer of $150 for rent of land back of opera house was presented, and met with much remonstrance. The bill is for three years' rent at $50 per year. It was referred to street committee, to report at next meeting.

DRAYMENS LICENSES AND BONDS.

The license committee was instructed to report at next meeting on licenses in general and relative to licensing draymen in particular; also the question of requiring draymen to give bonds. It was claimed that the best draymen are demanding "protection." They are willing to give bonds in the sum of $500 and pay $25 per year, for the purpose of shutting out competition by irresponsible parties. Any man now with a horse and wagon can go to draying, charge 10 cents for carrying a trunk, which may never reach its destination, and bang furniture around, without the patrons ever having any remedy.

HOW TO MAKE BOTH ENDS MEET.

Like many individuals, the city is now struggling with this disagreeable necessity. The outlook is not bright. A few talk of asking the people to vote at a special election to grant more money. It is a fine thing for the saloonists, for it has a tendency to make the council even more inclined to relax the law and let as many of them through as possible, in order that the city treasury may derive as large a revenue from the saloons as possible.

The County House Stories.

Immediately after Mr. McDowell met the board of superintendents of the poor-house in Mr. Norris's office in Ann Arbor, Messrs. Loomis and April drove to Mr. McDowell's house, reaching it but a few minutes later than he did. They pried into every nook and corner of the house, lifted the cover of the flour barrel, pecked into the sugar box, examined the crockery and the hams, and the furniture. So far as they could find out, it all tallied with what the McDowells claimed. One of the servant girls had testified that the McDowells took away from the county house every trace of linen. When questioned about it, Mr. McDowell indignantly denied it, and told how many table-cloths, towels, etc., were left, and where they were left. The two superintendents drove back to the county house immediately, and found the linen just where it had been left. This all must be mortifying to Mr. and Mrs. McDowell, but no one really believes them guilty of any dishonesty.

The board of superintendents determined, at their meeting on Tuesday, that there would be no further chance for such stories to get in circulation. They have ordered that a valuation be placed on the goods brought to the county house, and they propose to buy them or have them sent away, so that when another keeper goes in, there will be nothing to take away. The practice of changing work with the farmers of the surrounding country will also be sternly stopped, although it probably has proved economical in the past. The farmers near the county farm have often sent their teams and hired men to assist on the county farm in time of need, and the county team and the pauper inmates of the house have been used in return. This practice is the foundation of some of the stories that are afloat.

Then, too, if Mr. and Mrs. McCormick should feel kindly disposed towards a sick neighbor and should desire to extend any little courtesy, they must repress the desire. The board has decided that in their position they can't afford to cultivate any of the little amenities of life, because it will lead to "talk." A lady near the house was once sick, and Mrs. McDowell took to her some little delicacy from the county house. Nothing was thought about it at the time, but from the stories now in circulation, it would seem that the family was actually fed for a long time at the county's expense. Some one became sick in the county house, and this lady who had received the delicacy sent over a fine chicken nicely roasted, and it was actually worth more than what she had received from the county. This chicken has been lost out of the story as it has flown about.

Din't fail to take advantage of the bargains offered by Wm. W. Douglass. He means to close out the business.

Mark Twain's Meisterschaft.

Next Monday evening the Unity club will give, in the church parlors, a performance of Mark Twain's latest comedy, Meisterschaft. Those who read the Century will remember the appearance of this play in the pages of that magazine not many months ago; but for those who have not had this pleasure, a short account of what it is, may be acceptable. Mark Twain himself says: "I regard the idea of this play as a valuable invention. I call it the Patent, Universally-Applicable, Automatically-Adjustable Language Drama. This indicates that it is adjustable to any tongue. Suppose we wish to adjust it to the French tongue. First we give Mrs. Blumenthal and Gretchen French names. Next we knock the German Meisterschaft sentences out of the first scene and replace them with sentences from the French Meisterschaft, like this, for instance: 'Je voudrais faire des emplettes ce matin; voulez-vous avoir l'obligeance de venir avec moi chez le tailleur frere, is?' And so on. It is very easy. Anybody can do it. And so you can keep on changing it from language to language, until your private theatrical pupils have become glib and at home in the speech of all nations."

The Unity Club will perform this unique drama, in the original Anglo-German, with the following cast:

Annie Stephenson	Miss Wilson.
Margaret Stephenson	Miss Gilbert.
Mrs. Blumenthal	Miss Seymour.
Gretchen	Miss Jones.
Geo. Franklin	Mr. Pope.
Wm. Jackson	Mr. Whitman.
Mr. Stephenson	Mr. Babcock.

Miss Lillie M. Nichols, daughter of Prof. B. E. Nichols, of this city, is studying art with R. Swain Gifford in New York. She competed in the 63d annual exhibition of the National academy of design, and her picture, which was that of a violin and a rose on a sheet of music, was one of those exhibited. There were 1330 pictures offered for exhibition and only 598 were accepted.

The Register Correspondent Enjoys their Hospitality and Discussions.

To the Editor of THE REGISTER:

SIR:—The meeting of this club last Saturday, at the commodious residence of Mr. Ed. Mrs. H. T. Phelps, was a very enjoyable one.

President Backus called the club to order at 11 a. m. The club took up the question of the best way to dispose of "the surplus in the treasury," not the surplus that is puzzling the brains of our statesmen at Washington, but the $20 remaining in the treasury of the Webster Farmer's club.

Mrs. Jessie Williams, who was down for an essay, was kept at home by sickness, much to the regret of all, since, knowing her capabilities, we felt that a large portion of the anticipated enjoyment of the afternoon was to be denied us.

Some pleasant things were said about THE ANN ARBOR REGISTER, and your correspondent was made to talk in response.

DAUGHTERFUL ADULTERATION.

The TrilKilivnt oseof 11am and Lime in Cheap Baking Powders.

If consumers prefer to buy an adulterated article of food because it can be had at a lower price, they undoubtedly have the right to do so, provided the adulterants are not of a character injurious to health.

The official analysts have recently been active in the pursuit of these dishonest articles. The baking powders of several states have been carefully and critically examined.

The chief service of lime is to add weight. It is true that lime when subjected to heat, gives off a certain amount of carbonic acid gas, but a quick-lime is left—a caustic of most powerful nature.

Adulteration with lime is quite as much to be dreaded as with alum, which has heretofore received the most emphatic condemnation from food analysts, physicians and chemists.

The large profits from the manufacture of lime and alum baking powders has placed many of them in the market. They are to be found in the stock of almost every retail dealer.

Pure baking powders are one of the chief aids to the cook in preparing perfect and wholesome food. While those are to be obtained of well-established reputation, like the Royal, of whose purity there has never been a question, it is proper to avoid all others.

How About Wheat and Frniit?

The April Crop Report says: "The wheat top is very generally reported dead, but hope is entertained that the root is yet alive. While no satisfactory estimate of condition is possible at this date, it is noticeable that the estimate as given by correspondents is much lower than given one year ago."

The reports from Washtenaw county say: "We can hardly tell what the condition of wheat is; everything is covered with clay mud in this township. Think wheat is in the best condition I have known it for years."

The report in regard to Washtenaw fruit prospects is by Jacob Ganzhorn. He says: "All of the fruits, excepting the peach, have come out of the winter unjured. The Crawford buds are largely killed, also nearly all other varieties of peaches on very young trees."

In Memory of John I. Barns.

Hearts were made sorrowful by the terrible accident to John J. Burns, whose injuries resulted in his death on Thursday morning. Mr. Burns was a model young man, well liked and a general favorite among his associates.

We are left here lonely to mourn, Beloved for thy presence endeared; Thy vacancy we cannot adorn, For the model to Heaven has steered.

Noble one, sorely we'll miss thee, None else thy place can now fill; Just one, thy loved ones give thee, Resignedly to the Almighty will.

You've made Heaven's way most stary, By deeds immortal and bright, Be consoled hereafter in thy weary, His dwells in the Kingdom of Light.

Noble deeds you would have achieved, Honored heights you would have attained, But the Lord was not thus pleased For the pure to remain and be stained.

Thy name illumines the pathway Of success, victory and right, It guards against the casueway, Which will sully and tarnish the bright.

You've prepared a way for goodness, By the path where the holy have trod; This constantly points towards gladness, And a peaceful home with thy God.

Bereaved parents, bear up, be courageous, He waits patiently for you to come And be sharers of his sweet joyousness, To welcome you to your last home.

Loving sisters, with hearts full of sorrow, Cast away sad thoughts of the past, O'erthink of thy bright, happy morrows, His home with the Savior forever to last.

Cherished friends, your favorite has left you, Shattered ties remain wholly to thee; He has soared away and bereft you, Without warning and full in his prime.

Good bye—farewell most devoted one, This is but a firm, strong tie, Which links us to the place where none— Yes none—shall have to say, good bye.

Deafness Can't be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way of curing Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucus lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed, you save a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation is taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucus surface.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that we can not cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular, free. P. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, 75 cents.

The fair mayor of Abronia, Ks., no longer enjoys a unique position. Okaloosa, Mo., has a mayor, Mrs. Mary A. Lounnan, and five woman councillors.

Shocking? Accident.

So read the headlines of a new newspaper column, and we peruse with palpitating interest the details of the catastrophe, and are deeply impressed by the sacrifice of human lives involved. Yet thousands of men and women are falling victims every year to that terrible disease, consumption (scrofula of the lungs), and they and their friends are satisfied to believe the malady incurable. Now, there could be no greater mistake. No earthly power, of course, can restore a lung that is entirely wasted, but Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will rapidly and surely arrest the ravages of consumption, if taken in time. Do not, therefore, despair, until you have tried this wonderful remedy.

Oenteel i'ncks.

"Yep, it pays," said a fat, fat physician, with a name which is known throughout the medical world. "I have a practice worth $40,000 a year. "Women"? "Yes, you've guessed it first time. They pay $10 every time they come into my office. When one gets on my list I tell you she stays!" and Dr. H.—laughed long and loud. This is quackery—gilt-edged, genteel quackery—to keep suffering woman paying tribute year in and year out, and doing them no good. Dr. Pierre's Favorite Prescription cures the peculiar weaknesses and diseases of women. It does not lie to thpm nor rob them.

It is opportune about now to speak of a young blade as a little upstart.—Yonkers Gazette.

THURSDAY, APRIL 19, 1888.

THE great event in eastern mugwump circles, last week, was an address by the poet, James Russell Lowell, on "The Independent in Politics." Mr. Lowell, of course, says a great deal that is true. Henry George expresses the thought better than Mr. Lowell when he says: "These parties are, by the necessities imposed by our elective system, great machines, requiring for their maintenance and efficiency, extensive and elaborate organization, much work and large amount of money. Thus they naturally fall into the hands of politicians—the men who are willing to devote their time and money to working them—the men who make a business of this, and who expect to find their profit in it." Mr. Lowell sees this fact; and his remedy is a large independent voting class who will not put their elegant persons to the trouble of attending caucuses and conventions, but, with no party affiliation whatever, will stand at one side and choose the less objectionable ticket and policy from those which the professional politicians of both parties put up. If, he says, we must have politicians, then there must be some one to watch the politicians. And his only hope is to make the party leaders a little cautious. Here is a man who admits that there is no hope; that our system of government is not popular; and that the best we can expect is from the modifying influence of a few independent voters. He wants to purify politics by shirking his duty. He rants to dry up the stream of political corruption at the mouth instead of at the source. To a man without any rhyming power like Mr. Lowell's, it would seem best that all men should work with some party, shifting from one to another if their consciences demand it; but attending primaries and making political trickery less possible. After we lessen the amount of money needed in campaigns, and after lessening the "spoils," the professional politician will largely disappear. Mr. Lowell seems to assume that the professional politician is a necessary evil which only the independent voter can keep from dragging the country to destruction.

THE CONTEST began this week in the national house of representatives over the tariff bill, and we may expect to know the result in four or five weeks. There is no danger of a free trade measure becoming a law. If the Democrats succeed in passing the Mills bill in the house, however, they will enter the presidential campaign with an advantage which they have not had in many years; for they can then say that the Democratic party can at last do something. The Republicans cannot afford to take the most radical position on the tariff. The Minnesota Republicans are as much free traders as the Democrats, and that state cannot be carried for the Republicans on a high protective platform. The present Republican members of congress from Minnesota will probably vote with the Democrats for the Mills bill. But the Republicans can insist that what revenue is raised be mainly on importations which come into competition with our own industries; that whenever reduction of revenue is necessary, the friends of the idea of protection are the best men to make the reduction; and that no reduction at present is absolutely necessary because we have a vast national debt to pay. Indeed, there is danger that in reducing the revenue we may help to perpetuate the debt. With such a policy, and with a man like Gresham for a candidate who could carry Indiana, the Republicans would enter the campaign with bright prospects of winning. We need not only a clear, unevasive platform of moderate protectionist ideas, but a candidate who can win a portion or all of the independent vote. A large part of the independent vote in Indiana is estranged from Cleveland because of his disregard of his civil service reform pledges. That vote must be won, because the independent vote in Indiana will decide the result in that state. Gresham could carry Indiana, while Blaine, Sherman and others, could not.

IT WOULD seem that congress is not a very important body of men, after all, judging from the space given to its proceedings by the New York press. Take the New York Mail and Express, for instance, a paper owned by Vanderbilt's son-in-law, who is BO "goody-goody" that each day a scriptural text is placed over the editorial columns of the paper. Usually it is necessary to search the columns with a microscope to find what congress is doing, and when discovered, it is among the market reports on the last page, hidden away as though they were, ashamed of our national law-makers. But, on the first page, in large display head lines and with a column of verbiage, the paper will give the disgusting

Mails of the latest guilty love, or of Dis Debar's doings.

THE MORNING TRIBUNE, the paper published by printers in Lansing, says: "What the laboring people of this county want, together with the remedy, has many times been told." That's news, certainly. As a matter of fact, no two laboring men agree as to what the labor question is. We doubt if the Tribune can give a definition of it that would satisfy all. Then, after all are agreed as to the nature and scope of the trouble, there comes the question of formulating a plan whereby the remedy can be gained. We wish to impress upon the labor representatives the necessity of uniting all shades of opinion in their ranks upon some adequate remedy.

CARDINAL MANNING, in a recent article in the Nineteenth Century, said of London: "If all the churches and places of worship were filled three times on Sunday, they would not hold more than 2,000,000. But the population of London is 4,000,000." And that is in the wealthiest city in the world. The church evidently has not much of a hold on London. It is impossible for a city to be very pious when hundreds of thousands of its citizens find it difficult to keep from starvation.

Another pronouncing contest is talked of. Judge Cioley and wife were in Detroit Tuesday.

In a letter to Newell Lovejoy, recently received, Professor M. S. Coic Tyler states that he sails for Europe on June 9.

One of the medical students fell backwards off of the rear steps of the building last Tuesday, and was quite seriously hurt.

Dr. Van-Han is to read a paper, May 8, before the national medical association in Cincinnati, on "Hygiene of infancy and childhood."

Mrs. A. B. Palmer has presented the members of the senior class with copies of the numerous pamphlets written by her late husband.

Librarian Divis and wife will start for Europe May 12. While in England he will attend the meeting of United Kingdom Library association.

Geo. W. Cable, the novelist, will fill Dickens' place on the lecture board's program April 25, while Howard's place will probably be filled by Gen. Sheridan.

As special attractions of the Cries club concert to be given tomorrow evening, it is announced that Hawley, '85, will sing his unique Dives Divium, and Clark will be there to whistle.

Many taking the courses in systematic zoology are actively engaged, Sundays, and the early hours of the morning making collections from our birds. In some localities there are found as many hunters as birds.

The news books for the chemical library, presented to the University lately by Mr. Hegeler, of LaSalle, Ill., have arrived in the port of New York from Leipzig, and will be on the shelves of the library in a few days.

Mrs. Prof. Stowell is at present working to determine the botanical structure, also the quantity and quality, of the alkaloid poison that is contained in the plant that caused the death of the boy in the second ward, a few days since.

The young ladies of the University have requested Mrs. Stowell to give them an account of the recent International council of women in Washington which she attended, and she will do so in Room 24, at 4 p. m., next Saturday. The "co-eds" should be there.

The sneak thief is again on deck. Several articles have been reported missing from the rooms of various students, and a few days ago a small amount of money was taken from a hand-bag one of the ladies of the art club left for a few moments in the hall of the Tappan school building.

Those intending to teach the coming season are at present making a stampede among their professors soliciting references and accommodations. The University stands first among the schools of the west as a producer of good teachers, and he who can receive good references from here is sure of finding a good position.

The "Walker Nine," a law department debating club, closed their meeting for this semester, last Saturday evening, with a banquet, at which R. W. Hobart presided. Speeches were made by T. D. Halpin, G. H. Gable, G. Hamilton M'Kesson, H. S. Wilkinson, J. T. Locke, R. W. Hobart, O. M. Townsend, C. Munroe, and A. S. Frost.

Miss Cora A. Benneson, of Quincy, Ill., a graduate of the lit and law departments of U. of M., spoke at the recent great council of women in Washington on "Fellowships for women in our colleges." She has made the circuit of the globe, and is a success in the lecture field. Her many friends in Ann Arbor will be glad to learn of this.

Dr. Hattie Allen has been elected a professor of medicine at the University of Michigan. No woman before has ever received such recognition in the west. —[Harper's Weekly. This, while it may be taken as an excellent puff by a stranger, falls extremely flat to those who are acquainted with the University and who know that there are many ladies here holding positions as assistants, as does Miss Allen, who was merely appointed a few weeks ago as Dr. Wood's assistant with a salary of one hundred dollars a year!

The Ladies Home missionary society of the Jackson Congregational association held its annual meeting here on Tuesday afternoon at the Congregational church. Mrs. Nelson, of Ann Arbor, gave an excellent reading on mission work, after which the Rev. Mr. Thurston, of Pinckney, made some very interesting remarks on work in northern Michigan, which were followed by Mrs. Lane, of Detroit, relating an incident where a missionary minister's wife had to dispose of her silk wedding dress for more comfortable clothing. Just before the close of the meeting, Mrs. Lane received a telegram telling her this lady was dead and the remains would be at her home that night. This cast a gloom on all present which was lightened by a prayer from Mrs. J. B. Angell, of Ann Arbor.—Rev. Mr. Bird, assisted by his son, Rev. Spokes, of Ann Arbor, visited old friends in town April 12.—Eight hundred little fellows at the Michigan Poultry farm look up at the incubator and call it mother.—The case of A. Craig, who is suffering with gangrene in one of his feet, undoubtedly has been treated in a careful and scientific manner by both attending physicians, notwithstanding the report of the Argus correspondent to the contrary.—P. Westfall and daughter, Rena, of Lake Ridge, were guests at the Harmon House April 13.—Carl Webb, of Troy, N. Y., was called to his old home to attend the funeral of his father-in-law, M. Burroughs.—The daughters of the Rev. W. E. Caldwell managed a complete surprise upon their parents April 16, it being their 20th anniversary. There were 175 persons present. The solos rendered by Prof. A. F. Clark were highly appreciated, also the instrumental solos by Prof. D. A. Bennett on the autoharp and the duets by Misses Caldwell and Mills.

Dr. Taft's Great Loss.
The following account of the terrible accident which resulted in the death of the wife of Dr. Taft, the dean of U. of M. dental department, is taken from the Cincinnati Enquirer of April 15: "A sad accident took place at Riverside yesterday afternoon. An aged lady was killed by a locomotive, in sight of her home. The lady was Mrs. J. Taft, wife of the well-known dentist on Sedam avenue, Riverside. Mrs. Taft, who was seventy-six years old, had been for the past week, visiting her son, Dr. Will Taft, of Sedamsville. Yesterday afternoon she left her home to return to her own home. She got off the street car at the small foot crossing directly opposite Sedam avenue, which crosses the Big Four and O. and M. railroad tracks. She had just reached the crossing when a gravel train on the O. and M. road came up.
"The engineer whistled, but the old lady was bewildered and did not heed the warning. Just as she placed her foot on the track the bumper on the cow-catcher of the engine struck her on the right side of the head, crushing the base of the skull and breaking her neck. She was knocked about six feet and killed instantly. She was picked up and carried into her home, which is just across the track and in sight of the spot where Mrs. Taft was killed."

Happy and Hungry.
For over five years I was a constant sufferer with that most terrible and annoying disease, dyspepsia. After paying out hundreds of dollars, the only medicine I found that would do me any good was Sulphur Bitters. Six bottles cured me. Now I can eat well and am happy and hungry.—Editor.

That Tired Feeling
The warm weather has a debilitating effect, especially upon those who are within doors most of the time. The peculiar, yet common, complaint known as "that tired feeling," is the result. This feeling can be entirely overcome by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which gives new life and strength to all the functions of the body.
"I could not sleep; had no appetite. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and soon began to sleep soundly; could get up without that tired and languid feeling; and my appetite improved." E. A. SANFORD, Kent, Ohio.

Strengthen the System
Hood's Sarsaparilla is characterized by three peculiarities: 1st, the combination of remedial agents; 2d, the proportion; 3d, the process of securing the active medicinal qualities. The result is a medicine of unusual strength, effecting cures hitherto unknown. Send for book containing additional evidence.
"Hood's Sarsaparilla tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me over." P. THOMPSON, Register of Deeds, Lowell, Mass.
"Hood's Sarsaparilla beats all others, and is worth its weight in gold." I. BAKBLINGTON, 130 Bank Street, New York City.

FLOODS AND STORMS.

Raging Rivers and Tempestuous Winds Create Great Havoc.

In Several Northwestern States the Spring Freshets Drove the Rivers and Towns, With Damaging Bores—Much Property Destroyed.

FOCK OF THE ELEMENTS.

BED WINO, Minn., April 17.—On the Cannon Valley branch of the Minneapolis & St. Louis road, about seven miles out from this city, nearly two miles of track have been washed away, and no trains will be able to go over the road for several weeks. The damage is estimated at $75,000.

BERLIN, Wis., April 12.—The water in the Fox river is fully a foot higher than it was ever known before. It has been rising for a week, and is still coming up. All the factories have had to shut down. Fifty houses are surrounded by water here, but none will be floated away. It is feared that the new iron bridge will be swept away. It is already greatly damaged. The railway track is a foot under water for three-fourths of a mile, and trains run very cautiously.

ST. PAUL, Minn., April 13.—A large portion of St. Paul is under water this morning. The greater part of the city is on the bluffs, but West St. Paul and the western end of the town proper are on the flats and are nearly all covered by the waters of the Mississippi. The people who live on the low-lands are nearly all foreigners, Germans, Bohemians, Scandinavians and Italians. Their dwellings are small, and when the flood came Thursday the occupants had to be taken out in boats. About 200 people altogether are homeless, and have taken refuge on the bluffs. It is believed the water has reached the highest point, and if that proves to be the case, no great damage will be done. In the stores it was found necessary to move the goods to the upper floors. One small store-keeper carried his stock to the attic and cut a hole in the roof to let in light. At Maukaug, Minn., great damage has been done by the flood, and at Heading, in the Cannon valley, the loss to the Minneapolis & St. Louis railroad alone is $100,000.

MONTEVIDEO, Minn., April 13.—The Chippewa river is overflowing and the Minnesota is rising rapidly. Thirty families here have been forced to move. OCONTO, Wis., April 13.—That part of this town known as "Frenchtown," situated upon the flat, is under water, and many families have been forced to move. The Chicago & Northwestern railway trains are unable to approach nearer than live miles south on account of this bridge at Pensaukee being unsafe.

GRAND RAPIDS, Wis., April 15.—The greatest ice-jam ever known in this part of the Wisconsin river passed out Friday without doing any damage. Another ice-jam extending miles up the river, above Barron's mills, four miles north, cleared there at 6 o'clock Friday night and was two hours in passing here. A raft of lumber valued at $50,000, owned by John Farris, was in the jam, and part of it passed here and will be a total loss.

NEW LONDON, Wis., April 15.—New London is experiencing a flood. Forty houses are already surrounded by water. All of the country roads leading to the city on the north side are flooded and washing out, and both the Wolf and Kinbarras rivers are rising rapidly.

ST. PAUL, Minn., April 16.—The Mississippi river was very high at Minneapolis Saturday and many logs from above were carried over the falls. Lumbermen calculate that 2,000,000 feet of logs were thus floated down the river.

OSHKOSH, Wis., April 16.—Reports have reached here that the boom near Fremont containing 15,000,000 feet of logs had been carried away by the flood. The logs are scattered over an area of two miles square away from the main channel of the Wolf. The logs are those hung up in the drive last fall, and are owned here and in Nebraska. The loss will be at least $10,000. It will cost fifty cents per 1010 to get the logs back again, besides those that will float into the lake.

MAHSHFIELD, Wis., April 16.—The water at this place and vicinity is the highest known for years. The Yellow river has become a torrent and nearly every bridge over it has been swept away. The one between this city and Nasonville, alone remaining, is expected to go out, as about eighteen inches of snow still remains in the woods.

FARGO, D. T., April 10.—Contrary to expectations the Ked river continues to spread itself over the surrounding country, and a vast sea of water meets the eye in every direction owing to the low lands near the river. Thousands of dollars of damage has been done along the river, warehouses, elevators and many other buildings being either swept away entirely or the foundations torn from under them and the buildings wrecked.

WISNA, Minn., April 17.—The Mississippi river at this place is twelve feet above high-water mark and rising rapidly. A large part of the city is under water, and very heavy damage will result. EAST TAWAS, Mich., April 18.—Snow set in at 8 o'clock yesterday morning and is now two inches on the level, with no signs of abatement.

ALPENA, Mich., April 18.—The Atlantic arrived Monday night and is now in the ice five miles out. A big snow-storm from the south is in progress.

MACKINAW, Mich., April 18.—A heavy snow-storm is now at its height here. Reports show that the straits are again boldly blocked with ice.

RED WORN, Minn., April 18.—According to reports which have reached this city the ice on Lake Pepin above Frontenac is breaking up and much damage has been done near the Lakeside Hotel.

ALMA, Wis., April 18.—Twenty families here have been driven from their homes by high water. The loss to property is estimated at $50,000.

A Texas Pioneer Dead.

GALVESTON, Tex., April 16.—Robert Miller, a historic Texas pioneer, died on Saturday in this city, aged 74 years. Before the war he was the richest man in the South, but among other losses that crippled him was the liberation of 1,000 slaves. He died poor.

NEW YORK, April 13.—A suspension of beer-making in this city and vicinity is imminent. The master-brewers say the day of labor unions picking out an individual brewer to boycott and ruin has passed away, and that their association will not allow any one brewer to be singled out for boycott, and that all such boycotts must be withdrawn.

CHICAGO, April 14.—The breweries of this city whose men struck Thursday are going on with their business without serious interruption, the places of the strikers being filled with new men.

NEW YORK, April 17.—The brewery lock-out in this city was inaugurated yesterday, and 5,000 men were thrown out of work. This action was taken by the boss brewers to destroy the boycotts against certain brewers.

The officials of the bank have tried to keep the matter quiet and refused to give any information as to the amount of money taken. It is reported, however, to be $40,000. An Excellent Investment.

The majority of men in middle life remember when Illinois or Wisconsin lands were thought dear at $2.50 per acre. Present value, $25 00 to $50.00 an acre. Careful examination of the records has discovered a number of scattered pieces of the very choicest land in Minnesota included in original land grant lying near railroads recently built, and adjacent to markets. These will be sold cheap, and in five or ten years will unquestionably be worth several times present price. A profitable investment. For future particulars, state quantity desired and address J. But—oughtn't a man to be blamed if, having Rheumatism or Neuralgia, he went use Athlo-pho-ros, when it has cured thousands who have suffered in the same way? It has cured hundreds after physicians have pronounced them incurable.

The skill of five physicians could not cure me of Rheumatism which had settled in the hips, neck and shoulders. So intense was the pain that sleep was almost impossible. Some times my heart would palpitate for two hours at a time. My legs would go out to the knees, and I fully expected to die. In September, 1881, I bought a bottle of Shaker Extract of Roots, or Seigel's Curative Syrup, of your agent, Mr. K. M. King, and before I had taken the first bottle I felt better, and in a short time was able to go to work. May God bless you for the good you have done."

Mr. Wm. J. McCann, 99 Randall-st., Boston, writes: "Six months ago I began to throw up my food after eating. I thought I was going into consumption. I soon began to lose weight, the chest, stomach and sides. I got little sleep and woke all tired out. I once lost five pounds in four days. I bought a bottle of Seigel's Curative Syrup, or Shaker's Syrup, and when I had finished the sixth bottle I could eat three square meals a day, and go to bed in a minute. I had worked every day since I took the second bottle, and gained eighteen pounds. WILL O' THE MILL.

BY ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON.

The mill where Will lived with his adopted parents stood in a falling valley between two great and great mountains. Above, hill after hill soared upwards until they soared out of the depth of the hardest timber, and stood naked against the sky. Some way up, a long gray village lay like a seam or a rag of vapor on a wooded hillside, and when the wind was favorable, the sound of the church bells would drop down, thin and silvery, to Will. Below, the valley grew ever steeper and steeper, and at the same time widened out on either hand, and from an eminence beside the mill it was possible to see its whole length and away beyond it over a wide plain, where the river turned and shone, and moved on from city to city on its voyage toward the sea. It chanced that over this valley there lay a pass into a neighboring kingdom, so that, quiet and rural as it was, the road that ran along beside the river was a high thoroughfare between two splendid and powerful societies. All through the summer, traveling carriages came crawling up, or went plunging briskly downward past the mill; and as it happened that the other side was very much easier of ascent, the path was not much frequented except by people going in one direction; and of all the carriages that Will saw go by, five-sixths were plunging briskly downward and only one-sixth crawling up. Much more was this the case with foot passengers. All the lightfooted tourists, all the peddlers laden with strange wares, were tending downward like the river that accompanied their path. Nor was this all; for when Will was yet a child a disastrous war arose over a great part of the world. The newspapers were full of defeats and victories, the earth rang with cavalry hoofs, and often for days together and for miles around the coil of battle terrified good people from their labors in the field. Of all this, nothing was heard for a long time in the valley; but at last one of the commanders pushed an army over the pass by forced marches, and for three days horse and foot, cannon and tumbrel, drum and standard, kept pouring downward past the mill. All day the child stood and watched them on their passage—the rhythmic stride, the pale, unshaven faces tanned about the eyes, the discolored regimentals and the tattered flags, filled him with a sense of weariness, pity and wonder; and all night long, after he was in bed, he could hear the cannon pounding and the feet trampling, and the great armament sweeping onward and downward past the mill. No one in the valley ever heard the fate of the expedition, for they lay out of the way of gossip in those troublous times; but Will saw one thing plainly, that not a man returned. Whether had they all gone? Whether went all the tourists and peddlers with strange wares? whether all the brisk barouches with servants in the dicky? whether the water of the stream, ever coursing downward and ever renewed from above? Even the wind blew offener down the valley, and carried the dead leaves along with it in the fall. It seemed like a great conspiracy of things animate and inanimate; they all went downward, fleetly and gaily downward, and only he, it seemed, remained behind, like a stock upon the wayside. It sometimes made him glad when he noticed how the fishes kept their heads up stream. They, at least, stood faithfully by him, while all else were posting downward to the unknown world.

One evening he asked the miller where the river went.

"It goes down the valley," answered he, "and turns a power of miles—six score miles, they say, from here to Underdeck—and it none the wearier after all. And then it goes out into the lowlands, and waters the great corn country, and runs through a sight of fine cities (so they say) where kings live all alone in great palaces, with a sentry walking up and down before the door. And it goes under bridges with stone men upon them, looking down and smiling so curious at the water, and living folks leaning their elbows on the wall and looking over too. And then it goes on and on, and down through marshes and sands, until at last it falls into the sea, where the ships are that bring parrots and tobacco from the Indies. Ay, it has a long trot before it as it goes singing over our weir, bless its heart!"

"And what is the sea?" asked Will.

"The sea!" cried the miller. "Lord help us all, it is the greatest thing God made! That is where all the water in the world runs down into a great salt lake. There it lies, as flat as my hand and as innocent like a child; but they do say when the wind blows it gets up into water mountains bigger than any of ours and swallows down great ships bigger than our mill, and makes such a roaring that you can bet a mile away upon the land. There are great fish in it five times bigger than a bull, and one old serpent as long as our river and as old as all the world, with whiskers like a man and a crown of silver on her head."

Will thought he had never heard anything like this, and he kept on asking question after question about the world that lay away down the river, with all its perils and marvels, until the old miller became quite interested himself, and at last took him by the hand and led him to the hill that overlooks the valley and the plain. The sun was near setting and hung low down in a cloudless sky. Everything was defined and glorified in golden light. Will had never seen so great an expanse of country in his life; he stood and gazed with all his eyes. He could see the cities, and the woods and fields, and the bright curves of the river, and far away to where the rim of the plain trenched along the shining heavens. An overwhelming emotion seized upon the boy, soul and body; his heart beat so thickly that he could not breathe; the scene swam before his eyes; the sun seemed to wheel round and round, and dropped off, as it turned, strange shapes which disappeared with the rapidity of thought, and were succeeded by others. Will covered his face with his hands and burst into a violent fit of tears; and the poor miller, sadly disappointed and perplexed, saw nothing better for it than to take him up in his arms and carry him home in silence.

From that day forward Will was full of new hopes and longings. Something kept tugging at his heart strings; the running water carried his desires along with it as he dreamed over his fleeting surface; the wind, as it ran over innumerable tree tops, hailed him with encouraging words; branches beckoned downward; the open road, as it shouldered round the angles and went turning and vanishing fast and faster down the valley, tore and demanded, and a certain high achievement and an all-miserable failure, the same that spread wings with Icarus, the same that sent Columbus into the desolate Atlantic, inspired and supported these barbarians on their perilous march. There is one legend which profoundly represents their spirit, of how a flying party of these wanderers encountered a very old man shod with iron. The old man asked them whether they were going; and they answered with one voice: "To the Eternal City!" He looked upon them gravely. "I have sought it," he said, "over the most part of the world. Three such pairs as I may carry on my feet will never find it. It is a pilgrimage, and now the fourth is growing slender underneath my steps. And all this while I have not found the city." And he turned and went his own way alone, leaving them astonished.

And yet this would scarcely parallel the intensity of Will's feeling for the plain. If he could only go far enough out there, he felt as if his eyesight would be purged and clarified, as if his bearing would grow more delicate and his very breath would come and go with luxury. He was transplanted and withering where he was; he lay in a strange corner, where he was sick and home; he pieced together broken notions of the world below; of the river, ever moving and growing until it sailed forth into the majestic ocean; of the cities, full of brisk and beautiful people, playing fountains, bands of music and marble palaces, and lighted up at night from end to end with artificial stars of gold; of the great churches, wise universities, bravo armies and untold money lying stored in vaults; of the high flying vicar that moved in the sunshine and the stealth and swiftness of midnight murder. I have said he was sick as if for home; the figure halts. He was like some one lying in twilight, formless pre-existence, and stretching out his hands lovingly toward many colored, many sounding life. It was no wonder he was unhappy, he would go and tell the fish; they were made for their life, wished for no more than worms and running water and a hole below a falling bank; but he was differently designed, full of desires and aspirations, itching at the fingers, lusting with the eyes, whom the whole variegated world could not satisfy with aspects. The true life, the true bright sunshine, lay far out upon the plain. And so it was this sunlight once before he died! to move with a joined spirit in a golden land to hear the trained singers and sweet church bells and see the holiday gardens! "And O fish!" he would cry, "if you would only turn your noses down stream, you could swim so easily into the fabled waters and see the vast ships passing over your head like clouds, and hear the great water hills making music over you all day long!" But the fish kept looking patiently in their own direction, until Will hardly knew whether to laugh or cry.

Hitherto the traffic on the road had passed by Will, like something seen in a picture; he had perhaps exchanged salutations with a tourist, or caught the eye of the big-eyed woman in a traveling cap at a carriage window; but for the most part it had been a mere symbol, which he contemplated from apart and with something of a superstitious feeling. A time came at last when this was to be changed. The miller, who was a greedy man in his way, and never forewent an opportunity of honest profit, turned the mill house into a little wayside inn, and several pieces of good fortune falling in opportunity, built stables and got the position of postmaster on the road. It now became Will's duty to wait upon people, as they sat to break their fasts in the little arbor at the top of the mill garden; and you may be sure that he kept his ears open, and learned many new things about the outside world as he brought the omelet or the wine. Nay, he would often get into conversation with single guests, and by adroit questions and polite attention, not only gratify his own curiosity, but will the goodwill of the travelers. Many complimented the old cote on their serving boy, and a professor was eager to take him away with him and have him properly educated in the plain. The miller mid his wife were mightily astonished and even more pleased. They thought it a very good thing that they should have opened their inn. "You see," the old man would remark, "he has a kind of talent for a publican; he never would have made anything else!" And so life wagged on in the valley, with high satisfaction to all concerned but Will. Every carriage that left the inn door seemed to take a part of him away with it, and when people jestingly offered him a lift he could with difficulty command his emotion. Night after night he would dream that he was awakened by flustered servants, and that a splendid equipage waited at the door to carry him down into the plain; night after night, until the dream, which had seemed all jollity to him at first, began to take on a color of gravity, and the nocturnal summons and waiting equipage occupied a place in his mind as something to be both feared and hoped for.

One day, when Will was about 16, a fat young man arrived at sunset to pass the night. He was a contented looking fellow, with a jolly eye, and carried a knapsack. While dinner was preparing he sat in the arbor to read a book; but as soon as he had begun to observe Will the book was laid aside; he was plainly one of those who prefer living people to people made of ink and paper. Will, on his part, although he had not been much interested in the stranger at first sight, soon began to take a great deal of pleasure in his talk, which was full of good nature and good sense, and at last conceived a great respect for his character and wisdom. They sat far into the night, and about 2 in the morning Will opened his heart to the young man and told him how he longed to leave the valley, and what bright hopes he had connected with the cities of the plain. The young man whistled and then broke into a smile.

"My young friend," he remarked, "you are a very curious little fellow to be sure, and wish a great many things which you will never get. Why, you would feel quite ashamed if you knew how the little fellows in these fairy cities of yours are all after the same sort of nonsense and keep breaking their hearts to get up into the mountains. And let me tell you, those who go down into the plains are a very short while there before they find themselves heartily back again. The air is not so pure, nor so pure as the sun any brighter. As for the beautiful men and women, you would see many of them in rags and many of them deformed with horrible disorders; and a city is so hard a place for people who are poor and sensitive that many choose to die by their own hand."

"You must think me very simple," answered Will. "Although I have never been out of this valley, believe me, I have used my eyes. I know how one thing lives on another; for instance, how the fish hangs in the eddy to catch his fellows; and the shepherd, who makes so pretty a picture carrying home the lamb, is only carrying it home for dinner. I do not expect to find all things right in our cities. That is not what troubles me. It might have been that once upon a time; but although I live here always, I have asked many questions and learned a great deal in these last years, and certainly enough to cure me of my old fancies. But you would not have me die like a dog and not see all that is to be seen, and do all that a man can do, let it be good or evil? you would not have me spend all my days between this road here and the river, and not so much as make a motion to be up and live my life?—I would rather die out of hand," he cried, "than linger on as I am doing."

"Thousands of people," said the young man, "live and die like you and are none the less happy."

"Ah!" said Will, "if there are thousands who would like, why should not one of them have my place?"

It was quite dark; there was a hanging lamp in the arbor which lit up the table and the faces of the speakers, and along the arch the leaves upon the trellis stood out illuminated against the night sky, a pattern of transparent green upon a dusky purple. The fat young man rose and taking Will by the arm led him out under the open heavens.

"Did you ever look at the stars?" he asked, pointing upwards.

"Often and often," answered Will. "And do you know what they are?"

"I fancied many things," said the young man. "They are worlds like ours," said the young man. "Some of them less; many of them a million times greater; and some of the least sparkles that you see are not only worlds, but whole clusters of worlds turning about each other in the midst of space. We do not know what there may be in any of them; perhaps the answer to all our difficulties or the cure of all our sufferings; and yet we can never reach them; not all the skill of the craftiest of men can fit out a ship for the nearest of these our neighbors, nor would the life of the most aged suffice for such a journey. When a great battle has been lost or a dear friend is dead, when we are hipped or in high spirits, there they are unweariedly shining overhead. We may stand down here, a whole army of us together, and shout until we break our hearts, and not a whisper reaches them. We may climb the highest mountains and we are no nearer them. All we can do is to stand down here in the garden and take off our hats; the starshine lights upon our heads, and when we are a little bald, I dare say you can see it glisten in the darkness. The mountain and the mouse. That is like to lie all we shall ever have to do with Arcurus or Aldebaran. Can you apply a parable?" he added, laying his hand upon Will's shoulder. "It is not the same thing as a reason, but usually vastly more convincing."

Will hung his head a little, and then raised it once more to heaven. The stars seemed to expand and emit a sharper brilliancy; and as he kept turning his eyes higher and higher they seemed to increase in multitude under his gaze.

"I see," he said, turning to the young man, "and in a rat trap."

"Something of that size. Did you ever see a squirrel turning in a cage, and another squirrel sitting philosophically over his nuts? I need not ask you which of them looked more of a fool."

THE PARSON'S MARJORY.

After some years the old people died, both in one winter, very carefully tended by their adopted son, and very quietly mourned when they were gone. People who had heard of his roving fancies supposed he would hasten to sell the property, and go down the river to push his fortunes. But there was never any sign of such an intention on the part of Will. On the contrary, he had the inn set on a better footing, and hired a couple of servants to assist him in carrying it on; and there he settled down, a kind, talkative, insouciant young man, six feet three in his stockings, with an iron constitution and a friendly voice. He soon began to take rank in the district as a bit of an oddity. It was not much to be wondered at from the first, for he was always full of notions, and kept calling the plainest common sense in question; but what most raised the report upon him was the odd circumstance of his courtship with the parson's Marjory.

The parson's Marjory was a lass of about 19 when Will would be about 50, well enough looking and much better educated than any other girl in that part of the country, as became her parentage. She held her head very high and had already refused several offers of marriage with a grand air, which had got her hard names among the neighbors. For all that she was a good girl and one that would have made any man well contented.

Will had never seen much of her, for although the church and parsonage were only two miles fix in his own door he was never known to go there but on Sundays. It chanced, however, that the parsonage fell into disrepair and had to be dismantled, and the parson and his daughter took lodgings for a month or so, on very much reduced terms, at Will's inn. Now, what with the inn and the mill and the old miller's savings, our friend was a man of substance, and besides that, he had a name for good temper and shrewdness, which make a capital portion in marriage, and so it was currently gossiped among their ill-wishers that the parson had not chosen but to choose their temporary lodgings with their eyes shut. Will was about the last man in the world to be cajoled or frightened into marriage. You had only to look into his eyes, if you did not still like pools of water, and yet with a sort of clear light that seemed to come from within, and you would understand at once that here was one who knew his own mind and would stand to it immovably. Marjory herself was not weakly, but she looked very strong, steady eyes and a resolute and quiet bearing. It might be a question whether she was not Will's match in steadfastness, after all, or which of them would rule the roost in marriage. But Marjory had never given it a thought, and accompanied her father with the most unshaken innocence and unconcern.

The season was still so early that Will's customers were few and far between; but the lilacs were already flowering, and the weather was so mild that the party took dinner under the trellis, with the noise of the river in their ears and the woods ringing about them with the songs of birds. Will soon began to take a particular pleasure in these dinners. The parson was rather a dull companion, with a habit of dozing at table; but nothing rude or cruel ever fell from his lips. And as for the parson's daughter, she suited her surroundings with the best grace imaginable; and when she said seemed so patient and pretty that Will conceived a great idea of her talents. He could see her face, as she leaned forward, against a background of rising pine woods; her eyes shone peacefully; the light lay around her hair like a kerchief; something that was hardly a smile rippled her pale cheeks, and Will could not contain himself from gazing on her in an agreeable dismay. She looked, even in her quietest moments, so complete in herself, and so quick to separate her thoughts from her own vanity, that she was hardly a smile rippled her pale cheeks, and Will could not contain himself from gazing on her in an agreeable dismay. She looked, even in her quietest moments, so complete in herself, and so quick to separate her thoughts from her own vanity, that she was hardly a smile rippled her pale cheeks, and Will could not contain himself from gazing on her in an agreeable dismay.

Will was always observant in the society of his fellow creatures, but his observation became almost painfully eager in the case of Marjory. He listened to all she uttered and read her eyes at the same time for the unspoken commentary. Many kind, simple and sincere speeches found an echo in his heart. He became conscious of a soul beautifully poised upon itself, nothing doubting, nothing desiring, clothed in peace. Balfie's "The Day is Done," a song with "world's" of thought and rich in expression, was rendered with good effect by Miss Elsie M. Hadley. A. D. Colgrove, conductor, has a fine bass voice and uses it skillfully.

For a long time, even before the organization of the choral union, some of the ladies in our musical circles had conceived the idea of uniting all the musical societies of the town and vicinity in a sort of concerted work, and to organize a musical festival, as it used to be done in New England, or as the German Gesangverein do. So in 1888 at the suggestion of Prof. Frieze the choral union proposed to the Ypsilanti choral society and Normal school classes, to unite in studying and producing in public the great oratorio of St. Paul. Everybody remembers with what enthusiasm this master work was received, and the praises which were lavished on the work done. This year the two societies have again united, strengthened by three years of constant practice, and have decided to present to the public of Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti, the unique programme of Handel's "Acis and Galatea," and McFarren's "May Day." The first concert will be given in Ypsilanti, on April 27, and in this city on April 28.

The sons of veterans met last evening and organized again, the former organization for some reason having been declared invalid. Marvin E. Hall, who is at the head of the order in Michigan, and mayor of Hillsdale, was present. There are 29 charter members, as follows: R. M. Heath, H. C. St. Clair, J. Paul, Frank Gardner, K. C. Kern, M. G. Paul, C. P. McAllister, A. H. Seymour, Chas. P. Stone, Edwin E. Hallett, V. E. Bayless, W. J. Stanton, H. D. Walden, D. O. Douglass, W. H. Dorrance, E. O. Come, G. D. Cox, J. L. Cox, C. H. Cox, G. H. Allmendinger, W. T. Johnson, W. O. Thomas, F. C. O'Neil, G. H. Fisher, Wm. Fisher, W. Krapf, E. J. C. Ellis, J. C. O'Neil. The oldest is 48 and the youngest 18. Officers were elected as follows: Captain, J. W. Stanton, Oxford, Mich.; first lieutenant, E. E. Hallett; second lieutenant, C. P. McAllister; camp council, H. C. St. Clair, F. A. Gardner, G. P. Stone; principal musician, W. H. Dorrance. The camp was named J. T. Jacobs camp.

Several petty depredations were committed Saturday night. The front door of Carey's saloon near the M. C. depot was forced open, and a few cigars and cigarettes were taken. Roehm's saloon, next door, was also entered, and a bottle of whisky taken. Why the thieves didn't take more while they were about it, or why they didn't take the whisky and cigars from one place instead of two, is a mystery of "trampdom." Father Fierle's residence on North-st was attempted last week Tuesday, but the window was too securely fastened. On Saturday night, the thieves cut a hole in the front door large enough to allow passing the hand in to get the key, but the door was bolted higher up, and the thieves gave it up. They then forced the outer and inner doors of the Catholic church, although the windows were unfastened. What they did it for is also a mystery. Sunday morning, things were found greatly disarranged, but nothing had been taken. The gold chalice, worth, probably, about $200, had been handled some.

The University Glee club is getting many pleasant press notices. The Michigan City Dispatch says: "The entertainment at Mozart hall last night by the Michigan University Glee club was a novelty to many of our citizens who had never before heard any of the old college songs. Then, too, the other renditions, some of them old nursery rhymes, greeted the ear pleasantly. The opera house was about two-thirds full with the better class of our citizens, and judging from the thundering applause with greeted each number, the best satisfaction must have prevailed. Of the fourteen numbers at least ten were enjoyed so vociferously that they called forth responses. It would be impossible to say that one person did better than another, for all gave the most complete satisfaction. The whistling by Mr. Clark was a rare innovation, and Tobias and Bohunskis" by the club, under the direction of Mr. F. D. Wiseman, was both odd and pleasing. Mr. R. G. Cole, the director of the club, delighted the audience with an imitation of the small Sunday school boy. The club includes 18 voices."

A walk about a portion of the city, early this week, showed a new fence building in front of J. W. Maynard's house on N. Division-st, and Frank Howard's residence receiving a fresh coat of paint, also Prof. Henry Wade Rogers'. An addition has just been put on J. W. Knight's residence on Williams-st. Edmund Clancy had just moved into his pretty new residence on Bowery-st, the finishing touches to which were made this week. Reuben Campbell's magnificent residence on Thayer-st is ready for occupancy, and the sidewalk and lawn were made this week. Evidences of spring were seen on all sides: the young lady was raking the yard; the old gentleman was out surveying his garden patch and preparing to spade it; the little girls were trundling their wooden hoops; the front steps were piled with furniture, ready for house cleaning; the sun was doing his best to hasten the buds on the trees; the robins and blue jays and black birds were out in force doing their share in welcoming the coming of the elorions season. This was on Monday. On Tuesday, there was a hail storm, and the robins, sitting on their nests, wished they had waited longer.

THE STATE STREET FIRE. Greatest Fire Ann Arbor has had in Twenty Years—Accident Delays the Firemen.

About three o'clock last Friday morning, John Ellie, a baker employed by Walter Toop, was at work in the State-St bakery, when he noticed a fire in the barn back of Mr. Cady's grocery store. He ran to the barn and let out Mr. Cady's two horses just in time to save them, and then gave the alarm. There was not a high wind, but before the fire department got to work, the flames had spread to the wooden buildings occupied by Mr. Toop and Mr. Cady, and they burned like cinders. An accident to the nearest hydrant delayed the firemen several minutes, and the wooden buildings were enveloped in flames, seriously threatening Nickel's block, before the hose began to work. The hose began to play first on the brick block adjoining the wooden structures on the north, but the firemen turned the stream soon into the center of the hot flames. Stickle's block on the south had thick walls, and the light wind veered from the northwest to the west, which may have had some effect in saving further destruction in that direction. Calkin's drugstore in Nickel's block was, however, considerably shaken up and much damage done.

The danger to life was great, so rapid and fierce were the flames. George Otley who was sleeping over Toop's bakery, hadn't much spare time in getting out. Mrs. Joseph Berry was sick in one of the rooms in the rear of the tailor shop, and she was carried out barely in time. Mrs. Martha Sheehan persisted too long in trying to save some articles of value, and her bon had to carry her out.

The loss is variously estimated at $25,000 to $40,000; but with the exception of the brick building, it will result advantageously to the city at large. The Sheehans will erect a brick store in place of the old structure in which a fine lot of books were kept, and other brick buildings will doubtless go up there, much improving the appearance of the street.

Sheehan & Co. lost about $3,000 above their insurance. The stock of books was valued at about $15,000, but part of it was saved, and the insurance is $8,000. Mrs. Martha Sheehan owned the building in which the books were kept; loss $3,000; insurance $2,000. Lons on her household goods, $500; insurance, $200. The building which Cady occupied was owned by J. D. Baldwin; loss, $3,000; insurance $2,500. C. B. Cady's stock, loss, $3,500; insurance, $2,000. Walter Toop, bakery, on building and stock, $4,000; insurance, $3,000. He lost everything but the show-cases. Joseph Berry, merchant tailor, on stock and household goods, $1,000; insurance, $500. W. B. Warner, grocer, on stock, building and household goods, $5,500; insurance, $2,425. J. P. Judson, feed store, stock, building and wood, $3,650; insurance, $2,400. Calkin's drugstore, on stock, building and wood, $3,650; insurance, $2,400.
