

THE ANN ARBOR REGISTER.

VOL. XIV. NO. 48.

ANN ARBOR, MICHIGAN, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 29, 1888.

WHOLE NO. 727.

ENTER INTO HIS GATES WITH THANKSGIVING AND INTO HIS COURTS WITH PRAISE; BE THANKFUL UNTO HIM AND BLESS HIS NAME.—PSALM C, 4.

ON THE CAMPUS.

The sophomore hop, Dec. 14. Dr. Gibbs is hunting near Osceola. Mr. Wingert has been chosen president of the senior laws. Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Wade will take Thanksgiving dinner in Jonesville. Robert Nourse will lecture in University hall, Dec. 8, on "John and Jonathan." You can hear the remaining five lectures of the Lecture association course for $1.25. The U. of M. is crawling up to 1790, and will have 1850 students registered this year. Mrs. Major Soule has returned from Minnesota where she has been visiting since July. Junior hop blooms up with J. R. Kempf as chairman, and E. W. McPherran secretary and treasurer, of the committee. President Angell, last Friday, made an address before the University club of the Ohio University at Columbus, on "Study of political philosophy." "Hell" is explained at last, a freshman by the name of Harris Poe Johnson having published an unorthodox pamphlet on the subject, but with the very orthodox purpose of assisting the Gym fund. The Japanese students were entertained Saturday evening at the home of Mrs. W. K. Childs, who was assisted by several young ladies and gentlemen. Music, recitations, and games made the evening pass very pleasantly. In Hastings, Dec. 3 and 4, there will be a sanitary convention under the auspices of the State board of health. Dr. V. C. Vaughan will speak on the duty of the State in investigating the cause and preventing the spread of disease. Dr. Henry F. Lyster will speak on the "Degenerations of the Age."

The Chequamegon dance, in Nickel's hall, last Friday evening, was a success in every way but in finances. The reception committee consisted of Messrs. W. D. Ball, H. M. Young, and C. O. Warden, assisted by Mrs. Morris, Mrs. Condon, and Mrs. de Pont. It was given to the college fraternities. Probably succeeding parties given by the orchestra will be better attended.

A Henry George debate will take place in the Unitarian church Monday evening, Dec. 10, between Giles B. Stebbins, of Detroit, and A. Arnold Clark, of Lansing. Mr. Clark is a believer in Mr. George's views, and is a graduate of Albion college, '81. He is said to be a born debater, and although not so experienced in controversy as his older opponent, he is expected to stand his ground well.

The Oracle board offer the following prizes to the members of '91, competition being open to January 10: For best story, of not more than 2000 words, $15; for best humorous sketch, $10; for best class song, a guitar, a banjo, or a mandolin; for best poem, the choice of either a gold-headed cane or gold headed silk umbrella; for best cartoon drawn in ink, $5; for best design for Oracle cover, $5; for best dramatic scene, a set of either Thackeray, Scott or Eliot.

Today a great game of rugby foot-ball occurs in Chicago, between the U. of M. eleven, and a Chicago eleven made up of old players of Princeton, Yale, Harvard, and Columbia. If the alumni eleven are in good training our U. of M. will have hard work, and there will be an exciting game. The U. of M. eleven is composed of the following: Paine, left end; Hagle, left tackle; Beach, left guard; Prettyman, center; Malley, right guard; Sam Bradley, right tackle; Van Inwagen, right end; Fred Smith, quarter back; Mac Pherran, half back; Jim Duffy, half back; Macmillan, goal; Da Pont and Ball, substitutes.

In the game of foot-ball, Saturday, it was soon apparent that the Albions were no match for the U. of M's. The game stood 70 to 4 at the close, but the four were given to the Albions because they threatened, like the little boy, that they wouldn't play. They didn't earn the "touch-down." D. W. Springer, manager of the Albions, was referee. The Albion "half backs" were D. Titman and J. F. Critchett; "goal" was T. Snell; and "quarter back" C. A. Phelps. Fred Smith, as "quarter back" for U. of M., did his work well. McPherran, Duffy and Van Inwagen did some fine running, with the ball tucked under the arm, Duffy and McPherran making clean runs for "touch-downs," and the former "brushing" off two or three opponents, as they came for him, in typical style. The best of feeling did not prevail throughout, but nothing serious happened.

Rev. Mr. Bradshaw, of the Congregational church, preached the union Thanksgiving sermon in the Baptist church at 11 a. m. today, his subject being the text from the 147th Psalm. "He hath not dealt with any nation." Rev. Mr. Studley, of the M. E. church, was selected, but could not comply because of his sickness from typhoid.

ELECTRIC STREET R'Y.

IT HAS BEEN DECIDED UPON FOR ANN ARBOR.

The Officers of the Company will Have Everything Ready for Laying the Track in the Spring.

Gen. N. Church, president, and K. P. Peet, superintendent, of the Ann Arbor street railway company, came from their home in Ithaca, Mich., on Tuesday, to look Ann Arbor over again. They have decided definitely to put in an electric railway, and the only question is about the system to adopt among the three or four now in use.

Gen. Church will go to Richmond, Va., to inspect the Sprague electric street railway in use there, and to Providence, R. I., where another system is used. He will also study the Fisher electric street railway in Detroit.

The company will proceed immediately to have the material all in readiness for putting in the plant as soon as the frost is out of the ground in the spring. They will complete the road next year with the possible exception of the W. Huron-st. division.

Prof. J. B. Davis, of the University, is now engaged in drawing maps for the use of the company.

LIKE THE LEVITES OF SCRIPTURE.

A Lodi Farmer, Seriously Hurt, Lies by the Roadside, and is Passed by Those who Render no Assistance.

Last Saturday evening, an accident occurred, about three miles from Ann Arbor, to Christian Etzel, a respected farmer of Scio, as he was driving home from this city. The whistle-bolt in some way got out and the horses were frightened. Mr. Etzel held them for some time till the wagon tongue fell and he was pitched out. He struck on his head, and although Dr. Conrad George thinks the skull was not fractured, there was a severe concussion of the brain which leaves the unfortunate man still in a critical condition. He remained by the roadside, unconscious, for some time, when he was discovered by his sister-in-law, Mrs. George Neithammer.

The REGISTER is told that several persons passed by in teams and stopped to look at the broken wagon and the unconscious man, but they passed on without rendering any assistance. It was left to a woman to act the part of the good Samaritan.

Mr. Etzel was unconscious during all of Sunday, but on Monday was able to answer a few questions. He could recollect nothing of the accident.

Advertising the City.

The Ann Arbor Business Men's association are about issuing an envelope, on the back of which is given a brief synopsis of Ann Arbor's business and good points. It calls attention to Ann Arbor as "one of the finest residence cities in America." It states that "Ann Arbor is located on the main line of the Michigan Central railroad and the Toledo, Ann Arbor and North Michigan railroad, 30 miles from Detroit, and 48 miles from Toledo, and offers educational advantages which are nowhere surpassed." It further says that "four furniture factories, one agricultural implement manufactory, one boiler works and foundry, seven carriage manufactories, and three large flour mills, give employment to hundreds of men." The University, High school, and School of Music are not forgotten. The lighting by gas and electricity and the general water supply are mentioned. It states that over 60 large dwellings have been built this year, etc., etc. This is an effective way of advertising the city, and if all the business men of the city would use these envelopes, the good results would soon be apparent. The REGISTER will soon be prepared to supply them.

City Foundry Scorched.

At 10:45 a. m. yesterday (Wednesday) fire was discovered in the attic of the Ann Arbor city foundry. In five minutes the fire had appeared on the roof, and seemed to have run along the ridge for some distance. The fire company did quick work and soon subdued the flames. The fire probably originated from the old chimney. The whole concern is insured for $3,000 in the National and German insurance companies.

THE NIGHT AFTER THANKSGIVING.

Mr. Turkey—Don't be alarmed, my dear. I've only been down to the turkey shoot.—Harper's Bazar.

THE DRESSED TURKEY.

One of the parish sent one morn— A farmer kind and able— A nice fat turkey, raised on corn, To grace the pastor's table.

The farmer's lad went with the fowl, And thus addressed the pastor: "Dear me, if I ain't tired! Here is A gobbler from my master."

The pastor said: "Thou shouldst not thus Present the fowl to me; Come, take my chair, and for me act, And I will act for thee."

The preacher's chair received the boy, The fowl the pastor took— Went out with it and then came in With pleasant smile and look.

And to his young pro tem, he said: "Dear sir, my honored master Presents this turkey, and his best Respects to you, his pastor."

"Good!" said the boy; "your master is A gentleman and scholar! My thanks to him, and for yourself, Here is a half a dollar!"

The pastor felt around his mouth A most peculiar twitching; And to the gobbler holding fast, He "bolted" for the kitchen.

He gave the turkey to the cook, And came back in a minute, Then took the youngster's hand and left A half a dollar in it.

HARD LUCK ALL AROUND.

The Greatest Concert of the Season Poorly Attended and All Tangled Up.—Prof. D'Ooge to the Rescue.

The concert, Monday night, was advertised to begin at 7:30 sharp. The audience, what there was of it, was there promptly, and ready for anything to distract their attention from the bake-oven temperature and already notorious seats of the hall. The Ypsilanti delegation was also anxious to have the performance begin, so as not to be obliged to leave before the concert was over.

Towards eight o'clock Prof. Stanley announced, though not exactly in these words, that "somebody had blundered," and that the piano was yet to be brought to the hall. The concert, however, began soon after eight, the piano pieces being omitted for the time being. Just after Miss Juch had rendered Thomas' Aria, and as an encore, had sung Annie Laurie, the sweetest piece of the evening, the attention of the audience was attracted to the back part of the room, where Chas. Jones and his crew of workmen were preparing to make their first appearance on the stage. They were not in dress suits, nor did they have time to remove their hats; but they, however, met with hearty applause, and served as a pleasant bit of comedy to the serious parts being during the evening. As the order of the program had been considerably changed, no one knew what was coming next, nor did they know that some parts were omitted, or, in other words, that a new program was being substituted by the company quite different from the one given the audience. It was therefore quite a surprise to those present, while waiting for Misses Juch and Glenn to render Rubinstein's "Angels," to have one of the company appear, and announce that "This is the last performance of the evening—the one which has just been given!" The audience took their disappointment good naturedly.

The Musical society will lose money on the entertainment, the number of tickets sold being very small. A disposition is shown to criticize the listless way in which some of the parts were rendered. It is but fair to the University Musical society to state that the misfortunes which attended the concert were entirely beyond their control. Inasmuch as the non-arrival of Mme. Carreno's piano made it impossible for her to appear without violating the terms of her contract with M. Weber, the piano manufacturer, the concert was only made possible by the extreme kindness of Prof. D'Ooge who lent his Weber piano for the occasion. While it might have been advisable, under those circumstances, to have refused to allow the concert to proceed, the desire to hear the other artists was such, that it was thought best to carry out the program as far as possible. It was so understood when the preliminary announcement was made, and it was also expected that the changes in the program would be announced, as the modified program was received too late for printing. The officers of the Musical society don't regard the Juch combination with the greatest possible affection.

OFFICIAL RETURNS.

The Vote of Several States at the Presidential Election.

The Completion of the Lower House in the Fifty-First Congress—General Harrison's Secretary—Other Political Notes.

THE NEXT HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Lycurgus Dalton, of Indiana, postmaster of the House, who has always been less sanguine of Democratic success than any of his official colleagues, was asked what his figures show as to the political complexion of the next House. His reply was that the Republicans, according to his figures, would have three majority sure, and possibly four.

GOFF CLAIMS HIS ELECTION.

WHEELING, W. Va., Nov. 21.—General Goff, Republican candidate for Governor, telegraphs the State Committee that his majority in McDowell County is 174 and in Wyoming 122. It is shown that General Hovey, the Republican candidate for Governor, received 263,194 votes; Courtland C. Matson, Democrat, 261,932; Jasper S. Hughes, Prohibitionist, 9,280, and John B. Milroy, Labor, 2,702. Hovey's plurality is 2,262. The increase in the Prohibition vote over that of 1886 was only 735, and over 1884 it was about 100 per cent. THE VOTE OF DAKOTA.

BISMARCK, D. T., Nov. 23.—Complete returns of the Territorial election give Mathews (Rep.) for Delegate, 30,000 majority. Every member of the lower House but one is a Republican, and there are three Democrats and twenty-one Republicans in the upper House of the Legislature. The total vote of the Territory is 114,000, which, multiplied by five, gives a total population of 570,000. The population of North Dakota on this basis is 215,000, South Dakota 255,000. The increase in the vote over 1880 is 10,000.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 23.—President-elect Harrison some days ago offered the position of private secretary to Elijah W. Halford, managing editor of the Journal, and yesterday Mr. Halford's acceptance was made public. His experience with men and affairs make this appointment a suitable one. Besides, for years a close friendship has existed between General Harrison and Mr. Halford. The relations between the two gentlemen have been at all times of a confidential character.

HAS NOT TALKED OF ANNEXATION.

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—The World's Indianapolis correspondent telegraphs an interview with General Harrison in which the latter denies the truth of the published reports of alleged statements made by him concerning the annexation of Canada. THE IOWA EVICTIONS.

One Hundred Settlers of Des Moines Lands Served with Writs on Wednesday.

MASON CITY, Ia., Nov. 23.—One hundred additional writs of ejectment were served Wednesday on settlers on the Des Moines lands. No trouble resulted. The settlers are driven out of their houses, their furniture piled up in the road, and the doors and windows barred against them. The settlers around Lehigh have formed a union, with E. S. Boynton as their president. It is expected that this union will issue a circular to-day outlining their grievances.

[The lands in question comprise the sections within five miles of the Des Moines river, from the Racoon forks to its source. The lands were granted to Iowa by Congress in 1846 for the improvement of navigation in the Des Moines river from its mouth to the Racoon forks. In 1854 the State contracted with the Des Moines Navigation & Railway Company to improve the river as required, and four years later a large amount of land, including that over which the present controversy is being held, was granted by the State to the navigation company to aid it in performing the work which it never carried out. In 1859 the United States Supreme Court held that the grant did not include the lands north of the Racoon river, and they were thrown open to settlers. The lands were withdrawn again, however, before final proofs could be made by homesteaders. In 1862 Congress entered the grant so as to cover the land in dispute, but it was alleged that, as the navigation company had failed to fulfill the contract, they had forfeited their claim to the lands of the State; and at the last General Assembly an act was passed reconveying to the United States all right of the State in these lands, the object being to allow the navigation company full opportunity to do justice in the case. For years the company has made no determined efforts at evictions on a large scale, fearing dangerous resistance from the determined settlers, but now it seems that purchasers, homesteaders and squatters alike must yield to the demands of the company.]

A SOUTHERN TOWN BURNED.

Fire Sweeps Away the Best Part of Pocomoke City, Md., Causing a Loss of Half a Million Dollars.

POCOMOKE CITY, Md., Nov. 23.—This town was swept by fire last night. Nearly all the business section was burned and the loss will be $500,000. The fire broke out at 4 p. m. in D. J. Fruit's drug-store. This building was situated in the heart of the town, and from the first it was a hopeless case. The bucket and ladder brigade did all in their power, but their efforts proved fruitless. The town was not provided with fire apparatus, and a message was sent to Salisbury for its department. A strong wind sent the flames from one building to another. Besides the drug store, the flames destroyed the post-office, the Clarke House, the offices of the Times, the Record, the Gazette and the Peninsula Leader (leaving the town without a newspaper), nineteen business houses and a dozen private residences.

Wings and Stings.

This is the airy, stinging title of another sprightly amusing book by Palmer Cox. It is one of the Queer People series, and similar to its companion, "Paws and Claws," of which we told you recently. This is one of the funniest and brightest books for youngsters we have ever seen. The illustrations are splendid and will make the boys and girls roar with laughter. The Boston Budget says: "As a holiday book nothing can be more appropriate, since nothing could confer greater pleasure upon the little ones." The National Republican says: "Every page is a picture and all the text music, a fountain of fun, never ceasing. It will make young eyes blaze." It will certainly be wonderfully popular. It is published by Messrs. Hubbard Bros., of Philadelphia, Chicago, and Kansas City, to whom persons desiring a copy or an agency should apply.

$500 Reward.

If you suffer from dull, heavy headache, obstruction of the nasal passages, discharges falling from the head into the throat, sometimes profuse, watery, and acrid, at others, thick, tenacious, mucous, purulent, bloody and putrid; if the eyes are weak, watery, and inflamed; and there is ringing at the ears, deafness, hacking or coughing to clear the throat, expectoration of offensive matter, together with sores from ulcers; the voice being changed and having a nasal twang; the breath offensive; smell and taste impaired; experience a sensation of dizziness, with mental depression, a hacking cough, and general debility, then you are suffering chronic nasal catarrh. Only a few of the above named symptoms are likely to be present in any one case at one time, or in one stage of the disease. Thousands of cases annually, without manifesting half of the above symptoms, result in consumption, and end in the grave. No disease is so common, more deceptive and dangerous, less understood or more unsuccessfully treated by physicians. The manufacturers of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy offer, in good faith, $500 reward for a case of catarrh which they cannot cure. The Remedy is sold by druggists at only 50 cents.

LITERARY NOTE.

In the Forum for December Archdeacon Farrar explains in detail Tolstoi's religious teachings, how the soldier and great novelist now finds contentment, hope, health, and blessedness, in the life of a peasant, and the toil of a shoemaker; and the archdeacon points out with many illustrations the error of making so rigid an interpretation of the letter of the teachings of Jesus. The article is the judgment by the highest Protestant ecclesiastical authority on the most remarkable religious enthusiast of the time.

TATE SPRINGS, TENN., July 4, 1888. The Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.

During the spring of 1871, while working in the field at my home in Morgan county, Ga., I pulled off my shoes to give my feet a rest.

Unfortunately, I walked into a clump of poison oak, and in a few days my feet were in a terrible condition, and I could not put on a shoe because of the soreness and swelling.

I was treated as poison oak cases usually are, and everything was healed up. About the same time the following spring, 1872, my feet became sore again, as at first, and every succeeding spring for five years brought back the same condition of the disease, only each time it became more distressing, because I began to think it was a lifetime trouble.

Finally, I was induced to try Swift's Specific. I took six bottles, and to-day am entirely well. My improvement was gradual from the first, and no evidence of the disease remains. I shall take pleasure in testifying as to its curative properties. It is the greatest blood purifier in existence. Yours truly, J. L. MORGAN.

The foregoing certificate is taken at random from thousands of letters in possession of the Swift Specific Co., and presented simply as a sample. It is a voluntary statement, giving facts and results of the case. Its accuracy and genuineness are beyond question.

A valuable Treatise on Blood and Skin Diseases mailed free. Address THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., Drawer 3 Atlanta, Ga.

The Handsomest Lady in Ann Arbor, remarked to a friend the other day that she knew Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs was a superior remedy, as it stopped her cough instantly when other cough remedies had no effect whatever.

To prove this and convince you of its merit, any druggist will give you a Sample Bottle Free. Large size 50c and $1.

Sick Headache. GENTS—I have been subject to Sick Headache for years, and have tried, in vain, many advertised remedies and several physicians, but all to no purpose.

At last I tried your B. B. Bitters—without much faith, I admit—but to-day I can truly say, that after taking the third bottle I have suffered from it. I recommend it to all my friends; several have been cured by it. My little grandson was permanently cured of Biliousness and Sick Headache, which were so severe as to cause convulsions. They have all ceased since he commenced the use of B. B. B.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 29, 1888.

SEPT. 28, 1789, a resolution was offered in the first U. S. congress to request the president to recommend a day of public thanksgiving and prayer, to be observed by the people of the United States in acknowledgment of the many signal favors of Almighty God, and especially His affording them the opportunity peaceably to establish a constitution of government for their safety and happiness. This motion was actually opposed, although it passed. Congressman Tucker wanted to wait in order to test the new constitution and find out whether they had anything to be thankful for. Congressman Burke declared that he didn't want any mimicking of European customs, and his speech was the first congressional twisting of the British lion's tail, since become such a favorite pastime for our statesmen. Burke, as his name seems to indicate, was a true son of Ireland, and probably saw with prophetic vision the possibilities of the Irish vote. Tucker thought that the question of thanksgiving ought to be left to the states, his Virginia blood boiling hot for state's rights at that early day. These many cavils seem amusing to us after a century, but they were serious enough to our venerated fathers of the constitution.

PROF. BURT ON GREEK PHILOSOPHY.

There has just appeared, from the press of Ginn & Co., Boston, a "Brief History of Greek Philosophy," by our respected fellow-townsmen, Professor B. C. Burt. The book is neatly gotten up, is of moderate compass, and is designed to be of use to students and general readers. Professor Burt's talent and taste for philosophical studies are well-known to those who know him. In a work like the present our author appears at his very best. With rare knowledge, skill and patience he has extracted from the records of Greek philosophy the elements of characteristic and permanent importance. At frequent intervals we meet paragraphs with the heading "Result," in which the special significance of particular doctrines of the Grecian thinkers and their bearing on the living problems of thought in all times, are pointedly indicated. Many of Professor Burt's brief characterizations—as for example, his account of the personality of Socrates, and of the spirit and method of his teaching—are gems of the first water: they are brilliant, literary, and philosophical essays in a nutshell.

The third party prohibitionists are pleasing themselves by imagining that they stand where the abolitionists did before the war, and that they will finally "sweep to victory." The foolishness of all this is so apparent that we wonder sensible people can be deluded by it. The Center devotes more than a column to showing in vague terms that their party must have a broader basis than the one idea of prohibition. That doesn't sound much like the utterances of a Garrison. And among the questions which according to the Center, the Prohibition party must take up, the tariff is not mentioned. If the Center supposes that any party can "sweep to victory" without declaring its intentions on that subject, it is too childish for any use.

A MEMORIAL service in honor of the late Bishop Harris was held in Detroit last week, Bishop Henry C. Potter giving the address. Bishop Harris was the son of an Alabama planter. At 13 years of age he was qualified to enter college, but had to wait till he was 15. He was admitted to the bar when he was 19, by special act of the legislature. The bishop didn't like warfare, but joined the southern army from a sense of duty. At the close of the war he went to New York city and succeeded as a lawyer, never losing a case. Evidently he didn't like the warfare in the law, for he went to his native state and studied for the ministry, and at the age of 38 he was consecrated bishop.

According to a congressional committee's report, 29 alien corporations and individuals own 20,557,000 acres of United States land, a territory larger than Ireland. How soon shall we be talking about the government buying out the landlords and canceling arrears of rent?

The Detroit Free Press says of "Peck's Bad Boy," which is given at the opera house Friday evening: The stage arrangement of the entertainment is in three acts or scenes—the grocery store, the Bad Boy's home, and picnic grounds. It is simply a living, moving reproduction, with clever effect of the ludicrous mishaps, tricks and climaxes so often seen in print, having no connected plot, but uproariously funny from beginning to end. The characters of the Bad Boy's Pa, the Grocery man, the Doctor, the Policeman, "Jimmy Duffy" (Henry's chum), "Mr. Peck," and Minnie (Henry's girl), were in capital hands, the performance moving quickly and to the best possible advantage.

THE OUTCASTS.

In attic high and grim and scant,
A ragged creature lonely sat.
His face was lined by pain and want—
At once he cried "Begone! away!"
As o'er the threshold crept a cat.

"Stay, stranger, do not drive me hence!
I pray thee list my tale of woe;
I am too poor to give offense,
And, lacking now in every sense,
I scarce fear either word or blow.

"It was not always thus; before
They drove me forth, the streets to roam
I always found an open door—
Alas, when we grow old and poor
That we should be without a home!

"The children loved to stroke my back,
When I was sleek and round and fat—
Make fly the sparks and list them crack,
They called me pretty puss. Alack!
I'm now but a neglected cat!

"Once when a bell the children found—
A tiny, tinkling bell—they tied
It with a pretty ribbon round
My neck, and at its merry sound
They laughed and laughed until they cried.

"To-day, whenever my form they spy,
With ready hand they fling the bat
And I am forced for life to fly;
I've lost a foot—an ear—an eye;
There is no pity for a cat.

"My teeth are gone, my claws are dulled,
I can not hope to take a rat;
The hair from off my back is pulled—
My fare from backyard garbage culled—
Alas! I am a sorry cat."

"Poor creature, you have come at last
To one who feels your woe; like you,
By all the heartless world outcast,
I dream of an embittered past.
That proved all false I once thought true

"Come, maimed and ragged as you are,
Take half my crust; 'tis hard and dry
And all I have—but you shall share—
And while I live, so you shall fare
'Till one or both of us shall die!"
—Charles E. Banks, in Arkansas Traveller.

THAT NEW SOFA.

The Valuable Lesson It Taught the Possessor.

"George," said Mrs. Hall, as they were in their pleasant sitting-room one evening, "I was never so much ashamed in my life as I was to-day."

"Really," answered her husband, smiling, "it must have been a serious matter. What was it?"

"Why, I called at Mrs. Savary's yesterday, and she showed me her parlor entirely new furnished."

"You were ashamed of that, were you?"

"Come now, you are laughing at me," said his wife, pouting. "I won't say another word."

"If you don't," said her husband in a mocking, tragic tone, "I shall never recover from the blow."

"You are incorrigible; but if you had only waited a moment I would have told you what it was that I was ashamed of. Mrs. Savary had an elegant sofa; you can't think how it set off the room. She told me that if she could only have one decent article of furniture in the room, it should be the sofa."

"And you were ashamed of her remark?"

"Of course not."

"Then I am still in the dark."

"Why, it made me think of our old-fashioned sofa, and what a contrast it was to the one at Mrs. Savary's."

"So it might be, if it were in the same room with it; but you know it is not. I am sure it is comfortable enough."

"So would a feather-bed be," retorted his wife; "but I suppose you would not be in favor of putting one in the parlor. But I was going to tell you that to-day Mrs. Savary called upon me, and of course I invited her into the parlor. You ought to have seen the glance she cast on our old sofa."

"But, as I didn't see it, suppose you describe it to me."

"Of course, she could not help regarding it as very shabby, though she did not say so, for fear of hurting my feelings."

"And that made you ashamed?"

"Of course it did. I don't believe there's a family in town that has got such a wretched-looking article of furniture."

"I believe it is whole, is it not?"

"Yes."

"The only objection you have to urge, then, is that it is old-fashioned."

"Isn't that enough?"

"You know," said the young husband, gravely, "that I have special reason to value that sofa. It was my mother's, and some of my happiest recollections are connected with it."

"Well, there's no objection to keeping it. We could put it in our chamber, and buy a new one for the parlor. I saw a beautiful sofa to-day at Whitmarsh's—cost only fifty dollars. I couldn't help thinking how much it would set off our parlor. It would give a certain style to it that it hasn't now!"

"Fifty dollars would be a large sum for me, Mary."

"Why, I am sure you have a salary of eight hundred dollars."

"Very true; but it has to be spent in a great many different ways."

"But it only cost us six hundred, last year."

"That is because we were very economical. You know it was our ambition, or mine, at least, to save up something against a rainy day. I may be sick, or a hundred things may happen. I shall grow old, at any rate."

"But you know, George, it only costs fifty dollars. You could still save one hundred and fifty. It's a good thing to save money, I know, and I am as much in favor of it as you are; but one likes to enjoy life as they go along and not deprive themselves of its necessary comforts, just for the sake of saving."

"So you look on the new sofa in the light of a necessary comfort, do you?" asked George, smiling.

"Yes," said his wife, ingeniously, "because it is necessary to my comfort. Besides, we can easily save the amount out of our ordinary expenses, and save up as much as we did last year."

Of this George was not fully convinced, but he saw that his wife laid it very much to heart, and finally consented to go over to the furniture warehouse the next day and look at the coveted article. Mrs. Hall's eyes sparkled as he made this conclusion. She knew that, having gone thus far, he would without much difficulty be prevailed upon to purchase the sofa. George had hitherto proved a very indulgent husband, but his indulgence, thus far, had not been severely taxed until his wife made the acquaintance of Mrs. Savary, a woman of large pretensions, whose highest ambition was to make a show. Her influence was beginning to be perceptible on her young friend, who was easily impressed by others.

To return to our story. The next day Mrs. Hall, accompanied by her husband, visited the furniture warehouse, and decided to purchase the sofa. It was really a handsome article, as George would readily have admitted, even if he had not been volubly assured of the fact—first by his wife, and secondly by the clerk, who expatiated enthusiastically upon its merits.

"I am afraid," said George, wavering, "it won't correspond with the rest of the furniture."

"No danger of that," said his wife, "it will set off the rest, and make them all look handsomer."

"It may be so," said George, doubtfully. "I suppose you know better about such things than I do. If you are desirous of having it, I suppose I can buy it."

"Oh, George, if you only will, it will be such a comfort!"

"Then," said her husband, turning to the clerk, "you may send it to my house."

"It shall be done this forenoon."

The young husband took five ten-dollar bills from his pocket and paid them over for the sofa.

"This is the money," said he, as he was walking home, "that I was going to put into the savings-bank. You know that this is quarter-day, and for the last four I have put in this amount. Now, in consequence of our new purchase, I shall not be able to."

"It is only for once," said his wife, "and then only consider how much better our parlor will look."

Was it only for once? Time would show.

When that sofa came home, and was installed in the place of honor, the old-fashioned sofa was removed to a chamber. Somehow it did not seem to set off the room as much as it was expected to. It looked out of place, as Mrs. Hall could not help confessing to herself, though she was not disposed to speak of it. The plain but neat Kidderminster carpet looked decidedly cheap in comparison with it. However, Mrs. Hall resolutely shut her eyes to this unpleasant fact, and continued enthusiastically to expatiate in praises of the new sofa. She could not be contented until Mrs. Savary had called and expressed her opinion of it. This happened before long.

"My dear," said that lady, taking a critical survey of the apartment, "your sofa is a handsome one, I acknowledge, but will you pardon my suggesting one thing?"

"Certainly, Mrs. Savary."

"Then allow me to suggest that a dark Brussels carpet is necessary to have it show to good advantage. Now the Kidderminster, I dare say, is a tolerably good one, but it couldn't have cost more than a dollar a yard."

"Only eighty-seven cents," said Mrs. Hall, a little confused.

"So I supposed. Well, you see, a carpet at eighty-seven cents a yard doesn't correspond very well with a fifty-dollar sofa. To tell the plain truth, the old-fashioned sofa looked more appropriate."

Mrs. Hall almost wished that she had never bought the new sofa; but, having done so, she was determined, if possible, to have every thing to correspond. She was too wise to say anything about it at present, but waited until a week before the next quarter-day.

Then she began to indulge in brief hints, which length became more decided. At first, George would not hear of a new carpet. He was determined not to omit his usual quarterly deposit this time; but at length his wife's importunities succeeded, aided by a lurking conviction on his own part that there was a real incongruity between the sofa and the plain carpet. The new purchase cost fifty dollars and a trifle more, which made George look a little sober; but he could not deny, as his wife said, that the room looked a good deal improved.

And was this all? By no means.

By the time the carpet was put down, it was discovered that the chairs, which were only cane-seated, looked quite inferior to the good company which had recently been introduced. When the next quarter-day arrived, it was found absolutely essential to purchase some black stuffed chairs. Afterwards came a new mirror, and a piano was hired, for even Mrs. Hall did not venture to suggest so large an outlay as the purchase would require. So the piano was bought, and some fifty dollars a year were paid for its use, though, by the way, it was never used, since Mrs. Hall had no ear for music; and therefore it served only for ornament.

By the time the year was up, George found that two hundred and twenty-five dollars had been spent for furniture, and not one cent had been deposited in the savings bank. More than that, as their style of living had increased with their new furniture, which had unconsciously elevated their ideas, George found himself some hundred and fifty dollars in debt. At this time, or just before, the great commercial revulsion had swept over the land, and George's employers had not been spared. They had not failed, but their resources had been greatly crippled. They called him aside on the last day of the year and told him that, though they should be glad to retain him in their employ, they should be obliged to cut down his income for the year to come to six hundred dollars. He went home much depressed, as well he might be. His expenses increased, his income diminished, and a debt to pay, which would swallow up nearly all he had laid aside in the savings bank.

He at length told his wife the cause of his despondency, on her anxious solicitation. The vanity and love of show she had exhibited lay on the surface. She determined to express her sympathy in an active way. What that was I will explain.

When George came home the next evening to find what was his astonishment to find a load of furniture before his door.

"Can it be possible," he thought, "that Mary has been purchasing new furniture?"

Looking more closely he observed that the new parlor sofa and other articles of furniture were included in the wagon-load. Full of amazement he entered the house.

"What's all this, Mary? What have you done with the parlor furniture?"

"Sold it," said his wife, composedly.

"Sold it!" exclaimed George, in surprise.

"Yes; I knew that your circumstances were not so good as they have been, and I thought the money would be worth more to us than the furniture. I had heard that the Walkins were about to furnish their house, and thought they might be willing to buy our furniture at a reduced price. Here is what I got for it."

She placed in her husband's hands a purse containing one hundred and fifty dollars.

"Mary," said he, with emotion, "you don't know how you have relieved my mind. This will just pay off our debt, and I shall not be obliged to take the money from the bank."

The year passed. Again business revived, and with the first of January George had his salary raised to one thousand dollars; but though his means are increased, his wife has learned a valuable lesson, and probably will be content, for some years to come, at least, with the Old-Fashioned Sofa.

—Caroline F. Preston, in Yankee Blade.

Maggots in His Ear.

A gentleman named Lord, from Alabama, some days ago had a fly suddenly enter his ear, from which it was promptly extricated. The insect then was suddenly disappeared. That night Mr. Lord experienced a sensation of itching in his ear. This grew in intensity and pain until it was unbearable. He went to Athens for relief, but remedies applied failed to afford it. Going to Woodville he stated his case to a doctor. The acute pain had by this time nearly thrown the gentleman into convulsions. The doctor, after applying an anesthetic to his ear, inserted a copious drench, which brought out no less than eleven well-developed maggots, wriggling with robust life.

Mrs. John Jackson, who stayed in Ann Arbor during the summer, has returned to her home in Manchester.

C. M. Blackmer has been appointed village clerk of Milan, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of C. A. Moore.

Addison Fletcher, jr., of Ypsilanti town, died on Tuesday of last week, aged 36 years, leaving a wife and two children. His disease is unknown, and he has been sick three years.

All the children of Mrs. I. E. Robinson met at her residence in this village, Tuesday of last week, for the first time in eight years. The four boys were William, of Detroit, Oscar, of Ann Arbor, Spencer, of Morrice, and Ezra, of this township, and the girls were Mrs. Nichols, of Ann Arbor, Mrs. Nichols, of Bloomington, Ill., Mrs. Nichols, of New York, Mrs. McCord, of Chicago, and Mrs. Chas. Isbell, of Pittsfield.—Saline Observer.

There will be a corn festival given by the ladies of the First Congregational church of Webster, tomorrow evening, at the residence of Wm. C. Latson. The bill of fare includes corn meal cake with syrup and scripture, corn starch pudding, with cream sauce and some more scripture, corn mush with milk and ditto, corn popped, corn baked Indian pudding corn Johnny cake, corn starch cake, corn starch pie, corned beef, "korn koffee," and scriptural texts with each one. There will be plenty of fun.

Godfrey, of the Lansing Republican, went to Chicago and asked the Chicago Times to write him up. He told them the old chestnut about his walking when a boy barefoot into Lansing. The story hasn't grown small under Godfrey's management in the course of years. A modest man wouldn't have mentioned it, but Godfrey isn't troubled in that way. The Times made him out quite a hero. Then Godfrey secured a quantity of the Times containing that account of his early privations(?) and sent marked copies to the press of the state. The Register received one, but put it in the waste basket, having seen the story in one of its stages of growth before. The Manchester Enterprise bit and printed the stuff, and even intimated that Godfrey has good chances of becoming public printer at Washington. The Enterprise goes it one better even than Godfrey's tough epidermis could stand. He doesn't expect to be public printer himself.

Manchester.

The evaporator which has been in full motion all the fall has closed for this year.

There is some talk among the merchants about putting in one of Sidney's advertising clocks in the post office.

This year our school turns out one of the largest senior classes ever before in this school. It consists of 14 members.

A. J. Waters, who went to Dakota, has had his partner, Merriman, ship him two car loads of apples which he will find a market for.

Whitmore Lake.

D. M. King is again making corsets at Jackson.

Will Roper spent part of last week at Ypsilanti.

Frank Beardsley, of Howell, Sunday here.

It now looks as if Whitmore Lake would have a feed mill in the near future.

Mrs. Dodge and daughter of Laingsburg, have visited at T. M. Dodge's this week.

Prof. F. M. Lumbard went over to Hamburg, last Friday night, to make arrangements for a singing class there.

The M. E. Sunday school has a library of about 60 volumes that it would like to exchange with some other school.

Perhaps the "wickedest" joke ever played outside the "Peck" family was the sewing up of the school teacher's pant legs, while he was not around. Girls would never do such a thing, oh, no.

Last Saturday evening about 20 of our young people met at the school house and took the first steps toward organizing a literary society. Next Saturday evening permanent officers will be elected.

Tump-to-rah-rum is the yell of the U of M. class, two members of which secured a return "tie" ticket to the Lake last Sunday. They arrived here shortly after dark, attended church and returned on the 12 o'clock train Monday.

Lafaver Tuthill, of Green Oak, was severely injured by being trampled upon by a horse, last Saturday. He entered the stall with a milk pail upon his arm; a chicken flew out of the manger and frightened the horse, which knocked the pail to the floor, still more frightening the animal. Mr. Tuthill jumped into the manger, but the horse reared up, and knocking him down in the manger trampled upon him. A little son, barely escaping the horse's heels himself, drew his father, insensible, out of the manger, and out of the barn. Mr. Tuthill received some ugly gashes about his face and his breast. Dr. Smith, of this place, dressed the wounds, and thinks that the man is not dangerously hurt.

Ypsilanti.

Mrs. Wm. Rickey is visiting Detroit friends.

Miss Hanford, of Buffalo, is guest of Miss Clara Goodspeed.

Editor Smith, of the Ypsilantian, has been enjoying a fine eastern visit.

Burt Boyce, of Lansing, visited his father and other relatives, this week.

Miss Kittie and Fannie McCorkle spent Sunday with friends in Detroit.

Candidates for the postoffice are numerous; but it is rumored that some of our prominent Republicans will not try to remove Mr. Cremer for some time yet.

Mr. Draper, proprietor of the opera house, has left for a season's engagement with some dramatic troupe. H. M. Curtis has the management of the house during his absence.

Mrs. Eliza Wickwire, of Hamilton, N. Y., and Mrs. J. A. Getman, of Detroit, spent last week with their niece, Mrs. W. F. Hatch.

Milan.

W. Babcock, jr., has commenced his third consecutive term of winter school in the Mead district.

The stock of goods of the late C. A. Moore, consisting of groceries, crockery, glassware, etc., is for sale.

Milo Haight does not act much as though he was going to farming, even though he bought a farm. He seems to like Milan very well.

Easterly Bros. think the Leader man is trying to rush their business. The feed grinder, if it comes at all, is too far in the future to make it valuable news at this time.

A valuable horse belonging to Jo Gauntlett got loose in the stable, one night last week, and fell into a shallow well, where it remained about three hours before being rescued, and still it lives.

It looks as if both of Milan's stove mills were arranging to take their departure. Whether this is a feint to call bolts in or not is at present hard to determine. Such rumors were afloat last fall.

Fuller Dexter, who has been connected with the Prof. Friend business in New York city for the past several months, is at home. The business exclusion which seems to characterize this institution really baffles Dame Gossip, to her great discomfort. A business which every one doesn't know more about than the proprietor would be something new in the country, hence the mystery is that country people go and work therein, yet still upon their return know nothing to impart.

What is Catarrh

Catarrh is an inflammation of the mucous membranes, and may affect the head, throat, stomach, bowels or bladder. But catarrh of the head is the most common, often coming on so gradually that it has a firm hold before the nature of the trouble is suspected. Catarrh is caused by a cold, or succession of colds, combined with

Impure Blood

Its local symptoms are a sense of fullness and heat in the forehead, dryness in the nose and back part of the throat, and a disagreeable discharge from the nose. When the disease becomes chronic it is liable to develop into consumption. The eyes become inflamed and red there is throbbing in the temples, ringing noises in the ears, headache, and sometimes loss of sense of smell and hearing.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is the true remedy for catarrh. It attacks the source of the disease by purifying and enriching the blood, which, as it reaches the delicate passages of the mucous membrane, soothes and rebuilds the tissues, and ultimately cures the affection. At the same time Hood's Sarsaparilla builds up the whole system and makes one feel as if made anew.

The guests went up the broad steps and were ushered into the handsome parlors.

We were paupers, she and I, And the bread was hard to win;

The verses drifted through Mr. Romain's mind like far off bells, making sweet, sad music.

In a shabby little house on a lonesome hill was a gray haired, dim eyed man, who looked out of a window and saw Mr. Romain strolling idly by.

Mr. Romain went back home to his distinguished guests. The man who envied him turned to his table of pork and beans.

Mr. Romain was still dreamily humming some lines from the newspaper poem as he went up the steps of his handsome house.

TWO THANKSGIVINGS.

CHARITY

It is my belief, founded on a long and varied experience, that a man should never give money to a beggar. As a practice, the practice of indiscriminate almsgiving is subversive of true philanthropy. Of course there are exceptions to this rule, but in the main I think my argument is sound. But I am fully persuaded that if pressed to do so, I could not give good, sound reasons for my belief, and I confess that I often violate my creed. The fact is, that in the discussion of great fundamental ideas like those of religion or sociology, I find them to be like a creek in the mountains. Follow the creek up, and you will find innumerable brooks babbling into it from innumerable hollows between the hills. Each brook is filled with the sparkling product of God's distillery, each rivulet adds something to the volume of water in the creek flowing onward to these. But I have not the time nor the genius to explore all these streams of thought to their source, and so I take the sunshine as he sends it, the water as he brews it, the laughter and the tears as they are cooked at his good pleasure. And sometimes—very often, in fact—I find myself violating the conclusions of cold ethics and giving money to a beggar. This much before I tell my story.

The incident here recorded occurred on a Thanksgiving Day not many years ago. 'Twas a cold November day in Battery park, New York. The sun shone feebly from behind a bank of clouds, yet the air was keen and bracing. It brought color to the cheeks and brightness to the eyes of some twenty idlers seated upon the benches. Most of the persons in the park were apparently of foreign extraction. A little Frenchman, wrapped in a cloak and who took frequent pinches of snuff, formed a striking contrast to a brawny longshoreman in a blue blouse and overalls. Another picturesque group was formed of a Bulgarian mother with her three children, aliens who looked upon the evidences of a new civilization with fear and distrust. The rest of the occupants of the park were bits of flotsam and jetsam of humanity common in every large seaport town. The day of Thanksgiving was unknown to them. For the most part they were drinking of the lees of life and had nothing to be thankful for except the material fact of a cheerless existence.

While watching this drift from alien shores and wondering vaguely what were the actual conditions surrounding these heroes, my attention was drawn to the shuffling figure of a man coming up one of the aisles of the park. The sun came out for a minute and made him distinctly visible in all his abjectness. For he was the most wretched looking man I had ever seen. His derby hat was brimless, his once blue blouse had lost all of its orig-

"WOULD YOU GIVE ME ONE CENT, SIR?" inal color, and his trousers hung about his emaciated legs like a stocking about a pipe stem. Upon his sallow face was a few weeks' growth of stubby black beard. His face was dark and his eyes had that pale, sickly gleam sometimes seen under the dry husk of an onion. He walked with a slow, shuffling, uncertain step, and his shoulders drooped as though he was all gone inside and every minute he expected to collapse. The very abject-

ness of his condition fascinated me, and while still loathing him I watched his approach with interest. As he came up to me he seized the elbow of his left arm by putting his right hand behind his back. In this curious attitude he spoke:

"Would you give me one cent, sir?" This he said in a voice which seemed to come out of the very sub-cellar of despair, so monotonous was it, so utterly bereft of the ring of hope.

"No, sir," I replied, "I could not."

He made no reply in words, but his elbows lifted slightly and his long finger nails, which were mourning for departed cleanliness, sunk into the palms of his hands. Like a man who felt that death was stepping on his heels, he turned away. There were a dozen other men seated in Battery park, and to each one of these he in turn put the same question that he had to me. He met the same reply each time, for as he turned away I could see the sharp elbows lift with a despairing gesture and the sallow face harden into corrugated lines. One man, who looked jolly and well fed, perpetrated a ghastly joke by putting his hand in his trousers pocket when the mendicant asked him the fatal question and producing a paper of tobacco. Then Mr. Jolly read Mr. Misery a little homily on the injustice of poverty, and over Mr. Misery's face there spread a shadow of a grin, and such a grin as may be seen on the face of a mummy. It was in he had said: "Did starvation ever roost in your stomach for three days?" "Will he jump off the dock now?" I wondered to myself. No. He is actually "bracing" a park policeman. The gray coat simply waved him away with his club. Then, with a courage born of his awful need, he tackled two officers at the door of the barge office, but without success. He stood upon the sidewalk and passed his hand wearily across his forehead, as if he was awakening from a dream.

A feeling of curiosity had prompted me to follow him. "Does he need whisky or bread?" I thought. I determined to find out, and so I beckoned him into a dark corner around the barge office. The fires of hope must have been enkindled in him, for two tears rolled out of his eyes and I fancied I could hear them fall spat! spat! upon the stones.

"Are you hungry?" said I.
 "I didn't eat anything in three days," he replied.
 "Are you dry?"
 "No, sir; there's water in the park."
 "Is your favorite restaurant near by?"
 "Yes, sir. Up in Greenwich street."
 "Well, come along."

And as we went toward his restaurant I pumped him by the way. 'Twas a long and sorrowful story he told. His name was George Moore, and he was a Cornish miner.

"Times was better, sir," said he, "when I came to this country eight years ago. Ye see, I heard there was money to be made in the coal mines of Pennsylvania, an', like a fule, I came here. There was three of us—Nellie and the baby and myself. Dear heart, when I think of how my Nellie looked when we landed at Castle Garden eight years ago, with the roses in her cheeks and the light in her brown eyes, and she so hopeful, sir, that we would make a small fortune in a few weeks—"

Here he paused as if to choke back the emotions which were sweeping over him like a flood. Then he continued:

"Just eight years ago today 'twas, sir, I had dollars in my pocket then. Good, hard English pounds, and the smell of roasting turkey as we went by the restaurants didn't have the effect upon me then that it has today, sir. Well, we went to Shamokin, in Pennsylvania. I had no difficulty in getting work, and we were getting along nicely when I was taken sick. Then all the money melted away like hoar frost. The sickness lasted six months, and because of poor food and weakness the baby died. After that things went on from bad to worse, until Nellie sickened with the consumption. Then I cursed the country and the mines. But it did no good, for my wife went like the baby, and since she's gone, sir, I'm all broke up."

I COULD SEE HIS SHOULDER HEAVE.

Here he stopped, and it seemed to me that he gathered his falling powers together, as if he were about to give expression to a great thought. Then he blurted out:

"An' she were a good woman, sir, an' I loved her!"

"And what have you been doing since her death?" said I.

"Oh, just knockin' around doin' an odd job here an' there—starvin' mostly. Part of the time on the island for vagrancy. In the winter time sleepin' in the police stations an' in the summer on the docks. I've a rich relative in Michigan, a mine owner."

"Why don't you apply to him for assistance?" said I.

"Because I'd die afore he'd know the shape I'm in."

By this time we had reached the door of one of those modest and unconventional eating houses where the men in painted on a board and set outside the door. We entered and he sat down at a table. His unexpected good fortune had paralyzed him, and the prospect of a square meal had robbed him of speech. When the frowsy waiter asked him what he would have he couldn't reply, but sat gazing at the waiter dumbly as a sheep might look at its executioners. Then I ordered for him a big dish of vegetable soup. When it was placed before him, with islands of potatoes, carrots and cabbage floating in it, the savory steam arose and dilated his nostrils and a wolfish glare came into his onion colored eyes. So famished was he that, there being no spoon handy, he seized a knife and plunged it into the mess, and while he ate there seemed to be a lump in his throat which prevented his swallowing. While he was busy with this dish I ordered a big plate of roast beef, and the waiter brought two cuts which looked as if they had been taken from the forehead of the critter. This was flanked by a dish of mealy potatoes, bursting their brown jackets, and a bowl of coffee almost big enough to take a bath in.

As Misery gazed upon this feast, which in his estimation was plenty good enough for the gods who sat upon Mount Olympus, his eyes filled again and this time the tears fell. When I asked for the bill the proprietor handed me a check for the magnificent sum of 20 cents, which I discovered was scheduled rates.

"Well, old fellow, I must go," said I, after setting the bill, as I reached out my hand for a parting shake. He reached out a grimy fist, and when it left mine there was a silver quarter in his palm. He was just about paying his respects to the roast beef, but this princely gift choked him up so that he laid his head upon the arm of the once blue blouse. I could see his stoop shoulders heave, and, although there was no sound, there were plenty of signs of an internal commotion.

On Thanksgiving day, a year later, I was seated at a table in a Fourteenth street restaurant. Opposite to me, at the same table, sat a respectable looking man of about 40 years. He wore a neat suit of cassimere and was clean and wholesome in appearance. I noticed during the course of the meal that he watched me very closely, and just as I rose to leave the restaurant he touched me on the shoulder and said:

"Excuse me, sir, but didn't I have the pleasure of meeting you before?"

"That may be," I replied, "but if so I have forgotten it."

"Do you remember meeting a tramp last Thanksgiving day in Battery Park?" said he.

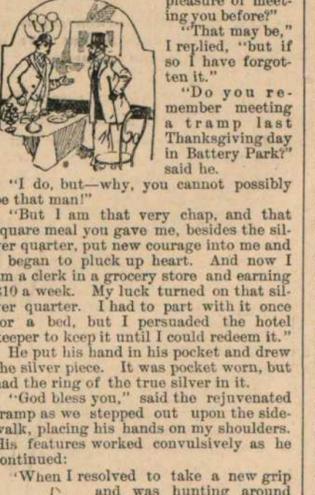

"I do, but—why, you cannot possibly be that man!"

"But I am that very chap, and that square meal you gave me, besides the silver quarter, put new courage into me and I began to pluck up heart. And now I am a clerk in a grocery store and earning $10 a week. My luck turned on that silver quarter. I had to part with it once for a bed, but I persuaded the hotel keeper to keep it until I could redeem it."

He put his hand in his pocket and drew the silver piece. It was pocket worn, but had the ring of the true silver in it.

"God bless you," said the rejuvenated tramp as we stepped out upon the sidewalk, placing his hands on my shoulders. His features worked convulsively as he continued:

"When I resolved to take a new grip and was hunting around for a job, I used to sit in the park and drop the silver quarter upon the pavement, and the ring it gave out reminded me of the chapel bell at home and of Nellie and the baby. Even now, comfortably situated as I am, I often take out the quarter and jingle it. The sound is always comforting, and so I find that Thanksgiving Day is not confined to the last Thursday in November."

Still this giving money to a beggar is a bad practice.

ADVICE FOR THANKSGIVING.

Don't spoil the day by finding fault. Anybody who is surly on a holiday deserves to be sentenced to six months' penal servitude.

Don't growl because you don't get the second joint. Don't be a hog and take all the white meat. The dark is considered better by many good judges.

Give the young ones all the gravy they want, and let them dab themselves with cranberry sauce to their stomach's content. It's anti-bilious. Explain to them that the anatomical structure of the turkey makes it impossible for you to supply them all with "wish bones."

If the youthful people of the family howl in the silent midnight watches do not paint the air blue. Remember that you were a boy once and used to overfeed. Remember, too, that Thanksgiving only comes once a year, although the juvenile vote would undoubtedly be solid for having it come twice a week.

Be copious of pie to your guests, sparing to yourself. Pie is healthiest when eaten by proxy.

Do not tell your wife about the plum pudding your Aunt Samantha used to make in Wayback when you were a boy. Even on holidays women are women. Praise it whether you eat it or not. Give her a double share of the plums.

And may you all live to eat Thanksgiving turkey many years in succession, and may your feast be followed by no pangs of indigestion.

ENOUGH OF IT.

A clergyman in a rural parish was remembered at Thanksgiving with a monster turkey, one of the kind that hang at the door of the markets Thanksgiving time. The family was small, and meal after meal that turkey "bobbed up serenely." At last one day that minister's young boy manifested a prodigious appetite. Again and again he passed his plate, until his father and mother became alarmed and asked him what he was eating so much for. With his mouth full of turkey he answered:

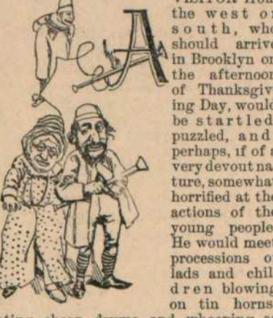

"Father, I mean you shan't have to say grace over that old turkey again."

The richest and most envied man unshorn of his wealth of money, but deprived of all the common benefits which his poorest brother man enjoys as an alien right, would be poorer than the poorest pauper.

IT IS LIKE A CARNIVAL.

CELEBRATING THANKSGIVING IN THE CITY OF CHURCHES.

They Have Processions and Maskers and Much Blowing of Horns, Bonfires and Asking of Gifts, but "They" Are Mostly Children—The Custom's Origin.

VISITOR from the west or south, who should arrive in Brooklyn on the afternoon of Thanksgiving Day, would be startled, puzzled, and, perhaps, if of a very devout nature, somewhat horrified at the actions of the young people. He would meet processions of lads and children blowing on tin horns, beating cheap drums and whooping as recklessly as so many young savages. Boys in masks and other costumes would salute him with "Gimme a penny, mister." And he might even see a squad of apparently well to do men marching in irregular order and conducting themselves like tramps.

To sum it up in one sentence: Brooklyn alone, of all places in the United States, celebrates Thanksgiving Day as a heathen festival. And the custom is peculiarly local to Brooklyn. It has not even crossed in full strength to New York city, though some of its influence is discernible there; and it is barely noticeable in the smaller cities and towns of Long Island. And what is stranger still, it is a very old local custom, and its origin, as is the historians of Ireland say, "lost in the mists of a hoary antiquity."

The phrase "heathen festival" in the preceding paragraph must not be construed as a term of reproach; it is simply meant to imply a celebration like that of Christmas in the west and south. And to explain these variations of local custom, a bit of history is in order. As all classical scholars know, it is only by accident that some sections of the Christian world observe Christmas as the anniversary of Christ's birth. The day was celebrated in Italy for a thousand years or more before the Christian era. It was the day of the sun's return from his most southern point in the heavens, the day when the people closed accounts for the old year and started on a new one; so all rigid rules were relaxed, the most austere smiled on the general levity and it was a day of rout and revel, of mask and mummery, of feasting and giving gifts and general social equality.

Through all the changes of 2,500 years the old custom has survived; and in more than half the Christian world today Christmas is practically a "heathen festival," celebrated just about as it was in Italy 500 B. C., except that gunpowder has been invented and the turkey discovered since then. From southern Europe the custom floated unchanged to the southern belt of the United States, and from England to Virginia and the border states north and south; so, while New Englanders assembled in their churches for forenoon service on that day, the people of Indiana, Illinois, Kentucky and adjoining states were "firing anvils," popping firecrackers, drinking eggnog, shooting at a mark, having running and wrestling matches, pitching quoits, and getting ready for a big dinner of fresh pork, chicken and sausage, with whisky before it and plenty of "Jeemes river" tobacco after it. Further south the slaves were allowed unlimited license and revel, and no work was done till after New Year's.

Well, all that Christmas is to the boy of the southwest, all that July 4th is to all American boys, and a good deal that a school holiday is to most boys, that is Thanksgiving day to the boys of Brooklyn, in the afternoon. A gentleman spending his first winter in the city in 1887, said to me recently:

"When I descended from the Greene avenue station of the elevated road at 2 p. m. I was amazed at being surrounded by a crowd of half-grown boys in masks and fanciful costumes who boldly demanded the gift of a penny each and on my refusal raised an infernal din with tin horns, bones and other instruments. At length I recognized the voice of a son of one of my neighbor's, a wealthy man, and he asked me for a penny! I bought off the whole squad at a penny apiece, but had not gone a square before I was surrounded by another squad, dressed in woman's clothes, their faces daubed with paint, and they insisted on escorting me home. And so it went on all the afternoon, first a squad of little hoodlums and then a procession of tall lads and young men; and some of them actually knocked at the back doors and demanded gifts of pie and cold turkey. All the boys of the ward seemed to have turned hoodlums for the afternoon. And the parents said it was a necessity to have a day occasionally to let off the savagery which is inherent in a boy and must work out some way. At night there were blazing barrels and other bonfires on the corners, and little savages daubed with paint howling and dancing around them. To a western man who had only known the day as a religious anniversary it was a queer experience.

The origin of this curious local custom cannot be traced. One old citizen thinks it was set up on Long Island by the French Huguenots, who had a day of gen-

INTERRUPTED.

"Ah, Genevieve, have you divined, That as this silken skein you wind, You wind around my heart as well, The thread of love's entangling spell? Those smooth, soft hands, so dainty white—"

"I wash them morning, noon and night, As you do yours, young man, I hope, In lather made of IVORY SOAP."

A WORD OF WARNING.

There are many white soaps, each represented to be "just as good as the 'Ivory';" they ARE NOT, but like all counterfeits, lack the peculiar and remarkable qualities of the genuine. Ask for "Ivory" Soap and insist upon getting it.

eral merriment at the season afterwards taken for Thanksgiving, and that the two merged in one by mere accident. Another "ventures to guess" that it was a Dutch custom, well established before Brooklyn became an American city. Still another is positive that the custom had its rise among the first Yankees who settled in Brooklyn, as a sort of jocular reaction from the austerity of the old New England holy day. According to him, the interlock of church and state was so complete in New England in the last century that a man had to be awfully solemn and religiously quiet all of Thanksgiving Day; the lighter hearted and liberal fled to Long Island and finding there so much more liberty than they had been accustomed to, grew quite hilarious over their new found freedom and made the day a sort of white man's Emancipation Day. What was at first wild hilarity in them has become masking and merriment in their youthful descendants.

There is a good deal in history to support this view. It is well known that the first churches on Long Island were largely built up by religious refugees from New England; and as the Puritans had rejected Christmas and May Day because the Church of England sanctioned some license on those days, so it is quite likely these exiled Yankees rejected the savor features of Thanksgiving Day because the Puritans had enforced them. Be the cause what it may, the fact is patent that while the forenoon is devoted to religion, the afternoon is a season for masking, mirth and mummery. And in Brooklyn alone, among American cities, do parents allow and even encourage wild, boyish sports on Thanksgiving Day.

A MEAN BOARDING HOUSE KEEPER.

"I'm glad all the boarders are going to be here to Thanksgiving dinner," said one boarder to another.

"Why, what difference does it make?" asked his companion in misery.

"Oh, you see last Thanksgiving they nearly all went out to dinner and the landlady fed the balance of us on the same every day kind of truck, remarking, 'that there were so few of us it didn't pay to get up a large dinner.' She will have no such excuse this year."

"Yes, but she will, though," was the other's quick answer; "she just told me that as all the boarders are going to remain home to dinner Thanksgiving she couldn't afford to make any spread."

Then the two locked arms and wandered down to the nearest lunch counter

A TRUE TURKEY STORY.

There was a time not long ago when turkey roosted too high for the man with a moderate rent roll, but cold storage has changed all this. The public has but a misty idea of cold storage, but the business is full of cold facts. In one of the twelve warehouses in New York city, according to a certain veracious reporter who was detailed to hunt up something curious for the Thanksgiving number, there is a turkey of the harvest of 1878 still in a remarkable state of preservation. This feathered bird has a post-mortem history. He was raised in Orange county and passed an uneventful life till his neck was wrung in the interests of the human race. He was hung up in Washington market as the prize turkey, weighing forty pounds. Nobody wanted a turkey of that weight on that Thanksgiving Day. While it had been a good year, nobody felt blessed to the extent of buying turkey by the fraction of a ton.

After Thanksgiving was over the turkey disappeared. Patrons of Washington market missed him, and imagined his fate. It was given out that an uptown hotel had bought him. In a week he was forgotten. A year later and a forty pound turkey was again suspended by its feet on the same beam in the market place. He had the rosy glow of youth, and nobody suspected that it was the ghost of a year-dead bird. Styles ran to small turkeys that year, and the butcher advertised steaks off the big fowl, but the public was not educated up to turkey steaks. That is why the turkey remained intact, and again flew out of the market.

Years followed and still a prize turkey weighing forty pounds was displayed each latter part of November under the inscription:

Orange county's pride. Raised by Farmer Biggs, of Meadowlake farm. Boarders taken in summer."

marketers began to recognize the big turkey as coeval with Thanksgiving. Nobody not in the business suspected that one turkey only was in the plot. Boarders from Biggs' swore they saw the identical turkey in the summer time walking around in the best hen society.

Cold storage did it. The turkey was this year on exhibition in Washington market, as usual. His toughness was somewhat tenderly inquired for somewhat early in the season, but the answer then was that Biggs had not yet set in his annual carload of turkeys. Later the order was sent to the cold storage warehouse to reproduce the monster, and all was busy about the place in consequence.

But up to the hour of going to press there have been no advices from the metropolis to the effect that any one had the nerve to buy the frozen antiquity.

If you should ever visit the big city across the North river from Jersey City about Thanksgiving time, go to Washington market and ask for Biggs' big bird, and it will undoubtedly be pointed out to you.

All may give thanks who are stirred by thoughts of the betterment of the world and can rejoice at its continuous and increasing fulfillment. God reigns and God wills, and he neither reigns nor wills for naught.

Malcolm McCallum, only son of Mrs. Clarissa McCallum, for many years a resident of Ann Arbor, died at Detroit, Nov. 20. He was born at Lockport, N. Y., July 26, 1835. He was known as a "humorist," and as such traveled extensively. The latter part of his life has been spent in quiet at his home on East Larned-st., Detroit. His death was not unexpected, and he passed peacefully away surrounded by his loving wife and friends. His remains were interred at Mount Elliott cemetery, Thursday, Nov. 22.

A barn at the corner of Division and Detroit-sts, belonging to A. A. Meuth, was destroyed by fire about 3:30 Sunday morning. The insurance is $50 with the Detroit Mutual. The barn was rented to two parties, but fortunately their horses were out. A carriage, light wagon, harness, blankets, hay and straw, belonging to the carpenter, John Mason, were destroyed. The old barn was an eye-sore, but the frame was stout and in good shape. Mr. Meuth had intended using the frame for a dwelling. He will, as soon as possible, erect a pretty dwelling on the site for his own use.

Last week Messrs. Harriman, Manly and Doty asked of the common council permission to erect a one-story frame building on Fourth-st., near the Hamilton block. They proposed to cover it with iron. They wanted to build that way because they could get only a five years' lease of the land, and would probably have to move the building at the expiration of five years. Their request was denied by a vote of 5 to 4. A motion to reconsider was carried, and then a motion to refer it to the fire committee was lost, when the original motion was carried again, 5 to 4. Ald. Allmendinger, Sutherland, Hammond, Wines, and City Recorder Bach voted to deny, and Ald. Herz, O'Mara, Miller and Mayor Beakes to grant.

High School Notes.

School closed yesterday to allow the students the opportunity to eat turkey again. Many have left town. (Many students.)

The Rugby team came back from Detroit, Saturday, with flying colors, having defeated their high school crack team by a score of 12 to 0. But our boys had no easy time of it, and won solely through the excellent work of the eleven through out. They have a fine team, and displayed a truly fine game to the three hundred spectators. In addition to the whole team's work, Jewett, Randall and Capt. Dygert especially distinguished themselves. Return game here on Saturday, Dec. 8.

She Claims $3,000.

Elpha L. Randall, the former wife of Thomas S. Sanford, deceased, is now demanding $3,000 from the estate on the strength of a written contract made between her and Mr. Sanford in 1870. This contract is a long one and was made while she and Mr. Sanford were living together, but one provision of it seems to take into account the contingency of a separation, which afterwards happened. This clause provides that in case of separation the excess of interest belonging to Elpha was not to be apportioned to her during the life of Thomas, but Thomas, in consideration thereof, would pay to her the sum of $3,000 at his decease in full of all demands. Judge Harriman appointed Justice Pond, Wm. Campbell, and J. W. Wing, a commission on the claim, and they met yesterday to take testimony. The points involved are whether the contract is valid, and if so, whether Mrs. Randall's claim has been already settled. Benjamin Brown is the executor of the estate. J. F. Lawrence is the attorney for the estate, and Sawyer & Knowlton for Mrs. Randall.

JOHN CALVIN AND JULIUS CAESAR.

Rev. H. M. MacCracken draws a Remarkable Parallel, but in Favor of the Former.

At the Presbyterian church, Sunday evening, Rev. H. M. MacCracken, D. D., LL. D., acting president of the University of New York, spoke on John Calvin. He opened with a brilliant parallel between John Calvin and Julius Caesar, the latter the foremost man in all the world of ancient times.

Mr. MacCracken would have us believe that John Calvin fills the same important position in the modern world, and he proceeded to place him as high as he could. Julius Caesar and John Calvin entered upon their careers at the age of 27; each was tall, thin, and a lawyer; each was put at school at 14 in the brightest cities of the world; each became a priest at 17, with a handsome salary and for the salary; each, for opposing religious oligarchy, was obliged to wander on the face of the earth, at first with some haste, before he was 22; great things were predicted of each. The parallel even extended to each dying at the age of 55.

Calvin tried to secure life, happiness and liberty by fixing a limited democracy for Geneva, to which city he fled, and he tried to secure a church government similar. Mr. MacCracken told of Calvin's intellectual power as shown in developing his civil and religious policy, a policy he thought we might well follow in our constitution, and upon which much of the Presbyterian church is based.

Mr. MacCracken spoke lightly of the "five points of Calvinism," and defended Calvin against the unwarrantably severe attacks of his enemies, for causing the death of Servetus on account of differences of opinion in regard to the trinity; and he then dwelt upon Calvin's great correspondence in which he influenced the powerful people of all Europe. The able lecture was closed with a description of Calvin's personal character and his lovable qualities.

I will finish up all matters of business I now have on hand in good faith and shall continue money and probate matters the same. D. CRAMER.
