

THE ANN ARBOR REGISTER.

VOL. xiv. NO. 21.

ANN ARBOR, MICHIGAN, THURSDAY, MAY 24. 1888.

WHOLE NO. 700.

THE COMMON COUNCIL.

The Fathers will ask for $3,000 June 4.—John J. Victorians.—Looking after the Fire Department.—Aid. Ben doesn't like Sutcliffe's.—Aid. Ware gets Mad.

At the common council meeting, Monday night, there were present: Mayor Beakes, Recorder Bach, Aldermen Wines, Ware, Hammond, Spokes, Miller, O'Mara, Kearos, Martin, Herz, Sutherland, Allmendinger, and City Attorney King.

A communication was read from C. T. Parshall, clerk of Ann Arbor township, as follows:

WHEREAS, It has been the custom of the authorities of Ann Arbor to deposit the bodies of animals that have died within the corporation, on the lands adjacent to the city, be it

Resolved, That the township clerk be instructed to notify the council or mayor of said city, that they must prepare a place of burial for such animals.

It was referred to general fund committee.

Aid. Martin, chairman of the finance committee, made a report stating that the general fund had been overdrawn; that the general street fund, from which the laborers and mechanics of the city were paid, was overdrawn, and funds must be raised to meet these expenses. To do this, the committee recommended calling a special election, to be held June 4, to vote on the raising of $5,000 for present needs of the city. The committee would make out a detailed statement of the city's finances, and have it printed for distribution among the tax-payers. The report was accepted.

The street committee made a report concerning the grade of N. Main-st in front of John J. Robison's premises, to the effect that the street should be lowered to the grade as designated by stakes set by the city engineer in May, 1886. Accepted.

Aid. Miller, chairman of committee on fire department, said he had examined the cisterns used in case of fire, and found three of them empty, because of bad leaks in them, and suggested that they be repaired. This suggestion brought forth, during the discussion of the same, the following interesting facts: That the fire steamer is out of repair, and as Recorder Bach said it was shoved up into one corner of the engine-house, and could not be got out inside of half an hour if needed; that hydrants were to be tested twice a year, but it was not done, and many were not in condition to use. Aid. Miller referred to one at the cistern opposite Allmendinger's organ factory, that was frozen up all last winter and finally burst, rendering it entirely useless. There was also one on Miller-ave, that had been useless for some time, and though their attention had been called to it neither the water company nor Hutzel & Co. paid any immediate attention to it; that the water company had been very negligent about these things and should be looked after.

The following resolution was then adopted: Resolved, That the committee on fire department be instructed to repair the steamer and public cisterns, and to fill the latter for reserve in case of fire.

On motion the water committee were instructed to assist the fire committee in looking after the city's resources for protection against fire.

It was the opinion of Aid. Wines that the steamer, hose carts, and ladder trucks should be present at every fire, especially the steamer, as it could never be told when it would be needed. That if it had been at the State-st fire, he believed the loss would have been greatly lessened, providing it was in repair.

Aid. Ware moved that the water rent for all hydrants known to have been disabled be deducted from the water bill, for the time of such disability. Carried.

Aid. Wines offered the following which was carried:

Resolved, That chairman of sidewalk committee be instructed to grade and relay sidewalk on north side of Monroe-st, between Clay and Packard-sts, and change to adjacent property.

Aid. Allmendinger then offered resolution: Resolved, That the sum of $1,000 be transferred from contingent fund to the general street fund, as soon as the saloon tax becomes available, the same to be returned Feb. 1st.

There was some discussion, in which Aid. Ware thought the city could not afford to spend any more money on the streets at present. He was seconded by Aid. Herz, while Aid. Allmendinger and Aid. Wines thought differently, inasmuch as a great many crossings were in bad shape. Aid. Wines referred to some in the vicinity of the University, which were covered with water in a wet time, much to the discomfort of the citizens and students who use them. Aid. Herz arose and said that we were not running the city for the benefit of the students. They were not tax-payers, and the comfort of the citizens should be looked after first. Aid. Wines answered by saying that the students were literally large tax-payers, as they left thousands of dollars here, for rent, board, etc., and greatly helped the property-owners here in paying their taxes and debts. Aid. Herz replied that instead of being tax-payers, and helping the city, they lived off the people, and were more damage to the city than they were good. The tax payers had to pay for repairs to streets, lamps, etc., for their benefit and he was tired of it.

An amendment was offered reducing (he amount to $800, when the resolution was carried.

The bill of the Electric Light company, for $5n5.20 for the past month's lighting, was, after much discussion, referred to the finance committee. Aid. Allmendinger said their bills had been too high; that lights had often been out, and DO allowance made. Aid. Spokes said he had occasion by reason of his employment, to be out late, and the lights were often out before 12:30 o'clock, and some out entirely. Aid. Herz thought the lights had been kept burning all right. Mayor Beakes said he had seen them all out in the ward before time. Marshal Siplely also said that the lights were frequently out before 12:30 o'clock. Aid. Allmendinger said some of the globes were broken, and the lights would blow out, and that the company needed looking after as much as the water company.

Aid. Ware after reviewing the tramp question and need of more officers, moved the appointment of another patrolman. The mayor decided the motion out of order, as it had been once before the council, and was voted down, and must be reconsidered first. While Aid. Ware was putting his motion in writing, Aid. Spokes moved to adjourn which was carried. This aroused the ire of Aid. Ware, who accused certain members of the council of always voting against measures offered by him, and he should offer his resignation at the next meeting of the council.

ANN ARBOR ART.

The Annual Exhibition Xos- in Progress—It is Worth Seeing.

The collection of paintings and sketches, the work of the Ann Arbor Art club, now on exhibition at the Ladies' Library rooms on Huron-st, affords to the public in general, a fine opportunity for studying the productions of clever artists, while for the connoisseur there is plenty of material on which to exercise the critics eye, with but slight assurance of extended criticism.

The exhibition embraces work in charcoal, water colors, oils, painting on china, and some fine specimens of wood-carving. The drawings are nicely arranged, and afford to the visitor easy access for an individual study of each picture. Among the charcoal sketches to the right as one enters the room, are seen nine that are the work of Miss Fannie Fisher. The one that naturally attracted THE REGISTER representative first is in the upper right hand corner, composed of the top of a writing desk on which are some books, an envelope addressed, a pen, ink-well, writing paper and a copy of THE ANN ARBOR REGISTER. The drawing is well executed. Another of Miss Fisher's works which merits notice, is the one representing a jug, partially burned candle and a basin of vegetables.

Miss Hoffstetter exhibits five samples of charcoal study. The finest, and one that attracts universal attention, is a scene in a barn, there being in the foreground one of the old tin lanterns of a century ago, giving out its flickering light, an old hammer, some nails, acow-bell and jug. It is quite realistic.

Miss Bessie Conrad has two which are proof of a skillful pencil, the best one being a faithful reproduction of a brass kettle, tea-pot and skillet.

Miss Mamie Gay has some very fine work displayed, a work basket full of the usual accessories, being quite natural. Miss Birdie Whedon exhibits six specimens of her skill, one of which, a collection of lawn tennis paraphernalia, consisting of racquets, balls, hat and pair of shoes, is true to life. Of the four exhibits by Miss Roys, the open book and candle, and the rose and fan, are most noticeable.

Miss M. F. Chapin shows very clever work indeed. Her portrayal of the mouse trap, and two thieving mice, the old cracked stone floor, and background of boards, broom, etc., is almost perfect. Her copy of a torso, from one of the old masters, is truly a work of art.

Mrs. Ayers has an artistic eye for fine lines, as can be seen in the shading of her picture of the old kettle, tea-pot and steupan.

Miss Lula Walker portrays apples rolling out of a tipped-over basket, to nature. Her drawing of a vase, with fruit, is also fine.

In water colors, Miss Alice Hunt, teacher of the class, has a beautiful exhibit, composed of 18 pieces. Many of the sketches were made in Connecticut and Massachusetts, where she visited last summer. One, a load of hay standing by an old open shed, can only be compared to a photograph from nature. Another, the old town pump at Scopuset, Nantucket, Is., with its back-ground of quaint old houses, shows See coloring and carefully drawn lines. Miss Hunt has a number of floral studies in water-colors, which are gems of art.

The monogram of Miss Kate Douglas is seen on oil-cloth fine painting, of which the one representing a flute, a box and cup, and another showing a jewel box, candle, etc., are the masterpieces. Miss Douglas has one, however, to the right of the entrance, framed and resting on an easel, that is the center of attraction, for those who admire water-color paintings. It is a string of seed corn hung up to dry, and any old farmer can immediately name the variety, so perfect has Miss Douglas reproduced nature's work and colors.

Of the three shown by Mrs. Ayers, the lawn tennis racquets, hat, shoes, and balls, as thrown down at the close of the game, is the occasion of many deserved compliments, the group being much admired.

The collection of work in water colors, by Mrs. Prof. Perry, is the largest in the hall, comprising 24 choice pieces. Mrs. Perry, in company with Miss Hunt, spent some time in the East, last summer, and there made sketches from nature, which have been transformed by her faithful brush into beautiful pictures of New England scenery. The ocean beach, upon which are dashing the wild, angry waves, sending showers of spray in the air, is one of her best. Another is a basket of cowslips and trilliums, showing most delicate tints.

Miss Clara Gott has proof of her skill in three water colors, one of the best being; a bunch of trilliums in a tumbler of water. Her old open book, with roses lying in its open pages, is also very realistic. Miss Chapin exhibits two pictures in water colors, the jewel box and beads being well executed.

Miss S. J. Gardner shows four water colors and a large study from life in charcoal. Of the former, the panel showing drapery, one of the most difficult subjects for the painter to bring out, is in excellent colors, and the folds seemingly stand out from the cardboard on which their shading is so delicately traced. Her bitter-sweet berries in frame, attracted much attention. But the chief-d'oeuvre of her skill was the charcoal work from life, and life-size, of the head and bust of a negro boy. Miss Gardner has a just right to feel proud of this faultless delineation of features and character, as seen in this presentation of life from "among the lowly."

In oils, Mrs. H. Randall, has six paintings. A bunch of milk-weeds in blossom is beautifully done, as is also the representation of a bottle, some oysters in the shell, and some lemons cut in halves, all being; on a table. She also has some fine floral pictures, one showing a bunch of crysanthemums.

The winter scene painted by Mrs. Walker, is one of the finest among the oils. Her basket of apples, too, looks good enough to tempt a pilferer.

Mrs. McIntyre has thirteen beautiful water colors, and two in oil. The bandana handkerchief, which has been tied around some potatoes, a few of which have rolled out upon the table, some matches, a pipe, a cup, form an attractive picture. One of the best is that showing a kettle and a bunch of pie-plant, the coloring of the latter being very natural.

Miss Lottie Jackson has a beautiful painting of apple blossoms. These, the prettiest of all spring flowers, appear in their delicate tints, and seem to blush at the many merited complements bestowed upon them. Her carnations are very attractive.

Miss Elsie Whitman has established her reputation as an artist in one painting displayed in her collection. That one is the reproduction in oil of the mice, trap, and surroundings of the charcoal work before mentioned.

At the rear of the hall on an easel, are four pictures by Miss Mattie Harriman. They are all very fine, especially her apple blossoms, and the white and yellow roses. Her picture of old books and roses is conceded to be one of the best in the hall.

Mrs. Schoff has eight paintings, one of the best being a winter scene. The vegetable study is also good.

Miss Hunt also shows in oil a bunch of milkweeds, inely colored.

Mrs. McIntyre has some beautiful carving in wood, which is greatly admired.

The expected display of China was not in yesterday.

Laying of the Corner Stone.

Saturday at 5 p. m., the Students' Christian association will lay the corner stone of Newberry hall on State-st, with appropriate exercises. There will be music; reading of scriptures by Dr. Ramsay; laying of the corner stone; prayer by Dr. Eddy; an address by President Angell; an address by C. E. Goddard, president of the association; statement of the condition of the work by A. E. Jennings; benediction by Dr. Earp. Bishop Harris has been invited to make an address, but it is not known whether he can come. Hon. James McMillan was invited to represent Mr. Newberry in laying the stone, but it is not certain he can come.

The Chicago Tribune of May 15 says: "W. R. Loveland died at his residence, No. 3658 Prairie-ave, last evening. He has been suffering for some time from pulmonary troubles, and only recently returned from a trip through New Mexico, where he had gone for the benefit of his health. Mr. Loveland was born in Cambridge, Vt., in June, 1851, and came to Chicago in 1869. He entered the coal business and was successful. In October, 1875, he married Henrietta H. Hulung, who survives him." Mr. Loveland was a grandson of the late William and Harriet Patton, old residents of Ann Arbor.

The Ann Arbor Preserving company, of which E. H. Morgan is proprietor, seems to be doing a thriving business. The quality of the goods manufactured is a recommendation that should be of great value in making the industry popular. Samples of some of the canned and neatly labeled tomatoes and peach confections have been tested by THE REGISTER, and have been pronounced "all right." All kinds of fruits will last for years without deterioration when preserved in this way

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight alium or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans. ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 West street, N. Y.

Coining Events.

"Rum and Ruin," next Sunday evening, by Rev. W. W. Ramsay.

Rev. A. H. Davis, of Detroit, will preach in the Congregational church next Sunday. The monthly meeting of the Pomological society will be held in the basement of the court-house, June 2, at 2 p. m.

The U. of M. Prohibition club are planning for a ratification meeting on the return of their delegates from the national convention. It will probably be held next week Saturday night. Dr. I. K. Funk, of New York city, editor of The Voice, is expected to address the meeting. Ten students will go Indianapolis to attend the second annual convention, next Tuesday, of the national intercollegiate Prohibition association. They are Messrs. Shaw, Jennings Nafe, Cox, Bliss, Jackson, Buttolph, Kebler, Grove, and Safford. The U. of M. club sent seven delegates to the Sta'e association meeting in Albion last week. E. E. Brown, editor of the Bulletin, was elected president.

Memorial and Decoration day will be observed in a fitting manner by the G. A. R. post and citizens of the city, and the following will be the program of exercises for the two days mentioned: On Sunday next, the Post accompanied by the J. T. Jacobs Camp, Sons of Veterans, and Co. A, will leave their respective quarters at 10:15, and attend the Memorial service at St. Andrew's church. On decoration day, Wednesday, May 30, at 8 a. m., the Post will meet, and proceed to decorate the graves of soldiers, in the several city cemeteries. Flowers should be sent to the court-house by 8 a. m., and any intended for special graves should be marked, and they will be placed as directed. The address will be delivered by Capt. L. L. Janes, at University hall, at 2 p. m.

Mrs. Ormiston Chant, of London, Eng., who came to this country as the representative of the women of England at the late International Council of Women in Washington, and who has since been speaking in many of our larger cities, it is understood will visit Ann Arbor, early in June, and will probably speak here. Mrs. Chant is very prominent in philanthropic, religious, and educational work in London, and as a speaker has probably no superior among the women of England. She has recently visited Chicago and spoken there eight or nine times to audiences crowding to their utmost capacity the churches and other auditoriums where she has been. She has been received with equal favor in Washington, Philadelphia, and Boston. If she comes to Ann Arbor she will probably speak upon Philanthropic work in London, or some allied subject under which she may treat of the condition of the lower and suffering classes there, and what is being done to relieve and elevate them. As there will be no charge for her lecture, she sought to have a very large hearing here. It is hoped she may speak in University hall.

THURSDAY, MAY 24, 1888.

THE Argus failed, last week, to correct its untruthful account of the council's action in regard to the saloon-keepers' bonds, but reiterated its bold and reckless statement that the liquor law was not violated. Think of it! The mayor of Ann Arbor not only voted to accept a bond which he knew was not made in accordance with law, but now, in his paper, which ought to be truthful, he says there was no violation of the law. This mayor is said by some to want a county office. Do the people want him in such an office, or in any office? If, for any reason, he will vote deliberately to set aside a law as mayor, how can there be any guarantee that he will obey the law if he should be a sonny officer? We don't believe that the people of Washtenaw county want him in any such place. We want law-respecting and law-abiding people in our places of trust. Some men could excuse his vote if he hadn't afterward impudently denied anything wrong, when the illegality of August Herz's bond is so plain that a child can understand it.

HOW CAN IT BE?

The Press, a young and bright newspaper in New York city, has done a service to mankind by having a female reporter investigate the condition of the girls who work in the hotels of that city. This reporter, armed with authority from the city board of health, and provided with an escort, did thorough work. In some of the best hotels on Broadway, revelations were made of a state of affairs more shocking than any exposure of brutality that has yet been made in this country. We are wont to boast of our Christian country and civilization, yet such a story as the Press tells of servant-girl life in the New York city hotels is more horrible than anything the Dark Ages have to offer. In one hotel thirty-three girls sleep in the cellar under the sidewalk, in one small room that had no light excepting the little that was strained through the slats in the pavement. The beds were so close together that they looked like one long bed. They were made of wood, and the mattresses were stuffed with wood shavings. Everything was dirty. When asked why they didn't keep a cleaner room, the girls replied that they worked from 5:30 in the morning till 10 o'clock at night, and were too tired after that. In another place, 48 girls sleep in underground boxes, in a terrible stench, where the floor is filthy, and vermin are plenty. We have not space to tell all of the distressing facts. How can the churches dream of converting the whole world so long as our civilization produces such enormous evils? In one Ann Arbor church, last Sunday, the common fatherhood of God was taught in so touching words that tears were brought to the eyes of many in the audience. Such a faith can be instilled into the comfortable classes, but its no use trying to make those hotel serrant girls understand it.

THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY.

The absurdity of the New York state convention last week is difficult to grasp all at once; it is so immense. But when the situation is once understood the absurdity is easily comprehended. The convention was made up of professional politicians, office-holders and men who want to be office-holders. To such a gathering, it makes not the slightest difference what they applaud so long as it will bring the spoils. They want Cleveland to be reflected, not because he stands for any great idea, but because he seems to be the most available candidate who will deal out the offices. So they praised him in a general way. But as to the Mills bill which is the practical application of the president's message, their resolutions say not a word. On the contrary the committee on resolutions rejected by a vote of 22 to 4 a resolution endorsing the Mills bill. The Democratic New York World calls the failure of the convention to mention the bill a "singular omission." It is a striking and singular situation! Here is a national party which has the presidency, one house of congress, and all the federal offices of any worth. That party hopes to keep in power. What is it that should entitle a party to success? Clearly it is the advocacy of some policy of government, and the ability to carry it out. In England when one party fails in any important measure, another party takes hold, although but a few offices are disturbed. Here we have had in power four years a party which is utterly helpless. It isn't worked out any measure of its own, and apparently will not. The president has announced a policy, and the state convention of his party in the largest state of the Union fails to endorse it while it shouts loudly for his reelection. If they don't support Cleveland for his free trade views, what do they support him for? If they believe in free trade why not say so? If they believe in protection, how can they want Cleveland as president? Of course, they don't care a picayune for anything but success in getting the offices.

We don't mean to say that the majority of Democrats are of that sort; but the party workers are, and the party is placed in a ridiculous situation. The thinking, growing young men of the country, even though they may lean toward free trade, cannot be attracted by such a party. Respect can be felt for men who work honestly for an idea, however erroneous it may be; but when the party is managed by men who don't care what idea prevails so long as they keep control, then the party is not entitled to confidence.

THE proposition to establish a chair of dramatic art in the University might strike most people unfavorably at first. THE REGISTER suggested it last week, and still thinks it would be a wise thing to do. In a great University there should be room for many branches of learning. Dramatic art has been taught here for some time to enthusiastic students, and as we understand, without compensation to the teacher. That teacher has resigned his position in the University. How should the U. of M. lose his lectures? Of course, such a course of study does not produce playwrights, but Bronson Howard has given the most emphatic testimony to the value which it will be to the young playwrights and to dramatic art generally. The making of plays is a paying business in this country. We want good plays, and a chair of dramatic art in the U. of M. could not fail to have much influence on the American stage.

THE curiosities of wills are endless. That of Roscoe Conkling is singularly brief and simple: "I give, devise, and bequeath to my wife, Julia, and to her heirs and assigns forever, all my property and estate." etc. With a few unimportant verbal changes, it is identical with that of the late Prof. Byron W. Cheever, of Ann Arbor. They were not drawn from any form; but the object in each being the same, the two legal minds expressed it in almost the same language.

IF THE title of the late local option law was defective, that was sufficient reason for declaring the law unconstitutional. Certain bad features in the law were pointed out by the supreme court, and it is safe to say that if the next legislature profits by this lesson, a sound local option law will be enacted.

THE JEWETT RESIDENCE.

Now Blackened Ruins.—K has Done Good Service.—How it Caught fire.

The second serious fire within the past six weeks, occurred in this city last Friday night, resulting in the destruction of the old Jewett homestead on W. Huron-st. The alarm was sounded a few minutes after 11 o'clock, and in a short time the hose carts of the Fourth, Fifth and Sixth wards were on the ground, and soon had three streams playing on the fire. When they arrived, the roof of the dining room was blazing fiercely, and flames were breaking through the roof of the upright. At the first tap of the bell, a large number of students who were still on the streets, hurried to the scene of the conflagration as indicated by the lurid glare made brighter by the inky blackness of the sky above, and a score of willing hands soon removed all contents of the house below in the front rooms, but could do nothing towards moving a quantity of heavy furniture stored up stairs, belonging to the Jewett estate, which was destroyed. Mr. Jewett, the owner of the property, died last March, since which time the house has remained unoccupied by any of the family, but was looked after and taken care of by A. S. Wheelock, senior medical student, who with his wife, occupied a portion of the premises. Mr. Wheelock's version of the fire is as follows:

"During the evening we had had a little fire in the sitting room grate, made up of part wood and part coal. My wife and I retired at about 10:00 p. m., sleeping in a bed-room adjoining the sitting room on the south. About an hour later, my wife awakened me, saying that she thought there was fire in the house. I ran out into the sitting room, and saw fire coming out of the ceiling over head, around the chimney. I got the garden hose, but the nozzle was broken and was useless. I then ran over to Mr. Davison's, crying fire, and Mrs. Davison telephoned to her husband who was at the electrical works. He soon came, and in the meantime I was getting out what things I could. Word was sent to the engine house, Mr. Davison and I tried to keep it down with his garden hose, but the fire soon drove us out. When I first saw the fire, the roaring it caused in the chimney led me to believe that it caught from the chimney which was burning out. We lost all of our silver and table ware, which was in the dining-room west of the bed-room, besides losing a number of keepsakes, wedding presents, etc., which were more valuable to us because of their association, than because of any great intrinsic worth. We saved about all of our clothing, books, and personal ornaments." Mr. and Mrs. Wheelock are residents of Bridgewater township.

The building destroyed was a large two-story brick, having been erected by Mr. Jewett about 35 years ago, and was at that time the finest residence in Ann Arbor. The walls are intact, but the roof of the building will be at least $4,500. It was insured for $2,000, Judge Kinne, executor, having recently had it insured. The loss of personal property to the estate will be about $1,000.

CINDERS.

The fire department fought the flames inch by inch, and took a good many chances. The roads being heavy, and the distance considerable, the boys were tired when they arrived with the hose carts, but they went at it like veterans and staid till the flames were conquered.

Much amusement as well as consternation was at times caused in the large crowd assembled, by the capricious maneuvers of the nozzles on the hose, as at times when being moved, they were just as liable to discharge their contents into the crowd as into the fire, which they frequently did, much to the terror of those who had their "soft" clothes on.

Two fellows whose names should be preserved (?) if learned, raised a ladder to a second story window, and with an axe smashed in the glass and sash of the lower half of the window, and then tried to tear loose the empty outside sash. What for, no one could make out. But "midst flame and smoke, and shout and groan" from the crowd below, they gave it up.

Chief Siple was everywhere present, and ruined his derby, to say nothing of the soaking he received.

As will be noticed in another column of this paper, I have bought the interest of Mr. J. Koch in the Furniture Business of Koch & Haller, with the intention to carry on Furniture business at the same place with full as large assortment of goods as the old firm ever had carried. I shall make every effort to always have on hand the best assortment and latest designs of Bedroom, Parlor, Dining, Library and Office Furniture, and especially for this Spring Trade. My Stock is most complete, and certainly will enable any one to make a suitable selection. I also make to order in all kinds of wood, special patterns of Desks, Book-Cases, Cabinets, Tables, Mantels, Dressers, Chiffonier, and will guarantee satisfaction. Manufacturing Parlor Goods myself, I am prepared to fill any desired style of Sofa, Rocker, Easy or Reception Chair. In Drapery; I carry an extensive line of Turcomans, Madras, Crete, Silk and Lace Curtains. For the accommodation of my customers, repairing of Furniture of all kind will be attended to with care. Hoping to receive a share of your kind patronage.

I Remain Respectfully,
MARTIN HALLER,
Successor to KOOH & HALLER, 52 S. Main and 4 W. Liberty Sts.

COUNTY NEWS.

Burglary.—Marriage of Miss Deyhle.—Chelsea Creamery.—Runaway Accident near Ypsilanti.—Too inetta Whistley.—A Wonderful Pig.—Measles and Scarlet Fever.—Base Bull Club In Saline.—Iron Bridge near Saline.

The measles scared away half of Saline's school children last week.

Prof. Waller will act as principal of the Dexter schools another year.

A runaway accident nearly ended the earthly career of John Sears, of Saline, last week.

Two hundred acres of cucumbers will be planted by farmers in the vicinity of South Lyon.

Hattie E. Gilbert, daughter of John and Harriet Gilbert, Ypsilanti, died May 13, aged 21 years.

George Wilcox, of Bellville, has received $503 back pension, and will get $8 per month hereafter.

Frank Poulk fell through a trap door in the Ypsilanti opera house, one night last week, striking the stage twenty feet below, breaking an arm.

Lambert Dresselhouse, a resident of Freedom for many years and a prominent citizen, was buried last Sunday at Eow's Corners, in Sharon.

The joint meeting of the S. W. and Norvell farmers' club has been changed to June 1, at "Fair View," the residence of L. D. Watkins. The change of time is made to accommodate any who wish to attend the sale of short-horn cattle by Ball and Boyden June 7.

Nelson Brundage died at his residence in Northfield, Washtenaw county, of typhoid pneumonia, on May 16, 1888, aged 67 years. He was born in Batavia, Aug. 3, 1821, Genesee county, N. Y. He came to Michigan with his parents at the age of 7 years. His father bought a farm joining the one where his family now reside. He lost his father the same year he came here. Mr. Brundage was married to Ann Bartlett, Sept. 12, 1872, who, with two daughters, Elizabeth and Cora, mourn his loss. He was a highly respected citizen.

Webster. The farmers club held a very interesting meeting at the residence of Mr. Pratt last Saturday.—Mrs. Wm. Scadin started Tuesday to visiting her brother in Nebraska a few weeks.—The reading circle decided at its last meeting to have a strawberry and ice cream festival.—Ray McColl is sick with the measles.—Mrs. Buckalew, of Dexter, celebrated her birthday, which was May 18, visiting Mr. and Mrs. Latson of this place.

Chelsea. Another load of flowers from the conservatory of Cousins & Hall, Ann Arbor, was sold upon our streets on Tuesday.—Phoebe L., daughter of Wallace W. and Sally Ann Fisk, of the township of Sylvan, died May 21, 1888, aged 13 years, 2 months and 21 days.—Rev. A. H. Claffin, of Dexter, made Chelsea a short call Monday morning.—Fruit trees have been in full bloom the past week. So far the prospect for fruit in this region seems good.—After a much longer delay than was anticipated, repairs are completed on the boiler of the Chelsea creamery, and the work of butter-making was resumed on Wednesday, under the management of T. J. Simpson, late of Parma.—C. Whitaker is having a drive-well put down near his residence on Main-st.—Miss Alice Sargent, of Detroit, was among her Chelsea friends last Sunday.

Ypsilanti. Decoration Day will be generally and specially observed here. The G. A. R. have secured John Hopkins, of Detroit, to make the address at the exercises which will be held in the M. E. church.—Miss Nettie Morrison, a Normal student, caught cold while suffering from the measles, and died in consequence Monday morning. Her home was near Muskegon.—Louis Burroughs has concluded to give up his position as tinner for C. M. Norton and try his luck in Montana.—Miss Sarah P. Stewart returned Tuesday from a three months' study of art in New York. She will open a studio on Huron-st.—Mrs. Bramly, of Canada, who for some time has been trying to collect damages from the M. C. R. R., for injuries she received while getting off the train some time ago in this city, at last accepted $50 and a ticket to Montreal, and departed for a more congenial atmosphere.—Fences are rapidly disappearing and flag-stone pavements appearing on all our principal streets.—The Ypsilanti Chautauqua Circle did itself honor last week by planting a tree in front of the M. E. parsonage in honor of Rev. Springer, former pastor here, and a valuable Chautauquan.—Frank Ponck is suffering with a broken arm in consequence of a fall in the opera house last week.—Dr. Kinnie's wife and little son are suffering from a light attack of scarlet fever.—John Watson, a member of the light guard, has been dismissed from the company on account of his devotion to intoxicants.

Whitmore Lake. J. D. Sheffer, our barber, talks of removing to Hamburg, too many barbers here.—Wm. Rane's house appears in a new, pea-green coat.—Fred Roper and wife, of Ann Arbor, spent Saturday evening and Sunday with their relative? here.—"Wit" Tpd Sundayedat Owosso.—Neal O'Hara, of Howell, was here Saturday.—Arrangements are being made by the M. E. Sunday school for a children's day entertainment.—Nelson Stevens of Ann Arbor, was at the Lake Saturday.—The war in the meat business is still raging. It is among the two dealers of South Lyon and our dealer here.—Mrs. Silsby's house presents the finest colors in town. Well, it should as it is to be occupied by the "newest" family.—Carrie Rauchenberger, of Ann Arbor, was with her relatives over Sunday.—A curiosity in pigship is exhibited in Pray & Stile's store. Crowds of people flock there to see a spotted pig with 8 legs, 1 head, 4 ears, and 2 tails. The pig is well grown and is one of a litter of six; but of course, it is not living. Mr. Pray, who is the owner of the curiosity, has had it well preserved in alcohol, and thinks he has something equivalent to a fortune.—Last Friday evening sneak thieves entered the store of W. B. Rane by removing a light of glass from a window. They ransacked the store, opening all the drawers, examining papers therein, and scattering goods about. They evidently took their time, for they lighted nearly a box of matches to examine goods. The money drawer was plundered of about $60, and razors, pocket knives, cartridges, cigars, and other merchandise were taken. Although the thieves must have made some noise, as they knocked down and broke a mirror, they were unnoticed. Some tough looking specimens were seen about this place Friday, and they leave evidence of having lodged in the barn of Frank Parker. On the same evening Bowman & Sheridan's store at Hamburg was robbed of about $1 in money and some goods, the amount unknown.—Miss Jennie Sheffer has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Lizzie Roper, at Ann Arbor.—Mrs. Prof. Kempf, of Ann Arbor, is visiting her mother, Mrs. Weidenmann.—Miss Tillie Deyhle and Chas. A. Pray were united in holy matrimony, yesterday morning. They had a quiet ceremony, only a few of the relatives being present. The new couple have a host of friends, who wish them a life of union and prosperity, and such will probably be their lot, as it is a genuine old-fashioned love match. The Hamburg liquor dealers have taken advantage of the decision of the supreme court and re-opened their saloons.

Saline. Bert Harris is building a new house on his place on S. Adrian-st.—The meeting called to organize a base-ball club was largely attended, and a club was perfected with the following officers: President, A. J. Warren; secretary, A. B. VanDuzer; manager, John Gillen; treasurer, O. E. Hawkins; directors, E. A. Houser, F. D. Ford, A. B. VanDuzer, A. K. Rouse. They comprise a team that are not afraid of any team now organized on earth and ready for cattle at any time.—John Sears and Frank Inwood visited Detroit one day last week, driving through with their team. On their return the neckyoke broke just east of Ypsilanti, and the team became frightened and started to run, pulling Mr. Sears out over the dashboard, dragging him some distance by the lines, causing a very bad injury internally. Mr. Sears was taken to Ypsilanti, where medical aid was secured. He was brought home next morning. Mr. Inwood escaped injury by jumping. The team was found next day about five miles from the place of accident.—John Funk is making a decided improvement on his place, corner of Huron and Adrian.—Frank Canmet has bargained for the J. D. Allison farm.—J. C. Rouse has moved to Milan.—Mrs. Chas. Rogers is visiting her sister at Brooklyn.—Mrs. W. H. Berdan is visiting near Milan.—Mrs. H. R. Mead and grand-daughter Blanche, are recovering from their sickness.—Miss Rona West/all, of Lake Ridge, visited Miss Maggie Harmon, May 15.—A. J. Warren says Saline is not a distributing point for the Champion harvesters, but the car load recently consigned to him he has sold to farmers near here, and prospects look favorable to sell two more car loads.—Democrats speak in highest praise of the supreme court now. Saloon keepers ditto, and third party prohibitionists also; "one and inseparable."—Grove Parsons has opened a gents' furnishing store in the Wallace block.—Irving Clark will soon move to Grand Rapids with his family.—There is a growing desire of the citizens of Saline and vicinity to repeat the celebration of '81 this year.—The Chequamegon orchestra give a vocal and instrumental concert at the opera house, May 26.—Messrs. A. B. VanDuzer and O. M. Kelsey visited Toledo, Monday, and witnessed the State league base ball game between Columbus and Toledo.—Mrs. Nichols of Buffalo, is visiting relatives in town.—Everett Smith, of Ypsilanti, was the guest of E. A. Helber, May 21.—The township board have decided to build an iron bridge just south of town on the Tecumseh road.—Miss Allie Wright has the measles.

What Slic Knows of T.M.

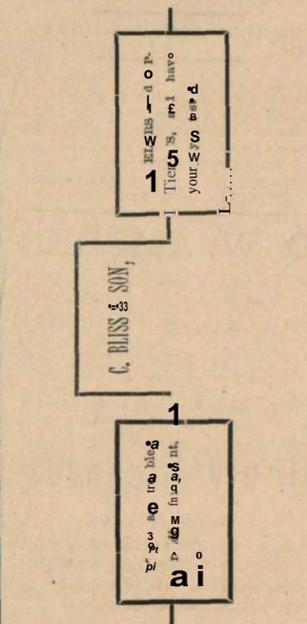

Judge Harriman, who takes the English papers, and read them more than he does our own.—excepting, of course, the REGISTER.—called attention to a review, in the last number of the London Spectator, of a book by an English woman, entitled "A Queen in the Great Republic." Of course the English woman, like Matthew Arnold, did not find this country very "interesting." Cincinnati was "too smoky;" St. Louis "too filthy;" and New York "too trashy," you know! She does condescend to say a word in praise of the Grand Canyon of the Colorado. The review says:

"This misleading name suggests the neighborhood of Denver and Colorado Springs; but the famous canon is in reality many hundreds of miles from either one or other, and is situated to the south of Arizona between New Mexico and South Carolina." This is good.

A SIN NOT TO BE FORGIVEN
BY LIZZIE W. CHAMPNEY.

It is not my purpose to exonerate Allan Halsey. Doubtless he richly deserved the punishment which he brought upon himself, but his fault at the first was an inconsiderate one, and the system of hypocrisy in which he found himself entangled was entered upon from the good natured impulse of shielding his friend. That friend was Andrew Steele. They had been chums throughout their college course, but their paths had diverged widely during the four years which had elapsed since their parting under the shadow of alma mater. Steele had studied for the ministry, growing gentler and more melancholy, narrow chested and possibly narrow minded, but always pure of soul and tender of heart, as he bent over his books. Halsey, on the contrary, had plunged at once into the world. His aim in life was to become a journalist. He could adapt himself easily to circumstances, and when he found that the highest prizes were within his reach he lowered his ideal and accommodated himself to the actual, and at the end of four years was quite content with what he would have spurned at the outset, a regular position as pulpit reporter of one of the leading newspapers.

"I think a little of my experience would do you good," he said to Steele, as they sat together in the summer on the clover under the old orchard trees of his friend's home. "It would give you a chance to improve your style, by a comparison with that of the most eloquent and scholarly men of the day. It would broaden your theological ideas, and give you points in composition and delivery. If you will submit to taking a few hints from me I can put you up to a thing or two. There are certain dodges that these great gurus are not above using, which are remarkably killing, and I doubt whether they are ever taught in the seminary. If you are going in for divinity you might as well be at the top of the heap, a regular doubly distilled D.D., and the pastor of a wealthy city church. I have come to the conclusion that the ministry is a better field for a smart man than journalism, and I almost regret my choice. You see you have less competition; nearly all the brilliant fellows take to the law, the regular digs to medicine, the long headed ones to politics or business, those mistaken beggars who care more for glory than gold hang on to art or literature, while only the chaps without any particular vocation are left for the ministry and the book agencies. Now don't flare up. Can't you see that it is the luckiest thing in the world that it is so? If you have a clear idea from the start what you mean to accomplish, you can just sail in like a whale among the fishes."

Andrew Steele answered quietly: "You do not understand my aims. I am physically unsuited to lead the career you have marked out for me. I have not sufficient health to carry out what I wish, and that is to teach the suffering to endure."
Halsey scanned his friend anxiously. "You do look a trifle used up," he said. "I am glad I accepted your invitation to spend a fortnight with you, for I am going to take you in hand. You'll pass a week or more in the woods; hunting and camping will soon give tone to your mind, as well as to your complexion, and you will bid goodby to morbid self-abnegation as soon as you layl out a four pound bass."
But Halsey found that he had a difficult task upon his hands. His friend's melancholy was deeply rooted in a frail physique. The dark woods and mountain solitudes seemed to increase his gloom. He took no interest in sport of any kind, and it was evident that some settled trouble was preying upon his mind.

"What is it, Steele?" Halsey asked one evening as his friend sat moodily and dejectedly regarding the smoldering embers. "Is there a lady in the case, or is it money? Out with it like a man; the very telling of the annoyance will make it seem less. I'll warrant you that I've been in a dozen tighter places."
"It is my health," the other replied. "I fought for it all through my college course, but it was of no use. Two years ago I broke down utterly with nervous prostration. I left the seminary, and was recommended to put myself under the care of a Dr. Corcoran, of—"
"It was a most providential thing. He took me and my family and his good wife nursed me like a mother. I was so weak that I could only lie still like a little child and watch the leaf shadows of the maple playing upon the wall. I was with them three months, and they treated me like a son. You have guessed that there was a lady in the case. Before the three months were over I had fallen in love with Miss Corcoran."
"Very naturally and quite the proper thing under the circumstances. I suppose she brought you your gruel and read aloud to you, fanned your fevered brow and all that. I only wish such a piece of good luck would fall to me."

"You are quite wrong. In all that time I never saw Miss Corcoran."
Halsey whistled.
"Whom having not seen I love," I used to repeat to myself again and again in those days. Miss Corcoran was in Philadelphia completing a course of medicine which she had begun with her father. They told me that she was fitting herself to go out as a missionary, and she wished to make herself useful among the women and to gain admittance to the harems as a physician. Dr. Corcoran's family was a large one, there were others staying in the house and I was given her room. I have never known much about women, and all the dainty fittings of that room were a revelation to me. It seemed to bring me very near to her, and as I told you, I used to lie and study one object and then another, and it seemed to me that I could imagine from them just how she looked as well as her tastes and mental characteristics. There was a cabinet desk beside the window and the carpet in front of it was more worn than before the dressing table. That told its story to begin with. The decorations of the room were of an eastern character. An India shawl was draped to form a curtain, a Tunisian prayer rug was spread beside the bed and a Daghestan rug in front of the grate. There was a Moorish plaque over the mantel, and boxes of Japanese lacquer, a bamboo easy chair from Calcutta, Turkish embroideries and scarfs, and other suggestions of the Orient scattered about. This was not the indiscriminate gathering of a fashionable devotee of bric-a-brac; there was a consistent method in all and it indicated a fixed purpose. AH the trend of her mind was to the east, and the books in her small but well selected library showed the same taste. As I improved in health I read them through, and sometimes returned to make a note in answer to the penciled queries upon the margin. She had been studying Arabic, but seemed interested in all Asiatic literature, and had secured everything that could be had through translations from the "Arabian Nights," and the "Koran" to Matthew Arnold's works, and the poems of Omar. There was a portfolio of photographs and engravings, reproductions of the works of French oriental painters, views from Dore's Bible, photographs of Palestine and Egypt, the bazars of Cairo, the gardens of Damascus and the minarets of Constantinople, and the library showed that she had read and studied of all. She was one of those women of whom it could be said that to know her was a liberal education."

"I should think so," Halsey replied. "Do you know, my friend, that it strikes me that so much knowledge suggests a rather mature person, and not exactly the frivolity of sweet 16."
"No, she was not very young—23. I learned by consulting the family Bible, and I saw her portrait in her father's study when I became well enough to walk about the house. A sweet, girlish face it was, enough to steal any man's heart away; but I loved her before I saw it—for the beauty of her mind."
"And have you never seen her, or told her of your affection?"
"I have never seen her. I went back to the seminary, completed my course, doing double work in the following year in order to make up for lost time. But in the midst of my work I thought continually of her. I wrote to her, told her something of the interest with which she had inspired me, and begged to be permitted to correspond with her. She replied courteously, giving her reasons for declining the correspondence. I wrote again and again, but she would not reply. After graduation I visited Dr. Corcoran, and told him everything. He heard me very kindly, but was inclined to treat the whole matter as entirely imaginary. His daughter was still away from home, and would remain so for a year longer. He talked to me very seriously about my health, and told me I was in a fair way to be buried than married, and he should disapprove of his daughter's becoming interested in the solely on that ground. "Go home for a year or more," he said; "rest and exercise; make a sound, healthy man of yourself; and when you have done that, come and see us again, and I will introduce you to my daughter."
"Why in the name of common sense haven't you followed his advice?"
"I have done so, Halsey, as far as is possible. I have put myself in training as though I were going to row with a prize crew; but I cannot realize the difficulties of my position. I am a minister without a parish, and so belong to everybody. I have done more work the past winter than any regularly settled pastor of my acquaintance, and I have had before my mind always my own personal, private desire to fit myself for a foreign field, so that some time if I win Miss Corcoran—and if I gave up that hope I should give up everything—we may go out to our life work together. We have a returned missionary at Sunderland, and I am studying Turkish with him. I want to have some acquisitions which will recommend me to the board, so that I may not have to waste a year on the field of "idolatry."

"You appear to have carried out Dr. Corcoran's advice in regard to rest to the letter. Halsey remarked dryly, "I wonder you haven't engaged some rabbinical old clothes man of the Bowery to instruct you in Hebrew, and taken a dip into Chinese by way of pastime."
"I studied Hebrew at the seminary," the other replied, not perceiving the irony in his friend's remark. "I think I have made the most of my opportunities, but now, just when I need it most, my brain fails me. I must preach at Ramoth Gilead next week, and my head is in a whirl. I can't settle on a train of thought, or collect two consecutive ideas on anything but the unpardonable sin; that is uppermost in my mind the whole time, and it was while puzzling over that subject that I fell into the state of ruin from which Dr. Corcoran rescued me."
"Steele," exclaimed Halsey, "you have acted like an idiot. If you want to marry Miss Corcoran and sail away to Joppa, which I consider a very sensible idea, as the sea voyage would build you up and foreign travel is just what you need to top off your education and tit you for a shining position, a candlestick on a hill and not a city under a bushel, you know—if this is your little game, I say why in the name of common sense do you pay any attention to side issues? Why don't you say to Ramoth Gilead: 'Gentlemen, you may go to Jericho. I have other fish to fry!'"
"Simply because Eamoth Gilead lies in my way. It was the birthplace and early home of Dr. Corcoran. It was through him that I received this call. And he writes me a very pleasant letter apropos of the subject. This is what he says:
MY DEAR STEELE: It is a long time since we have heard from you, and I trust you have improved the time, by laying in a good stock of health. I have some little matters with the board, am in fact their health inspector, and I happen to know of a mission which I think you would like, and for which I think you admirably qualified. I won't ask you to come on an uncertainty, as I can arrange for an examination a little nearer your present residence. The church at Eamoth (Gilead) will give you a call as candidate in a few days. I have anxiously trusted worthy spies in the place and if they send me a good report of your physical condition (I have no doubt in any other particular), I will send you name in to the board and they will probably make you a proposition soon. This does not compromise you in the least, for you need not accept the offer when it comes. Before you refuse, however, we would like to have you make us a visit and let us talk over the matter together. Faithfully yours, GILEAD CORCORAN.

P. S.—Mrs. Corcoran unites with me in this invitation, and my daughter, who heard much of you and will be with us, will be happy to meet you."
"There it is—the opportunity of my life slipping from my hands. If I were to see Miss Corcoran to-night I could talk to her of nothing but the unpardonable sin."
"O, come now," Halsey replied, cheerfully, "you have given me a tolerably connected account of the whole affair, and I dare say you will make your way with the young lady. What bothers me is what sort of an impression you will make on those Ramoth Gilead farmers as regards health. It's a pity you haven't a physique like mine; but never mind, all will end well, and you will meet again in Eamoth or Babylon—the patriarchal head of a numerous family, and the war correspondent of the Daily Shouter. You must write up your experiences and I will bring them home and see that they are well brought out and that you get a pretty penny out of the affair. Or you may get yourself lost and I'll enact Stanley to your Livingstone and we'll advertise each other from Dan to Beersheba. You must put this unpardonable sin nonsense out of your head and put your best foot forward generally. Don't bother about thinking up a new sermon; give them one of your old ones, but put a lot of vim into it. Beat the dust out of the pulpit cushions. Let them know that you are alive."
Steele shook his head sadly. "I want them to know that I am a strong, well man, and I feel a lassitude creeping over me which makes the lifting of that fishing rod a difficult task."
"Cheer up! cheer up!" exclaimed Halsey. "You will be rested in the morning; it is all that confounded Japanese and Turkish study; all you need is a little muscular Christianity. Take a leaf out of Charles Kingley's book; buy a pair of boxing gloves, and I'll pummel faith, hope and charity into your poor little shriveled body."

The next morning Andrew Steele was delirious. It was with great trouble that his friend conveyed him home. On the morning after their arrival the sick man had a lucid interval. He regarded Halsey with wistful dry eyes. "It has come," he said. "I've broken down. If I could have held out three days longer—"
"You are right, old fellow," Halsey replied, cheerfully; "give up to it completely; let the disease do its worst, instead of trying to fight against it, and it will spend its force all the sooner."
"But I must send a supply to Ramoth Gilead," he murmured; "I promised to preach for them to-morrow, and there is no time to secure any one else."
"I will go for you," Halsey exclaimed, impulsively, "and read one of your sermons." His friend was sinking into unconsciousness again, but he grasped the idea partially and a smile of unutterable relief chased the torture from his face.
"You will take my place," he said in a tone of perfect confidence and profound gratitude; "you will do everything for me better than I could do for myself. I can endure anything now."

In a few moments he was quietly sleeping. "I must not betray his trust," Halsey said to himself, as he rummaged through his friend's desk; but the drawer which probably contained the sermons was locked, and he could not find the key. He glanced at his watch; he had barely time to catch the train. "Never mind," he thought; "I have a dozen of good ones by the ablest New York divines in my shorthand notebooks. I will read one or two of them."
Hastily throwing the note books and a few necessary articles into a hand bag, he set out for Ramoth Gilead. The station was merely a platform in the wilderness. The little settlement lay three miles away, around the spur of Mount Haystack. An elderly man was waiting upon the platform and shook hands with Halsey, remarking: "You are Mr. Steele, I s'pose. Dr. Corcoran has written us all so much about you, that the whole parish feel as if they knew you, though there isn't one of us that has ever set eyes on you."
Up to this moment all that Halsey had intended was to explain the situation, and to offer to supply his friend's place by reading some of the sermons with which his shorthand note book was abundantly supplied. Now the idea struck him that he might do his friend a good turn by actually personating him. The deacon had just shown him that this was possible. Why not do it? His self-esteem told him that he could make a favorable impression upon these country people, and that a report would be sent to Dr. Corcoran of the athletic appearance of the Rev. Andrew Steele, which would secure his friend the position he wished. Personally, the whole thing appeared to him in a ludicrous light. It would be another racy experience of life, and would make a good story for his Bohemian club, "The Free Lances." There was a risk of detection, but that only added fascination to the enterprise. His decision was made in a twinkling, and he shook hands with the deacon with quite a ministerial air.

"I am going to take you to our house," the deacon remarked, as he led Halsey to his horse and buckboard, which were hidden in a group of sycamores at a little distance from the track. "You see it rather tires the doctor to have company put up at the parsonage."
"I am glad of that," thought Halsey, wondering how he could have stood the two days' scrutiny of a doctor of divinity, adding aloud, "I am sure I shall enjoy myself with you, and I hope you will tell me something about your people, and what kind of preaching you like up here."
"Well, young man," the deacon replied, "we like the Gospel. Some of the oldest amongst us are fond of points of doctrine, but the most part are spiritual babes and have to be fed on milk. They can't stand stronger meat than free agency and free ordination. We are mostly plain people, too. We like plain living, plain dressing and plain speaking. We shan't take much stock in a man who quotes Shakespeare in his sermons or that wears jewelry, or that is over particular about his victuals."
Halsey stole a hand furtively within his linen duster and removed a diamond pad of which he was not a little vain. He had bought it at a bargain of an acquaintance who was obliged suddenly to raise a sum of money, and it had only been a perfectly safe investment of a little spare cash, but people here could not understand this, and it was just as well to suppress its glitter for the present. He was glad that he had chosen a black necktie that morning, and was still more thankful that he had not thrown away his last white one after wearing it to Mrs. Delano's german at Narragansett pier.

The good deacon was evidently pleased with the young man's deference in asking his opinion, and he gave it liberally. "We all think a sight of the old doctor," he said; "it's almost more than some of us can bear to think of his being set aside from this pulpit. The more you can show the people that you haven't come to take his place; that you look up to him as your father: in Israel; that you consider yourself put here only to stay up his hand as Aaron and Hur did those of Moses, the more you will please them. He will sit in his pulpit on Sunday, and of course you will ask him to make the longest prayer."

"All of them, all of them," Halsey exclaimed eagerly. He had not before considered the contingency of being obliged to address the Supreme Being in mock devotion, and he was glad to be relieved from this act of hypocrisy.
"I suppose you've not been ordained yet," the deacon continued, "and it will be the doctor's part to pronounce the benediction. Any other little attentions which you can show him will better your chance with this congregation." The deacon seemed to take it for granted that Halsey's supreme aim in life was to settle down as assistant preacher in this obscure town, and the young man laughed inwardly, scornfully reviling the notion; while he replied with the utmost deference, "I will endeavor to bear your advice in mind."
They passed scattering farms, and on one of these the deacon pointed out a man clad in russet blue overalls, faded blue shirt and flapping straw hat, who was engaged in breaking a yoke of oxen, as an important magnate in the church. "That," said he, "is Brother Sloeumbe. He was a Methodist before he joined our communion, and there's nothing now that he likes better than a rousing camp meeting. He's a hard worker, and generally sleeps through the morning service, but he gets considerably refreshed in mind by evening, and he can be depended upon to occupy the time if he's wanted. He's fond of a pretty lively kind of preaching, with a good deal of thrashing around. The doctor's getting too weak lunged for him. He likes to have a minister come out strong on everlasting punishment and the danger of falling from grace, and when a man preaches he wants him to preach all over."
Halsey made a mental memorandum to give to Brother Sloeumbe one of the strongest sermons he could find the next evening, and he listened eagerly for further suggestions.
"We've a sprinkling," said the deacon, "I'm thankful to say it's only a sprinkling, of folks who think more of culture than they do of religion. The Pearce girls rather lead here on matters of education. They read German and attend the summer school of philosophy at Concord. When they don't find fault with the minister we all take it for granted that he's some. It would be a grand thing if you could show them that you know as much as they do, but you don't look as if you were equal to it, and you needn't put yourself out for them. There are the Rogerses, who used to be Episcopalians; they'll be bothering you about a responsive exercise, but don't you give in; we've fit that for five years, it would cost too much to get it printed, it's too much trouble to get used to, and it looks like going over to Rome."
Halsey rubbed his forehead thoughtfully. Should he give the Misses Pearce one of Felix Adler's lectures before the Society of Ethical Culture or one of Joseph Cook's disquisitions! If the Rogers family held the traditions of Mother Church he thought he could slip in a selection from Cardinal McCloskey which would please them.
Their ride was over, and the deacon's wife greeted them cordially and welcomed them to a hot supper of fried chicken, "riz" biscuit and green tea. At the close of the repast the deacon remarked, "There's a prayer meeting appointed for to-night at our house. It isn't very well attended generally, but curiosity may bring some few out to see you."
"A prayer meeting! Consternation," was Halsey's thought. "What shall I do?" What he said was: "I suppose the doctor will come and lead the meeting."
"The doctor's a-coming," the deacon replied; "that's his buggy coming up the hill."
A well worn and dusty chaise stopped at the gate, a venerable man alighted, accompanied by a sprightly young lady, who sprang nimbly to the ground, making only a good natured pretense of accepting the assistance of the courteous old gentleman. Halsey was introduced at the door and received the good minister's rather formal and priestly benediction with a feeling something like that of shame. He turned for relief to the young lady, to whom the doctor motioned him with a wave of the hand and the rather unsatisfactory introduction, "My niece, Oriant." What was he to call her? Nothing for the present, since they were not upon a footing which would permit the use of her Christian name; but as he glanced at her bright attractive face with its mischievous smile, he felt that an intimacy which such a form of address would indicate with a bewitching little personage like this would do much to reconcile a man to even this desert solitude. She had a bright, intelligent countenance, made piquant remarks, was quick at repartee, and was as completely at home and unembarrassed in his society as a city belle. In chatting with her he quite forgot to prepare his thoughts for the coming ordeal of the prayer meeting. The people began to gather. The deacon, with the venerable Brother Sloeumbe—who had exchanged the overalls for his store clothes, but about whose fresh-talented cowhide boots the scent of the stable still lingered. The Pearce girls came attended by a lantern and a dog. They were very plain, and not at all young. Halsey thought discourteously that if the lantern meant brightly enough to display their faces the protection of the dog was entirely unnecessary. The deacon's wife brought in lamps and a few well thumbed hymn books. The deacon roused Halsey from his pleasant chat with the remark, "I guess all's come that's coming;" and the doctor, handing him a Bible, insisted that he should take charge of the meeting.

"Will some one select a hymn?" he asked in fear and trembling, and one of the Misses Pearce started "Sweet Hour of Prayer." At its close he read a chapter from the Gospels chosen quite at random. Having closed the Bible he called upon the doctor to lead in prayer, and endeavored during its slow progress to evolve some train of thought suitable to the occasion. Suddenly the story of Blind Bartimeus, which he had just read, suggested a sermon of Henry Ward Beecher's. His short hand report book was in his pocket, and fortunately, the notes were legible. Before the doctor had reached "Amen" he had selected two pages, had read them over twice, and was prepared to repeat them in an odd manner, with quite the air of giving utterance to something entirely his own. As he began he noticed that the eyes of the doctor's niece were fixed upon him as though in anticipation of keen enjoyment. "He is going to get into a muddle," they seemed to say; "my attention will add to his embarrassment, and I am going to be very nice and attentive."
Halsey spoke fluently and saw her air of amused superiority fade into one of blank wonder, which said plainer than any words, "I have made a mistaken estimate of this young man's abilities; he is not such a ninny as he looks."
After speaking for twenty minutes, Halsey apologized for occupying so much time, gave out another hymn and called upon the deacon and Brother Sloeumbe to fill the remaining minutes with prayer and exhortation.
At the close of the meeting the doctor shook hands with him, with genuine approbation. "The Lord has committed a great talent to your trust, my son," he said to him in the dusk, as Halsey helped him into his conveyance. "Go not out to the battle in your own strength. Remember the admonition of the King of Israel, 'Let not him that girdeth on his harness, boast himself as he that putteth it off.'" His niece was shyder than she had been before the meeting. Evidently she was impressed with Halsey's superior abilities, and the young man's heart swelled with elation. As he returned to the house the Misses Pearce were just leaving with their smoky lantern, and he could do no less than offer to see them home. The way was long and it was pitchy dark when he returned, but the eldest Miss Pearce had insisted on his availing himself of her lantern. "You can give it to me at church to-morrow," she said, "and you will surely fall into the brook without it." As there really seemed some probability of this, Halsey took the lantern, at the same time reproaching himself for his politeness. The deacon had told him so much of the plain and simple minded character of his hearers that he determined to avoid all flights of oratory, and to give his audience a sermon as full of common sense as could be found in his collection.

The American press generally appears to have lost conceit of Mark Twain. One reason for this change of feeling may be that Mark has grown rich. It is an unpardonable error for a humorist to be rich. Dr. Ramsay has had calls to Cleveland, Indianapolis, Detroit, and to some place in New Jersey, upon the expiration of his pastorate here. He will go to Detroit.

Commander Jackson, of Welch Post, G. A. R., desires to remind all, that Decoration day is not alone for old soldiers, but should be improved by every one, to show their gratitude to those brave defenders of their country who sleep their last sleep, by covering their graves with flowers, and observing the day as one of sacred memories, and not as a holiday.

The Empire mower and binder company of Akron Ohio, who have had their distributing point at Jackson, Mich., will remove to Ann Arbor, where they will occupy the proposed new addition to the T. & A. freight house, which they will use for storing their machine*. They will Bend out from there during the summer, from 1000 to 1200 machines.

Dr. C. Howell has a cane with a history. The knob is from a piece of wood picked up on the battle field of Cnicksamauga; the silver ferule joining the knob to the cane proper, is a piece of band from a rebel flag staff found at Mission Ridge. The stick is a piece of a rebel caisson knocked to pieces by a shell at the battle of Stone River; while the ferule on the bottom is a piece of fuse of a mortar fired into Atlanta by Sherman's artillery.

An affesing and interesting occurrence took place at the residence of Rev. Alalby Gelston, on east Washington-st, last Sunday afternoon. Rev. Dr. Eddy administered the sacrament of the Lord's Supper to Mr. Gelston, the officers of the Presbyterian church, and a few near neighbors. Mr. Gelston, who has been a minister of the gospel for fifty years, was stricken with paralysis nearly four years ago, since which time he has been a helpless invalid. He is now 88 years of age.

T. Y. Kayne, formerly manager of the Egan Imperial Truss company of this place, has come out with a new truss and has organized the "Chicago Truss company," June 1, he will go to Chicago for his headquarters. Dr. Kayne has been the manager of the Egan Imperial Truss company here for the past six years. He has done the principal part of the adjusting of trusses in the hospitals of both medical schools of the University of Michigan, and is considered one of the best practical experts in the treatment of hernia in the United States.

Tuesday afternoon, about 6 o'clock, the barn of Dave Crawford, colored, whose premises are near the railroad bridge east of town, was consumed with its contents including hay, grain, cutter, buggy, two stoves and other small articles. A dozen chickens were also cremated. The fire, department promptly responded, but through some one's blunder, they went a mile out of their way to reach the fire, and could do no good when they arrived. Cause of fire supposed to be a spark from passing train. Loss about $150.

Monday evening, the gasoline stove used for cooking to Gus Backus' restaurant, leaked in the main pipe, and while Backus was trying to correct the difficulty the pipe under the stove-top exploded, throwing the burning fluid about the kitchen, setting it on fire and severely burning one of the proprietor's hands. Mr. Backus carried the stove out door, and knocked the can containing the gasoline into the middle of next week with a base ball bat, thus preventing another explosion and probable serious damage. The fire in the kitchen was soon extinguished, and the stove is a thing of the past.

On account of inclement weather, the meeting of the Humane society, at fireman's hall last Friday night, was poorly attended. Several gentlemen, prominent in the work, were present, who elected Prof. B. E. Nichols temporary chairman. After a few moments discussion, it was decided to adjourn to meet Tuesday, May 29, at 7 p. m. sharp, and in the meantime, advertise the meeting thoroughly and endeavor to get the people interested in the movement. It is the desire of those who have identified themselves with the work, to perfect an organization as soon as possible; and they earnestly desire a full attendance at their next meeting.

Tuesday night, Wm. Ross, a carpenter, living on corner Depot-st and N. Main, retired about 10 o'clock, apparently as well as ever. About an hour later, Mrs. Ross, who was sleeping by his side, noticed that he was breathing hard, and tried to awaken him, but without success. Arousing the family, they repaired to the bedside, only to find the lifeless body of the husband and the father, he having passed away without a struggle. Physicians were summoned who pronounced it a case of heart disease, the deceased having been subject to it for some years. He leaves a wife and children. His age was 62 years.

The meeting of the Washtenaw Agricultural Society, in the court house Monday, was not well attended, owing to farmers being busy at home. The committee on printing was instructed to insert in premium list, premiums for a pony race, and also for farmers' double team race, premiums the society has never before given. Martin Clark will superintend the printing and soliciting. A resolution was passed to leave gates of fair ground open each week day, when the grounds were not in use, so that all subscribers to the fund to pay off the floating debt of the society could have full use of the track, when they desired, and the superintendent would issue driving tickets to those wishing them.

THE INK FIEND says: "Do not forget that it costs something to puff as well as advertise; never sponge upon a printer. It is the printer's ink that makes nine-tenths of our fortunes; it takes money to buy ink, type and paper, and yet, after all this, few are the thanks the printer gets. Daniel Webster was right when he said of the press: 'Small is the sum required to patronize a newspaper; amply rewarded is its patron. I care not how humble and unpretending is the gazette which he takes, it is next to impossible to fill it out without putting into it something that is worth the subscription price.'"
