WASHTENAW IN LINE.

IT ABDS OXETOTHE LIST OF MIJR-DKBOCS ASSAULTS.

Sin,in.; Seney of r.im.-i Stabs his Son.— The Wound Serlons and Perhaps Fatal.—lion it Happened.

Washtenaw county swings into line and adds one to the list of murders, or attempted murders.

Last Tuesday evening about 6 o'clock Samuel Seney, a well-to-do farmer living in Lima township, fourteen miles from Ann Arbor and two and one-half miles from Chelsea, and a justice of the peace of that township, stabbed bis sou in the abdomen with a jack-knife, and is now in the jail here awaiting the results of the in-

Samuel Seney, his wife and his son, Harvey P. Seney, have lived on the farm in Lima township for the past fifteen years, the farm of over 300 acres and the personal property being owned equally by the three. Harvey is 32 years old and has taken the lead in managing the farm. The father has of late been drinking and has been decidedly hard to get along with, although until last evening no force had been used on either side.

Recently a traction engine was traded to a neighbor, and Harvey and the wife objected to payment being made to the father unless all were present. From this, hard feelings arose. Yesterday afternoon a man came after a pulley belonging to the engine. The old gentlemen said that he could not have it, but the son gave it to him. The father interfered and tried to take it back, in the scuffla being pushed one side by the son. Seney then started for the house but returned to the barn, and said that he was going to Chelsea to get out a warrant for his son for assaulting him. He put part of the harness on a horse and the son pulled it off, telling his father to go back into the house. Instead of doing so he made a rush at the son and Harvey fell, calling out 'Oh, mother, I am stabbed," and placing his hand on the lower left side of his abdomen.

Mrs. Seney assisted Harvey into the house and Seney took the horse and went to Chelsea. A hired man was dispatched for a doctor, who found Harvey Seney suffering from an ugly stab in the abdomen. The wound was sensitive, and the young man passed a hard night, the doctor being unable to do anything towards examining the wound. He still lies in a critical condition, and his chances of life and death are about equal.

Seney went to Chelsea, said nothing about the affray and returned home late in the evening. He was perfectly unconcerned and paid no attention to those around him. He wents to bed and slept soundly. The next morning he was arrested and, in default of $3,000 bail, was placed in the jail here last night. He claims that was in self-defense and that his son knocked him down three times before he cut him. The the son and his mother, who was the only witness of the crime, both deny and say that Harvey had not offered to strike him. Seney, senior, was undoubtedly crazed with liquor when he attacked his son. He had been at Chelsea during the day and had drank consid-

A visit to the scene by THE RECISTKR representative, showed a large modern farmhouse with fine barns in the rear. Mrs. Seney was seen and said: "This is a fearful affair. I was the only one who saw the stabbing and I will tell you just how it happened. Father (Mr. Seney) had been to town and had been drinking. I heard Harvey and he having some words with a man, but thought nothing of it. Pretty soon father came into the house and said 'I am going to Chelsea.' I beg-ged him not to, but he insisted. He went to the barn and I heard him calling Har-vey hard names. I finally heard Harvey say: 'Now, father, you quit or I'll——.

I didn't hear the finish of the sentence. went out and as I came up saw the blade of a knife in father's hand. I caught hold of his arm and asked him what he was going to do with it. He jerked away and stabbed Harvey before I knew it. I real-ly think, father is not in bis right mind," she continued, advancing the idea of insanity. "I've noticed it for some time past, but did not think him dangerous. He has really lost part of his reason by hard drink. I don't think he is responsible for what he has done."

Seney is about 58 years old, and moved to Lima from Jackson, where he lived for ten years. He came from Canada to that place. He is the father of three sons, the one that he stabbed being the oldest one

S;ney is said to be a quiet peacable man and an affectionate husband and father when not under the influence of liquor. But when intoxicated, which has been very often recently, he loses control of himnelf completely. There is no doubt but that he was intoxicated at the time of the af-

Israel Hall.

MR. EDITOR:—The public notices which have been given of our late fellow-citizen, Irael Hall, do justice to his capacity as a business man and large-souled promoter of public enterprises, but many of us feel that something further ought to be placed on record. Many of us have known him well for nearly a score of years; and we feel that the qualities which stand foremost in our esteem, and gave to our departed friend pre-eminence among men, have been overlooked in the biographical sketches which have fallen under our observation. Perhaps we should not fay overlooked, for those traits of personal and private character which have endearand private character which have endear-ed him to us and to so many, possess a degree of sacredness which the biographer sometimes shrinks from dealing with. The public interest demands, however, that the noblest virtues of c*itiz3nship, public or pri-vate, be pointed out for the emulation of both old and young. Oar friend was suc-cessful in business, but so are hundreds of others: but in the midst of his business others; but in the midst of his business pursuits, he preserved himself from the failings to which successful business men are especially liable—avarice, overreaching, hardness, apathy toward suffering, want and dependence. Sach frequent concomitants of business success were traits abhorrent to his noble 6oul. He never lost his susceptibility to the calls for benevolence and charity. He was a large and ungrudging giver. He never lost his tenderness toward the unfortunate, the sorrowing and the poor. He always had time to seek them out and minister comfort. He was never so pressed with a sense of business engagements that he felt unwilling to devote attention to a cause which appealed to sympathy, or to the nobler efforts of a good citizen and neighbor. His words always breathed peace and good will. His voice was always on the side of forbearance and forgiveness. His very presence among us was a constant benediction. His countenance beamed with love, and every citizen was happy to exchange sentiments with him. Every impulse of his soul was up-right, benevolent and noble.

Such a character is an example which exerts a benign influence. It impresses even the most hardened and apathetic. It is ever before our mind's eye. When provocation presses hard, we think of such an exemplar, and are restrained and pacified by thought of the forbearance which he would exercise. VVheD suffering pleads for our pity, we think how he would be moved in his tender heart. Wnen oar impatience would turn aside the call for the control of th time or material aid, we suddenly see his benignant countenance beaming charity, and cheer, and response. It is a blessed example like this—an influence like this a living, daily influence, which has disappeared from among us. It is a spiritual loss which we feel. It is a cessation of some of those blessed ministrations which kind heaven vouchsafes to our evil and suffering humanity.

But the remembrance of these virtues is the legacy he has left us—a priceless legacy. The influence of his example remains with u=, and will remain while memory occupies her throne. Happy are we who have the privilege of cherishing such memories. Thrice happy are they—the bereaved family—whose tenderer and more intimate relations and completer knowledge, insure to such an inheritance of memories, an endurance imperishable.

Gas versus Electric Lights.

In your last issue you say-"Six thousand dollars difference betweenthe bids of the electric light company and the gas company ed to pay in three years." The great majority of taxpayers would doubtless emphatically endorse thi3 statement.

The great advantage of the electric system is that it gives the most light. This is an advantage without much qualifica-tion around the court house square and on Main-st, where there is little to obstruct the light, but it is not true as to other parts of the city. Ann Arbor covers a large extent of territory for a city of its population. The consequence is that with the limited number of lamps we must have, under so expensive a system, some houses have an excess of light that renders repose and sleep almost impossi-ble, while other houses and streets have none and are enveloped in darknes?

We have an unusual number of shade trees on nearly every street. The electric lamps are placed quite high and consequently will illuminate the upper atmosphere and the tops of the trees while the pedestrians grope in darkness on the side-walks below. This is the case for the time the foliage is on the trees, which is about one half of the year. The many high, unsightly poles do not add to the beauty of the city; nor does the frequent taking down of the lamps and wires contribute to the convenience of those who travel on the roads. In short, aside from a few of the principal streets, there are large parts of the city that are not as well lighted as they formerly were by gas lamps. There are tome who would prefer them at the same price to the present system. But when we take into consider-ation the great difference in the expense. $2,000 per year, it would seem that there should be no difference of opinion on the part of the common council.

If the $2,000 per year must be spent rather than reduce our taxes, let it be spent under the direction of the board of public works in permanent improvements, those that will go down to future years and generations, instead of being consumed chiefly to illuminate the upper atmos-

Advertise the City. Ann Arbor, Aug. 14, 1889.

MR. EDITOR You hit the nail on the head in your editorial last week. It will pay to advertise Ann Arbor three times as well as Ypsilanti. What little has been done has paid already. We should use printers ink constantly; U3e the Detroit papers, and home ones too; also get Detroit real estate men interested. We should advertise the University acd High School persistently. The University does not do it, and we should. It will pay big. The people are in favor of it. S'ir them up. Let some one devise a plaa. Do not let this idea sleep. Yours for booming,

The owners and admirers of fine horseflesh have had the various qualities of horses owned in this vicinity under discussion for some time past, and last Siturday morning was the time set for deciding which wa3 the speediest animal. The horses which entered the contest were owned by Wm. Burke of this city, J. A. Campbell of Dixboro, and Editor J. M. Allen of the Dexter Leader. The horses owned by Burke and Allen were more evenly matched, Campbell's horse having no show with them. Burke's horse won two straight heats, the fastest time being

The editor from Dsxter WBB satisfied that his hoise was beaten in the race, but he knew that his horse could trot in fastter time than was made. He drove his horse two half-mile heat* against time, scoring each half mile in 1:25. The sport was enjoyed by about a dozen spectators.

A > Organization Mustered into Service

Gen. O. A. James of Hillsdale, comman der of the Patriarchs Militant of Michigan, visited Ann Arbor last Thursday evening and mustered in Ann Arbor canton, No 30. The local canton numbered] 0 swords under command of Capt. C. II. Manly They appeared in their i'handseme new uniforms and made a fine showing. Afte the mustering in exercises, which wen held in the oddfellows' hall, the entire party adjourned to the Germania hote where a bountiful banquet was spread Addresses and toasts filled the time until after midnight and thej evening wasj an auspicious one to the participants.

The canton is the first uniformed rank of odd-fellows that has been organized in this city, and marks a new epoch in the order here. The members will drill in the rink twice each wesk and within a short time Capt. Manly expects to have as fine a drilled organization as there is in the

The Farmer's Holiday.

The Farmers' Picnic Association are bound to make the coming picnic one long to be remembered. Bverything is being done to make the gathering a success, and if the last day of this month is pleasant Whitmore Lake will undoubtedly contain within its borders and on the surface of the lake, more people than have ever been gathered there at one time. An effort is being made to secure Piof. Clute of the Agricultural college to deliver the principle address of the day. A fine programme is being arranged and any of our farmer friends, or even those living in the city, will regret it if they are not present.

The following committees have been appointed to take charge of the affair:

On, speakers and programme: R. C. Reeves, G-eo. Merrill, H. Pinckney, H. Laraway and L. D. Livewell.

On music: E. N. Ball and Miss Julia

On printing: Secretary Ljvewell. On grounds; H. Pinckney, L. J. Stiles, End of the Celebrated Maybrick Trial in Liverpool.

The Unfortunate Woman Found Guilty of Poisoning Her Husband and Sentenced to Be Hanged—Brief Hintory of the Case.

DOOMED TO THE OAIXOWS. LIVERPOOL, Aug. 8.—MTB. Maybrick, an American lady who has been on trial here or a week on charge of causing her husband's death by poisoning, was found guilty by the jury yesterday. After the judge had delivered his charge, which wai exceptionally strong against the fair prisoner, the jury retired. At the end of one hour and a half the members re-entered the

The foreman of the jury naid: "We have agreed that the accused is guilty." The clerk asked the customary question whether the woman had any thing to say before sentence of death was passed. The prisoner, palo and haggard, rose, with a respectful bow, and addressed his lordship in these words:
"My lord, evidence has been kent back and addressed his fordship in these words:
"My lord, evidence has been kept back from the jury which, if it had been known, would have altered the verdict I am not guilty of this offense." Saying this she sat flown, gasping for breath, and seemed more dead than alive. The poor woman sat sob-bing like a child, while the judge, as-suming the black cap, In solemn tones sentenced her to be hanged by the neck till dead. At this moment there was an awful hash upon the court, and a pin could have been heard to drop. Some of the women present were in tears. The judge himself was visibly moved.

After the verdict became known, thousands of people assembled around the entrance to the court-room and waited for the departure of the judge. As soon as he made his appearance he was greeted with howls of rage, and the hooting of the crowd wu kept up for a long time. There were Incessant cries of "Shame!" and an attack upon the judge's carriage was only prevented by the active Interference of the police. The feeling in Liverpool against the verdict Is intense. Steps have been taken to secure a stay of execution on the jrround of the discovery of further medical evidence.

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 15.—Judge Stephen has named August 26 as the day for the execution of Mrs. Maybrick, and unless Home Secretary Matthews shall interfere she will on that day suffer the law's awful penalty. Judge Stephen is generally condemned for his course in selecting such an early day, even by the few who do not protest against the jury's verdict of guilty.

The public movement for a respite or a new trial Is now the absorbing topio in every city of England. The Liverpool petitions have assumed enormous proportions. Over 2,000 merchants and manufacturers have appended their names to a paper declaring that Mrs. Maybrick should have a new trial, while a number of smaller petitions to the Home Secretary have been circulated among the trades unions with great success in obtainiiig signatures. Probably no fewer than 10,000 names will be obtained in Liverpool alone. Word comes from Durham that 1,500 residents of that city hove signed a petition demanding a new trial for the unfortunate woman. At Sheffield, York, Lincoln, Portsmouth, Manchester, Nottingham, Derby, Shrewsbury, Carlisle, Lancaster, Newcastle and other leading cities of England petitions are being signed by the nobility, the clergy, merchants, manufacturers, mechanics and professional men, showing not only that the feeling of sympathy for Mrs. Maybrick is confined to no section, but that it is shared by all classes of th9 population.
LONDON, Aug. 13.—Mr. Lincoln, the American Minister, and nearly the whole American colony In London have signed petitions to the Home Secretary for a reprieve for Mrs. Maybrick.

[Mrs. Maybrick is an American woman and has resided In England for some years. Her crime was th» poisoning of her husband, James Maybrick. Mr. Maybrlok had been quite III tor some time and Mrs. Maybrlok u»d been nursing him. As he continued to fail in health hlB relatives been it as suspect that he was being some time and Mrs. Maybrlok u»d been nursing him. As he continued to fail in health hlB relatives began to suspect that he was being poisoned by his wife, and one of them Michael Maybrick, commenced to watch her. In his testimony be said that he had visited his brother during his illness and had warned Mrs. Maybrick that he suspected his brother was re*celving improper treatment. His wife insisted upon her right to nurse her husband. He thereupou summoned two doctors and a new nurse. He also seized a bottle containing brandy and extract of meat. At a later visit he found Mrs. Maybrick changing the. contents and labels of medicine bottles. He remonstrated with her and asked her how she dare do such a thing. Sbe replied that there was sediment in the bottles. He again caused a change of nurses to be made. Notwithstanding his precautions, however, h's brother grew worse and died in a short time. He was delirious toward the end. After his death tho nurse gave him a parcel labeled: "Arsenic; poison for rats." Many other witnesses corroborated Miebael Maybrick hated her husband and bud threatened to "give it to him hot" for publicly upbraiding her. It was also shown tnju she had tampered with his medicine.]

WONDERFUL SHOW.

THE WEALTH OF THE WATERS TO BE STRANGELY EXHIBITED.

Fish of the Great Lakes and Tributary Biverg-Their Habits, Hauntss>nd Breedlog—Unique and Wonderftp.1 Display Preparing by the Michigan State Fish Commission.

One of the most interesting processes of modern mastery of nature is the artificial propagation of fish. To most people this art is still a mystery. In fact this world of waters is full of mystery, even to science. Comparatively little is known about fishes, their habits, their intelligence, their migrations, or even their muscular energy. Man has measured the speed of birds, and of all, land animals; but not the most learned man alive can tall you anything about so apparently simple a thing as how fast is the average speed in swimming of even the mast common fishes, nor bow much muscular strength any fish is capable of, nor how much intelligence the brain of a fish is capable of being educated up to.

Among those who have made the artificial propagation of fish an important industry, the Michigan State Board of Fish Commissioners holds a high rank. The value of its labors to the commerce of the county counts

MILLIONS OF DOLLARS ANNUALLY The results of its enterprise, told in figures, assume an imposing vastness. Since its ororganization in 1873, this commission has stocked the waters of Michigan with the following the stocked the s lowing enormous quantities of choice fish, artificially reared Whitefish, 452,041,500; brook trout, 8,097,900; carp, 12,700; schoodic salmon, 176,090; bass, 4,500; wall-eyed pike, 59,112,000. Besides these it has distributed millions of silver eels, California trout, grayling, lake trout, and various other valuable fishes. As a result the catch of fish is annually increas ing in the waters of the great lakes, and the streams and inland lakes and ponds of the state. Many heretofore barren waters are now alive with fish, and valuable species that were becoming extinct are now more numerous than ever before.

Michigan has the largest coast line of any state in the union. Its fishing grounds in the great lakes alone cover the vast area of 54,000 square miles, with a third as much more in its inland waters. Or, in other words, the productive fishing grounds of the state are as large as its land surface, if not larger. These waters teem with the choicest fish in the world, from the delicate whitefish, renowned all over Christendom, to the game bass, the delicious grayling and trout, and the splendid muskallonge.

THE MICHIGAN STATE BOARD has performed its important work so quietly and at points so secluded, that the general public have little conception of the greatness of its achievements, or the rare skill nnd knowledge displayed.

The Michigan Fish Commission have charge of

THIEE LAROE STATE HATCHERIES Thirtee Large State Hatcheries
for the rearing of fish. The largest, near Detroit, has a capacity of one hundred and sixty millions of whitefish annually. One at Paris, near Grand Rapids, has a yearly capacity for one and a half millions. One at Glenwood is devoted to carp. The one at Petoskey, with a capacity of thirty-three millions, has been compelled to stop operations owing to pollution of the water. sides whitefi-ib, trout and carp, the hatcheries are constantly experimenting with all sorts valuable food fishes, and studying the habits of different fishes.

The commissioners, in order to give the public some idea of their work, and to gratify the natural curiosity as to the methods for propagating and rearing fish, have resolved to make

A STRANGE PUBLIC EXHIBITION of their apparatus, methods, and a splendid display of all sorts of fish, at the Detroit International Fair and Exposition, September 17-27 next. This exhibit will be the most complete and on the largest scale ever shown in this country. An artificial pool with rock borders, water lilies and other ornamental plants will be constructed, and also an immense rock aquarium, built in a cavern, like the one now at the Paris World's Fair, so that visitors can observe deep water fish through glass in openings in the rock work, many feet below the surface. There will be running brooks, waterfalls, "fish stairways," to show the way salmon and trout ascend falls

There will also be an exhibit of breeding apparatus and processes employed in the state hatcheries. Fish of all sizes will be shown, including the following varieties and such others as can be collected: Herring, brook trout, small-mouthed bass, rainbow or mountain trout, large-mouthed bass, German brown trout, wall-eyed pike, grayling, pike, salmon trout, wall-eyed pike, grayling, pike, salmon trout, perch, carp (German), muskallonge, whitefish, sturgeon, gar-pike, silver eels, catfish, rock bass, blue gills, suckers, red horse, sunfish, eta The large German carp will be shown in tanks. The exhibit will be arranged so as to show not only the food and habits of each variety of fish, but, so for a possible to present seek variety in as far as possible, to present each variety in the character of water it prefers in nature. This show will no doubt constitute one of the great attractions of the exposi^on for all persons who love the study of nature. Competent men will spare neither expense nor labor to make it complete, unique and upon a large scale. The exposition managers will grant ample grounds and facilities, and provide an abundance of water.

Electric and colored lights will produce rare and beautiful effects in the tanks, grot-toes, waterfalls and pools, and the mysteri-ous secrets of the waters will be laid bare to the spectators. This exhibition will be to multitudes of paople, and an object lesson in natural history that will astonish, instruct and pleas9 the children beyond anything they can find in books. The beauty and elegance of the live game fish, and the intelligence and tameness shown by many of ligence and tameness shown by many of those artificially bred, will long be remem-bered. People will be taught a great practi-cal lesson of the ease with which fish can be reared, and their great value. Many a farmer will be astonished to learn that every farmer will be astonished to learn that every acre of his pond or stream can be easily made to pay him a bigger cash return each year than the richest land acre of his farm. Students of natural history will learn much of the ways of fish, and fish culturists from other states will obtain valuable practical lessons. Some day tha art of fish culture may well reach such a stage that fish fairs will be held as often «s cattle, horse or sheep fairs, to exhibit improved breeds of fish as a wealth producing, r-gular industry.

THE SIOUX LANDS.

Many Acres Acquired by TJnela Sam.

Ex-Governor Foster Talks of the Great Work of the Commission—The Lands Excellent for Cattle-Raisers, But Nothing Extra for farmers.

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—Ex-Governor Foster, General Crook and Major William Warner, the commissioners appointed to negotiate the opening of the Sioux Indian reservation in Dakota, arrived in Chicago Saturday after their work with the Indians of the Northwest When the commission arrived the members expressed themselves thoroughly tired and glad of the opportunity to obtain a little rest Since leaving home they have traveled 4,000 miles by rail, 350 by wagon and '440 by steamer, have been constantly moving from place to place, often under the discomforts of the rudest conveyances, and were at all times working tinder the embarrassment of pronounced, tinder the embarrassment of pronounced, opposition from the Indians.

Speaking of the work of the commission, Chairman Foster Bays: 'The Sioux District contains about 23,000,000 acres. In size it about the same as Indiana. It extends 400 miles across South Dakota north and south, and about thirty miles into North Dakota with an average width of 200 miles. Of this the Government has secured 9,000,000 acres, or about that amount

The commission last CHAIRMAN FOSIER year figured on n, 000,000, but that was owing to a misapprehension of last year's commissioner. By the terms of the treaty of '69 we were to obtain the consent of three fourths of all male Indians over 18 years. There are 23,000 Indians on the reservation, and 5,600 of

of all male Indians over 18 years. There are 23,000 Indians on the reservation, and 5,600 of these are men. So, you see, that merely the clerical work of obtaining signatures, had all been willing, was not little?

"It is certainly good grazing country, and some of it is good for farming, but on the whole it Is better for grazing purposes. Cattle can be fattened throughout the winter and it is just the country for sheep. Seventy-five per cent, of it, possibly I should say all of it is good grazing land; but, personally, I am not impressed with the country as agriculturally inviting."

"What will be the effect of the opening of the country on the Indians?"

"I only judge from the past. They have not been farmers or cared for the advantages of civilization, but of recent years they are gradually uccepting both. Many of the old bands are broken up. At Santee three fourths of all the Indians sipned their own names; they wear our clothes and draw no rations. They hare already practically reached the stage of elf-support. The Riggs Industrial School at this agency is a model. Catholic schools are found at all the agencies; the girls are learning to sew and to cook and the boys are rapidly learning trades. There is also a day school In each camp. The sale of the land will put the Government in a position to greatly help the Indians, but It must be with the aid of the best agents. I am convinced that the Indians are capable of being greatly advanced, and with proper work I think tribal relations would be extinct in one generation. These agencies are no place for mere office-seekers, and when appointed the agents should be given full responsibility and power to select their own aids. I think we should give them schools and plenty of them, and that any school off the agency is a mistake. The educating must be done among them."

THURSDAY, AUGUST 15, 1889.

A VISIT to Whitmore Lake one day this week showed very plainly that the reports concerning the fall in the water are only too true. It would be unfortunate, indeed, for Ann Arbor should it eventually lose this lake, as it would be difficult to compensate for the loss of such a pleasant resort. Cannot some one suggest a remedy?

A CAREFUL examination of THE REGIS-TER'S subscription books shows that not over one-half of one per cent, is lost because of delinquent subscribers. We doubt if there is another paper in the state which can make a better, or even as good, a showing. Such a condition of things speaks very highly for our patrons, and makes us feel proud of

A KEV weeks ago the report was widely circulated that the wheat crop in the Northwest was almost a total failure. Now that the harvest isover, the papers tell of an unusualy large yield. It looks very much as if the newspaper reports declaring the crop a failure were inspired by something more than a desire to furnish the people with the news. Can it be that the wheat speculators are responsible for these former reports and hoped by such rumors to so influence the pric? of grain that they might reap even a bigger harvest thxn the wheat kings of Dakota? It ctrtainly looks very much that way.

THE success of the Detroit Evening Journal in getting the papers into camp at Battle Creek every day ibr four dayg before the News did so speaks well for the Journal's enterprise. It doubtless was an expensive victory for the paper but the amount of free advertising which such a contest is sure to give to the successful journal will far more than pay for the necessary outlay. If the Journal continues to show such commendable enterprise as it has of late, it may hope soon to take the lead as the evening paper of Detroit so far as circulation is concerned. It already is far ahead of its rival in moral tone and reliability.

THE officers of the Agricultural Society are making a strong effort to arouse an interest in the fair to be held here Sept. 17, 18,19 and 20. The premium list, just published by THE REGISTER Pub. Co., waB thoroughly revised by the board and many valuable changes made. Every farmer, merchant, stockraiser, fruit grower,-in fact everybody in the county, should send to Mr. Geo. H. Pond, the secretary, Ann Arbor, and procure a copy of the premium list and then make it a point to compete for some one or more of the premiums offered. This is the only way to insure a | ly that the majority of the members of successful fair. Washtenaw county has too many resources to be satisfied with anything less than a first class exhibit, and we feel assured that is just what will be made at the fair this fall.

MANY European tourists, when purchasing their steamship tickets, were informed that what is known as second cabin passage was, in every respect, just as good as first class fare, only that it was not quite so "high toned." The letters which have been received from all who tried "second cabin" are very decided in saying that all such representations were absolutely and unqualifiedly false. A party on one of the Anchor Line vessels writes: "We stood it for two days and then gladly gave up when the captain offered to transfer us to first class quarters in consideration of our paying him ninety dollars." This is nothing more or less than robbery, and should be severely condemned. A little free advertising would have a wholesome effect, and so we donate the

THE letter by "tax-payer" which appearsin another column shows that what THE REGISTEr said last week was not entirely without effect. As the writer says, and as THE REGISTER said in the last issue, it certainly will pay Ann Arbor, and pay well, to use a large amount of printer's ink in making known the advantages which the city offers to people wishing to find the most desirable location for residences, There is no other city in the state that will begin to compare with Ann Arbor as a place in which to have a home and in which to bring up a family. But simply talk will not have the desired results. People must be shown that we are anxious to build up our city and are willing to make some effort to do so; otherwise our citizens will be considered lacking in enterprise. This will repel rather than attract new residents.

THE Brown-Sequard elixir is receiving an unusual amount of attention among all classes of people. Professional men seem very skeptical about it, while the decrepid lay-man is only too anxious that it may prove to be all that is claimed for it. Some are disposed to believe ed for it. Some are disposed to believe tea to attend the meeting of the grand tent that it may. Whether or not there is of the Knights of the Maccabees.

anything in it is a question which can be settled only by a long series of trials-The fact, however, that the discovery, if such it really is, was made by such a man as Dr. Brown-Sequard carries with it the assurance that there must be some merit in it. If we hear of a wonderful by Edison we think it nothing unusual. Then why should one be so skeptical when it is claimed that a great discovery has been made by a man who stands nearly, if not quite, as high in the medical profession as Edison stands among the electrical students of today.

WASHTEXAW county is not to be behind other parts of the state in furnishing its quota of murders. The attempted murder of his 6on by the drunken Seney, in Lima, Tuesday, adds another to the email list of such affairs caused by the use of too much liquor. It is of intoxicants that it will, doubtless, soon begin to cause comment. It is unfortunate that the saloon license could not be higher since highly licensed liquor does not make people murderers!

THE suggestions from our correspondent from the Sixth ward are worthy the attention of the city council. They have it in their power to greatly increase the expenses of the city in the matter of street lighting, or to furnish a satisfactory light at a reasonably moderate rate. The tax payers will watch their course with considerable interest, and will condemn any action not justified upon purely business principles. THE REGISTER, however, believes that the matter will be thoroughly investigated before the contract for another three years is let.

THE lottery craze seems to have obtained a firm hold upon Detroit. The report that some one had drawn a prize of fifteen thousand dollars is the cause of the mania. It is reported that already enough tickets have been sold in the city to more than make good to the company the prize drawn by the Detroit party, if there is any truth in the report that such a prize was drawn. The desire to secure something without earning it is becoming altogether too common for the good of our people. To this may be traced not a few of the strikes and lockouts which are of BO frequent occurence. People who are willing to accept only what it is evident they have earned are the exception rather than the rule.

THE state board of agriculture seems to be exceedingly sensitive to criticism. The uncermonious bouncing of Prof. Pattengill from the Agricultural College, because he, in his journal, criticised, in a gentlemanly way, the action cf the board in requesting the resignation of Mac Ewan, shows how easily men in charge of public affairs can allow a lit-tle personal feeling to prejudice their course of action, even though it may be greatly to the detriment of the public's interest. Such action shows very plainthe board are men of small calibre and who are not able to rise to the dignity of their position and attend to the Btate's business without being influenced by petty personal feelings.

SOME of the recent appointments iu the literary department of the UniverBity are exceptionally good. THE REGIS-TER is pleased to note this change for the better. Only a few years ago many of the appointments were openly and severely criticised by some of the bett friends of the University. Such criticisms could not be made upon the majority of the appointments which have been made within the past eighteen months. Such men as Hinsdale, Kelsey, Dewey, Scott and Hempel are sure to add strength to their departments and to the University as a whole. It is far better for the University to seek the services of such men as we have mentioned above than to make appointments from among the army of secondclass men who hope, by political influence rather than by any real merit of their own, to secure a position upon the ^^^^^

"Numbers Universalized" is the latest addition by David M. Sensenig, M. S. to Appleton's Mathematical series. This volumn is an advanced algebra and is the result of extended research and many years' work.

"The Popular Science Monthly" for September will contain an essay on the "Origin of the Rights of Property," by Henry J. Philpott. The author com pares the views of a number of writers on the subject, points out wherein he thinks they are wrong, and draws his own bold and independent conclusion that the recognition of private ownership was in the beginning a truce in the war against its exercise by others.

The tariff question is discussed from a novel point of approach by Mr. Huntington Smith in "The Ethical View of Protection," which is to appear in the September number of "The Popular Science Monthly." The author lays down his points with considerable skill; and his article, which it is fair to say is adverse to the principle of protection, commends itself to the attention, if not to the acceptance, of readers of every shade of opinion.

An interesting unpublished manuscript by Lincoln will be given to the public in the September Century. During his second presidential campaign he was invited to attend a union mass-meeting at Buffalo, and at first thought of writing a long letter, but concluded afterward to send only a formal note. The part of the letter written consists of about five hundred words and is a defense of his own policy, in the course of which he says: "In no other way could I serve myself so well as by truly serving the Union."

A remarkable chapter of Napoleonic history will appear iu the September Century consisting of letters and journals of British officers describing Napo-leon's voyage to Elba, also to St. Helena. The first part of the article is a letter written by Captain Ussher, who commanded the Undaunted, which took the exile to Elba; the last part is by Lieutenant Mills, of the Northumber-land, and consists partly of a diary which the young lieutenant kept while on the way to St. Helena in the same ship with the ex-emperor. Napoleon talked quite freely about some of his plans,—especially with regard to the French navy,-told a number of stories, and explained various points in his own

Prof. C. H. Henderson will explain "The Spirit of Manuel Training," in the August "Popular Science Monthly." He declares that the ideal school will aim to develope men, and neither to cram heads with information nor to produce fine articles of wood and iron. Prof. Huxley reviews the main points of his controversy with Dr. Wace, in an article entitled "Agnosticism and Christian-ity." Some of Cardinal Newman's writings receive a share of caustic criticism in this paper. A suggestive article on "The Wastes of Modern Civilization," is contributed by Felix L. Oswald, M. D. He points out a number of ways in which the resources of the modern world are used up, with no care for their replenishment, or in producing useless or harmfc.1 results.

MERELY A TONIC.

Such Dr. Hamilton Pronounces the Brown-Sequard Elixir.

It Is Undoubtedly a Generator of Energy, But It N Foolish to K\pect That It Will Prolong Life or

SOME INTERESTING EXPERIMENTS. WASHINGTON, Aug. 12—Dr. Hammond, who has been much before the public recently by reason of his experiments with Dr. Sequard's "elixir of life," took a great deal of the romance out of recent stories nu interview Friday night Ha declared the sensational publications about this new preparation have been out-rageous lies, and that they were not authorized or justified In any way. He ex-plained that the new remedy was believed to be in the nature of a tonic, which it was thought would be beneficial especially to old people. He denounced as foolish the story that it was something which was going to prolong life indefinitely or restore old people to youth, or any tiling of that

CHICAGO, Aug. 13.—There is evidently something in the Brown-Sequard discovery. No one supposes that there has any eternal fountain of youth been found. That U not reasonable. But when so eminent an authority as Dr. De Wolf, ex-commissioner of health, after a weet of extensive experimenting with the famous "elixir of life," is not ready to declare it a fraud, the new treatment certainly becomes a matter at least worthy of honest attention. Dr. Wolf has probably made as extensive and careful experiments with the magic fluid as any one In the country. The results are so interesting that he proposes to give the Frenchman's discovery a thorough test The doctor said Monday:

"I am not d sposed to ridicule this discovery as worthy of no professional attention. Neither as wormy or no professional attention. Neither am I ready yet to accord to the treatment any special benefit. I have given the fluid to from six to ten persons a day since Tuesday, the 6th inst. There are several of these cases in which I desire to continue the treatment. In giving the 'elixir' I find in every case that the heartbeat of the subject is increased from three to ten beats per ject is increased from three to ten beats per minute In about twenty minutes after the fluid is administered. I Snd an almost universal acknowledgment that a stimulation is felt. There is a desire that has not been felt before to take muscular exercise.' FOBT WAYNE, Ind., Aug. 13.—The Brown-Sequard elixir was tested in this city Monday afternoon with marvelous results. Dr. W. H. Myers was the openQtor and Michael Kenney, of Columbus City, the subject Mr. Kenney has been a sufferer from rheumatism for years, and lately has been able to walk only with the aid of crutches. A short time after the operation Kenney suddenly jumped up, and nnaided by his crutches walked about the drug store of Meyer Bros. & Co., where the experiment was conducted. Dr. Myers said he could not explain it He admitted having no faith in the elixir, but the facts in the case were against him. The patient did not know what the operation was, and had never heard of the elixir. His pulse, after the injection, rose to 128.

PEBU, Ind., Aug. 13.—Much interest is manifested in medical and other circles in this city ovei the thus far highly successful result of the Brown-Sequard treatment on an old rheumatic person by Dr. H. Al-ford, a prominent physician. The patient improved wonderfully after the first injec-tion and considers himself almost cured.

MOBILE, Ala., Aug. 13. — The Brown-Sequard elixir was tried Monday upon Dr. Peter Coleson, for many years a victim of rheumatic gout, and Thomas Bratton, af-flicted with liver trouble. Dr. Coleson, after two hours had elapsed, said he felt better. He could move his joints easily and felt tho biood circulating through his legs. He was able to stand without his crutches, and for the first time in a year could move his toes. Mr. Bratton felt no change in his condition.

Why Should I Go to Montana?

Great Reservation. Because 18,000,000 acres of free Government land, with a delightful climate, and equally suited for general farming and stock raising, have just been opened to the home* seeker, in the Milk River Valley and near Beaton and Great Falls.

Stock Raiding:- Because the favorable climate and superior grasses of Montana make it the natural home of horses, cattle, sheep and other domestic animals; and because winter feeding is not iequired, as stock grazes at large the year round.

General Farming; Because a rich soil and abundant summer rains produce wheat, oats, rye, barley and the grasses and vegetables of a quality, size and yield unsurpassed.

Mining¹. Because Montana produces more of the precious metals than any other state or territory, and abundant opportunities remain to secure valu-able properties at nominal cost.

lininigrration. Because the Great Reserva-tion is the meeting point of settlers from the Pacific Coast and from the Eastern States, and is the only extensive tract of good land left, suitable for settlement. Business. Because the rapidly growing towns along the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Ry. offer splendid opportunities to engage in business.

Manufacturer. Because the 1000,000 horse-power water-power at Great Falls, the extensive coal veins, the wool, mineral and grain raising re-sources of Montana offer exceptional opportunities to the manufacturer. Tonrfst. Because the canon of the Gates of the Mountains, the Great Falls of the Missouri, the Giant Fountain and Continental Divide offer the most sublime and diversified scenery to be found on the Continent. Take a summer tour.

the Continent. Take a summer tour.

Why Travel by the St. P., M.* M.?
Because only by it can you travel through the largest body of free land left for settlement. Because it reaches the Great Falls, with the largest waterpower on the Continent. Because it reaches Helena, the richest city of its size in the world; and because it is the shortest and best route to Butte, the largest miningcamp on earth. THE HERALD OF FATE.

By OHAELES IVWIGHT WILLAED.

Mr. Clark Rogers, who was the "Co." in the firm of Harkness, Lyon & Co., in Sansome street, appeared at the office with a very unusual expression on his face. Harkness, who was an affable, kindly man, noticed it, and asked whether he was not feeling very much out of sorts that morning. It did not escape Lyon, the practical managing head of the firm, who ventured the remark that Rogers evidently had something on his mind. The bookkeepers, who were accustomed to work under Mr. Rogers' direction, commented upon it at noon to one another, and decided that something very queer must have happened to affect him BO deeply.

The something very queer which had upset the matter-of-fact intellect of Clark Rogers, and had brought the strained, bewildered look upon his face, was a let-ter which the postman had delivered at his bachelor apartments that morning. With the reading of that letter a complete revolution had taken plac« in his mind. For the first time in his life of forty-five years he was brought face to face with something for which he could find no conceivable explanation. Heretofore no problem had ever presented itself to which his plain common sense was not equal. Being now suddenly thrown from the regular orbit which he was accustomed to traverse, the result was something very like a panic.

The strange thing concerning this letter, which had come regularly through the mail and bore the San Francisco postmark of the preceding day, was that it came from a dead man. That loward Russell was dead there could be no doubt, for nearly twenty years be-fore Rogers himself had helped to carry his body to the grave. They had been friends during their boyhood and youth in a decaying New England town. On the other hand, there seemed to be no possible doubt that this letter was from Howard Russell. It was signed with his name, was written unmistakably in his hand, and contained references to things of which no one else could know. After a strained effort to account for it all, Mr. Rogers read and re-read the letter, experiencing as he did so a queer sensation of mental numbness. The letter ran as follows:

MY DEAB CLARK—YOU are doubtless astonished to receive a letter hi my handwriting, and are Tainly endeavoring to account for it. For many years I have been wishing and striving to communicate with you, and at last I have found a human medium through whom I can reach you, his hand guided by mine writes you, and his body held by my soul can speak the message I wish to send. I know that this is all out of the range of your belief. Experience has never revealed to send. I know that this is all out of the range of your belief. Experience has never revealed to you the possibility of the return of a human soul to the earth after its departure from the body. I ask you to believe nothing, only to listen. It is necessary that you should understand that it Is Howard Russell who writes this letter; therefore, I will remind you of the pledge which I gave you when you talked with me alone a few hours before my death, that I would return to warn you il I foresaw any calamity to your life. I will remind you, too, of the October afternoon when wo strolled together through the woods and talked of Mary, and solemnly agreed to remain friends whichever and solemnly agreed to remain friends whichever of us she might accept. Is this sufficient? Can you imagine that any one else should know of these two occurrences?

It is for the sake of Mary that I wish to come to speak to you, and because of the love which you once bore her you are bound to listen. On the evening of the day when you read this letter you will find yourself detained at the office by unfinished work. There will come to you a man who will give his name as Campion, and will offer to speak my words. You shall listen to him, learn your destiny, and act upon the advice which is tendered. Let not your disbelief in the possibility of this close your ears to the truth. Withhold judgment for the present, but listen faithfully to my message. fully to my message.

THE SPIKIT OF HOWARD RCSSEU.,

Now, had any one of Clark Rogers' friends, who were wont to admire the cool, practical way in which he took the affairs of life, related such an occurrence to him, he would have been at no loss for an explanation. "Some enterprising swindler," he would have declared, "who happened to have learned these facts about you, imitates the dead man's hand writing in the hope of getting you to pay for further disclosures." that the case was of his own experience, this explanation was dismissed almost without a hearing. For a time his tUbughts continued to grope about blindly, striving to grasp anything by which they could find their way back to light. There seemed to be nothing within reach, and for once hopeless amazement ruled

As Mr. Clark Rogers had no relatives, he proposed to leave his property to his sister's son, a young man of considerable business promise, who lived in a city of the middle west. Such a life was without perplexities of any sort, and tended to make harder to *bear anything strange or unexpected which

For these reasons, therefore, the face of Clark Rogers wore the troubled look which had attracted the notice of liis partners and the clerks. The letter had advised him to suspend judgment until he should have further evidence, and in the effort to accomplish this he found himself unable to keep his thoughts upon his work during the day. Had he been able to offer himself any explanation whatever, he might have dismissed the question from his mind, but in default of that it constantly returned to torment him. Presently a curious desire to see the conclusion of the affair took possession of him, and he begau to wonder whether the alleged "medium" would put in an appearance. At about 9 o'clock that evening Mr. Eogers sat alone in his private office at the front end of the building on Sansome street To the rear, beyond the labyrinth of tables and showcases, were the glass compartments where a few bookkeepers were still at work. Intent upon finishing the duties which he had left undone during the day, Rogers was bending over the paper on his desk. The room was lighted dimly by an argand gas lamp. When at last he looked up, he discovered that he was no longer alone, but that a tall man, dressed in a shabby suit of black cloth, was standing near him. He had entered unnoticed, although both the street and office doors were closed. His arms were folded, and from urtder the brim of his black slouch hat a pair of great, deep set eyes looked down upon the merchant.

"Good evening," said he, when Rogers looked up; "my name is Campion."
"How did you get in?" asked Rogers, in a stortled tone in a startled tone.

"The doors open quietly, and you were much absorbed in your work," the man answered.

As it became more evident that his strange visitor was flesh and blood, and not some unearthly being, Mr. Rogers' calmness returned. He motioned the man to a seat opposite to himself in front of the desk, and, for a minute, looked intently at his face as the light fell on it from the gas lamp. The medium's feat-ures were large and striking, and of a waxy paleness.

Presently, when Mr. Rogers felt his self control sufficiently established to speak, he said: "Well, sir, what is your business with me?"

"I do not know," answered the man. His method of speaking was quite as strange as his appearance. He spoke slowly, yet each sentence seemed to come

'You do not knowl Then what did you come for?"

The man passed his hand wearily over

"Because I was compelled to come. For several days I have been hunted by a spirit that would give me no rest until I had communicated his message to you. Yesterday I wrote you from him the letter, which I saw you receive, and which has been in your mind during all the day. You are so constituted as to be unable to believe what I say, so I need not trouble myself to assure you that I did not even know what that letter contained, just as I do not know now what I am destined to say to you, and cannot retell it when the spirit is gone."

"See here," interrupted Rogers, sternly,
"I am prepared to listen to what you have to communicate to me, for in some mysterious way you seem to be speaking for a dead man that I once knew. I will pay whatever fee is necessary, but do not try to make me believe what I know to

The man shook his head.

"There will be no fee," said ha
"Very well, then," said the merchant, 'I am prepared to listen to you.'

There were a few minutes of silence. Rogers had pushed his chair back until he was out of the light of the lamp and several yards distant from his visitor. The latter sat motionless as a statue, his eyes fastened upon a spot in the wall.
Presently his pale features began to twitch nervously, but he did not speak.
His hands were clasped with an energy which denoted great mental strain. His breath cause in long sighs or in closet breath caune in long sighs or in short, quick gasps. All at once he turned his great eyes upon Rogers and began to speak, and at the first word the merchant started as if he had received a painful shock, for he heard again the sound of a voice stilled for many years in death.

"Clark, I need not tell you who it is that speaks to you, for you recognize me by my voice. Believe me, I am sorry to have given you this shock, but it was needed that you should know what is soon to come to pass. A calamity is about to happen to you, of which I must give you warning for the sake of the woman whom we once both loved. In the selfish life that you are leading it is many years since you even thought of Mary. You have not cared to learn whether she is happy or wretched, although at one time she was to have been your wife. You knew that she was now a widow, but how she has maintained herself and her children you have not asked. In your narrow and severe way you have always blamed her for the separation which your neglect and coldness forced her to bring about. When she married you dismissed her from your thoughts as having been unworthy of you. You are as selfish and as unfeeling now as you were when by your superior strength of will you compelled me to give her up.

'For years I have seen the woman I loved suffering from poverty and hard-ship, and have longed to help her. I knew that it was idle to communicate with you, for she is too proud to accept the slightest benefit from you while you are still alive. Events have at last taken a turn which puts it in your power to offer her assistance that she will not refuse.

"Clark Rogers, I come to warn you doubt is at hand; it that the day of your death is at hand; it is not a month away, it is scarcely more than a week. The will which you had drawn up three years ago leaves the bulk of your property to your nephew. Within three days you will receive information through the newspapers of his betrayal of the trust imposed in him, and of his disgraceful flight. When you framo a new testament—and see that you do not delay in doing so—remember the woman whose life was rendered miserable by your selfish neglect. The money which you had intended to leave to your sister's unworthy son will go to repair the wrong which you wrought fifteen years ago. It will enable one of the noblest and truest women who ever lived to educate her children and spend the remainder of her life in peace and comfort, blessing your memory after you are dead.

The voice ceased, but the stranger sat with parted lips and dilated eyes steadily gazing at the listener. From the first, Eogers had nerved himself to meet some sort of a shock, but the sound of the dead voice, the memory of a forgotten love and the reference to his own death deprived him for a time of the self control which was characteristic of him. Gradually, however, he recovered himself, and determined that whatever internal misgivings might beset him he would put on a bold front to this man, whom he believed to be an impostor. After a few moments of silence he said, with apparent unconcern: "It is evident. whoever you are, that you know much about Howard Russell and my6elf, yet I am In no way affected by the pretended messages which you deliver. I do not believe in them at all. As to your effort to excite my fears by predicting my death, it will avail nothing. I am in too good health to allow my spirits to be good health to allow my spirits to be touched by superstitious dread of such an event.

"As to your health, it is by no means what you believe it to be. On the day after to-morrow, as you sit down at your desk in the afternoon, you will experience a sudden fluttering of the heart, followed by a strange feeling in the arteries. This will be repeated at intervals, until you are compelled to consul! a physician. I see you with him now. He is a short man, with bristling eyebrows and a gray mustache.

"My physician has a long black beard," said Rogers, grimly.

"The one you will consult has not. However, your death is not to be the result of illness, for I can see you a shori time before the occurrence, and you are then a robust man, a little pale, but in good health.'

"Since you can tell so much," said the merchant, "why do you not reveal it al' to me, how and when my death is to take place?"

"I will tell you all that I can see," answered the clairvoyant. "You are before my eyes now, with death but a few moments away. You stand in a smal! room with white wooden walls. It resembles, in some degree, a stateroom in an ocean steamer, save that it has a desk in it. You are looking at the calendar which hangs beside the mirror. It bears the date the twenty-sixth, and two lines from Swinburne, which you read. Yes, it is on shipboard, for now there rings an alarm of fire, and I hear the rushing of many feet; then the vision fades

"The twenty-sixth i3 very soon, and] never go to sea."

"It will happen as I narrate. To-morrow word will come to the firm of which you are a member, calling for your presence at some distant point. It will be put off for a time, but one week from today you will leave the city by boat"—

"One week!" cried out Rogers, starting up from his chair; "why, you clumsy blunderer, you stupid humbug! Don'l ou see your story does not hang to-

The stranger sprang up, pressing his thin hands to his face. Then he shook himself like a dog suddenly awakened from a sound sleep, and stared blankly at the merchant.

"One week from today is the twenty-seventh," exclaimed Rogers, "and I am to die on the twenty-sixth. I will hear no more of your nonsense. This is a little more than I can tolerate."

"I do not understand you," said the medium in his own voice; "I cannot tel: what I have been saying to you. I do not even know who spoke through me, but I seem to remember that it was your friend."

Clark Rogers surveyed his visitor for a moment with immeasurable contempt. The man's apparent confusion and his palpable error had snapped the thread by which he held his listener. Rogers, suddenly convinced that his understanding had been led into some sort of an ambush and then overpowered, turned in fury upon the agent of the deceit.

"You may go," he said, restraining himself with difficulty; "if your purpose was to astonish me, I admit that you have succeeded. If you hoped to make me believe that you were in communication with the dead, you have failed. And if you ever again venture, by letter or otherwise, to profane the memory of my friend, I will have you hunted down by the police as a swindling scoundrel.'

The stranger was standing near the door of the office. Slowly he raised his arm and pointed his bony index finger

"Remember!" said he.

"Remember!" said he.

In another instant he was gone. Rogers seized his pen and began to work on the books which were lying before him, noting down the results of his calculations on a sheet of paper. Frequently he dashed his pen through what he had written and began again. He noticed that his hand trembled and that his fingers with difficulty directed the pen aright, but this he assured himself was the result of intense anger. He understood that he had for a time lost control of himself, and had yielded to what he knew must be superstition, but he was firmly resolved that this should not happen again. Thereupon was begun a struggle between the will power and the natural feelings of Clark Rogers, totally destructive to his peace of mind.

The next day, when the firm assembled, as'was their custom, to talk over the morning's mail, the senior partner, Mr. Harkness, remarked upon the worn and haggard appearance of Mr. Rogers.
"Rogers is working too hard, I think," said Lyon; "he ought to take a short vacation' "That is the idea," said Harkness; you have not been away for many months, now. Why don't you take a Diego by boat? It is a pleasant enough rip if you are not seasick.

Rogers started and said, rather test-y: "What in the world put that into your head? I hate the water, and have never been on an ocean boat in my life."

After some little discusskm as to the comparative merits of seasickness and death, the firm began to look over the letters which the corresponding clerk had laid out.

One of these was from a traveling agent of the company, whose route lay in the southern part of the state. It contained the information that a customer of the firm, who was now standing on their books for a number of thousands of dollars, had become badly involved in land speculations, and, i was believed, was on the point of bank-ruptcy. If the case were handled care-fully, the agent considered that most of the debt could be realized, but if the matter was neglected there might be a considerable loss.

"One of us must go down to Ventura immediately and see what can be done," said Harkness. "Without a doubt," said Lyon; "here is Rogers' ocean trip all mapped out for

"I am very busy just now," said Rogers, slowly, and he began to feel his heart beat with rapid, ponderous strokes; 'how soon ought I to go?"

Before the answer came he felt what There is no very pressing haste; four or five days is soon enough; say the twenty-fifth or the twenty-sixth." "If I went I should go by land, I think.' "You can't do that very well at this season of the year. I notice by the papers that the Santa Clara is very high, and the stages run quite irregularly.

"I will not go," said Rogers, bluntly; "that is to say," he added, in some confusion, "if either of you gentlemen can manage to go in my stead."

"Leave the matter to me," said Lyon, good naturedly; "I know the man well and the place, also. Leave Rogers to his books." books.'

So the conference ended; although, after Rogers had left the room, the other partners commented with surprise upon the vehemence with which he had spoken. As for Rogers, he spent some time endeavoring to convince himself that he would have acted just as he did, had the portent of death not been hang-ing over him. The idea of an ocean trip was, of course, distasteful to him, and under any circumstances he would have stood out against it. If it were absolutely necessary he could go, but as Lyon was to attend to the matter, he need give it no further thought.

For more than twenty-four hours he succeeded so well in this purpose as to quite surprise himself, for he had begun to lose confidence in his power over his thoughts. In the afternoon of the next day, however, an event occurred which again flooded his mind with unwelcome memories. As he started to rise from his desk he felt a sudden faintness and a violent fluttering at the heart, succeeded, a moment later, by a straining throughout the system and a spasm of pain. He staggered back into his seat, terribly frightened. The paroxysm was over in an instant, and did not return, but the paleness had not left his features a few minutes later when the senior partner entered the room.

Harkness stopped short on seeing Rogers' face, and said: "My dear fellow, you positively look ill. I don't like it at all."

"I am not feeling particularly well," nted Rogers, nervousiy.

"You are over working. You must take a rest. Now, look here, Lyon has not been down today, and Mrs. Lyon has just called to say that he has another attack of rheumatism, and that it may last him a week or two. What in the deuce are we to do? Some one must go down to Ventura. I can't, that is certain. Now, why don't you go?

Rogers turned on him and spoke with almost savage emphasis: "I will go," he said, and repeated it; "I will go; and it shall be on the twenty sixth." shall be on the twenty sixth.

Harkness eyed him for a moment in silence. 'You speak in a strange manner," he said, "as though something were troubling you." Rogers drew his hand slowly over his eyes.

"Several odd things have happened to me of late," he confessed; "I cannot explain to you what they were, but they have tempted me to yield to superstitious fancies. I suppose such things never trouble you.'

"Often, often," said the senior member, dropping into aseat; "but I had imagined that you were altogether too matter-of-fact to be affected by such folly. For myself, I have been addicted to that sort of thing so constantly that I have, at last, formulated a theory on the subject. Did I ever mention it to you? I hold that a superstition positively exists for you if you believe in it, but if you repudiate it, it is dead. If you have the strength of will to go deliberately and do what the portent, whatever it may be, warns you against, you are safe from its influence. If you dodge the event, of course you dodge the calamity. But now, if, belie ring in the danger signal, you either accidentally or thoughtlessly do what you are warned against, then the omen holds good, because you still believe in it. Do you catch the

"I think I do," answered Rogers; and after some more conversation concerning the affairs of the firm in Ventura, the partners separated.

It may have been the consolation of the Harkness philosophy which stole over the troubled mind of Mr. Clark Rogers, or it may have been that the sudden exertion of his will nower reestablished his confidence in himself; at all events, the perturbed condition of reeling did not return. Tv.i-,»^i4ore the strange sensations at the heart t»*ve experienced, but although they caused him inxiety he was not unnerved, as he had >een upon the first attack. He determined, however, to see a physician, and earn whether any immediate difficulty was indicated by these symptoms. So compltnely had he driven the ghostly message from his thoughts that he did not remember that this visit to the doctor had been predicted, until he stood before the door of the office in the dusk of the

Then, as he rang the bell, a sudden tremor seized him, and for an instant he felt sick and faint. A moment Jater he regained control of himself, and laughed carelessly as he remembered how absurdly the medium had failed in his effort to describe the physician's appear-

"Is the doctor in?" he asked of the servant who answered the bell.

'Step into the office, please, and I will speak to him.

The gas had not been lighted, and the office was quite dark. Mr. Rogers seated himself near one of the windows, and presently a man entered at the other side of the room whom he did not recognize, but who he saw by his stature could not be Dr. Bond.

"Excuse me a moment, until I light the gas," said a voice, which sounded familiarly on his ear; "Dr. Bond is out of the city, Mr. Rogers, but I suppose you would just as soon consult with me."

As he spoke the light flashed up and he stood revealed, a well known physician and a member of Rogers' own ciub; a short man, with very bushy eyebrows and a gray mustache.

On the evening of the next day, as Mr. Harkness was dining alone with his wife, he remarked to her that Rogers had received a bad blow that morning.

"Rogers' heir, you know," said he, "is his sister's son, a young fellow by the name of Westfall. This morning's papers contained a dispatch to the effect that he had committed a serious defalcation, and had bolted for Canada. It is a terrible affair, and I never saw a man so completely overcome as Rogers was. He seemed unable to control himself, and has done nothing but brood over it all day. He had some hope that it was fake; but, on telegraphing for information, the report was entirely confirmed By a curious coincidence, he went to see Dr. Griffith last night, who warned him that there is something the matter with his heart, and that he had best see to it that his affairs are all in order. He had intended to make a new will, and now this occurrence upsets all his previous "Whom will he leave his money to, do you suppose?" asked Mrs. Harkness.

"He told me who his heir would be, for the reason that he expects to depend upon me to carry out the provisions of upon me to carry out the provisions of the will in case he should die suddenly, but it was under promise of secrecy. The person is not a relative. It seems there was some sort of a youthful romantic attachment."

"How odd!" exclaimed the lady; "one would not suspect it of a man like Mr.

Rogers." The next day the will was drawn and attested, and a temporary sensation of relief took possession of the tortured mind of Clark Rogers. In spite of repeated assurances to the contrary he had come to accept the utterances of the alleged spirit as true, and had put into the wDl the name of the woman he had once promised to marry. He endeavored to make limself believe that he would have done this just the same had it not been suggested to him. He had never been without a suspicion that he had misjudged Mary, and this was nothing but an effort to repair the wrong. Once more he found distraction in his work, and for a day thrust away the dread of what was to come. It was late in the afternoon of the twenty-fifth that the panic again seized him, and the courage with which he had determined to meet and overthrow hu superstitious fancies suddenly evaporated. The succession of proofs rose before him like the vision of kings to Macbeth.

But one part of the message remained unfulfilled: that he should go to sea or the twenty-sixth and there meet his death. And he was going to meet fate instead of avoiding the chance of its consummation. No power could carry him on shipboard if he refused to go, and there was no reason why he should not delay the proposed voyage. The doctoi had especially warned him to avoid worry and excitement, and by deciding to go on some other date he could save himself this agitation, foolish it was, to be sure, but none the less positive. He caught eagerly at this comforting subterfuge and was about to go to the senior partner, when that gentleman entered the room with a newspaper in his hand.

'I say, Rogers," he said, "were you expecting to go to-morrow?" Then, without waiting for an answer, ho continued: "Because you are liable to be disappointed if you are. There is a boat tomorrow, but I notice that she does not stop at Ventura. From your mentioning the twenty-sixth so positively, I supposed you had looked it up,"

"When does my boat go?"
"On the twenty-seventh, the day after to-morrow. I suppose that will be quite as convenient for you?"

Rogers burst into an excited laugh, "What strikes you as so amusing?" inquired Harkness.

To think," laughed Rogers, "that I should have made all my plans to go, and never looked to see about the boats. For some reason or other I had an idea that mine would leave on the twentysixth.

Throughout the fated day Rogers sat at his desk over his ledgers. Several times he stopped, glanced at the clock and then at the calendar, and smiled. He was quite free from excitement now, and entirely lighthearted. The thought of sudden death which had flitted through his mind at frequent intervals during the last week was far enough away to be quite amusing. He was more affable with his clerks than they had known him to be for years.

At 3 o'clock Harkness came into the office wearing his hat and overcoat.
"Come along with me," he said; "I am going on an interesting trip which you will enjoy. I have some friends among the officers of the frigate Mohican, which is lying at anchor in the bay, and I am going out to be shown about the ship. They will welcome you, too."

"This is the last resort of Fate," thought Rogers; "how superstition does insult a man when she has him down."

On the morning of the twenty-seventh a steamer went out the Golden Gate with Clark Rogers a» a passenger. The predicted day of his death had come and gone and he was still a sound man, with prospect of many years of life ahead of him. The mysterious coincidences had revealed to him that strange things might happen for which he could not account, but they had stopped short of more dangerous ground. He was now free from the influence of the superstitutes and make the could not account. tion, and would soon entirely forget it. save that at times he would perhaps look back to laugh at his unexpected display of weakness.

Nevertheless, he found himself this morning subject to a strange sort of depression, for which he could not account. It seemed to have no connection with the disagreeable thoughts of the past few day'3, but was unique and indescribable. He wandered about the ship, trying in vain to get away from the discomfort of this new sensation. It was th« reaction, he told himself, of the strain through which he had been passing. Once thrown from its balance his mind would have to be for a time at the mercy of whatever foolish fancies might seize upon it.

As he leaned against the rail, a prey to these moody reflections, some one touched his arm, and he turned to discover a former bookkeeper of the firm, wearing the cap and uniform of the purser of the ship.

"Mr. Rogers, I am astonished and delighted to see you, sir," he said. Never in his life had the merchant stood more in need of company. The cordiality with which he returned his former clerk's greeting quite astonished that gentleman.

After they had talked a few minutes, the purser said: "Won't you come to my room, Mr. Rogers? It is a cozy little place. I notice you are not looking well. It is too chilly for you here, is it not?"

The room was small but pleasant. Mr. Rogers occupied a chair by the desk, while the purser sat on the edge of the bed. The latter was a talkative young man. who experienced an unusual degree of pleasure in meeting as an equal his old employer, of whom he had formerly stood in great awe. While listening to his lively prattle, Mr. Rogers' uneasinesi gradually vanished.

This is a sort of a dangerous trip; do you know it?" said the purser.

"This is a sort of a dangerous trip."
"Why, how is that?" inquired the merchant, nervously.

"We are carrying about all the gun-powder and oil and such combustibles that the policy will allow. If we should blow us skyward.

Mr. Rogers said but little, not being by nature a very companionable man. With the purser it was different; it was not often that he secured so attentive a listener as his present one.

"Are you going to stop in Ventura very long?" he inquired.
"No," answered the other.

"Well, you ought to," said the purser; "everything is beautiful down there now. The hills are a velvety green and the meadows are fairly carpeted with wild flowers. Spring begins a little earlier than it does up above, and it is already well under way.

For winter's rains and ruins are over. And all the season of snows and sius.

I suppose you do not care much for poetry, but I am very fond of it, and try to commit some to memory every day; to use for quotations, you know. Those lines are from Swinburne.

"Swinburne," repeated Rogers, mechanically. Then he gave a quick glance about the room, and his face turned a shade pale. Here was the desk, the white painted walls, and the mirror. The purser stood up, interrupting his thoughts. "Yes," ho said, "I am very fond of Swinburne; so much so that I keep a calendar in my room with a selection for each day of the year. By Jove! That reminds me! Yesterday I didn't"-He placed his hand on a coat which hung over the desk beside the mirror, and was about to remove it, when the officer of the deck stepped to the door.

"Hall," he said, "you are wanted;"
and then added in an undertone which Rogers heard quite plainly, "trouble down below.

The purser went quickly out, closing the screen door behind him. Rogers started up and drew the coat to one side. Beneath it was the calendar bearing in large red letters the number twenty-six and the lines:

In his heart Is a blind desire.

In his eyes foreknowledge of death The words seemed to sear his ej'eballs as ho read them, and he 6taggered back, gasping for breath. At that instant he heard the clang of the fire alarm bell, the cries of the sailors, and the rushing of many people along the deck. He sank to the floor, his lips parted in the effort to speak a name. When the purser returned, after adjusting the difficulty for which he had been summoned below, he noticed the men putting up the hose at the conclusion of the fire drill, and wondered if the sudden call had startled his guest. Upon the floor of the room he found Clark Rogers, his stern features black and distorted in death. THE END.

A week ago last Sunday, Chas. Towler, young man living two miles east of Ypsilanti, hired a horse from Neat's livery and drove with his best girl to Ann A'bor. It took a great deal of fast driving to keep ip with our rapid sister city, and evidently on the way back he tried to break the peed record; far he had hardly driven in-t,0 the barn when the horse dropped dead. The young man paid eighty dollars for his tun and the addition to his already extenive knowledge ct horse fiesh.--Čommer-

Thaddeus C. Brooks, a railroad contractor, has brought suit to recover on notes given by P. A. Fohey, John Coyle, M. & P. Duffy, and T. Fohey, all of Northfield. The notes were given by the parties to the T. & A. A. railroad company, the consideration being that a station should be >uilt at Whitmore Lake. The company turned the notes over to Brooks on his contract. Oa a suit in a justice court on a similar note, Brooks was beaten, it being claimed that the company had not lived up to the contract.

For the past two months the Ypsilanti)apers have shown a decided coolness toward Ann Arbor, but now all is lovely again. The cause of this jealusy was be-cause Ann Arbor had living within her l'orders a colored woman who claimed to l)e 107 years old, and Ypsi. could not find one as old. But now all is changed and the Commercial claims that Mrs. Hetty Martin of that place is 119 or 120 years old, "as near as the Commercial can figure it out." We acknowledge that we are seaten, but a prize is now offered to the party who will "figure out" their age to 5eat the Ypsilanti woman.

Sheriff Dwyer attended the exercises of the A. O. H. at Grand Rapids this week. While there he received a telegram from officers at Paw Paw stating that they had the man wanted for stealing Cornwell Bros.' horse on July 16. He returned yesterday with the prisoner who gave the name of Frank Howard. The baggy, harness and halter stolen were found at Paw Paw where Howard had left them. When arrested the prisoner was working or the sheriff's brother, about 16 miles from Paw Paw. He has served time in the county jail chere. Howard had been traveling with Pomercy's wild weet show traveling with Pomeroy's wild west show which wag here on July 13. He left the show here and stayed around the city for several days. The evidence all points towards his being the man wanted for the Many would be a>tonished to visit a large factory such as W. L. Douglas' at Brockton, Mass., to see how the excellent shoes manufactured by him could be made to sell at such low prices. Never in the history of shoe making in this country bave such values been put into foot-wear as are shown today, and never has a well made and durable ehoe been so completely within the reach of the masses as at the present time.

Children's Diseases—Summer Complaints.

Careful statistics show that a large proportion of the human family die before reaching their fifth year; and that further examination shows that most of these deaths occur from what is known as Summer Complaints"; "Diarrheas"; Cholera Infanium"; and Dysentery." These are all strictly preventable causes of death and it is a disgrace to the civilization and medical skill of the age that such mortality should occur. Of course unhealthy surroundings and close, ill-ventilated dwellings, stifling sleeping rooms, hot air and improper fool have mush to do in causing and keeping up these diseases. But bad medication has even more to do with the unfortunate results. The medicines most commonly resorted to, not only do not cure but often prolong and keep up the disease. It is refreshing in this uncertainty to turn to remedies that not ouly do not injure but that do cure. Sich are "Humphreys' Specific-*." His four, five and six are infallible and thousands of families use them with the most satisfactory results.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Aug. 13.—Judge Walter Q. Gresham, of the United States Circuit bench, of his own motion on Monday peremptorily set aside an order made last week by Judge William A. Woods, of the District Federal Court, creating a receivership for the Indianapolis, Decatu* & Western railroad, and appointing It. B. P. Peirce receiver. Judge Gresham held that sufficient cause for a receivership had Dot been shown and that there was no propriety in the action and probably no jurisdiction.
