to save Ills Life.

On Tuesday night, George H. Reynolds, who rooms in the third story of the Hamilton block, committed suicide by taking laudanum. The deceased was 23 years and 8 days old, and was the oldest son of Mrs. Helen A. Reynolds who became insane and was committed to Pontiac asylum last July.

The young man was of a quiet melancholy disposition, and for several months past had been drinking heavily. He had an allowance of $10 per month out of his mother's estate, of which A. W. Hamilton was guardian. He came to Mr. Hamilton shortly before 5 o'clock and asked him for some more money. Mr. Hamilton chided him with not making the proper use of his money, and Reynolds said that he would cause him no more trouble, as he had sworn off and would drink no more. Mr. Hamilton gave him a small amount of money and he went out.

In the evening he went into the rooms of his brother in the same building and quietly sat down and wrote a letter, appearing to be about the same as usual. He went into his own room for a moment, but returned and sat down and played cards with his brother and a friend. He got up and going to his sister-in-law handed her $1.35 to keep for him, saying that he "probably would never have any use for it." He soon grew drowsy but the party thought that he had been drinking.

Arousing himself he took Chas. Rooney into his room and produced a map of a cemetery at his former home, Peoria, Ill., and pointing to a spot said that he wanted his body buried there. This remark aroused suspicions in his brother's mind, and as George was very drowsy, he carried him to his own room and sent for a doctor. Dr. Darling arrived shortly before 9 o'clock and instantly decided that the symptoms were those of an opium poison. Dr. Breakey was sent for and they worked over him until nearly midnight when he died, the poison having done its work.

The young man went at it to take his life coolly and deliberately. He procured a bottle of laudanum at Goodyear's drug store, saying that it was for Mr. Rooney, for whom he had often procured this drug. He then went to his brother's room and wrote a letter which was found in his pocket and which proved to be a request that his body be buried in the cemetery at Peoria, Ill. He then went to his room, took the poison and then returning sat down and played cards with his brother and Rooney. His every act was that of deliberate self-murder.

A jury consisting Thop. Porter, E. S. Worden, E. H. Clark, W. W. Watts, fm. Allaby and W. A. Clark, was impaneled by coroner Clark on Wednesday morning and rendered a verdict in accordance with the above facts.

The suicide was not unexpected to the brother as he thinks that George had suffered greatly from melancholy and had not been in his right mind for the past two years. He returned a few days since from a visit to his mother at the asylum and finding her worse than he expected, this preyed upon his mind. When himself, Reynolds was quiet, inoffensive and hard working. He was worked at Andrews' book store and has well liked by his employers.

The body was taken by the 9:12 train last evening to Peoria, Ill., the former home of the family.

A Fine Course of Lectures.

The Political Science association of the University, under the lead of Prof. Henry C. Adams, announces a course of five lectures on the "Constitutional History of the United States, as seen in the development of American Law." The first one will be given March 8, and the other four will follow regularly with intervals of one week. They will be given in the University hall. The five names on the program include two men of national reputation, and the others are regarded as representative men of the cities in which they live. The program is as follows:

1. "The Federal Judiciary; Its Place in the American Political System," Thomas M. Cooley, LL. D., Ann Arbor, Mich.; March 8, 1889.

2. "Constitutional development in the United States as influenced by Chief Justice Marshall," Henry Hitchcock, LL. D., St. Louis, Mo.; March 15, 1889.

3. "Constitutional development in the United States as influenced by Chief Justice Taney," George W. Biddle, LL. D., Philadelphia, Pa.; March 22, 1889.

4. "Constitutional Development in the United States as influenced by Decisions of the Supreme Court since 1864," Charles A. Kent, A. M., Detroit, Mich.; March 29, 1889.

5. "The State Judiciary: Its Place in the American Political System," Daniel H. Chamberlain, LL. D., New York City; April 5, 1889.

A ticket for the course of five lectures is placed at the low price of $1.00. The association has done a splendid and enterprising thing in making this course, and the students and citizens should respond in like manner.

About fifty students attended the banquet of the Michigan club at Detroit, last Friday evening. The boys made themselves heard, too.

Forgery and Flight.

Again one of our business firms has been beaten by a young man who came here with the purpose of entering the law department, but who fortunately for the reputation of the students, never entered the University. The young man's name is I. Blount Dobell and he claimed his residence as D'adwood, D. T. He roomed at the residence of Thomas Hayley, on E. Liberty St., and boarded close by. When he left he neglected to settle with either of these parties, although Mr. Hayley has since received his money from Dobell's father. Dobell received an allowance of $100 per month and was not given to gambling or squandering his money. His father is an English capitalist, spending a large share of his time in the old country.

A short time ago Dobell, after purchasing goods amounting to $55 of one of our merchants, presented a $100 check purporting to be signed by his father, in payment. The merchant, after making some inquiries, save him the change amounting to nearly $45. The check was drawn on a western bank and was forwarded for collection. It soon came back, as there were no funds there to pay it, and it was pronounced a forgery. One of the banks also cashed a check for a similar amount for Dobell, but they claim that their check was all right.

A warrant was immediately sworn out for Dobell's arrest on charge of forgery, but upon investigation it was found that he had left town immediately after getting the cash on the check. A detective was put on his track and his father notified of the young man's crime. The father sent the money to the merchant to settle the case; but the warrant has not been withdrawn as the merchant is still out for his expenses. The case will probably be settled if the father remits the amount still due for expenses and also sends the money for his son's board. It might be well to prosecute this case, as similar methods of obtaining money from our merchants are becoming too frequent.

A Trip to East Saginaw.

On Friday morning a party of 55, consisting of a number of our city and county officials, business-men and citizens, took a trip to East Saginaw, to inspect the new route of the Toledo and Ann Arbor railway to that place. The party was under the charge of A. J. Paisley, the general ticket and passenger agent, who pointed out with pride the excellent road bed and buildings along the new line from Durand to East Saginaw. This connecting line is undoubtedly the best built railroad in the state, and the depots all along the line are uniform in style and handsome in design.

The party arrived at East Saginaw about 11 o'clock and were met at the depot by the mayor of the city, the president of the East Saginaw business-men's association, and a number of the business men. After escorting our citizens to the hotel, the mayor invited them to attend a supper and entertainment which had been arranged for them at Germania hall in the evening.

The party wandered around the city taking in the sights during the afternoon. In the evening they visited Germania hall where they were the guests of the evening. A supper was served and a musical entertainment given, passing away a very pleasant evening. The excursionists returned home Saturday greatly pleased with the trip.

An Inspiring Scene.

On Monday, Charles Henry, of York, secured a license from Deputy Clerk Brown, granting him permission to marry Mrs. Elizabeth M. Perrin, of Ypsilanti. The prospective groom, after depositing the one dollar for the license, confidentially informed Brown that he didn't want any slip in the arrangements, and as he had the bride elect within hailing distance, wanted to know where they could have the knot tied at once. The officiating deputy told him to bring his irie to the office and he would find an official to perform the ceremony. All the parties being in readiness, Justice Pond married the couple in the county clerk's office, Deputy Brown acting both as rooms-man and brides-maid, and genial clerk Hpwlett giving away the blushing bride of fifty years. The ceremony was performed in executive session, nobody being present except the participants and the officials.

Cannal of Queen Esther.

The dramatic cantata of "Esther, the beautiful Queen," will be given in the opera bou-e Friday and Saturday evenings, March 8 and 9, by a select chorm of one hundred voices, under the direction of Prof. W. N. Skinner, recently of Boston, Mass.

The music of this popular work is remarkable for its sweetness. The costumes are rich and true to the life and times represented.

In addition to directing the play, Mr. Skinner personals the character of Haman in a manner calculated to excite sympathy for his untimely end. The chorus, being the one organized in the Baptist church over a year ago, is far superior to the miscellaneous choruses usually organized for the production of this work.

The Oeona orchestra of 16 pieces has been secured for the occasion.

The new professor of anatomy at the medical college, Dr. G. A. Hendricks, is giving satisfaction to the students in inverse ratio, as it were, co the dissatisfaction which existed before he came. Naturally, the first few days he lectured he was regarded with a critical, yea, a hyper-critical eye. But he went on with his labors apparently unconscious of anything outside his duties. Then he made friends, both steadily and quickly. The result is that he is probably the best-liked man who has ever filled that chair of anatomy. His ordinarily dry work he renders decidedly interesting. As one of the students pointedly said the other day, he "makes anatomy talk." Prof. Hendricks, in person, is a little man with a large, finely developed head, and wears his whiskers on the Brnnsid plan. He is a bachelor, and keeps celibate quarters out on Vine plnce. One trait which early won him the affection of his students was his willingness to aid them, and for some time after he came he gratuitously gave two hours of instruction each evening to the juniors for the purpose of helping them along in their work.—St. Paul and Minneapolis Pioneer Press.

SAID GOOD-BYE.

An Impressive Scene in Church—Pastor Haines Hids the President—Elect Farewell from the Pulpit—His (Closing Prayer).

TAKING THEIR LEAVE.

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 25.—President-elect Harrison spent his last Sunday in this city, preparatory to his departure for Washington, in a quiet manner. With his family he attended services at the church where he has been a worshiper for many years. The edifice was crowded. At the conclusion of his sermon, Rev. Dr. Haines, the pastor, spoke as follows:

"Before these services close I can not but bear in mind that which to-day is prominent in the thoughts of us all—the fact that this is the last service prior to the departure from among us of a man who for more than a third of a century has been identified with this Christian church as a member and an officer. When new members come to our communion we bid them welcome in the name of our God. Certainly it is not unfeeling when long-remembered members go out from us for a season to places of influence and responsibility elsewhere, that we should tender to them our heartfelt assurance of our godspeed.

"I am sure it would be a grief to the members of this church were I to fail to break through the silence that has characterized this pulpit in its relation to the regular excitement of the last eight months and permit you, sir, who have been so long and so intimately associated with us here in Christian life and work, to go out without one word expressive of our earnest, affectionate wish and prayer. This is not the place nor the time for words of mere congratulation, however sincere. Our sense of personal esteem and gratification over your elevation to the Chief Magistracy of the Nation is today overshadowed by the necessity of separation, and especially of the sense of the serious, the solemn, responsibilities that are to be laid upon you—responsibilities which no man on earth is qualified to meet in the ordinary way and strength. For unto you in no small degree will it be given to influence for weal or for woe the interests of 60,000,000 people.

"You go forth to meet these responsibilities carrying with you, as you well know, the unwavering confidence as well as the warm personal regard of our fellow-Christians. We have learned to believe in you—in your personal integrity, in your tested, established, Christian character. Character is superior to achievement. It is itself the highest achievement. Office without character is nothing. We joy in the anticipation that you will exhibit to the people of this Nation the shining garment of magistracy and sovereignty, a genuine, broad Christian manhood, pure in its purpose, catholic in its spirit, undeviating in its loyalty to duty and to God.

"We remember that you are called not only to be an example but a leader to the people of this land. When Moses, who as an organizer and statesman stands without a peer in all history, received his commission from Jehovah as leader of the chosen Nation he was overwhelmed by the sense of his own weakness and deficiencies. Unto him Jehovah then spoke and gave this all-sufficient assurance: 'God will be with thee.' The eternal God is the same yesterday, to-day and forever. You may hear His voice speaking unto you those very words: 'He spake unto the law-giver of Israel, girding him with the sword of justice, and unto the threatening perils, and enabling you to lead this great American Nation forward to higher conditions of freedom and righteousness.

"In the stormy days of our civil war we recall that in the charge on the field of battle once and again you led the ranks forward and planted the flag of our country upon the ramparts gallantly won. How, as the leader and commander of three-score millions of people, we pray Almighty God to grant unto you strength and courage and wisdom to lead these hosts forward upon the paths of justice and truth, until a standard shall be planted on the height of a God-honoring and therefore enduring prosperity. We know that you have set before you as the pole-star of your public life—to use your own words—a patriotic purpose to promote the true glory of our country and the highest good of our people. We are glad in the belief that the righteous hopes inspired by your words and by your own life among us will be just fled in days to come. We rejoice in the confident expectation that the coming quadrennium will be marked by priceless blessings from the Father of mercies conferred upon our beloved country through your character and administration.

"I speak for all the members of this church when I say that we will hold you and yours tenderly in our hearts and we will remember you at the throne of our prayers. We beseech that God of nations unto whom our fathers looked and were lightened to guide you by His counsels, to shield you by His Providence, to enrich you with heavenly wisdom and to make you perfect in every good work to do His will."

Dr. Haines during the delivery of this farewell tribute spoke with much feeling and had the close attention of his large audience. General Harrison sat with head slightly bowed as though greatly affected by the solemnity of the occasion; as also were Mrs. Harrison and Mrs. McKee. At the conclusion of his remarks the pastor closed the service with this prayer:

"Almighty and everlasting God, I Heaven is Thy throne and the earth Thy footstool, and both Heaven and earth are members of Thy glory. Thou alone art the sovereign Ruler of all nations. Thou givest the kingdoms of the world to whomsoever Thou wilt. Thou workest all things after the counsel of Thy will. We beseech Thee now to take into Thy holy care Thy servant whom Thou hast called to be the Chief Magistrate of this people. Endow him plentifully with the gifts of Thy spirit. Let Thy wisdom be his guide. Let Thy arm be his strength. Direct him in all his counsels and actions to Thy glory and to the welfare of this land, that through him justice and truth and peace may abound, that from him, and those associated with him in authority, there may go out influence to develop the highest interests of our Nation and to build up in a yet nobler way a Christian civilization that shall be a benediction to generations yet unborn. And, together with thy servant, regard, we pray, these all the members of his household. Keep them under the shadow of Thy wings. Crown their lives with the blessings of Thy Providence and Thy grace. As they go forth from us, our Heavenly Father, we commit them into Thy care. We make this our prayer. Will Thou, Lord, make Thy face to shine upon them and be gracious unto them. Will Thou, Lord, lift up the light of Thy countenance upon them and give them peace. And now, unto Him who is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, be honor and glory through Jesus Christ, for ever and ever, amen."

At the conclusion of the services the Harrison party then set off for their home. Stopping near the entrance the members of the congregation passed out, and each stopped and spoke a word of farewell. The General was visibly affected, and Mrs. Harrison and Mrs. McKee were frequently moved to tears as the older members grasped their hands and uttered a short prayer for their preservation. After the crowd had vacated the church the party walked to the residence of their pastor, where they bade him and his wife good-bye.

NOTHING TO CONFESS.

Oscar WeebC Declares He Can Add Nothing to the Public Knowledge—The Real Grounds of His Perjury.

JOLIET, Ill., Feb. 27.—Oscar Neebe has made no confession for the simple reason, as he puts it, that there is nothing for him to confess. He sent a long communication to his brother Louis Monday night. But it contained nothing new relating to the Anarchists. Neebe said if he were offered his freedom tomorrow for a confession he would have to state honestly that there was absolutely nothing he could tell more than is already known. The report that he was preparing a full confession of the formation, workings and plans of the Anarchists, for Judge Gary, was not for executive clemency upon the fact that he never did any thing threatening human life nor was he in any way responsible for the Haymarket tragedy. Neebe stated in the presence of the writer that if he had been an organizer of the Anarchists or had any thing to do towards getting up the Board of Trade demonstration or the Haymarket meeting, he would feel himself a guilty man and would consider that his punishment was a merited one, and he would feel that he deserved to serve every day of his term.

Wfifr.—Just as soon as cold weather sets in, my hands roughen and eras. I buy the best and most expensive soap my druggist has, but the result is just the same; sore hands every winter.

Brown :—I had just the same experience, until I read one of the Ivory Soap advertisements, about too much alkali in some soaps, which draws the natural oil from the skin and leaves it dry and liable to crack, so I sent out and got a cake of Ivory Soap, and found it all the advertisement promised; my hands are soft and smooth the ye ir now.

A WORD OF WARNING.

There are many white soaps, each represented to be just as good as the 'Ivory'; they ARE NOT, but like all counterfeits, lack the peculiar and remarkable qualities of the genuine. Ask for 'Ivory' Soap and insist upon getting it.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1889.

THE territorial bill passed congress and the President signed it the 22nd of February. The constitution will be adopted the 4th of July, and if the elections take place before the organization of the next house, the Republicans will have a majority of three or four members. President Cleveland little thought when he entered the present administration how many good things he would be enabled to do for the opposition, even to the making of Republican states.

THE Democratic newspapers are having lovely times in manufacturing lugubrious and would-be sensational tales relative to the incoming administration. Their stories have lost all power of creating a sensation because they are so tediously common and chestnutty. Yet they should be credited with having improved somewhat upon the enterprise of their ancestry, for whereas the latter had a financial object in view and were rather startled into a falsehood these modern purveyors of illegitimate nonsense can evade the truth without any excuse or occasion to stimulate them into such a mischievous and unprincipled course. It won't do them any good, and no one else any good, or hurt, either morally or materially, and it would be just as well for them to save the money they in this way uselessly waste for ink and turn it towards expunging the national debt. That would be a feather in their caps! But the general perversity of their vitiated newspaper instincts will prevent any such worthy consummation.

IN his lecture before the Tappan Hall association, Monday evening, Rev. Wallace Radcliff, D. D., of Detroit, expressed some thoughts upon the relation of Christianity to the family, the school and the Sabbath, worthy of consideration by all classes. He thought the great increase in divorces was due chiefly to the emphasis put upon the rights of the individual without an equal emphasis on mutual responsibility, and the changed condition of our industries.

The conflict on the school question will, he thinks, compel us to give Christianity in an unsectarian form, a distinct and recognized place, or the public school system will go down—a result which all should resist.

The Sabbath is a preserver of our institutions, civil and religious. Liberty of conscience does not mean liberty to do anything a man pleases, but the right to believe as one thinks and to worship as one believes.

It was urged that the Sunday newspaper is an enemy to the Sabbath. It is secularizing the day. The evil will be abated when Christians generally are brave enough to do what is right.

THERE are over forty building association societies now in existence in this state. With honest and efficient men at the head of these associations there is no reason why they should not prove great blessings to the laboring man. They have provided thousands of tasty homes for poor families in Eastern cities that today would be floundering along in poverty and rented, unhealthy, unpleasant tenement buildings. Some very interesting papers are published in the interests of these organizations, giving information relative to their management, and showing how to get the best and most convenient homes for the money invested. The association in this city, it is a pleasure to learn, is in a flourishing condition and growing in prosperity. George J. Little, of East Saginaw, is credited with introducing the system in this state. His opinion in regard to its usefulness he expresses as follows: "I believe that these associations will eventually do much to solve, the strained relations between capital and labor by cultivating habits of thrift and independence in the wage-earners of the land. Give every workingman a home of his own, and he will see that the labor question has two sides. Again, I would like to see in every agricultural county in the land a farmers' building and loan association. Many of the heavily mortgaged farms and homesteads of the West might be redeemed in this way."

PUBLIC SENTIMENT.

Detroit Tribune: The stiffest free trader is a protectionist when he wants to sell anything.

New York Tribune: We are willing enough to shake Bismarck's hand, but he should first have the goodness to take off the glove.

Nashville American: A soldier's home at the Hermitage is the proudest monument the state could raise to the memory of Old Hickory.

Cincinnati Commercial: One of the strongest names mentioned from first to last for secretary of the treasury has been that of Senator Aldrich, one of the best informed and most studious and laborious of our public men.

Boston Advertiser: Next to Senator Allison, and first, now that his name is withdrawn, stands Senator Aldrich, of Rhode Island, in the minds of business men of New England. He would make an admirable secretary, and if Mr. Blaine were not to be secretary of state, we believe that his name would be very favorably considered.

Kansas City Evening News: The alteration over the establishment of a pest house has passed beyond the joking point. With no desire to alarm the people of Kansas City, the Evening News nevertheless declares in all gravity that it is essential that the health authorities should be supported in their efforts to deal with infectious diseases in the manner provided by law. If the attitude of the citizens toward the health officers is one of open resistance or indifference, the spread of a pestilence is inevitable. It is of far more importance to the city as a whole that disease should be checked, than that the owner of outlying suburban property should escape the annoyance of having a pest house in his vicinity.

THE March number of The Unitarian, edited by Rev. J. T. Sunderland of Ann Arbor, contains a recent letter from the author of "Robert Elsmere" Mrs. Ward says: "The success of the book in America has, indeed, been extraordinary. I have been so much touched and stirred by it, that it has been difficult for me to begin the new book of which my mind would soon be full, were it not for the disturbing career of the old! And yet, of course, the sympathy shown my work ought to be a great stimulus and encouragement to me for the future, and very likely when I get into some quiet place, as I hope soon to do, away from London, and set seriously to work again, I shall feel it only or mainly in this way."

THE STATE SCIOOU*.

From the Denver Times.

The bill appropriating $18,000 for the construction of a new building for the State Agricultural College, excited an earnest discussion in the lower house of the legislature yesterday afternoon. The state has established three institutions of learning of the higher grade—the University at Boulder, the School of Mines at Golden, and the Agricultural College at Fort Collins. Having called these institutions into existence, the state should care for them, to the best of her ability and her means. Appropriations for them should be made for a purpose and in accordance with a systematic plan. The purpose should be to build up great institutions. And the plan should be intelligently adapted to that end. Haphazard appropriations will amount to nothing. No member should vote a dollar for any of these institutions unless the appropriation is made upon a plan that promises some results for the state at large.

There is a good deal to be learned upon this subject from the experience of other states. The states of the Union, in their efforts to build up institutions of learning, with the one exception of Michigan, have miserably failed. The great institution at Ann Arbor is the only state university that takes first rank among the universities of the country. The great states of Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin and Indiana, have successfully prosecuted many great enterprises. But they have none of them made a first-class university or college. The other states, west of the Mississippi, are not yet old enough to have achieved great results in this respect, unless it may be Missouri, and not much is expected from her.

The state universities of the West are indeed very good institutions. They afford fair instruction and turn out many good scholars. But none of them rise much above the grade of high schools for the towns in which they are located. Colorado cannot afford to pay out thousands of dollars year after year merely to establish three high schools. Would it not be well to study the causes of these mournful educational failures in the West, that they may be avoided? Would it not also be well to investigate the causes of Michigan's magnificent success, that possibly examples for imitation may be found?

The first state legislature of Colorado decreed that the new commonwealth should never have a university. It did so when it adopted the distributive policy. The term university applied to the institution at Boulder is a misnomer. It is only a college and can never be anything else. But if possible it should be put on a basis to develop into a first-class college.

THOUGHTS ABOUT HELL.

The HekM of » Wanhtnaw Divine.— The True Orthodox View.

Several letters have recently appeared in the Detroit Evening Journal giving the writers views regarding hell and future punishment, etc. Rev. Thomas Holmes, D. D., of Chelsea, is one of the number. He expressed his convictions as follows: "I judge from the ideas that some of your light-minded, flippant correspondents seem to have respecting orthodox views of hell that they (the correspondents) must be pretty well advanced in their dotage, and that they have spent a good part of the past 50 years, at least, in Rip Van Winkle dumber, from which the generally received statement of Mr. Crossley—neither startling nor new—has aroused them. Poor fellows, how much they have lost I have been preaching the same doctrines, stated in almost the exact words used by Mr. Crossley, for 45 years, and have never had my orthodoxy on that subject questioned, and am not aware that, in all that time, I ever awakened from their oblivious slumbers so many Van Winkles as Mr. Crossley has awakened among the wisecracks of Detroit by a single utterance of it. It is almost enough to disgust a thinker, one who does keep abreast of advancing light, to find that PO many, who boast themselves of their "liberality" and "advanced ideas," continually amuse themselves, and suppose they are amusing others, by exhuming the bones of dead men, and exclaiming, while they hold them up before a gaping crowd: "What a hideous-looking man is this to be above ground!" Having learned a few advanced ideas of their thinking neighbors, they compare themselves with centuries gone by, rank the very neighbors who have instructed them among the long-ago dead, and ridicule them as fossils. I am not acquainted with all the orthodox ministers of Detroit, but I consider myself as risking nothing when I guarantee to those frivolous scoffers who have treated with most unbecoming levity a question that is worthy of greatest seriousness, that they will not find in an orthodox pulpit in Detroit (not to say in our whole land) a pastor who believes that hell is a lake of literal fire and brimstone, or who dissents materially from Mr. Crossley's statement that "memory, imperishable memory, and merciless remorse are to be the hell in which men shall suffer as with fire unquenchable."

If any one supposes that relinquishing the materialistic idea of a burning, sulphurous pit is substantial abandonment of the doctrine that a dreadful punishment awaits the persistent and incorrigible impenitent, let him reflect but a moment upon the significance of "imperishable memory and merciless remorse." Death is often called "the king of terrors," but nearly every issue of our daily papers records the fact that deluded men and women face boldly that dreadful king, taking their lives by their own wicked hands in the vain—undoubtedly utterly vain and futile—attempts to escape that more dreadful "imperishable memory and merciless remorse." Well have the scriptures said: "Fools make a mock at sin."

THE KOAU TO HEAVEN.

A REMARKABLE BOOK

The Road to Heaven, a golden casket of unique, brilliant and beautiful Christian treasure, gathered from the richest mines of religion, science and philosophy; sumptuously illustrated with a magnificent galaxy of royal steel plate engravings.

No other book of modern times deals with such a living subject, displays such a genuine genius, has such a significant and attractive title as this new book possesses. It contains the essence of a thousand tomes boiled into one, and explores every field of human experience, that can engage, fascinate and charm both the highly cultured and the unlearned, the Christian and the man of the world.

In the opening pages of this unparalleled work the majesty of God is unveiled with a pomp of language incredibly gorgeous, and yet simple enough to reach the mind of a child. Science is called to testify, how God sees and hears us and how the elements serve Him in His watchful care of man. New light is thrown upon the holy bible. The secrets of the human heart are laid bare, every passion, affection, virtue and vice of man is boldly touched by the author's wizard pen. The book is a minor in which all may see themselves, and it the advice of Socrates, "Know thyself," can ever be followed, this magnificent volume certainly affords the means.

The book is elegantly embellished with a beautiful galaxy of royal steel plate illustrations, by artists of world-reputation. The most entrancing scenes are reproduced in these charming pages, forming a magnificent picture gallery. The work contains over 700 massive octavo pages and is printed from large, clear, new type, suited to every degree of vision, on extra fine paper of admirable finish.

It is issued by the Globe Bible Publishing Co., of Philadelphia, Pa., and is sold by subscription only. Mr. Geo. N. Mitchell, who is the authorized agent for this section is now canvassing for it. We heartily recommend this book to our readers.

LIBERALLY MITS.

George Kennan's next article in the Century will be an episode of his Siberian journey, and will have nothing to do with the exiles. Mr. Kennan had a very strange and amusing experience which he will describe in this article, viz: A visit to one of the Grand Lamas of Asia. The Grand Lama Thibet is the one best known to the world, but there is also a Grand Lama in the Trans-Baikal—one whom no European is known to have visited in sixty years except Mr. Kennan. Mr. Kennan exchanged photographs with this incarnation of the divine, and the portrait of the old dignitary will form the frontispiece of the March Century.

The latest volume of Ticknor's Paper Series is "A Woman of Honor," by H. C. Bunner, the editor of Puck, and the author of "Midge." "The Story of a New York House." It is a dramatic and intense story. The dialogue is crisp and sparkling, as might be expected from the witty editor of Puck. Some of the sketches are evidently portraits of well-known Americans delicately and highly outlined, and well-drawn types of New York character—handled with great skill; and as the plot is unusual as well as intricate, the book will be read through with great interest by whoever begins it. The great success of the preceding novel of this series, "The Desmond Hundred," which has been regarded in many quarters as an able answer to "Robert Elsmere," has given rise to an unexpected demand; and Banner's brilliant and vivacious story is sure of a high degree of success.

In "The Popular Science Monthly" for March the more elaborate papers are pleasantly varied with briefer articles of a lighter character. Dr. Andrew D. White's "New Chapters in the Warfare of Science," with which the number opens, is pungent throughout, and will not be dropped till it has been read to the end. It concludes the subject of "Demoniacal Possession and Insanity," and shows how the clergy of the different churches not long ago agreed with one another in vexing the victims of insanity, and how medical science slowly introduced more humane treatment, and finally drove back superstition from this part of the field. A sketch and a portrait, from a three-hundred years-old original, are given of Pierre Belon, a famous French naturalist of the sixteenth century, who was the father of the binary system of nomenclature and of comparative anatomy. The interest of the various departments is maintained at its usual high standard. New York: D. Appleton & Company. Fifty cents a number, $5 a year.

In the Forum for March, which begins the seventh volume, several subjects are discussed of large political and commercial importance. Prof. J. G. Schurman, of Cornell University, who is a Canadian by birth, describes the resources of the Canadian half of the continent, and concludes that there is as great a destiny for Canada as for the United States; and he predicts that the Canadians will never favor annexation, because they do not need to burden themselves with the problems of the United States, of the South in particular. Mr. Isaac L. Rice points out as the primary cause of railway demoralization the habit of borrowing and buying proxies, which leads to a loss of a sense of trust in stockholders and enables manipulators to wreck properties and to pursue any policy that helps forward their private schemes. This is bribery always in its effect and often in its form; and the remedy suggested is in law making the buying of proxies punishable and changing the prevalent methods of the transfer of stock. Dr. Leonard Woolsey Bacon makes an argument (or the extension of the delivery of letters by carriers to persons in the country as well as to those in cities; and this he calls the next postal reform. In this matter we are far behind the European government.—The Forum Publishing Co., 253 Fifth Ave., N. Y.

WHAT MATTERS IT?

What matters it, my curious friend, where lies Our Heavenly harbor and our land of rest? Whether it be beyond the azure skies Or in some lower world, God knoweth best. It offers safety from our cares, and so "What matters whether it be high or low, It offers rest; what more should mortals know?"

Rest from the weariness of burdened days. Of-b-tar longings and of evil hoo-3. Of d'mica leading us through darkened ways And into efforts far beyond our power, Of dark temptations into secret sin, Of constant labor, earth's poor gaids to win, Of spirits deafened by the strife and din.

It matters nothing as to when or where We find the haven and the welcome home: Let curious doubt give place to trusting prayer, And no weak soul through speculations roam To seek for sealed-up secrets, hidden things, Knouth for us, if on eternal winjns. We reach the country of those better things.

Vex not thy Br'rit, O aspiring man, But live thy days as earnest workers must, Nor try to pierce thy God's mysterious plan Which obligates thee to a life of trust. Some day, som-where, while countless ages roll, Thy hungry heart shall comprehend the whole, The veil be parted thrj thy thankful soul.

A TERRIBLE REVENGE.

An Indian Girl's Method of Punishing a False Lovor.

The legends of the Chippewas, a once powerful tribe of Indians whose wigwams dotted the shores of Lake Superior, furnish no more terrible tale than that of Pawanaw-da-wa, or "Bright Eyes," a young girl possessed of more than ordinary beauty for one of her race.

The daughter of a chief, she was naturally proud of her blood and station, cold in heart and revengeful of an insult to very desperation. Often had she been wooed, but never won. The arrow that was to reach her breast appeared not to have been feathered until Ernest Legarde, an agent of the North American Fur Company, ventured in the vicinity of her people and filled her ears with glowing accounts of how Pocahontas had been respected and treated.

Then her pride awoke as it never had before, heaven-soaring although it had always been, and she longed for such a companion. Her fondness for attention and money, flattered by his constant visits to the wigwam of her father, and her love of dress pampered by his showy presents. She held her head still higher above her companions, passed them with a cold store and haughty tread, and took little pains to disguise her determination to become the wife of the white man.

So far from finding other female society that was at all attractive, it was very pleasant for Legarde to coquette with the Indian girl, to have her watch for his coming, to see that she dressed and decorated herself exclusively for him, and to feel that she loved him. But it was a very dangerous pastime. The fox was not more crafty, or the rattlesnake more treacherous, and it would have been better for him if he had made either of them a companion. Yet the girl loved him to adoration.

He was by far the handsomest man that had ever visited her father's wigwam—one, in fact that any girl would gladly have accepted for a lover, bringing as he did, the charms of education and money to back those of manly bearing and beauty.

During the entire winter he had been attentive to the Indian girl, and with the coming of the warmer months they often floated together over the crystal waters of a beautiful stream, or wandered through the evergreen woods. At first the white man had thought nothing of her save as a pleasant companion, but as the days passed his stay became protracted, and orders came for him to remain another year. He began to realize that she was necessary for his comfort, and his liking grew into something very near love.

Then he built a wigwam of much greater pretensions than any in the village, and resolved that she should fill it, in short, be his wife—a wife as such marriages were viewed in that section at that day—that is, simply marriages of convenience, to be entirely ignored by the husband when he departed, no matter though half a dozen half-breed children had the right to call him father.

There was one of the number that constituted his party who looked more clearly at the matter than did Legarde. Old Joe Fisher had been a trader and trapper among the red men for more than a score of years. He knew their character too well to judge them otherwise than aright and he shook his head solemnly as he saw the matter verging toward a climax.

"What are you taking so much trouble about that should for an asked Legarde, as he saw the rude but comfortable structure near completion. "Wasn't the one you wintered in good enough?"

"No; it was cold and uncomfortable." "And you are not going to live in it 'come!" asked the old man, turning his head aside, as if ashamed of the question. "Can't tell yet. But there goes Bright Eyes, and I want to see her."

And he dashed down to the water's edge, hailed her as she was passing in her canoe, jumped in, and was paddling away toward one of the little islands that line the northern shore of the lake, flashing with their dense foliage like emeralds set in a changing sheen of curquios.

Never before had Legarde fully determined upon his plan of action. Now he had made up his mind to win her at all hazards, and, throwing his arm around her waist, he drew her to his side, whispered burning words of love, and for the first time kissed her. And thus they sat—she loving and dazzled by the splendor he promised should be hers when he returned to civilization, and he forgetful of all but the passion of the hour.

With the reclining sun they returned to the shore, promised man and wife, though, as yet, no time had been fixed upon. That was a sweet decision left for the future. Joe saw them as they landed—saw their parting, it was such us lovers have indulged in since Eden, and will enjoy until the end of time. He saw the tender embrace, could hear the kiss, and resolved to be reticent no longer.

"I want you to tell me one thing," he said to Legarde, as the two sat by their bright camp fire, smoking, after a late supper. "Well, Joe, what is it?" "Do you intend to marry thiii Indian girl?"

"Why? Will it make any difference to you?" "Certainly not, but it will to you, if I don't miss my reckoning, and I am not apt to do so when there's anything red-skin about the matter. I've lived too long among them not to know them, root and branch."

"Well, I intend to marry her." "You had better not. She's just as dangerous and treacherous as a poison serpent."

"What makes you think so?" "What would make me think there was an other around if I saw a slide, or a beaver if I saw a dam? I always know what kind of an animal is about the minute I see its trail."

"You are much mistaken about her, Joe. She loves me to distraction." "Very well now, but I reckon it won't always be so. You don't expect to remain in these woods until you die?"

"No, thank Heaven; another twelve months will see me clear of them forever." "And what are you going to do with the girl when you leave?" "What makes you ask su-th a question?" "You can't well take her home with you, you know, and—"

"I don't intend to. Hundreds have married—the ceremony is only a mere farce—married squaws before and left them whenever they pleased."

"And you intend to do so?" "Certainly. Do you think I would be fool enough to take a copper-skinned wife homo, and be made the laughing-stock of all my friends?"

"Then you had better look out for yourself. That is all I have got to say, and—what in the name of thunder was that?" Joe's quick ear had heard a slight rustling in the bushes, and in a moment after there was a plunge in the lake.

"I guess it was only a frightened otter," he continued, as he proceeded to re-arrange the wood upon the fire. An otter! How quickly he would have changed his mind if he had seen the form of the Indian girl, Bright Eyes, as she crawled upon the shore at a little distance, and darted along the homeward trail almost as swift and noiseless as the wind. She had listened to every word—knew that she was to be made a wife and then deserted—knew that all the promises of her white lover were lies! Ah! if there was ever a hell raging in a human bosom—ever a brow blacker than a thunder-cloud—it was hers, as she rushed toward her wigwam, with her fingers playing convulsively with her long, sharp knife.

But the next day, when she met Legarde, she was as calm as a summer morning. She yielded to his embraces; she granted them with interest; she showed her love so warmly that if he had any doubt he was more than satisfied now.

"Come," he said, "tell me when you will be my wife?" "Let the pale face be at yonder rock," she replied, pointing to a distant one, "before the sun has drunk up the dew. There let him remain until Bright Eyes comes. She will not be long. Then she will answer."

And so it was decided, and the gray of morning found Legarde at the trying place. But the hours crept along and he was yet alone. The sun rose and began heating all around him. Something must have detained the Indian girl, he fancied, and determined to wait yet longer. Suddenly, however, he was aroused by a startling hiss. He turned and saw a huge rattlesnake crawling up the side of the rock. Fleeting toward the other side (for he was unarmed and there was not even a stick for defense near) he would have descended, but was met by another serpent. For a moment he stood overpowered by fear. Then he saw the scaly monsters crawling up toward him in every direction—knew that the hot sun's rays had lured them from their holes—knew that he was standing over their den, and thousands upon thousands were surrounding him.

"Oh, my God! what shall I do!" burst from his lips in the terrible agony of the moment. A wild, ringing, almost fiendish laugh rang upon his ears, as if in reply, and, looking up, he saw Bright Eyes standing upon a rock high above him.

"Bright Eyes! Bright Eyes! For Heaven's sake save me!" he shouted, and the answer came back borne by the wind to his ears: "The pale face's tongue is as false as the serpent's. The would have made her his wife and then deserted her. The very night she promised to be his she crawled near his wigwam and heard all. She told him to come here—here to the very center of the serpents' den—for his answer. The poisoned teeth and fiery tongues will give it to him. See!"

The pen could not if it would, and would not if it could, describe the scene that followed. The Indian girl, from her lofty look-out, saw all a human form fighting with countless serpents whose fangs were driven deep into the quivering flesh. She saw him fight with the courage of despair. She heard his prayers for mercy, and answered with horrid mocking laughter. She saw the maddened wretch, completely covered with a net-work of scaly coils, leap headlong from the rock—knew that she was terribly revenged, and calmly sought old Joe, and told him that his master wanted him.

Ah! how the old man shuddered when he found the disfigured corpse, and read at a glance the true history of the matter. His eyes could not be deceived, no matter how another's might be. He made a coffin of bark, buried the remains, and even as he was doing so saw the incarnate devil of a woman standing at a little distance laughing and making mocking gestures. That sight was too much.
