VOL. XVI. NO. 8.

ANN ARBOR, MICHIGAN, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 20, 1890.

WHOLE NO. 791.

John Schumacher. (FOR THE REGISTER.)

"Forward the line of the battle, Close up the ranks, boys, and forward, Mind not the musketry rattle; Eyes to the front, lifted starward.

Keep every column unbroken; Keep every step firm and steady; And let this be always your token: To win or to die we are ready."

Thus rang the voice of our leader, As over the breast work we mounted; No coward was there, no seceder; For every man wished to be counted.

No danger of fear or dispairing. Where the sword of our Captain was flashing: Every man, of his courage was sharing. And into the fight we went dashing.

'Gainst the Rum Power he led us undaunted, And cheered when the base foe retreated; When we tore down the flag that was flaunted Over homes, of their happiness cheated.

King Alcohol shrank from his presence. Or fell at the stroke of his power; And the proud, with the humblest of peasants, Felt this was Redemption's glad hour.

O, who shall forget, when he's fallen? Or, who in the battle shall falter? And where is the leader to call on? And who shall keep fire on his altar? T. P. WILSON, Detroit, Mich.

The Schumacher Memorial Exercises.

Memorial exercises at the opera house, on the death of John Schumacher, were held on Sunday last at 3 p.m. Mr. Fred Eslinger presided. The temperance choir led by Alvin Wilsey, rendered several pieces appropriate to the occasion.

Dr. Haskell was the first speaker. The drift of his discourse related to the good work the deceased had done in the temperance cause, and how many friends he had won by his earnestness and selfsacrifice in the work. The doctor did not hold up the character of the deceased as that of a model christian, but that of the earnest reformer and showed that the deceased exemplified in his later years the main characteristics of all reformers, namely, enthusiasm, earnestness and perseverance. The speaker closed by showing how much better a man the deceased had become by reason of his untiring labor in the direction of temperance.

Prot. Steere was next called upon and brought out strongly before the minds of the audience how that, while the saloons and their patrons had treated John Schumacher as a crank in his life, still the people, whon he had benefited by his work, were now honoring him in his death, and that instead of going to his grave unwept, unhonored and unsung as he might have gone as a drinking man, his grave would be decorated with flowers and evergreens by those who had been made better and happier by the sympathies and advice of John Schumacher.

Prof. Perry gave a very appropriate and sensible talk on what is really true greatness, and endeavored to convince the audience that the "good alone are great, and that such a life as that of John Schumacher was full of instruction to all classes and conditions of society.

Dr. Herdman commenced by reading a passage from the scriptures in regard to John the Baptist, and then for a few moments endeavored to show the parallelisms which can be traced in the lives of all reformers, and clearly set forth that the deceased was a natural reformer. He showed plainly that the life of John Schuer was such a life as convinced the Rights of Citizenship and the Restoration of Our Merchant Marine." Senator Gil-bert A. Pierce, of North Dakota, will re-spond to "The New States of the West." Ex-Senator Blanche K. Bruce, one of the finest orators of the colored race, will be listened to with great interest on his subject, "The Southern Question." The subject of Hon. W. O. Bradley, of Kentucky, will be "The Nation as it Should Be." Judge John M. Thurston, of Nebraska, temporary chairman at the last National Republican Convention in Chicago, will speak on "The Man Who Wears the Button." Gen. Wm. Mahone, the fiery Virginian, will speak on the subject selected by him, "Southern Election Methods."

The committee have some hope of the presence of Chauncey M. Depew, and most of the Michigan delegation in Congress have agreed to be present. The speakers will reach Detroit on Friday forenoon, and will be given an informal reception at the Michigan Club on that day at 3 o'clock p. m. Senator Stock-bridge will preside. Gov. Luce will de-liver the address of welcome and Rev. C. R. Henderson will pronounce the invoca-tion. One of Detroit's best orchestras will enliven the occasion with music.

A Memorable Reunion.

On Tuesday evening, Ann Arbor Commandery, Knights Templar, celebrated its vigentennial reunion, a party of eighty kinghts and their families participating. Besides those living in the city who were present, Chelses was represented by a delegation numbering 17, Ypsilanti 17, Milan 6, Manchester 4, and Dexter 3. The affair was a success in every particular. The parlors were decorated with handsome paintings, cut flowers and banners. The drill room was filled with rows of heavily laden tables at which chairs were placed for two hundred guests. On the walls were hung a life-sized portrait of Gen. Washington and U. S. and K. T. flags. Eighty Sir Knights with their ladies, making a party of nearly two hundred, were gathered to participate in the pleasures of the evening.

The first part of the program was filled by an exhibition drill, by the drill corps which has recently been organized in the commandery. The movements were creditably executed and received the applause of the audience. A grand march was then formed which ended at the tables, where an excellent collation was served. Following the banquet, C. E. Hiscock, emminent commander, welcomed the guests in a few well-chosen remarks, and then introduced as toastmaster, W. G. Doty, who now occupies the position of deputy grand commander of Michigan.

The responses which were impromptu "The Ladies," by Rev. W. S. Studley; "Our Worshipful Bröther-Gen. George "Our Worshipful Brother-Gen, George Washington," by Prof. C. F. R. Bellows, of Ypsilanti; "Washington, and the 24th Triennial," by J. R. Miner; "The Vigen-tenrial Reunion," by T. F. Hill; "Denver and the 25th Triennial," by A. F. Freeman, of Manchester. Several others made short remarks.

At the conclusion of the responses, the room was cleared and dancing began, the party ending shortly after two o'clock.

Something like a fair estimate of this year's enrollment in the University can now be made. Usually from 75 to 125 enter the second semester. This year it will probably be about the former figure. This being the case, the next catalogue will contain something like 2150 names.

"An Evening at the Coliseum," at the "An Evening at the Collseum," at the Baptist church, Friday evening, will con-sist of a literary program in three parts: "The Collseum as a Structure," by Mr. F. G. Clark; "Games and Combats of the Collseum," by Mr. J. H. Drake; "The Collseum in Literature," by Prof. Kelsey.

According to the usual custom the members of the law department have secured an orator for Washington's birthday. Next Saturday afternoon the public are invited to University hall to listen to Judge John M. Thurston, of Omaha. Music will be furnished by the Chequamegons.

Invitations have been sent to all collegiate alumnæ residing in Michigan to at-tend the February meeting of the Detroit branch of the Association of Collegiate Alumnæ, which is to be held at the Cadillac next Saturday. Lunch is to be served at 1 o'clock, followed by a literary prcgramme.

The plans for the new hospital have been returned to the architect who made them, to be modified so that buildings can be built within the appropriation. Three wards will be built, and in the future, when the legislature appropriates the money, the original plan of building the administration building and connecting the wards will be carried out.

Last Saturday evening a large audience gathered at the joint entertainment given by the members of the literary societies of the University and of the Normal The program was the best literschool. ary feature that has been given here this year. The proceeds will be devoted towards purchasing a piano for the Literary Adelphi, and that organization wishes to return thanks to those who attended as well as to those who took part, for the interest shown.

The Junior Hop of '91.

The promises made by the junior hop committee, that they intended to give the most elaborate affair of the kind ever seen in this city, were fulfilled last Friday evening, the date of the swell society event of the college year. The identity of the skating rink, the only place in the city adequate to accommodate the large number that attended, was entirely lost in the profuse decorations. From the rough rafters and girders hung the university colors yellow and blue, draped so artistically that the sight of the bare truss work of the rouf was entirely lost. The walls were adorned with the nine fraternity banners intermingled with framed pictures. In the south part of the rink, partitioned off by canvass gathered nicely at the center, making quite an original entrance, were the re-

Amelia B. Edwards.

Miss Amelia B. Edwards. who lectures next Saturday evening in University hall under the suspices of the Students' Lecture Association, is without doubt one of the most profound E syptologists of today. In securing her f. r the course, the association has shown its good judgment, and is deserving of the hearty appreciation of our people. Miss Edwards has been well received wherever she has spoken in this country. Her enthusiasm for her subject and her familiarity with every feature of Egyptian Archæology eminently fit her to give a lecture intensely interesting and instructive. The scholarly and forcable manner in which she presents what she has to say is another especially attractive feature of her lectures. The Sunday School Times has this to say of Miss Ed wards: It has been the fortune of few women to achieve the success Miss Edwards has won for herse.f in two such widely different lines of work as novel-writing and Egyptian exploration-for in each of these fields the lady, whose visit to America has been locked forward to with so much pleasure, and whose lectures have been awaited with such pleasant anticipations, has gained high distinction. Coming with so many excellent recommendations and with the lecture which she has chosen to give here, Miss Edwards should, and no doubt will, be greeted with a large and appreciative audience.

world not by eloquence, oratory or rhetoric, but by goodness of heart, fixedness of purpose and a broad and sympathetic philanthropy.

The exercises closed by the choir singing "The Sweet Bye and Bye," a favorite song of the deceased, and Dr. Haskell pronounced the benediction. The large audience, made up of tepresentatives of all grades and conditions of society, and the solemn earnestness on each countenance, easily convinced the most skeptical that "when a good man dieth the people mourn," because they "rest from their labors and their works do follow them."

The organ recital by Prof. A. A. Stanley, at the Congregational church last Satday evening, was quite largely attended, north-west corners were booths, the former decorated with large Chinese lanterns, containing huge bowls of lemonade. The latter was a veritable parlor, containing handsome furniture and embellished with choice engravings and adornments, and was arranged for the chaperones of the evening. The old music stand on the east side of the room was completely covered with bunting. On the front was displayed the class yell, "Tum-tum-ta ra-rum, '91." Directly opposite was the music stand, im-provised for the occasion, in which were seated the Detroit Society Orchestra. This stand was gracefully decorated with American flags, the University colors and numerous hot house plants. The grand march was planned to begin at 9:30, but at that time hardly anybody had arrived, and it was not until after 11 o'clock that all were present. The reception committee stood in Gibsons' gallery, where the hacks were driven, and after passing the greetings of the evening and removing wraps, the guests were led through a brilliantly illuminated passageway to the dancing hall. The grand march was led by Fred. C. Richmond of Ann Arbor, and Miss Olive Bagley of Detroit, who were followed by IS1 couples, making this the most largely attended junior hop in the history of the univer-

The grand march was followed by twenty-four numbers, six extras and six extra-extras, making thirty six dances in all, and it was not until 5 o'clock Saturday morning, that '91's hop was a thing of the past.

The programs were perfection, and the intention of the committee that they should be such as could always be kept by the participants as remembrances of the event was fully carried out. The printed program was inclosed in artistic card cases of ooze calf-skin, lined with pale blue satin. On the outside was simply embossed "Michigan '91."

any narcotic you had better leave it off gradually.

Begin at once to take Pe-ru-na exactly as directed on the bottle. Gradually increase the dose until, at the end of four months, you are taking just double the quantity directed on the bottle. If you have a bad spell with your heart or nerves, you had better take a wineglassful in hot water (sweetened, if you choose), as it will relieve you quicker than anything else. Pe-ru-na contains no opium or other narcotic, so you need have no fear in using it continuously for any length of time. Be faithful to take it regularly for two or three weeks, and you will be sure to see that it is beginning to help you. Keep right on, and your appetite will return and digestion be as good as any ones. Your sleep will be sound, your nerves strong and quiet. To send for the doctor every time you don't feel just right. My doctor's bill for years was over one hundred dollars a year, which made a pretty big hole in my wages. THE Eifel Tower has proved to be of great advantage to astronomers in their far-away in vestigations. If Chicago gets the world's fair, she'll rebuild the Tower of Babel; see if she doesn't. And then the star-gazers can knock chips off the shoulders of the old "man in the moon," if they wish to.

THE wide-awake republicans of the state are on the qui vive for the great banquet at Detroit to-morrow evening. It will be one of the notable events of 1890, with an influence-toward republicanism-that will be felt all over Michigan and surrounding states. The published reports are always very interesting, as they give the convictions of some of the most prominent statesmen in the country.

DETROIT Tribune : It is reported that those Democratic hold-overs employed in the bureau of engraving and printing at Washington who"have refused to permit Frances Flood, a pretty mulatto, to work beside them," have been given the alternative of treating her with due courtesy or leaving the bureau. Miss Flood is said to be one of the most capable and deserving girls in the establishment and Chief Meredith does not propose to allow the color line to be drawn in his department. If the Democratic employes don't like it, there is plenty of room for them out doors, and the sooner they get out the better.

THE Adrian Times closes an interesting and exhaustive editorial on "The Dude" with the following very fair estimate of the real value of that peculiar production of nature and art: "The dude is the background against which true manhood may shine. Were it not for him it would hardly be possible to make comparative estimates on brains and vitality, or to acquire a proper appreciation of industry, capacity and usefulness. The dude in furnishing the best example of what a man is not and ought not to be, answers a noble purpose and becomes thereby a common mecessity and benefactor."

It would be a very wise proceeding for the farmers and business men of this vicinity to combine (not exactly form a "trust") in an organization, the object of which would be to improve the condition of the roads leading into this market from every direction. If these two classes of our citizens could change places a few months, and the pushing business men, who live in the city, were obliged to haul their merchandise over the almost impassible roads the farmers have had lately, they would be willing enough to unite in any scheme that would remedy the situation. This very important question will be thoroughly discussed at the meeting of the pomological society, Saturday. It ought to be the beginning of a better state of things in respect to our highways. Besides the convenience and pleasure of riding over good roads. the actual direct profit in dollars and cents to this entire community, would reach into thousands of dollars every year. As one of the most eminent men of our country has well said : "The improvement of the roads along which are borne the products of man's toil and by which his social intercourse is facilitated, constitutes one of the most important practical steps in man's advancement. The highway may become an aid to man's business and pleasure, or it may be an obstacle in the way of both."

The Choral Union.

The program of the third concert in the Choral Union series, which we give below, indicates the fact that the people of Ann Arbor are to have a genuine musical treat in the appearance of Fraulein Adela Ansder Ohe, the pianiste. The Century Magazine for March, 1888, contains a very interesting account of this great artiste and shows her improvising at the piano. This will be her first appearance in Ann Arbor, and the Choral Union is to be congratulated upon having secured so great an attraction. The concert will be given as usual in University hall, Wednesday evening, Feb. 26. The name of the vocalist can not be definitely announced just at present. The Choral Union is redeeming all its promises to the holders of the association tickets, and as it offers ten attrac-tions, each of which is worth the price of an association ticket, we advise all lovers of music to secure their tickets at The Symphony Orchestra is gaining fresh laurels at every appearance and the Ansder Ohe recital we feel will be a fitting prelude to this concert.

"The Silent Partner" is a three act comedy by Herbert H. Wins-low. It is bright, witty, pure and wholesome. The situations, while appealing strongly to the risible faculties, are entirely nat-ural and free from "horse play." ay. nor is there the slightest degree of that suggestiveness or naughtiness with which it has almost come to be supposed light, threeact farcical comedies must be tinged to be successful. Although he poses and has been successful as a star, Mr. Polk has taken hold of a play which was not written to display the talents of any one individual. He has surrounded himself with an excellent company and he does not seek to subordinate the other roles to his own. All of the scenery produced last night was new, and from the lavishness of the display evinced the utmost confidence on the part of the Criterion management in the strength of Polk and his company. Mr. The play deals with an imagcharacter, whose inary persistent refusal to materialize. coupled with his continually threatened appearance furnishes the humor of the comedy. This is the Silent Partner. He does not exist, and yet for all practical purposes he does. Mr. Polk takes the part of the partner of this mythical personage. The intangible creation involves him in no end of complications, and his art is shown most conspicuously in the last act, when he is obliged to impersonate the utterly impersonal. It will be several months before this comedy reaches the boards of a New York Theatre, and it seems only a bit of justice that the Brooklyn Bridge should have been crossed last night for the purpose of this preliminary glance at a new play and a bright star which is constantly ascending in the theatrical firmament."

A system of postal telegraphy by which every one at very low rates may communicate through the postoffices from city to city, or by messages -dropped in the mail boxes, would be a great blessing. Such a system has been in use in England for a long time, and It is one of the last things all classes of the people in that country would be willing to be deprived of. If Postmaster General Wanamaker succeeds in having some practical plan put in operation, iit will be honor enough for him, and far better than the costliest marble shaft to perpetuate his name in the generations to come. His idea now is, that the may be directed to secure a set of leased wires such as the great newspapers and bankers have connecting their officers in the different cities, and subject goverment to no expense in the construction or purchase of a telegraph line.

THE work required of the census enumerators will be quite difficult, and require considerable ability, and will be poorly paid for, it is claimed. Every enumerator appointed to make the census is required to take an oath that he will perform his duties faithfully. If they violate their oath in any particular, they are liable to a fine of $3,000 and three years imprisonment, and the wiolation is punishable by the United States authorities. This means that no man appointed as an enumerator will dare return a single false name on his list. The supervisor is placed under the same restrictions. And the law goes still farther than this, and makes every householder amenable to the same law if he refuses to give or fails to give accurate and complete answers to the questions asked by the enumerator. This is done in order to secure the most thoroughly reliable and accurate returns possible. The enumeration will begin the first day of June, and in cities close in fifteen days, and in country districts in thirty days. Enumerators, whether paid by the day or per capita, will be able to make about $3. The pay of the supervisor is $1,000, and out of this he Sth. mays all his expenses.

ACH great man, however original his genius may seem, is partly the result of his times. Back of each Cæsar or Cicero or Henry VIII. or Richelieu will be seen a tendency of thought and conduct toward the creation of such a form of personage. Washington did not appear by any miracle or by any act of self-creation. He had a long line of forerunners, each one of which was busy making up a truth or a sentiment for the later heart to carry. As Washington spoke and wrote a language which he did not make and rode in a carriage which he did not invent, so he carried In his mind notions of human liberty which had been growing in England and France for more than a hundred years. Imperialism had been slowly declining for several generations. The idea of personal liberty had been sung in poetry and thundered forth in orations and contested in battle.

Intellectual nations always tend toward freedom, because man can not become a thinker without perceiving soon his greatest need-the liberty to think and act for himself. The Greek and Roman States found intellectual power and freedom at the same time, because it was impossible to become intelligent without wishing to escape bondage. When the classic literature became in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries the fashionable literature of Europe and England, the study of every academy and college, that perception of freedom came to the Miltons and Cromwells and Shakespeares that had come long before to the Greek and Roman statesmen.

John Milton demanded the liberty of the press, and became famous for his political claims and daring long before he composed the "Paradise Lost." When Cromwell undertook to overthrow despotism Milton was the literary campfollower of the revolutionist, and was secretary during the Protectorate. When the restoration came John Milton thought it wise to hide himself for a time, from the fear that his pamphlets in the cause of liberty might make his. death seem desirable with the line of Kings. It is related that his timid friends sent abroad a rumor of his death and burial, that by such device the royalty might be led away from any search after such an old disturber of the public peace.

In 1694 the freedom of the press was granted in England. An author was no longer compelled to submit his proposed book or pamphlet to any royal commission that it might be emptied of any ter is respectful, but it is the letter of man to man. One sentence from the long address to the King will reveal the bearing of each word and argument of the whole.

"The grievance (of the colonies) is as simple in its nature and as level to the most ordinary understanding as it is powerful in affecting the most languid passions—it is an attempt made to dispose of the whole property of the people without their consent. Your Majesty's English subjects in the colonies possessing the ordinary faculties of manhood know that to live under such a plan of government is not to live in a state of freedom. Your English subjects in the colonies, still impressed with the feelings of the people from whom they are derived, can not live under a government which does not establish freedom as its basis."

This long letter is but a feeble picture of that eloquence which Burke hurled at the King and Parliament for many years. This English political thought extended through the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries as far as 1776, had deeply affected France, and thus before Washington came into public life a triangle of liberty had been formed, with England, France and America as its three points. It was an equilateral triangle, the largest and most wonderful in history. Edmund Burke, Thomas Paine, Thomas Jefferson and others were continually moving along some one of the sides or were declaiming wisdom at some one of the points of this figure. The whole figure was full of one kind of contents—the rights of man. Whatever may have been the unpopularity at last of Thomas Paine because of his opposition to Christianity, he was popular and powerful among those who were speaking and writing in the name of the common people. Burke was born in 1730, Washington in 1733, Paine in 1787, Jefferson in 1743, La Fayette ten years or more later. Thus moved forward a remarkable group of men wedded to the founding of more universal rights. Washington was lying in wait to be-come the military leader after the ora-

Republic. Each day created its own morrow. The revolution came into being piece by piece, figure after figure, like a fabric woven in a loom. Thread after thread was carried across and beaten in until at last came the figure of independence.

Soon after the battle of Bunker Hill John Adams, Franklin, Rush and Washington were holding an informal council to confer over a situation which seemed each day to be growing more terrible. At this meeting Franklin is said to have asked the question which reappeared in 1861 on the lips of Horace Greeley: "What is to be the end of this "Is it to obtain justice from war?" England or is it to effect a change of Ministry? or is it to soften a tax?" fore the inquiry had gone far Thomas Paine entered the room, and, before he had been long in the council, he said: "These States of America must be independent of England." The little group was amazed and alarmed, but rumor has it that Washington begged Paine to publish those views to the country. This event took place in the November or December before the Declaration of Independence.

Thus Washington, the soldier, was carried along by a group of deep thinkers, and if the "pen was mightier than the sword" it was so because it told the sword when and where to strike. One thing is most certain, that all those pens, from that of John Milton to that of Burke and Jefferson, combined to give the sword of Washington its long-lasting power. The ragged, ill-fed soldiers of the new republic stood upon principles which were limiting the throne of England and were about to overthrow the King of France.

Washington was the final turningpoint of the times; for had he been less than he was independence might never have come. The situation was critical all through the seven years of battle. It was the probable hopelessness that made Benedict Arnold hasten to desert to the cause of the King. Proud and ambitious, he could not enjoy the humble surroundings of the fort and camp. He saw no splendor in the service of the colonies. He deserted his cause after having first betrayed it to the enemy. The cause asked for Washington alone

If there was some man who could have done the peculiar work so well, he was not to be seen by those who looked about them in that day. There was in Washington great pride indeed, but it desired to feed upon merit. He was ambitious for fame, but he desired the fame to come from honorable deeds. Desertion or the abandonment of a cause formed no part of the possible with him. He was slow to move against a foe; he had to estimate and calculate, add and, subtract like an astronomer; but amid all this mental figuring his mind always contained the notion of more war and more victory, and seemed wholly unaffected by time or defeat. He was never figuring about how to give up, but always about how to go on. He was both gentle and inflexible, as wonderful a gentleman as he was a soldier.

He was incapable of fear, and he seemed equally incapable of despair. He was always serene enough to enable him to look over a dark winter into a better summer. It is most wonderful that while Franklin and Jefferson and Paine were finding the best truth for the colonies there was rising up slowly on the farm of Mount Vernon a man who could establish those truths against all the wisdom and force of the British throne. George Washington will always stand as one of the finest human spectacles in all history. DAVID SWING.

Burglars Enter the National Bank at Salem, Ill.

The Safe Blown Open and Funds to the Amount of $15,000 Stolen - No Clew Obtained of the Robbers.

MOONLIGHT MECHANICS.

SALEM, Ill., Feb 15 .- Details of the robbery of the Salem National Bank are as follows: At 8 o'clock Friday morning B. F. Marshall, cashier, came to the bank and unlocked the door as usual and stepped inside. He at once detected a strong odor like powder, and, having proceeded into the office, he made the startling discovery that the door of the yault was open. Upon looking in he was still further shocked to see the door of the safe shattered. The bank had been entered by burglars and robbed. The cashier at once gave the alarm. The news spread rapidly and soon hundreds of citizens repaired to the bank. Great excitement prevailed, and many of the depositors were fearful lest the robbery should result in the loss of their deposits. They were soon assured, however, by a notice signed by the cashier, that, though the extent of the robbery had not been ascertained, the depositors need have no uneasiness as they would not be allowed to suffer any loss in consequence of the robbery. Later another notice was posted up signed by the president, General J. S. Martin, and the cashier. that the bank would open for business as usual. The statement was subsequently made that the amount of the robbery would not reach $15,000, but it is believed by many that it will far exceed this sum. The vault was built about two years ago, when a new safe with a time lock and the latest improvements was purchased. The safe was guaranteed to be burglar-proof. The door of the vault was a double, heavy iron one, and with a feeling of security no one slept in the bank and there was no night-watchman. Parties have been scouring the country in search of the robbers, but thus far no clew has been obtained.

1 WASHINGTON, FROM PAINTING BY JAMES PEALE.

sentences not welcome to Kings. All through the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries an open or concealed study of human rights went forward and affected deeply all those scholars who came up from the common people of England. Between John Milton and Edmund Burke the study of liberty was involved in every college course, and thus was created that kind of unrest and long-ing which induced Puritans and Pilgrim Fathers to seek the shores of America.

Milton and Edmund Burke received their boyhood education from the plain sect called Quakers, and thus betray the fact that there were a hundred years of English history in which the educational processes lay largely with the hands of the common people. Edmund Burke was an Irish boy, and it is probable that he absorbed from his home life more love of freedom than he extracted from the text-books of the old classics.

Of every political question of his day Edmund Burke espoused the side which offered the most of the divine rights of man. He was by nature a republican, and long before Washington became visible Burke became the champion of the colonies of England and argued for one law and one right under the English flag, wave where it might. He opposed ardently the special taxation of the American colonies. He was consistent and irrepressible.

The constitutional law of England had made the King more of a president than a monarch. Edmund Burke addressed a long public letter to the King and argued against him upon American affairs just as though the King were only an attorney of the other side. The let-tors had made out their case before the public tribunal. The first step toward a revolution is the finding and promulging of political truth. The mind must perceive its rights before it will draw a sword. And then, drawing the sword is a perilous resort, because the venerable institution of Kings is often too great for young justice to overthrow. Washington was destined to bring to his task of fighting for what the orators had found a temperament which made his defeat almost impossible. He was the embodiment of wisdom, of patience and of endurance—qualities which fitted him to lead ragged troops against the soldiers of a King and to lead them for

He had been a student of freedom long before he fought for it; but the public writers had marked out the lesson which the young Washington was to study, and the philosophers had to tell the soldier when the time had come for drawing the sword. When Washington was called to take charge of the Colonial troops independence was not the prize to be won. Battles had been fought at Lexington and Bunker Hill to defy British taxation. It was hoped that the King and his Parliament would repeal the special legislation which transferred the hard-earned money of America to the banks of the old country. The motive of Bunker Hill was to make England treat Boston as she treated Lon-don and Manchester. The dream of independence had not yet been cherished or at least announced. All these patriots wanted liberty, but only that quantity of liberty which belonged to the citizens of London. In 1774 George Washington said: "No such thing as independence is desired by any thinking man in America." John Adams at the same time wrote: "That there be any who pant after independence is the greatest slander." But in 1769 members of the Parliament had declared that unless the King changed his method of dealing with the colonies they would revolt and be lost to the Crown. Colonel Bazze said in the House of Commons: "I now warn Ministers that if they persist in their wretched course of oppression the whole continent of America will rise in arms and these colonies will bedost to England forever." As in the recent civil war, the end was greater than Mr. Lincoln expected, and infinitely beyond what was dreamed of by Mr. Seward and other eminent men, so in the year 1775 a political philosophy was at work whose future was hidden from all those who have since become so immortal as founders of the

" Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria in-stead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing oplum, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves.'

GIVEN A SURPRISE.

Gov. Larrabee Sends His Message to the Iowa Legislature.

Principal Points Mentioned-The Financial Condition Gratifying-Rallway Legislation, Prohibition, Trusts and Ballot .Reform.

GOVERNOR LARRABEE SPEAKS.

DES MOINES, Ia., Feb. 14.-To the great surprise of every one Governor Larrabee submitted his message to the Legislature Thursday. It was supposed that he would wait until the House was permanently organized, but as that event seems still afar off the Governor decided to present his last State paper immediately. The document is a very long one, covers sixty-two closelyprinted pages and touches upon almost every subject of interest to the State. The paper was not read in either house, and this formality will probably be dispensed with. A synopsis is as follows: The financial condition of Iowa, according to Governor Larrabee, is better than that of any other State in the Union. It is even better than it has been for six years and it has been good all that time. The State debt June 30, 1889, was a bagatelle of $30,388. Estimates for this year show that there will be a surplus of $530, 777 available for improvements. In the last two years, says the Governor.

crime has undergone a remarkable decrease in Iowa. While there were 6,165 coavictions for crime in the two years preceding 1888 there have been only 1,945 since. The decrease in the proportion of convictions for violation of the prohlbitory law is no less remarkable if there has been to laxify in the law's enforcement. In has been no laxity in the law's enforcement. In the latter period there were 673 convictions for liquor-selling, as compared with 1,326 in the

The Governor, backing up the Superintend-The Governor, backing up the Superintend-ent of Public Schools, expresses himself in favor of free text-books, and recommends the passage of an act making it the duty of school boards to furnish free text-books to all children attending public schools.

Governor Larrabee appears to think that the cities of Iowa have not been afforded sufficient facility by the Legislature in making the imfacility by the Legislature in making the im-provements necessary to the modern city. He advises that much freedom be given them in providing sewers, paving, lighting, heating, water-works and street railways. At the same time he guards the recommendation by sug-gesting great caution in disposing of fran-chises. He also suggests the adoption of more efficient measures for stamping out hog chol-era.

The Governor speaks at length of the fight between the people and railroads of Iowa, which, until recently, has been waged so bitterly since 1838. He claims that experience has justified the railroad legislation of the last General Assembly, and makes some radical recommendations for the future. He fa-vors a two-cent rate on first-class roads and the establishment of joint rates. He thinks the railroads should be prohibited from engaging in the coal or meat business, or from doing any thing also besides railward work women so as not to else besides railroad work proper, so as not to compete with persons engaged in other kinds of business. He thinks the railroad commission ers should be empowered to compet the rail-roads to tell who are their stockholders and give their residence. Also the salaries of all general officers, and thinks the law against passes should be enforced more strictly. Governor Larrabee also favors the adoption of the muin features of the Australian ballot

Governor Larrabee also favors the adoption of the main features of the Australian ballot system—(1) the printing of all ballots by the Government and (2) the seclusion of the voter when he prepares an easts his ballot. He calls attention to the question of extend-ing to woman the right of voting at munic-ipal elections. "The continued good results of its exercise in our sister State, Kansas, rein-force the arguments in favor of trying the ex-periment in Iowa. In many of the States perlment in Iowa. In many of the States women vote for memers of school boards, and I see no reason why they should not do so here." In regard to trusts and combinations the report says: "Although the toil of the husbandman, our fertile soil and a propitious season have com-bined to give us bountiful crops it is a question whether our farmers fully share in the general whether our farmers fully share in the general prosperity. Through trusts and combinations the prices of many of the necessaries of life are greatly increased to the undoubted disad-vantage of the farmer, who does not receive a just equivalent in the exchanges of commodities. It is clear that this evil is ag-gravated by the incongruities of the present tariff, and tariff revision should be no longer delayed. The accumulation of funds in the National Treasury is the fruitful source of
