

THE CHILDREN LAUGH.

FOURTEEN HUNDRED OF ANN ARBOR'S CHILDREN IX A PROCESSION.

How it was Done.—A Graphic Description of the Great March.—3,000 People in University Hall.—No Injuries.

Last Saturday evening the presence of a band on the streets and about 75 children in holiday attire on the court house lawn, made many inquire if the children's day festivities were yet in progress. But it was only for a little meeting the Democrats were to hold, to give in their acceptance to the Democratic program as mapped out in the St. Louis convention—origin in the White House. A large banner had been stretched from one tree to another, and it bore the names of Cleveland and Thurman. A platform was erected over the court house steps and fireworks were arranged on a small scale.

The band went to the campus and escorted the students' Democratic club down town to the meeting-place. A large crowd was gathered there. The students, when assembled on the lawn in front of the court house, proceeded to yell and to inquire, "What's the matter," etc., and they were equally emphatic in asserting many times, "Oh, he's all right," as though they had not the slightest doubt about it in the world.

The venerable and highly respected ex-Governor Alpheus Felch presided over the meeting during a part of the evening, and he made a speech in which he extolled the Democratic party throughout the whole of its history. He didn't even except the war period. He called it the "beautiful history."

Capt. Manly made a speech, in which he twitted the Republicans of some of their prophecies of terrible things which were to occur if the Democrats got into power. He had been told that if he trained with the Democratic party much longer he would lose his other arm; but the Democratic party had increased his left arm about $6 per month. He thought that Allen G. Thurman had, even at 75 years, more vigor and manhood than Blaine ever had.

Judge Joslyn introduced his son-in-law, Charles R. Whitman, and certified to his being a good Democrat, as he had had his political training in charge for 22 years. Charles made a telling speech. He graphically described the enthusiasm of the St. Louis Convention. He made the startling announcement that the Democratic party had a platform which means the same thing in all parts of the country. It is that of tariff reform. He discussed the question of taxation so far as it relates to the tariff, and pretty stoutly upheld free trade against protection.

As soon as Mr. Whitman finished the rain began to pour, and nine-tenths of the crowd left, but an enthusiastic student yelled a short time at a few umbrellas before the platform was cleared without any formal closing of the meeting.

COMMON COUNCIL AGAIN.

David Henning Wants to Bleed the City—Sidewalk, Hydrant and Electric Light Blatters.

A special meeting was held Monday evening. Mayor Beakes gave as a reason for calling a special meeting, that the claim of David Henning, of Chicago, against the city, had come up in a new form, and should be disposed of, that after transacting what miscellaneous business there was, he would state to the council what there was of the matter.

Aid. Allmendinger moved that the fence in front of the Gundert property on First-st. be set back. Carried.

By the same, that inasmuch as there is considerable trouble about line fences, that fence viewers be appointed to settle such disputes—one from each ward. The following persons were appointed: First ward, Conrad Krapf; Second ward, John Schmid; Third ward, Wm. J. Clark; Fourth ward, Dudley Loomis; Fifth ward, Newton Felch; Sixth ward, T. J. Keech.

Sidewalk committee recommends a walk to be built on east side of Fifth-st in front of property owned by Alfred Buchoz; also, in front of property owned by Mrs. Grace Fields east side same st.

Aid. Kearns offered resolution, that from and after this date the original grade of Main-st be established from North to Summit-sts. Mr. Kearns said he had grown tired of having this matter brought to him and wanted it settled one way or the other; that the council had not done as they agreed with Mr. Robison, and he was pressing the matter. Mayor Beakes said other residents of the ward were in favor of maintaining the grade where it was and he thought all should be heard on the question. It looked like taking a "snap judgment" to pass such a resolution.

Aid. Wines said he had rather pay Mr. Robison reasonable damages, if he had been damaged, rather than pay damages to those on the other side of the street, who would be damaged by lowering the grade. Aid. Miller moved that the council and all others interested, view the street Thursday afternoon at five o'clock, and they could then determine what should be done. Carried.

Alice M. Risdon asked permission to occupy a portion of Liberty-st with building material, during the erection of a house on corner of Fourth and Liberty-sts. Granted.

Petition from Michael Gauss to complete a frame building, 10x12, on east side of Liberty-st, work having been stopped by the fire marshal as the building was within the fire limits. The matter was finally left to the fire committee with power to act.

An ordinance was adopted requiring every physician who finds any contagious disease in the city to report the same immediately to the chairman of the board of health or mayor of the city; also if any midwife or other person knows of the death of any one who is not attended by a physician, they shall within 24 hours report such fact to the same authorities.

Aid. Martin said in reference to reducing water bills, that it could not be done unless the aldermen would be specific about just how long hydrants were defective.

In reference to electric light, Recorder Bach said the five lights in this ward were not lighted a few nights ago, until 10 o'clock. Aid. Herz, as chairman of the light committee, said he could not make reduction in the light bills unless he was informed by some one what lights and how long they had been out. Aid. O'Mara said the hydrants should be looked after, as many were rusted and could not be unscrewed. Recorder Bach then offered the following: That each alderman and the police of the city look after the electric lights and hydrants in their respective wards, and report any irregularities to the general fund committee. Carried.

By same, that a gong for hook and ladder truck be purchased, at a cost not to exceed $20. Carried.

Mayor Beakes then said in regard to the Henning matter, that Mr. Henning had told him that unless his claim for damages for the closing of State-st, and changing the grade of Pontiac-st near his property at the depot was no paid, he would bring suit against the city immediately; that he had placed it in the hands of an attorney, with instructions to push suit if something was not done; that the property had cost him $7,000, and that he was not going to lose it. He would compromise the matter if the council were willing, but something must be done.

Aldermen Wines, Ware, Allmendinger and City Attorney King seemed to think Mr. Henning had no valid claim against the city. The closing of State-st was done under the supervision and advice of such men as Judges Cooley and Kinne and J. F. Lawrence, and that there was no doubt but it was done in a legal manner. As to the Pontiac grade, Attorney King said as the grade had been established by authority of the council, that no damages could be had on that score. The question was left in the hands of Mr. King and the street committee for investigation.

THE BELLS RING, RING IN THE NEW.

At noon all the bells of the city rung, and the classes began to gather. At 1:15, the Huron cornet band filed through the campus to the sixth ward school, where all the pupils were found in double file awaiting marching orders. At the head of the ranks, two boys bore a white satin bannerette, inscribed, "Tappan School. No footsteps backwards." Misses Jewell, Wright and Corn well, teachers, assisted by Masters Gifford McFarland and Fred Cleaver, as marshals, preserved order and kept the 120 pupils in hand, until Major Soule, in regulation blue, brass buttons and spurs, gave the order "forward," when the march began, continuing through the campus, where impatiently waiting were the 230 pupils of the first ward school. As the sixth ward school, with their flying banners, and the band playing a lively air, drew near, it was hard to keep some of the first-ward children from following. The procession was a grand success, and the children were very happy. The march was held in the presence of a large crowd of spectators, and the children's day was a most enjoyable one. The procession ended at the depot, where the children were met by their parents and friends. The day was a most successful one, and the children were very happy.

from jumping out of their shoes from pure exuberance of spirits. They joined the procession at this point, headed by their color bearer, who bore the banner "First Ward School," in blue and yellow satin. Rab't Law and Earnest Curtis acted as marshals, and the teachers, Misses Plimpton, Eldrege, Robinson, and Trueblood, accompanied their school, in the procession.

At the high school, the eight grade fell into ranks in the rear of the first ward school, their position being designated by a black velvet bannerette, on which appeared in gold tinsel, the Roman characters "VIII." There were 39 of this grade, and were looked after by William Hadley and B. C. Sunderland, marshals, and Mrs. Campbell and Miss Ladd, teachers.

At the corner of Bowers and Division, headed by the city band, were the Fourth ward, St. Thomas and Fifth ward schools, which joined in the march in the order named. The Fourth ward supported a banner in the form of a large suspended shield in blue and gold, bearing on the obverse "Fourth ward. Upward and Onward," and on the reverse in large gilt figures, "88." Delmer Stoup and Frank Strickler acted as marshals, while Prof. Sutton and Misses Ailes, Perry, and Cole, and Mrs. Edson acted as file closers for the 200 children from their ward.

The St. Thomas School, looked after by Fr. Fierle, and marshals Fred. Rusey, Frank Seabolt, Theresa Kearns and Josie Healy, numbered 220 strong, and preceded the Fifth ward school, numbering 80, which was marshaled by Will Midgley and Samuel Lee, and teachers Misses Goodale and Millard. This school carried a black velvet bannerette, having inscribed thereon, "Fifth Ward School." "The little brown hand shall rule the world." Without pausing, the already marched up Division-st to Ann, down Ann to Fifth, where in a-xious expectation awaited the Second and Third ward schools, represented respectively by 260 and 200 pupils. The marshals accompanying the Second ward were Theodore Steiner and Jacob Bechler; teachers, Misses Mozart, Howard, Gundert and Taylor. The banner of this ward was of blue satin, having on its face simply "Ward II." The Third ward marched under a handsome banner, bearing the legend, "Third Ward." "Knowledge is our aim." The marshals of this ward were Wm. Frank and Wm. Copeland; teachers, Misses Boyd, Rose, Come, and Bock. This completed the turn-out, and flanked by Major Soule as chief marshal, and Will Watts and M. Sheehan, assistants, all on their fiery steeds of war, this vast procession of all dressed in holiday garb, nearly all carrying bouquets or small flags, with their waving banners, stepping quickly to the stirring notes of the two bands that led them, made an appearance as they filed onto and around court house square, that will never be forgotten. It was, undoubtedly, to the thousands of spectators who lined the streets and square, as thrilling a sight as was ever seen in this city. Decorations on Main-st were profuse, and to one looking up that street at the time the procession occupied it from Ann-st to Liberty, was a grand and imposing scene. The march was thence direct to University hall, by way of Division and Jefferson-sts. As the procession approached the main entrance, the bands stepped out of rank into lines on either side, and the children passed through, into the building, and up stairs to University hall. In a few moments that huge auditorium was filled, and the program of exercises was promptly taken up. After congregational singing by the schools, under the leadership of Prof. Renwick, accompanied by the Chequamegon orchestra, of the hymn "Now Thank We All Our God," Judge Harriman, president of the day, delivered the address of welcome and congratulation:

JUDGE HARRIMAN'S SPEECH.

We have seen many notable gatherings in this hall. We have seen the graduating classes of a great University assembled here in the presence of vast audiences of admiring friends, receive their diplomas, and with high hopes and brave hearts go forth to the battle of life. We have seen on this platform men known beyond the sea, senators, governors, judges of the most august judicial tribunal in the world, and in these seats the alumni of 60 years gathered from every part of the land to renew the memories of school days and tell each other of the experiences of the vanished year. But I believe that no audience ever assembled here so suggestive, as interesting, as inspiring, or half as beautiful as the audience which assembles here today!

The great poet of New England whose hair was white with the frost of adversity, whose heart was saddened by domestic calamity, when little children gathered around him exclaimed:

"Oh little feet, that such long years Must wander on through hopes and fears, Must ache and bleed beneath your load; I, nearer to the wayside Inn When toil and weariness are rest begin, Am weary thinking of your road."

None of us can have any such feeling in the presence of this great audience of the young, on this glorious day of one when all nature seems bunting with fresh and joyous life! The associations make us all feel young again. The thoughts of us who are older involuntarily run backward to those happy days when we were school children, and as we think of our experiences we cannot help looking forward to the experiences which await you. Who can tell but that there may be among these girls, a Florence Nightingale, a St. Cecilia, or some other of Mercy, or Sister of Charity, whose name is destined to be illustrious as that of any saint whose name glorifies the calendar of the greatest and most ancient Christian church? Who knows but that among these boys there may be future governors, senators or presidents? Who knows but what seated before them there may be the incumbent hero who is to do some signal service for mankind, or perhaps save his country in some great peril?

Not many years ago there was a poor, barefooted boy in Kentucky, wearing coarse, homespun clothes and a curious cap made by his mother out of a stocking, whose name today is a household word throughout the civilized world. He is honored as the emancipator of a race, and in the shadow of his mighty fame the legend even of Washington begins to grow dim. There is not a boy in this audience to-day whose future is not as promising as was that of Abraham Lincoln when he was a poor school-boy in Kentucky; while we have these hopes for the future of our children, we have that other hope that not one among them all will ever disgrace his name, his family or his country—that not one among them all will, by a vicious, intemperate or criminal life, wrick a kind father's hopes, or wreck a dear mother's heart!

Hail! then, children of our schools! We think much of our houses and lots, our bank stock, our stores and our farms; but we think more of you; you are infinitely dearer to us than any or all of these! It is for you that we build churches; it is for you that we build Universities, and it is for you and for love of you that fathers and mothers are able to bear under the burden of the toil and the sorrows of life! But the blessed thing about it all is that that Infinite friend and Father of us all has enabled the very least among you, by obedience and affection, to repay and more than repay all and more than all we can possibly do for you!

The hymn, "Angel of Peace," was then sung, which was followed by some pleas-

WIND AND WATER.

These Two Elements Cause Great Damage and Death.

Buildings Wrecked, Crops Destroyed and Persons Killed—Blizzing Forests Make Many Homeless People—Fearful Scenes.

MONTREAL, Can., June 7.—A wind-storm yesterday destroyed much valuable timber in the vicinity of this city, and many houses were blown down. At Compton the house of O. Perrault was demolished and Perrault's wife and five young children were instantly killed. Several other disasters were reported from various points.

TORONTO, Ont., June 8.—During a severe storm yesterday a brick school-house in Osgood township was blown down and twenty children were buried in the ruins. Some of them were fatally injured, and none escaped painful wounds.

WESTMINSTER, Vt., June 8.—A number of buildings were struck by lightning and destroyed during a storm here yesterday, among the number being the old Town Hall in Westminster, which was built in 1770.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., June 8.—Destructive forest fires are raging on the south shore of Conception Bay. At Colliers nine houses have been burned, at Harbor Grace Junction seven, and at Seal Cove seven. At Little Bay twenty-six families have been burned out, with one woman and two children burned to death.

KINGSBURY, N. Y., June 9.—A tornado yesterday wrecked several dwellings and barns in this place and killed many cattle.

GRASADA, Nicaragua, June 9.—A cyclone of great severity swept over this place on the night of the 2d inst. The heavy rains inundated the south portion of the city, destroying eighteen houses. The train due here on the morning of the 3d inst. jumped the track at Pooresnada. Five persons were killed and five were injured.

MARQUETTE, Mich., June 11.—Reports from thirteen places in the State show that the heavy rain-storm of Saturday did great damage. All the country from the Wisconsin line to the upper irange and the whole width of the peninsula suffered. Houses were undermined and swept away, culverts and bridges were destroyed, and miles of fences and sidewalks were ruined.

FORT YATES, D. T., June 11.—A fierce rain-storm passed over this place Saturday, and many houses were blown down or unroofed. Shelling, an Indian chief, his son and several settlers were killed.

DBLCTH, Minn., June 12.—The recent severe rains have caused the greatest flood ever known in Northern Minnesota. Along the banks of logging streams tributary to the St. Louis river millions of acres of land are overflowed. Sixty-five families have been forced to leave their homes at Crookston by the rise of Red Lake river, and many lost their effects. At Cloquet only the tops of houses are visible. Throughout the entire length of the dalles of the St. Louis river, famed as one of the choice bits of scenery of the country, the river is a mass of soapy froth, and is higher by ten feet than ever before known.

DESPERATE BURGLARS.

Daring Attempt to Rob an Express Car Near Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, June 9.—Between Delhi and this city last night four robbers were discovered on a Cincinnati, Indianapolis & Chicago train, on the platform of the express car. The robbers began firing on baggage-master Joe Ketchum and Express Messenger J. H. Zimmerman, the former being fatally shot. One of the bandits attempted to climb on the engine, but was knocked down by blows from a monkey-wrench, and then rolled off the tender while the train was at full speed. While the train was stopping another of the desperadoes was seen to jump off and disappear in the darkness, but when it came to a standstill no trace could be found of the other desperadoes. Mounted posses are scouring the country, and the capture of the men is not improbable.

The Emperor Wore.

BERLIN, June 13.—The Emperor's disease has taken another turn, and the doctors now admit that he is in an almost hopeless condition. The change was first made public yesterday morning, when it was announced that the difficulty in swallowing which had troubled the Emperor had increased.

Double Wedding at Mentor.

CLEVELAND, O., June 13.—At the Garfield homestead at Mentor yesterday afternoon Mollie Garfield was married to J. Stanley Brown, formerly President Garfield's private secretary, and her brother Harry married Bell Mason, eldest daughter of Hon. James Mason, famous as a railroad lawyer.

A Youthful Incendiarist.

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 13.—Andrew Howard, aged 14 years, confessed yesterday to starting the great fire in this city February 1, by which $1,000,000 worth of property belonging to Barnes & Hengerer, dry-goods dealers, was destroyed. He said he did it because he was angry with a floor-walker.

Drowned While Bathing.

OTTAWA, Ont., June 12.—Tom and Harry Folding and Miss Jessie Keefe, grand children and daughter of T. C. Keefer, of this city, president of the American Society of Civil Engineers, were drowned yesterday while bathing.

Death of Sheridan's Mother.

SOMERSET, O., June 13.—Mrs. Mary Sheridan, widow of the late John Sheridan, and the mother of General Philip H. Sheridan, died at her home in this place yesterday afternoon, aged 67 years and 2 months.

Preparing for Bloodshed.

GAINESVILLE, Tex., June 13.—Five hundred cowboys of the Chickasaw nation are in a state of rebellion over the payment of a cattle tax, and the Government troops at Fort Reno are preparing to take the field.

Poor But Honest.

Charlie Sullivan is a poor but honest fish lad, who, while walking down Washington street, found a wallet containing checks and money to the value of several hundred dollars. Although almost destitute, he returned it to its owner, Messrs. A. P. IN ITS last number, the Argus tried to excuse itself in the liquor bond business by declaring that on their face all the liquor bonds are straight enough; that is, every surety swears he is a resident of the city. But this doesn't excuse the Argus for failing to give the real facts about that liquor bond case, which it hasn't done yet. The Argus told its readers that it was merely a question of liberal or close construction of the law, when it knew it was nothing of the kind. The question was, Can a man who is not a resident of the city, & a surety on the bond of one of our city saloon-keepers. The law says distinctly that he cannot. It was admitted openly by Mr. Ortman that one of the sureties is not a resident of Ann Arbor, and the city attorney told the council that the bond could not be legal under such a circumstance. Yet the editor of the Argus, who sat in the mayor's chair, is on record as voting to accept that bond. And then he failed to give his readers the true facts in the case, so as to cover up his vote as much as possible. Even if it should turn out that the surety is a resident of the city, it wouldn't leave the mayor and Argus in any better situation, because of the fact that at the time the mayor voted and the Argus suppressed the facts, they supposed he was not a resident. Hence the mayor voted to defy the law, and the Argus kept quiet about it.

HAI IN ORSOFT?

The Democratic party is in for anything to win; that is plain. It cares more for the offices than for consistency. In the Tilden campaign it took both sides of the money question, so much so that Sasby wrote:

"There was a doctor which had a bark which wood either physic or puke, according to the strip of the tree up or down. Like to this doctor is Tilden and Hendricks. Read their letters up, and they are hard money physic; read them down, and they are soft money vomick."

That about described the Democratic method of treating the tariff question in 1884, and last week the National Democratic convention decided to try a "ateaddle" again on the tariff question in the campaign of 1888.

The action of the convention is said by some democrats to be a fair and honorable compromise between two wings of the party. It is a most absurd thing. We are accustomed to seeing men of widely diverging opinions uniting in a party on one all-important question, or what they believe to be such. It is right and consistent often that a party should ignore certain questions on which it is not united, providing it has another question of greater weight, on which it can be united. But for a party to effect a compromise and to "straddle" on the question which it confesses to be the most important is to confess its inability to carry out any plan of government in regard to that question. It acknowledges weakness. It takes away all excuse for the political organization.

Of course, if any party were to declare boldly for free trade, it would certainly lose the election. The Democrats know this, and so their platform looks toward both protection and free trade, just as in 1876 it was hard and soft on the money question. But if a party cannot win by declaring for free trade, it ought not to if it declares for both free trade and protection. A party has no claim to success unless it acts in a manly way.

WRY NOT IN THE IMT. STATES?

Mrs. Chant, when in Ann Arbor, told of the "sweaters" in London who, although well-to-do, many of them, grind the seamstresses down to the last farthing and often practice great barbarities upon the poor women, calling it "discipline." Mrs. Chant is prominent in London charitable work. She has personally investigated these abuses; one London preacher, Stopford Brooke, has thundered against the "sweater" system. There can be no doubt of the accuracy of her description. These "sweaters," or middlemen, often compel the women to stand motionless one whole day waiting for their pay. Mrs. Chant, at one time, stood motionless as long as she could without fainting, and it was three and one-half hours—a fact which calls to mind the great philanthropist, John Howard, who often would voluntarily undergo the miseries imposed upon prisoners, so that he could describe them as accurately as possible. These poor women often, under the fear of not getting their wretchedly small earnings, stand hours in one position, and after weary, anxious toil. African slavery is pleasant and cheerful contrasted with the life of the average sewing-women in London.

Oh, well, that may be true, but we don't have anything so bad in the United States, says some self-satisfied person. The "sweater" system, however, is said to be well established in New York city. In Minneapolis women are making shirts at 6 cents each; pants at 12 cents a pair and overalls at 5 cents. The girls recently asked for 9 cents a piece for shirts, and a large public meeting was held in their interests. At this meeting, a Mrs. C. O. Van Cleve, a lady who has engaged in philanthropic work in Minneapolis, said:

"I have worked a great deal among girls who are known as outcasts and I have found they became such because they could not earn decent wages. It was ruin or starve. I visited one woman that I found in a dead faint over a sewing machine, and all that I found in the house to eat was a little corn meal that she made into gruel for her sick husband and two little children. She was starving herself for them; she was making shirts for six cents apiece and of course could not earn enough to live on."

"Let me tell you that girls who work out are frequently tempted to do wrong. They generally have to live in small, dingy rooms, and have but few comforts, with poor food, with ten hours of hard work every day. It becomes like a treadmill. I know of six girls that live in one room, living on bread, cheese and crackers, and hardly enough of that. Such a way of living cannot help but become demoralizing. They lose their self-respect; then come temptations, and they frequently yield and go down to ruin."

Why should not the deep poverty of London settle down in the cities of this country? Can any one give a good reason? As a matter of fact, it is coming fast. This is a newer country, but as the country becomes older, we may expect that the same degree of poverty will be seen in our large cities that is seen in London. Why not? Let us not evade this question. Protection cannot prevent this poverty. Free trade cannot. It is stupidity or something worse which claims that either one can.

HOW HATH THE NIGHTY FALLEK?

And has it come to this? Tom Applegate, the stanch; Applegate, the war horse of the Republican party; the defender of the faith; the writer of editorials against free trade; the old member of the Republican state central committee; actually wants free trade in type! We know from sad experience that the price of type has gone up, while the prices for job work and printing generally are going down; hence, the publisher and job printer must suffer loss or cut wages. But we never supposed that editor Applegate of the Adrian Times would break out for free trade as follows, as he did in his last number:

"A dispatch to the daily papers announces that the type foundry of the United States are going to form a 'trust.' They have long had a sort of 'combine,' which has proved operous enough; now they propose to make the thing a little harder to bear. The announcement is also made that the price of type is to be at once advanced, but practically this was done more than ten days ago."

There are probably not to exceed a dozen type founding establishments in the United States, but the effect of the foundation of their 'trust' will be felt by every person who purchases reading matter in this country.

"Now, what member of congress will imortalize himself, and earn the lasting thanks of the whole people, by introducing a bill, it need not be more than ten lines, taking the duty off type, and thus protect the people against the greed of a dozen cormorants who propose to still further increase their robber gains. The type foundry's pusillanimous little 'trust' should be promptly smashed."

"Which of all the patriotic members of congress will be the first to catch the speaker's eye, for the introduction of a little bill 'Bmashingit?'"

Mr. Applegate is mistaken in saying that every person who purchases reading matter in this country will feel the effect. It will make no difference to them, unless publishers combine. There is not likely to be any such combination, because there are too many publishers. Will Mr. Applegate charge more for his paper or for his printing than he would without this 'trust'? Of course not; competition will keep him down to the old prices.

The protectionist doctrine must be applicable to the type founder if to any one. How can Mr. Applegate ask that there be protection for all industries except that of making type? Steel rail men get a higher price for steel than they would without the tariff, and some people don't like it any better than Mr. Applegate likes the tariff on type; but the theory of protection is that the benefits on the whole more than balance the disadvantage of paying higher prices. The editor of the Adrian Times should stick to his logic and not "kick" just because protection seems to be bearing on him a little severely.

The printer working for weekly wages can readily see in this tariff on type something which tends to lower his wages. However much the tariff keeps wages up, as is claimed, it doesn't help the printer apparently.

ALPHEUS FELCH, a remarkably well-preserved man at 82 years, certainly gives dignity and aid by his mere approval to anything which he espouses; but with all due deference to his white hairs and ripe experience, we must suggest that his speech of Saturday evening cannot help the Democratic party much. We can understand how many people who are desirous of tariff reform or of free trade, may think they can bring about their cherished ideas sooner by working with the Democratic party; but how any man, of northern training, no matter what his party affiliations have been, can glorify the record of the Democratic party without making any exception, even of the "peace convention," is a mystery. The Republicans are blamed for mentioning the past record of the Democratic party, and yet old Democrats will applaud the entire record as though there had never been anything treasonable in it. History will contradict Mr. Felch, and will place a stigma upon the Democratic party for its cowardly and treasonable utterances just when our armies most needed sturdy support.

THE REGISTER, in the hope of encouraging home industry (our subscription list included), will print a story next week, or the week following, written by a young Ann Arbor girl, and entitled, "Nellie's Uncle." It is a tender story of a tender Junior's first love, and incidentally some student life is thrown in, with comments on how girls study. We shall leave our readers to judge whether the young miss has correctly interpreted a young U. of M. Junior's feelings and actions in such an interesting episode. As to the young writer's opinion of the way girl's study, we shall be equally discreet and not venture an opinion, for fear of offending the young women in the U. of M. and of injuring the cause of co-education.

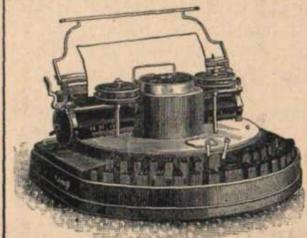

THE Supreme court have again made a big gash in the new liquor law by deciding that brewers can become bondsmen for saloon-keepers. They say: "The right to sign a bond cannot be made to depend upon the business in which one is engaged."

Ira F. Colby, of Stony Creek, died June 3. He was in his seventy-ninth year, and had been a resident here 50 years.

Bro. Bennett, of the Pinckney Dispatch, is in a way of becoming famous, as he has been elected captain of a base ball nine.

Mrs. Albert Forsyth, a prominent lady of Ypsilanti, died last Thursday, living only one and one-half hours after submitting to an operation for the removal of a tumor. She was treasurer of the Ladies' relief corps.

The June meeting of the Saline Farmers' club was held at Delos Townsend's on Friday, June 8. The day was fine and the attendance good. The club is emphatically opposed to patronizing irresponsible agents and peddlers. In fact the practice, by our local dealers, of sending their agents through the country is becoming a nuisance. The question as to whether it was more profitable to buy stock to feed than to raise it was discussed. The next meeting will be held at E. C. Warner's, near Ypsilanti, July 27.

ALUM BAKING POWDERS.

Declared Adulterated Food and their Sale Illegal.

The result of a trial just concluded at Canton, N. Y., before Judge Kellogg, will have a salutary effect in checking the sale of one class of adulterated food. Two men named Moon and Akerliff, were arrested for selling adulterated baking powder in violation of the State food adulteration act. The indictment was for both selling baking powders that were inferior, adulterated and injurious to health by reason of being made from alum, and under pretense that they were a wholesome cream of tartar baking powder. A stubborn defense was made, the claim being set up that baking powders were not articles of food and that the powders the defendants were selling, which was known as Gillet's, was a standard article of trade, and that alum baking powders inferior to it, like Davis' and others, were being sold by other dealers in the same town without complaint. The Court held that baking powders were articles of food within the meaning of the law, and the jury found the defendants guilty of all the charges. The case has attracted much attention from being the first brought under the State Food Adulteration Act against dealers in alum baking powders. The result of the trial is to class such baking powders as adulterated articles of food, and to make their sale illegal. There are many alum baking powders put up in cans, under some name or brand, in addition to those sold in bulk, the sale of all of which, cautious dealers will probably be unwilling to continue.

POVERTY AND CHRISTIANITY.

A Correspondent Thinks the church is Against Reform—Christ's Philosophy opposed to our Competition for a Bare Livelihood—Against Monopoly.

To the Editor of THE REGISTER:

SIR:—I read your article last week on Mrs. Chant, you very correctly point out that poverty is an insuperable obstacle in the way of moral advancement, and pertinently ask the church, "What are you going to do about it?"

I beg to submit the answer that the visible organized church occupies its traditional position toward this vital question, viz: 'Opposition to reform.'

I think the Rev. Mr. Davis, of Detroit, may be taken as fairly representing organized Christianity in his views on the question. Congregationalism stands midway between the so-called orthodox and liberal sects, and I think he represents the most popular type of preacher now prevalent in churches. On Sunday, May 27, in the Congregational church in this city, he took as the main part of his subject, "Money-making," indicating his position toward poverty by distinctly approving of the system now prevailing, in which there must be many who must be poor through no fault of their own.

In the sermon, while he was oblivious to many facts and much of accepted political economy, yet he showed much research and a good deal of acute thought; saw a possible danger and a real disease, but prescribed an impossible remedy. He started out with a very inaccurate statement; forgetting that money is only a medium of exchange, he described vividly how it is omnipotent,—it feeds the hungry, clothes the naked, houses the poor, builds bridges, digs tunnels, etc., etc. In no exact sense can this be true, for when any of these things are done it is by means of man's labor applied to natural opportunities, and the difference is very wide in ethical considerations.

He was by no means blind to the evils of the love of money; he spoke of its materializing influence upon the rich, its vulgarizing effect upon the middle class, and its brutalizing the poor; he pointed out the hypnotizing power of wealth in a moral sense, and after instancing the growth of the wealth of this country asked, "Can the church stand its prosperity?" Finally he exhorted his hearers to hold money with a loose grasp, to desire it only as a means to do good, and to keep the love of it subordinate to the love of God.

This sounds very good, but on close examination it proves to be a sanctioning approval of our present system, giving advice impossible to follow regarding our individual conduct; for to live in civilization and to follow his exhortation is a trifle harder than to fly in the air: the latter may be done by aid of a balloon, but when you go up you don't know where you are going, or where or how you will come down.

The only law that is infallible in making money, is, "get all you can and hold fast to it." Now suppose we start out to live up to this reverend gentleman's advice, and are fully determined to love money less than God, and hold it with a loose hand. We will not obey the steel rule of commerce, "beat your neighbor when you can," so we will ask of our neighbors nothing but their just obligations toward us, while our conscience and the rest of the world require from us the fulfillment not only of our just, but our legal obligations, and those who are in business know how impossible it would be to make both ends meet under such conditions. If a man holds his money today with anything but the very tightest grip, poverty is the inevitable result, and under existing circumstances following Mr. Davis' advice we ascend rapidly into the clouds of spiritual exaltation, but the descent into poverty is sure and much more dangerous than any descent ever made by an aeronaut; in fact one has very slim chances of ending anywhere else than in the poor house or death by privation; because the Almighty Dollar's gospel of "every man for himself and the devil take the hindmost" is supreme. Jesus himself did not have and could not have wealth, and a perfectly honest man cannot hold wealth while he lives among the miserable dishonest millions in the world, and if he does not hold wealth with a firm hand the devil of poverty will surely catch him with a terrible grip.

As well might the advice be given to half the competitors in a race,—do not run so fast; you are hurting yourselves; don't think more of the race than you do of your health,—knowing that the others would not slack up even though some might, and the only chance of getting a place in the race is to strain every muscle to the fullest extent.

In the matter of desiring money only to do good, I'm reminded of the hero of a yellow-covered novel, named Dick Turpin, of the olden times in England, who robbed the rich and gave to the poor; but today the rich have the knack of shifting their expenses to the poor, so that in making anything more than a bare living one must rob the poor instead of the rich. But never mind, we will give it to the missionaries in Africa—forgetting that we make ten heathen to one that is converted by our money. There was one who loved justice, who said "Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice."

To use Carlyle's image, modern society is like a pot of tamed Egyptian vipers, each struggling to get to the top. The strong get there and stay there, having no burdens to sustain, but the weak cannot get there because of the very weight of those above.

Will not the honest, in and out of the church, arise in their might and say these things shall not be! God has made ample provision for the wants of all men during their life, and the competitive system that forces men to prey off each other is the result of man's law. God ordained that man should wrestle with nature for the supply of his wants, but modern law says that man must struggle with each other, and how deadly is that struggle, witness Mrs. Chant, who told not one-half as woful a tale as New York yields every night, and our other large cities are not much behind.

It may be said that our competitive system is the parent of industry, invention and economy. To some extent it has been but to a much greater extent it has brought forth vice, want, misery, ignorance, dishonesty and crime untold.

Will some one please show me anything that admits of our competitive social system, in the Sermon on the Mount, the Mosaic law, the Lord's prayer, or indeed any of the teachings of Jesus. It can't be done.

Therefore, for a remedy, let natural opportunities be free to all men, none of God's gifts to the race being appropriated by a few persons for their exclusive benefit. If the community gives land a value, let the community appropriate that value. In short, tax all land to its full rental value, then all men will have the result of their labor and that only. Thus may men live as brothers, obeying God's laws, giving money its due place and holding it with a loose hand. Thus prosperity may and will increase infinitely without any danger whatever to the community or the church. Yours, R. W. Harrison.

The game of ball between the University and Athletic clubs, Friday, resulted in an easy victory for the former, the score standing 9 to 2.

Dr. G. A. Hendricks has tendered his resignation.

McBride, of the Argonaut staff, spent the first of the week with his parents near Owosso.

A game of ball between the editors of the Argonaut and Chronicle is to be one of the attractions next week.

Prof. J. M. Schaeberle left for Washington, Saturday evening. He will be absent for some days and on his return, will leave for California, where he enters the Lick observatory.

The board of editors of the Argonaut for next year will consist of J. E. Talley, '89, H. N. Wmchell, '89, Miss I. M. Andrews, '89, Miss Bertha Pritchard, '91. These ladies are the first ever elected editors of the Argonaut.

Dr. Watling was sick at his home in Ypsilanti, last week, and Dr. Hoff acted as demonstrator in his place in the operating room.

There is a general complaint among the boys, that examinations are unusually severe this year.

Wirt Groom, law '85, will be married next Tuesday evening, at Geneva, N. Y., to Miss Augusta Hill. Their home will be West Point, Va.

At a meeting of the class of '89, in the department of "Regular medicine," the following resolutions were read and adopted:

WHEREAS, We have learned with regret that

Dr. George A. Hendricks has tendered his resignation as instructor in anatomy and associate surgeon to the clinic and

WHEREAS, We deem it fitting that we indicate our high opinion touching his eminent qualities as a man and teacher, be it

Resolved, That we, the medical class of '89 of the University of Michigan, declare his resignation a loss to the University as a whole, to ourselves and to the classes that shall follow us; and that we hereby express our unqualified commendation of his marked ability as an operator and instructor; and esteem of his many estimable qualities as a scholar and courteous gentleman.

CLEVELAND CHOSEN.

Benominated for President by the Democratic Convention.

Allen G. Thurman, of Ohio, Received the Nomination for Vice-President.

The Platform Adopted—The National Committee.

CLEVELAND AXD THURMAN. ST. LOUIS, June 7.—The second day's session of the Democratic National convention was called to order by Temporary Chairman White at 10:25 a. m.

Mr. Mallory, of Florida, sent this resolution to the secretary: Resolved, That this convention approves of and hereby indorses the principles of the tariff reform initiated by President Cleveland.

Under the rules this resolution was referred. Congressman P. A. Collins, of Massachusetts and H. H. Ingraham, of New York, were announced as permanent chairman and secretary respectively.

A rule was adopted that no State shall change its vote until the call of all the States has been completed.

General Collins returned thanks to the convention for the honor bestowed on him and promised to fulfill the duties imposed on him to the utmost ability.

The Democratic creed was not penned by Jefferson for a section or a class of the people, but for all time.

General Collins' address was received with vociferous applause.

Congressman Tim Campbell, of New York, offered a resolution expressing sympathy for General Sheridan, which was unanimously adopted.

The convention decided to listen to a speech from Mrs. Memewether, of St. Louis, on behalf of women suffrage.

Mr. Hensell, of Pennsylvania, moved that the roll of the States and Territories be called and the names of candidates for President and Vice-President be placed in nomination.

"I greet you, my countrymen, with fraternal regards. In your presence I bow to the majesty of the people.

"All unnecessary taxation is unjust taxation. It is repugnant to the creed of Democracy that by such taxation the cost of the necessities of life should be unjustly increased.

"The money now lying idle in the Federal Treasury resulting from superfluous taxation amounts to more than one hundred and twenty-five millions.

"Our established domestic industries and enterprises are not and need not be endangered by the reduction and correction of the burdens of taxation.

"The chairman announced that Edward Cooper, of New York, dissented from part of the platform, with this exception: the committee was unanimous.

Mr. Tarpey, of California, then arose and placed in nomination for Vice-President Hon. John G. Thompson, of Ohio.

Alabama, C. A. Semple; Arkansas, S. R. Hughes; California, M. Tarpey; Colorado, S. Thomas; Connecticut, W. F. Burdick; Delaware, Dr. James A. Draper; Florida, Samuel Cooper; Georgia, James H. directed by it. He proposed to move that the committee be instructed to report to the body at a given time.

ST. LOUIS, June 8.—The 60th Centennial reassembled at 10:35 yesterday morning.

"The Democratic party of the United States in National Convention assembled," renews the pledge of its fidelity to the Democratic platform, and reaffirms the platform adopted by its representatives in the convention of 1881.

"The Democratic party welcome an exacting scrutiny of the administration of the executive powers of the Republic.

"It has reversed the improvident and unwise policy of the Republic in its foreign relations, and has reclaimed from corporations and syndicates alien and domestic and restored to the people nearly one hundred millions of valuable property.

"While carefully guarding the interests to the principles of justice and equity, and out more for pensions and bounties to the soldiers and sailors of the Republic than was ever before during an equal period.

"The exclusion from our shores of Chinese laborers has been effectively secured under the provision of the act of Congress which has been postponed by the action of a Republican majority in the Senate.

"The Republican party, controlling the Senate and resisting both houses of Congress, have secured their hotel accommodations, with the exception of those from Mississippi, North Carolina, Texas, Utah and the District of Columbia.

Inherited Diseases.

No fact of nature is more pregnant with awful meaning than the fact of the inheritance of disease.

Modern science, which has illuminated so many dark corners of nature, has shed a new light on the mysterious words of the Scriptures.

The important and far-reaching practical deductions from such facts are obvious to reflecting minds.

The dead-letter office received 4 808.000 letters last year, or about a third of which owners were discovered.

THE MAN OF ALMONACID.

(CONCLUDED.)

"I say, Clent!" I began, "have you been out? What is it? What does it all mean?"

Such a nervous fellow as he was! He jumped up, dropping his spoon into his plate with a clatter. "What does what mean?" he stuttered.

"These bonfires in the streets, to be sure! The sight is a most singular one! You ought to be out viewing it!"

He sat down at once. "Oh, the bonfires!" he said, resuming his meal. "The people are keeping St. Anthony's eve, that is all. It is customary here to do it in this way. You know St. Anthony is always represented with a fire by his side."

"I thought that it was something of that kind," I answered, following his example. "Will you come out with me presently and have a look at the town? The sightseers are orderly enough, though to judge from the stir at the gendarmerie the occasion is a special one."

"Is there a stir there?" he asked, pausing with his spoon half way to his mouth.

"Some civil guards, six or eight I dare say, and an officer were dismounting at the door as I passed. Apparently they had just come in."

"What! Did you notice what the officer was like?" Clent asked in a curious tone, but I was busy with my dinner.

"Yes," I answered, carelessly, "he had a hare lip. I remarked it because he had a good look at me as I passed. No? You do not mean to say that you have done already?"

He did not answer, and I looked up to learn the reason. I read something in his pale face and trembling lips which chilled me. The man was suddenly afraid. And not afraid merely. He was in such terror that the very instinct of concealment had passed from him. As his distended eyes met mine he tried to speak, but no sound came. Yet I knew what he would have said. His lips formed, "Can I trust you?"

"Can you trust me?" I repeated, trembling a little myself, and my mouth growing dry; "well, I hope so, I think so, Clent; I do, indeed. What is it, my good fellow?" for his very ears seemed to rise from his head, so intently was he listening for some sound.

"Whathave you done? What do you fear?" I whispered.

"Fear?" he muttered, with his hand uplifted, "death, man! Hush! Come to my room. I obeyed his gesture as much as his words, and leaving the parlor we crept silently thither. When we were closeted together he stood facing me, and began to speak in breathless haste. "I did you a good turn the other day, Mr. Lynton; help me now. I am a Carlist—a spy! A man sent here to try the fidelity of the troops. Of late I have been suspected. Now I am sure I am betrayed. The punishment is death! In a few minutes they will be here."

"But what—what can I do for you?" I exclaimed in horror. No one seeing the man could doubt his danger, or at least his belief in it. "Why do you not escape while there is time?" I cried impatiently.

"Time! There is no time!" he answered with an oath of despair. "The house is watched. I dare not leave it. But you can do something for me. You can give me your passport, and change the rooms with me. We are much alike. Take my name for a few hours, nay, a few minutes. It will save my life—my life, sir! And for you—you know our minister! Yes? Then you will be in no danger."

"But," I said faintly—the man's distress was terrible to witness, and it all came so abruptly upon me—"the Spanish police are sometimes hasty and— He flinched as if I had struck him. A fresh bit of trembling seized him. He turned from me with a curse and flung himself face downward on the bed.

I had hesitated before. I am not a bold man, and I had heard strange tales of summary justice done by the police. But here the risk seemed so little; the man's condition was so pitiable.

"Go!" I said harshly, after a brief fight with myself. "I will save you if I can. You are an Englishman when all is said and done. But let us lose no time. You know best what must be done."

He sprang to his feet. At once he had all his wits about him. In a couple of minutes I had taken possession of his room, he of mine. With feverish expressions of gratitude he pocketed the passport I gave him. He dressed me in his long ulster and deer stalker hat; in which I have no doubt that I was like enough to him to pass for him in Spanish eyes. And all this he did with wonderful method, as if he had thought out the details before. I crossed my mind once that he had. His last step was to draw from his mattress two long rolls neatly covered with canvas. "They are papers," he said, pausing to listen, and looking doubtfully at them the while. "Lists of men. And men's lives they will cost if they are found," he added, with excitement. "Yet I dare not take them with me. I dare not. I shall get away by your help, but I shall be stopped more than once, and if these are found on me they will make it all of no use."

He was so reluctant, so sincerely reluctant, as I could see, to leave the papers, despite the risk he would run if he took them, yes, and so very nearly ready to run that risk, that I felt for the first time a sense of real sympathy for him. "Can we not hide them somewhere?" I suggested.

"No!" he answered bitterly, "they will leave no stone unturned here. And with that he thrust the papers back into the mattress—my mattress now.

"Why do you not destroy them?" I asked.

"There is no time," he answered sullenly. Then, moved by the force of habit, I think, he sat down on the bed precisely over them.

I wondered—at his answer first, then at another thing. "Why do they not come?" I said querulously. "Are you sure that they intend to come at all—that you have not made a fool of me for nothing?"

His face grew bright a moment and then fell again. "No," he replied; "they set watch on this house as soon as they came into the town, and are only waiting now until a time when they may be sure that I am at home. That is all." I found out afterward that he was perfectly right in this.

So we sat in dreary expectation, waiting in that little whitewashed room for the clang of musket butts and tramp of feet that should tell us the crisis was at hand. The caadU burned dimly, the air was heavy with the pungent odor that rose from the brasero. My eye fell upon his empty easel and the sight carried me back to a time, days before as it seemed instead of hours, when I had still regarded him in the light of a problem to be solved. "And are you an artist?" I asked abruptly. I was glad to break the silence.

"Oh, yes," he said with apathy. "I paint a little."

"And that Spagnoletto—the St. Christopher? Is it really an original?"

"It is the original. You were right," he replied. "It was the gift of a great monastery to the cause."

I whistled. "I think it is a pity," I said, with a jealous eye to the mattress on which he was sitting. The fancy that that price-leas Ribera carelessly rolled up might be receiving with each instant some irremediable hurt was a dreadful thought to have on one's mind. When my traveling clock in the next room tinkled nine times, I could bear it no longer. "Look here!" I said, rising, "I am going out. If you are right, I shall be arrested, and there will be an end of it. If not, I shall come back and there will be an end of this foolery. Jock! lie there; good dog!" I added, pointing to the bed. And I strode to the door. Of course I was still disguised in Clent's ulster and cap.

He leaped up and caught me by the arm. "Por Dios!" he cried, clinging to me. "You are going to betray me! You are English, and you can give me up!"

"Man alive!" I answered furiously, the fellow's distrust showed the black spot in him so plainly; "if I wish to betray you, I need only stay here and tell the civil guards who you are!"

He shrunk back at that; I suppose he saw its truth, and I went out, passing down the gallery and the stairs to the outer door. As I opened this and, meeting the wind, stepped into the darkness of the entrance, before which the embers of a fire still glowed faintly, I confess that I felt nervous—very nervous. With each step that I took I looked for a challenge or a violent hand upon my shoulder; yet I sprang aside when the lightest of touches fell on my sleeve.

"It is I, Pablo! Go no further!" hissed a voice in my ear. "The street is guarded, tenor. I have risked much to save you, but I can do no more. If you get through is it Almonacid?"

"Si, hombre, si," I whispered. Then clutching in my turn the stranger as he was gliding from me I continued: "But stay, amigo. Tell me what I can do?"

"I do not know. Have you no safe hiding place inside?" he answered, cautiously. "Ha! what is that?" It was the sound of approach of his feet. As soon as this was certain, "Let him go!" he cried, angrily, trying to tear himself from my grasp. "It is like you! You would destroy me to do yourself no good!"

I released him. While he fell back into the darkness I retreated, cursing my folly the while, into the archway and tried to efface myself against the wall. I was caught in a trap.

The position was not a pleasant one. Tramp! tramp!—the feet came on so steadily and surely until half a dozen forms stood between me and the dying fire outside. A whispered word followed, then a flashing open of lanterns, a momentary starting back of all parties as a mustached guard discovered me, and with the ringing out of a word of command half a dozen carbines came to the present in front of my breast.

"Is this our man?" cried the leader. He did not wait for an answer, but added, imperiously, "Your name, senor?"

"I am English, is not that sufficient for you? Have a care what you are doing," I answered.

"Enough; enter. Conduct us to your room," was his order.

I went in. On the veranda, at the door of No. 2, stood Clent, holding a candle above his head, so that his face was in shadow while the light fell on as. He was pale, as I saw a moment later, but he played his part to admiration. "What is this?" he asked, with the superior air which Englishmen permit themselves abroad. "What does this mean?"

"Your name, sir!" cried the leader, by way of answer.

"My name is Rouse Lynton, and I am an artist and an Englishman," he replied, haughtily. "Here is my passport, and I ask you again, what this means?"

The officer cast a single glance at the paper and returned it. "It is in order," he said politely. "I have made inquiries and know about you, senor. Do not let me disturb you. We are merely making a capture."

"But he, too, is English," put in Clent, looking at me in well feigned surprise.

"Ciertoamente! but criminal."

"Good heavens! I do not believe it; it cannot be. Is there nothing," he added, addressing me with concern, "that I can do for you? Send a telegram, or anything of that kind?"

"Yes," I cried eagerly, "telegram to the English minister at Madrid."

"It shall be done, and at once. Keep up your heart."

"Spare your pains, sir," interposed the leader with a grim smile; "you will do no good. And besides, the office is closed."

"Then I will have it opened," cried Clent hotly, acting the English traveler to the life, and with a gesture of encouragement he rattled noisily away.

"Your room is No. 1," dictated the officer, addressing me. "Enter."

I did so. Jock sprang up, and with his coat bristling about his neck, growled ominously at my companions. I told him to lie down.

"It is the other Englishman's dog," said one of the guards.

"Is that so?" replied the officer, glancing sharply at me. "Then how comes it in this room? But to work! Search!"

In five minutes their skillful fingers had overhauled the luggage which was lying about. They found nothing to the purpose.

"The bed," was the next command.

I do not know what seized upon me then; whether it was sheer longing to give vent to my excitement that carried me away, or the memory of Clent's words, "And men's lives they will cost," that inspired me with some spirit that certainly was not my own. I cannot say. Only I know that when the order "Now the bed" was given I sprang between it and the searchers.

"No!" I shouted, waving them back. "Wait!"

If I had in dim notion of delaying them and gaining time the attempt was as vain as it was foolish.

"Madman!" cried the leader, dropping the mask, and suddenly beside himself with rage; "stand back, Juan, Felipe, do your duty!"

I flung one from me another! I hail a mo men's awful consciousness of a carbine leveled at my chest, of a finger pressing on the trigger of a sheathed sword that struck up the weapon a second before it exploded, of the officer shouting in a voice of thunder above the tumult, "Noqui! Despues!" and then a strong arm flung me forcibly against the wall. I saw Jock leap forward, his teeth bared—saw some one fire hastily—saw the dog fall bleeding by the bed. The room grew thick with smoke.

"Oh, my God!" I cried, and covered my face. I was trembling in every limb. Some one not ungenerously drew the dog aside. Instinctively I knelt down and tried to stanch the blood. "Poor Jock!"

Presently—in the meantime I was taking no heed of their doings—I heard a cry of satisfaction and looked up. They had discovered the two rolls and bending over them as they lay on the bed were unfastening the wrappers. I went and looked on apathetically. I waited no longer with any feeling that it concerned me to see the muster rolls, and loyal autographs, and promises that were to cost so dearly, of which Clent had spoken. But what was this? The Spagnoletto! Oh, yes! I understood how that came to be hero. But these—these pictures which followed! Could it be that all the subscriptions took the form of paintings? Or what was this delicate Muro, fit for a royal gallery, doing here? And that possible Murillo? That portrait which might have been by Velasquez? That San Sebastian that was at least by a pupil of Caravaggio? My head reeled. I passed my hand over my eyes and looked again. It was not a delusion. There, the canvases lay one on the other, their edges strangely rough, their corners frayed—canvases worth a king's ransom.

The other roll was full of odds and ends, valueless, but equally strange; picture backs and rough pieces of cloth and opened letters. Among these last I saw, with scarcely any added word, envelopes and letters directed to myself.

"I do not understand," I said feebly, looking from one guard to another. They had all turned to me to see how I took their discoveries. "He told me that he was a Carlist—a spy sent here to bribe the troops. But what are these doing here? I do not understand."

"Who told you—and what?" cried the leader.

"Clent! Clent told me—and then I stopped dazed and bewildered. Two or three bearded men surrounded his face in a fashion made notable by a celebrated journalist, some years deceased. The animal (the monkey) was very careful of his beard and never wet it while drinking. He would hallow his hand into the form of a cup, dip it into and fill it with water, and then drink from his hand slowly, while with one of his other hands he would carefully press his beard out of the way of contact with any drops of water that might fall.

Another odd species was the white throated monkey, still another, "Humboldt's" monkey, discovered by that great explorer, and sometimes called the "zero" monkey, because of the curly wool upon its head. Other monkeys had tails so sensitive that when their owners were passing rapidly through the forests, dragging their tails behind them, they could tell instantly when their caudal appendages came into contact with anything good to eat. The same tails were very powerful, and their owners could hook them over a limb, and, hanging by that support, go fast asleep. If a monkey were shot when in this position he would not fall; he would simply continue to cling there until decomposition set in. The natives shoot monkeys with poisoned arrows, which they blow out of rag hollow reeds. When the wounded monkey becomes unconscious from the effects of the poison, the hunter runs up and puts some salt into his mouth, after securing him, and the salt being an antidote for the poison, the hunter gets a live monkey as good as new.

The lecturer described in detail the species of the South American monkey known as the "howlers." These monkeys travel in groups and they are very jealous of each other's abilities as howlers. Each group has a champion howler, and when two groups meet one howler from each sits opposite the other, surrounded by the rest, and then each tries to outhowl the other, the respective groups joining in the chorus. This din can be heard at a distance of from two to three miles, and the terror of a huntsman who goes to sleep in the forest and is suddenly awakened by a group of howlers in the trees above him can be better imagined than described. Monkeys like bananas better than anything else, although they are fond of green corn and the breadfruit, which grows abundantly in the luxuriant forests of South America.—New York Times.

MONKEYS IN THE WILDS.

Characteristics of the American Species. Bearded Monkeys—"Howlers."

Professor Albert S. Bickmore's morning lecture at the American Museum of Natural History the other day was on "Monkeys of the New World." The word monkey, he said, had been derived from manakin or monakin, and meant "unfortunate little fellow." In South America monkeys are to be found on and south of a line between the City of Mexico and Vera Cruz, but none above that line. The American monkeys have a broad nose, and their nostrils turn outward and downward. A peculiar species was the tete, only 5 inches high, which has two more teeth than any monkey in Africa. Another was the bearded monkey, so named because of a beard which surrounded his face in a fashion made notable by a celebrated journalist, some years deceased. The animal (the monkey) was very careful of his beard and never wet it while drinking. He would hallow his hand into the form of a cup, dip it into and fill it with water, and then drink from his hand slowly, while with one of his other hands he would carefully press his beard out of the way of contact with any drops of water that might fall.

Street Costumes in Manila.

People arise early in the morning here, retire late at night and do the major portion of their sleeping during the middle of the day when the sun is hot and it is not pleasant to work. Long before daylight the streets are noisy with moving vehicles of all sorts and crowds of bare legged, bare armed natives of all sizes and both sexes, hurry hither and thither on multifarious errands connected with the housekeeping and mercantile needs of the day. Their costume consists, solely, as to the men, of a pair of very thin muslin pants rolled up as close to the hips as possible, and when a shirt is worn it hangs outside the pants; the front is thrown open and the sleeves are rolled up to the shoulders. Occasionally a hat is worn, which is shaped like a wash basin, and is made of finished bamboo strips or sheets of tortoise shell.

The women wear gaily colored calico skirts, which reach just below the knees, and a long skirt of calico or muslin. These articles comprise their entire apparel. In the throng may be seen an occasional Mestizo or native lady, with her long trained and gorgeously colored skirt, with black silk or satin apron, worn behind instead of in front, and the pretty waist with flowing lace trimmed sleeves, and rich, fluffylace handkerchief, in which her head, with its wreath of glossy jet black hair, rests like the petal of a lily. The hair of the average Mestizo, or native lady, is the most attractive feature of her person. It is always as black as night, usually reaches far below her waist and grows most luxuriantly. She washes it every morning, or at least, every other morning, and after the ablution anoints it liberally with cocoanut oil, which is almost as cheap as dirt. You can get half a gallon of it for fifteen cts at retail. Many a native girl trots along the streets in these early morning groups barefooted and barearmed, with about twenty-five cents worth of clothes on her and a mass of glossy black tresses hanging almost to her heels, that would be considered worth a fortune by an American belle.

Fire Escape for School Buildings.

A novel system of fire escape for school buildings has been suggested by Capt. Reagan, assistant chief of the Boston fire department, which upon its face looks as if it might prove of considerable practical value. His idea is to utilize the large yard area to be found about nearly every school house in Boston and erect an ornamental iron tower a short distance from the building.

This tower would contain a broad iron staircase leading from the top to the ground. From each floor of the school house a covered bridge would lead into the tower, and the door leading from the school room to the bridge would be kept unlocked during school hours. The rooms on each floor would connect with each other, and in case of fire the scholars could have unobstructed access to the bridge. By such an arrangement, whenever a fire broke out there would always be an egress open, and even if matters became serious, the iron tower and bridges would remain unharmed. The plan appears to be perfectly feasible, and the expense would, it is said, be much more than what is laid out on the present fire escapes. And we should think the same plan might be adopted for factories and other buildings where numbers of persons are employed on the different floors of the building.—Fire and Water.

Papillon (Clarke's extract of flax) Skin Cure, like many other inestimable benefits to mankind, was discovered by accident. The proprietor, engaged in the preparation of certain paint, from time to time noticed the effect of working in the pulp vats on the skin. It there was present any cutaneous eruptions, warts, blemishes or scrofulous symptoms, all disappeared as if by magic. After experimenting ten years, it has become a scientific fact and a priceless boon to the human race. From giving away a few bottles, the demand has increased until the sale for the past two years amounts to 1,032,000 bottles. Large bottles only $1.00, for sale by Eberbach & Son.

THE WANDERER.

Love comes back to an empty heart,
Or a being clothed in love's sweet guise;
Love bids sorrow and tears depart;
The dear old light in the tender eyes
Like a swift, bright sunbeam hurls here
And warns the life that was cold and drear.

The old, old love of the days of yore!
Is it the same? Oh, Love, confess,
Is it not deeper than e'er before?
To cheer, to guide and forever bless?
Answer me, Love; turn not away;
Speak to me; say you have come to stay.

Who can be sure of Love's replies,
Hiding behind his myriad masks?
Yet to my soul this dear disguise
Savors of Heaven; 'tis all it asks.
Swift, sweet tears to the eyelids start;
Love comes back to an empty heart.

Next Sunday will be Children's Sunday at the Unitarian church. There will be flowers and music, recitations by the children and addresses by Mr. and Mrs. Sunderland. Opportunity to unite with the church will be offered to any desiring to do so.

The 11th annual reunion of the Ann Arbor high school alumni association will be held in High School hall Friday evening, June 22. The oration is by Earl Dow, class of '87, Bellefontain, O., and the poem by Miss Susie Whedon, of Ann Arbor.

A double entertainment will be given in the 5th ward M. E. chapel on Friday evening of this week, beginning at 7:30 o'clock. The first part of the program will consist of a concert, given by the "G Clef Club" and the second part will consist of ice cream and cake.

Saturday evening the High School Delta Epsilon Society, will give a varied program consisting of an oration, reading, recitations, essays, and music. The question: Resolved, that the success of the prohibition of the liquor traffic demands a third party, will be discussed.

Tuesday night, the contractors of mason work of the city notified all union men who have heretofore worked but nine hours a day, that they must work ten hours or quit. Nearly all went to work on that time and as a consequence they are out of the union, as that organization recognizes only nine hours as a day's work. Saturdays are excepted from the ten hour rule.

The Ann Arbor Dramatic club will play "Robert Emmet" at the opera house tomorrow (Friday) night. This company is made up of home talent, and is first-class in every respect. Hearing will sing some of his popular songs, and all who attend may be sure of passing a pleasant evening. The proceeds will go to the St. Thomas school. Music by the Chequamegon. A matinee at 2:30 P. M. Saturday.

Bronson Howard's letter to the N. Y. Tribune, which was given in THE REGISTER has been widely reprinted and endorsed. Prof. Hennequin has received several letters from literary men urging him to publish his lectures on dramatic art and to write a treatise on Dramatic Construction.

The Rev. Dr. Huntington, of Grace church, New York city, will preach both morning and evening next Sunday in St. Andrew's church. The evening sermon is the last in the series this year before Hobart Guild. Grace church at Dr. Huntington's request has given $1,200 to the library of Hobart Guild.

Dr. and Mrs. McLachlan leave Saturday for an extended trip in the east, to return sometime in July. The Dr. will read a paper before the Canadian Institute of Homoeopathy, at London, Ont., and also one before the American Institute of Homoeopathy, at Niagara Falls, in the week following June 25th.

H. Matthews has a horse that can count. He is used on a cart delivering meat. When not being used he stands quietly at a post in front of the market, untied. As soon as the court-house bell strikes for noon he starts for the barn, whether there is anyone around or not, and waits there till some one comes and feeds him.

A pleasant meeting of the Womea's foreign missionary society of the M. E. church was held Thursday afternoon and evening, at Mrs. Neal's. There was a recitation by Mrs. Hendrickson, and one by Mrs. Lowry. Mrs. Douglas read a very suggestive paper called "Thanksgiving Ann." Mrs. Trueblood gave two scenes from "As you like it."

The vacant store next east of Randall's on Huron-st has been rented to Joseph TooSni of the "Soo" who will put in fruits, confectionery, etc. Joe has been at the Franklin house five months, having his eyes treated, they having been badly burned in a fire at the 'Soo,' and he says if he has got to stay here all summer he might as well be doing something.

Last Sunday, Mrs. Sunderland was very unexpectedly obliged to step into the Unitarian pulpit and preach after only very short time for preparation. Until late Saturday night a young professor from Olivet college was expected to preach, but he failed to come. Mrs. Sunderland gave a remarkable discourse suggested by the wonderful children's procession of the day previous, and the death of James Freeman Clarke.

Last Saturday, Gustave Proutlain, in company with some other parties in another boat, was fishing on Independence lake. His companions do not know the cause of the accident, but hearing Proutlain cry out, they saw his boat overturning, and rowing hastily to the spot, found that he had gone down like lead and was lying on the bottom in fifteen feet of water. He was immediately brought to the surface but life was extinct. He was a single man.

At the close of Mrs. Ormiston Chant's lecture on "Philanthropic Work in London," at the Unitarian Church, a collection was taken up for a charity in which she is interested. When the baskets came back a lady's gold bracelet was found in one of them. Mrs. Chant was much touched by the gift. She will pay over the value of the bracelet to the charity for which it was contributed, and keep the gift itself as one of the most prized mementos of her American trip.

The commencement concert will be held in University hall on Wednesday evening, June 27, at 7:30 o'clock. This is the same evening on which the Senate reception will be given, but at so early an hour as to give all ample time to attend the reception also. The concert will be very attractive this year, presenting as it does for the first time, the cantata of "The Passing of Summer," the words and music both being by members of the graduating class, Miss Elsie Jones having written the words, and Ross G. Cole the music.

E. W. Vandorn, of Owosso, while on his way to Ypsilanti, Tuesday, to receive treatment at the mineral springs there, was taken with a serious attack of his disease, Sciatic paralysis, at the T. & A. depot, in Ann Arbor, and it was thought would die before he could be taken to a hotel. He was conveyed to the Germania house. Dr. Smith injected morphine into the system, and the patient who was suffering terrible agonies, was soon easier. If well enough he will be conveyed to Ypsilanti tomorrow by carriage.

Capsule Works Burned.

Last Sunday morning another, and probably the most disastrous fire of the year in some respects, occurred in the second ward, in the burning of the extensive capsule works of Geo. W. Bullis & Co. This firm had been in business here not quite a year and had built up a large trade. The building, a large wooden one, was owned by the Arbor Arbor Improvement company association, of which Col. H. S. Dean is president. The fire was discovered about 1 a. m., and the alarm given. When the fire department reached the premises, the fire had a good start, with a strong wind blowing from the south. In a few moments four streams were playing on the blazing pile and by hard persistent work the flames were extinguished, saving the east half of the building. The fire was undoubtedly the work of an incendiary, as there are very suspicious circumstances pointing that way. The capsule company's loss will be about $12,000, insured for $7,500. The building was valued at $4,500, insured for $3,000. All books and papers in the office were saved. Col. Dean says if the capsule company wishes to go on with their business, the Improvement company will immediately erect a new building.

About 30 hands, including 20 girls, are thrown out of employment, and it is earnestly hoped that the business will be resumed.

The work of the firemen on the north side of the building, who were compelled to fight the fire in the midst of a thick suffocating smoke, to say nothing of the intense heat thrown there by the south wind, was heroic, and would be a credit to any fire department.

"Nothing to Equal It."

I have been selling Simmons Liver Regulator for the past six years. My customers pronounce it the best ever used. One of my customers whose health was in a wretched condition from a very bad and stubborn case of Dyspepsia, used the Regulator and was entirely cured. I am using it myself for Torpid Liver, caused by close confinement. I find nothing to equal it and highly recommend its use.

Respectfully,
