

A DEMOCRATIC ROW.

MARTIN J. CAVANAUGH'S ELECTION.

A Big Fight in the Democratic Ranks Over the Division of the Spoils.—A Strong Effort to Defeat Cavanaugh but he Secured the Plurality.—Secretary of the Board of School Examiners.

Brotherly love and quiet doth not prevail in the democratic camp in Washtenaw county. In fact the very opposite proves to be the case and the air is filled with threats of vengeance upon the heads of several leading democrats, and upon the judge of probate and members of the Board of School Examiners in particular.

The nice little fight grows out of the election of Martin J. Cavanaugh as secretary of the Board, one of the best paying offices in the county, the salary being $1,500 per year and the duties of the office very light.

Cavanaugh's election has been almost certain for several weeks past, his law partner, M. J. Lehman, and the judge of probate having pledged themselves to support him some time ago. As the Board consists of only three members this assured his election. Cavanaugh was a candidate last year but was not elected. At the last democratic county convention he made a speech which caused some feeling at that time and made him enemies among the leaders of the party, and they thought to pay him off at this time by opposing his election to this office. But it didn't work, the board meeting Tuesday morning and choosing him unanimously.

Life was made a burden for Judge Babbitt and Arthur Brown, Monday. Cavanaugh's opponents had set upon this day to desert themselves and enter their protests against his election. Senator Gorman of Lyndon, Representative Gregory of Lima, John Gillan of Saline, John Ryan of Northfield and Jacob Knapp of Freedom all came down and besieged Babbitt and Brown for the sake of peace and harmony, not to elect Cavanaugh. Manchester was represented by a petition signed by the leaders in that vicinity. The faithful of this city was represented by J. F. Schuh, Mayor Beakes, M. Brenner, M. Stabler, T. F. Hutzler, E. B. Norris and a number of minor lights. They entreated, begged and threatened each of those to whom was left the matter of filling the position. Brown was notified that his chances of ever being county clerk would be ended should he vote for Cavanaugh. They talked of political deals being made at the expense of the party. But all arguments were of no avail and Cavanaugh was elected, thus giving two of the most lucrative offices in the county to the members of the same firm, a division of the spoils which causes the hungry democrats to howl. "Let the merry dance go on."

THE FIVE REGIONS.

Our Correspondent looks Down Into the Bottomless Pit.

Zigzagging back and forth up, up, up and the top is yet above us. We can see the smoke pouring out and hear the belching within. We cross a plain of yellow sulphur, the air is stifling and we are forced to hurry. Climbing almost straight up toward the top for six hundred feet or more we reach the edge of the present grate! The ground is so hot one can stand still but a moment. Passing around a little to the right and keeping close to our guide we were presented to the whole panorama of inferno at once. Peering over the edge of the grate we could see the white sulphur smoke rolling up like clouds from the bottomless pit just in front of us. A moment of comparative silence and then a long, loud roll of thunder, then a shower of cinders and molten stone thrown into the air far above our heads. We had to watch closely that none of these cinders struck us. A period of silence for about a quarter of a minute and then another belching forth of molten matter. It now got too hot for us and we were obliged to descend a short way down, but before doing so I gave the guide two raw eggs which I had carefully carried all the way from Pompeii. The guide took them scooped out a hole in the lava where we stood and laid the eggs in it. We waited about a minute, I should say, and he pronounced them "done", took them on a paper to a cool spot and eddoyed the Vesuvius roaster's work very much. The eggs were done to a turn and with salt were much relished after so hard a climb. Resting on the softest cinder we found we took in the view which lay spread out at our very feet. There was the sea, the bay and five cities dotting the coast. Pompeii lay nestled among the vineyards, the ancient city, but half excavated, looked like a huge brick kiln before the bricks are burned. From our point of view eight cities could be seen in the valley below and far beyond stretched the Appenines, receding from the shore to join the main chain on the borders of Campania. From where we were we could plainly see the old crater of Vesuvius and the breach made during that famous eruption of 79 A. D. when Pompeii was buried. The crater then was four times as large as now. Seven o'clock came and we began the descent, a much easier task than the ascent. Vergil says "the descent to Avernus is easy (est facile). If he had had Vesuvius in mind he would have said the ascent to Avernus is hard, "hie labor eat."

We descended by a more direct path than the one going up. Jumping from foot to foot in the loose cinders, which would elide along with us and send us much further down than our mere jump would. This was exciting and needed cool nerves; for if one foot became in any way entangled a fall head long into the rough cinders would be the result. We stopped for breath and air, for the heat was continually pouring from the sides of the volcano. Looking back we saw the bright stream of lava issuing from the crevasses of the mountain not far from where we had been standing. We could not see it before because the sun had been shining. It was now fast growing dark and the fires in the volcano could be plainly seen. A perfect river of fire flowed from the mountain and crackling cinders rolled down the steep sides into the valley below. The darker it got the finer was the appearance of the lava stream which looked for all the world like an immense forest. No wonder Vulcan hung around Olympus and let his Cyclops do the work, forging armor for gods and heroes. I think Vulcan showed good taste in this regard at least.

After one half hour's precipitous descent we reached the horses. Mounting them we began the sliding process on them also. The slow pace we had complained of in coming up was just what was needed in going down. The guide riding behind would cry "Arrant!" and the pace was quickened. Another hour's riding brought us to the main road and in one half hour more the horses brought us up before the hotel. It was 9 o'clock. We had made the ascent in 6 hours and returned unscathed. A good supper and a tip for the guide made us all happy. We turned in for the night vowing that we would never go any nearer the lower regions than that. We had had all we wanted and were entirely satisfied. Such a trip is worth doing once in one's life time and once only. This was our aenusus a verno.

TRAVELER.

August Crop Report.—The Michigan crop report of August makes a better showing than the report of the previous month. Reports were received from 89G correspondents, representing 670 townships. Of these reports, 614 are from 411 townships in the southern counties, and 147 from 132 townships in the central counties.

The average yield of wheat per acre is estimated as follows. In the southern counties, 31 and 81-hundredths bushels; in the central counties, 12 and 70-hundredths bushels; in the northern counties, 14 and 32-hundredths bushels. Besides these, 282 correspondents in the southern counties, and 18 in the central counties have reported the result of actual threshings. The number of jobs reported threshed in the southern counties is 899; acres, 15,177; bushels, 259,805, an average of 17 bushels per acre. The number of jobs reported threshed in the central counties is 47; acres, 449; bushels, 7,102; an average of 16 bushels per acre.

The wheat crop of this year will grade low. In response to the condition in the southern counties, 32 report "good," 239 "average," and 283 "bad." A few pieces of wheat were cut as early as July 4, although the general harvest did not begin until a week later. Reports have been received of the quantity of wheat marketed by farmers during July at 417 elevators and mills. Of these 558 were in the southern counties, which is 62 per cent, of the whole number. The total number of bushels reported marketed is 706,558, of which 682,988 bushels were marketed in the southern counties. About 63 per cent, of the crop of 1888 has been marketed as follows: Total crop, 23,581,504 bushels; Reported marketed to Aug. 1, 15,604,084; seed and bread of farmers, 7,650,000; balance on hand, 327,420.

Data are estimated at 36 bushels to the acre in the southern counties. The condition of corn is lower, showing only 68 per cent, of an average crop. Potatoes show 95 per cent, of a crop, meadow and pastures, 97 per cent., clover 98 per cent., hay 91 per cent., and apples 73 per cent. In Washtenaw county the estimate of crops is as follows: Wheat 13,450 bushels per acre; corn 70 per cent.; oats 38 bushels per acre; potatoes 94 per cent.; hay 85 per cent.; apples 83 per cent.

The reports from 16 of the 25 elevators and mills in this county show the following: Wheat marketed in July, 21,912 bushels; marketed in June too late for report, 25,079 bushels; marketed in 11 months, 725,420 bushels; marketed since Aug. 1, 1888, 772,411 bushels.

They Don't Go.

The committees from the common council and Business Men's Association held a joint meeting and appointed H. J. Brown as a special committee to communicate with H. W. Ashley, general manager of the T. & A. A., in regard to the date on which the company would furnish a train. Judging from the tone of Mr. Ashley's reply there is a hitch in the arrangements and our citizens will not have the pleasure of the trip to Cadillac as proposed. Mr. Ashley's letter is as follows: H. J. BROWN, ESQ., Ann Arbor, Mich.: DEAR SIR: I have your letter of the 23d Inst. I regret that Mr. Paisley should have allowed himself to make such a suggestion. It has been our practice to give free excursions to the citizens of the town into or through our roads run when they are first opened. We began this when our line was opened to Ann Arbor from this point, and last year brought the business men of Cadillac to the different points along the line south. I could not, however, comply with such a request as your letter contains for reasons which must be obvious to you—very truly, on the road would be justified in making a similar request. Very respectfully, H. W. ASHLEY.

Toledo, O., Aug. 24, 1889.

German in the Ward Schools.

A meeting of a number of prominent citizens was held on Monday evening to discuss the feasibility of introducing the study of German in the ward schools of the city. Ottmar Eberbach presided and a number of persons advocated the measure. It was finally decided to present a memorial to the school board asking that a trial be made. The committee appointed consisted of the following members: E. Baur, C. Geary, T. J. Keech, F. H. Belser and H. Hutzel.

The following communication has been handed in by the committee for publication: There is a movement on foot, emanating from some representative citizens, to introduce German in two ward schools at least. It is proposed to pay an extra tuition for this privilege. Wherever the German has been studied in connection with the English language the experience taught that the study of the English language is more successful and satisfactory.

There is no doubt that such a movement in a University town like ours will be welcomed by many citizens of different nationalities; and outsiders will seek homes at Ann Arbor to avail themselves of this rare opportunity for the benefit of their children. The number of persons visiting Germany for business, recreation, health and especially study, is enormously increasing. A knowledge of the German language therefore, acquired in early childhood, where the difficulty of pronouncing is easily overcome, is a treasure in itself.

Shall Women be Allowed to Vote.

The question of female suffrage has agitated the tongues and pens of reformers for many years and good arguments have been adduced for and against it. Many of the softer sex would vote intelligently and many of them would vote as their husbands did, and give no thought to the merits of a political issue. They would all vote for Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription because they know it is a boon to their sex. It is unequalled as a cure for leucorrhoea, abnormal discharges, morning sickness and the countless ills to which women are subject. It is the only remedy for woman's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers that it will give satisfaction in every case or money will be refunded. See guarantee upon wrapper around bottle.

Under False Pretenses.

By EETT WINWOOD
(CONCLUDED.)

Next day, as she was sitting alone in the back parlor, Ann unceremoniously opened the door and said with a demure drooping of the corners of her mouth: "A gentleman to see you, Miss Lyndon. Shall I show him in here?"

Vera sprang up, trembling with excitement. "No, no! You have made a mistake. The visitor must have asked for your mistress. I have no acquaintances in Boston."

"I think Miss Lyndon will make one exception to the sweeping assertion," interrupted a musical, well remembered voice; and thrusting the maid aside, Capt. Haxton stepped forward with outstretched hands.

Vera sent one quick, frightened glance into his smiling, handsome face. If she had felt any lingering doubts as to the feelings he inspired, they were now set forever at rest. She shrank from his touch with an irrepressible shudder of disgust.

The maid had discreetly withdrawn. "The country lost all attractions for me the moment you went away," Vera's unwelcome visitor said, in a significant tone. "Pardon me for following you so soon. The impulse was so strong upon me I could no longer resist it."

The girl's dismayed eyes flew in the direction of the door. What if Mrs. Wallingford should enter? or Herbert Falconer? This man knew who she really was. He would certainly betray her. And to have the revelation come first from his lips would be ruin.

"Please go and leave me, Capt. Haxton," she cried, clasping her trembling hands. "Go at once. Indeed, indeed I cannot see you here!"

"Why not? I have so much to say to you, Vera."

She did not wait to hear it, but flew past him to the door, her one desire to escape as quickly as possible from his hated presence.

He was too late to intercept her. Livid with disappointment and rage, he could only call out, as she fled wildly up the staircase:

"I won't be baffled like this! You must appear some time and place when and where you are willing to grant me an interview."

Vera sped on to her own room without replying. Locking the door, she flung herself on the couch, where she wept and sobbed miserably for many minutes.

"O what shall I do? I can't have that man coming to Roselawn. Something tells me he is not an acquaintance of whom grandmother would approve. And just now I would not for the world do anything to offend her. At the very least, he would expose the deception. Indeed he may have done that already!"

She started up in affright at the thought; then fell back again, weeping more bitterly than ever.

Her apprehensions were somewhat allayed when she stole timidly down stairs an hour or so later. Mrs. Wallingford greeted her just as usual.

The respite was of brief duration. The old fears returned with redoubled force the next time she met Ann Briggs. The girl's manner, with its curious blending of insolence and patronage, told her plainly that her secret was known to one inmate of the house.

Of course Digby Haxton had told her; and, if so, the two were allies.

"I will go to grandmother and make a full confession," she resolved. "There is no help for it now. But not today. I feel half sick—I am not equal to the effort."

The following afternoon she was in the back parlor with Mrs. Wallingford. Vera looked pale and nervous—she had made up her mind to improve the opportunity and clear her guilty conscience.

Just as the words were trembling for utterance the door bell rang sharply. Footsteps crossed the hall. She heard voices—Herbert Falconer's and the sweet, silvery tones of a woman.

"This is wholly unexpected, Miss Lyndon." It was Herbert who was speaking. "Aunt Wallingford had given you up. But, of course, she will be delighted that you changed your mind at the last moment."

Vera's heart gave a fierce, frightened bound, as if it would leap out of her body. She fairly held her breath.

"I was detained by the dangerous illness of a friend," the velvet soft voice answered.

"Your cousin from Baltimore has been with us a little over a week."

"My cousin from Baltimore?" The inflection of surprise was very marked.

"I refer to Miss Viola Lyndon. Perhaps you were hardly aware of her existence? It is such a long distance from Maryland to New Hampshire! And the fortunate few generously endowed with this world's goods are rather apt to neglect poor relations."

A cold perspiration broke out thickly upon Vera's forehead and around the corners of her mouth. She waited breathlessly for the words that would expose the fraud, but they were not spoken.

The new comer, the real Viola Lyndon, had shifted her position, and was now visible through the half open door. A proud, haughty looking lady with blonde hair and cold blue eyes. Her beautiful red lips opened to speak, but they closed again without an audible sound. An inscrutable expression crossed her fair face.

Evidently Miss Viola Lyndon was a young lady gifted with wonderful nerves and rare self control. She entered the parlor leaning upon Herbert Falconer's arm. Mrs. Wallingford barely touched the slender gloved hand she extended.

"You are Vera, I suppose?" the old lady said, coldly, her grizzled brows gathered in a frown. "I don't know what led me to invite you to Roselawn; but, of course, you must stay, now you are here. One of the rear rooms will be good enough for you—coming from a dilapidated old farm house destitute of the bare comforts of life. I shall instruct my housekeeper accordingly."

The cold blue eyes flashed a searching glance over (the young girl shrinking and cowering in the velvet depths of the big arm chair, at Mrs. Wallingford's side. She bit her lip. There was a moment's dead silence; then she said, sweetly: "Assign me to any room you please, grandmother. It does not matter."

Then she glided to where poor Vera sat, her face utterly colorless with misery and dread.

"Are you my Cousin Viola? It is an unexpected pleasure to meet you here."

Vera lifted her wild white face in utter bewilderment. She felt sick and giddy; there was a strange ringing in her ears. What did it all mean? That Viola had suddenly made up her mind not to betray her? But why should she show such unexpected forbearance? It was very strange.

Vera could never clearly recall what followed. By and by she seemed to waken out of a nightmare dream to find herself in her own boudoir, walking up and down in a frenzy of excitement.

"What a poor pitiful coward I am!" she moaned. "Any one with a particle of moral courage would have confessed everything the moment Viola appeared upon the scene. Now, because of my silence, I am in a worse predicament than ever. What could have been my cousin's object in keeping up the deception? O how my heart misgives me! In what a web of my own weaving I have entangled myself."

Presently a knock came at the door. Ann Briggs stood there, grinning maliciously.

"Miss Lyndon would like to see you in her room alone, please."

Vera went gladly. Perhaps something could be done to set matters right. Of course that was what the summons meant.

It was a small, shabbily furnished apartment, very different from Vera's elegant suite. Viola had taken several silk dresses from her trunks and flung them over the chairs and on the bed, where they glistened in rainbow beauty. Two or three jewel cases were open on the dressing table. Viola stood in the midst of all this splendor, her thin lip curling scornfully, a vivid spot of scarlet in either cheek.

"You have seen fit to borrow my name and identity," she said, haughtily, "and now I offer this finery for your acceptance. You will need it in order to keep up the character you have assumed."

Vera's face blanched, her eyes filled. Suddenly, with a burst of hysterical sob, she flung herself at her cousin's feet.

"O forgive—forgive me!" she pleaded. "It was very wrong to deceive grandmother; but I meant no harm by it. I only wanted to teach her to love me for myself. You know how unjust her strong prejudices make her! The imposture was a sudden thought—I never expected to keep it up like this."

And she briefly related the manner in which it had all come about. Viola listened attentively, a cold blaze of scorn in her beautiful blue eyes.

"Of course, it was a strong temptation," she said, her voice sounding strangely harsh and pitiless. "Don't think I blame you for yielding to it. My wardrobe is at your service. As I have no objections to changing identities for the present we will keep our secret and let the farce go on."

Vera uttered a shrill little cry.

"But I do not wish it to go on! Nothing could induce me to wear anything of yours. Oh, Viola, let us go down to the parlor this minute and make a clean breast of it."

Viola thrust the kneeling girl rudely from her.

"Hush, you foolish child. Since you have involved me in this deception it becomes my privilege to decide what shall be done. I shall rather enjoy masquerading as the penniless country girl. It will be a new experience—give me an opportunity to learn who values me for my real self. I forbid you to make any disclosure without my permission. Will you accept the loan of the silks and jewels?"

"No, never!"

"As you please," with a shrug of her dainty shoulders. "I am not sure but the role of sweet simplicity suits you best. Now the imposture has been begun, I am resolved to keep it up, however."

Vera begged, wept and pleaded, but Viola remained firm, declaring her wishes should be respected. She had a reason for this course. Under her haughty coldness of demeanor lurked a vein of romance. She thought it would be so delightful to win Herbert Falconer's love in an assumed character; then startle him by the declaration that it was the heiress, not the poor country girl, to whose heart he had been laying siege.

The day wore slowly on. Too miserable to remain quietly in her own room, or join the group in the parlor, Vera glided like a shadow down the stairs and into the grounds just as twilight was deepening into night. She had only been there a few minutes, walking restlessly up and down, with the ruffled hair pushed back from her hot forehead, when a man suddenly confronted her, starting up from beside the path.

"Capt. Haxton!" she cried, involuntarily, and stopped short, as if turned to ice.

"Hush, Vera," he said, almost in a whisper, glancing apprehensively toward the house. "I have been watching for this opportunity since yesterday. It was only out of respect for your wishes that I refrained from asking for you at the door. You must know why I persist in coming here."

Vera put both hands to her side, but answered not a word.

"I love you better than ever, my darling, and wish to renew my offer of marriage. That beast of a dog cannot now come between us to stem the torrent of tender words I would pour into your ear."

He stopped short. This time his eloquence was interrupted by a more formidable adversary than Bruno even.

Herbert Falconer came suddenly round an abrupt curve in the path.

He recognized Vera's companion and stood still, staring at him in breathless astonishment a moment. He had turned quite pale and his breath came quickly.

"You!" he uttered at last, in the deep tones of concentrated fury. "What are you doing here, fellow?"

Capt. Haxton was visibly discomposed. "I came to pay my respects to Miss Lyndon, who is an old friend," he said, attempting an air of easy assurance.

Herbert glanced searchingly from one to the other. Even his lips were white.

"May I ask where you made Miss Lyndon's acquaintance?"

"In Baltimore—last winter," Haxton answered, coolly.

Vera tried to speak—expose the miserable falsehood; but her stiffened tongue refused to perform its office.

Herbert's eyes flashed dangerously. Suddenly he strode forward and seized the gallant captain by the collar.

"You hound! You unscrupulous adventurer! Leave these grounds instantly, and never show your face here again or it will be worse for you!"

One swing of his powerful arm, and Digby Haxton was sprawling in the dust. He picked himself up, muttering curses under his breath, and beat a hasty retreat.

Vera trembled so she could scarcely stand. The stern pallor of Herbert Falconer's face as she stole a quick glance up at it quite terrified her.

"Shun that man as you would a leper," he said, in a hard, cold voice. "He is not fit to stand in your presence."

Vera attempted to speak, but sobs choked her utterances. She submitted passively as he drew her hand within his arm and led her back to the house. She could not even confess how grateful she felt to him for putting an end to the unpleasant interview.

"I trust you will choose your friends more carefully in future," were his parting words, as he left her at the door.

Vera gained her own room, and flung herself prone upon the floor.

"I wish I were dead!" she sobbed, despairingly. "I believe he thinks I really care for that wretch! O this is the bitterest blow of all! Capt. Haxton knows of the deception, and something tells me he will take advantage of it."

She was right, though the next two or three days went by uneventfully.

Under happier circumstances she would have been amused at Mrs. Wallingford's supercilious treatment of Viola under the impression that she was the obnoxious country girl. Nothing Viola said or did found favor in the bigoted old lady's sight. But Vera carried too heavy a heart under the purple folds of her muslin bodice to enjoy the ludicrous side of the little subterfuge.

The marked deference with which Herbert treated her cousin did not help to lighten her spirits. He rode and walked with her, they sang duets together and seemed on the most friendly terms; but the young man had seldom a pleasant word for poor Vera.

"I see how it is all going to end," she pondered miserably. "The truth will come out, Mr. Falconer will marry Viola, and I must go back to poor mamma with grandmother more violently prejudiced than ever. Oh, I wish I hadn't come!"

She shrewdly suspected Viola's motive in keeping her secret, and that made her more unhappy than anything else.

One morning, half a dozen words she overheard while passing the open door of the music room, where Viola sat at the piano with Herbert standing close beside her chair, caused her to pause involuntarily.

"I am afraid my cousin is a deceitful, designing creature." It was Viola's soft, silvery sweet voice. "One of the maids tells me she is in the habit of meeting a lover, a low, disreputable fellow, secretly in the grounds. And I might make still more damaging disclosures concerning her—only the time has not come when I feel free to tell all I have found out."

Vera did not linger to hear the response. One disparaging word from his lips would fail like a blow upon her heart.

That same afternoon Ann brought her a sealed letter. It was from Capt. Haxton, making an appointment to meet him in a public square half a mile away.

"Do not think to escape me," the letter said. "I love you so well I am resolved to make you my wife in spite of all opposition. What else can you do after involving yourself in such a predicament? If you fail to be at the place designated, I shall deem it my duty to proceed at once to Roselawn, and make Mrs. Wallingford acquainted with certain facts of which she is now ignorant."

Vera read the letter twice over. She had grown first red, then pale. Suddenly her resolve was taken. She rang a sharp peal at the bell that brought the ubiquitous Ann in hot haste.

"Since Capt. Haxton is such a friend of yours, you may be willing to take a message to him," she said, calmly, though with flashing eyes. "Tell him I dislike him so intensely nothing could induce me to become his wife. He made a mistake in resorting to threats to accomplish his purpose. Bid him do his worst. The sooner the whole truth is known the better."

Ann looked disconcerted for a moment. Such plain speaking was unexpected. But she only nodded her head, smiled exasperatingly and withdrew.

Afterward, Vera locked the door and sat down and cried as if her heart would break.

Another day dawned and the imposture had not been exposed. Of course Capt. Haxton's was an idle threat. He dared not show his face again at Roselawn.

Oh, for the moral courage to tell Mrs. Wallingford all! But alas! poor Vera remembered having heard her grandmother say she could never forgive or trust a person who had once deceived her. How could she confront her with the humiliating confession after that?

"There is but one course left me," she sobbed. "I will go home without saying good-by to any one, and leave a letter for grandmother explaining everything."

Hardly had she made this decision when she discovered that one of her bracelets was missing—stolen, beyond a doubt. She distinctly remembered having laid it carefully away in its case the evening before. Her mother's treasure—one of the precious pair that matched the pearl brooch!

"Who can have taken it?" she gasped. "O what a misfortune! I cannot go without it. Poor mamma's heart would be broken."

Just then one of the maids—not Ann, but another—appeared at the door.

"Will you please come to Mrs. Wallingford's dressing room, miss? At once! Something has happened."

Wondering at the message and the girl's troubled face, Vera hastened to comply with the request.

Mrs. Wallingford was pacing excitedly about the room. Viola sat in a low rocker, her cheeks flushed, her eyes shining with an unnatural luster.

"I have been robbed!" the elderly lady exclaimed, turning suddenly upon Vera, as the latter entered. "I put five hundred dollars in my desk yesterday, and now it is gone! You were present at the time, and must recall the fact."

"I have been robbed!" the elderly lady exclaimed.

Vera thought of the bracelet, and fell back white and trembling, as if panic stricken.

"I—I—yes—that is"—

Her stammering tongue suddenly grew still. Viola was staring at her with a cold, steely gaze that fairly transfixed her.

"See! her confusion betrays her!" the vindictive beauty murmured audibly. "I knew she was guilty of the theft."

Vera sickened with amazement, horror and anger. But in a moment she had recovered herself sufficiently to speak. Her cousin's meaning was only too evident.

"What do you mean? How dare you suspect me of such a crime? A professional thief must have entered the house. I, too, have been robbed."

"Of what?"

"A pearl bracelet that belongs to my mother."

Mrs. Wallingford started. With ashy face and helpless lips she crossed to the rifled desk in one corner, lifted the lid and took up a gleaming ornament.

"Is this it?"

"Yes. Oh, I am so glad you found it!"

Vera sprang forward with a glad cry and seized the bracelet, actually kissing it in her joy and relief.

All at once she became aware that her grandmother was glaring at her with a fixed, stony expression.

"The bracelet was in the same drawer where I kept the money. How came it there?"

"Let me speak," cried Viola, excitedly, rising from her chair. "It would be wicked longer to hold my peace and screen such a hardened wretch. Grandmother, that girl has basely deceived you! She is Vera Lyndon—I am Viola! I let the farce go on because I pitied her. She is poor, and, of course, wishes to better her condition. Her only hope was to win your love; then you would forgive everything. But she does not deserve the consideration I have shown her. Look at her! Jote that guilty flush! She dare make no denial."

Mrs. Wallingford took a quick step toward the trembling girl, her hand menacingly uplifted.

"Speak! One word. Is the accusation true or false?"

"I am Vera Lyndon," the poor soul faltered, involuntarily clasping her hands. "I did not intend to deceive you in the first place, but Mr. Falconer made the mistake, and I suffered it to pass uncorrected. Grandmother, if you knew all I have suffered, you would freely forgive the imposture. As for the missing money—"

"No more—not another syllable! I refuse to listen to you!" and Mrs. Wallingford brought her clenched fist down upon the table with a burst of rage.

"You are your unworthy mother's own child! Go—leave my house instantly, or I will have you taken in charge! Never show your false face here again."

Quivering with excitement the angry woman swept past into the private sitting room and locked the door.

Viola's blonde face wore a look of malicious exultation.

"Your hopes of inheriting your grandmother's wealth are forever blasted. You had better return to your country home at once; spend your remaining days in obscurity."

Vera made no response. The blow had dazed and almost stunned her. Mechanically, like one in a midnight dream, she put on her wraps in the hall, and, waiting for nothing else, left the house.

She could not remain another moment where such words had been spoken to her—where she was so cruelly suspected. The streets were full of bustling, happy life. Vera walked a long distance, her head in a giddy whirl. On coming to her senses she found herself in a wholly unfamiliar quarter of the city—a shabby, dirty street, where forlorn tenement houses frowned at each other across the way.

Presently a man emerged from one of the dark, noisome alleys, who uttered an exultant cry as he caught sight of her.

"Well met, my dear!" he exclaimed, hurrying up.

Vera uttered a terrified cry. It was Capt. Haxton.

"Let me go!" she panted, struggling to release herself from the firm grip he fastened upon her arm. "How dare you speak to me? I hate you!"

"Not so fast, my dear," laughed the wretch. "You are scarcely in a situation to put on such high and mighty airs. I could hazard a shrewd guess as to what has occurred. See here, Vera, I am really very fond of you. I have quite a sum of money here," slapping his breast pocket. "Five hundred dollars, to be frank. I am on my way to New York. Only come with me, and I'll make you my wife within an hour after we reach our destination."

"You wretch! So you are the thief I will scream for help!"

But there was no need. Though she had heard no sound of hurrying footsteps, a tall, strong figure suddenly appeared beside her, and an arm shot out from the elbow in a well directed blow that laid her persecutor sprawling on the pavement.

"Come this way," said Herbert Falconer's welcome voice; and the half fainting girl felt herself drawn forcibly toward a more reputable neighborhood.

"Never mind that fellow, or his ill gotten gains. We are well rid of him at any price. Do you know, I once feared that you cared for him?"

Vera's lip quivered.

"How could you think that—the cowardly wretch!"

"It matters. I know better now."

Viola could only look up at him in grateful wonder, she was so perplexed. It had all come about so suddenly and unexpectedly.

"Where—are you—taking me?" she faltered at length, as her companion halted to hail an empty cab.

"Back to Roselawn."

"Oh, no, no! I can't go there. You don't know—"

"I am not so blind as you think me," he interrupted, a mischievous twinkle in his handsome eyes. "I returned from a walk ten minutes after you left the house, to find it in a terrible uproar. You had stolen five hundred dollars and fled, your loving cousin declared. I went straight to Ann Briggs and frightened a full confession from her lips. She let Haxton into the house and put the bracelet where it was found. Of course the wretches meant to throw suspicion upon you—leave you to bear the infamy of the crime. But I had been on the alert for some time, and saw through their little game. Vera, you have given me a long chase, and it is a wonder I found you at all."

"Vera!" she repeated, in a startled tone. "You know that secret, too?"

Falconer laughed merrily.

"Certainly, I have known all along which was the country girl! You would never have thought of attempting the imposture if I hadn't put it into your head. I must bear the blame of that. Don't tremble so, darling," slipping his arm about her waist. "There is nothing to fear. You have accomplished your purpose. Aunt Wallingford has learned to love you tenderly—she told me so. And now she is waiting to welcome you home again."

Vera's heart gave a wild throb of gladness, but she trembled more than ever.

That one word, "darling," coming from his lips, was almost too much for her.

When the happy young couple made their appearance at Roselawn, an hour later, Viola saw at a glance how matters stood between them. While Mrs. Wallingford was laughing and crying over them, utterly broken down for once in her life, she stole away and began packing her trunk with an envious heart.

Today pretty Mrs. Lyndon is an honored inmate of the luxurious city home where her daughter reigns as mistress.

Mrs. Wallingford has so thoroughly conquered pride and prejudice she would be at a loss to tell which of the two she loves best.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 29, 1889.

IN another column we publish the recommendations of the Board of Health relative to the necessity of the use of disinfectants. Prompt attention to such things will save the Board the trouble of attending to the matter itself at considerable expense to those neglecting it.

EVIDENTLY some villain has got it into his head to burn Prof. de Pont's house. He may be successful, but the chances are that the officers will also be successful in time, and the rascal, whoever he may be, will be given a formal introduction and have a continued acquaintance with Warden Hatch at Jackson.

THE editors of Chicago have taken it upon themselves to boom that city as the proper place in which to hold the exposition in 1892. The Few York advocates may now expect some lively competition. It is an exceedingly odd day when the Chicago press does not succeed in doing what it sets out to do, so that the sooner New York throws up the sponge the more easily it will be able to do it gracefully.

DETROIT, even had it tried, could not have hit upon a better scheme for advertising its exposition than that indirectly obtained by the national editorial convention now in session there. Every one of the large journals represented there will make mention, and favorable mention, too, we believe, of this great enterprise. It would be difficult to estimate the results, but doubtless they will be very considerable.

IT IS commendable to witness the revolt that is being made against the "tipping" abuse. Nowadays one's traveling expenses are increased from fifty to one hundred per cent, by this custom, and one is compelled to fall in line and pay the exorbitant fees or else submit to any amount of ill-treatment from officious servants. But the abuse has been carried too far, and, fortunately for the traveling public, there is some possibility that a day of better things may soon arrive.

IN one thing, at least, St. Louis is ahead of Chicago. This is evidenced by the fact that the citizens are forming a combination against the Chinese laundrymen. The sight of an ordinary Chinese laundry is enough to disgust any ordinary man. An insight into the real methods employed, if people could once obtain such insight, would soon lose such shops the patronage they now receive.

THE Board of Education at Cadillac appreciates the value of a large attendance at their public schools and are liberally advertising the advantages which they are able to offer. By this method the Board hopes to attract foreign pupils, and in this way reduce the expenses of the school, and they will doubtless succeed in doing so. The Board at Ann Arbor realize a goodly sum each year in the tuition of such pupils. The taxpayers would not object if a stronger effort were made to increase this source of revenue to our public schools.

THE meagreness of such which some people exhibit is exceedingly contemptible. It would be difficult to conceive of a meaner spirit than that exhibited by certain people in Detroit who insist that the property of the Art Museum shall be taxed. After liberal hearted citizens have donated large sums of money in order to establish what is purely a public benefaction, it is the height of folly to insist that the property shall be taxed. That is indeed an excellent way to foster such institutions. The Alderman who thinks the law exempting such property from taxation unconstitutional may be right, though we doubt it. He would place himself in a far more favorable light among right thinking people if he would apply his weighty intellect to the work of assisting the honorable Board to which he belongs to make fewer violations of the constitution.

MINNESOTA has fallen into line among the states in which the law against dressed beef has been declared unconstitutional. A strong effort was made to pass just such a law in Michigan, but its advocates could not find a sufficient number of gullible legislators to place such a law upon our statute books. TAX REGISTER said at the time that such an act would be unconstitutional and unjust. Every judge who has had an opportunity to pass upon such legislative enactments has taken the same view and set the law aside. Such an attempt to prevent competition and thus raise the price of such an important article of food is radically unjust and deserves the fate which it has met wherever a legislature has passed the law. It would be just as reasonable to stop by legislative enactment the running of all passenger trains on our railroads so as not to have them interfere with those who wished to carry passengers by the old-fashioned stage coach.

THE horrible "strangling" of one of the four murderers who were hanged in New York City last Friday will be used as an argument by those in favor of the use of electricity in legal executions. It is just such bungling on the part of hangmen that will cause a successful demand to be made in the near future for the use of electricity. A sufficient amount of electricity properly applied will, no doubt, kill, as has been proved time and again beyond a reasonable doubt; but some other features must be taken into consideration. There are very few people who have a sufficient knowledge of electrical appliances, and who would care to act in the capacity of public executioner, to successfully apply it in every case. The result would be that the attempt to use electricity would soon cause a much greater opposition to it than there now is to the present method of execution.

THE movement on foot looking towards the study of German in our ward schools has the support of a number of our German-American citizens. In a city like Ann Arbor there is much that may be said in favor of such a change in the course of study. There is probably no other city in the West where so large a per cent, of the pupils from the ward schools take a high school course, where German is usually one of the regular studies, and where an early training in the language would be of great advantage. Then, too, the large number of German people among our citizens makes it quite necessary for a young man to understand and be able to speak the German language in order to secure a position in many of our business houses. This, considered with the fact that the study of any foreign tongue is beneficial, would seem to indicate that there could be no reasonable excuse for not complying with the request that the study of German be made optional in at least two of our ward schools, especially if those who take up the study are required to pay a reasonable fee for such a privilege. The objection that the pupils are already overworked will be obviated by making the additional study optional with certain others thus leaving the number of studies the same as before. The opposition with which the scheme will meet will be that of the additional expense which will be added to our already heavy school taxes. It is claimed that the fees charged will pay all the extra expense. We are disposed to doubt this, especially for the first year, though they may be mistaken. There is another and much more far reaching educational question which the School Board will be called upon to consider. It is the extent to which this small beginning may grow. If there is any possibility that it may eventually develop into an elaborate system as that which has been adopted at Saginaw, it would be asking too much of our people. Before coming to any definite conclusion about the matter it should be carefully considered, and not rushed through as such things often are. There is no doubt the Board will give this question the attention it deserves, and if they find it possible to give those who desire to have German taught in some of our ward schools, without too much additional expense, it is reasonable to suppose that they will do so.

Amusements.

Gilbert & Dickson's "She" turned people away last evening, and the magnificent production was well worthy of the Urge house. The piece was well cast. The scenic, mechanical and electrical effects were grand. — Memphis (Tenn) Daily Avalanche.

Last night the Gilbert & Dickson Big Spectacular Company commenced its week's engagement at Pope's Theatre, presenting that weird, mystical extravaganza of H. Rider Haggard—"She"—to a large and fashionable audience. Miss Katie Pearson in the title role — Ayesha. She portrayed the part with true artistic ability, and seemed born to rule men, the part fitting her like a glove. Mr. Albert Dickson, as "Leo Vincey," made a favorable impression, as did Harry Gilbert, of "Holly." The balance of the cast is good. The Hot Pot dance caught the house by storm. The electrical and mechanical effects were fine, the scenery magnificent. — S. Louis Globe-Democrat.

At the grand Opera House on Saturday evening, Aug. 31st, the S. Draper Original Mammoth Uncle Tom's Cabin Company, in the dramatization from the work of the celebrated authoress, Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe, will be the attraction. The play abounds in marvellous hair-breath escapes and marvelous sensational events. The Topsy is an exceedingly finished piece of acting, and never fails to convulse the audience with roars of laughter one minute and the next to draw tears, and the two eccentric lawyers, create screams of delight. Uncle Tom, the faithful slave, makes a vivid impression. The Jolly Coon quartette in Plantation Festival, The Tennessee Jubilee Singers in Camp-Meeting Hymns, Glee and Choruses, indicative of the Southern Darkie, "Way Down South," are worthy and attractive features. Jilzit escaping across the Ohio river on the floating ice, and the mammoth Siberian bloodhounds in pursuit, is both thrilling and startling. The scene between Uncle Tom and Eva is touching and pathetic, likewise the death of St. Clair, the brutal Simon Le Gree is greatly censured for his treatment of poor Uncle Tom, but retribution finally overtakes him, and the audience are satisfied. The remarkable natural play will be illustrated by new and magnificent scenery, touching incidents, and charming musical effects. Popular prices will prevail.

Probate Order.
STATE OF MICHIGAN, COUNTY OF WASHTENAW, J. At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Washtenaw, holden at the Probate Office in the City of Ann Arbor, on Monday, the 26th day of August, at the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-nine.
Present, J. Willard Babbitt, Judge of Probate.
In the Matter of the Estate of William H. Dell, deceased.
On reading and filing the petition, duly verified of Jesse A. Dell, praying that a certain instrument now on file in this court, purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased, may be admitted to probate, and that Administration with the will annexed of said estate may be granted to himself or some other suitable person.
Thereupon it is ordered, that Monday, the 23d day of September next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the devisees, legatees, and heirs at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate Office in the City of Ann Arbor, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted: And it is further ordered, that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Ann Arbor REGISTER, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county, three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.
J. WILLARD BABBITT, Judge of Probate.

Read these solid unpurchased testimonials. Call or write for testimonial catalogue.

Mr. ALVIN WILSEY, Dear Sir:

We purchased our Boardman and Gray Upright Piano of you about six years ago. It has never been tuned, never been out of order. No piano could do better.

Yours truly,

Tom. E. Nickels.

Ann Arbor, Aug. 1st, 1889.

From Prof. Francis L. York, of the Ann Arbor School of Music, and Organist at the Church of Our Father, Detroit, Mich.

ALVIN WILSEY, Esq., Dear Sir:

The Boardman & Gray Upright Piano that I purchased of you five years ago has been in almost constant use, much more so than is usual. It wears like iron, and stands in tune remarkably. The B. and G. is a very reliable piano.

Francis L. York.

Ann Arbor, March 7th, '89.

The Boardman & Gray stands unrivaled in the essentials of a first-class piano.

Here presented has points of excellence possessed by no other Road Cart.

BEAT UP READY TO GET IN.

The manner of attaching the spring to the cart so that the weight of the person occupying the seat comes directly over the spring, and the full weight on the axle is an advantage possessed by no other Cart, and does away with the disagreeable "teetering motion" so common in carts where the spring is attached to the shafts.

The Board of Water Commissioners find that $75,000, the sum given them to construct the water works, is insufficient to carry out the extensive system they have begun and have asked for an additional $50,000. Of course a lively system of "kickin'," headed by a certain city paper, has been introduced, and the path of those water commissioners will by no means be streved with roseB nor any sort of thornleB3 flower. But all the same the demands for water in dwelling houses exceed the means of furnishing it at present.

The importance of purifying the blood cannot be overestimated, for without pure blood you cannot enjoy good health. At this season nearly every one needs a good medicine to purify, vitalize, and enrich the blood, and Hood's Sarsaparilla is worthy your confidence. It is peculiar in that it strengthens and builds up the system, creates an appetite, and tones the digestion, while it eradicates disease. Give it a trial. Hood's Sarsaparilla is sold by all druggists. Prepared by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Rt. Rev. Bishop Foley visited Chelsea Saturday and Sunday.

Fraternity grange at Willis celebrated its 16th anniversary on Aug. 19.

Bishop Foley visited Pinckney last Monday, and St. Mary's congregation entertained him right royally.

Every farmer in this county should take a vacation next Saturday and attend the picnic at Whitmore Lake.

The twin children of Mr. and Mrs. U. B. Zrim of Ypsilanti both died last week, being nearly a year old.

George Lockwood of South Lyon has shipped 300 barrels and 25 crates filled with cabbage to Detroit this season.

The Island district schoolhouse in Bridgewater is being re-sided and repaired, making it the finest in the town.

Troubl' has begun for John Fitzgibbons of Wayne. He has been appointed an umpire in the international league.

Milfont wants to be a summer resort. A project is being discussed of overflowing a lot of poor land and manufacturing a lake.

Phoenix lodge F. and A. M. of Ypsilanti is bound to be at the top and is spending $1,000 in overhauling and refurnishing the lodge room.

The South Lyon Picket strikes the key note for booming the town by exempting manufacturing institutions from taxation for five years.

The births in Livingston county more than doubled the loss by death last year, there being 309 births and 150 deaths. A healthy increase.

Al. Travis of Ypsilanti do not care to be deputy marshal of that city any longer and has resigned. James Showers has been appointed in his place.

S. T. Young of Howell celebrated his 80th birthday Aug. 19. A reunion of his family was held, six of the seven children being present with their families.

The officers elect of the South Lyon band are as follow: E. T. Chilson, president; J. C. Odell, vice president; T. H. Curke, secretary; Frank Lamsen, treasurer.

Alonzo VanDyne of Ypsilanti is able to be around again, just recovering from three broken ribs and a fractured collar bone, caused by the caving in of a ditch.

The station agent at Whittaker started out to take a ride with Will Holland after his young colt, last week. By the time the colt had smashed the buggy into splinters the agent wished he had not gone.

The Ypsilanti vigorously protests against a corduroy stone walk that has been laid in front of the Sanitarium. That's all right; the proprietors probably stand in with the shoemakers of the city.

James Maloy, a Green Oak horse doctor, knows more about horses this week than he did a few weeks ago. He put his hand into a horse's mouth to pull out a tooth and the horse shut down on it, taking the nail off his thumb.

The boys near Green Oak have a new method of getting their drinks. They take the rye straw and run it through a clothes wringer, after it has been thrashed, and one farmer has a tubful of the most villainous whiskey ever made.

Howard Moore of Whittaker didn't keep his eye on the handle of the churn while churning butter last week. The crank flew off and struck him in the mouth, cutting it and making it nearly half an inch larger, until a doctor called and put several stitches where it was cut.

Either the hitching posts in Chelsea are weak or the horses are unusually strong. Last Wednesday, E. S. Spaulding's team broke the post to which they were hitched and started for home, but only went a block when they were caught.

Mrs. G. W. Lyous of Stockbridge is not an accomplished acrobat. She attempted to vault over a wheel in getting out of her carriage and might have been fairly successful had not her skirts caught in the wheel, throwing her to the ground and injuring her. When she recovers she will use the steps.

Dr. R. B. Bell of Ypsilanti asks the city council to award him $500 damages because his three-year old boy fell into a hole in the street that was unprotected. He says he wants this amount of cash, and if the council doesn't give it to him he will sue the city. The council laid the matter on the table.

And have you heard the news? That's just now going the rounds? "We've got a little daughter."

And its weight is just eight pounds." Thus spake Brother Nissley of the Saline Observer, and the cause of the effusion is the arrival of an eight pound addition to the editor's family. Our congratulations.

The girls of South Lyon have a good many picnics during the year, but there is one day each year that they have a picnic "all by themselves." Friday, Aug. 16, was the day that it was held this year, and Silver Lake was the place, but as even Editor Chilson of the Picket was not allowed to be present, no report can be given of what happened.

A resolution was passed in the Ypsilanti common council at the last meeting instructing the marshal to see that a certain saloonkeeper obeyed the law. What is the matter? Doesn't the marshal in Ypsilanti dare enforce the law against criminals, or must he wait until the council designates some particular one? Such a resolution looks suspicious.

Now won't the Ypsilanti Sentinel have a chance to get even with the Ypsilanti and Commercial. The "watchdog of the Greek city" has claimed all along that there would be trouble in building the waterworks within the appropriation, and the other papers have claimed that $75,000 was all the taxpayers would be asked for. Now comes the Board of Water Commissioners and asks for an additional appropriation of $50,000 to complete the job. How they dare ask it is a mystery, after one of the papers figuring out recently that the original appropriation would not be used.

Saline recorded four births last week. Plymouth supplies the sparrow-killing air gun from six different manufacturers.

Seven carloads of emigrants from Germany were unloaded at Brighton last week.

The Goodyear house at Manchester is to be rented to two old hotel keepers from Concord.

A wild steer hooked Joseph Lindsey of Dexter last week, breaking a rib and cutting him up.

The school trustees of Dexter are prepared for a cold winter as they have their supply of coal in the bins.

Frank Kennedy, son of the ex-postmaster of Brighton, has been ordained, and celebrated his first mass at his home church last Sunday.

George Miller of Manchester has sworn off throwing stones at dogs. He threw at one but missed it and the stone went through a plate glass window.

Chelsea hackmen will now be obliged to pay three dollars each to the village for the privilege of driving to the depot and watching the passengers walk up town.

The "elixir of life" has been tried on two residents of Saline. Upon one it had no effect while it made the other want to kick over the stove and whip the doctor.

The Northeastern and Oakland Co. Sailors and Soldiers Association and the 8th Michigan volunteers had abig time at their reunion at Pontiac last week. The citizens entertained them right royally.

A little son of Frey Falls, a farmer living near Milan, met with a peculiar and fatal accident recently. He put the tine of a pitchfork into his blouse, and falling down, ran the tine through his throat.

The "young men" of Saline enjoy themselves evenings by carrying off gates and similar deviltry. The village council rises to the occasion and offers $10 reward for anyone caught indulging in that kind of fun.

The following fairs are to be held in this vicinity: At Jackson, Sept. 2-6; State fair at Lansing, Sept. 9-13; Exposition at Detroit Sept. 17-27; at Morenci Sept. 17-20; at Ann Arbor, Sept. 17-20; at Adrian, Sept. 23-27; at Ypsilanti Sept. 24-27; at Chelsea, Sept. 24-26. Our farmers will have their time pretty well filled, if they attend them all.

All the people in Jackson are not liars, and one of the most truthful writes in the Saturday Evening Star about a snake which he caught in Whitmore Lake while fishing through the ice last winter. The reptile was very large and beautifully colored, and when the hook was removed from its mouth coiled itself and sprang fifty feet into the air several times. It then sat down on a chunk of ice and took a lunch with the Jackson man, and after smoking a mild cigar slipped back into the water. This summer it came to the Jackson man's house as a star boarder, and it saves his little girl from drowning every time she falls in the water, lifts pickles out the barrel with its forked tongue, and keeps the lawir sprinkled by filling up on water and spouting it all over the yard, although it acted a little diffident about this last job until the Jackson man removed his keep-off-the-grass sign—Evening News.

Dwi the Earth Really Move? Science says that is dues, but we can not help wondering sometimes if there isn't s me mistake ab out it, when we see how stubbornly certain old fogies clin? to their mis y and antiquated ideas. It was believed once that consumption was incurable, and although it has been clearly demonstrated that it is not, thousands of old time phy-sician< close their eyes and put their hands to their ears and refuse to abandon the theory. But for all that the world moves on, and Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Di-cowery continues to rescue sufferers from consumptives' graves. It is a sure cure for this dreaded disease—and consumption is included in the list—yield to it.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—It is learned upon inquiry that the success of the Chippewa Indian Commission will result in the opening of about 3,000,000 acres of land in Minnesota. In addition to the reservations named the commission is empowered to secure relinquishment of such parts of the Red Lake and White Earth reservations as may not be needed in apportioning to the Indians their several allotments, estimated at 2,250,000 acres. The agreements signed by the Indians must first be approved by the President before it becomes operative.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 34.—The International American congress will meet at Washington at noon October 2, and will be attended by from fifty to sixty delegates, including some of the most distinguished men of Central and South America. It is not expected that the congress will do more than perfect its organization at the first sitting, and it is probable that the reception will be tendered the delegates by the President that evening. The following morning the party will start upon the excursion tendered the foreign delegates by the Government of the United States. The party will leave Washington at 10 o'clock on the morning of Thursday, October 3, and take the Fall River boat at New York that evening. The next ten days will be spent visiting the commercial and manufacturing centers of New England and Northern New York, with a day at West Point Military Academy, and the party will reach Niagara Falls to remain over Sunday, October 13. Monday the journey will be resumed and continued to Chicago, with stops at Buffalo, Cleveland, Detroit and other cities. The trip will extend to Omaha.

CAN'T BE COUNTED.

The Loss of Life by Floods in Chlm* 1000 estimated to Be Estimated.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 25.—The steamer Oceanic from Hong Kong and Yokohama arrived Sunday with late Chinese advices. Further details of the bursting of the Yellow river embankments in the province of Shan Tung, July 22, state that the destruction is widespread. The breach in the river is over 2,000 feet in length and a swift current swept through, Hooding to a depth of twelve feet a large extent of the country lying adjacent. Many houses were washed away, and a dispatch from Chee Foo states that the number of persons drowned is too great to be counted. Ten districts are already submerged, and it is feared many more in the low-lying country south will suffer a similar fate.

THE JOLLY OLD MARINER.

A jolly old mariner sailing the sea. Was roaring a solo and thus thundered he. Our ship is as bold as an eagle on wing. And she carries a cargo that's fit for a king; A cargo that's welcome to peasant or pope. Our ship she is laden with IVORY SOAP.

"I've plowed all the oceans to even' port. To visit all nations and climes is my sport; We carry our goods to the ends of the world. Our trade is announced on our banner unfurled; See! blazoned on pennant from top-mast and rope! We bring to all people the Ivory Soap."

"From Procter & Gamble, my lads, do you mind? We carry a blessing to gladden mankind; For dirt is a foe to the body and soul. As the gleaming of tusk it is glossy and white; The posts all praise it in measure and trope; Hurrah for the advent of Ivory Soap."

"Its bars, like the truth, or a life-saving boat, Ever rise to the top and triumphantly float; As the foam on the wind-treasured billow 'tis light, As the gleaming of tusk it is glossy and white; The posts all praise it in measure and trope; The ocean is thundering—IVORY SOAP."

A WORD OF WARNING.

There are many white soaps, each represented to be "just as good as the Ivory" but they ARE NOT, but like all counterfeits, lack the peculiar and remarkable qualities of the genuine. Ask for "Ivory" Soap and insist upon getting it.

ROMANTIC STORY

OF A GREAT RUSSIAN ARTIST AND HIS WONDERFUL PAINTING.

Konstantin Iakoffski's Immortal National Kulan Picture and How It Was Fainted—Almost the Genius of Insanity—Bow the Czar Lost the Picture.

When Konstantin Iakoffski set himself to the task of painting his famous picture of "The Russian Wedding Feast," he was already a great Russian artist, but not yet world famous. He conceived the scheme of painting a grand picture that should be preserved forever in the imperial art gallery of the Czar as an enduring monument of Russian art. This picture must be distinctively Russian, and at the same time immortal. This was the most difficult task an artist could attempt—to paint a picture that should be both national and immortal. Think over all the immortal pictures in the world, and there are not a dozen that are distinctly national, after you leave the classic works of Greece and Rome. To be national a picture must not only depict men and women plainly belonging to a particular nation, amid a scene that belongs to that nation alone, but also engaged in an action that cannot be found in any other nation—not an act of history either, which is only made national by history. Many paintings are distinctly French, or German, or Italian, or Spanish, or English, by their style, their figures and costumes, and their accessories; but they are not national, because the action they show is not particular to their country, and might happen elsewhere. And to be immortal a picture must, however limited by nationality, appeal to the admiration of all other countries.

Konstantin Iakoffski came in a short time a man possessed by an ALMOST INSANE MANIA.

He dreamed of his picture by night; he wrought at it at all hours; he drew and re-drew, painted and repainted. He shut himself up for long months in his studio, refusing admission to everybody except his wife, and admitting her only when forced by exhaustion and hunger. As the work grew he became emaciated, fierce, sullen, almost mad, consumed by an intense enthusiasm. Finally, however, the picture was completed to the satisfaction of his morbidly critical fancy. Then he admitted his wife to the studio and pointed proudly to this consummate work of his genius. The woman shed tears of joy, because now she hoped to regain her husband's society. The painter fainted from prolonged exhaustion.

The picture was sent to the Czar. The imperial family and the artists called to witness its unveiling were

MORE THAN DELIGHTED with the great work. But the Czar, ambitious to have Russian art take the lead in Europe, sent the picture to the world's art exhibition, then open in Antwerp. There the splendid Russian picture took the admiration of all Europe by storm. It was unanimously voted the medaille d'honneur by the judges—and this award was confirmed by the praises of the artists of Europe—as the greatest painting of modern art.

Then the painting was sold, under the rules. The Czar expected to bid in for the Russian imperial gallery; but an American—Mr. Charles W. Schuman, of New York—overbid the Czar, who wanted money for his armies, and bore off the prize at a fabulous price. In New York Mr. Schuman built an art gallery expressly for this one picture, and he would not allow it to be shown elsewhere for a long time, but at last he yielded to the public wish, and consented to loan his treasure to the Detroit International Exposition, to be exhibited in Detroit at

A COST OF $500 PER DAY, during the time it is on exhibition. Thus the people will have an opportunity to see this great painting. It will be exhibited in the magnificent Art Building of the Exposition, in an alcove by itself, lit by Edison electric lights, as also will Munkacsy's great painting of "The Last Hours of Mozart," owned by Gen. Alger, and H. R. Poore's grand religious painting of "The Night of the Nativity." Elsewhere in the building will be distributed the 350 famous paintings of the American Prize Fund salon, besides innumerable other works of art in marble, bronze, silver, etc.

"The Russian Wedding Feast" is a blaze of gorgeous colors, so blended as to make a harmonious whole. The men and women are all purely Russian types, and so are the room and all in it. No description can give an adequate idea of the grand effect of the grouping and coloring of this magnificent masterpiece of art. It must be seen to be appreciated, and it is appreciated the moment it is seen. The bride in the picture is wonderfully lovely. Her quaint Russian costume and peculiar Muscovite features lend an added piquancy to her beauty, to eyes not accustomed to the Russian type. The guests show every variety of Russian characteristic—the Laplander, Tartar, Kossack, etc., and all classes of society, from the servant and peasant to the rich merchant and government official. In short it transports the beholder to a strange country. And the furniture, silverware, and all the accessories, deepen the strange impression. That it is grandly drawn and painted is a matter of course.

The Editor of The Critic. Miss Jennie Gilder, the editor of The Critic, is a strange compound of the masculine and feminine traits. In winter she wears an ulster down to her feet; the waist of her dress is a close-fitting sack coat, with a man's pockets; under this is a man's vest, holding a watch and chain; her standing collar and cravat are entirely masculine. Even her face has a strong masculine cast and she bears a striking resemblance to her brother, the editor of The Century.

How He Sold His Shoes. A Philadelphia dealer, not being able to sell even a single pair of shoes of a certain grade at $1, thought to mark them down to cost. Instead of doing so, however, he took the advice of his errand boy and added 25 cents to the price, and the shoes went off like hot cakes.

No Place to Judge. Mr. Eulituid: "Young Mr. Pawdle wants me to give him a position in the office, Florida. You're acquainted with him. Is he a man of brains?" Florida: "Really, papa, I don't know. I've never met him except in society."

A goose with several links of a gold chain in its craw was killed at San Lucas, Cal., recently.

THE OLD VETERANS.

Annual Session of the G. A. R. in Milwaukee, Wis.

Old Comrade Greet Each Other—General Sherman, General Winier, Governor Hoard and Mrs. Logan Among Those Present—The Sons of Veterans.

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 27.—General Warner and the Kansas City contingent, about 30 strong, put in an appearance Monday morning and marched to the Plankinton House, which is the headquarters of the Commander-in-Chief, Governor Hoard, Secretary of State Timme and General Fairchild came in with the C. C. Washburn Post and were escorted to the Plankinton. Judge Teazy came with the New England people, and General Alger and Mrs. Logan arrived in General Alger's private car and are at the Plankinton. General Sherman arrived at 8 p. m., having been delayed on the road. Ho was immediately taken to the Commander-in-Chief's headquarters, where he held an informal reception, after which he retired to his room for the night.

Immense crowds came by every train, and there are not less than 10,000 strangers in the city. About 50,000 of them are veterans distributed among the numerous suburban camps.

The Women's Relief Corps opened its headquarters yesterday and received its friends all day. The same was true of all the other headquarters.

The Sons of Veterans' camp-fires last night inaugurated the twenty-third National encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic. The handsome auditorium of the West Side Turner Hall, in which the executive sessions of the G. A. R. will be held, was crowded almost to suffocation. A. P. Dayies, of General Alexander Hayes' Post, No. 3, Pittsburgh, Pa., the founder of the Sons of Veterans, was received with rousing cheers when he came upon the platform. Prayer was offered by Bev. F. J. Wharton, department Chaplain of Wisconsin. Addresses were made by Lieutenant Kershaw, of Milwaukee; Commander-in-Chief Warner, General Alger, Corporal Tanner (the Commissioner of Pensions), Governor Hoard, General Fairchild and others.

DEATH ON THE GALLOWS.

Four Men Executed in New York City for Murder—Other Hanging.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—The four condemned murder—Patrick Pakenham, Jack Lewis (colored), James Nolan and Ferdinand Carolin—were hanged in the yards of the Tombs prison yesterday morning. There were two scaffolds and two men were hanged on each. Pakenham and Carolin were wife-murderers, and the other two killed their mistresses.

BETTE, M. T., Aug. 24.—Harry Roberta was hanged here Friday afternoon for the unprovoked killing last May of J. W. Crawford, a teamster in his employ. Roberts' neck was broken by the fall.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Aug. 24.—Jim McCoy, the noted desperado of Southern Texas, was hanged here at 11:30 yesterday for the murder of Sheriff McKinney, December 26, 1886.

A GENERAL SHUT-DOWN.

W. L. Scott, the Millionaire Coal Operator, Discharging Employees.

SPRING VALLEY, Ill., Aug. 24.—W. L. Scott, of Pennsylvania, has telegraphed General Manager Devlin to discharge all employees of the Spring Valley Coal Company who were not absolutely needed to run the mines, and to prepare for a general shut-down of six months or a year. He says they will never be opened again if they can not be opened on a paying basis. This means the depopulation of the town. The Chicago & Northwestern railroad has closed down its Spring Valley branch and discharged all men at this end of the line.

A CONVICT'S PLOT.

He Attempts to Blow Up the State Prison at Jackson, Mich.

JACKSON, Mich., Aug. 27.—The prison authorities here claim to have detected Irving Latimer, the matricide, in a plot to blow up the penitentiary, which, had it been carried to success, would have let 800 convicts loose. A package of Hercules powder thrown over the prison wall last Thursday night was traced to Latimer's cell, and the warden at once locked him in the solitary dungeon. The warden has been keeping the matter quiet in the hope that he might catch Latimer's outside accomplice.

A Strange AccMeut.

COLUMBUS, Ind., Aug. 24.—James Smith, a farmer living west of this city, met with a peculiar accident one night recently which is about to result in his death. He was in bed dreaming that he was in the river swimming. He arose in his sleep, and, imagining that he was taking a big leap in the water, jumped, alighting on a bed-post, the point of which penetrated his lungs and broke a few ribs, inflicting fatal wounds.

Inci Caused by a Hurting Sewer. PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 27.—The bursting of a sewer, due to recent heavy rains, caused damage in the Fifteenth and Twenty-ninth ward Monday estimated at $100,000. Streets were torn up and washed out, cellars flooded, foundations and walls weakened and shattered and stocks of goods ruined. Many persons narrowly escaped drowning, and the inhabitants of the district are fearful of further disaster.

Again Her Father's Idol. NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Victoria Morosini, the daughter of the millionaire, who married her father's coachman several years ago, and starred on the stage and later in the back chorus, has done satisfactory penance for her social sin, and is again with her father as a modest but attractive belle at Saratoga. The whereabouts of the husband are unknown to the outside world.

Death of Colonel Aylward. CONCORD, N. H., Aug. 27.—Colonel Alfred Aylward, who fought with the Union forces during the war, and also fought with Garibaldi and with the Boers in the Transvaal, died on Sunday at East Littleton, N. H. He was at one time a member of the revolutionary party in Ireland.

Loss of Money Causes Suicide. NEWPORT, Ind., Aug. 27.—Joseph Thompson, of this place, had saved $1500 in ten years of hard labor. He was robbed of his money recently, which he carried in a belt on his person, being afraid of banks, and the loss so preyed upon his mind that he hanged himself yesterday.

A Diamond Thief Captured. KANSAS CITY, MO., Aug. 27.—Harry Disney, a gambler, was arrested in this city yesterday, charged with being the thief who robbed Altman's jewelry store of $15,000 in diamonds in broad daylight recently.

Official Thieves. MADRID, Aug. 24.—Yesterday the mayor and thirty of the city fathers were compelled to resign, owing to the discovery of frauds by which in four years the city had been robbed of $1,000,000.

TICKETS NOMINATED.

Maine of the Candidates for Office in Various States.

D., Aug. 24.—The Republican yesterday nominated the following State ticket: For Governor, John Miller; Lieutenant-Governor, Alfred Dickey; Secretary of State, John Flitue; Supreme Judges, G. C. H. Corlies, Alfred Watkins, Judge Bartholomew, Auditor, John O. Bray; member of Congress, L. C. Hansbrough.

NORFOLK, Va., Aug. 23.—In State convention yesterday the Republicans nominated the following State ticket: For Governor, General William Mahone; Lieutenant-Governor, Colonel Campbell C. Slemp; Attorney-General, Captain Warren S. Lurty.

ANACONDA, M. T., Aug. 23.—The Republican State convention has nominated the following ticket: For Governor, T. C. Power, of Helena; for Lieutenant-Governor, J. E. Rickards, of Butte; for Member of Congress, T. H. Carter, of Helena.

LINCOLN, Neb., Aug. 24.—The Prohibitionists closed their State convention in this city Thursday night, the session lasting two days. There were about 400 delegates in attendance. Candidates for Governor, Judge and Regents for the State University were nominated, L. P. Wigton, of Norfolk, for the former position, and Mrs. Jennie F. Holmes of Tecumseh, and L. B. Palmer of Hastings, for the latter.

FARGO, N. D., Aug. 24.—The North Dakota Republican State convention reassembled Friday and adopted with enthusiasm and demonstrations of applause a resolution endorsing the city of Chicago as pre-eminently the fittest place at which to hold the World's Fair of 1893. The State ticket was then completed and a platform was adopted. A synopsis of the latter is as follows:

It reaffirms the National platform of the last campaign, glorifies the Republican party, declares against the encroachments of corporations on the rights of the farmers, uncompromisingly favors the American system of protection, favors liberal pensions to veteran soldiers who have been honorably discharged, declares sympathy with all movements in favor of temperance, demands the careful guarding of the public school lands and indorses the submission by the Constitutional convention of a prohibitory amendment to the constitution.

INDIANA SOLDIERS.

The Corner-Stone of a Monument to Their Memory Successfully Laid.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Aug. 28.—The laying of the corner-stone of the monument dedicated to the memory of the Indiana soldiers and sailors who fought in the late war was successfully performed in this city yesterday afternoon. President Harrison assisting in the ceremonies. There was an immense throng present. Governor Hovey, as presiding officer of the occasion, made a brief address, and he was followed by General M. D. Manson, of Crawfordsville, and General John Coburn, of Indianapolis. At the conclusion of the latter's address President Harrison was introduced and made a short speech, which was received with great applause.

The scheme for a monument for the soldiers and sailors of Indiana was originated by Mr. George Langsdale, editor of the Green Castle (Ind.) Banner, in 1875. The shaft will cost $250,000. It will be built of light gray limestone, and when completed it will be 268 feet high. The diameter of the ground which it will cover is 192 feet.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Aug. 24.—The Seventieth Indiana regiment held its regular annual reunion at Tomlinson Hall yesterday. The President of the United States presided at the session. City Attorney W. L. Taylor delivered an address of welcome, to which the President responded at some length. At 5 p. m. President Harrison was driven to the depot, and shortly afterward left for Deer Park.

Fire in an Iowa Mine.

WHAT CHEER, Ia., Aug. 26.—About 4:30 Saturday afternoon the top works and building of the What Cheer coal shaft took fire in the boiler room and in a few minutes was in a mass of flames. The shaft was putting out about 100 tons of coal per month. About 20 men were in the bank at the time, but all escaped by way of the air shafts. Thirteen out of the fifteen mules in the mine were suffocated. Total loss, $50,000; insurance, $12,000.

Idleness Is a Dangerous Fault

In the kidneys. When inactive they speedily fall into disrepair. The obstinate and fatal maladies, Bright's disease and diabetes, ensue with terrible certainty upon the inaction of the organs affected. Catarrh of the bladder, enuresis, gravel and strangury are also to be apprehended from a partial paralysis of the bladder, of which weakness and sluggishness are the causes. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is a fine tonic and promoter of activity for the renal organs, and one which can be relied upon to afford them the requisite stimulus without exciting them—an effect to be feared from the undicated alcoholic excitant of commerce. A further beneficent effect of the Bitters, by renewing activity of the kidney, is to enable them to drain from the blood in its passage through them, impurities ordetensive of rheumatism and dropsy. Nervousness, fever and ague, constipation and dyspepsia are conquered by the Bitters.

The right Rev. Bishop J. M. Brown of the A. M. E. church will be in this city Sep. 9, and will dedicate the new African Methodist church on that day between three and five o'clock. The public are cordially invited to see and hear the venerable Bishop.

Joseph Hopkins of Lyndon has filed a bill in the circuit court asking Judge Kinne to break the bonds which unite him to his wife, Ellen J. Hopkins. The parties were married in Lima in 1873, and Joseph claims that Ellen left him in 1883 and hag not lived with him since.

The parties interested in the street railway (proposed) in this city were here last Thursday, and promise that work will begin at once. An expert was with them looking over the route. Eastern capital has been invested in the enterprise, taking the stock owned by Gen. Church.

The city officials have given notice that any person caught shooting a gun or other firearm within the city limits will be arrested. The city ordinance prohibits this and the boys are obliged to go outside of the city to kill sparrow?. Several BCCIdents have been reported to the officials.

The daily papers report that Ann Albor is to be honored by a visit from the International American Congress on Oct. 17. The congress consists of delegates from every country on the American continent. Let our citizens see that they are properly entertained while in the "Athens of the West."

The workmen at the new high school have been hustling around this week getting the building in shape to be ready for occupancy Monday. The building is one of the finest in Michigan used for school purposes. Much credit is due C. Mack, chairman of the building committee, who has devoted considerable time and attention to the construction of the building. The other member* of committee are J. T. Jacobs and L. Gruner.

Marshal Walsh treated Katie Cartroff and Sadie Linger to a hack ride, which ended at the jail. The parties were mother and daughter, and both were as drunk as possible. Tuesday Katie paid the costs and was let out, Justice Pond sentencing Sadie to remain in jail five days as a punishment for her wrong doing.

The special hospital committee goes east early next month to examine the large hospitals there before plans are decided upon for the new building here. The committee consists of Messrs. Draper, Keifer and Whitman, and they will be joined at Philadelphia by C. B. Nancrede, the new professor of surgery.

W. W. Wines, of Ann Arbor, is a great-grandfather for the second time.—Chelsea Standard. If our contemporarit's each prefix an extra "great" before the title of our respected citizens they will make him out a regular Methuselah. Mr. Wines has been a great-grandfather twice but this doesn't make him a doubly great grandfather.

Alice Josephine Hatch was granted a divorce from William A. Hatch in the circuit court Monday, the charge of cruelty being sustained by Justice Kinne. The complainant was given charge of the two minor children, Kate L. and Ora A Hatch, and was also given tee ownership of the household goods which the parties had owned together.

The Chelsea Herald gives a list of the improvements in that thriving village this summer. Of course Supervisor Gilbert will fail to remember about them when he come to the supervisors' meeting in October. When he is strongly advising his colleagues to "stick Ann Arbor's equalization up," somebody will call his attention to the Herald's list.

The snide jewelry fakir struck town about nine o'clock Saturday morning, gathered a crowd on the corner, gave away a few dollars in change, sold about $50 worth, and then closed the sale until evening (as he said). But when evening came he was not here. He had done a good day's business, as he roped in the surplus at Chelsea and Dexter on the same day.

Eliza H. Cordary has brought suit against Joseph Goodman to recover the sum of $1,200, which she gave to Goodman as her share of a partnership affair to be conducted at Ypsilanti. She claims that instead of using the money in the business he converted it to his own use. The same case was before Justice Pond a few weeks ago, on a criminal charge brought by Mrs. Cordary against Goodman for obtaining money under false pretenses.

A thief played a nice little game on several residents of the third ward Saturday. He called at the houses, claiming that he was the representative of the insurance companies, and made an examination of the premises. At the residence of George Brock on north Main-st. a watch was missing after the fellow left. At other houses he was watched and took nothing. Beware of this man. When the fire commissioners send a man to examine the buildings he will be dressed in uniform and wear the fire department badge.

Rev. Mr. Biesell, a student at the University, filled the Congregational pulpit very acceptably last Sunday morning and evening in the absence of the pastor. Mr. Bies'el is the son of a missionary at Ahmednagar, India, and came to this country in 1880. He very graphically describes the customs of the Brahmin, and what Christianity is doing and can do for that benighted people. The gentleman will again speak at the church next Sunday morning and Sunday evening, and we bespeak for him a large audience.—Chelsea Standard.

The monthly meeting of the Washtenaw Poniological Society will be held Sept. 7, at 2 p. m., in basement of the court house at Ann Arbor. Shippers of peaches and other fruit are especially invited, as arrangements for transportation have to be made. A very important communication from the secretary of the State Horticultural Society in regard to the Detroit International Fair. Exhibits for the coming fairs. Exhibits of fruits of the season, of flowers, and of fruit packages. This should be the largest meeting of the season. Etnil Baur, corresponding secretary.

The fire Tuesday evening was caused by a burning shed and out buildings in the rear of Prof. de Pout's residence on Jefferson-st. The firemen responded promptly and within eight minutes from the time the alarm was sent in, the fire was extinguished. The fire was undoubtedly the work of an incendiary. For some time past somebody has been harassing the family of Prof. de Pont in a manner that will insure another boarder in the state prison should the party be caught. Tar was spread on the front porch, a brick thrown through the window, over 50 cans of fruit broken in the cellar and now the house set on fire.

A committee of three members of the city council has been appointed by the mayor of Ypsilanti to act with a similar committee from Ann Arbor, in regard to placing both cities in shape so that they can be used as suburban resident places. It is designed that the joint committee should confer with the officials of the Michigan Central railroad and endeavor to have trains run at suitable hours to accommodate parties doing business in Detroit, and also to have them issue commutation tickets at reduced rates. The plan is a good one and no better method of booming our city could be adopted. Low rates and accommodation in running trains would induce many to move to this city in order to take advantage of our superior educational facilities.

The Board of Health recommend to citizens particular care in the disposal of slops, garbage and waste matter of all kinds about their dwellings and places of business, and the abundant and frequent use of disinfectants. The hot, dry days cause unhealthy exhalations from the soil, which in the cool nights settle with the heavier properties of the air, and are the more dangerous because people out of doors BO much evenings, and sleep with open windows. A solution of copperas, one pound to three gallons of water, is a good and cheap disinfectant for outdoor use, and for vaults and cesspools, where large quantities should be used two or three times a week. Chloride of lime is also a disinfectant in sufficient quantities. Dry earth, such as dust from the street, and dry ashes are good absorbents, and in sufficient quantities arrest decomposition.

Chas. F. Wade, a Hillsdale banker, with his wife and son, arrived last week to pay a visit to his parents, Secretary and Mrs. Wade. Mr. Wade returned to Hillsdale Saturday, his wife and child remaining here.

Hospital Practice.

Dr. Fruth, late of New York, has for several years devoted his undivided attention to the study and treatment of chronic diseases, also diseases of the eye and ear and has enjoyed advantages which fall to the lot of but few. The doctor has not only taken a thorough course of study in medical science, having attended full courses of study in the best medical schools in the country, but after graduating had extensive experience in hospital practice, where diseases of every description and chronic maladies of every kind were brought to his notice. Physicians in general practice are seldom prepared with the necessary costly outfit to examine correctly or treat with success many chronic diseases. Such cases would do well to call at once and learn their true condition and their chances for a cure. No invalid who values health and happiness can afford to lose the opportunity of consulting him at the Arlington Ann Arbor, Tuesday Sept. 3.
