DOWN COMES GAS!

THE ACTION OF THE COOSCII MONDAY NIGHT.

The Major Vetoes the Gas Ordinance.

The members of the Common Council were slow in gathering Monday evening

A communication was received from the Board of Public Works offering the following recommendations:

That the proposition of Mr. Siple for straightening west Huron-st. on the north side from Allen's creek to Chapin-st. be accepted.

That $300 be appropriated to complete the sodding and grading on State-st. from North to South University-st.

That $100 be appropriated to build plank cross-walks on the east side of south Main-st. across Madison, Mosley, Hill, Phillips and Elm-sts.

That $20 be appropriated to pay the water tax for the 5th ward cemetery.

The Fire Commissioners asked that the chief of the fire department be notified by anybody granted permission to use the streets for moving houses, laying water pipes, gas mains or other purposes.

Mayor Beakes returned to the council, not approved, the ordinance passed at the last meeting relative to gas works.

In his veto the mayor presented many reasons for his action. The main reason of the veto was because the ordinance did not reduce the cost of gas to our citizens to as low prices as other cities are being furnished with this article.

The committee on ordinances reported an ordinance relative to licenses to take the place of the one recently vetoed by the mayor.

In order that the ordinance might take effect as soon as possible, the rules were suspended and the ordinance was given the three readings at this session.

The ordinance provides for granting licenses and does not discriminate between parties as the first ordinances did.

Aid. Allmendinger, chairman of the ordinance committee, presented another ordinance relative to gas works to take the place of the one vetoed by the mayor.

This ordinance had been dictated by Mayor Beakes and was agreeable to the corporation that all parties will now be suited.

The ordinance places the maximum price of gas to be charged to private consumers at $2. per 1000 cubic feet, and to the city at $1.50 per 1000 cubic feet.

Where consumers do not use to exceed 400 cubic feet per month, the company are allowed to charge at the rate of $2.50 per 1000 cubic feet. It provides that if the prices of coal and oil should advance to exceed 20 per cent. over the present rate the price of gas may be advanced pro rata in the proportion that the cost of coal and oil enters into the cost of the manufacture of gas.

It also provides that the price charged private consumers shall not at any time exceed the average rate paid for gas by consumers in other cities of Michigan.

of rejecting the bids for lighting the city, and the clerk was authorized to insert advertisement for new bids in Detroit, Chicago and Philadelphia papers, the bids to be in by Oct. 1.

The fire committee was authorized to detail a man to examine the chimneys about the city as the majority of fires occur from this cause.

The sum of $150 was appropriated to build crosswalks on south Main-st.

The Board of Public Works was authorized to employ such legal talent as may be necessary to protect the city's rights in the old cemetery at the head of Huron-st.

This is the first step towards placing this property in shape so that it may in time be used as a park by our citizens.

A resolution was presented granting $325 for finishing the sodding and grading of State-st. This amount was cut down to $275 when it was passed, but not until Aid. Herz had left the chamber in disgust after being called to order by the president for trying to speak three times on the question.

Aid. Spokes introduced a resolution appropriating $20 for paying the water tax for the 5th ward cemetery.

Amendments were made and supported giving an equal sum to Forest Hill and the Catholic cemetery. The entire matter was then laid on the table, the amendments being made simply to kill the original motion.

The council then adjourned.

THE INFERNAL REGIONS.

Our Correspondent Looks Down into the Bottomless Pit.

NAPLES, ITALY, Aug. 1, 1889.

EDITOR REGISTER:

it may seem a little early to speak of the ascent to the Infernal regions, but such is the truth regarding a climb up Mt. Vesuvius, which I will attempt to describe.

We left Rome at 8 o'clock by the Naples & Brundise railroad. After riding for six hours over the fertile Campagna, one of the finest valleys in all Italy, among fields of ripening jute and all kinds of fruits, especially grape, we came in sight of the beautiful bay of Naples, which, like a high apron, spreads itself along the shore, and the waves of the Mediterranean sea make a broad white fringe of foam all around the border.

Naples, formerly very unhealthy on account of poor drainage, is now, through the efforts of the municipal authorities, one of the best kept cities of central Italy. The streets are moderately clean and are stone paved. The buildings in the main part of the city are of a white sandstone which is mined in the mountains not far away. On the outskirts of the city, as of every Italian city, the poorer classes live, in anything but comfort.

The shore of the bay is lined with bath houses and these are well patronized at all hours of the day. People, too poor to afford a franc or a lire (20 cents) for the privilege of a bath house, make good use of the neighboring rocks and plunge into the surf and sea weeds free of charge.

The principal attraction to the traveler in Naples is the National Museum, which must be visited in order to get an adequate idea of the ruins of Pompeii.

The day we were in Naples they were holding a musical festival of some sort. The streets were festooned and arches were erected at every corner; besides there were people enough to make several country 4th of July celebrations in America. I noticed on several street corners huge kettles of ear corn boiling. A sign above indicated that the corn was for sale at 10 centimes per ear. I met several women as I passed along who had evidently been investing in this delicacy (?) but, strange to say, I did not see the men have any of it, they were either eating bread or fruit. Naples, like all Italy, is cursed with children. The streets are full of them and every doorway or window is the cradle of one or more. No one seems to care for them and they do not seem to have the least care for themselves. They ran in front of the carriages so often that the drivers were continually shouting or swearing (I could not understand the Neapolitan vernacular) at them. But I must hasten to reach Vesuvius.

We left Naples for Pompeii at 2 p. m., choosing to ascend Vesuvius by horse rather than go up by rail from Naples. The railway up Mt. Vesuvius, while it is a very agreeable way of ascending this volcano, yet it does not afford the satisfaction nor the view which the hard trail from Pompeii gives.

Arriving at Pompeii at 3 p. m. we immediately went to the Hotel Diomed and secured our guide and horses. One must use great care in choosing a guide here, else you will find yourself taken in by sharpers who will bleed you to the last franc. There are regularly licensed guides who always offer themselves at the hotels and who can be fully trusted, and only these fellows can be. In 15 minutes the guide and horses were in readiness; also about 20 others—hangers on who would persist in holding our horses, or in doing something whereby they might claim a fee. The best thing to do with such fellows is to tell them to get out of the way. Besides the guide and horses there is another necessary member to every party—that is a small boy who goes along to lunch up the lazy ponies, and to take care of them when the steep foot climbing begins and we leave the beaten track.

Mt. Vesuvius lies due north from Pompeii. Taking the old road which has existed from time immemorial we ride along between high walls for several miles. Over the walls vast vineyards stretch away to the mountains. We pass through a small town on our route that seems to be built only to be buried at some future day. Every step of the way from Pompeii to the top of Vesuvius we tread on lava. A light crust of soil during the past centuries has made these southern slopes into the finest vineyards in Italy. After riding about two hours over roads rough and rocky, every step ascending we come at length to the end of vegetation. Then the road becomes a path and winds in and out among the huge waves of cooled lava. In places the horse's hoof gives a sepulchral tone as it grates over the cinders. Up, up, up, through lava dust and cinders until we reach the last level spot. Here horses are left with the boy who has walked all the way from Pompeii or ridden by hanging to the tail of one of the horses.

We now are put to the test. A stroDg back, strong limbs and good luDgs are necessary. Mounting step by step through a broad stream of fine loose cindra which at every step, unless care is taken, slip from under the foot, and set you back rather than forward. We must go up a thousand feet through this kind of climbing; then we come to a hard cinder trail. A trail which only an experienced guide could find, for we have no foot prints in soil, no bare foil where grass once grew, no bent things to mark our way. We are climbing over one vast mountain of cinders—the whop volcano is a single cinder. Looking back over the route already covered we think we are surely most there. The horses far below roll in the lava dust and look so small. Another climb of a thousand feet over the hardest track I ever saw brings us to the crater of 1872. We look into the hole, now cold in death and pass on to hotter regions. Five hundred feet further up and we reach the crater of 1804.

Mr. T. W. Baldwin last Saturday exhibited a curiosity which puzzled everybody, and no one could be found to name it or tell its origin. It was found on the ground by Mr. Baldwin.—Chelsea Standard.

FROM WASHINGTON.

▲ Important Change in the Pension Laws—Death of Consul Conroy at Porto Rico—Other News of General Interest.

CAPITAL NOTES.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—It is now generally conceded on all sides that there will be an extra session of Congress. It is believed that the President has at last made up his mind definitely to call both houses together by the first week in November.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—The light offerings of bonds have resulted in a steady increase in the Treasury surplus, which, according to the Treasurer's statement of Thursday, now amounts to $70,800,000, being the highest point reached since October last. The pension payments for the present month are estimated at $118,000,000, and the surplus will be reduced accordingly. Further reductions are also expected in the fall, when the usual movement of crops takes place.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—The acting Postmaster-General, Mr. Clarkson, has awarded the contract for furnishing postal cards to the department during the next four years to Albert Daggett, of Brooklyn, N. Y., for $800,000.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—Colonel John M. Wilson, of the Engineer Corps, late Superintendent of Public Buildings and Grounds in the District of Columbia, has been appointed Superintendent of the United States Military Academy at West Point to succeed General John G. Parke, who was recently retired.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—The District commissioners have issued an order prohibiting the crying of newspapers before 7 a. m. or after 10:30 a. m. on Sundays. Heretofore the residence sections of the capital have been made noisy all through Sunday by the newsboys.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—A statement issued by the Internal Revenue Department shows that 2,307 distilleries are running and their product is nearly 50,000 gallons a day in excess of last year.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—The State Department has received a cablegram from the United States Vice-Consul at Porto Rico announcing the death Sunday night of Consul Edward Conroy. He was the oldest of United States Consuls, and in length of service was the junior of but one man—the Consul at Gibraltar. He was appointed Consul at San Juan, Porto Rico, in 1842, and was 80 years old.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Assistant-Secretary Bussey has rendered an important decision on the pension claim of Daniel B. Kaufman, late of Company A Forty-eighth Regiment Pennsylvania volunteers, which was brought before him on a motion for reconsideration. In his decision the Assistant Secretary rescinds rule No. 135 made by Commissioner Black September 4, 1885, and overrules the opinion of ex-Assistant-Secretary Hawkins in the same case that a "dishonorable discharge" from the service operates as a "bar to pension." He holds that a "dishonorable discharge" is a penalty for a specific offense against the service, for which the soldier may be punished, but that the penalty can not include nor relate to a claim for pension based upon disability. The two things are held to be wholly distinct from each other, and are not governed by the same legal consideration. The Assistant Secretary holds that for the department to impose upon a soldier the forfeiture of the right to even claim pension because of a dishonorable discharge, which may have been intimated by court-martial for an offense of which the court had jurisdiction, would be equivalent to punishing the soldier twice for the same offense.

INDIANS IN WAR PAINT. One White Man at Demersville, M. T., Killed—Troops Asked For.

P. D. Duncan, a justice of the peace at Demersville, has telegraphed Governor White, asking for protection, and says that the settlers are guarding their homes. Duncan is a reliable man. Further particulars are not obtainable.

Drexel Industrial Institute. PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 20.—Speaking of Mr. Drexel's modified plan for an industrial institution the Public Ledger says that under the new arrangement it is the purpose of Mr. Drexel to provide funds to purchase land and construct buildings and for the maintenance of a full corps of instructors for an industrial institute for young women and young men that will accommodate for their instruction and training as many as a thousand girls in the daytime and a thousand boys at night.

Caught in His Own Trap. WILKESBAEE, Pa., Aug. 20.—Frank Sorenson, of Nanticoke, arranged a pistol in his barn so that any one who entered to steal pigeons would be shot. He forgot the trap, and on opening the door Monday he was shot below the heart. The wound will prove fatal. Sorenson was 30 years old and married.

A little child of John Roe's, near Saline, fell over a pet lamb last week resulting in a broken arm for the child.

Work on the New vault in the Saline cemetery is being rushed.

"Had Been Worried Eighteen Tears." It should have read "married," but the proof-reader observed that it amounted to about the same thing and so did not draw his blue pencil through the error. Unfortunately, there was considerable truth in his observation. Thousands of husbands are constantly worried almost to despair by the ill health that afflicts their wives, and often robs life of comfort and happiness. There is but one safe and sure way to change all this for the better. The ladies should use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

The plainer a woman dresses in public, the more gentility goes with her.

"Give Him $2, mill Let Him Guess." We once heard a man complain of feeling badly, and wondered what ailed him. A humorous friend said, "Give a doctor $2 and let him guess." It was a cutting satire on some doctors, who don't always guess right. You need not guess what ails you when your food don't digest, when your stomach and bowels are inactive, and when your head aches every day and you are languid and easily fatigued. You are bilious, and Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets will bring you out all right. Small, sugar-coated, easy to take. Of druggists.

IOWA REPUBLICANS.

Joseph A. Hutchison Nominated for Governor. After a Hot Fight, on the Twenty-Fifth Ballot.

DES MOINES, Ia., Aug. 16.—The Iowa Republican State convention on the twenty-fifth ballot, Thursday, nominated Senator J. G. Hutchison for Governor. On the second ballot for Lieutenant-Governor, Senator Poynner, of Tama, was chosen. Judge Given for Supreme Judge, Henry Sabin for State Superintendent and Spencer Smith for Railroad Commissioner were nominated by acclamation. A platform was adopted and the convention adjourned. The platform demands "protection to American industry which does not foster trusts"; reaffirms the principle of State regulation of railroads, declares against trusts, favor courts of arbitration for labor troubles and reaffirms the past utterances of the party in Iowa on prohibition, declaring that the party stands for the complete enforcement of the law.

FOREST FIRES CHECKED.

HELENA, M. T., Aug. 20.—A heavy rain, general throughout the Territory, fell all Sunday night, and the forest fires which have been raging for the last week are checked in most places and put out in others. The fires originated from two causes, lightning and camp fires, and in some cases the most valuable lumber in the Territory have been destroyed as well as valuable ranges burnt over. Owing to the drought this has proved an incalculable loss to stockmen, who have had to seek pasturage for their herds and flocks in remote localities, driven in some instances to the British possessions and the Indian reservations where they are charged a good round price for grazing privileges.

A GOOD SCHEME.

▲ National Fund to Relieve Distress from Flood, Pestilence and Famine.—PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 20.—At a meeting Monday of the executive committee of the Universal Brotherhood of Friends, a resolution was adopted suggesting the creation of a National relief fund to be applied in relieving distress caused by flood, fire, pestilence, famine, earthquake, etc. It is suggested that any remainder of the Johnson money might be used as a nucleus of the fund. The board of trustees is to consist of the Governors of States, with the President of the United States as chairman. Copies of the address will be sent to the President and Governors.

CATTLE DYING.

Pennsylvania Farmers Greatly Alarmed Over the Presence of Texas Fever. GBEESBCEG, Pa., Aug. 20.—A fatal disease has broken out among the cattle in several localities in this county and they are dying at an alarming rate. It is known among veterinary surgeons as splenic, or Texas fever. Samuel Pool, of New Stanton, has lost eight head of valuable cows, and Weible brothers, west of here, lost four or five. The disease is supposed to have been transmitted through the bringing of a oarload of Western cattle into the county by a farmer at New Stanton. The farmers are greatly alarmed over the presence of the disease. Cattle stricken with the disease invariably die.

Mark Twain.

The American press generally appears to have lost conceit of Mark Twain's position for this change of feeling may be that Mark has grown rich. It is an unparadigmatic error for a humorist to be rich. He ought to have a garret like James Triplet, be the happy professor of one thread bare coat, and shoes that let the water in. But even under these direful circumstances, 25 cents would purchase him from that most painful of all complaints, Rheumatism. They are advertised everywhere. For Sale by H. J. Wm. Dist. THURSDAY, AUGUST 22, 1889.

The resolution of alderman Dieterle offered at the council meeting Monday night relative to the title of the old cemetery lot is a move in the right direction. The location would make a beautiful little park, thus transforming an unsightly place into an attractive resort.

The contest between New York City and Chicago for the world's fair in 1892 affords an excellent opportunity for those two cities to show which is the more enterprising. The fact that the water supply of New York City is liable to be insufficient for its own use, gives Chicago the advantage to start with. This, with her western push, will no doubt enable her to secure the fair.

MICHIGAN is able to furnish its quota of prize fighters as well as murderers. It will be interesting to compare the result of prize fighting in Michigan with the penalty for a similar offence in Mississippi. Will the participants go to jail, or will they be let off with a light fine in the shape of bail? THE REGISTER is much mistaken if the law breakers in Michigan do not pay the full penalty of the law.

THIS time it is OWOSPO that takes a half-pyge advertisement in the Sunday Free Press to "boom" the town. Ann Arbor will come in on the home stretch as it usually does, and take any prize that may be offered. The efforts of Detroit to have our hospitals removed to that city and its failure in the attempt shows very conclusively that Ann Arbor can rise to the emergency when occasion requires.

THE State Agricultural College has just had its annual commencement. There were 43 graduates. It would be interesting and at the same time furnish some valuable statistics if a careful record could be made of the work each of these 43 young people do during the next ten years. It would, we think, show conclusively that the purpose for which the institution was founded is realized only to a very small extent.

KILRAIS will soon be called upon to face the same court which has just passed upon Sullivan. He no doubt begins to think his case is already decided. When, however, he thinks of the silly petitions which both the petit and grand jurors have made for the change in the sentences against Sullivan, he can reasonably hope to escape, as Sullivan no doubt will by forfeiting the thousand dollars bail which he was required to give. Such proceedings are a mere parody upon justice.

His feeling among the English people towards the hanging of Mrs. Maybrick is an unusual one. Usually, the decisions and sentences of Her Majesty's judges and juries are accepted as always being just and a final settlement of the case. The subjects of John Bull seem to be waking up to the fact that even judges and juries are mortal and may make mistakes. Two or three generations from now it may be expected that this truth will be generally recognized in England.

If the citizens of Owosso had waited a week longer before attempting to "boom" the town by an ad. in the Detroit Free Press, they would have been able to have mentioned one more attraction which that city can offer to prospective residents, namely, that of prize fighting. Sullivan and Kilrain need not travel BO far next time in order to have a mill. It will be more convenient to come to Michigan, and then, after the slugging is over to slip across the line into Canada, and thus avoid the officers of the law, and also the bother of a sham lawsuit.

IT is a commendable thing for those who have tar walks to keep them in repair, but those who find it necessary to fence them up while the walks are hardening should think of something else besides the walk they are trying to protect. They should be compelled, if they will not do it without, to place a red light where such obstructions are placed, to warn people against them. Sunday night a gentleman was thrown headlong upon a sticky tar walk on Ann street, by a board which had been placed across the pavement at a point where the electric light is entirely shut off by the shade trees. Some one will be called upon to pay damages if they are not careful about leaving obstructions across the walk during the night.

MAYOR BEAKES' veto message relating to the Gas Company's franchise is an ably written document. Evidently the mayor has looked up the matter carefully, and prepared himself to sustain his position. By so doing he has made it possible for the citizens of Ann Arbor to obtain gas twenty per cent. lower than they could have done had he agreed to the resolution passed by the council two weeks ago. For this he deserves the thanks of our citizens. A similar stand in the interest of the taxpayers taken in regard to the city printing would have been even more commendable.

THE location of the University hospital is still an unsettled question so far as the people of Ann Arbor are aware. The probabilities are that the committee appointed to look up a suitable location will report in favor of some one of the sites offered west of Main-st., at least the offers coming from those in the western part of the city seem, so far as THE REGISTER is able to learn, to strike the committee most favorably. Perhaps the more liberal offers coming from that direction may have more influence than some people think for.

THE great cry of the Maclean faction has been that the medical department would greatly diminish in numbers in case the hospital remained here and Drs. Maclean and Frothingham should leave the institution. Figures talk quite differently. The enrollment to-day for the coming year is fifteen per cent larger than at a corresponding date last year and is constantly increasing. If this is the sort of ruin to which the department is doomed by the changes, it is a pity that there are not some other professors who need bouncing. The University can afford any amount of such ruin.

Tin: readiness with which people become indifferent to real danger is, at times, truly amazing. Had the suggestion been made six weeks ago that the South Fork dam above Johnstown, Pa., would be rebuilt it would have called forth a perfect storm of criticism. Now, even before the relief committee has finished its work, it is coolly proposed to rebuild the dam above the city. It would not be surprising if, a year from now, with the lake full of water, the people of Johnstown should be warned of danger, little heed would be paid to the warning. Such peculiarities of human nature are difficult to explain.

THE judgment which the Mississippi Judge passed upon Sullivan has the right ring about it. If we could hear of more such judgments being passed in that section of the country, and of their being carried out, the outlook for the South would be more hopeful. The course of the jurors and the citizens in petitioning the Judge to change his sentence shows, however, that the Judge is not likely to be sustained in his course by the honorable citizens of Mississippi. The admission of Sullivan to bail after having been convicted, and at a ridiculously small bail at that, appears very much as if the whole thing were a farce after all.

If the Detroit Exposition does not succeed it will not be because of a lack of advertising. The managers seem to understand the merit of the free use of printer's ink. The indications are that the Exposition will be a complete success in every respect. There is an immense amount of money being put into the undertaking and it is proposed to make it not only worthy of Detroit, but of the country as a whole. A visit to the grounds and an inspection of the buildings, now nearing completion, will certainly convince one that the Exposition will be all that has been claimed for it, even if it does not surpass what the newspaper reports have led people to expect.

THE shooting of ex-Judge Terry by Deputy Marshall Nagle removes another, and one of the last, ante-bellum "fire-eaters." His career has been an unenviable one. His notoriety was due to his murder of Broderick, for it was nothing less than murder, rather than to his ability as a judge. His marriage with the woman Hill, showed only too plainly the character of the man. His wife seems to be a woman after his own heart—a desperate character and an adventuress. Terry's attack on Judge Field was in all probability due as much to her malice as to Terry's enmity toward the Judge. There can be no doubt that Terry and his wife were a hard lot. It is scarcely to be supposed that any charge which may be made against Nagle can be sustained; at least it is to be hoped that he will not be held responsible for obeying the reasonable orders of his superior.

POSTMASTER GENERAL WANAMAKER is considering the question of doing away with Sunday mails. There are no doubt two sides to this important question. The arguments, however, seem to be principally on one side. Looking at it from a purely economic standpoint only, there is much that may be said against Sunday mails. Every prominent physician in the land will say that the American people are living too intense a life, and at the same time neglecting to take a sufficient amount of rest. A compulsory cessation of business, such as would result from the inability to secure mail on Sunday, would without doubt be fraught with good results to a large majority of the people; another advantage is that it would afford much needed rest to the thousands of mail clerks who, on account of Sunday mail, scarcely know what the Sabbath is. The advantages of such mails are certainly small when compared with what can be said against them. Still it is very doubtful if any change will be made. There are so many people so anxious to increase their share of the "almighty dollar," that we may expect to hear a vigorous protest should it appear that there is a possibility of a change.

LATEST COUNTY NEWS.

Whitmore Lake.
The fall term of school commenced Monday. Steamer Lizzie Payne will be entirely remodeled before another season.

Rev. R. D. Robinson will preach at a camp meeting at Brighton and at the north Hamburg Sunday school institute next Sunday.

The T. & A. Ry. Co. will sell tickets to the Lake and return for one fare on the day of the farmers' picnic. No pains will be spared to make Whitmore a greater attraction that day than ever before.

A large company from the 5th ward, Ann Arbor, came to the Lake on hay racks last Friday evening, and they came for the sole purpose of enjoying themselves to the extent of possibility. They chartered steamer Oceola and took a trip upon the water. The boat was beautiful lighted and fireworks were not sparingly used. The Lake house and grove were made the places of attraction by torch lights and Chinese lanterns. After their ride the company danced at the Lake house.

Sunday last seems to have been a day for accidents in this vicinity. Fred M. Dodge and mother were driving on the east side when their horse became frightened and turning quickly threatened to throw them down the steep lake bank. This was avoided but the horse ran against a tree, throwing Mr. Dodge and his mother from the buggy slightly injuring both of them, and demolishing the buggy. When returning from church, John McMahon and his sister were thrown from their buggy and the former quite severely injured.

Gen. Sleaven, city missionary, J. Cooper Price, superintendent, and the teachers of the Adams street mission school, together with 550 of the children of the mission, look advantage of Mr. Ashley's generosity and visited the Lake Monday. All ages, sizes and races were represented, and everybody by his appearance showed that such treats are not numerous among these people. Some of the people brought their lunches with them, but at least half of them were more than abundantly supplied by the liberal people of this vicinity. General Sleaven publicly expressed the gratitude of the excursionists for the favor shown them, and made the extraordinary offer to our young people, and especially to our barber, that if they would come to Toledo he would marry them free of charge.

Dr. Raymond has located in Detroit. The M. D. P. A. are billed for races Aug. 24.

Miss Allie Harper will leave in a days for the north.

Mr. and Mrs. Armitage have returned from their visit.

Miss May Reynolds has returned from her Saginaw visit.

There are several fine trotting horses owned near Milan.

Mrs. L. Clark has returned from her eastern trip much refreshed.

Died, Aug. 20, Marie, infant daughter of Harry H. and Belle Zimmerman.

Clarence Reynolds has returned to Campbell City after a short visit home.

Several of the young people of Milan took in the excursion to Whitmore Lake Sunday.

Miss Lena Blinn left for Unadilla Tuesday evening to visit her sister, Mrs. Chas. Case.

The I. O. O. F. of Milan turned out in goodly number to attend the excursion to Presque Isle.

The agricultural society elected a new manager this week, Mr. L. Allen succeeding Joel Marble.

The most noticeable in the Milan wants is the want of rain. Vegetation is all drying up for the want of it.

Mason Long preached to a large audience Sunday evening. His talk was good and we wish him God-speed.

Died, Wednesday, Aug. 13, of cholera infantum, Hazel Eugenie, infant daughter of Alvo W. and Leofie Reynolds.

Married, by Rev. John Caster, Aug. 13, Mr. James Pawline of Newago Co. and Mrs. Clara McLanahan of Milan.

The Milan band left Tuesday to take part in the tournament at Monroe. They looked well and played well and taking all in all they are an honor to our village.

The reunion of the 16th Michigan infantry takes place in our progressive village the 24th. The G. A. R. and W. R. C. and the S. of V. will treat them to a free dinner. An interesting camp fire will be held in the evening.

Mills Brothers contemplate exhibiting fifteen or twenty head of Holstein cattle at the state fair and the Detroit exposition.

LITERARY NOTE.

Theodore Child has written for the September number of Harper's Magazine an article upon "American Artists at the Paris Exhibition," illustrated with twenty engravings—nearly all full pages—from paintings by Whistler, Dana, Sargent, Harrison, Hitchcock, Melchere, Gay, Knight, Stewart, Pearce, Weeks, Reinhart, Mosler, Miller, Beckwith and Thayer. Mr. Child does not hesitate to say that the American Fine Art section at the Universal Exhibition was "one of the strongest and most interesting of all the foreign departments." He continues: "To justify this affirmation by comparisons would be useless. There is no common measure applicable to works of art. The important fact to be noted is that in 1889 America boasts an army of artists whose names are cited in company with the most illustrious, and that men like Whistler, E. A. Abbey, W. T. Dana, and John S. Sargent can hold their own brilliantly in a palace of art where the exhibitors, besides the great Frenchmen, are masters of the eminence of Munkacsy, Adolph Menzel, Herkomer, Orchardson, Madrazo, Boldini, and Alfred Stephens.

The Tauderbilt System of Railways. Few persons have any conception of the magnitude of interests covered by the above title, and very few, even among the railway fraternity, are aware how fully this vast system occupies the field in which it is located; but if you will take a map, and trace out, first the New York Central & Hudson River; second, the Boston & Albany; third, the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern; fourth, the Michigan Central; fifth, the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis (formerly the "Bee Line" and "Big Four") Railroads, you will be impressed with the wonderful foresight of the men who designed and executed the plan to operate under a uniform policy, and practically a common control, a system of railways that should furnish unsurpassed transportation facilities to the great commercial empire outlined above, and a trip over this grand aggregation will convince the most skeptical that the Vanderbilt system of railways, of which the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad is the main stem, traverses the very heart of the business portion of this continent, touching, either directly or through its immediate connections, all the important commercial centers of the country, and offering to health, pleasure and business travel facilities that are not equalled by any similar institution in the world.

An edition of one hundred thousand copies of a very neat little pamphlet bearing the title at the head of this article has just been issued by the American Bank Note Company of New York, which contains much interesting information concerning this great system.

He was advertising agent for Sulphur Bitters, which has an extensive sale. The coroner returned a verdict of death from heart disease. His body will be sent east immediately.—Cin. Commercial.

FATAL FLAMES. A Largo Tenement House In New York City Burned.

Nine Persons Lose Their Lives and Several Others Are Badly Injured—A Scene of Terror—The Fire Probably of Incendiary Origin.

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—Nine persons were either burned to death or smothered early Monday morning by a fire which broke out in the kitchen of Snyder's restaurant on the store floor of a five-story tenement building at 806 West Seventh avenue, and several others were injured. Snyder, the keeper of the restaurant, has been arrested on suspicion of causing the fire. A policy of insurance for $10,000 on his stock was found in his possession, and one of the employes states that he found fat oatered over the floor of the restaurant.

William Glennon 60 years, burned to death; Nellie McGeehan, 80 years, smothered to death; Mary Walla, 31, smothered; Jane Wells, 4, smothered; Thomas Wells, 2, smothered; Bertha Lusia, 40, burned to death; William Moore, 7, burned to death; Jane Jeffrey, 69, smothered; Annie Lyons, 45 years, smothered. William Glennon, Jr., and John Glennon were badly burned and are at the hospital. The fire was discovered by two policemen, who forced an entrance into the burning building.

There was no sign of life in the building and the officers hurried from one door to another to arouse the inmates. Murmurs at first were heard, then a buzz of many voices, which finally changed into a wail of terror and agony from men, women and children, struggling for their lives in the death-trap.

Fire escapes leading from the burning building to the as yet untouched tenement next door were BOUO filled up with half-naked people crazy to reach the street. In the meantime the fire department had arrived and was beginning work on the flames, and the assisting in rescuing the frightened inmates.

The flames were extinguished easily enough by the firemen, and the people in the fire escapes were landed safely. Not one person escaped down the stairway, and the names of the few who tried it are found in the list of the dead printed above. The search for the dead was begun as soon as possible. The first body found was that of old William Glennon. The remains were discovered by the side of the bed in his room on the second floor. He had risen to fly with his sons, but his old legs were not nimble enough, and he perished. The boys were taken to the hospital. They were badly burned on the feet, caused by walking on the hot iron bars of the fire-escape. In the rooms of the Wells family was a sight which can not be easily forgotten. In the middle of the floor knelt the mother, Mary Wells, and in her dead embrace was her children, Jane and Thomas. They had been (mothered, mercifully enough, and not a burn or blister defaced the pallor of their countenances.

Under False Pretenses.

By EETT WINWOOD

NOW for a last race, Bruno. Tomorrow the romping coutry boyden will be transformed into a sedate city girl. Only think of it! Ready, old fellow, offwego!" It was a sight to stir one's sluggish blood—the lovely, laughing girl bounding lightly as a mountain gazelle down the sloping hillside, through the sweet lush grass and red tasseled clover, a great black Newfoundland dog leaping and prancing at her heels.

It was June in New Hampshire, and the setting sun cast slanting shadows across the picturesque Chesterfield hills, touching the far off mountain peaks with rose and gold, a shining aureole. Down where the purple shadows were already deepening and darkening lay a lovely lake, gleaming like a great soft opal on Mother Nature's breast.

At the foot of the hill, where ran the dusty high road, Bruno made a sudden detour from his young mistress' side, and bounding toward an alder thicket emitted a hoarse, sullen growl.

Vera Lyndon stopped short, breathless with running, just as a handsome, fashionably clad young fellow emerged from the leafy covert that had hidden him from view.

At the first movement he made, however, Bruno crouched directly in his path, ready for a spring, lashing his tail furiously, showing his fangs, and ever and anon giving vent to a vicious snarl.

The new comer turned pale under the becoming bronze of his handsome face, "Call off the ugly brute, will you, Miss Lyndon? I believe he would tear me in pieces if I were to meet him alone."

A mischievous smile curled the girl's red lip. It was plain to see that she rather enjoyed the situation.

"Quiet, Bruno—behave yourself, sir!" she cried, seizing hold of the dog's collar. "Aren't you ashamed of yourself? Now take yourself off!"

The faithful creature only slunk back a few paces, and sat upon his haunches, glaring ferociously at the man and still emitting a sullen growl from time to time.

"Strange that Bruno should have taken such a dislike to you, Capt. Haxton. I never knew him to be so savage with any one before."

"It matters little so long as the brute's lovely mistress does not share the antipathy."

Vera Lyndon's dimpled cheeks flushed redder than ever, and the slender little hands, with which she made an attempt to smooth down her wind ruffled hair, trembled perceptibly.

Look and tone were so expressive. No wonder her sensitive heart gave a leap and her pulses throbbed more quickly.

She was an innocent, unsophisticated child. Her little world was bounded by those rugged New Hampshire hills, where she had lived her brief life of seventeen years with a widowed mother.

Into that world Capt. Digby Haxton had come unexpectedly some three weeks before. He was stopping at the summer hotel down on the shore of the little lake. Accident had thrown the young people together in the first place. Of course the gallant captain had made good use of his opportunities.

He was so different from the farmers' sons in the neighborhood, Vera could not help feeling pleased and flattered by his attentions. So handsome, polished, and well dressed! And yet some subtle instinct warned her to beware of him.

"I was on my way to the farm house, Vera," he said, smiling into the girl's blushing face, as he stroked his luxuriant dark mustache. "Is it true, the report that has just reached my ears, that you are going away to-morrow for a long visit?"

"Yes," Vera answered. "My grandmother, Mrs. Wallingford, whom I have never seen, has sent for me to come to Boston."

"Not the rich Mrs. Wallingford?" She did not see the start of surprise he gave, or the eager, questioning look that leapt like a flash into his bold black eyes.

"Yes—my grandmother is a very wealthy woman, I believe. Is it possible that you know her, Capt. Haxton?"

"I spent last winter in Boston, and met Mrs. Wallingford once or twice," he answered, in some confusion. "Isn't it a little strange," he added, after a pause, "that you should be living in this out-of-the-way place when you have a rich relative who might do so much for you?"

"O grandmother never forgave her son for marrying my sweet mamma. She is a proud, haughty, selfish woman, I have been told. Up to the present time she has refused to hold any communication with us. It was a great surprise when she sent for me to come and visit her; but mamma thinks I had better go."

Digby Haxton stood looking at the lovely girl a moment, a curious glitter in his inscrutable dark eyes. She had fairly bewitched him with her pretty face. It would not be a bad stroke of policy to win the wealthy Mrs. Wallingford's granddaughter for his wife.

Suddenly he bent his handsome head, taking Vera's trembling little hand in his warm, strong grasp.

"I shall miss you sadly. It won't seem like the same place when you are gone," he whispered, ardently.

A moment later he was pouring the old, old story into her listening ear. Vera thrilled and quivered under the ardent gaze of those dangerous, dark eyes. Of real, abiding love she knew next to nothing. What answer she might have made to his eloquent pleading it is impossible to say. But all at once Bruno shot past her with an angry snarl and sprang viciously at Haxton's throat. He seemed terribly exasperated. A short struggle ensued. It was all Vera could do, by dint of alternate coaxing and threats, to induce the dog to release his grip.

Capt. Haxton was livid with fear and rage. But he made a mighty effort, and controlled himself. It would have done him good to shoot the vicious brute, only he did not dare.

"Answer me, Vera," he entreated, falling back a step out of harm's way. "Don't let that snarling beast of a dog keep back the confession I long to hear. Say that you love me and will become my wife."

But the girl had experienced a sudden revulsion of feeling. All at once she remembered her gentle mother's warning—for Mrs. Lyndon had never liked Ol' trusted the handsome stranger. Surely the instincts of the two who loved her best could not be wholly astray.

"I—I—am so sorry, Capt. Haxton," she faltered. "I shall always feel grateful for your friendship. But it is useless thinking of any other relation. Good-by. Mamma is waiting for me, and I must go."

With pale lips and cheeks she glided past him, keeping firmly hold of Bruno's collar, and turned into a footpath that led toward a low red farm house, with a straggling orchard stretching away in the rear.

Capt. Haxton's lips had fallen apart in unfeigned amazement. He had anticipated making an easy conquest of this guileless, simple hearted country girl.

"Curse the brute!" he broke out, with a hissing, deep drawn breath. "But for him, I believe, on my soul she would have surrendered. I'll give him an ounce of cold lead one of these days. And the girl—with what an air she declined my offer of marriage! An experienced belle couldn't have done it more coolly. But," a wicked smile creeping slowly onto his lips, "it will be a reversal of the usual order if she slips through my fingers now I have really made up my mind. Mrs. Wallingford's granddaughter! Who would have dreamed of finding such a prize here?"

Excitement brought back Vera's ebbing color as she flew down the narrow path. She had been deeply stirred. The handsome captain was her first real lover, and had begun to figure largely in her girlish dreams.

Now, strange to say, she experienced a sense of real relief that the matter had been so unexpectedly decided.

"Dear old Bruno, you saved me from making a serious mistake, and I thank you for it," she exclaimed, stopping short to breathe her arms about his shaggy neck.

The faithful creature barked joyfully, and began to jump and leap about her, his ill temper entirely gone.

A slender, sweet faced woman stood in the open farm house door.

"Your trunk is packed, dear," she said, fondly kissing her daughter's cheek, "and now we will have this last evening all to ourselves. I have put in my pearl colored Bilk and that Flemish point. And you shall have my pearl brooch and the bracelets to match."

"Oh, mother!" Vera's lips quivered; her blue eyes filled with tears. She knew how highly Mrs. Lyndon prized these treasures—her only ones—and what it must cost her to let them go. The silk was her wedding dress, the jewels a present from her dead husband during the happy period of their honeymoon.

"I wish I had more to offer," the gentle lady said, with a suppressed sigh. "Of course Mrs. Wallingford will think your wardrobe shabby and old fashioned, but we have done our best. Vera, dear," with another deep breath, "I do hope your visit will be the means of softening the proud old lady's obdurate heart. We are very poor—poorer than you dream! And it is wicked to be so hard and unforgiving. Your grandmother ought to do something generous for her dead son's only child."

Vera affectionately kissed the thin, wan cheek.

"I almost hate her for being so cruel to you, little mother. Just because you are only a farmer's daughter! But I will try to forget her injustice and win her love for your sake."

Early next morning the lumbering yellow stage coach drew up in the shadow of the drooping elms growing beside the farm house gate. This was a nondescript vehicle which made daily trips to the nearest railway station, twelve miles away, for the transportation of passengers and a limp leather mail bag—limp because the Chesterfield people were never great letter writers, and there were no large business concerns to call forth an extensive correspondence.

"Going to visit your rich old grandmother, eh?" the genial driver said to Vera, with the cordial familiarity of an old friend. There are no family secrets in these country towns, and the girl's prospects had been discussed at nearly every supper table for miles around, the evening before. "It's high time she sent for you. Her own flesh and blood, as one might say, and she rolling in riches, with only one other relative in the world! Now I hope she'll make amends by adopting you and leaving you all her money."

There was a tearful parting between Vera and her mother; and at last the former was well started on the twelve mile journey over the hills to the little inland city where she would take the train for Boston.

She reached her destination late in the afternoon. The cab stopped before a large house in the Back Bay region, which loomed grandly against the blue gray sky.

Vera's heart beat quickly as she climbed the stone steps and rang the bell. A messenger boy came up just behind her, bringing a yellow envelope.

Vera was conducted through a lofty hall to a reception room whose gold flecked walls, multitudinous mirrors, carved chairs and costly bric-a-brac fairly dazzled her unaccustomed eyes.

A hot feeling of indignation went over her as she gazed around. How many comforts might have been purchased for her poor care burdened mother by the money any one of these elegant trifles must have cost!

But no! selfish, worldly Mrs. Wallingford had never forgiven her son's "low marriage," as she was pleased to term it. All these years, up to the present time, she had ignored the very existence of his widow and orphan child.

"But for the hope of making my little mother's last days pleasanter, I would go away this minute!" Vera thought, her eyes flashing, her breath coming thick and hurried.

The "other relative" to whom the stage driver had referred was her cousin Viola Lyndon, a Baltimore beauty and belle.

Vera had never seen Viola. As the latter was rich in her own right, there could be little community of feeling between the two. But, if justice were done, they would share and share alike in Mrs. Wallingford's large fortune.

"Though that is too much to expect," Vera told herself, "I shall be quite satisfied if grandmother settles a few thousands, that will never be missed, on little mamma. Then she could enjoy life a little and need not work so hard."

At that moment the rich portieres draping an arch at the lower end of the apartment were swept aside, and a strikingly handsome young man came toward her with outstretched hands.

"You are Miss Lyndon," he said, in a mellow voice, smiling down on her in a way that instantly inspired a feeling of confidence and trust. "Welcome to Roselawn. I must, perforce, introduce myself. I am Herbert Falconer. Of course you have heard of me?"

Yes—though she had quite forgotten, for the time being, that there was such a person.

Mrs. Wallingford had been married and widowed twice. Herbert Falconer was her last husband's nephew—therefore no relation of Vera's. Now she distinctly recalled having heard it rumored that the young man was a great favorite of Mrs. Wallingford's, and had long resided at Roselawn.

"A telegram has just arrived from the other Miss Lyndon, your cousin," he said, displaying the yellow envelope left by the messenger boy. "Aunt Wallingford took a sudden whim to send for you both at the same time. Strange as it sounds, she has never made the acquaintance of either grandchild. She wishes to judge between you, and decide which shall be the heir, it may be, with a careless laugh. "But your cousin sends word that she has been unexpectedly prevented from coming."

Vera looked relieved as she glanced wistfully up to the young man's frank, handsome face. She was quite sure Viola must be proud and haughty, and had no desire to meet her.

"May I go at once to grandmother's room?"

"Certainly. She doesn't expect you until to-morrow, but that makes no difference. Come with me, please."

Three minutes later Vera was standing before a wrinkled, yellow old woman in black velvet, whose cold gray eyes keenly scrutinized her from head to foot.

"You have the Lyndon look," Mrs. Wallingford said, graciously, at length. "I am sure we shall get on very well together. I like your dress. Such simplicity is refreshing in these days of ruffles and rich apparel. It might make a difference, only everybody knows you can afford to do as you please in such matters."

Vera gave a little gasp. What did the old lady mean? She had no idea how pretty and lady like she looked in the soft clinging gown of steel colored cashmere, relieved by little knots of scarlet ribbon here and there. Not the least like a country girl!

Before she could recover herself to reply Herbert Falconer had produced the telegram and was reading it aloud.

It was signed, "V. Lyndon," but by some oversight the name of the place from which it was sent had been omitted.

"From that New Hampshire girl," Mrs. Wallingford muttered, half contemptuously, sinking back upon the soft cushions with a sigh of relief.

"Of course," said Herbert, serenely. "Well, I must own I'm glad she isn't coming. No doubt she is a bold, forward creature, with the manners of a savage, who would put me to the blush a dozen times each day. What better could you expect of a child brought up by such a mother? I never forgave the designing creature for entrancing my son into marrying her; though I did think of relenting enough to do something for the daughter. Well, I am sincerely glad to be spared the ordeal. I should have hated the girl because of her origin."

Vera's blue eyes flashed indignantly. She tried to explain—to resent in some way the insult offered her gentle mother—but there was such a choking in her throat she could not utter an audible sound.

"Come, dear, and give me a kiss," she heard Mrs. Wallingford say, coaxingly, in the midst of her tumultuous excitement. "I have taken a real fancy to you, just as I expected. An old woman like me feels the need of some one to love and lean upon. You and I will be all the happier for being spared the affliction of this country cousin's society."

Vera flung her hands over her face, and held them there a moment. Like a lash came a sudden thought that made her head whirl and her heart throb faster than ever.

Mrs. Wallingford was a woman of violent, deeply rooted prejudices. She seemed willing enough to take Viola to her heart. Why not profit by the very natural mistake that had been made—assume her cousin's identity, be Viola until she had won her whimsical grandmother's love?

"The deception is of no harm to me," she reflected. "Of course I shall disclose the truth as soon as my purpose has been accomplished. If I could only bring this proud old lady face to face with my sweet mamma, how quickly she would feel ashamed of her silly dislike!"

When Vera raised her head at length, Herbert Falconer was gazing at her curiously. Not even attempting to analyze that look, she touched her lips to Mrs. Wallingford's wrinkled cheek. Somehow thoughts of her dead father stirred her strangely.

"Only be kind to me, and I will always love you, grandmother," she said, tremulously.

The mistake had been allowed to pass unrectified, and retreat from her anomalous position was no longer possible. But when she found herself alone in her elegant boudoir, with bath and dressing room attached, she walked restlessly about, scarcely deigning a glance at her luxurious surroundings.

"I can never, never keep up the deception! I shall betray myself a dozen times each day. O why, why did I make the attempt?"

But it was easier than she would have believed. She had acquired many graces and accomplishments in her country home. Her dress was always so neat, pretty and becoming one never thought of the material, but only noticed the effect.

And Mrs. Wallingford had not the faintest suspicion that this lovely, lady like girl was the simple country maiden she had secretly made up her mind to dislike.

It was astonishing how quickly a week flew by—the happiest Vera had ever experienced. Had she thought to analyze her feelings she must have realized how much Herbert Falconer had had to do in causing the days to pass so very pleasantly.

There was only the fact of the false part she was playing to mar her perfect happiness. How she hated herself now for that weak yielding to temptation!

"Everybody is so good and kind to me I shall never have the courage to confess the truth," she often moaned in the solitude of her chamber. "How shall I ever be able to persuade grandmother it was all the impulse of the moment, and not a deliberately laid plan? What will Mr. Falconer think of me when I tell him I am not Viola—only poor, despised Vera? And a vivid crimson would suffuse her cheeks!"

One evening Mrs. Wallingford sent her into the conservatory to gather a few roses, her favorite flower. The fragrance breathing bower was dimly lighted. As Vera glided under the trailing green arches she heard the sound of suppressed voices in a shadowy corner. These suddenly ceased at her approach a glass door opening on the terrace closed sharply, and Ann Briggs, one of the maids, a bold, forward girl, glided out of the obscurity.

"What are you doing here?" Vera demanded, struck by the maid's evident terror and guilty looks.

"I came for this," Ann stammered, displaying a crimson blossom she had snatched from one of the potted shrubs in passing.

"You were not alone. I heard voices. Some one has just gone away. Mrs. Wallingford would be greatly displeased if she knew you received visitors here."

Words of denial were upon the girl's lips, but she thought better of it, and did not utter them.

"My brother saw me through the window, while on his way to the kitchen door, and stopped long enough to deliver a message," she answered, insolently tossing back her head. "Go, tell my mistress, if you like, Miss Lyndon. I don't imagine she will think I have committed a capital crime."

Vera instinctively distrusted the girl. Something told her she was both cunning and unscrupulous. Of course she was keeping the real truth back. But it would be wiser, perhaps, to overlook this transgression.

"See that you are not guilty of a second offense, and I shall not betray you," she said, hastily gathering the roses for which she had come, and turning to retrace her steps.

Just then a suppressed sound caused her to look quickly around. She saw a masculine figure rise suddenly from the shrubbery beside the terrace door, and hurry across the lawn. The man's hat was drawn over his eyes, but Vera caught a momentary glimpse of his face in the moonlight.

"Capt. Haxton! Can it be possible?" she murmured, reeling giddily backward against one of the pillars, as if struck a sudden blow.

stranger. My imagination exaggerated a passing resemblance."

But she was absent minded and ill at ease all the rest of the evening. Once or twice it WM on her lips to ask Mrs. Wallingford if she remembered Capt. Haxton, but she refrained. Such a question might lead to explanations that were better postponed.

A Good Appetite. Is essential to good health; but at this season it is often lost, owing to the poverty or impurity of the blood, derangement of the digestive organs, and the weakening effect of the changing season. Idleness Is a Dangerous Fault in the kidneys. When inactive they speedily fall into disrepair. Those obstinate and fatal maladies, Bright's disease and diabetes, ensue with terrible certainty upon the inaction of the organs affected. Catarrh of the bladder, enuresis, gravel and strangury are also to be apprehended from a partial paralysis of the bladder, of which weakness and sluggishness are the causes. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is a fine tonic and promoter of activity for the renal organs, and one which can be relied upon to afford them the requisite stimulus without exciting them—an effect to be feared from the unmedicated alcoholic excitant of commerce. A further beneficial effect of the Bitters, by renewing activity of the kidneys, is to enable them to drain from the blood in its passage through them, impurities productive of rheumatism and dropsy. Nervousness, fever and ague, constipation and dyspepsia are conquered by the Bitters.
