

THE ANN ARBOR REGISTER.

VOL. XIV. NO. 41.

ANN ARBOR, MICHIGAN, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 11, 1888.

WHOLE NO. 720.

ON THE CAMPUS.

The Mills bill was discussed in Forensics yesterday.

The S. C. A. building will be dedicated during the next commencement week.

The Glee club is advertising for singers, and all applicants will have to pass an examination.

Del Valle is the name of the student from Porta Rica who has entered the Dental department.

The class of 91 elected Fred Richmond football captain and challenged the freshmen for Saturday.

The eighth meeting of the Michigan Schoolmasters' club will be held in the main building, Oct. 27.

There will be a meeting in the opera house, Saturday evening, under the auspices of the Students' Republican club, which will be addressed by Col. Atkinson and Henry A. Haigh of Detroit.

Both the Republican and Democratic clubs have met and discussed plans for a vigorous campaign. The Democrats may secure the famous author of the tariff bill about which there is such a row to speak to them.

The Chronicle says of the Dental department: "The announcement last year that this would be the end of the 'two year' course has had the effect of bringing together a fine-looking body of freshmen, representing all quarters of the globe, from California to England, Germany and Central America."

Prof. J. B. Steere and party visited at least 15 of the Philippines. In their previous visit they were seriously crippled by Dr. Steere's poor health, by insufficient fire-arms, and other obstacles. This last visit, however, has proved very satisfactory. They obtained 5000 specimens of birds, many of them entirely new, and the nests and eggs of a large number were secured. A fine lot of land shells, sea shells, and corals, some rare alcoholic specimens, and a fine collection of the mammals of the islands were obtained.

Frank I. Muir, lit '88, is superintendent of schools in Battle Creek; F. F. Lehman, same position in Marquette; H. K. White, in Fenton; J. H. Beazell, in Port Huron; E. Hubbard, in Japan; E. D. Kirby, in Battle Creek; Miss Paine, in Charlotte; Miss Potter and J. H. Powell, in Rockford, Ill.; Miss J. R. Tolman, in Chicago; Miss Bertha Wright, Ross Cole, and Fred Clark, in Ann Arbor; Miss Elizabeth Clark, in Minnesota; Miss Elsie school; Miss Gelineau, in Battle Creek. L. Bassett, J. B. Burt, M. M. Smith are in Oberlin, studying theology. All lits '88.

THE CIRCUIT COURT.

Mrs. Mary Whiting's first Speech—A Woman for the First Time Pleads before the Washtenaw Court.

On Saturday last Gertrude Deurees was granted a divorce from Christopher C. Deurees.

Arba S. Van Valkenburg vs. Gilbert M. Brown; foreclosure; decree granted.

On Monday, Frank Wilson, tramp, was found guilty of larceny from dwelling.

The case of the People vs. Sid Swick excited much interest because Mrs. Whiting conducted the defense. It was her first case in the circuit, and the first time a woman ever conducted a case in the Washtenaw circuit court. Swick is a mulatto who was tramping about the country with a banjo. He was charged with stealing a gun and some articles of clothing from the house of Dwight Riggs, about six miles from Chelsea. These things were found in his possession when he was arrested in Jackson. He claimed that he bought them for $1.00 of a chance acquaintance named Johnson whom he picked up near Chelsea. He said that he was on his way from his home in Ohio to Kalamazoo. The witnesses against him were Dwight Riggs, John Boyle, Jacob Staffin, James Smith, Mrs. Opdyke, Ella Craig and Homer Tucker.

Mrs. Whiting made as strong a defense as possible and a good speech, calling attention to the honest pre-natal appearance of the boy, and in true woman fashion declaring that "his hair was kinked by the crimping iron of the Almighty." She endeavored to show that the boy's story was reasonable, and that it thus satisfied the law in explaining how he came into possession of the stolen property. Unfortunately the boy had told another story about the gun, and of the many witnesses who clearly recollected seeing him, none had seen the Johnson, who, the defense said, must have stolen the goods. The jury declared the boy guilty.

Frank Wilson, on Tuesday, was sentenced to four years in the Ionia house of correction; and Sid Swick to two years.

Eveline Doyle was granted a divorce from John Doyle.

The People vs. Wm. Anderson. The prisoner was charged with the larceny of a little money from the dwelling of Willard Banfield in Ann Arbor. He is a tramp who was seen to come out of a box-car on the morning of the theft. D. Cramer defended him. The evidence was not overwhelmingly convincing, and the jury was out some time, finally disagreeing.

SIDEWALK BY MOONLIGHT.

It was a Fair Job, but Perhaps a Violation of a City Ordinance.

Last week THE REGISTER mentioned that a plank sidewalk had been laid in the night in front of J. D. Stimson & Son's grocery store on Ann-st. It was done in the night probably to avoid City Marshal Siple's eagle eye; for a city ordinance passed June 21, 1884, reads as follows:

SEC. 1. That all sidewalks hereafter constructed, renewed, or relaid on either or both sides of the following streets, within the following limits, namely: On Main-st, from Liberty to Ann-sts, on Huron-st from Second to Fifth-st, and on Ann-st from Main-st to Fourth-st, shall be constructed of stone and laid pursuant to the ordinance of the city relative to said sidewalks.

The laying of this wood sidewalk seems therefore, a clear violation of the ordinance, for which a penalty is provided of a fine not less than $25 and not more than $75 and costs, in default of payment of which the offender can be sent to jail not exceeding 60 days.

The property in front of which this sidewalk was laid belongs to Dr. W. B. Smith, and the work was laid by G. W. Orcutt. Last week the common council held a hasty session in the forenoon and instructed City Attorney King to prosecute Dr. Smith for this violation of the ordinance. Accordingly proceedings were begun before Justice Friesauff on Tuesday last on complaint of the city marshal.

CAPT. ALLEN'S SPEECH.

A Big Parade in Spite of the Rain—Cleveland is the Democrat Party.

Last Friday evening the Republicans of Ann Arbor made a large demonstration in honor of Congressman Allen. More than 100 torches were in line in spite of the rain and mud.

At least 1200 people crowded into the rink. Capt. Allen said:

"It is funny how this administration gets things mixed. I know President Cleveland. He is a genial gentleman. He and I look alike, only he's more so. But his administration gets mixed. The signal service promised us good weather, but didn't keep its promise.

"This is not a struggle over a schedule, but over a principle. It is the same idea that was fought over in 1840. If the south had not been in favor of free trade, there would have been no civil war. Free trade was then thought necessary to slavery. The south believes in free trade to-day. I don't want to discuss the question of per cent. between the tariff measures of the two parties. There is a more interesting feature. The prosperity of this country will be effected by the result of this election more than by any election since the war."

He explained the difference between the Republican position of tariff for protection and the Democrat position of tariff for revenue. The election of Cleveland will not mean merely the Mills bill, but a long step in the direction of free trade, untrammelled by customs houses.

"President Cleveland is the Democratic party. He put up an object lesson in the shape of a sheep. It drives the Democrats logically to free trade. Randall didn't like it, and 40 Democrats in the house had to be whipped into line by a Democratic caucus. A Democratic caucus in Washington met and decreed that Cleveland must be obeyed. The men who drive that caucus are honorable men, and courageous, who proved their courage on battle-fields in trying to destroy this Union and to support free trade. I respect them. But they haven't breadth of experience necessary to a great national policy."

Congressman Allen spoke for an hour amidst great enthusiasm, making some telling points in favor of protection.

THE "HARRISON APPLE."

The Register has One—A Tree With a History—Many Thanks for the Gift.

To the Editor of THE REGISTER:

Sir:—I send you a "campaign document,"—an apple which grew on our old place on Mann-st at the west end of the city. The tree has a history. In 1840 Mr. Mann, then a merchant in New York, with a party of gentlemen, called on Gen Wm. Henry Harrison at his home. While passing through the grounds, Mr. Mann picked an apple which he took home to his wife. After the apple had been exhibited throughout the campaign by a political friend, Mrs. Mann planted the seeds. On their removal to Michigan in the following year Mrs. Mann brought the young tree with her. It was called the "Harrison apple," by the family. When the old house was burned, a few years since, it was supposed the tree was killed, but on going over the place a week ago, I found that one limb was still alive and on it were four apples,—not as perfect as of old, but still a fine-looking apple. I thought one of our Republican horticulturists might like to perpetuate the "Harrison apple," so I send it to you to be disposed of as you like.

Mrs. W. W. WHEEDON.
Ann Arbor, Oct. 4, 1888.

"It's a fact," said agent Paisley. "The Toledo road has control of the Durand road. We will have a double telegraph line from Toledo to East Saginaw. We are putting telegraph instruments into the freight office now. We shall have a large traffic from the Saginaw valley."

Mr. Wheelock on the Taxes.

To the Editor of THE REGISTER:
Sir:—I send you the following clipped from the Detroit Weekly Free Press, of Aug. 30, 1888:

A. A. Ellis, of Ionia, the candidate for Attorney-General, was next introduced, but the hour being late he only spoke a few minutes. He showed that State taxes in 1884 were between 90 cents and 110 cents on the hundred dollars, and in 1887 they were 235 cents on the hundred; this showed a deal of extravagance which should be reformed. The money was squandered by a creation of a multitude of new offices.

Yours,
The following are the taxes on $1000 of assessed valuation in the township of York:

1880	$1.15
1881	1.30
1882	1.12
1883	1.54
1884	1.09
1885	1.80

You see that the taxes were $1.80 on $1000 in 1887. The man to whom Washtenaw county is called upon to give 2000 majority says it is $2.35 on $100. What a truthful set of men those Democratic candidates are!

BOARD OF SUPERVISORS.

Annual Meeting—J. V. N. Gregory made Chairman—The Superintendents of the Poor.

The board of supervisors of Washtenaw county met on Monday and opened its regular session. J. V. N. Gregory was made chairman. It was decided that the board should visit the county poor house today.

On Tuesday, the basis of equalization was fixed at $25,000,000.

Tomorrow at 2 p. m., the board will listen to the report of the county superintendents of the poor, and on Tuesday next at 2 p. m., the board will elect the next board of superintendents of the poor.

The present manner of depositing the county's money was continued, and the clerk will ask for bids from the several banks of Ann Arbor and present them to the board next Tuesday.

Yesterday the board received the following communication from Prosecuting attorney Norris relative to the unknown heir fund:

GENTLEMEN:—I desire to call your attention to what is known as the unknown heir fund and would respectfully say that some months ago Mrs. Theobald, who claims to be subject of Great Britain, made her petition to the honorable probate court of this county claiming among other things that she was the sole heir at law of Thomas Harvey, deceased, and praying the court to order the money belonging to such fund and coming from such Harvey estate, to be paid to her or to her attorney.

Such petition came on to be heard in said court on the 21st day of September last, I appearing therefor for the county, when the court granted the prayer of such petitioner and ordered the payment of such money.

The money has not as yet been paid for the reason among others that I advised such non-payment until your honorable body could determine whether or not you desired further to contest the question involved.

I therefore request that your honorable body take action in the premises to the end that your honorable body may be advised on the questions involved and that the money may be paid if payment is thought advisable.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Dated Oct. 10, 1888.
K. B. NORRIS, Pros. Atty.

Matilda Kranich died at 42 Wall-st., Saturday evening, very suddenly of convulsions that were the result of scarlet fever, from which she had apparently recovered. Two cases of scarlet fever occurred in the family, but no physician was called, and the health officer had no knowledge of it till the scarlet fever had apparently disappeared and the after effects alarmed the parents. The law makes it the duty of householders, if no physician does it, to notify the health officer immediately on the outbreak of scarlet fever in their families. It is very important. The deceased just mentioned was playing with other children a few minutes before her death, and may have spread the disease all over the ward.

THRILLING STORY.

IN THE CALIFORNIA DESERT.

BY LOUISE CLARKE.

Written for THE REGISTER.

The moon is shining down upon the yellow sands that have bleached all day under a glaring June sun.

You could not possibly mistake Marjorie West for one of the desert women. She is too well dressed for that, and hasn't seen enough of camp life to be worn and faded.

Her brother Dick, one of the group, holds a revolver in his hand, and is saying to her "This is a sure shot. Never known to fail. When you have killed your first coyote it shall be yours."

"I won't promise. But I know what I will do. I'll barricade every door and window in that house to the best of my ability. And I'll keep that revolver under my pillow for larger prey than coyotes."

"I can assure you there won't be any. Nothing better than coyotes around here. But should you be fortunate enough to find something worth while, be sure of your aim."

"I'll be so deeply buried in furniture, thank you, that no one could ever find me. When you come back you must dig me a burrow underneath the house, and I'll hide in it and lie dormant when you go away."

"Capital!" "And for my heroism in staying here alone, and my self denial in giving up that coveted trip to the Mine, my reward shall be a hundred shares in The Oakdale Asbestos Mine."

"Agreed," say the three horsemen together.

"Goodbye! kill your coyote!" cries her brother.

The three men wave their hats in the vivid moonlight, and calling back laughing remarks to the girl who watches them, they turn their horses, single file, into the west mountain trail.

Dick West and his two friends are going up to the mountains to sink a shaft, so that they may establish their claim to a recently discovered asbestos mine. They will camp in the mountains, and intend to return the second night. His companions are a ranchman from the camp, three miles farther down, and his old college chum, Frank Gray, who has come to the desert hoping to regain his health, but is gradually losing ground.

Now she feels that she is watched and her eyes follow the direction of the glance that holds her. There not far from her lies a man upon his back gazing fixedly at her. He does not speak. Her first impulse is to turn and flee, but she seems to be riveted to the spot. She stands and gazes, but surprise and fear have blinded her eyes. It is so strange to find a human being in this place.

All this time he has not moved or stirred. Marjorie has recovered from her panic. She realizes with quick intuition that she has nothing to fear. She starts to turn away; but is it so? Does a terrified look come into those eyes? A beseeching look? She turns back again. She walks to the man and still he neither stirs or speaks. He is — he must be too sick to move.

She bends over him; in the dim light she has hardly discerned his features — and, can it be? She looks closer. It is Frank Gray!

What can this mean? Where are her brother and his friends? How does he happen to be lying here? She does not cry out. She whispers to him that she will not leave him, and asks the good God to be with both his children, and thanks him that he has sent her.

She chafes the hands and forehead that are deadly cold. The eyes close and although she begs and calls he does not open them again.

CAPITAL NEWS.

A Daily Synopsis of Events in the Senate and House.

A Bill Relating to Electors' Certificates Discussed in the Senate—Little Work Done in the House—Other Notes.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—A bill was introduced in the Senate yesterday providing that the certificates and lists of votes for President and Vice-President shall be forwarded to the Senate after the second Monday in January on which the electors shall give their votes.

Mr. Sherman (O.), in speaking on the bill, said it contained a positive, unquestionable reduction of revenues to the extent of $73,688,000; that it enlarged the free list by adding to it certain articles which could not be produced in this country, and that there was not a single item in the bill which discriminated between sections of the country.

Early in the morning the Indian is up, and has drawn the coyote under cover. Marjorie makes her understand by pointing at the sun, and by many wild gesticulations, that she is to be back early, and shows how frightened she should be to stay there alone at night.

The day wears into late afternoon, but it will not be what is understood as night for some hours yet, and Marjorie determines to stretch her lazy limbs and to go on a little exploring expedition of her own. She is eager to see something of the country about here, for Dick and Frank Gray have assured her that it will be a revelation after the yellow sands.

"And you expect me to believe that, when you take such excellent care that I shall not see it. Palms! waterfalls! ferns! I don't suppose there is anything but sand within five hundred miles of us."

"Just wait till this asbestos business is done and we'll show you a thing or two." So she starts out and takes the trail as she has seen her brother and his friends do. She follows it carefully as it gradually ascends the mountain and then suddenly takes a turn into the valley below. All along the trail is entirely mountainous and unvaried. She is busy with her thoughts and does not realize how far behind she has left the level sands.

Now the path begins to take on decided signs of green, perhaps there are really palms and ferns beyond, and like a child following a butterfly she is impelled unconsciously farther, and farther down; deeper and still deeper into the valley she follows the trail. A brake appears here, and a palm there. Now they are of less stunted growth. Suddenly she finds herself facing the bare wall of a peak which threatens to bar her way. The trail takes an abrupt turn. It leads her into a most luxuriously dense growth of ferns. On a little farther still she goes with the trail, but she wonders a little at the dimness. She begins to think of going back.

"This is charming, but I'll lose the trail, I suppose, if night should fall. I don't suppose Dick will believe me when I tell him where I've been. I must have some witnesses."

She bends over to pick some small ferns. Her greed increases—she sees another just a little farther on that she must have—and then another, and still another.

But what is that which catches her eye among the brakes? She moves on thinking it may be a flower. She stoops and picks it up. It is a man's handkerchief.

Now she feels that she is watched and her eyes follow the direction of the glance that holds her. There not far from her lies a man upon his back gazing fixedly at her. He does not speak. Her first impulse is to turn and flee, but she seems to be riveted to the spot. She stands and gazes, but surprise and fear have blinded her eyes. It is so strange to find a human being in this place.

All this time he has not moved or stirred. Marjorie has recovered from her panic. She realizes with quick intuition that she has nothing to fear. She starts to turn away; but is it so? Does a terrified look come into those eyes? A beseeching look? She turns back again. She walks to the man and still he neither stirs or speaks. He is — he must be too sick to move.

She bends over him; in the dim light she has hardly discerned his features — and, can it be? She looks closer. It is Frank Gray!

What can this mean? Where are her brother and his friends? How does he happen to be lying here? She does not cry out. She whispers to him that she will not leave him, and asks the good God to be with both his children, and thanks him that he has sent her.

She chafes the hands and forehead that are deadly cold. The eyes close and although she begs and calls he does not open them again.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—A bill was introduced in the Senate yesterday providing that the certificates and lists of votes for President and Vice-President shall be forwarded to the Senate after the second Monday in January on which the electors shall give their votes.

Mr. Sherman (O.), in speaking on the bill, said it contained a positive, unquestionable reduction of revenues to the extent of $73,688,000; that it enlarged the free list by adding to it certain articles which could not be produced in this country, and that there was not a single item in the bill which discriminated between sections of the country.

Early in the morning the Indian is up, and has drawn the coyote under cover. Marjorie makes her understand by pointing at the sun, and by many wild gesticulations, that she is to be back early, and shows how frightened she should be to stay there alone at night.

The day wears into late afternoon, but it will not be what is understood as night for some hours yet, and Marjorie determines to stretch her lazy limbs and to go on a little exploring expedition of her own. She is eager to see something of the country about here, for Dick and Frank Gray have assured her that it will be a revelation after the yellow sands.

"And you expect me to believe that, when you take such excellent care that I shall not see it. Palms! waterfalls! ferns! I don't suppose there is anything but sand within five hundred miles of us."

"Just wait till this asbestos business is done and we'll show you a thing or two." So she starts out and takes the trail as she has seen her brother and his friends do. She follows it carefully as it gradually ascends the mountain and then suddenly takes a turn into the valley below. All along the trail is entirely mountainous and unvaried. She is busy with her thoughts and does not realize how far behind she has left the level sands.

Now the path begins to take on decided signs of green, perhaps there are really palms and ferns beyond, and like a child following a butterfly she is impelled unconsciously farther, and farther down; deeper and still deeper into the valley she follows the trail. A brake appears here, and a palm there. Now they are of less stunted growth. Suddenly she finds herself facing the bare wall of a peak which threatens to bar her way. The trail takes an abrupt turn. It leads her into a most luxuriously dense growth of ferns. On a little farther still she goes with the trail, but she wonders a little at the dimness. She begins to think of going back.

"This is charming, but I'll lose the trail, I suppose, if night should fall. I don't suppose Dick will believe me when I tell him where I've been. I must have some witnesses."

She bends over to pick some small ferns. Her greed increases—she sees another just a little farther on that she must have—and then another, and still another.

But what is that which catches her eye among the brakes? She moves on thinking it may be a flower. She stoops and picks it up. It is a man's handkerchief.

Early in the morning the Indian is up, and has drawn the coyote under cover. Marjorie makes her understand by pointing at the sun, and by many wild gesticulations, that she is to be back early, and shows how frightened she should be to stay there alone at night.

The day wears into late afternoon, but it will not be what is understood as night for some hours yet, and Marjorie determines to stretch her lazy limbs and to go on a little exploring expedition of her own. She is eager to see something of the country about here, for Dick and Frank Gray have assured her that it will be a revelation after the yellow sands.

"And you expect me to believe that, when you take such excellent care that I shall not see it. Palms! waterfalls! ferns! I don't suppose there is anything but sand within five hundred miles of us."

"Just wait till this asbestos business is done and we'll show you a thing or two." So she starts out and takes the trail as she has seen her brother and his friends do. She follows it carefully as it gradually ascends the mountain and then suddenly takes a turn into the valley below. All along the trail is entirely mountainous and unvaried. She chafes the hands and forehead that are deadly cold. The eyes close and although she begs and calls he does not open them again.

When at last the lights are out, the dismal screeching of the owl begins, which Jean Ingelow describes as "two notes of music tied together with a groan," but the howling of the coyotes, that come nearer and nearer, is beyond description. It does not seem to affect Marjorie's companion, for she has hardly lain down on her mat before she is snoring loudly.

After she has listened to these noises hours and hours, as it seems to her, Marjorie thinks she will try for the revolver after all; she goes cautiously to the windows, raises her arms, aims and when the smoke has cleared away she sees her victim stretched out on the sand. For the rest of the night the pack howl from a distance.

Early in the morning the Indian is up, and has drawn the coyote under cover. Marjorie makes her understand by pointing at the sun, and by many wild gesticulations, that she is to be back early, and shows how frightened she should be to stay there alone at night.

a man for groaning when he has Rheumatism or Neuralgia. The pain is simply awful. No torture in the annals of time was more painful than these twin diseases. But—oughtn't a man to be blamed if, having Rheumatism or Neuralgia, he went use Athlo-phoros, when it has cured thousands who have suffered in the same way? It has cured hundreds of them incurable.

"The skill of five physicians could not cure me of Rheumatism which had settled in the hips, neck and shoulders. So intense was the pain that sleep was almost impossible. The first dose of Athlo-phoros gave me relief, and the third enabled me to sleep for four and a half hours without waking. I continued its use, and am now well."

Floods in New Brunswick the Worst Known for Twenty Years—Maine Rivers on the Rampage—Disasters Elsewhere.

SWEEP BY STORMS.
GENEVA, Oct. 4.—The River Rhone has overflowed its banks and railroad traffic between Geneva and Lyons has been stopped in consequence, the tracks being submerged for miles. The town of Payerne is inundated and several persons have been drowned at Seyssel. The dykes at Payerne are broken and the plains are one vast lake.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—Many families have been rendered homeless by extensive floods in the region of the Alps and the Jura.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—Violent storms have prevailed on the North sea. Several fishing smacks which have arrived at English ports report a loss of a portion of their crews who were washed overboard.

ST. JOHNS, N. B., Oct. 10.—Not for twenty years have there been such autumn floods as are now devastating the western and southern part of this province. The rainfall up to 4 p. m. Monday was 4.55 inches for this month, while the average of the entire month of October for twenty-five years has been 4.60 inches. Communication with Bangor is again cut off, owing to numerous wash-outs on the New Brunswick railway. A mile from Welsford there is a wash-out 500 feet in length and 4 feet deep. A mile further away there is another 15 feet deep and 30 feet long, while several smaller ones vary from 3 to 15 feet.

The "Flying Yankee," for Boston, was tied up at Welsford, and the down train from Fredericton was stopped within fifteen miles of that place by the giving way of a bridge. All the streams along the line have overflowed their banks, and the whole country for miles at a stretch seems to be under water. There are wash-outs on the line of the Northern & Western, which extends from Fredericton to Chatham. There are several wash-outs above Welsford, and the passage of trains is stopped for two more days at least. All mail matter for the United States will be sent by way of the Inter-Colonial railway to Richmond Junction.

CALENS, Me., Oct. 10.—There has been, for the season, a remarkable rain-fall here during the past ten days. The St. Croix river has risen rapidly, and is now within a foot of the high-water mark of last spring's freshet. The St. Croix cotton-mill at Salmon Falls was obliged to shut down on account of high water and the immense amount of debris carried into the racks. Numerous wash-outs and landslides have occurred on railroads, and country roads are in very bad condition.

FAIRFIELD, Me., Oct. 10.—A great freshet prevails in this vicinity and nearly all the mills on the Aristook river have lost more or less lumber. There are wash-outs on the railroad and there have been no through trains since Sunday morning.

VANOUVER, B. C., Oct. 10.—The damage done by the recent gale in Japan, according to the latest reports brought by steamer to this place, is heavier than was at first supposed. The loss to agriculture is very severe. The salt and rice fields are submerged. A number of bridges have been carried away. Two thousand nine hundred and forty-seven houses were destroyed and 159 persons killed or drowned and fully 100 more injured.

A Tribute to Sheridan.
PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 10.—Dr. William Pepper, who as consulting physician attended the late General Sheridan during his last illness, has been asked by Colonel Sheridan to render a bill for his professional services. In reply to this request Dr. Pepper, under date of October 3, sent the following to Colonel Sheridan:

"I am in receipt of your note of September 28 requesting me to forward you an account for professional services rendered in consultation with the late General Sheridan during his last illness. You must permit me to say that I desire these services to be regarded only as an expression of that deep and lasting obligation which I, in common with all others, owed to him."

Struck it Rich.
HELENA, M. T., Oct. 10.—Workmen excavating for sewers on Main street made a rich find in shape of pay dirt, which runs from fifty cents to one dollar a pan. The find is located in Alder Gulch, which yielded many millions in the seventies. Old-timers say this rich dirt covers about a block of ground. Contractors are taking measures to thoroughly work the ground, which placer miners say will net many thousands.

The Failure Record.
NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—R. G. Dur & Co., say: It is encouraging that while the number of failures is large, the amount of liabilities for the third quarter of the year shows a great decrease, from $75,023, 556 last year to $23,114,354 for the quarter just ended. Business failures during the last seven days number, for the United States, 184; Canada, 27; total, 211; as compared with 230 last week and 212 for the corresponding week of last year.

Brutes Punished.
BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 5.—George La Blanche, John Leslie, William Baker and John Floss were convicted of aiding and abetting the prize-fight between Hattie Leslie and Alice Leary. La Blanche and Floss were sentenced to three months, Leslie and Baker to six months at hard labor. Hattie Leslie was discharged and the indictment against Alice Leary was dismissed.

A Complete Success.
PORTLAND, Me., Oct. 5.—A long-distance telephone communication was successfully accomplished Tuesday between Portland and Philadelphia, via Boston, Providence and New York. Providence works as distinct as any short distance line; New York quite clear; Philadelphia more muffled. These connections will be permanent.

Mrs. Harrison Holds a Reception.
CINCINNATI, Oct. 10.—Mrs. General Harrison was given a reception in music hall at the exposition Tuesday afternoon and shook hands with 2,000 visitors, nearly all ladies. The Cincinnati Republican Club of Women, the centennial commissioners, General Lew Wallace and ex-President Hayes were on the stage.

Hurt by an Explosion.
CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 6.—A terrific explosion of accumulated gas occurred yesterday in the new water-works tunnel in this city, and five men were terribly burned and were taken out in a dying condition.

Two Hundred Natives Killed.
LONDON, Oct. 7.—A dispatch from India states that a primitive expedition of British troops is to Somalia engaged the natives with a loss of 200 to the forces of the latter and slight loss to the attacking party.

A HOOSIER'S TERRIBLE CRIME.

He Kills His Mother, His Foster-Sister, Sets the House on Fire and Commits Suicide.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 10.—The frame dwelling of N. B. Wade, occupied by Mrs. Sarah Higgins, his mother, and Mrs. Martha Cates, was discovered on fire at Knightstown, early Monday morning. After breaking open the door Mr. Wade was found unconscious at his mother's bed. He was taken out, but died in a few minutes. His mother was dead before taken out. Mrs. Cates was not found until her legs and arms were burned off. She died in a short time. A shoe-knife covered with blood and a bottle of paraffin green was taken from Wade's pocket, and the indications are that he murdered the two women and committed suicide after setting fire to the house, the testimony before the coroner tending to substantiate this theory. Mrs. Cates was the widow of a soldier. She resided with Mrs. Higgins, who had reared her from childhood. In 1876 Mrs. Cates was granted $1,400 arrearage of pension and a regular pension of $10 a month. Wade illegally assumed her guardianship and appropriated the money to his own credit. Recently she complained to the Grand Army post of her treatment by Wade. A legal guardian was appointed, and it was found that Wade had appropriated $2,800 of her money. Monday Wade would have been compelled to account for the money, and it is presumed he had been brooding over the matter so much that he became partly insane, went to his mother's house Sunday night, and after inflicting fatal wounds on Mrs. Cates set fire to the house, took paraffin green and threw himself into the flames.

According to Alphonse Daudet literary people, as a rule, have a horror of music. Leonote de Lisle and Banville share in this opinion. The moment a piano opens Goncourt frowns and Zola frowns suit. Daudet alone among his especial entourage loves music madly.

What there is in a Bottle.

SMARTING Sufficient to stop in five minutes the smarting, stinging pain of sunburns or scalds. It will stop the pain as soon as applied.

COUGHING Abundance to cure a score of colds and the coughing that often leads the way to Consumption. It will positively ease a Cough in 15 minutes.

CHOKING More than enough to save a dozen children Choking with Croup. One minute after the first dose the hardest attack of Croup will be relieved.

WHEEZING Plenty to relieve the oppression and wheezing of the most severe case of Asthma. The direct cure of Asthma by this medicine are proof that Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil has no equal as an Asthma cure.

Terrible Scene at the Laying of a Church Corner-Stone.
READING, Pa., Oct. 8.—The corner-stone of the Polish Catholic church in this city was laid yesterday afternoon, and during the ceremony the floor, on which two thousand men, women and children were standing, gave way, precipitating several hundred people to the basement, a distance of fifteen feet. Ninety persons were severely injured, ten probably fatally, and several were missing. All the physicians in the city were promptly in attendance and every thing possible was done for the relief of the sufferers. Very touching scenes were witnessed among the thousands who had gathered to the church in search of friends and relatives.

Boiled to Death in a Hot Spring.
DENVER, Col., Oct. 7.—Samuel C. Pratt met with a terrible death Friday in the hot springs at Nevada. He went down to take a bath, and was found a few hours later lying face down upon the bank. He died in a short time. It is believed that he was unaware of the dense heat of the water and remained in it too long.

Uphold Their President.
LONDON, Oct. 7.—The most of the French press justify President Carnot's decree on the ground that out of 1,100,000 foreigners in France only one-eighth are of that nationality, and that only one-fourth of the citizens of foreign extraction were born in France.

The Best Time Yet Made.
BROCKTON, Mass., Oct. 7.—On the fair grounds here Mme. Marcianette drove Major Banks and Company to wagon one mile in 1:54, over a half-mile track, the record heretofore being 1:55.

Swift Vengeance.
DENVER, Col., Oct. 7.—At Boston, Col., a man named Hickman shot and killed J. C. Booth in a quarrel about a woman, and a mob of seventy-five men afterward took Hickman from his house and lynched him.

Don't sneez, sneeze, hawk, hawk, spit, blow, and disgust everybody with your offensive breath. If you have acid, watery discharges from the nose and eyes, throat disease, causing choking sensations, cough, ringing noises in head, splitting headache and other symptoms of nasal catarrh, remember that the manufacturers of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy offer, in good faith, $500 reward for a case of catarrh which they cannot cure. The Remedy is sold by druggists at only 50 cents.

"A Great Newspaper."

Under the above caption the New York Graphic, some three years ago, published a critical review of the growth of THE CHICAGO DAILY NEWS, which sets forth so clearly some of the fundamental principles underlying the development of one of the phenomenal successes of later years that it will repay a reading. To bring some of the Graphic's figures down to the present date, supplemental statements are parenthetically added by the present writer.

"THE newspaper entitled to the distinction of having the largest daily circulation in America is THE CHICAGO DAILY NEWS. (Since this statement was made it is possible that the growth of the New York World entitles it to first place.) The Graphic to-day devotes a page to sketches of scenes in and about its establishment. The history of this paper is probably without a parallel in the annals of American journalism. It was founded December 20th, 1875, and was the first low-priced daily successfully established in the West. At the end of its first year it had achieved a circulation of about 10,000. From that time on its growth has been remarkable. It now prints seven editions daily, comprising both morning and evening issues. Its statement of circulation for the year 1884 shows a daily average of 125,178 copies, unquestionably the largest daily circulation on the American continent. (The sworn statement for 1887 shows a daily average of 165,376.)

"In politics THE DAILY NEWS is always independent, never neutral. While its editorial expression is sometimes vigorous to the degree of severity, there is always in its utterances of opinion so manifest a purpose to be impartial and fair to all opposing interests, that it rarely loses the confidence of the reader, however much it may fail to bring him to an acceptance of its own view concerning the matter in hand.

"As a newspaper proper, THE DAILY NEWS has earned a reputation for enterprising news-gathering second to none in the United States. It is the only cheap paper in the West

A GREAT flurry has been caused by the death of a few hundred people in Florida from yellow fever. Yet typhoid fever kills each year its one thousand in Michigan, and diphtheria even more, without causing much agitation outside of the stricken homes.

Will the intelligent Democrats of the county be so Bourbon as to vote their county ticket straight without scanning it carefully? Look at Pettifogger Lehman, for instance. Is it possible that such a man can be elected prosecuting attorney against John F. Lawrence, a good lawyer and a man of unquestioned integrity? Lehman secured the position of member of the county board of school examiners by methods that are questionable, to say the least. Is not that enough?

The free trade papers are pointing with glee to the 40,000 unemployed men in Chicago. Yet in London, Eng., 481 girls recently applied for one position. The boldest among them hardly dared to ask $5.00 per week. In England and Wales 48 per cent. of the marriageable women are unmarried; in Scotland, 55 per cent. and in Ireland, 59 per cent. Surely this doesn't promise very well for the future greatness of the British isles, and argues very little for free trade.

Mr. BLAINE says of Gen. Harrison: "Gen. Harrison has the agreeable faculty of condensing a whole argument within the dimensions of a proverb. It is the faculty which was the striking feature in Benjamin Franklin's mode of reasoning, and Mr. Lincoln possessed it in a very remarkable degree. Never was happier argument more felicitously stated than when Gen. Harrison said that free traders were studying maxims instead of markets. In a single phrase he exhibited the fallacy and the weakness of their whole argument."

Would-be congressman Stearns says that the Mills bill is not a free trade measure, and that his party is not for free trade; yet Henry George and his followers, the only consistent free traders in the country, are heartily supporting Cleveland. In Congress, all the Democratic speeches were for free trade. Bland, of Missouri, said: "I am here to get the tariff off of everything I can." Lane, of Illinois, said: "Our trade should be as free as possible." McKinney of New Hampshire, said: "Give us a free and open market, with the world." S. S. Cox thought there was no more warrant for protection than there would be for the abridgement of speech. Stone, of Kentucky, declared that protection was doomed. Now does Mr. Stearns know what he is talking about?

FOR REPRESENTATIVE.

Let us vote for the man most competent to look after our interests. No locality in the state is more directly concerned in doing the correct thing in this matter. We should be represented by a man of ability and tact, and experience in legislation would be material assistance. We are all too well acquainted with Mr. Sawyer not to know that he would be, as our representative, the right man in the right place. It is not often that one of his strength can be induced to act for us in this capacity. We ought to show our appreciation by giving him a large majority. What he did for us in the session of 1877 has not been forgotten. The appropriations for the University were then assailed in earnest and with some bitterness, and it was through his efforts that the University secured $10,000 more in appropriations than the regents asked for.

The strike of street-car men in Chicago is a serious inconvenience to the citizens, but the sympathy is still with the strikers. Yerkes' treatment of the employees was brutal. He once said: "The men have not enough ambition to strike. Their spirit is broken. Did you ever notice one of our conductors or grip-men? They will stand anything. They are used to it." This would-be potentate seems to regard the employees as no better than cattle. The arbitrary conduct of such men as he may force cities in self-defense to operate the street car lines for themselves, instead of leaving them in the hands of selfish masters. Under such a system there would be no strikes in the street-car service.

A FEW cases of typhoid fever have occasionally occurred in the state prison at Jackson. The state board of health and the prison authorities have spent much time in searching for the cause of the outbreaks, and the result is a recent thorough overhauling of the prison sewerage system. This eagerness to better the sanitary condition of our prisons is in fine contrast to the Russian prison system, and the civilizations represented by the two countries are well brought out by the comparison. In the Tomsk forwarding prison in Siberia in 1882, 1268 prisoners were treated for typhus fever and 1311 for diphtheria, measles, and small-pox. The terrible condition of the prison is well known to the Russian officials, but they make no effort to better it. The prison was designed to hold 1400 prisoners, but has been made to do service for 3500 at one time.

The three hottest days in Detroit during the summer were June 17, 94.2°; July 11, 91.5°; and Aug. 26, 91°. One man guessed two of these days in competition for the Detroit Evening Journal prize of $500; but no one of the 6,000 guessers won the prize. Gen. Greely, who is at the head of the signal office, hit upon three of the coldest days of the summer in his predictions. It is mere guessing, of course, as meteorological science is too young to make such predictions; but the appearance of the chief signal officer in such a game of chance is apt to injure the meteorological service, as it leads the unlearned to suppose that there is data upon which such predictions can be founded. The excellent Journal gets plenty of good advertising out of it and is in little danger of having to pay the prize. It now offers $1000 in gold for the guesser of the four coldest days of the coming winter.

The Republicans have again shown themselves equal to the occasion. To have adjourned Congress without an attempt to do something with the surplus in the National treasury would have been a confession of weakness. On Wednesday of last week Senator Allison, from the committee on finance, reported back the Mills bill with a substitute. This bill has the advantage over the Mills bill of providing for a reduction of $75,000,000 annually in receipts, without disturbing the great industries of the country. The income from sugar, if this bill should become a law, would be $27,750,000 less each year. The rest of the reduction is divided as follows: free list, $6,500,000; tobacco, (internal revenue), $24,500,000; alcohol in the arts, $7,000,000; miscellaneous customs, $8,000,000. Thus the issue between the two parties is more clearly drawn, and it is certain that the Democrats care more for getting a start in the direction of free trade than they do about decreasing the revenue.

A DETROIT girl, near to the "old maid" period of life, has married a Russian military officer. If it was from pure affection, it is all right and proper. Whether it is so or not is probably none of our business. There are one or two considerations, however, connected with it, that are of public interest. The Russian officer speaks not a word of English; but he speaks French. The girl probably has a boarding school smattering of French, and in that polite tongue the courtship was carried on. What a good understanding; what a mingling of souls must have taken place! The Russian officer, if he has liberal political views, may drag his wife to Siberia in the course of time; if he ardently believes in the established order in Russia, his wife, born in the pure air of comparative freedom, will learn to be an aristocrat and a hater of liberty, if she already is not far on the road. She will have to repress every generous sigh for the upliftment of the Russian people, and uphold all the hateful and cruel institutions which keep Russia for the enjoyment of the few.

UNITARIANS IN ANN ARBOR.

Close of Ten Years' Work—What Dr. Sunderland Thinks of Ann Arbor—The Scope of His Work.

The beautiful Unitarian church was tastefully adorned with flowers and autumn leaves last Sunday. It was the tenth anniversary of the Rev. Dr. Sunderland's settlement in Ann Arbor as pastor, and the sermon was largely devoted to a review of what the church had accomplished here during the decade. In speaking of Ann Arbor, Mr. Sunderland said:

"I have always been impressed with the attractiveness of its natural situation, and felt that this fine elevated plateau, with its picturesque river scenery on one side, and its beautiful hills and valleys all around, seem almost to have been made on purpose for a great institution of learning."

In speaking of the growth of the University, he said:

"Some of the best University buildings have been erected this decade, including the museum, the mechanical and physical laboratories, and most important of all, the library of which President Andrew White, of Cornell, said to me soon after its completion, 'I have seen all the important library buildings of America and Europe, and I regard yours at Ann Arbor as the most perfect.' Almost steady prosperity seems to have attended the University, the number of students having increased until it is now in the close neighborhood of seventeen hundred. Then the school of music, which has been established within the ten years, is growing in importance, and the high school, which, although it has no organic connection with the University, really acts as a preparatory department to it, has now nearly five hundred students, about half of whom come from a distance. Thus we see our student population already rising to considerably more than two thousand."

After dwelling upon the activity of various denominations in establishing lectureships and other means of spreading their views in Ann Arbor, Mr. Sunderland expressed the hope that the Unitarians some day shall have a school here to teach Unitarianism.

The work of the ten years included the erection of the church building, the gathering of a library for the church of some 1500 volumes of nearly new books, the building of a parsonage, and the successful establishment of the Unitarian. The average edition of the ten numbers of this journal published this year have been over 6,000, which means that it has 25,000 readers.

The Minstrels.

The Indianapolis Journal says: McNish, Ramza & Arno's minstrels gave their first performance last night, at the Grand Opera House, after a program of more than average excellence. The company presents its first part in a style more attractive than usually followed in minstrel entertainment, but as pleasing to the eye as was the arrangement of the stage it was nothing compared to the succession of good things offered in the music, both vocal and instrumental. The jokes were not remarkable for novelty, but the audience appreciated them. Lew Benedict, who has renewed his youth, was especially favored with applause when he sang his topical song. Frank McNish also caught attention and approbation in his swell song. The olio was good in the number, character and variety of specialties. There will be a matinee and evening performance today.

W. P. Lamkin has gone in partnership with Perry Lamkin on the latter's new broomhandle machine. They have applied for a patent, and the new machines will be manufactured here this winter in Lamkin's machine shop. The new reservoir at east Manchester is now completed. It is a very fine piece of workmanship, and is just what is needed in that part of the town.

The first regular meeting of the Alpha Sigma Literary society was held in the school building, Monday evening. There was a discussion between Miss Tillie Jaquemant and Fred Freeman, on the subject "Should woman vote."

The performance at the Grand last night was in every way equal to the reputation which had already preceded Messrs. McNish, Ramza and Arno. Sunday's entertainment was good, but the absence of Frank McNish was a loss that could not be glossed over. It may equally be remarked that his presence last night gave a tone, a vim and "go" to the business which was noticeable from start to finish. The audience caught on to the spirit of the performers at the beginning of the evening and laughter and encores were continuous till the curtain fell. In the first part Mr. Fred Matthews scored a well-deserved encore by his singing of "Nearing the Harbor." Melville, the conjurer, was decidedly one of the sensations of the olio, and the audience tried hard to get an encore from him. Frank McNish in "Silence and Fun" and Ramza and Arno in their horizontal bar acts were imitable and laughable as of yore, and were enthusiastically received. The olio is full of novelties and the entire performance is one of the most perfect yet presented by any minstrel company in this city.—Cincinnati Times-Star, July 31.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, causing distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet efficiently. It tones the stomach, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, banishes headache, and refreshes the mind.

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. After eating I would have a faint or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble was aggravated by my business, painting. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, which did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." GEORGE A. PAGE, Watertown, Mass.

New York, Oct. 6.—At a mass-meeting of citizens irrespective of party, held at Cooper Union Thursday, Mayor Hewitt was unanimously nominated for another term.

New Orleans, Oct. 6.—The Prohibition State convention has nominated a full electoral ticket. There were twenty-five delegates present, and they claim they can poll about 2,000 votes.

Gettysburg, Pa., Oct. 7.—The Democratic Congressional conferees of the Nineteenth district have unanimously re-nominated Congressman Levi Maish.

THE SENATE TARIFF BILL.

It Makes a Reduction of Over $70,000,000 in the Revenues.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—Senator Allison, from the Committee on Finance, reported back the House Tariff bill with an amendment in the nature of a substitute. It was placed on the calendar and ordered to be printed. According to the estimates made by the committee the bill provides for a total reduction of about $75,000,000, made up approximately as follows: Sugar, $27,750,000; free list, $6,500,000; tobacco (internal revenue), $24,500,000; alcohol in the arts, $7,000,000; other reductions in customs, $8,000,000.

The bill embodies an entire revision of the tariff schedules and the administrative features of the present law proposing the re-enactment of all such features as in the opinion of the majority of the committee ought not to be changed. The free list in the Senate bill is very short compared with that of the Mills bill. Among its most important items are currants, jute and other manufactured fibrous substances and grasses, crude opium and certain chemicals. The cut on sugar duties is far below that made in the Mills bill. The duties on wool and manufacturers of wool are raised somewhat in nearly all the items of the schedule. The schedule of metals is slightly lowered. The rates on earthenware and glassware are also slightly reduced. Alcohol to be used in the industrial arts is relieved from the payment of an internal revenue tax, and provisions are made for bonded warehouses and other guards against fraud. The tobacco taxes are mainly wiped out, with the exception of taxes on cigars, cheroots and cigarettes.

STREET-CAR EMPLOYEES STRIKE.

Enforced Pedestrianism on the North and West Sides of Chicago.

CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—The conductors, drivers and gripmen of the North Chicago Street Railroad Company, over 500 in number, struck this morning. The men ask for a revision of the hours of labor, and the establishment of the following scale of prices: Horse-car men, 21 cents per hour; rail-car men, 23 cents; grip-car men, 27 cents.

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—The West-side street-car drivers and conductors quit work this morning out of sympathy with the North-side strikers. They claim that as the lines on which they are employed are under control of Mr. Yerkes, they fear a reduction in wages should the latter be successful in his trouble across the river.

CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—An attempt to run cars yesterday on the North and West sides caused two riots, in which the police charged upon the rioters and clubbed them severely. There are 1,450 policemen in Chicago under the orders of Superintendent Hubbard, who stands ready and determined to keep peace. During the day four men and two boys were arrested charged with inciting to riot.

ON STARVATION'S BRINK.

A Terrible Story of Destitution in Ramsey County, D. T.—An Urgent Appeal for Help.

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 6.—A horrible story of widespread destitution comes from Ramsey County, D. T., where the entire population is on the brink of starvation. Mayor Smith has received an appeal signed by county officials and prominent citizens of Ramsey, urging the people of St. Paul to take steps at once to alleviate the distress existing in the county. The appeal for aid is accompanied by a statement to the effect that the recent frosts destroyed thousands of bushels of wheat and left destitute the residents of all but one of the townships in the county. Application has been made to the county authorities for assistance, but it has been discovered that the want is so great that it would financially ruin the county to attempt to alleviate it.

CELESTIALS RETURNED FROM CHINA.

The Question of Their Landing to Be Decided by the Courts.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 9.—The steamer Belgic arrived Sunday, twenty-nine days from Hong Kong, having been delayed by head winds and high seas. She brings 106 Chinese. It being Sunday there was no attempt to land them, but it is thought that friends of the Chinese will immediately apply for a writ of habeas corpus for one of those on board to test the genuineness of whose certificate and right to land under the old law there could be no doubt. That the application will be denied by the United States courts they feel sure. The case will be carried to the United States Supreme Court and the constitutionality of the Scott bill decided. The Duke of Westminster also arrived from Hong Kong via Vancouver, B. C., with 211 Chinese aboard.

The Buried Chicago Bank.

CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—Cashier Tallman, of the Traders' Bank, appeared before Master in Chancery Noyes and told of the affairs of that wrecked institution. He said that he and the late president, Butler, were its only officers; that he never had read the charter. He estimated the assets at $400,000, which included $300,000 doubtful debts.

The Yellow Fever.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Oct. 10.—The situation here presents two striking features—an increase of new cases and a decrease of deaths. This is contrary to the experience in previous epidemics. The new cases reported Tuesday numbered 96; deaths, 4. Total cases to date (corrected), 3,319; total deaths, 299.

Prudence! Prudence!

In medication, as in aught else, prudence should be our guide. Yet thousands cast it to the winds. Every new nostrum finds its patrons, the medical empirics of every false school have their gulls. Every change in the gamut of humbug is rung successfully—for a time at least—the notes being furnished by the credulous.

In happy contrast to the many advertised impostures of the day stands Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, now in its third decade of popularity, approved and recommended by physicians, indorsed by the press of many lands, sought and prized by invalids everywhere. It is an ascertained specific for any preventive of malarial diseases, chronic indigestion, liver complaint and constipation, checks the growth of rheumatism, and neuralgia, is a peerless invigorant and useful diuretic. Nervous people benefit by it.

KNOXVILLE, TENN., July 2, 1888. The Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga. Gentlemen—I can cheerfully and truthfully say that S. S. S. is the greatest blood purifier on earth. In 1884 I contracted blood poison. Physicians treated me with no good results. I took a half dozen different kinds of blood medicines, but, without receiving any permanent relief! I was induced to try S. S. S. I began the first bottle with the gravest doubts of success. I had been so often deceived. But improvement came, and I continued its use until perfectly well. I have since married, and have a healthy family. No trace of the disease is seen. Swift's Specific did all this for me, and I am grateful. Yours truly, J. S. STRADER, 118 Dale Ave.

KEMP, TEXAS, June 23, 1888. The Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga. Gentlemen—A sixteen-year-old son of mine was afflicted with bad blood, and broke out with an eruption on various parts of his body. The Sweetest Girl in School.

"She's the sweetest girl in school!" enthusiastically exclaimed one young miss to another, as they passed down the street together. "Edith is so kind, and gentle, and unselfish, every one likes her. And she has lovely blue hair and pretty eyes. Isn't it a pity her complexion is so bad; it spoils her looks. And then she has such dreadful headaches!" The girls skipped along, but it happened Edith's mother had heard what they said. It set her thinking. What could be done for those headaches and the rough, muddy complexion, that was such a trial to her gentle daughter. She recalled what she had read of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and on the spur of the moment she slipped into a drug store and bought a supply. Edith took it faithfully, with the result that it cleared her discolored blood, relieved the headaches, made her skin soft, fair and rosy, and now she is not only the "sweetest girl in school," but the most beautiful.

MAIWA'S REVENGE

By H. RIDER HAGGARD.

CHAPTER VI THE PLAN OF CAMPAIGN.

"Notwithstanding all that we had gone through, perhaps, indeed, on account of it—for I was thoroughly worn out—I slept that night as soundly as poor Gobo, round whose crushed body the hyenas would now be prowling. Rising refreshed at dawn we went on our way toward Nala's kraal, which we reached at nightfall. It is built on open ground, after the Zulu fashion, in a ring fence and with beehive huts. The cattle kraal is behind and a little to the left. Indeed, both from their habits and their talk, it was easy to see that these Butiana belong to that section of the Bantu people which since Tchaka's time has been known as the Zulu race. We did not see the chief Nala that night. His daughter Maiwa went on to his private huts as soon as we arrived, and very shortly afterward one of his headmen came short of night, with a sheep and some mealies and milk with him. The chief sent us greeting, he said, and would see us on the morrow. Meanwhile he was ordered to bring us to a place of resting, where we and our goods should be safe and undisturbed. Accordingly he led the way to some very good huts just outside Nala's private inclosure, and here we slept comfortably.

"On the morrow about 8 o'clock the headman came again, and said that Nala requested that I would visit him. Accordingly I followed him into the private enclosure, and was introduced to the chief—a fine looking man of about 50, with very delicately shaped hands and feet, and a rather nervous mouth. The chief was seated on a tanned ox-hide outside his hut. By his side was his daughter Maiwa, and round him, squatted on their haunches, were some twenty headmen or Indunas, whose number was continually added to by fresh arrivals. These men saluted me as I entered, and the chief rose and took my hand, ordering a stool to be brought for me to sit on. When this was done, he with much eloquence and native courtesy thanked me for protecting his daughter in the painful and dangerous circumstances in which she found herself placed, and also complimented me very highly upon what he was pleased to call the bravery with which I had defended the pass in the rocks. I answered in appropriate terms, saying that it was to Maiwa herself that thanks were due, for had it not been for her warning and knowledge of the country we should not have been here today, while as to the defense of the pass, I was fighting for my life, and that put heart into me.

"These courtesies being concluded, Nala called upon his daughter Maiwa to tell her tale to the headmen, and this she did most simply and effectively. She reminded them that she had gone as an unwilling bride to Wambe; that no cattle had been paid for her, because Wambe had threatened war if she was not sent as a free gift. Since she had entered the kraal of Wambe her days had been days of heaviness, and her nights nights of weeping. She had been beaten, she had been neglected, and made to do the work of a grown born wife—she, a chief's daughter. She had borne a child, and this was the story of the child. Then, amidst a dead silence, she told them the awful tale which she had already narrated to me. When she had finished her hearers gave a loud ejaculation. "Oa!" they said—"ou, Maiwa, daughter of Nala!" "Ay," she went on, with flashing eyes—"ay, it is true. My mouth is as full of truth as a flower of honey, and for tears my eyes are like the dew upon the grass at dawn. It is true; I saw the child die. Here is the proof of it, conciliators; and she drew forth the little dead hand, and held it before them. "Oa!" they said again—"ou! it is the dead hand!" "Yes," she continued, "it is the dead hand of my dead child, and I bear it with me that I may never forget, never for one short hour, that I may see Wambe die and be avenged. Will you bear with it, my father, that your daughter and your daughter's child should be so treated by a Maturu? Will ye bear it, men of my own people?" "No," said an old Induna, rising; "it is not to be borne. Enough have we suffered at the hands of these Maturu dogs and their long tongued chief. Let us put it to the issue." "It is not to be borne indeed," said Nala; "but how can we make head against so great a people?" "Ask of him—ask of Macumazahn the wise white man," said Maiwa, pointing to me. "How do we overcome Wambe, Macumazahn the hunter?" "How does the jackal overreach the lion, Nala?" "By cleverness, Macumazahn." "So shall you overcome Wambe, Nala." "At this moment an interruption occurred. A man entered, and said that messengers had arrived from Wambe. "What is their message?" asked Nala. "They come to ask that thy daughter Maiwa be sent back, and with her the white hunter." "How shall I make answer to this, Macumazahn?" said Nala, when the man had withdrawn. "Thus shalt thou answer," I said, after reflection. "Say that the woman shall be sent and I with her, and then bid the messengers begone. Stay; I will hide myself here in the hut that the men may not see me." And I did.

"Shortly afterward, through a crack in the hut, I saw the messengers arrive, and great truculent looking fellows they were. There were four of them, and they had evidently traveled hard. They entered with a swagger and squatted down before Nala. "Your business?" said Nala, frowning. "We come from Wambe, bearing the orders of Wambe to Nala his servant," answered the spokesman of the party. "Speak," said Nala, with a curious twitch of his nervous looking mouth. "These are the words of Wambe, 'Send back the woman, my wife, who has run away from my kraal, and send with her the white man who has dared to hunt in my country without my leave and to slay my soldiers.' These are the words of Wambe."

"And if I say I will not send them?" asked Nala. "Then, on behalf of Wambe, we declare war upon you. Wambe will eat you up. He will wipe you out. Your kraals shall be stamped flat—so; and with an expressive gesture, he drew his hand across his mouth to show complete would be the annihilation of the chief who dared to defy Wambe. "These are heavy words," said Nala. "Let me think before I give an answer."

"Then followed a little piece of acting that was really very creditable to the untutored savage mind. The heralds withdrew, but not of sight, and Nala went through the show of earnestly consulting his Indunas. The girl, Maiwa, too, flung herself at his feet, and appeared to weep and implore his protection, while he wrung his hands as though in doubt and tribulation of mind. At length he summoned the messengers to draw near and addressed them, while Maiwa sobbed very realistically at his side. "Wambe is a great chief," said Nala, "and this woman is his wife, whom he has a right to claim. She must return to him, but her feet are sore with walking. She cannot come now. In eight days from this day she shall be delivered at the kraal of Wambe. I will send her with a party of my men. As for the white hunter and his men, I have naught to do with them, and cannot answer for their misdeeds. They have wandered hither unasked by me, and I will deliver them back whence they came, that Wambe may judge them according to his law. They shall be sent with the girl. For you, go your ways. Food shall be given you without the kraal and a present for Wambe in atonement of the ill-doing of my daughter. I have spoken."

"At first the heralds seemed inclined to insist upon Maiwa's accompanying them then and there, but ultimately, on being shown the swollen condition of her feet, they gave up the point and departed. "When they were well out of the way I emerged from the hut, and we went on to discuss the situation and make our plans. First of all, as I was careful to explain to Nala, I was not going to give him my experience and services for nothing. I heard that Wambe had a stockade round his kraal made of elephant tusks. These tusks, in the event of our succeeding in our enterprise, I should claim as my perquisite, with the proviso that Nala should furnish me with men to carry them down to the coast.

"To this modest request he and the headmen gave an unqualified and hearty assent, the more hearty, perhaps, because they never expected to finger them. "The next thing that I stipulated was that, if we conquered, the white man, John Evers, should be handed over to me, together with any goods that he might claim. His cruel captivity was, I need hardly say, the only reason that induced me to join in so rare a brain expedition; but I was careful, from motives of policy, to keep this fact in the background. Nala accepted this condition. My third stipulation was that no women or children should be killed. This being also agreed to, we went on to consider ways and means. Wambe was, it appeared, a very powerful petty chief; that is, he could put at least 5,000 fighting men into the field, and always had from 3,000 to 4,000 collected about his kraal, which was supposed to be impregnable. Nala, on the contrary, could not, at such short notice, collect more than from 1,000 to 1,200 men, though, being of the Zulu stock, they were of much better stuff for fighting purposes than Wambe's Maturus.

"These odds, though large, were not, under the circumstances, overwhelming. The real obstacle to our chance of success was the difficulty of delivering a crushing assault against Wambe's strong place. This was, it appeared, fortified all round with chicanes, or stone walls, and contained numerous caves and koppias in the hill side and at the foot of the mountain which no force had ever been able to capture. It was said that in the time of the Zulu monarch, Dingaan, a great impi of that king's, having penetrated to this district, had delivered an assault upon the kraal, then owned by a forefather of Wambe's, and been beaten back with the loss of more than a thousand men. Having thought the question over, I closely interrogated Maiwa as to the fortifications and the topographical peculiarities of the spot, and not without results. I discovered that the kraal was indeed impregnable to a front attack, but that it was very slightly defended to the rear, which ran up the slope of the mountain; indeed, only by two lines of stone walls. The reason of this was that the mountain is quite impassable, except by one secret path, supposed to be known only to the chief and his conciliators, and this being so, it had not been considered necessary to fortify it.

"Well," I said, when she had done, "and now as to this secret path of thine, knowest thou aught of it?" "Ay," she answered; "I am no fool, Macumazahn. Knowledge learned is power earned. I won the secret of that path." "And canst thou guide an impi thereon, so that it shall fall upon the town from behind?" "Yes; this can I do, if only Wambe's people know not that the impi comes, for if they know then can they block the way." "So, then, here is my plan. Listen, Nala, and say if it be good, or if you have a better show it forth. Let messengers go out and summon all thy impi, that it be gathered here on the third day from now. This being done, let the impi, led by Maiwa, march on the morrow of the fourth day, and, crossing the mountains, let it travel along on the other side of the mountains till it come to the place on the farther side of which is the kraal of Wambe; that shall be some three days' journey in all about 120 miles. Then, on the night of the third day's journey, let Maiwa lead the impi in silence up the secret path, so that it comes to the crest of the mountain that is above the Strong Place, and here let it hide among the rocks. Meanwhile, on the sixth day from now, let one of the Indunas of Nala bring with him 500 men that have guns, and take me and my men as prisoners, and take also a girl from among the Butiana people who by form and face is like unto Maiwa, and bind her hands, and pass by the road on which we came, and through the cutting in the cliff, on to the kraal of Wambe. But the men shall take no shields or plumes with them, only their guns and one short spear, and when they meet the people of Wambe, they shall say that they come to give up the woman and the white man and his party to Wambe, and to make atonement to Wambe. So shall they pass in peace, and traveling thus, on the evening of the seventh day we shall come to the gates of the place of Wambe, and nigh the gates there is, so says Maiwa, a koppie very strong and full of rocks and caves, but having no soldiers thereon except in time of war, or at the worst, but a few such as can easily be overpowered. "This being done at the dawn of day, must the impi on the mountain behind the town light a fire and put wet grass thereon, so that the smoke goes up. Then at the sight of the smoke will we in the koppie begin to shoot into the town of Wambe, whereon all the soldiers will run to kill us. But we will hold our own, and while we fight the impi shall charge down the mountain side and climb the chicanes and put those who defend them to the assaigal, and then, falling upon the town, shall surprise it and drive the soldiers of Wambe as the wind blows the dead husks of corn. This is my plan. I have spoken."

"On," said Nala, it is good; it is very good. The white man is cleverer than a jackal. Yes, so shall it be, and may the Snake of the Butiana people stand up upon its tail and prosper the war, for so shall we be rid of Wambe and the tyrannies of Wambe. "After that the girl Maiwa stood up, and, once more producing the dreadful little dried hand, made her father and several of his head conciliators swear by it and upon it that they would carry out the war of vengeance to the bitter end. It was a very curious sight to see, and the fight that ensued was by the way, thereafter known among the tribes of that district as the War of the Little Hand.

"The next two days were busy ones for us. Messengers were sent out and every available man of the Butiana tribe was ordered up to 'a great dance.' The country was small, and by the evening of the second day some 1,250 men were assembled, with their assegais and shields, and a fine, hardy troop they were. "At dawn of the following day, the fourth from the departure of the heralds, the main impi started, under the command of Nala himself, who, knowing that his life and chieftainship hung upon the issue of the struggle, wisely determined to be present to direct it. With them went Maiwa, who was to guide them up the secret path. Of course he had to give them two days' start, as they had more than a hundred miles of rough country to pass, including the crossing of the great mountain range which ran north and south, for it was necessary that the impi should make a wide detour in order to escape detection. At length, however, at dawn on the sixth day, I took the road, accompanied by my most unwilling bearers, who did not at all like the idea of thus putting their heads into the lion's mouth. Indeed, it was only the fear of Nala's spears, together with a vague confidence in myself, that induced them to accept the adventure. With me also were about two hundred Butianas, all armed with guns of various kinds, for many of these people had guns, though they were not very proficient in the use of them. But they carried no shield, and wore no head dress or armlets; indeed, every warlike appearance was carefully avoided. With our party went also a sister of Maiwa's, though by a different mother, who strongly resembled her in face and form, and whose mission it was to personate the runaway wife.

"That evening we camped upon the top of the cliff up which we had so barely escaped, and next morning at the first breaking of the light we rolled away the stones with which we had blocked the passage some days before, and descended to the hill side beneath. Here the bodies, or rather the skeletons, of the men who had fallen before my rifle still lay about. The Maturu soldiers had left their comrades to be buried by the vultures. I descended the gully into which poor Gobo had fallen, and searched for his body, but in vain, although I found the spot where he and the other man had struck, together with the bones of the latter, which I recognized by the waist cloth. Either some beast of prey had carried Gobo off, or the Maturu people had disposed of his remains, and also of my express rifle which he carried. At any rate, I never saw or heard any more of him.

"Once in Wambe's country, we adopted a very circumspect method of proceeding. About fifty men marched ahead, in loose order, to guard against surprise, while as many more followed behind. The other hundred were gathered in a bunch between, and in the center of these men I marched, together with the girl who was personating Maiwa and all my bearers. We were unarmed, and some of my men were tied together, to show that we were prisoners, while the girl had a blanket thrown over her head, and moved along with an air of great dejection. We headed straight for Wambe's place, which was at a distance of about twenty-five miles from the mountain pass.

"When we had gone some five miles we met a party of about fifty of Wambe's soldiers, who were evidently on the lookout for us. They stopped us, and their captain asked where we were going. The headman of our party answered that he was conveying Maiwa, Wambe's runaway wife, together with the white hunter and his men, to be given up to Wambe, in accordance with his command. The captain then wanted to know why we were so many, to which our spokesman replied that I and my men were very desperate fellows, and that it was feared that if we were sent with a smaller escort we should escape, and bring disgrace and the wrath of Wambe upon their tribe. Thereon this gentleman, the Maturu captain, began to amuse himself at my expense, and mock me, saying that Wambe would make me pay for the soldiers that I had killed. He would put me in the 'thing that bites'—in other words, the lion trap—and leave me there to die like a jackal caught by the leg. I made no answer to this, though my wrath was great, but pretended to be frightened. Indeed, there was not much pretense about it—I was frightened. I could not conceal from myself that it was ours was a most hazardous enterprise, and that it was very possible that I might make acquaintance with that lion trap before I was many days older. However, it was quite impossible to desert poor Evers in his misfortune, so I had to go on, and trust to Providence, as I have so often had to do before and since.

"And now a fresh difficulty arose. Wambe's soldiers insisted upon accompanying us, and, what is more, did all they could to urge us forward, as they were naturally anxious to get to the chief's place before evening. But we, on the other hand, had excellent reasons for not arriving till night was closing in, since we relied upon the gloom to cover our advance upon the koppie which commanded the town. Finally they got so importunate that we had to flatterly refuse to move faster, alleging as a reason that the girl was tired. They did not accept this excuse in good part, and at one time I thought that we should have come to blows, with the exception of Wambe's own hals; that is situated at the mouth of some caves upon the slope of the opposing mountain, over which I hoped to see our impi's spears come flashing in the morrow's light. Even from where we stood it was easy to see how strongly the place was fortified with chicanes and stone walls, and how difficult of approach. Indeed, unless taken by surprise, it seemed to me quite impregnable to a force operating without cannon, and even cannon would not make much impression on rocks and stony koppias filled with caves. "Then came the descent of the pass, and an arduous business it was, for the path—if it may be called a path—was almost entirely composed of huge water worn boulders, from one to the other of which we had to jump like so many grasshoppers. It took us two hours to get down; and traveling through that burning sun, when at last we did reach the bottom, I, for one, was pretty nearly played out. Shortly afterwards, just as it was growing dark, we came to the first line of fortifications, which consisted of a triple stone wall pierced by a gateway so narrow that a man could hardly squeeze through it. We passed this without question, being accompanied by Wambe's soldiers. Then came a belt of land three hundred paces or more in width, very rocky and broken, and having no huts upon it. It was in hollows in this belt that the cattle were kraaled in case of danger. On the farther side were more fortifications, and another small gateway shaped like an inverted V, and just beyond and through it I saw the koppie we had planned to seize looming up against the line of mountains behind. As I went I whispered my suggestions to our captain, with the result that at the second gateway he halted the cavalcade, and addressing the captain of Wambe's soldiers, said that we would wait till we received Wambe's word to enter the town. "The other man said that that was well, only he must hand over the prisoners to be taken up to the chief's kraal, for Wambe was 'hungry to begin upon them,' and his heart desired to see the white man at rest before he closed his eyes in sleep; and as for his wife, surely he would welcome her. Our leader replied that he could not do this thing, because his orders were to deliver the prisoners to Wambe at Wambe's own kraal, and they might not be broken. How could he be responsible for the safety of the prisoners if he let them out of his hands? No; they would wait there till Wambe's word was brought. "To this, after some demur, the other man consented, and departed, remarking that he would soon be back. As he passed me he called out, with a sneer, pointing, as he did, to the fading red in the western sky: 'Look your last upon the light, white man, for the 'thing that bites' lives in the dark.' "Next day it so happened that I shot this man, and, do you know, I think that he is about the only human being who has come to harm at my hands for whom I do not feel sincere sorrow and, in a degree, remorse.

We are willing to bear personal testimony to the efficacy and value of Hood's Sarsaparilla, which we have been advertising some years in our paper having used it for blood impurities with great success. It is a preparation of standard merit, made of perfectly pure ingredients, and thoroughly effective in cleansing and purifying the system. For eruptions, boils, etc., it can be relied upon every time. Our own experience with it has been most gratifying, and we are glad to give it this endorsement.—Athol (Mass.) Transcript.

THE COMMON COUNCIL.

Second St. to be Opened.—Messrs. Lennon and Weeks Get their Road.—The SORG Matter Again.—Taxes.

The common council met last Thursday evening, and the first thing that came up was the proposition of Messrs. Lennon, Weeks and Chas. R. Gardner, that Ann Arbor make a street on their land. A quit-claim deed to the city of the land necessary for the highway was presented and accepted. The land in the deed is described as follows:

"Being land for a highway 60 feet in width, commencing on Broadway in the Fifth ward on the south-east side thereof at the corner between S. D. Lennon and Geo. Week's land; thence south-easterly, the center line of the highway following the boundary between said Lennon and Week's land as the nature of the ground is desirable for the location of said highway; thence northeasterly, northerly easterly, south-easterly and southerly around the big bend of the Huron river known as Cedar bend on the south-east quarter of section 21, township 2, south of range 6 east, Michigan, across the land of Lennon, the land of C. R. Gardner and Mrs. Salome T. Gardner, to the south line of said section 21; the south end of road to come out on section line west of Mrs. Gardner's house by the most practicable route."

Messrs. Lennon, Weeks, et. al. reserve the right to the timber on this strip of land. For this land the city of Ann Arbor must construct the road, pay one dollar, and make a bridge across a ravine on Lennon's land high enough to permit cattle to pass under.

The street committee was ordered to have a survey made of the proposed road.

THE SECOND STREET OPENING. This vexed question was practically settled by the passage of the following:

Resolved, That the mayor and city recorder be and are hereby directed to draw an order on the city treasurer for the sum of $800, payable Feb. 1, 1889, in favor of Philip Bach, and that the city attorney be directed to tender the same to said Philip Bach or the right of way for Second-st. extension, and if accepted to obtain a release across said Bach land, for the same. And in case he shall refuse to accept the same the mayor and city attorney are hereby instructed to commence the customary proceeding for the same. In the charter for condemning said right of way.

The following resolution was adopted: Resolved, That this council, desiring to manifest the good will existing toward the Toledo R. R., on the part of the citizens of Ann Arbor hereby agree to at once open Second-st. on condition that the railroad company shall build a depot at least as good as the plans submitted indicate. At the same time we respectfully ask that the plans be reconsidered by the company with a view of giving our city a larger and better building which we think its growing condition warrants.

TAXES. The following amounts were ordered to be levied and collected for taxes, for the current year, upon the city at large: General purposes, $6,000; Street purposes, 2,000; Water works fund, 5,000; For general purposes, voted at tax-payers' meeting June 4, 1888, 5,000; Total, $18,000.

From wards, for street purposes: First ward, $7,000; Second, 1,000; Third, 1,000; Fourth, 1,000; Fifth, 700; Sixth, 1,300; Total, $12,000.

REGISTRATION.

The council resolved itself into a board of registration, and fixed Tuesday, Oct. 30, as the day for registration, and the places in each ward as follows: First ward, Albert Sorg's paint shop; second, Herz's paint shop; third, Agricultural room in court-house; fourth and fifth, Engine-house; sixth, Sixth ward Engine-house.

THE SORG MATTER AGAIN.

The city attorney reported in regard to Ex-city Treasurer Sorg's property. It seems that there are two mortgages ahead of the city's, amounting to $3,500, and that Mr. Sorg has only a fifth interest in the Sorg estate. Judge Joslyn asked the council if it would accept 50 cents on the dollar and raise the mortgage which the city holds on the Sorg block on Washington-st. The city attorney advised that no reply be given; but that it be considered when Mr. Sorg walks up and exhibits the money.

MONDAY EVENING SESSION.

Charles Zurn asked that he be allowed to erect a wagon shed on the north end of his meat market on E. Washington-st, the shed to be covered with metal. The deed of Philip Bach of the land necessary for the opening of Second-st. was read. It was accepted and ordered to be recorded.

The liquor bond of Ira Bortell was referred to the city attorney, to be accepted if he finds it in proper shape. The recorder was instructed to advertise for bids for furnishing 150 cords of white oak wood for the use of the city poor.

The following resolution was adopted: Resolved, That the special sidewalk assessment against the property of Miss Cobb, Mrs. Haas, Mrs. Clarken, Richmond & Treadwell, Mrs. McCormack, Mrs. Fay, and Philip Bach be ordered spread upon the supervisors' assessment roll as provided by the city charter.

The following was adopted: Resolved, That the expense of opening Second-st., amounting to eight hundred and one dollars, be ordered spread upon the supervisors' assessment rolls for the city at large.

It wasn't the Doctor.

Dr. F. H. Coe, of Seattle, Washington Territory, writes: "In your issue of Sept. 20, which has just reached me, under the head of 'Sensational Divorce Suit' you state that a man named Coe was secreted in the female's bed room. As the Coes are rather few and far between, it might be well to specify what particular Coe it was. I am sure it was not F. H. Coe, and although I am about as far from Ann Arbor as I can get, and remain under the American flag, I hope when our family name is mentioned you will try to be a little more specific. I see our fellow townsmen, Charlie Salyer and Carol Remick frequently. Charlie is keeping the Prohibition iron red-hot."
