

WASHTENAW CO. FAIR.

OPENING OF THE FORTIETH ANNUAL FAIR OF THE COUNTY AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

Wet Weather as Usual—Better Entries than Ever Before—High Class of Stock—Children's Day.

They both opened up for regular business yesterday—the county fair and the heavens above. It rained Tuesday and it rained yesterday but this did not keep the exhibitors from bringing their exhibits and entering them. All day Tuesday, droves of horses, herds of cattle, loads of sheep, hogs, chickens, vegetables and every imaginable thing were driven in from the country. Our merchants transferred the most valuable portion of their stock to the fair grounds. The men running the peanut and candy stands, photograph gallery, whys, preparing for the opening. The officers of the society were on hand early and worked late, trying to accommodate everybody at the same time. The entries in the stock department were so large that new stalls had to be provided. When the entries closed at the secretary's office, over 1,500 exhibits were in place. The number is not quite as large it has been sometimes, but the class and quality of the exhibits is far above any before.

Yesterday was children's day and notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, they were all there, and a goodly crowd of adults besides. The children ran and scampered over the large grounds examining and enjoying everything. The trick bicyclic riding of Clarence H. Smith, of Detroit, commanded their attention. The children's pony race was exciting, Bert Holmes winning the race, and Master Schmid second. In the first heat the Holmes pony shied, throwing its rider but not injuring him.

The points of interest in the grounds may be the first place to visit is

FLORAL HALL.

The building is handsome and draped in profusion giving it a decorated appearance. The exhibits of our merchants in this department are large.

In the north wing the Allmendinger organ company show a fine piano and several organs of their own make. I. M. Long & Co. have their space filled with well executed portraits in crayon and india ink; J. P. Hoffman & Co. show a fine line of pianos, organs and musical merchandise. The space occupied by A. L. Noble, the clothier, is crowded with hats, suits, overcoats, children's clothing, hats, caps, umbrellas, canes, gent's furnishing goods and in fact everything in that line.

In the center of the hall a large pyramid of plants and flowers arises, at the base of which H. J. Brown has a tasty exhibit of plain holiday goods. In the east wing the exhibitors are Gehring & Muehlig who show a fine line of Garland stoves and ranges, gas fixtures and a handsome cherry and tile mantle valued at $100. The Davis and Domestic sewing machines are exhibited by operators, the space being covered with specimens of the work done on these machines. J. T. Jacobs & Co. have a fine showing of clothing, hats, furnishing goods and trunks, their space being patriotically decorated with U. S. flags. Wines & Worden have a handsome display of fine carpets and rugs, tastily arranged.

In the south wing the fine art and fancy work exhibit occupies one side and is the choicest collection ever made. The exhibit of Miss Mattie Harriman is the largest and attracts the most attention. She has 20 paintings, all good and artistic. Among the most noticeable are a landscape, marine view, a large screen with three panels, and an old straw hat filled with apples. Miss Miley shows a case of fine fanny work. A hand-painted refrigerator set exhibited by Mrs. S. Hendrickson, the work of her daughter, is much admired. The space is filled with pretty crazy quilts, sofa pillows, lambrequins and fancy work of all description. The other side is occupied by Alvin Wilsey who has an exhibit of pianos, organs, and Standard sewing machines. E. Krueger exhibiting the space above with a fine exhibit of the photographer's art.

The west wing is occupied on one side by Koch & Henne, who show a complete parlor, bedroom and dining room filled with choice and appropriate furniture. Eberbach & Co. show a line of drugs, patent medicines and pharmaceutical appliances. Lew H. Clements makes a good showing of musical instruments.

CARRIAGES, ETC.

In the shed outside, Wagner Bros. show four fine, light single carriages, and two handsome surreys. Ferguson has on exhibition a complete line of road and speed carts of his manufacture. The Central City Road Cart company has on exhibition a handsome combination road and sulkey.

AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS.

In this department the largest display is made by John Finnegan who shows everything in that line used by the farmer. M. Staebler has an exhibit in this department which includes an improved hay press in operation.

STOCK.

In this department the horse, sheep and hog stalls are filled, but the largest and best exhibit is in the show of cattle, which in quality is said to be better than those shown at the state fair.

In Short-Horns, A. A. Wood, of Saline, exhibits five head; P. E. Galpin, of Superior, three; C. O. Warner, of Saline, two; Richard Nowland, of Ann Arbor; eight; J. E. Wood, of Saline, six; H. T. Phelps, of Dexter, eight; W. E. Boyden, of Webster, seven.

In Holsteins, Mills Bros., of Pittsfield, show 17 head of fine stock. In Jerseys, the only exhibitors are F. Stabler, a bull, and N. B. Covert, a herd.

In Galloways, S. O. Tubbs, of Delhi Mills, has a bull and four head of cattle. In grades, the entries are numerous and the class is filled.

CATTLE PREMIUMS AWARDED.

Yesterday afternoon, Prof. Johnson, of the Agricultural college, awarded the blue and red ribbons to such cattle as were entitled to them. His decisions gave perfect satisfaction and he examined the cattle carefully for points before making the awards. The fortunate owners who received first premiums were as follows:

Short Horns: Herd, W. E. Boyden, Delhi; Bull three years old, W. E. Boyden, Delhi; Bull two years old, A. A. Wood, Saline; Bull one year old, C. R. Parsons, Saline; Bull calf, W. E. Boyden, Delhi; Cow four years old, W. E. Boyden, Delhi; Cow three years old, P. E. Galpin, Superior; Heifer two years old, Justis Nixon, Ann Arbor; Heifer calf, Richard Nowland, Ann Arbor; Bull with get, C. C. Warner, Saline; Cow with get, Richard Nowland, Ann Arbor.

Holsteins: Mills Bros., of Pittsfield, secured first premium on their herd, bull two years old, bull one year old, cow four years old, cow three years old, heifer two years old, heifer one year old, heifer calf, bull with get, and cow with get.

Galloways: S. O. Tubbs, of Delhi, secured first premium on bull two years old, cow four years old, and heifer calf.

Jerseys: F. Stabler received second premium on bull, although without competition. N. B. Covert secured on cow with calf four days old, cow first and calf second; heifer two years old with calf four hours old, both first; heifer calf six months old and heifer one year old, both first premiums.

Fat Cattle: Richard Nowland, of Ann Arbor, received first premium on three head of fat cattle and on fat calf.

Fair Notes.

The exhibits in the fruit and vegetable departments were fine and large.

N. A. Dunning, of Detroit, spoke in behalf of the Greenbackers. The Prohibition speakers did not put in appearance.

Every Republican in the city is, or ought to be on the fair grounds listening to congressman Allen and Thos. McVeigh speak.

The Democratic speakers to-morrow are Senator McDonald and Willard Stearns, of Adrian.

Death of Mrs. L. J. Liesemer.

It is with regret that we announce the death of Mrs. L. J. Liesemer, wife of the editor of the Washtenaw Post, who passed away early last evening at the residence on east Washington-st. The lady has been very ill for several weeks past with typhoid fever, but for a few days past has been gradually failing. The death will be greatly felt by a family of friends, as Mrs. Liesemer was the woman of more than ordinary ability. She was an accomplished English and German writer, and to her efforts during the past nine years, much of the success of the Post is due. She was but 29 years old and until her marriage was pre-occupied of the Hudson schools. The funeral will take place Saturday morning at 10:30 from the residence.

An Heir Found.

In April 1873, Thomas Harvey, a resident of Manchester, died at Clinton, leaving no will but was possessed of an estate valued at $4,556.66. No heirs could be found and in 1883 the amount was paid over to the county treasurer. Last April a petition for the amount was filed with Judge Harriman by Elizabeth Walker Susannah Theobald, of Northdown, Isle of Thanet, England, asking that the amount be paid to her, as she claimed to be a cousin of the deceased man, his nearest living relative and his sole surviving heir at law.

Judge Harriman instituted a thorough investigation of the case and became convinced that the woman's claim to the estate was valid and that she was his heir. He thereupon issued an order last Friday, to the county treasurer ordering him to pay over the amount, $4,556.66, less one-half of one per cent., to Lucius Lilly, the woman's agent at Teicoumsh. The amount has not been paid over and the prosecuting attorney has notified deputy treasurer Brehm that he should appeal the case to the circuit court and endeavor to save the amount for the state where it will remain, in case of no claims proven. The money was used several years ago by the county to buy up some of the county jail bonds which are now held in the county safe to represent the estate.

Common Council Meeting.

The common council held a special meeting Monday evening, all the members being present except Ald. Spokes, O'Mara and Barker. The special business of the meeting was to consider what action the city should take in regard to the suit for damages which David Henning, of Chicago, has brought against the city, in the U. S. court at Detroit. The subject was thoroughly discussed and the members were unanimous in the belief that he could collect nothing. As the case goes to the foot of the court docket, the court being now two years behind on the docket, it was deemed advisable to place the defence of the city in charge of a special attorney as there probably will be several changes in the regular city attorneyship before the case comes up for trial. The matter was therefore referred to the committee on mixed laws and facts, with instructions to secure Judge E. D. Kinne or J. F. Lawrence, or both of them, to take charge of the defence of the city. The council then adjourned.

ABSALOM'S SOUL-IDEAL.

My name is Absalom Bigger. I reside at Dugan's Ridge. I am 38 years of age, and am by occupation a school teacher; I also practice law, and during the vacation season assist in the conduct of my father's grocery store.

I was 37 years of age, and still in the single state, when there came to obtain summer board at my father's residence a young gentleman who was much interested in composite photography; by which I mean that intricate and interesting art whereby through the superimposition of one solar image upon another a total product is obtained, which is an entity of itself, but yet contains the characteristics of all the individuals.

As I engaged with this gentleman in experimentation in this singular and interesting art, I became strongly impressed with an idea which grew upon me more and more, and which I was fully convinced was fraught with the utmost interest to the human race.

It is easy to see a man's taste by an examination of the pictures he gathers about him. An intellectual man will make a collection of intellectual faces; a merely beauty-loving man will be apt to collect photographs of those whose charms appeal rather to the eye; and if it be true that you may judge a man by his friends, then to some extent you may judge a man's preferences by the photographs of his friends.

Apply this simple thought to the question of selection of an individual from the opposite sex, and the result is most startling; indeed, most electrifying. In a dozen pictures of ladies a gentleman will hardly find one which altogether pleases him, though each may be charming in one or more particulars. The unfortunate man is left undecided. His mind is confused. But, upon the other hand, were it possible for him to behold all these faces blended into one which should possess all the desirable features of the group, there would no longer be any hesitation at all. He would be pleased at once. In other words, he would have found his ideal.

Very well. My theory, elaborated into a formula after long and patient thought, was this: Let a man determine what qualities he prefers in his prospective mate; let him secure a number of portraits of individuals in whom these qualities are known to predominate, or a number of pictures in which these qualities are plainly manifest; from these, by the process of composite photography, have a single negative made. The print from this will be the ideal—or, as I prefer to call it, the soul-ideal. I proposed to take out letters-patent upon this simple but inestimably valuable process, which I designated as "Mr. Absalom Bigger's Patent Process for the Soul Ideal." Subsequent events, however, convinced me that a little further experimentation was desirable before making formal application therefor.

I resolved to try the working of the formula in my own case. I had already a number of photographs and other pictures in my possession, including some of different footlight favorites, one of Mary, Queen of Scots, one of the Empress Catharina, and one of Lydia Pinkham. I was always a great admirer of the sweet face of Lydia Pinkham. To this collection I now added several other pictures, including one of a meek, lovely milkmaid. I am disposed to favor a certain tranquility of disposition in women.

Being in favor of women's rarest dower, beauty, in my ideal I put in several actresses, operatic stars, then, not wishing to neglect the intellectual features, I threw in George Eliot and three noted lecturers on woman's suffrage; being disposed to admire a noble bearing in womankind, I put in Mary, Queen of Scots, the Empress Catharina and Marie Antoinette; fearing the ideal would be too dark, I added a picture of my mother's Swedish hired girl, whom I knew to be a very light blonde, albeit possessed of a cast in one eye; to these I added the meek milkmaid and Lydia Pinkham as a sort of safeguard.

When I gazed upon the composite photograph which represented the sum of these pictures I must say I was surprised, not to say startled. Yet that this was my soul-ideal there could not be any doubt. There is no escaping the conclusions of logical reasoning. Moreover, I reflected, there is nothing like being rational and practical in the business of getting married; indeed, nothing is so confusing as sentiment in matters of the heart, and it is very much to be guarded against at all times.

Having now obtained my soul-ideal, it remained only to put into effect the simpler part of the process, and find the lady who resembled the picture.

After considerable looking around among the friends of my people in the neighborhood I at last decided upon Miss Ella Perkins, a young lady of about my own age. I explained to her my theory, assured her without doubt that she was my soul-ideal, and, in short, proved this to her so logically and conclusively that within three weeks thereafter we were joined in the holy bonds of wedlock.

I have stated that I have not yet taken out letters patent upon my soul-ideal process. I have been married now for a trifle over a year, but within that time events have transpired which have led me to question whether I was absolutely careful as I should have been in the elaboration of my own soul-ideal.

At times I think I trace too strong an impress element in the disposition of my wife, and then again I hear I put in too much of the woman's suffrage factor, while in other periods I have observed a certain freedom, not to say volubility, of speech, which I can attribute to nothing but a too great preponderance of the actress element. Then again my wife requires that I should do all the milking, both morning and evening, and I often think, as I trip down to the bars with my pail upon my arm, that it would have been better if I had put more of the meek and lowly milkmaid into my ideal.

I would not, however, be understood as saying that there is anything wrong with my process for obtaining the soul-ideal. I claim that if that process be completed, so that a man can logically and mathematically select from among the totality of living women that woman who is exactly suited to his character and personality, there will have been conferred upon humanity a boon, the present lack of which makes countless thousands mourn. I am satisfied that my theory is correct in principle. I only say that I am not quite ready to call it complete enough for patenting; and I must add that pending its final elaboration and perfecting, matrimony remains, it seems to me, a course attended with no little logical certainty that it should be ventured upon only with the greatest carefulness, or indeed, I might say, with utmost prayerfulness.—Pittsburg Telegraph.

Come to the bridal chamber, Death! Come to the mother, when she feels For the first time, her first-born's breath, And thou art terrible!

The untimely death which annually carries off thousands of human beings in the prime of youth, is indeed terrible. The first approach of consumption is insidious, and the sufferer himself is the most unconscious of its approach. One of the most alarming symptoms of this dread disease is, in fact, the ineradicable hope, which lurks in the heart of the victim, preventing him from taking timely steps to arrest the malady. That it can be arrested in its earlier stages is beyond question, as there are hundreds of well-authenticated cases where Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has effected a complete cure.

FROM WASHINGTON.

A Daily Record of Events in the Senate and House.

Several Important Measures Passed in the Senate—In the House Various Bills Are Discussed and Passed—Other Notes.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—Senator Edmonds offered a resolution in the Senate yesterday, which was passed, appropriating $100,000 for the relief of the suffering caused by yellow fever in the South. Bills were passed appropriating $750,000 for a post-office building in St. Paul, Minn.; to forfeit lands granted in the State of Michigan to aid in the construction of a railroad from Marquette to Ontonagon, and the Senate bill appropriating $75,000 for a public building at Kalamazoo, Mich.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—In the Senate yesterday the Agricultural Department bill was discussed and the resolution to retain for a time the Chinese Exclusion bill was tabled.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—The Senate yesterday passed the bill to create the Department of Agriculture, and making the head of that department a Cabinet officer. The proposition to transfer the Weather Bureau to the new department was defeated. Senator Stewart presented a resolution asking the House to require its officers to transmit to the President without delay bills passed. The conference report on the Sundry Civil bill was agreed to.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—In the Senate yesterday a bill was passed allowing any person who has abandoned or relinquished a homestead entry before the expiration of the requisite six months to make another entry not exceeding a quarter section of land. Bills were introduced to prohibit the immigration of Chinese laborers, and offering a reward of $100,000 to any one who shall discover the cause, remedy and treatment of yellow fever. The Deficiency Appropriation bill was passed.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—All the pension bills on the calendar in the Senate, 114 in number, were passed yesterday, including one giving the widow of General Sheridan $300 a year. A resolution was offered calling on the President for any information the Government might have received since the 7th inst. concerning the treaty with China recently negotiated.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—The House spent the entire session yesterday in discussing the library building appropriation in the Sundry Civil bill. A vote which was finally taken showed the lack of a quorum.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—In the House yesterday the delay in sending to the President the Chinese bill caused a long discussion. A bill was reported to suspend the operation of the timber land laws.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—The House yesterday passed the bill to suspend the operation of the Desert-emption, Timber Culture and Pre-empt Land laws. The Senate bill forfeiting the grant of land for the construction of a railroad from Marquette to Ontonagon, in Michigan, was passed, as were several measures of a private character. At the night session thirty-two private pension bills were passed. An effort to pass the bill granting a pension to Mrs. Sheridan met with opposition and the bill went over.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—In the House yesterday bills were introduced to establish a camp for yellow fever refugees; to prevent aliens from being employed on public works, and to increase the pensions of those who have lost a limb. A bill was passed authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi at La Crosse, Wis. A bill was introduced which provides that no person who is not a citizen of the United States, who shall not have declared his intention to become a citizen and does not reside in the United States, shall be employed as a contractor or laborer on any public building, river and harbor improvement or other public work of construction carried on by the Government.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—In the House yesterday a bill was passed allowing season in the United States navy to deposit their savings with the paymaster on whose books their accounts are borne.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—The President at 4 o'clock p. m. sent the following nomination to the Senate: John G. Parkhurst, of Michigan, to be Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States to Belgium.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—The President has received official information of the refusal of the Chinese Government to ratify the amended treaty.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—The sub-committee of the Senate Finance Committee has completed its Tariff bill, and will submit it to the full committee to-day. The bill, as heretofore stated, proposes to reduce the revenue about sixty-five million dollars. Senators in charge of the bill say they will not make it public until the minority report, which Senator Beck is preparing at Fortress Monroe, is completed. It is estimated that a month's time will be required for discussion of the bill.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—The Senate Finance Committee met at 10:30. There were present Senators Sherman, Allison, Aldrich, Hiscock, Harris and Vance, and Senator Jones made his appearance at 11 o'clock. The new tariff bill was laid before the committee by Senator Allison, chairman of the sub-committee, and a second complete copy was handed at the same time to Senator Harris. This was at once securely sealed, addressed to Senator Beck and forwarded by a trusty deputy Sergeant-at-Arms to Fortress Monroe. The committee then formally began the consideration of the bill. A majority of the members were personally in favor of making it public at once, but it was decided, in deference to ancient usage, to await the action of the full committee.

The Finance Committee will continue its hearings on the Tariff bill. Members of the committee say that it will probably complete its work within four days, within which time it is expected Senator Beck will be able to make up the minority report, on which he has been working for some time. It is intended to report the bill to the Senate on Monday next.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—President Cleveland has vetoed the bill to give Kansas a quantity of Government land to aid an agricultural college, and one to give the town of Wallace, Kan., a portion of the old military reservation there.

The Switchmen.

St. Louis, Sept. 26.—In the Switchmen's Aid Association meeting the plan of federation as proposed by the Firemen's Brotherhood was adopted, and a committee was appointed to confer with the locomotive engineers, firemen, brakemen, railway telegraphers and the Knights of Labor to complete the work of federation. Frank Sweeney was elected grand master.

THE YELLOW SCOURGE.

A Desperate Condition of Affairs in Portions of the South.
DECATUR, Ala., Sept. 24.—Yesterday was the gloomiest day in Decatur's history. Two new cases of fever were reported, but no deaths. This makes the total cases to date seventeen, of whom twelve are still under treatment and four have died. There are hardly more than 150 people left in the town, and two-thirds of these are colored.

JACKSON, Tenn., Sept. 24.—This city has quarantined against the States of Florida, Alabama, Mississippi and the city of Memphis. No trains from these places will be allowed to stop within five miles of the city.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Sept. 25.—All passenger trains on the Alabama, Great Southern and Memphis & Charleston roads have been abandoned because of the rigid quarantine established by Chattanooga. This will shut off nearly all communication with the South.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 24.—At a meeting of physicians and others called by Major Jacobs, it has been decided to open the gates of Louisville to yellow fever refugees. A train brought in 135 from Decatur this morning. There is no excitement here. At the meeting of doctors it was the sentiment that Louisville was in no danger.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Sept. 26.—The hopeful feeling that the worst of the epidemic is over continues. While new cases are developing very rapidly, the type of the disease appears to be milder, and while many people are very sick, the death rate continues low. The official bulletin for the twenty-four hours ending at 6 p. m. reports 143 new cases, of which eighty-five are among the colored people. Only four deaths are reported. Cases to date, 2,134; total deaths 221.

A TERRIBLE FATE.

One of Forepaugh's Elephants, in a Fit of Anger, Kills His Keeper.

BROCKWAYVILLE, Pa., Sept. 26.—As Forepaugh's show was unloading at Du Bois yesterday John Pogy, an elephant trainer of Salem, N. J., was attacked by the elephant "Tip" and killed. Pogy was trying to get the beast out of the car, but it had been angered by men and boys teasing it and feeding it apples which contained tobacco and pepper. It struck him with its trunk, gored him with its tusks and trampled him. The other elephants grew angry and tore up another cage and struck two other men, but not to do harm.

FAVOR SUNDAY OBSERVANCE.

Switchmen Want the Railroads to Give the Subject Consideration.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 24.—The switchmen have not yet reached the question of federation and are making progress slowly. The most important work of Saturday was the adoption of a resolution favoring the observance of the Sabbath, and asking all railroads in the United States to give this matter their attention. It is understood that the office of Grand Organizer and instructor is to be created and that George S. Bailey, of East St. Louis, will be chosen to fill the position.

OLD ENOUGH TO KNOW BETTER.

Bunko Men in Allegheny City Secure $10,000 from a Victim.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 26.—John N. Lemon, aged 65 years, of Allegheny City, got into the hands of two bunko men in that city Tuesday afternoon. He drew $5,000, but could not secure it until he showed $10,000. Upon returning with the $10,000 and a revolver the bunko men overpowered him, took the revolver and $10,000 from him and locked him in the room, making good their escape.

Sent Up for a Year.

FREEDOT, Ill., Sept. 23.—Young Staples, son of the Minnesota millionaire, who shot Winship during the races here a year ago, has been convicted of shooting with attempt to kill and sentenced to one year in the penitentiary. An appeal to the Supreme Court will be taken.

Fined and Imprisoned.

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Sept. 24.—Thomas Giacomini, proprietor of the leading hotel in this city, has been sentenced to pay a fine of $100 and to be confined thirty days in jail for allowing liquor to be sold in his hotel.

Wheat and Corn.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—The visible supply of wheat and corn in the United States last Saturday was, respectively, 31,011,173 and 9,960,000 bushels. Corn having increased 1,357,755 bushels since last report, while wheat decreased 367,046 bushels.

Wrecked Off the Newfoundland Coast.

Beware of Imitation.

We find that in various parts of the country unscrupulous druggists for the purpose of making a large profit, are palming off on a too-confiding public a worthless counterfeit of Pomeroy's Petroline Plasters, under the plea that it is "just as good," and in some cases that it is Pomeroy's Plaster. Trust no druggist who makes any such representations. Beware of all such imitations. Insist upon getting the genuine article, take nothing else and see that the words "Pomeroy's Petroline Plaster" are upon each envelope. For Sale by H. J. Brown, Dist. Agt. for Ann Arbor.

THE NEWSPAPER REVOLUTION.

From the Rockford (Ill.) Register.]

"The era of cumbersome blanket-sheets seems coming to an end, and newspapers like the New York Sun and the CHICAGO DAILY NEWS are the prominent journalistic successes of the period. The papers that give enough reading matter to fill a good volume in each daily issue are going out of favor with many people who have some other employment for their time than the search through mountains of straw for kernels of news. The sheets that give the news systematically and amply, and without unnecessary padding, are taking the lead in the great cities."

Forty years ago the chief duty of a editor in view of his limited facilities, was to gather all the news he could and print it. Intelligence was transmitted slowly; many occurrences of interest were never heard of beyond their immediate locality; ocean mails were long in transit, and the overthrow of an European dynasty was not known here until long after the event. Suddenly there came a change. The railroad and the telegraph superseded old methods, and the newspaper was literally flooded with news. The death of a petty ward politician in San Francisco, the result of a Presidential election, the accession of a sovereign, the outbreak of a war, and notice that a shanty had been burden in Texas, all were hurried over the wires into the newspaper offices, and there being no idea of discrimination, all were printed. Thus originated the "blanket sheet."

The publisher who could send out the biggest blanket for a nickel was the most enterprising; the biggest paper was the best; it was a period of bigness. But after a time the very excess of the evil brought the remedy, and there began an era of discrimination, during which arose such journals as the New York Sun and the CHICAGO DAILY NEWS.

That the public appreciated the new departure is best evidenced in the fact that the Sun reached a circulation of 150,000 a day, and the DAILY NEWS 175,000. The wonderful and constantly growing popularity of the condensed, low-priced papers has so far brought the cumbersome and high-priced blanket-sheets to their senses, that they have now somewhat reformed both as to size and price, but they are still far removed from the true ideal of American journalism to meet the needs of the great majority.

In the west the CHICAGO DAILY NEWS has been the first to appreciate and meet the situation, and it now enjoys the results of its twelve years of pioneer work in a daily circulation averaging over three times that of any of its contemporaries, and considerably more than the circulations of all other Chicago dailies combined. It is hardly necessary to say that such a circulation could not be attained, much less maintained, except by a paper of high grade of excellence, as well as one sold at a popular price. To win such recognition the cheap paper must be, as good a newspaper as the best of its higher-priced competitors. And this THE DAILY NEWS certainly is. It is a member of the Associated Press, and is the only paper in Chicago which possesses a franchise which secures to it both the day and night dispatches of the Association. In the general field of news-gathering it represents in the highest degree the progressive enterprise of American journalism: as a newspaper it challenges comparison with any in the land.

In its editorial columns THE DAILY NEWS speaks from the standpoint of the independent newspaper, and thereby escapes the temptation of impairing honest and honorable influence by condoning or defending the questionable under the pressure of party allegiance. It is not an organ, neither is it a neutral in questions of its convictions. The organ of no party, sect or interest, it voices the united demand of all those better elements of society in behalf of purity, honesty and decency in all the relations of life. By just so much as it thus commends itself to the regard of the truly "best people" of the community does it voluntarily renounce

COUNTY NEWS.

The Chelsea fair is in progress this week.

There are 17 foreign students in the Dexter high school.

E. R. Aldrich has opened a new dry goods store at Saline.

Work has been commenced on the new engine house at South Lyon.

The married and single men of Saline played a game of ball Saturday.

The new iron bridge over the Raisin river at Manchester has been completed.

The hunters at Manchester are figuring on getting up a matched hunt this fall.

Manchester is being supplied with another reservoir as protection from fire.

The Pinckney Dispatch is agitating the subject of a fair to be held annually at that place.

The October meeting of the Saline farmers' club, will be held at A. A. Wood's, in Lodi.

The Republicans of Salem have a club of nearly 100 members, with Geo. S. Wheeler as president.

The Saline juvenile band is making the nights hideous at that place, practicing on new campaign music.

The water in the river at Manchester has been so low that the millers have been obliged to refuse work recently.

Saline floats three Harrison and Morton banners from as many poles, while the other parties are not represented at all.

Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Fellows will celebrate the 25th anniversary of their wedding on Saturday, at their home in Sharon.

The amount of tuition collected from foreign scholars at Manchester, already exceeds the total amount collected last year.

The board of school trustees of Saline have elected H. W. Bassett president, G. B. Mason director, and J. Sturm treasurer.

The prohibitionists of Washtenaw and Monroe counties have nominated John Schumacher, of Ann Arbor, for state senator.

The Observer says the citizens of Saline object because not a candidate on any of the three county tickets hails from that place.

The county convention of the W. C. T. U. will be held at the Presbyterian church, Manchester, on Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 3 and 4.

The Republican convention of the second representative district of this county, will be held at Burkhardt's hall, Saline, on Tuesday, Oct. 2.

S. J. Salyer was just 40 minutes riding his bicycle from State-st, Ann Arbor, to the Commercial office, Ypsilanti, last Friday evening. Pretty good time.

A. A. Wood, of Lodi, gathered in his share of the premiums on sheep at the state fair. He took seven first, seven second and two third premiums, in all amounting to nearly $200.

Clara Bailey, of South Lyon, had the toothache and intended to take a dose of paregoric to relieve it. She took thirty drops of aconite by mistake and it is not yet known whether she will live or die.

We notice that several of our county exchanges apologized to their readers last week because there was not much news. Don't do it, boys, or they'll be expecting you to manufacture some when it's short.

Talk about your circuses. You ought to have seen the performance at Challis Bros. shop yesterday, when a crowd of about 25 men undertook to shoe Conkright's mustang. The 'tang finally came out victorious.—South Lyon Picket.

The eastern Michigan Agricultural association have elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, Wm. H. Lowden, Augusta; vice-presidents, John F. Spafard, Manchester; Peter Cook, York; treasurer, Wm. Campbell, Pittsfield; secretary, Frank Joslyn, Ypsilanti; marshal, Geo. Palmer, Ypsilanti.

The latest swindle on farmers perpetrated by agents is done as follows: "The farmer objects to giving his note and having it discounted for cash. The sharper says, "O, we'll keep the note," and writes across the face, "Not transferable." In a short time it is found in the hands of another party with an "e" added to the "not," which makes it read, "Note transferable."—Stockbridge Sun.

The fair of the Eastern Michigan Agricultural association which was held at Ypsilanti last week, was one of the most successful ever held. The weather was fine and on Thursday nearly 10,000 people were on the grounds. The exhibits were large and fine except in the agricultural display. The stock exhibit was one of the best ever offered. The races were close and warmly contested, although in one race on Thursday there was some jockeying and drivers were changed. Taking it altogether, their 17th annual fair was a big success.

On the 11th of October, the twenty-third reunion of the 20th Michigan infantry will be held at Ypsilanti. The business meeting will be held in G. A. E. hall, the public exercises in the opera house, and the banquet in Light Guard hall. The Rev. R. E. Manning, a veteran of Co. B, will deliver the address, and Gen. Cutcheon, who went out from Ypsilanti as Captain of Co. B, is to be present and speak to his old comrades. This reunion will be a grand affair, and every surviving member of the 20th is urged to attend. All veterans of other regiments will also be welcome. Co. B, of the 20th was an Ypsilanti company, and the occasion will be an interesting one to Ypsilanti people and vicinity.

Ypsilanti. There were 15000 people at our fair last Thursday.

The Mineral Bath House has blossoming into the "Occidental Hotel."

Miss Carrie Heywood is on an extended visit in Minnesota and Dakota.

Miss Gertrude Noble, of Detroit, is visiting her numerous Ypsilanti friends.

The Ypsilanti fair was a grand success in the opinion of the majority of the visitors.

Ypsilanti masonic lodge has one of the finest halls in the state. It is in the new Savings Bank building.

The business college will celebrate its fifth birthday on Oct. 23rd in its new college building, with a fine reception.

Chas. King, the grocer, is the veteran tradesman of our city, having continued in business in one stand for almost 50 years.

Last Thursday, Rev. M. Kionkan, German Lutheran pastor, was united in marriage to Miss Clara Katba, recently from Germany.

Wednesday evening a reception was given the Normal students at the Presbyterian lecture rooms, by the Young Peoples' Mission.

Mr. W. S. Crane, of Detroit, has been spending a few days with friends in our city. He has just returned from a visit to the Holy Land.

The different political parties are getting enthused at last and two Republican clubs, one citizen's and the other Normal students, and one Democratic club have been formed.

Mr. Simeon Rowley, one of our oldest residents, died Friday afternoon after a prolonged illness. The funeral was held from his late residence, Sunday, with Odd Fellows rites.

The G. A. R. members, as well as many other citizens, are looking forward with pleasure to Oct. 11th, when the reunion of the 20th Michigan Infantry will be held in this city.

Miss Emily M. Scott, a noted artist of New York, made Ypsilanti a short visit last week. Some of Ann Arbor's fair daughters number among her best art pupils from time to time in New York.

Interesting Episode.

J. C. Watts, a resident of this city who is also engaged in the jewelry business at East Saginaw, has had an experience with befriending unfortunate young men recently which he will not soon forget.

Several months ago he furnished the capital and E. H. Oliver, who had previously failed at Chicago, the experience for opening a manufacturing jewelry establishment in East Saginaw. The partner with the experience also had a beautiful wife about whom rumors were soon afloat which gave her an unenviable reputation.

Mr. Watts after investigating the rumors and finding them true, ended the partnership. The affair culminated on Friday last, when Mr. and Mrs. Oliver entered the store of J. C. Watts & Co., and made themselves so disagreeable that Mr. Watts ordered the woman from the store.

At this Oliver hit Mr. Watts a stunning blow. After recovering from the shock, Mr. Watts rushed for a revolver and would have shot Oliver had he not rushed from the store. In restraining Mr. Watts from following Oliver, the revolver was discharged, the bullet entering the floor.

The affair caused considerable excitement in East Saginaw, and will prove of interest in this city where Mr. Watts is so well known.

Dissolution of Partnership.

Notice is hereby given that the partnership lately existing between G. Stark, H. Cole, J. Armbruster and E. A. Garte, of the City of Ann Arbor, Mich., under the firm or company name of G. Stark & Co., was dissolved on the 22nd day of September '88, by mutual consent.

All debts owing to the said company, are to be received by said G. Stark & E. A. Garte, and all demands on the said company are to be presented to them for payment as they are authorized to settle all debts due to and by the firm. They will be found at the place of business of said late firm where they will continue the same business.

Dated Sept. 22nd, 1888. Ann Arbor. G. STARK, H. COLE, J. ARMBRUSTER, E. A. GARTE.

As will be seen from above we will carry on the painting business in the same place, No. 13 E. Liberty, corner 4th, under the partnership name of Stark & Garte and would therefore respectfully ask the people of Ann Arbor and vicinity to continue their kind patronage bestowed on the old firm to us, we shall try our utmost to prove worthy of the confidence placed in us.

Very Respectfully, J. G. STARK, E. A. GARTE.

MAW'S REVENGE

By H. RIDER HAGGARD.

CHAPTER IV.

THE LAST ROUND.

"On the morrow I woke up full of painful recollections, and not without a certain feeling of gratitude to the Powers above that I was there to wake up. Yesterday had been a tempestuous day; indeed, what between buffalo, rhinoceros and elephant, it had been very tempestuous. Having realized this fact, I next bethought me of those magnificent tusks, and instantly, early as it was, broke the tenth commandment. I coveted my neighbor's tusks, if an elephant could be said to be my neighbor de jure, as certainly, so recently as the previous night, he had been de facto—a much closer neighbor than I cared for, indeed. Now, when you covet your neighbor's goods, the best thing, if not the most moral thing, to do is to enter his house as a strong man armed and take them. I was not a strong man, but, having recovered my eight bore, I was armed, and so was the other strong man, the elephant with the tusks. Consequently I prepared for a struggle to the death. In other words, I summoned my faithful retainers, and told them that I was now going to follow those elephants over the edge of the world, if necessary. They showed a certain bashfulness about the business, but they did not gainsay me, because they dared not. Ever since I had prepared with all due solemnity to execute the rebellious Gobo they had conceived a great respect for me.

"So I went up to bid adieu to the old head-man, whom I found alternately contemplating the ruins of his kraal and, with the able assistance of his wife, thrashing the jealous lady who had slept in the kraal but, because she was, as he declared, the author of all his sorrows.

"Leaving them to work a way through their domestic differences, I levied a supply of vegetable food from the kraal in consideration of services rendered, and left them with my blessing. I do not know how they settled matters, because I have not seen them since.

"Then I started on the spoor of the three bulls. For a couple of miles or so below the kraal, as far, indeed, as the belt of swamp that bordered the river, the ground was at this spot rather stony and clothed with scattered bushes. Rain had fallen towards the dyebreak, and this fact, together with the nature of the soil, made spooring a very difficult business. The wounded bull had, indeed, bled freely, but the rain had washed the blood off the leaves and grass, and the ground, being so rough and hard, had not taken the footmarks so clearly as was convenient. However, we got along, though slowly, partly by the spoor and partly by carefully lifting leaves and blades of grass, and finding blood enough underneath them, for the blood gushing from a wounded animal often falls upon their inner surfaces, and then, of course, unless the rain is very heavy, it is not washed away. It took us something over an hour and a half to reach the edge of the marsh, but once there our task became much easier, for the soft soil showed plentiful evidences of the great brute's passage. Threading our way through the swampy land, we came at last to a ford of the river, and here we could see where the poor wounded animal had lain down in the mud and water in the hope of easing himself of his pain, and could see also how his two faithful companions had assisted him to rise again. We crossed the ford and took up the spoor on the farther side, and followed it into the marsh like land beyond. No rain had fallen on this side of the river, and the blood marks were consequently much more frequent.

"All that day we followed the three bulls, now across open plains, and now through patches of bush. They seemed to have traveled on almost without stopping, and I noticed that as they went the wounded bull got up his strength a little. This I could see from his spoor, which had become firmer, and also from the fact that the other two had count of the bush, and I did not dare turn my back. So I did the only thing that I could do, raised the rifle and fired at the black mass of his chest. It was too dark for me to pick a shot; I could only brown it, as it were.

"The shot rang out like thunder on the quiet air, and the elephant answered it with a scream, and then dropped his trunk, and stood for a second or two as still as though he had been cut in stone. I confess that I lost my head—I ought to have fired my second barrel, but I did not. Instead of doing so, I rapidly opened my rifle, pulled out the old cartridge from the right barrel and replaced it. But before I could snap the breech to the bull was at me. I saw his great trunk fly up like a brown beam, and I waited no longer. Turning, I fled for dear life, and after me thundered the elephant. Right into the open glade I ran, and then, thank heaven, the dim moonlight seemed to tower above me like a house. I lifted the rifle and pulled at his neck. It would not go off. Then, in a flash as it were, I remembered that it was on the half cock. The lock of the barrel was a little weak, and a few days before, in firing at a cow and the left barrel had jarred off at the shock of the discharge of the right, knocking me backward with the recoil; so after that I had kept it on the half cock till I actually wanted to fire it.

"I gave one desperate bound to the right, and my lame leg notwithstanding, I believe that few men could have made a better jump. At any rate it was none too soon, for as I jumped I felt the wind made by the tremendous downward stroke of the monster's trunk. Then I ran for it.

"I ran like the wind, still keeping hold of my gun, however. My idea, so far as I could be said to have any fixed idea, was to bolt down the pathway up which I had come, like a rabbit down a burrow, trusting that he would lose sight of me in the uncertain light. I sped across the glade. Fortunately, the bull, being wounded, could not go full speed, but wounded or no, he could go quite as fast as I could. I was unable to gain an inch, and away we went with just about three feet between our separate extremities. We were at the other side now, and a glance served to show me that I had miscalculated and over-shot the opening. To reach it now was hopeless; I should have blundered straight into the elephant. So I did the only thing I could do: I swerved like a coursed hare, and started off round the edge of the glade, seeking for some opening into which I could plunge. This gave me a moment's start, for the bull could not turn as quickly as I could, and I made the most of it. But no opening could I see; the bush was like a wall. We were speeding round the edge of the glade, and the elephant was coming up again.

"Now he was within about six feet, and now, as he trumpeted or rumbled, I could feel the fierce hot blast of his breath strike upon my head. Heavens! how it frightened me. We were three parts round the glade now, and about fifty yards ahead was the single large dead thorn tree against which the bull had been leaning. I spurred for it; it was my last chance of safety. But spurt as I would it seemed hours before I got there. Putting out my right hand, I swung round the tree, thus bringing myself face to face with the elephant. I had not time to lift the rifle to fire; I had barely time to cock it and run sideways backward when he was on to me. Crash! he came, striking the tree full with his forehead. It snapped like a carrot about forty inches from the ground. Fortunately I was clear of the trunk, but one of the dead branches struck me on the chest and swept me to the ground. I fell upon my back and the elephant blundered past me as I lay. More by instinct than anything else I lifted my rifle with one hand and pulled the trigger. It exploded, and, as I afterwards discovered, the bullet struck him in the ribs. But the recoil of the heavy rifle held this very severe; it bent my arm up and sent the bullet with a thud against the top of my shoulder and the side of my neck, for the moment quite paralyzing me, and causing the weapon to jump from my grasp. Meanwhile the bull was rushing on. He traveled for some twenty paces, and then suddenly he stopped. Faintly I reflected that he was coming back to finish me, but even the prospect of imminent and dreadful death could not rouse me into action. I was utterly spent; I could not move.

"Idly, almost indifferently, I watched his movements. For a moment he stood still, then he trumpeted, and the walkin rang, and then he slowly, and with great dignity, he knelt down. At this point I swooned away.

"When I came to myself again I saw from the moon that I must have been insensible for quite two hours. I was drenched with dew and shivering all over. At first I could not think where I was, when, on lifting my head, I saw the outline of the one tusked bull still kneeling some five-and-twenty paces from me. Then I remembered. Slowly I raised myself, and was instantly taken with a violent sickness, the result of overexertion, after which I nearly fainted a second time. Presently I grew better, and considered the position. Two of the elephants were, as I knew, dead; but how about No. 3? There he knelt in majesty in the lonely moonlight. The question was, was he living or dead? I got on my hands and knees, loaded my rifle and painfully crept a few paces nearer. I could see his eye now, for the moonlight fell full upon it. It was open and rather prominent. I crouched and watched; the eyelids did not move, nor did the great brown body, or the trunk, or the ear, or the tail—nothing moved. Then I knew that he must be dead.

"I crept up to him—still keeping the rifle well forward—and gave him a thump, reflecting as I did so how very near I had been to being 'thumped instead of thumper.' He never stirred; he certainly was dead, though to this day I do not know if it was my random shot that killed him, or if he died from concussion of the brain consequent upon the tremendous shock of his contact with the tree. Anyhow, there he was, and so beautiful a boy, or rather king, as this poet neatly puts it. Indeed, I do not think that I have ever seen a sight more imposing in its way than that mighty beast crouched in majestic death and shone upon by the lonely moon. While I stood admiring the whole scene, and heartily congratulating myself upon my escape, I once more began to feel sick. Accordingly, without waiting to examine the other two bulls, I staggered off back to the camp, which in due course I reached in safety. Everybody in it was asleep. I did not wake them, but having swallowed a mouthful of brandy, I threw off my coat and shoes, rolled myself up in a blanket, and was soon fast asleep. When I woke it was already light, and at first I thought that, like Joseph, I had dreamed a dream. At that moment, however, I turned my head, and quickly knew that it was no dream, for my neck and face were so stiff from the blow of the butt end of the rifle that it was agony to move them. I collapsed for a minute or two. Gobo and another man, wrapped up like a couple of munks in their blankets, thinking that I was still asleep, were crouched over a little fire they had made for the morning was damp and chilly—and holding sweet converse.

"Gobo said that he was getting tired of running after elephants which they never caught. Macumazahn (that is myself) was without doubt a man of parts and of some skill in shooting, but also he was a fool. None but a fool would run so fast and far after elephants which it was impossible to catch when they kept cutting the spoor of fresh ones. He certainly was a fool; but he must not be allowed to continue in his folly, and he, Gobo, had determined to put a stop to it. He should refuse to accompany him any farther on so mad a hunt.

"Yes, the other answered, the poor man was sick in his head, and it was quite time that he checked his folly while they still had a patch of skin left upon their feet. Moreover, he, for his part, certainly did not like this country of Wambe's, which really was full of ghosts. Only the last night he had heard the spooks at work; they were out shooting; at least it sounded as though they were. It was very queer, but perhaps their lunatic of a master—

"Gobo, you scoundrel! I shouted out at this juncture, sitting bolt upright on the blankets, 'stop idling there, and make me some coffee.'

"Up sprang Gobo and his friend, and in half a moment were respectfully skipping about in a circle, the contrasted well with the lordly contempt of their previous conversation. But all the same they were in earnest in what they said about hunting the elephants any farther, for before I had finished my coffee they came to me in a body, and said that if I wanted to follow those elephants I must follow them by myself, for they would not go.

"I argued with them, and affected to be much put out. The elephants were close at hand, I said; I was sure of it; I had heard their trumpet in the night.

"Yes, answered the men, mysteriously; they too had heard things in the night—things not easy to hear; they had heard the spooks out shooting, and would no longer remain in a country so vilely haunted.

"It was nonsense," I replied. "If ghosts went out shooting, surely they would use air guns and not black powder, and one would not hear an air gun. Well, if they were cowards, and would not come, of course I could not force them to, but I would make a bargain with them. They should follow those elephants for one half hour more, then if we failed to come upon them I would abandon the pursuit, and we would go straight to Wambe, chief of the Maturu, and give him hongo."

"To this compromise the men readily agreed. Accordingly about half an hour later we struck our camp and started, and notwithstanding my aches and bruises I do not think that I ever felt in better spirits in my life. It is something to wake up in the morning and remember that in the dead of night one has, single handed, given battle to, and overthrown three of the largest elephants in Africa, slaying them with three bullets. Such a feat had never to my knowledge been done before, and on that particular morning I felt a very 'tall man of my hands' indeed. The only thing that I feared was that should ever come to tell the story, nobody would believe it, for when a strange story is told by a hunter, people are apt to think it is necessarily a lie, instead of being only probably so.

"Well, we passed on till, having crossed the first glade where I had seen the lions, we reached the neck of bush that separated it from the second glade where the dead elephants were. And here I began to take elaborate precautions, among others ordering Gobo to keep some yards ahead and look out sharp, as I thought that the elephants might be about. He obeyed my instructions with a superior smile, and pushed ahead. Presently I saw him call up as though he had been shot, and began to faintly snap his fingers.

"That is it," I whispered.

"The elephant, the great elephant with one tusk, kneeling down."

"I crept up beside him. There knelt the bull as I had left him last night, and there, too, lay the other bulls.

"Do these elephants sleep?" I whispered to the astonished Gobo.

"Yes, Macumazahn, they sleep."

"Nay, Gobo, they are dead!"

"Dead! How can they be dead? Who killed them?"

"What do people call me, Gobo?"

"They call you Macumazahn."

"And what does Macumazahn mean?"

"It means the man who keeps his eyes open, the man who gets up in the night."

"Yes, and I am that man. Look, you idle, lazy cowards. While you slept last night I rose, and alone I hunted those great elephants and slew them by the moonlight. To each of them I gave one bullet and only one, and it fell dead. Look, and I advanced into the glade, there is my spoor, and here is the spoor of the great bull, charging after me, and there is the tree that I took refuge behind. See, the elephant shattered it in his charge. Oh, you cowards, you who would give up the chase while the blood spoor steamed beneath your nostrils! See what I did single handed while you slept, and be ashamed!"

"Oh, said Gobo, 'so that isn't the end of the yarn? A very good yarn, Quatermain, by the way—I couldn't have made up a better one myself.'"

The old gentleman looked at Gobo severely, for it irritated him to be chaffed about his stories.

"I don't know what you mean, Gobo. I don't see that there is any comparison between a true story of adventure and the preposterous tales which you invent about hex hanging by their horns. No, it is not the end of the story; the most exciting part is to come. But I have talked enough for tonight; and if you go on in that way, Good, it will be some time before I begin again."

"Sorry I spoke, I'm sure," said Gobo, humbly. "Let's have a split to show that there is no ill feeling." And they did.

A PISCATORIAL YARN.

Asserted to Be True by a Veracious Man of Connecticut.

Being one of the originals of the now famous Quonseto Angling Club I speak as one having authority, writes a contributor to the Hartford Courant. One of the 'y-laws of this club is that no one can tell a lie on the grounds. My story originated September, 1884, at what is called the 'Richardson's Dam,' at the foot of the lake of that name. A party from the Rangely Lake had come down to the dam for a day's fishing. We arrived just at the hour of sundown. Our head center was George Shephard Page, of National piscatorial fame. The country owes to him that notable club at Rangely exists. Mr. Benjamin Bowles, late of the Springfield Republican, was one of the party. Mr. L. T. Hazell, of New York City, was another fisherman that can cast a fly with true piscatorial culture, and one that never loses his 'biggest fish.' If this story that I am to tell does not break my reel I may tell something about his great feats.

Now for the fish story at 'Richardson's Dam.' After arriving and finding that we must wait for supper we started out to the 'dam.' There we found a young gentleman fresh from 'Boston.' Singular, his name was Richardson, a family well known. There was scarcely any water falling off the dam. Mr. Richardson had cast in from the apron into a beautiful pool among the rocks. The retreating sun was scattering its gems of rose color among the gurgling water.

"What luck?" was the greeting to this young fellow standing so near the brink of fame. Before he could answer a "swirl" was seen in the water. "Ah! Ah!" came simultaneously from all of us as all eyes were quickly focused on that pool. After the "swirl" a short suspense was endured, then a commotion, and finally, by the movement of the line, the game was swimming both ways at once, as the young fisherman thought. Soon in a suppressed voice by the angler: "There are two on!" Instantly the pool was stirred and the sound could only be likened to the noise of a soda fountain in full play. The rod and fixings made more lines and figures than could be illustrated by any known geometry. All of us were in the qui vive, and it was with a gasp that the holder of the rod was the only one that was calm. Ignorance was bliss with him. He did not know what was up. Soon it could be plainly seen that the game was well hooked and lots of it—some believed all that were in the pool. Well, all kinds of suggestions were volunteered for the safest method of landing the catch. One of the party offered to dive in and bring them out. He looked so much like a poacher his services were not accepted, and then a couple of valuable fly hooks had lately disappeared. Then came a calm; the fish were sobered and were moving toward the shadow of the apron of the dam. Now, who but a fisherman will believe that there were on that leader three speckled beauties that averaged five and three-quarter pounds each! The scales that recorded the weight are in Hartford, and if any outsiders are doubtful all can be verified that has been said.

NOT AT ALL UNUSUAL.

A Creek Ran Through the Pasture, Hence the Milk Contained Minnows.

To the unfortunate men who seek health and recreation in country farm-houses, the following story is respectfully dedicated by the Pittsburgh Dispatch.

A well-known lawyer of this city hid himself to a secluded section of West Virginia some weeks ago, and settled down on an apparently old-fashioned farm-house to feed upon the fat of the land, the home-made bread, the fresh eggs, the clover butter and the sweet alderney milk thereof. And he feared as most city men do who seek historic rural joys in real rural districts.

But, particularly, he grumbled at the milk. That it was watered was as plain as the honest old farmer's face. Several times he asked the honest old farmer's wife what was the matter with the cows, and often he heaved sarcastic remarks about the water supply and the tinrods that a dairy must of necessity make upon it. But the farmer's wife being a wise woman, and knowing by experience that a new stranger could be caught every year, whereas a city milk trade could only be made profitably by watering the lactical fluid—not the stock, mind you—said never a word in reply.

One morning when the learned counsel for his own defense came down to breakfast he found the usual pitcher of milk by his plate, and, looking therein, he saw the usual aqueous blue tint. He poured out a glass of the liquid, and was surprised to see a strange disturbance in it.

He took a spoon and investigated. One after the other he flshed out two small minnows.

He was not angry; he rejoiced with exceedingly great joy. He had the proof now to confound the callous keeper of cows.

Presently the farmer's wife came in, and the lawyer, with the minnows on a plate on one side and the glass of alleged milk on the other, while he waved a pointer spoon in place of a brief, spoke after this fashion: "Madam, I have put up with poorer milk than I ever tasted before. I have said little when the milk was really half and half—one-half being not over-palatable water—but I must draw the line at fish. I drew the line this morning in that glass, and lo! there are two scaly monsters I caught therein. What have you to say about it?"

"Strikes me, sir," said the good old lady with perfect calmness, "that you fly by the words of the trifling things 'tis natural them fish should be what you found 'em. There's a creek running through the cow pasture, and now one of the cows has gone and swallowed the minnies in her drink. That's nothin' out of the usual about that, sir."

That's why a certain attorney came home from his vacation two weeks before he was expected.

How to Eat a Watermelon.

A watermelon, even though it be a sixty-pounder, is not intended to be devoured in public, nor is one watermelon, no matter what its weight may be, more than enough for one healthy person. This fact is probably well known to every country school-boy. The art of eating a watermelon and keeping cool is as simple now as it was in the days of long ago. The rind should be slit with a short-bladed knife, so that when the melon is divided the heart of it shall rest in one of the halves in one luscious, juicy lump. The knife should be carefully wiped and then put in the pocket. Then the coat should be taken off and the slices rolled up. Plunge the right hand under one end of the heart and the left hand under the other; lift the dripping mass to the mouth and fall to. The juice will trickle down your arms and saturate your face, but what of it! There is plenty and to spare, though the feast is the rarest to be found on earth.

Neglected Her Duty.

It is noted that the famous white lady in the House of Hohenzollern has failed to appear and give warning of the deaths of the two Emperors lately. It is suggested that a new ghost had better be secured unless the white lady makes some explanation for her neglect of duty.

He has been interested in real estate dealer in nearly every section of the Union. He now has large interests in Florida, in the vicinity of Jacksonville. A few days ago he offered Ann Arbor citizens three lots valued at $1,500 at Pabalo Beach, to be put up for sale for the benefit of the yellow fever sufferers.

The Chautauque circle will hold a meeting at the residence of Dr. C. G. Darling, on East University ave., this evening. The change is made on account of the reception to Rev. Studley on Friday evening.

Just before the last act of the play, at the opera house, Monday evening, a heavy plank, 16 feet long, a foot wide and two inches thick, toppled over and struck Miss Rose Goodall, the leading lady, on the head, cutting a gash two inches long. She was taken to her dressing room and Dr. Tyler summoned. The wound was found to be only a scalp wound and not serious. The lady was unable to finish her part however.

Our New Firm.

The doors of a new dry-goods firm are thrown open to the public today, at No. 18 South Main-st. The proprietors of the new firm are Goodyear & St. James, who after a thorough canvass of the subject have come to the conclusion that our growing city can legitimately support another first class establishment of that kind. They say that they do not come to Ann Arbor to do all the trade, but by fair dealing and a fine new stock of goods they expect to gain a share of the patronage. They have both had experience in this branch of business. William Goodyear, the senior partner, has had charge of one of the departments at Taylor, Wolfenden & Co's, Detroit, for eight years. His partner, Bruce St. James, has been the junior partner in the Bee-hive, at Ypsilanti. The firm will be a valuable addition to our social and musical circles, as Mr. St. James and his wife are musicians of talent. He has a fine tenor voice and for some time has sung in the choir of the Catholic church at Ypsilanti.

A PLEASANT EVENT.

On Thursday evening of last week at 10 o'clock, the marriage ceremony of George W. Millen, of this city, and Jessie C. Wetmore, of Concord, was performed at the residence of the bride's parents in Concord. A large crowd of relatives and friends of the contracting parties were present, about 125 in number. Miss Cora Wetmore, the bride's sister, and Miss Elida Lovejoy, of this city, acted as bridesmaids, and Ed. M. Roberts, of Port Madison, Iowa, and Eugene Wetmore, of New York city, were groomsmen. Morris Lantz, of Ann Arbor, and Earl Wetmore, of New York city, acted as ushers.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Quick, of Concord, and a pleasant feature was the presenting of the ring at the proper time by Miss Nellie Thorp, of Jonesville, a little tot about three years old, who performed her part equally as well as the older participants. The bride was handsomely attired in a cream colored ottoman silk, decorated with choice roses. The wedding presents were numerous and costly, and included nearly everything necessary for the young couple to commence housekeeping with. A party of ten of the groom's friends in this city furnished a complete set of silverware and dining service.

After the friends had finished congratulating the happy couple, a sumptuous banquet was served, the dining rooms being handsomely decorated with flowers, and selections on the harp were rendered by C. H. Gibson, of this city. The large rooms were then thrown open and the guests enjoyed themselves with dancing until nearly morning. In the morning a wedding breakfast was served to the forty guests from out of the city, who had remained over night.

The newly married couple remained at Concord until Monday, when they came to this city and are now at home at No. 48 East Ann st.

The "engagement ring" is commonly a diamond set singly in an 18 karat gold mounting, simple in design. But the buyer should make sure that he is getting a stone of good quality, possessing genuine and unmistakable beauty and not one that though genuine, has only the name of "diamond" to recommend it. For high grade goods, the stock of Roehm & Son, Grand Circus Park, Detroit, is unequalled.

Do not fail to have your eyes tested free by Prof. Phillips, scientific optician, at Wm. Arnold's jewelry store.

Professor Phillips will remain another week with Wm. Arnold, jeweler. Perfect spectacles fitted for all defects of vision. Examination free.
