A Dream.
TO E—
As the moon in her nocturnal journey
Had clambered far up in the sky,
And the warm winds, like footsteps of Morpheus,
Kissed the trees with a low, soothing sigh,
As the owl ceased his mysterious mournings
And repaired to his sheltering tree,
And all Nature seemed calm and contented,
Then I dreamed, my own loved one, of thee.

In my dream was I changed to a woodbine,
Growing high on an ancient oak tree,
In a grand old primeval forest
By the shore of the sunny blue sea.
Like a sylph in her chariot of flowers,
Close by me a clematis grew,
The most graceful of all Nature's beauties,
And that vine, my darling, was you.

Though the tree that supported the woodbine
Leaned away from that on which you grew,
And looked off o'er the deep blue waters,
As if to lead my affections there too;
Though the winds of the sea, and the old sun
himself
All lavished their charms upon me,
Yet from the first my tendrils extended
Stretched out pleading, sweet angel, to thee.

And there off came a beautiful Goddess
At the calm, peaceful close of the day,
Who seemed charged with the keeping of us two,
And careful to train each in its way,
And Venus had off to me whispered
As she directed your branches and mine,
That some day my tendrils extended
Should intertwine, dearest, with thine.

Thus the woodbine grew higher and higher,
Eer away from its protecting tree,
And its tender and resistless branches
Ever reached out appealingly to thee,
And at last Venus turned the clematis,
And its blossoms on me seemed to beam,
The two vines were just twining together,
When—"I awoke—alas, 'twas but a dream."

ANN ARBOR POSTOFFICE.

WHAT CONGRESSMAN ALLEN SAYS.

Petitions to Count—The Office not Promised.—His Decision to be Haste Soon.—Duffy's Time Limited.—An Interesting Interview.

A Washington dispatch to one of the Detroit dailies purports to give the situation of the postoffice appointment for Ann Arbor, in the following paragraph:

"The most interesting thing in Second district politics is the Ann Arbor postmastership. Postmaster Duffy has made a good record in the office and there seems to be no reason for removing him. At the same time, his term will not be up for a year to come, and that would bring the new appointment very close to the time of nominating Capt. Allen's successor in congress. There are several candidates for the office and the struggle will be a warm one. Capt. Allen will name the man who has the strongest backing, and he is an old enough head in politics to understand that the Ann Arbor postoffice has made and unmade congressmen and is likely to do so again unless great care is taken. Meanwhile Mr. Duffy will probably serve out his full term; for the president has shut down on making removals except for business causes."

In an interview with Congressman Allen, who returned from Washington on the 3rd, he was shown the above dispatch and commented quite freely upon it. "That dispatch," said the congressman, "is a mistake from beginning to end. I have not understood, nor has President Harrison, that Mr. Duffy's term of service has a year yet to run. I consider that his term is out any time after he has served for four years, there is no idea that he will keep it another year. By saying this, I don't mean to say that Mr. Duffy will be summarily 'bounced.' When the proper time comes, he will receive his notice in a gentlemanly manner, giving him plenty of time thereafter to close up his business properly."

"Have I decided upon the man to name for Duffy's successor? No, I have not," continued Captain Allen, "but I will know within the next fifteen days. I am not the one who will make the choice. The republican patrons of the Ann Arbor postoffice are the ones to do this, I simply sitting as a judge in chancery to decide the case on its merits. The arguments have been made, the evidence is in and all there is for me to do is to look it over and decide. I gave both candidates a chance to get petitions, and I have a long list of names, over 1300, I think. I am going through these, carefully cutting off the names of all democrats, parties who do not get their mail at that office, men who are dead or removed from that vicinity, and those who have signed both petitions. When this is done, the man having the largest number of petitioners left will receive my recommendation for the place. I do not know whether it will be Beal or Samner, but I will say that this appears to me the right way to do it, and I had rather be right than be contented."

"I understand," he continued, "that there has been considerable talk at Ann Arbor about my having promised the place to J. E. Beal for his uncle, before election. I want to say that I never promised, either that or any other office, to anybody before election or after. I have told J. E. Beal, as I have told others, that if his uncle received the support of a larger number of the republican patrons of the office than Mr. Sumner, he would receive the appointment, and if he did not receive this support he would not receive the appointment. There will be no outside influence that will have any effect on my action in the matter. The petitions and letters that I now have in my hands will be all that I shall take into consideration. I expect that I will make some enemies whichever way I decide, but if I take the measures that I have laid down, I am sure that the fair-minded men of Ann Arbor will stand by me if they think that I am doing what I think is right."

"I am considerable of a civil service reformer and don't go entirely on the [old Jackson doctrine. In the minor offices and boards, I believe in giving the democrats a representation. On the pension board at Ann Arbor, I shall appoint two republicans and one democrat, keeping Dr. John Kapp as the democratic member if he will accept it. I am in favor of keeping two or three of the democratic mail carriers on. Duffy has made this a little hard for us to do, as he seemed to forget the republicans altogether, but I think that it is the right thing to do."

"No," concluded the congressman, "the appointment of postmaster at Ann Arbor will not be made at the end of 15 days. By that time, I will have finished the count on the petitions and know whom the people have chosen. After that it won't be very long before the appointment will be made, but the present incumbent will have plenty of notice of the event."

THE T. & A. A. RAILROAD.

What EX-GOV. Ashley Says about its Past History and its Future Prospects.

Regarding the work of Ex-Gov. Ashley in building the T. & A. A. R. R. and making it a success after others had failed, and the prospects of the road getting an entrance into Detroit, the Detroit Free Press, in an interview with President Ashley, says:

"Ex-Gov. J. M. Ashley, of Toledo, the man who has rendered the Toledo, Ann Arbor & Northern Michigan railroad an assured and profitable success during the last decade, bustled into the Russell House lobby yesterday afternoon just about six inches in advance of the driving rain storm. He was all out of breath, as a very natural result of his race with the elements. Gov. Ashley is in many important respects one of the most remarkable men of the age. In personal appearance he closely resembles the late Henry Ward Beecher, with the single exception that nature has been noticeably more generous with him, in a physical sense. He is a man who is bound to attract attention in any crowd, and his career is fully as conspicuous as is his personal appearance. Less than a score of years ago Gov. Ashley was among the most conspicuous figures in Michigan and Ohio politics. He filled several high and important offices, but was finally overtaken with financial reverses which left him practically bankrupt. Although then an old man—as age is reckoned by years—he began life anew with all the desperate energy which has ever rendered him a marked character in the public eye. Adopting Toledo as his home, he began battling for the inauguration of the railway enterprise of which he is now the efficient head. It was up-hill work, few among the business men with whom Gov. Ashley associated believing that a railroad through the portion of Michigan contemplated could ever be made a financial success. The incorporators believed otherwise, and stuck to his text with all the fortitude of a Spartan. He finally turned his broad back upon politics—his former evil genius—notwithstanding numerous flattering propositions, and went to New York, where, after months of almost superhuman effort, he succeeded in raising sufficient capital to inaugurate his pet railway scheme. The rest was comparatively easy. Step by step the road was worked through to its present important magnitude, and today, after a lapse of a decade of busy years, Gov. Ashley once more finds himself in possession of a fortune amounting to at least half a million of dollars. Two capable sons have been associated with their now venerable father during all his efforts to build a railroad and repair his ruined fortunes, and now lift from his shoulders much of the active business in connection with the enterprise."

"We are well satisfied with what we have accomplished in connection with the Toledo & Ann Arbor Road," Gov. Ashley said yesterday. "It is at least an assured and profitable success, something of which any man may be excused for being a trifle proud. It is no simple matter to build a railroad for any considerable distance right in the face of popular prejudice. To a large extent, this is just what we have accomplished. Few of the people who should naturally have been the most vitally interested in the enterprise believed that it could ever be made a success. I never for a moment agreed with them in this theory. I was positive that there was a field for the road. The result proves that my opinion was emphatically correct, notwithstanding the overwhelming odds against me. The road is doing a prosperous business and every passing month only serves to widen and deepen the circle of our influence in Michigan."

"Are you thinking of running your road into Detroit?" was asked.
Gov. Ashley hesitated perceptibly before replying. Then he asked a question which was, in itself, a pretty definite affirmative answer.
"Where is Maj. Anderson, the right of way solicitor?" he inquired. "Has he been in Detroit recently?"
Being assured that but a day or two had elapsed since Maj. Anderson had been seen in Detroit, Gov. Ashley vouchsafed a more direct, though palpably evasive, reply.
"I came to Detroit from New York to see Maj. Anderson on a little matter of business," he said. "Most of my time is spent in New York nowadays, you know. In regard to your question about extending our road to Detroit I can only repeat what I have often said on the subject. Just as soon as I can bring the Toledo & Ann Arbor Road into the city without making ruinous sacrifices to do so I will enter into the project most heartily. That is about all that can be said in regard to the matter at the present time."

Prof. George W. Renwick has accepted a position as teacher of music in the public schools at Muskegon. A large increase in salary was the inducement for him to accept the offer. It is too bad that Ann Arbor cannot afford to pay as good salaries as other places in the state.

The Fire Commissioners.

The Board of Fire Commissioners held an interesting meeting on Tuesday evening, all the members being present. This principle business was to take action on the recent request of the council, asking the board to dispense with the services of Jacob Hauser and his team at the engine house, as the council deemed it useless to keep them there.

The commissioners did not seem to agree with the council, and the following resolution was passed in opposition to their request:

To the Honorable, the Common Council of Ann Arbor:

GENTLEMEN:

The resolution of the common council recommending the Board of Fire Commissioners to discharge Jacob Hauser with his team, has been received and considered. The Board are of the opinion that this city can not afford to dispense with a second team during the night, as the condition of the department is, at present, very weak. In the opinion of the Board it is impracticable to depend on a volunteer company to haul the hook and ladder truck, as it is heavy and not suitable for a hand truck. Further difficulty would be experienced in securing a volunteer company to work in harmony and efficiently with a paid department. To depend on a team from a livery stable does not seem expedient.

In conclusion the Board desire to express themselves as willing to dispense with the services of Jacob Hauser and his team, if the common council will provide a team to take their place.

The chief was instructed to present the names of six men, to act as miaute-men at a salary of $8 per month.

The chief was instructed to use the hall as a sleeping room for the men, and arrangements were made to provide beds and bedding for their accommodation.

Badges, belts, spanners and hats were ordered purchased for five paid men.

The clerk was instructed to receive sealed bids for furnishing 500 feet of cotton hose.

A committee was appointed to prepare rules and regulations for the government of the department.

The Board then adjourned, to meet on Wednesday evening with the Board of Public Works and decide upon plans for remodeling the engine house.

Lived Over a Century.

Mrs. Rita Johnson died in Lower Town last Thursday, of old age. It is claimed that she was 107 years and 17 days old when she died, although her brother thinks she was not quite 100. She was remarkably healthy until about three months ago, when she began to fail and lose her appetite, dropping in weight from 200 to 95 pounds. She was very active and kept at work until three weeks before her death. Mrs. Johnson lived in Ann Arbor about 18 years, her husband having died here 13 years ago. She was brought up in New York state, was a slave and was made free by the emancipation act of that state, about two years after the war of 1812.

Stephen Jacobs, of 8, Fourth-st, was a brother of the deceased and furnished the information concerning the family. Jacobs is 70 years old, was born in Maryland, was sold into slavery when he was two years old but managed to run away and reach Canada when 13 years of age. He was one of a family of 22 children, he being the last one, now that Mrs. Johnson is dead. He thinks that he has two half-brothers living somewhere but is not certain. He saw his sister but once before he came here to live. About 12 years ago, John Freeman wrote to him in Boston and told him that he had a sister here, and he came on to see her.

Sprinkle the Streets.

Editor of THE REGISTER:
Permit me a suggestion in regard to the dusty streets of our otherwise beautiful town. Private sprinkling is, of necessity, occasional and spasmodic. Many of those who have hydrants seem to have grown weary in well doing. Now, is there any better way of securing universal comfort—the comfort of those who have to walk in the streets as well as of those whose homes face them—than to sprinkle them all at public expense? Such a large contract, it seems to me, would impose upon each lot-owner a tax which would be trifling compared with the good secured.

Resolutions of Respect.

The news of the death of Mrs. Charles Kendale Adams was received by the Ladies' Library with deep sorrow and regret. As its able and efficient President for eleven years and during two terms of office, she had won the entire confidence of its members in her wisdom and discretion, while their esteem and appreciation for her grew with the years, as they came to recognize the unselfish devotion, earnestness of purpose, and strength of character that were hidden under an exterior always gentle and retiring. When her removal from Ann Arbor necessitated her resignation, it was accepted with much regret, and our kindest wishes for her happiness followed her to her new home and new duties. Since then, proofs of her continued and undiminished interest have repeatedly been given and will always be gratefully recalled.

We can never forget that to her energy and hopefulness we are largely indebted for the realization of our long-cherished desire for a permanent home; while to her unwearying labors in its behalf, her courage under difficulties, unflinching enthusiasm, and confidence in its ultimate prosperity and success, the Library owes a debt of gratitude which it can only repay by holding her name in loving and grateful remembrance.

May the example of a life so unselfish, useful, and good, inspire many with a like spirit. The members of the board, including those formerly associated with Mrs. Adams, unite in paying this affectionate tribute to her memory, and extend the assurance of their sincere and heartfelt sympathy to him who has lost a loved companion and faithful helper, and to the son who mourns for a devoted mother.

LITERARY NOTES.

In the Forum for July Bishop Potter, of New York, treats of the place and prospects of "The Scholar in American Life."

The Century's gallery of old masters, on which the leading American engraver, Mr. Cole, is now engaged in Italy, reaches this month the work of Gentile da Fabriano, a part of whose "Adoration of the Kings," forms the front-piece of the magazine.

The favor with which The Cosmopolitan has been received in every part of the country during the past six months under its new management, has been so marked as to warrant several changes which it is hoped will be found to the pleasure and advantage of its readers.

The first of these will appear in the October issue, when there will be an increase of eight pages of reading matter. This is done to make room for an innovation in the shape of a complete novel of thirty-two pages. These stories will be prepared for The Cosmopolitan by some of the most distinguished American and English writers of fiction.

Recognizing the growing importance of the great Northwest and West, The Cosmopolitan has in preparation a special series of articles relating to the West and Southwest. The series of "In the Field" papers will be continued in each number by a special article upon important branches of outdoor exercise and recreation, each article being written by an expert and well illustrated.

Leave hope behind.

All ye who enter here!

So ran the dire warning which Dante read on the portals of the Inferno. So runs the cruel verdict of your friends if you are overtaken by the first symptoms of that terrible disease, consumption. "Leave hope behind! Your days are numbered!" And the struggle against death is given up in despair. But while there is life, there is hope! Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has cured hundreds of cases worse than yours; and it will cure you, if taken in time. But delay is dangerous. No power can restore a wasted lung; the "Golden Medical Discovery," however, can and will arrest the disease.

Mr. Morris is recommended for this place by General Alger, of Michigan; General Bradley, of Kentucky; General Knapp, of New York, and by several State delegations besides that of Kentucky. It is expected that he will get the appointment.

WASHINGTON, July 5.—The coinage executed at the United States mints during June amounted to 8,934,705 pieces, representing $4,770,413.40 in value. There were 88,495 gold pieces, of $1,392,093 in value, and 8,514,440 silver pieces, of $3,289,203.50 in value.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—Secretary Busk has issued a circular to railroad agents and managers notifying them that Texas fever exists among cattle in portions of Arkansas, Indian Territory and Texas. The circular gives instructions for isolating infected cattle during transportation and for disinfecting cars after they have been unloaded. Inspectors are to be located at all principal stock points in the country to see that the provisions of the circular are enforced.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—Hadje Hassein Gooly Khan, the Persian Minister to the United States, has resigned his post and will soon leave this country, never, he says, to return. He gives as his reason the articles published in American newspapers from time to time concerning the ways and doings of his royal master, the Shah.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—The Secretary of the Treasury has under consideration the case of twenty-five English glass-blowers who landed at Boston April 12 and subsequently secured employment with Chambers, McKee & Co., of Jeanette, Pa. It is charged that these men were brought over by the Universal Federation of Glass-Workers in violation of the alien contract-labor law.

WASHINGTON, July 9.—President Harrison will probably go up to Deer Park to join his family on Friday, to remain over Sunday and during the early part of next week. Hereafter during the hot weather he expects to spend about two days in each week at work in Washington, and the remainder of the time at Deer Park. This will make it unnecessary to take any extended vacation as has been the custom of preceding Presidents.

THE GROWING CROPS.

South Dakota Wheat and Corn Almost a Total Failure.—Big Harvest in Kansas. MASON CITY, Ia., July 6.—John K. Elder has just returned from a trip through nearly every county in South Dakota, and with the exception of very few localities pronounces the wheat crop an almost complete failure. Much of it stands less than six inches high, and is headed out with the kernel inside dried up, nothing being left but the hull. Corn is showing the effects of the drought, and at the best will be but half a crop. Water is very scarce and pasturage very short.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 4.—Crop reports received by Secretary Mahler, of the Agricultural Department of Kansas, are to the effect that the wheat harvest is almost finished. The secretary estimates the total yield at 34,000,000 bushels, which is just double that of last year. The crop may now be said to be successfully harvested. The largest yield is in Sumner County, where 8,000,000 bushels have been harvested.

ST. LOUIS, July 6.—The secretary of the State Board of Agriculture reports the condition of crops as being quite favorable, taking the State as a whole. Excess of rain and cool weather has interfered with corn, and in some cases the crop has been abandoned. Better weather during the last few days has improved the condition, which is now 89. The condition of winter wheat at harvest time and after considerable of it has been put into the shock is put at 91. The average of estimates of correspondence in every county in the State indicate that the yield per acre will not be less than fourteen bushels and the quality of the grain will be good, if not damaged in the shock. The condition of oats is 92.5; estimated yield of meadows per acre, 15 tons; condition of apples, 67.

THE GREENBACKERS.

A. Call for a National Convention to Resuscitate the Party.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—George O. Jones has issued a call to "all who desire to aid in reorganizing the National Greenback party on the principles once advocated by Peter Cooper, and by many of the wisest men and ablest newspapers in both of the old parties," in which they are requested to meet in their respective States and Congressional districts on or before September 4, 1889, and appoint one delegate and one alternate to attend the National Greenback convention heretofore called to meet at Cincinnati, O., on Thursday, September 12, 1889.

An Important Decision. CHICAGO, July 9.—In the case of the City of Chicago vs. William Kenny, Judge Horton ruled that where arrests are made without warrants, prosecution must be on written charges so that the accused can have a chance for defense. This, if upheld by the higher courts, will release 100 prisoners from the Bridewell.

The Goodyear Rubber Company Fails. PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 6.—The Goodyear Rubber Boot & Shoe Company has made an assignment. The attachment placed on it by the Bear's Commercial Company Saturday was followed up until $716,000 in attachments swamped the firm.

To preserve the richness of color or delicacy of tint of your summer dresses, make suds of hot water and IVORY SOAP, allow to cool until lukewarm, then wash your dresses in the solution. Ordinary soaps contain too much alkali, which in a short time bleaches the color and destroys its beauty. Prof. Silliman, of Yale College, says, "The IVORY SOAP can not injure the most delicate fabric."

A WORD OF WARNING.

There are many white soaps, each represented to be "just as good as the Ivory!" they ARE NOT, but like all counterfeits, lack the peculiar and remarkable qualities of the genuine. Ask for "Ivory" Soap and insist upon getting it.

Reaction.
Though young ones was well and hearty be would ne'er attend a party,
For he said that social pleasure made him weary, weak and sore;
Not a whit cared he for dancing, or a maiden all entrancing,
What to others proved a treasure simply was to him a bore.

He found little consolation in the art of conversation.
And all nature's wondrous beauty from his careless eyes was hid;
Music, painting could not please him, and high art would only tease him.
So, as if from sense of duty, he became an invalid.

But I found one great attraction that would rouse him into action
(He'd declare he was not sickly, such new strength upon him came),
XVlxa with every indication that he'd reach his destination,
He would walk a mile so quickly, just to join a poker game.

THURSDAY, JULY 11, 1889.

THE ideas expressed by Congressman Allen relating to the appointment of a postmaster for Ann Arbor seem to us perfectly fair to all interested in the matter.

WHAT a happy old age Florence Nightingale ought to have? Although 69 years of age and an invalid she is still interested in all that goes on in the world, and wrote with her own hand a letter of sympathy for the Johnstown sufferers. There are some who would prefer such a record as her's even to that of the champion pugilist whose lowly doings have filled the columns of all the sporting papers of the world this week.

A. A. KOZIEE'S prohibition address is one of the most sensible we have seen lately. For Michigan at present, we believe the present temperance laws are very practicable. To a certain extent you have to take the world as it is. "The voice of the people is the voice of God" and that voice is not for prohibition in the constitution yet. Education in the schools and out of the schools must still go on, and the good results will come sometime.

WHAT'S the use of saying anything about the disgraceful and brutal Sullivan-Kilrain 75-round prize-fight of Monday? A million of dollars has changed hands, millions upon millions of type have printed their inky faces on millions of sheets of clean, white paper to record the dirty affair. Worry and misery and wretchedness have been increased, discontent made more universal, the morality and manliness of the nation dragged downward. For what good? If that's the question, what is the use of wasting another drop of ink?

THE appointment of Prof. H. C. Adams as one of the Statisticians of the Census Bureau is a just tribute to his ability and fairness. It is especially fortunate that the appointment should come at this particular time and from the source which it does. This recognition of the professor's ability from such a man as Mr. Porter, who is at the head of the Census Bureau, should put a quietus to the unwarranted reports which have lately been made about Prof. Adams being impartial and unfair. It is to be hoped that the professor will not accept the position tendered him, as the University cannot afford to lose such a man.

THE REGISTER has been waiting to see whether or not someone would not take some active steps towards putting the School of Music upon a more firm basis. The plan proposed by Prof. Stanley is certainly a most excellent one and should meet with the hearty approval of our wide-awake citizens. As it is, we have a School of Music only in name. By raising the guarantee fund proposed, and we believe with proper effort it could be done, a school of music could be established here in Ann Arbor, of which we might well be proud. But such a thing can never be done by talk. A small amount from each of one hundred of our citizens, would give the school the start it needs, and which it must have if it is to be a success. Once such a school is well established it will soon be able to pay back with interest all that may now be given to it. The Business Mens' Association cannot find a more worthy object towards which to direct its attention.

OF course it is "awful wicked" for the farmers to feel light-hearted when they read the latest dispatches to the effect that eastern Europe will have a poor crop of wheat this year; that the quantity of wheat on passage from India to Europe was only 1,880,000 bushels, against 5,808,000 bushels at the same time last year, but the good farmers and all others who will share in the general prosperity of this favored land must try and stifle the feeling of undue exuberance in that of sincere regret at the misfortune of their unfortunate fellow-men who will have to send their gold this way for the great surplus of nature's bounties at our disposal. The Detroit Tribune, of the 9th, considers the matter in this light: "India wheat is England's hopeful instrument with which to punish the United States for not buying England's manufactured goods, but India's worse than pauper labor (4c per day) is not a sufficient offset for its uncertain climate, poor wheat and long distance from market. The severe test of the last few years has shown that the United States, with its favorable climate, superior harvesting machinery and unequalled carrying and handling facilities, can stand the competition as long as Russia, India, or South America can. Our acreage has diminished little if any this year. In India it was largely diminished, according to the returns from the late harvest there. The outlook for American grain producers is certainly growing brighter. Prices are appreciating and short sellers are much more timid than they were. We had strong cable news yesterday and prices went up to 1c."

THE question of locating the new hospital will be a rather difficult one for the regents to settle satisfactory to all. Nearness to the campus seems to be considered a very important matter. But there are other things which should receive due consideration. A hospital such as is proposed will bring a very large number of people here for treatment who will not necessarily be confined to the building. Hundreds of halt and maimed and blind, many of whom will be exceedingly repulsive to the sight, will be seen in the neighborhood of the hospital. The sight of such horribly mangled and deformed people, while it is disagreeable to all, often has the most far-reaching and even fatal results upon people in certain conditions. It seems, therefore, nothing more than reasonable, that the hospital should be well out of the limits of the city where spacious grounds may be had. This would give the unfortunate patients a pleasant place for exercise and would obviate the necessity of so many invalids from abroad being seen about our city.

THE question of crime and pauperism is forcing itself more than ever before on the minds of thinking people; and it is full time that radical measures should be taken for their suppression. There is no question but that the abolishing of the liquor saloons would reduce these evils and misfortunes more than one-half. To work for that end is worthy of the best efforts of every good citizen. There are many other causes for the sad state of affairs to be found especially in our cities, and it is well that they should be thoroughly understood and every preventive used possible to be found. To show how great a work this is: it is computed that there are in the state of New York alone 300,000 criminals, insane persons and vagrants, and that seven-eighths of these are of foreign birth. It is proposed to establish a bureau of crime and pauperism in that state, such as should be in every state of the Union, which should keep a careful record accessible to courts, to political economists and reformers, by means of which these great questions might be studied and remedies discovered that would be for the benefit of the entire country. This country has wealth enough, if people won't believe it. How to evolve the most true happiness from that wealth is the great problem of the age.

IS PROHIBITION A FAILURE?

An Address Delivered last Sunday Afternoon at Cropsey's Hall by A. A. Crozier.

The prohibitory amendment IB Pennsylvania is defeated by an overwhelming majority. Rhode Island after having a prohibitory amendment in its constitution for two years now repeals it. Michigan, Oregon, Texas, Tennessee, West Virginia, New Hampshire and Massachusetts have recently refused to adopt such amendments to their constitutions. The city of Atlanta and other portions of the South after several years of prohibition by local option have returned to license. The prohibition craze is dying out, the people are returning to their senses. Men are learning that habits cannot be reformed by process of law. The zealots are being taught that it is unsafe to interfere too much with individual liberty.

These are the lessons that we are asked to draw from these unmistakable events. It certainly seems evident either that the cause of temperance is going backward, or that legal prohibition is not the way to advance it.

But I shall try to show that neither of these propositions is true; that the cause of temperance was never more hopeful than now, and that legal prohibition is the only condition under which the highest state of temperance can be attained.

Why should it be necessary to refer so often to past events to justify a course we know to be right. No question is ever settled until it is settled right; every man's conscience ought to teach him that. But we are permitted to read the proof in history; history is God's teacher to strengthen our faith.

A century ago, when the first temperance sentiment began to be developed in this country, the only thought was to restrict the use of the stronger intoxicants. Societies were formed whose members pledged themselves not to drink except on important occasions. In those days the use of alcoholic liquors was all but universal. The pastor in making his calls was treated to whiskey or gin as a mark of Christian hospitality. But as the temperance idea grew, organizations were formed whose members were pledged to total abstinence from all intoxicants. This was an unmistakable step in advance. It expressed in positive terms the opinion that the use to any extent of alcoholic liquors as a beverage was injurious. Then, as general society became more highly organized, and the various industries became established, the business of making and selling liquors became confined to fewer individuals, so that the evils resulting from their use were more clearly recognized. The tavern, and then the saloon, furnished a place for the idle and dissipated to gather together, and people began to see that the use of liquors was associated with a want of thrift, intelligence, and morality.

Nero wished that he could gather the heads of all his enemies into one, that he might cut it off at a single stroke. It was a fortunate day for temperance when the saloon was created. Let the restriction go on. Raise the license. Have fewer saloons, and those more deadly. Let the saloon stay in politics. Let governments be bribed, and the laws be defied, but fear not the end. Restrict and cripple the institution in every way possible. It is becoming more powerful every hour, but its source of power is being steadily exhausted. "One more such victory," said Napoleon, "and I am undone." Let the work of temperance education continue. When the saloon has developed its full power, and the people see its real enormity, the revolt will come, and the final battle will be short and decisive.

Will the end be absolute prohibition by law? It can be nothing else. Other crimes and evil are prohibited. The only permanent success in temperance has been by prohibition. The failures to sustain prohibition only indicate that in most places the will of the people is not yet equal to their wish. This is not the only case in which the self-interest of a minority has been able for a time to control the majority.

It is well to study carefully the working of prohibition where it has been tried sufficiently long for the results to indicate approximately the real sentiment of the people.

James G. Blaine in speaking of the result in Maine used the following words: "Intemperance has steadily decreased in the state since the first enactment of the prohibitory law, until now it can be said with truth that there is no equal number of people in the Anglo-Saxon world among whom so small an amount of intoxicating liquor is consumed as among the 650,000 inhabitants of Maine."

Neselius & Babcock want to open up a saloon at Milan but, thus far, have not been able to furnish a bond that the council would accept. Last week they thought they had the bond all right and a special meeting of the council was called to act upon it. The councilmen waited but no bond appeared. The wife of one of the bondsmen, objecting to her husband's signing the bond, had taken possession of the document and destroyed it.

Young Fred Fehlig had a ride at Belleville last week which he will not forget when he grows to be a man. While holding a team of horses, one of the lines became tangled, and he walked out on the wagon tongue to fix it. The horses didn't like this and started on a run, stopping only when they had knocked a fence down and smashed the wagon into kindling-wood. Strange to say, the boy wasn't hurt although he was in the midst of the wreck.

Secretary of State Osmon has received 300 reports from his correspondents concerning the ravages of the aphid or midge, throughout the state. Of these 250 are from the southern counties. The insect is found in great numbers in every county in the southern and central sections of the state and in many of the northern counties. In the first and second tier of counties they are found in 85 per cent. of the wheat heads; in the third tier, 76 per cent.; fourth tier, 68 per cent.; central and northern counties, 55 to 60 per cent. Estimates of the number on each head vary greatly. The damage cannot now be calculated, and of course will not be known until the crop is threshed. It is noticed that in some localities there are fewer lice now than ten days ago. Many of the wheat heads sent to the secretary's office are nearly or entirely ruined. Others, containing as many of the pests, are not damaged. The louse is found on rye, oats, barley, shrubbery, and even fruit trees.

The number of tickets sold for the hop at both hotels on the evening of the Fourth, was unusually large, although there was a bowery dance on the east side.

A large number of people was expected at the Lake on the Fourth and the expectations were met, although some disagreement between the D. L. & N. and the G. T. railroads prevented several hundred people who had purchased tickets in Detroit from being present. It is estimated that there were 2000 people on the picnic grounds, but there was probably no time when more than two-thirds of them were there, as the lake was dotted with row and sailboats and the two steamers were moving back and forth with crowded loads from morning until after dark, and a crowd was never lacking in the village. The object of the picnic was to procure means with which to repair the house belonging to St. Patrick's society, and every effort was made to swell the returns. Immense quantities of ice cream, pop, candies, etc., were provided at stands, and the dancing bowery was crowded the whole day. An Ann Arbor young lady was lucky enough in a raffie to secure the portrait of the featured priest, and an excellent table was set and partaken of by a large number. The receipts must have gone up into the large numbers, and everybody received his money's worth. The amount received will certainly remodel the old house in grand style. Everything was quiet and peaceable, everybody was happy, and all must certainly have enjoyed themselves in such circumstances on so beautiful a day. —Dexter.

Prof. Thompson, of Saginaw, formerly superintendent of the Dexter schools, is the guest of J. H. Murdock, as are also his wife and little daughter.

Will and Anna Adams, with Ray Copeland and his sister Nellie, and two other graduates of the University, are having an "awful" good time camping at Portage lake. They complain that the fish are slow to bite.

The anvil, used by the boys on the Fourth to awaken the patriotism of the people, did good service sixty years ago in the blacksmith shop of our honored citizen, Judge A. D. Crane, and we are glad to be able to report that he is in so good health that he could do fair work on that anvil yet if necessary.

It appears that that portion of our highway that approaches either end of the double bridge over the Huron is without an overseer, or else he has been asleep for the last year, for the condition is such that in fast driving it would almost throw one from the seat, and is certainly dangerous for heavily loaded vehicles.

Last Saturday as Patrick Toban was on his way back to the county house, he met one of his old associates, Dennis Warner, and it was really interesting to hear them tell of their experience of half a century ago, of shoveling gravel just over there on the railroad for a very small sum per day. Now the stronger and far the most robust of the two, is an inmate of the poor house, while the other is able to give several thousand dollars each year to religious and benevolent institutions.
