DISCUSSED THE CHARTER.

CITY FATHERS MEET, TALK AND ENACT.

The City Conneil Holds a Lively Meeting - The Board of Public Works Remains.

Another lively meeting was that of the city council on Monday evening last. In Ann Arbor's legislature are weekly heard choice bits of wisdom and eloquent flights of oratory, and Monday night was no exception to the rule. The council first listened to the usual reports, then passed a resolution authorizing the fire committee and fire commissioners, acting jointly, to purchase a new hook and ladder truck and a horse for the fire department. Then they authorized the city treasurer to turn over $21,000 of hospital bonds to the University authorities, provided the latter will accept them at par value. The remaining $4,000 of the amount promised is to be paid in cash to the treasurer of the University. Having disposed of these matters, the councilmen turned their attention to the amendment to the city charter offered by Ald. Walker, providing for the abolition of the board of public works A lively debate ensued, in the course o which Mr. Walker criticised the present board severely. Aldermen Herz, Mann. Miller and Dieterle vigorously opposed the amendment, which was finally laid on the table by a vote of 7 to 5. City Attorney Kearney then read the proposed section of the charter relative to the assessment of benefits and damages to property-owners. No sooner had he taken his seat than Ald. Walker rose to propose still another amendment, providing for the election of city treasurer and street commissioner by the people. The debate on this subject was spirited, and the sentiment of the aldermen seemed favorable to the change. They, however, voted against it on the ground that it was too late to submit any further amendments. Then the report of the charter committee, which was submitted a week ago, came to a vote and was carried. A motion that E. B. Norris be paid $100 for assisting the city attorney to revise and compile the ordinances was offered, but subsequently withdrawn, as the aldermen did not appear to be ready to act upon it.

WANTED-A HOTEL.

A Correspondent Advances Cogent Reasons Why Aun Arbor Should Have a New Hotel.

EDITOR REGISTER: Our citizens will all remember how only a few years since the Business Mens' Association was started and "Illustrated Ann Arbor" was issued. Since then Ann Arbor has grown more rapidly than ever, and we have secured electric lighting, the water works, the street railway, and the railroad to Ypsilanti, and the number of students in the University has increased from 1,600 to 2,400. All this is proof of what united effort will do. But we have only begun. Said one of the city's most honored residents: "Ann Arbor needs a first-class hotel, and it will pay." In every new town south and west, a first-class hotel seems to be the first requisite. Our city needs it badly. With it we can make Ann Arbor a summer resort. It should be centrally located, on a corner lot, have wide verandas and piazzas, and a dining room large enough to accommodate the University's guests at alumni dinners. It will pay well. Outside capital will come in and build it as soon as this is known, as it did the water works and street roads. Besides, if the matter is properly managed, the city can be filled with teachers. Prof. Trueblood has already started a school of elocution; now let, as an illustration, Prof. Beman start one of mathematics, Prof. Thomas one of language, Prof. Spalding one of botany, Dr. Prescott one of chemistry, Dr. Winchell one of geology, or Prof. Stanley one of music, etc., etc. Let them all unite, all advertise jointly, and once started the schools will grow. We can have these schools just as well as Amherst College or Harvard College. In fact, Ann Arbor is a much more desirable place in the summer than either. It is the prettiest city in Michigan. Every person living in the city is interested. We can boom Ann Arbor as a summer resort, or for summer schools, and fill the city with visitors all summer long. Our boarding houses are all open from June to October. Now for a new first-class hotel. Let us hear from others upon the matter.

Wedding Bells. C. O. Townsend, who graduated from the University in 1888, and Miss Mary Louise Taylor, daughter of Mrs. M. W. Taylor, were quietly married on Tuesday evening, at the home of the bride, 19 Church-st. Rev. J. W. Bradshaw performed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs-Townsend left for Macon, Ga., where Mr. Townsend resides. He is instructor of chemistry in the Wesleyan female meminary located in that city.

KOCH'S LYMPH INJECTED.

Two Patients Inoculated on Saturday Last by Professors Vaughn and Christopher.

Last week Prof. Vaughn received from Germany a supply of a reddish fluid known throughout the world as Koch's lymph. On Saturday morning the first applications of the remedy were made on two patients, one, Isaac N. Smith, being an inmate of the regular, and the other, Miss Newberry, an inmate of the homeopathic hospital. A second application was made on Mr. Smith, Tuesday afternoon. After the first operation his temperature rose and all the other symptoms appeared, which were expected to follow an injection of the lymph. So far the treatment in his case has been successful. The inoculations will be continued from time to time when deemed advisable. The results in the case of Miss Newberry are. not so marked, she having experienced no great change as yet. The operations were performed by Drs. Vaughn and Christopher. Two other patients, suffering from lupus, will soon arrive at the hospital. They too will undergo the Koch treatment.

ANN ARBOR STREET RAILWAY. Election of Directors and Officers-

What the Company Propose to Do.

On Saturday the new stockholders of the Ann Arbor Street Railway Company met and elected the following directors: H. P. Glover, of Ypsilanti; C. E. Hiscock, of Ann Arbor; H. T. Morton, of Ann Arbor; C. D. Haines, of Ypsilanti; and H. R. Scovill, of Ypsilanti. The officers of the company are as follows: President, H. P. Glover; secretary, H. T. Morton; treasurer, C. E. Hiscock; Chas. Fall remains superintendent of the road. A temporary distribution of the stock was made last week, H. P. Glover taking 486 shares; H. T. Morton, 1; C D. Haines, 1; C. E. Hiscock, 1; H. R. Scoville, 1; Chas. S. Fall, 10; Jas. R. Bach, 5; W. W. Watts, 5. The sum of $25,000 has been set aside for the purpose of extending and improving the plant. President Glover has already sent for two new trail cars. This virtually places both roads under the same control, and so ends all controversy between them. There can be no doubt that the two systems working together will aid much towards building up the interests of both cities and bringing them closer together, as they should be. It is fortunate that they are both wholly under the control of local capitalists, as local interests are, as a result, much more likely to be conserved.

Temperance Revival.

An interesting gospel temperance meeting was held in Cropsey's hall last Sunday afternoon. Dr. J. B. Steere made an earnest address in which he strongly advocated a 'temperance movement in this city. A committee consisting of Dr. Steere and Mr. Esslinger was appointed for the purpose of interesting the churches in the matter. At the meeting in Cropsey's hall, next Sunday at 3 P. M., plans for the temperance revival will be considered.

An Ypsilanti Romance.

Ann Arbor students should learn to behave themselves better when they visit Ypsilanti. The Sentinel tells the following story: "A trio of students from Ann Arbor met a Waterloo at the hands of some factory girls last Thursday, that may teach them a lesson. It is the method of these 'gentlemen' frequently to visit Ypsilanti in the afternoon, and near the close of working hours waylay the girls employed in the factories and attempt to 'mash.' The trio were engaged in this pleasant amusement at the time stated, and gleefully saw a triumph, as the fair game seemed to hesitate. But, in about two jerks, as they ricked their battered tiles from the mud, smoothed out their ruffled bangs, and sneaked away, they realized that some girls can fight as well as flirt."

In Memoriam.

Mrs. Diana P. Wells was born in West Candor, Tioga county, N. Y., June 25, 1833, and died at her home in Ann Arbor, January 22, 1891, after years of suffering patiently borne. She was a daughter of W. B. Mead, tormerly of this city. She leaves a mother, husband, two daughters, three sisters and toree brothers. She was a kind and affectionate mother, a devoted wife and a consistent Christian. These who knew her best loved her best. She passed away peacefully, pointing toward heaven and exclaiming: "Open the door, open the door." The latch was raised by an unseen hand and her spirit passed to the better world. Funeral services were conducted at the house, 48 north Fourth-st, by Rev. A. S. Carman, of the Baptist church. address was given by the Rev. J. W. Crippen, of the Methodist church, and a few remarks were made by Rev L. M. Bennett. Her remains were interred in the cemetery at Salem. * * *

Choral Union, Lecture Association Various Interesting Notes Relative to Other Subjects.

Much fun has been had at the expense of the so-called school of ournalism at Cornell. President White, in a recent interview, said: "We never had a school of journalism, although the papers stated we had and poked fun at the University about it. The truth of the matter is that Mr Brainard Smith, a professor in the University, was once a newspaper writer on a paper in this city, and some one suggested that he should deliver a few lectures on journalism. He showed the students the beauty of condensation in writing. It occurred to me that a few lectures on the subject by professional editors would be valuable to the students, and so I invited Erastus Brooks. then in the prime of his editorial career, and several other editors to deliver a course of lectures on journalism. There was no professorship in journalism and I never thought of establishing one."

Russell H. Conwell is the next attraction in the lecture course. He will speak on the evening of February 21, on the subject: "The Silver Crown, or Born a King." Mr. Conwell is the pastor of the largest Baptist church in Philadelphia-Reserved seats will | e on sale, Feb. 19.

W. C. T. V. COLUMN.

[ EDITED BY MRS. ALLIE LUSE DICK, A. M ]

That the brewes are advocating the sale of liquors and the desecration of the Lord's Day in trying to have the Columbian Exposition open on Sundays all know. That every Christian should be opposed to such a proceeding and should do all in his power to prevent such a disgrace, no one will deny. The following extracts from an article by Mrs. J. C. Batcham, published sometime ago in the Herald of Reform, will be of interest to all members of the W. C. T. U. and to all others who love our country and its institutions. Says she: "Our fathers moored their young Ship of State in a secure harbor, with the trusty anchor of Sabbath observance and the strong chains of obedience to God and protection for the rights of man. England before us laid its foundations in respect for the Lord's Day. We sometimes blame our ancestors for the strictness of their Sabbath laws, but they were mild compared with those they left behind. To their regard for the Sabbath we owe it that we are to-day a Christian rather than a heathen nation. But time has brought in other influences. Gratitude for French assistance in the Revolution gave French infidelity a foothold which helped it to mould our constitution and keep from it the name of God. Increasing in migration brought the influence of the European Sunday. But the change was slow before our own civil war, to which is traceable much of the growing desecration of the day. Under the plea of military necessity came the mustering, drilling, marching and fighting on the Lord's Day; railroads transported both men and supplies, and postal and telegraphic services were used freely. The war ceased, but the Sabbath had been shaken from its pedestal. Today at all military posts, Sunday duties are so exacting that officers and men are petitioning for a day of rest. Government is thus the first source of the evil current. To this may he added; second, railroad and steamboat companies. Third, the demoralizing Sunday paper published for profit. Fourth, the liquor traffic, which defies law and largely controls legislation. Fifth, Ignorance of the value of the Sabbath as a civil institution, and of the relationship of government to it, which, though it should not control religion belief or action, should protect the day as one of rest and worship. Sixth, the greed for money that tempts our business men, against their own consciences, to open their places of business on the Sabbath. Seventh, the carelessness, apathy and complicity of intelligent and Christian people. The united current from these seven sources threatens the direst disaster to our republic. We have forgotten that "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty." We have loosed from our moorings and are drifting. Where are we drifting? Plainly into a disregard for the sanctity of law which will bring us into an era of general lawlessness, into a recklessness of the rights of others, which is socialism; into hatred of religion, which means atheism; into a steady increase of secular pursuits on Sunday till we shall have neither a civil

For some time past a certain resident of Baker street has been greatly and incessantly annoyed by the nocturnal pranks of a gang of youngsters who seem to think their special mission is to make his life miserable. If somebody's boys don't desist, we will not be surprised to hear of their taking their meals off the mantel shelf. The citizen's ire is roused to shooting heat. -Dexter Leader.

The following pretty little story is taken from the Chelsea Herald: "A very pretty young school marm in a public school not a thousand miles from Chelsea, saw a mouse run across the class room floor one day last week. "Scholars," she said, "a mouse is in the room. Do not be frightened." The little girls all tightened their skirts around their legs, and the eyes of the little boys glistened with suppressed ex-citement. "Don't anybody be afraid," said the young school marm, heavens! just then the mouse dashed across the floor toward her, and she made a frantic leap to the top of the bench. The mouse shot out of the door and in time the trembling teacher de scended and taught school again."

SAVING OF LIFE.

Official Statistics Read Before the State Sanitary Convention.

In a carefully-prepared paper read before the Sanitary convention at Vicksburg, the proceedings of which are published, Dr. Baker gave official statistics and evidence which he summarized as "The record of the great saving of human life "The record of the great saving of human life and health in Michigan in rec-nt years is one to which, it seems to me, the State and local boards of health in Michigan can' justly 'point with pride.' It is a record of the saving of over one hundred lives per year from small-pox, four hundred lives per year saved from death by scarlet fever, and nearly six Lundred lives per year saved from death by diphtheria—an aggregate of cleven hundred lives per year, or three lives per day saved from these three diseases. gate of eleven numbered lives per year, or three lives per day saved from these three diseases. ### THE RED MAN.

The President Interviewed on His Alleged Wrongs.

His Improvidence the Cause of Most of His Discontent-He Has Not Been Robbed Under the Present Administration.

TO BLAME HIMSELF. NEW YORK, Feb. 3.-The World prints a special purporting to quote President Harrison in an interview relative to the alleged wrongs upon the Indians.

"Some of these grievances are real, some are imaginary; some are inevitable consequences of our form of Government. The bison and the elk have vanished from the plains, and thus the great natural larder of the Sioux has been emptied, but no legislative act caused or can remedy that. The Indian is naturally improvident; he will gorge himself and his family to-day until his skin and their skins are bursting—he will eat ten days' ra-tions in one and then complain because a fresh supply is not forthcoming the instant his appetite beckons. In past years he has often, no doubt, been robbed by cattle rings, by agents and by traders. The Indian has often received poor clothing and moldy ra-tions. But I do not believe the Indians are robbed to-day. I have no doubt the Indian thinks he is being robbed, because on Saturday he forgets that on the previous Monday he ate his entire week's rations. Also, he day he ate his entire week's rations. Also, he does not comprehend why his supplies are cut down and delayed. That is not my fault, nor the fault of the Secretary of the Interior, nor that of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs. The Commissioner promptly reports to the Secretary who at once forwards the report to me. tary, who at once forwards the report to me, and I recommend to Congress that the appropriation be promptly passed in full. There my power and my responsibility and that of the Indian Department end, and the delay be-gins. Congress does the cutting down of which the Indian complains, and the wisdom or folly of this is beyond my control. I do know, how-ever, that the moment Congress appropriates the money, however much or little, every dollar of it is at once applied to the Indians' wants, and the entire machinery of the Indian Department is put in swift motion to get the supplies out as soon as possible.
"I am entirely satisfied with the present administration of Indian affairs. It is thoroughly honest and intelligent, and no complaint has been given against it during the last two years that has not at once received prompt attention and the cause removed There are many conflicting stories of the cause of the present outbreak. They are being examined into. The chief trouble is a long-standing and constantly growing internal dissension among various factions of the Sioux nation. I shall talk with this Sioux delegation if they desire a council; shall give them a full hearing, and if any wrongs are presented they will be met promptly and thoroughly. I believe, however, that the main grievance is beyond my control—the tandiness with which Con-gress has ratified the agreement made with them by the Sloux commission two years ago, and the cutting down of the appropriation recommended for the current year. That they have been robbed by agents during my administration I know personally is not true. That matter has been thoroughly sitted and the charge found wanting."

THEY NEED HELP.

The Reports of Destitution Among Kansas Farmers Not Exaggerated. TOPEKA, Kan., Feb. 3.—Hon. F. W. McElroy, of Oberlin, the Democratic nominee for Congress in the Sixth district in 1882, has arrived in this city. He says that the reports regarding destitution among the farmers have not been exaggerated, and that there is crying need for relief. A severe snow-storm has been raging in the section referred to, and eighteen inches of snow now covers the ground. The poor people are in more pressing need of assistance than ever in consequence of the change in the weather, which has added to the danger of starvation that of freezing to death.

Choked to Death While at Dinner.

DUBUQUE, Ia., Feb. 3.-Justice of the Peace Cooney invited his uncle to take dinner with him Sunday. While the meal was in progress the old man threw up his hands and was supposed to be in a fit. He was taken outdoors, where he died The coroner investigated the matter and found a piece of beef lodged in the throat of the de ceased by which he was choked to death.

Brutal Murder in Michigan.

ISHPEMING, Mich., Feb. 3.-A coldblooded murder was committed here Monday evening, Patrick Sullivan being the victim. He was walking home with a companion when one Toomey stepped behind him and fractured his skull with a heavy club. Sullivan died before a physician could reach him. Toomey is not under arrest.

AN UNBIDDEN GUEST.

Death Closes the Banquet of New York's Board of Trade.

He Touches Secretary Windom, and the Noted Financier Suddenly Expires-Brief Sketch of the Deceased Statesman.

HIS LAST SPEECH.

New York, Jan. 30 .- Secretary Windom died suddenly here Thursday night from heart disease. Just as the Secretary concluded his speech at the Board of Trade dinner he grew deathly pale, his eyes shut and opened spasmodically, and he fell inert on his chair. Thence he slipped to the floor where he lay unconscious. The most intense excitement immediately ensued. Judge Arnoux, ex-Secretary Bayard and Captain Snow were the first of several who ran to Mr. Windom's aid. They found him ap-parently unconscious. They lifted him gently and carried him into an anteroom, where several physicians proceeded at once to his assistance, but it was found that he was dead. His had been the first toast of the evening. He had finished his response, had seated himself, swooned at once and died almost instantly. Every effort to restore him was made, but in vain. He died of heart disease. The great assemblage at once dissolved. Mr. Windom had been the only speaker, and the sentiment to which he responded was: "Our Country's Prosperity Dependent Upon

Its Instruments of Commerce." When it was officially announced that the Secretary was dead Secretary Tracy at once went to the nearest telegraph office and sent a message to President Harrison informing him of the untimely event and requesting him to communicate with Mrs. Windom.

THE NEWS AT THE CAPITAL. WASHINGTON, Jan. 30 .- The announcement of the sudden death of Secretary Windom in New York gave almost as great a shock to his official friends and associates here as did the shooting of President Garfield to the members of his official household. It was so terribly sudden and unexpected that all who heard the news were profoundly shocked and so overcome as to be unable to express the grief they felt. As soon as the telegram bearing the sad intelligence was received by the Associated Press 1ts contents were immediately communicated to President Harrison at the White House. He was in the library at the time, talking with Mrs. Harrison, and when the message was read to him he was greatly distressed and almost completely overcome. He im-mediately ordered his carriage and went, at once to the house of the Postmaster-General, but a few blocks away, where a Cabinet dinner had been in progress and from which he had returned but a few minutes before. A reception had followed the dinner, so the guests had not dispersed. Mrs. Windom and her two daughters and Mrs. Colgate, of New York, who is visiting them, were among those present at the reception. As soon as the President arrived he had a hurried conversation with Secretaries Blaine and Proctor and the Postmaster-General and told them of the grief that had befallen them. They then privately informed Mrs. Colgate of Mr. Windom's death, and she, without exciting the suspicions of Mrs. Windom and her daughters, succeeded in getting them to their carriage and home. The President, Secretary Proctor and Postmaster-General Wanamaker entered a carriage and followed directly after. When Mrs. Windom and her daughters reached the house Mrs. Colgate gently broke the dreadful news. Mrs. Windom was completely overcome and had to be assisted to her chamber. The shock was a terrible one, as when the Secretary left Washington in the morning he seemed in the best of health and spirits. The President and the members of his Cabinet who were present extended their sympathy to the stricken family and offered their services to them.

SKETCH OF HIS CAREER. William Windom was born in Belmont County, O., May 10, 1827. He received an academic education, studied law at Mount Vernon, O., and was admitted to the bar in 1850. In 1852 he became prosecuting attorney for Knox County, but in 1855 removed to Minnesota, and was chosen to Congress for the term County, but in 1855 removed to Minnesota, and was chosen to Congress for the term beginning March 4, 1859. He was re-elected thereafter every two years until 1869, serving with credit to himself and his State through the period of the civil war and reconstruction. In the lower House, owing to his familiarity with the red men, he served two terms as chairman of the committee on Indian affairs, and was also at the head of the special committee to visit the Western tribes in 1865 and of that on the conduct of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs in 1807. In 1870 he was appointed to the United States Senate to fill the unexpired term of Daniel 8. Norton, deceased, and he was subsequently chosen for the term that ended in 1877. He was re-elected for the one that closed in 1883, but resigned in 1881 to enter the Cabinet of President Garfield as Secretary of the Treasury but, retired on the accession of President Arthur in Garfield as Secretary of the Treasury but, retired on the accession of President Arthur in the same year. The vacancy was filled during the called session of that year by Alonzo J. Edgerton, under executive appointment. In October of the same year, after Mr. Windom's withdrawal from the Treasury on the death of President Garfield, he was elected by the Minesota Legislature to fill the vacancy caused by his resignation early in the year, and he served until the close of the term in 1883.

Mr. Windom was a candidate for the Presiserved until the close of the term in 1883.

Mr. Windom was a candidate for the Presidency before the Republican convention of 1890, the Minnesota delegation casting their ten votes for him until the twenty-ninth ballot, when some of the votes were transferred to Mr. Blaine. Three delegates voted for him until the close of the balloting. After his retirement from the Senate in 1883 Mr. Windom spent his time between Minnesota and New York, practicing law and attending to business York, practicing law and attending to business interests, until called to the Treasury portfolio by President Harrison.

by President Harrison.

Since his resumption of the duties of the office of Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Windom has been constantly before the public because of the late unsettled financial affairs of the country. He had shown himself equal to all emergencies and was found never to be wanting on occasions that demanded prompt and decisive action. In the time of Wall street's greatest troubles Mr. Windom acted with such good judgment that the street was saved from a panie and many firms from ruin.]

STATE OF TRADE.

Business Continues Brisk Throughout the Country-Failures for a Week.

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—Dun & Co. in their weekly review of trade say business continues unprecedented in volume and satisfactory in character. Measured by clearing-house returns, trade exceeded that of a year ago by 21/2 per cent. in amount, and that meant a volume of business larger than in any other year at this season. The tone in commercial circles throughout the country was hopeful, and the money markets were comparatively easy at nearly all points.

In the United States the business failures during the seven days ended yesterday numbered 320, against 380 the preceding week and 291 the corresponding week last year.

A Wisconsin Bank Reopened. MILWAUKEE, Feb. 3.-The Bank of Commerce at Superior, which made an assignment several months ago, reopened its doors for business Monday morning under the same name and with the capital increased to $250,000. The reopening of the institution has already had the effect of loosening the money market in Superior, hundreds of depositors having been tied up since the suspension.

Lieutenant Schwatka Much Improved. MASON CITY, Ia., Feb. 2.—The condition of Lieutenant Schwatka, the renowned Arctic explorer, who was reported as dead, is much improved, and it is expected that he will soon rally from the severe accident that befell him Friday, when he fell over the balustrade of the hotel and broke his nose in three places and sustained severe bodily injuries.

Death of Meissonier.

Paris, Feb. 2.—Meissonier, the fa-mous artist, died here Saturday. He was born at Lyons in 1813. He early manifested artistic inclinations and underwent many trials to satisfy them. SAPOLIO is one of the best known city luxuries and each time a cake is used an hour is saved. On floors, tables and painted work it acts like a charm. For scouring pots, pans and metals it has no equal. If your store-keeper does not keep it you should insist upon his doing so, as it always gives satisfaction and its immense sale all over the United States makes it an almost necessary article to any well supplied store. Everything shines after its use, and even the children delight in using it in their attempts to help around the house.

WINDOM ON FREE COINAGE. Secretary Windom, on the tatal evening of Thursday last, delivered an address in New York, which was replete with common sense and far reaching wisdom. Among other things he touched on the subject of financial reform. Said he: "Believing that there is not enough gold or silver in the world to meet the necessities of business, I am an earnest bimetallist, and concede to no one a stronger desire than I feel for free and unlimited coinage of silver, as soon as conditions can be reached through international agreement or otherwise, by which such coinage shall be safe. But it is my firm conviction that for this country to enter upon that experiment now and under existing conditions would be extremely disastrous, and that it would result, not in bimetallism, but in silver monometallism. Such an experiment would, in my judgment, prove a greater disappointment to its advocates than to any one else. They insist that it would expand the circulation and permanently enhance the value of silver. I believe it would produce a swift and severe contraction and eventually reduce the market value of silver. Free and unlimited coinage of silver by the United States, while the other great nations pursued an opposite policy, would invite all the owners of that metal throughout the world to exchange 3711 grains of pure silver, worth about 83 cents, for 23.22 grains of pure gold, worth everywhere 100 cents. Nearly all the nations of Europe are anxious to exchange their silver for gold, and they would at once accept so tempting an offer." Mr. Windom further said that the people of the United States "would instantly lock up all the gold at command and then join the panic inspired procession to the treasury, each and all anxious to be in time to grasp the golden prize before it is too late. The sudden retirement of $600,000,000 of gold, with the accompanying panic, would cause contraction and commercial disaster unparallelled in human experience, and our country would at once step down to the silver basis, when there would be no longer any inducement for coinage, and silver dollars would sink to their bullion value. When the silver dollar ceases to have more value than the bullion it con ains there will be little inducement to coin our own silver, and the cost of transportation will prevent its coming from abroad. How, then, will unlimited coinage either expand the circulation or enhance the value of silver?" Thus spoke a man who was acknowledged to by one of the three or four great ananciers of this country. The truths expressed by him in the above extract are so palpable and clear that no one could successfully deny them. Free coinage, under present conditions, is a delusion and a snare, and a person who makes this assertion is not to be branded a monometallist, either.

SHALL ANN ARBOR HAVE

HOTEL? A correspondent in this issue of THE REGISTER forcibly points out the necessity of a new hotel in this city. Such an enterprise would certainly be a paying one. In addition to the sources of revonne which the writer mentions, there is another not less important. The hotel parlors and dining hall could be so arranged as to furnish the best of accommodations for private dancing parties and public balls. A city in a neighboring state, whose 'ransients are considerably fewer in number than those who visit Ann Arbor, recently erected a $110,000 hotel, which during the social season is the scene of almost nightly balls and banquets. These affairs, together with the patronage of traveling men and boarders, have made the enterprise a very profitable one. Ann Arbor should puild a hotel worth at least $75,000 or 380,000. Who will start the ball rolling? Shall outside or local capital be interasted? In other words, shall it be a bonus or stock company?

FIFTY MILLIONS WANTED.

SUIT FOR RECOVERY OF 1,204,000 ACRES OF LAND.

the Heirs of Robert Morris, the Mil-Honaire of Revolutionary Times, After a Vast Tract.

A large number of the heirs of Robert Morris, the millionaire of the Revolution and Washington's financial agent during the darkest struggle for American independence, have decided to bring an action for the recovery of a large tract of land in the western counties of New York, said to embrace 1,204,000 acres, and estimated to be worth something like $50,000,000. The heirs reside in New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio, and it is the descendants in the latter state that have taken the initiative in an effort to recover property of which they believe the great patriot was fraudulently dispossessed, and to which they believe they have a valid claim as his heirs.

The history of Robert Morris' land purchases in western New York is the history of the early civilization and settlement of the counties of Niagara, Erie, Chautauqua, Cattaraugus, Allegheny, Wyoming, Genesee and Orleans, and will bring the investigation of the claims back to the period immediately succeeding the revolution. The end of the contest for independence left Robert Morris in the possession of vast wealth. In May, 1791, Mr. Morris acquired the preemption right of Massachusetts to all the territory west of the Phelps and Gorham purchase in New York, which was afterward designated the Holland purchase and the Morris reserve.

Mr. Morris subsequently extinguished the title that the Indians of the six nations had in the lands by paying them $165,000. In 1792 he sold to the Holland company 3,000,000 acres in the counties named, reserving for himself a tract of 500,000 acres lying between the Phelps and Gorham purchase and the lands of the Holland company. Mr. Morris secured the Indian title to these lands at a council of the natives held at the "Big Tree," which is now in the heart of Genesee. On a satisfactory treaty being signed, and the payment made to the Indians, Mr. Morris began to put his reserve 500,000 acres on the market.

The Phelps and Gorham purchase consisted of 5,000,000 acres of land that had been ceded to Massachusetts by New York, and about the same time that Mr. Morris made his purchase Oliver Phelps and Nathaniel Gorham bought this immense tract for $1,000,000. They, too, put their land upon the market, and of this tract Robert Morris purchased at eightpence an acre a tract adjoining his own, comprising 1,204,000 acres. This is the land in question in the proceedings about to be instituted by the Morris heirs. To Wilhelm and Jan Willink and others interested in the Holland company Mr. Morris mortgaged the tract of 1,204,000 acres when ill fortune overtook him, and when for a long time he was confined in a debtor's

The Willinks and their associates of the Holland company took advantage of the straits to which the speculation had reduced Mr. Morris, and by the fore closure of the mortgage acquired full title to the land, had it surveyed and opened a land office for its sale at Batavia, with Charles Ellicott as their resident manager. The greater part of this domain was sold up to 1805 to bona fide purchasers and settlers, and the affairs by the Farmers' Loan and Trust compa ny of Buffalo in 1845.-Chicago Herald.

"Perhaps," said a business man, "there are a good many of us who believe that all the world has absolute confidence in our honesty. ### The Cowboy's Attire.

I was standing talking to a gentleman here in Utopia one day who was just from the States, when a cowboy passed, going on a gallop through the village. He had on leggins, jacket, spurs and wide hat. "He is a cowboy, I suppose," remarked the man. "Yes," I replied "Now, don't he feel big," he continued, "with all that rigging on?" "No, sir," I answered, "he does not. That is the only kind of a rig he can successfully run cattle in, and he is not aware that he is exciting any especial attention. Those strong leggins and jacket protect him from the thorns and both through which he sometimes has speed to nead off a wild : large spurs are to make his pony go quick when he goes to rope an animal. That wide brimmed hat is to protect his face from the burning sun in this southern climate. That cowboy belongs to the church and Sunday you may see him in the congregation, dressed up as neat as a pin, and likely teaching a class in the Sunday school."—Galveston News.

Queer Old People in Paris.

Paris passes for an unhealthy city, or according to the familiar expression, a place where people can't make old bones. Nevertheless its centenarians are not rare. In the death notices of The Petites Affiches we find the name of Mme. Veuve Carrier, who has just died in the rue Violet No. 77 at the age of 100 years and 6 months. This venerable lady passed into a better world without having made any noise in this. In 1886 M. Guerin de Tencin, an old artillery officer of Napoleon I, died at the age of 102 years, and eight days before his death he was walking about in the Luxembourg leaning upon the arm of his servant. In the following year, 1887, an old man was arrested for begging in the street, and was sentenced in the police court to eight days' imprisonment. He was formerly known as a trainer of rats, and he used to make a living by exhibiting his pets. But all his learned rats died of old age, and he himself was too old and feeble to train up a new class, so he was reduced to beggary. After his trial it was established that he was 100 years and 8 months old. M. Pierre Turpin, who died in 1876, was 104 years old. In the month of October of the following year M. Brogues, who lived in Orleans alley, married a charming widow of 95. He was just eleven years older than his blushing bride. In the same month and year M. Duroy, a retired officer, was present at the marriage of his two great-granddaughters. At the dessert he sang a song. He was then 104 years old .- Paris Courrier Etats

How to Walk Fast.

Persons who have never been trained to walk fast generally quicken their gait by bending forward and lengthening their stride, at the same time bending their knees very much at each step. It is pretty safe to say that no one can possibly adopt this style and keep a fair walk at a faster gait than six miles an hour. The fast walker must keep himself erect, his shoulders back and chest thrown out. He must put his forward foot and heel first, and with the leg straight. He must, if he expects to get a good stride, work his hips considerably, overcoming the sidewise tendency of the hip movement by a compensatory swinging of the arms.

The length of a stride in fast walking is astonishing to those who look at it. A little figuring will make it clear why this is so. There are 1,760 yards in a a mile, or 1,760 strides 3 feet long. To do a mile in 8 minutes a walker must cover 220 yards a minute, or 11 feet a second. Now 220 steps a minute—nearly 4 a second—is pretty quick work, as any one may discover for himself. Even 3 steps a second, or 180 to the minute, seems quick. The chances are that your 8 minute man, although his legs move so quickly that his steps seem short, is not doing as many as 200 steps to the minute, and consequently that the stride is at least 3 feet 6 inches. With a little practice a man 6 feet high can easily maintain a 4 foot stride for half a mile. -London Society Times.

A Bath in the Font.

Ovide Musin, the violinist, was the victim of an odd accident recently. His concert company was about to begin the evening entertainment at the Marcy Avenue Baptist church in Brooklyn, and Mr. Musin, arrayed in faultless evening dress, thought that he would view the audience without being seen. To accomplish his purpose he stepped behind a curtain which hung back of the platlinist found himself in three feet of water. He emerged a very wet and angry man. Mr. Musin had inadvertently stepped into the baptismal font.

It was after 8 o'clock and the concert had begun. A young man came to the violinist's rescue, however, and said that he would provide Mr. Musin with a dry ontfit. But it was half an hour before he did, and Mr. Musin was several minutes late in making his appearance. The new trousers fitted him rather awkwardly, and he was not in a pleasant frame of mind, but he got through with his part of the programme, and the audience probably is still ignorant of the fact that he had fallen into the font.-New York

A Wealthy Bootblack.

It isn't every day that a colored man may be seen who is rated at $25,000who has a well stocked farm of 380 acres, a fat bank account and at the same time is putting in fifteen hours a day at a bootblack stand. Such a man is making his home in Denver. His name is Jacob Shower, and every day ho plies the blacking brush at a chair on Lawrence street in front of the Gibbs house. Shower is a full blooded African of large size and powerful frame. He is a man upon whom forty-nine years have rested lightly, and yet his has been a life of romance and vicissitude, whose recital would scarcely be credited were it not that the strange facts are corroborated by scars upon his body and by an honorable membership in the G. A. R., where the bootblack ranchman is recognized as a man whose word is as good as his bond.-Denver News.

Three Brothers in Court.

Vacaville is noted for establishing legal precedents. Monday a prominent young man was arrested on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon. His brother is the district attorney of the county, and another brother is a leading lawyer. The latter defended him, while the district attorney prosecuted the case. The defendant was discharged .- Vacaville Cor. San Francisco Chronicle.

That was the reason thirtysix freight cars went through a hotel, causing a loss of $18,000. The average teamster seems to exercise more vigilance than the average railroad employe. -Detroit Free Press.

SATHRILLING EXPERIENCE.

The following story, which is at tracting wide attention from the press, is so remarkable that we cannot excuse ourselves if we do not lay it before our readers, entire: To the Editor Rochester (N. Y.) Democrat:

SIR .- On the frst day of June, 1881, I lay at my residence in this city surrounded by my friends and waiting for death. Heaven only deliberately, and as a physician, that knows the agony I then endured, for words can never describe it. And, yet if a few years previous any one had told me that I was to be brought so low, and by so terrible a disease, I should have scoffed at the idea. had always been uncommonly strong and healthy, and weighed over 200 pounds and hardly knew, in my own experience, what pain or sickness were. Very many people who will read this statement realize at times that they are unusually tired and cannot account for it. They feel dull pains in various parts of the body and do not understand why. Or they are exceedingly hungry one "Spinal day and entirely without appetite the next. This was just the way I felt when the relentless malady which had fastened itself upon me first began. Still I thought nothing of it that probably I had taken cold which disease or its dangerous and insidiwould soon pass away. Shortly after this I noticed a heavy, and at times a neuralgic, pain in one side of my head, but as it came one day and went the next, I paid little attention to it. Then my stomach would get out of order and my food often failed to digest, causing at times great inconvenience. Yet, even asa physician, I did not think that these things meant anything serious. I fancied I was suffering from malaria and doctored myself accordingly. But I got no better. I next noticed a peculiar color and odor about the fluids I was passing, also that there were large quantities one day and very little the next, and that a persistent froth and scum appeared on the surface, and a sediment settled. And yet I did not realize my danger, for, indeed, seeing these symptoms continually, I finally became accustomed to them, and my suspicion was wholly disarmed by the fact that I had no pain in the affected organs or in their vicinity. Why I should have been so blind I cannot under-

I consulted the best medical skill in the land. I visited all the famed mineral springs in America and travelled from Maine to California. Still I grew worse. No two physi cians agreed as to my malady. One said I was troubled with spinal irritation; another, dyspepsia; another, heart disease; another, general debility; another, congestion of the base of the brain; and so on through a long list of common diseases, the symptoms of many of which I really had. In this way several years passed, during which time I was steadily growing worse. My condition had really become pitiable. experienced were developed into terrible and constant disorders. My weight had been reduced from 207 to 130 pounds. My life was a bnrden to myself and friends. I could retain no food on my stomach, and lived wholly by injections. I was a living mass of pain. My pulse was uncontrollable. In my agony I frequently fell to the floor and clutched the carpet, and prayed for death. Morphine had little or no effect in deadening the pain. For six days and nights I had the death-premonitory hiccough constantly. My water was filled with tube-casts and albu men. I was struggling with Bright's Disease of the kidneys in its last While suffering thus I received a call from my pastor, the Rev. Dr. Foote, at that time rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church, of this city. I felt that it was our last interview, but in the course of conversation Dr. Foote detailed to me the many remarkable cures of cases like my own which had come under his observation. As a practicing physician and a graduate of the schools, I derided the idea of any medicine outside the regular channels being the least beneficial. So solicitous, however, was Dr. Foote, that I finally promised I would waive my prejudice. I began its use on the first day of June, 1881, and took it according to directions. At first it sickened me; but this I thought was a good sign for one in my debilitated condition. I continued to take it; the sickening sensation departed and I was finally able to retain food upon my stomach. In a few days I noticed a decided change for the better, as also did my wife and friends. My hiccoughs ceased and I experienced less pain than formerly. I was so rejoiced at this improved condition that, upon what I had believed but a few days before was my dying bed, I vowed, in the presence of my family and friends, should I recover, I would both publicly and privately make known this remedy for the good of humanity, wherever and whenever I had an opportunity, and this letter is in fulfillment of that vow. My improvement was constant from that ime, and in less than three months I had gained 26 pounds in flesh, became entirely free from pain and I believe I owe my life and present condition wholly to Warner's Safe Cure, the remedy which I used.

Since my recovery I have thoroughly re-investigated the subject of kidney difficulties and Bright's disease, and the truths developed are astounding. I therefore state, I believe more than one-half the deaths which occur in America are caused by Bright's disease of the kidneys. This may sound like a rash statement, but I am prepared to fully verify it. Bright's disease has no distinctive features of its own, (indeed, it often develops without any pain whatever in the kidneys or their vicinity) but has the symptoms of nearly every other common complaint. Hundreds of people die daily, whose burial are authorized by a physician's certificate as occurring from "Heart Disease," "Apoplexy," "Paralysis," Complaint," "Rheumatism," "Pueumonia," and other common complaints, when in reality it is from Bright's disease of the kidneys. Few physicians, and fewer people, realize the extent of this ous nature. It steals into the system like a thief, manifests its presence if at all by the commonest symptoms and fastens itself in the constitution before the victim is aware of it. It is nearly as hereditary as consumption, quite as common and fully as fatal. Entire families, inheriting it from their ancestors, have died, and yet none of the number knew or realized the mysterious power which was removing them. Instead of common symptoms it often shows none whatever, but brings death suddenly, from convulsions, apoplexy, or heart disease. As one who has suffered, and knows by bitter experience what he says, I implore everyone who reads these words not to neglect the slightest symptoms of kidney difficulty. No one can afford to hazard such chances. I make the foregoing statements based upon facts which I can substantiate to the letter. The welfare of those who may possibly be sufferers such as I was, is an ample inducement for me to take the steps have, and if I can successfully warn others from the dangerous path in which I once walked, I am willing to endure all professional and personal consequences.

Realizing It.

In view of the returns from the recent elections the following extract from the address of the president of the first convention of the Farmers' National Alliance, which met in Shreveport, La.,

Oct. 12, 1887, is interesting: This body is the first organization of the real cotton raisers ever inaugurated on a plan calculated to assist the poor man. This is a gathering of representative men from states-men who represent the greatest of all industries-assembled here not merely for the pleasures and emoluments to be gained by their attendance, but, I trust, imbued with proper conceptions of the great responsibility resting upon them, thoroughly alive to the conditions of the times, and firmly resolved to work out the true and proper solution of how to relieve the depressed condition of agriculture in our beautiful southland, and, when found, to stand shoulder to shoulder in one solid phalanx till the effort is crowned with victory.

"If I ever lived in the past," said Cholly, what epoch do you suppose it "Before man," eturned the other,

FARM AND GARDEN.

INFORMATION OF PRACTICAL INTER-EST TO RURAL READERS.

Thomas Mechan, One of Pennsylvania's Foremost Pomologists, on the Jonathan Apple-His Opinions as Expressed in The Country Gentleman.

I recently heard a prominent Pennsylvania orchardist say that if he were limited to one variety of apple, he did not know but that kind would be the Jonathan. The strangest commentary on this opinion is that this apple has not even a solitary star to its credit for Pennysvania in the catalogue of the American Pomological society, though it is starred in a very large number of others and in very many states double starred, which inditates a high degree of popularity. It may be doubted whether many orchardists would place this on the unique plane my friend above cited would do; yet it andoubtedly combines in one variety a greater number of good qualities than many others.

It is in nice condition in November, and this does not soon disappear; it is just as good when the bluebirds and robins arrive in the spring. It is not a large apple, to be sure, but then it is not small one, and the enormous quantity it yields makes up for a want of great size. Then it bears fairly well every year, which many of the monsters rare ly do. Then again you can rarely catch it in a diseased or hidebound condition. It seems to do as well in sand as in clay, in limestone, sandstone or any other stone, and the rot troubleth it not. How few are so happy and contented!

THE JONATHAN APPLE.

And then it'is such a pretty piece of Such transparent yellow, and such bright red stripes, and you can either eat it or cook it, and it will equally fill the bill.

Annexed is a full face portrait of the Jonathan, which, while greatly diminished from the true size, gives a fair idea of its shape.

Success in Selling Honey.

In an address delivered before a recent meeting of Illinois beekeepers at Springfield the president, Mr. P. J. England, advised as follows: Be sure to keep the different kinds of noney separate, and always sell by sam-Many persons seem to think that all honey should taste alike. They do not know that each variety of honey producing flowers secretes a nectar peculiar to itself. I labored hard to secure the patronage of a wealthy banker, and so long as I furnished him a No. 1 grade of clover honey all went well; but alas! on one occasion I was out of clover honey, and without asking him to sample my "goods" I left him twentyfive pounds of another variety. In due course of time I again called on this same banker to supply him with honey, but instead of handing out the silver dollars he very promptly and, I believe, conscientiously pronounced me a "fraud." Allow your honey to become granulated, and inform your customers that granulation is a sign of purity. I prefer tin packages, varying in quantity contained from one to twenty-five pounds. I grade the price according to the amount sold; that is, the larger the quantity purchased the less it costs the customer per pound. By so doing I have built up a large demand for twenty-five pound buckets.

Saving Bacon.

There have been many methods tried in saving bacon in this section, some of which have proved a partial success, but none is equal to canvasing. Hams, middles and shoulders should all be canvased. It costs but a trifle and secures your bacon from the ravages of worms and keeps it sound and sweet all the year. The sacks for canvas should be ready made before meat is hung. In making cut the cloth so as to fit hams, middles or shoulders as needed, and sew so as to leave open space in which to put the piece and close by stitching. Canvas sack should be starched and dried before using. It helps keep out the worms. Wrap each piece of bacon well in paper before putting in canvas sack. Old newspapers answer well. After sacking and when ready for hanging in dry, cool room every piece should be coated with whitewash, or perhaps the theap preparation of hydraulic cement suspended in skimmed milk would be better than whitewash. The object is to prevent the "skipper" from getting to your bacon, and the exclusion of the air helps to keep your meat sweet and sound. If the above directions are carefully followed it will secure the Texas farmer better hams and bacon than he gets from the north. Saving pork and bacon will help make farming pay.-Texas Farm and Ranch.

Inspection of Cattle and Sheep. By virtue of an act of congress approved Aug. 30, 1890, the secretary of agrisulture has issued orders and regulations for the inspection of neat cattle and sheep for export from the United States to Great Britain and Ireland and the tontinent of Europe, and without such inspection no cattle or sheep can be exported from our ports to the countries iforesaid. At the same time and by the same authority all cattle, sheep and other ruminants and swine imported mto the United States must be entered through certain designated ports and indergo inspection and quarantine in secondance with the regulations precribed by the secretary of agriculture.

DITERARY NOTES

Five new books have recently been received from the American Book Company, 808 Broadway, New York.

Health for Little Folks in Authorized Physiology Series No. 1, is another book for primary pupils. It is useful in giving practical rules of health and elementary facts about the human body.

Harper's Sixth Reader, Price 90c., has been compiled and arranged by the editor of the series, James Baldwin, Ph. D. It is for advanced classes and contains selections from the very best classical British Authors.

Stem Dictionary of the English Language for use in Elementary Schools, has been prepared by John Kennedy. In making stem-values the basis of wordstudy there is need of means of general stem reference, and this is prepared to supply this need. Each stem is followed also by a list of its lending applications and such remarks as are needful to show its connections with the use of a word.

The first of these is called The Natural Speller and is intended for primary and intermediate grades. It contains dictation exercises, rules for punctuation, and a phonic chart, giving the various marks for different vowels and consonantal sounds. Besides having numerous illustrations, the first two sections of the book have all parts of words liable to give trouble to pupils printed in red ink. Other new and attractive features might be noted if space

Scribner's Magazine for January opens the fifth year and ninth volume of a periodical, which, from its first issue was a popular success, and which has continued to grow in public favor. The issue for January contains a number of striking features-first among them, Henry M. Stanley's article on the "Pigmies," which is entirely distinct from his book, and written since its publication expre sly for this magazine. Other features are Sir Edwin Arnold's second paper on "Japan," with Robert Blum's remarkable illustrations; the first of a two-part story by Frank R. Stockton, in his most amusing manner; one of a group of illustrated papers on Australia (marking the beginning of an Australian edition of the Magazine); and practical articles on modern fire apparatus, and the game of Ccurt Tennis. -Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

A Great Curiosity.

The National Farmers' Alliance opens its annual session at Ocala, Fla., on the first Tuesday of December. The meeting will also be marked by an exposition, at which the resources of Florida and specimens of all the natural curiosities of the state will be displayed for the instruction of visitors. This exposition will remain open during sixty days, but we undertake to say that the greatest curiosity of all will be the Farmers' Alliance itself. The wonders it has achieved of late are of no common kind, and we trust that the National Farmers will enjoy themselves at Ocala as they deserve.

A STORY OF RETRIBUTION.

CHAPTER VL

"If Mr. Wilcox and Percy are not back here in a week we might as well return to New York. It is getting late in the season, and really, mamma, I can not endure much more of the noise and bustle of this hotel."

"Have a little patience, child; we may hear from them any day."

"Oh! mamma, if you could only know how tired I am of being incessantly followed and shadowed by suitors of all sorts and conditions and of being made love to by old men and smooth-faced youths, you would say go, at once, and let Mr. Wilcox follow us." "No, my child. It would never do to go until we hear from them. There is no alternative but to wait."

"Very well, just as you say, mamma; but I am very anxious for a change." The last speaker was Armida Delaro. Eleven years had elapsed since she left the vineyards and blue skies of the Pa-cinc slope and now she was grown into one of the most perfect of God's creatures-a beautiful woman. The rich Southern blood which she had inherited from her parents tinged her cheeks with a subdued flush of perfect health. She was a tall, graceful girl, and a perfect type of Southern beauty; though a decided brunette she was not so dark as to be distinguished for it. With her beauty she seemed to have inherited also the sweet disposition of her mother, together with the frank open-heartedness of her father.

Mother and daughter were sitting in a private parlor forming one of their suite of rooms at the West End Hotel, Long Branch, where they had been spending the summer. It was only during the last two years that Mrs. Delaro had enjoyed much of her daughter's society, for they had necessarily been thrown very much apart owing to the mother's set determination to personally assist in the search for her husband's

This employment, which had kept her traveling all the time, combined with the fact that Armida had been attending school at a convent near to Paris gave them very little opportunity of being together.

Mrs. Delaro really showed very little sign of the struggles she had undergone in her features, though a close observer might have noticed a settled and determined expression which told without the aid of words that she was a woman living with a purpose.

And indeed her purpose was stern as ever, for as she sat on this bright September morning talking to her daughter, her thoughts were far away with her two staunch friends, Joel Wilcox and Percy Lovel, who had left her two weeks before to follow up a clew at New Orleans. They had only written twice since their departure, and even then had given no particulars, so that she was anxious and longed to know whether or not they were meeting with success.

Often and often had she waited like this before, but her interest had never flagged, nor her desire for vengeance become less keen. When in conversation with her two loyal friends she always spoke hopefully of the ultimate success of her life work and had frequently intimated that she fully expected to see Leon Velasquez face to face before death should call her to meet her husband.

Of one thing she had been scrupulously careful, and that was to have no word regarding her husband's cruel death uttered in the hearing of her daughter. Still, Armida knew of the manner in which her father had come to his sad end.

But to the girl the tragic affair had never been so real and terrible as to her mother, and in recent years, as the matter was never referred to in her presence, the whole story, which so much affected her entire life, was buried in the oblivion of shadowy youthful mem-

The conversation at the opening of this chapter might lead one to imagine that Armida was of a rather peevish temperament, but such was not the case. She had just cause to complain, and was literally bored to death. She had been sought after by every unmarried wearer of pantaloons and suspenders during her stay at the Branch. Races one day, a garden party the next, then a ball, followed by yachting excursions and a hundred other inventions for killing

At all such society events, her pres ence was looked upon as a positive necessity, until at last the poor girl was almost tired out. No wonder then that she was anxious to get away from it all and seek that rest in New York which was absolutely impossible at a place like Long Branch.

Just as the concluding words fell from Armida's lips, there was a knock on the door, which was answered by the maid, who took a card from the bell-boy and handed it to her young mistress.

Armida glanced at it languidly and then turning to her mother with a pite-ous gaze on her sweet face said: "Another infliction."

"Who is here now, my dear?" "That horrid, vulgar Mr. Blodger, who is so fond of saying: 'Ladies, Mr. Stephen Blodger at your service." Here Armida rose from her reclining posture and gave an imitation of that gentleman's unique style of introducing himself; then turning to her maid she

"Tell the boy to show him up." As the boy went away, something like a gurgling titter sounded as if coming from that progressive youth. In less than a minute the caller was at the parlor door, which showed that he must have waited either outside, or very near the elevator, for he certainly did not have time to come from the office. The visitor was a man weighing something in the neighborhood of two hundred pounds, and had a face as round and as red as the setting sun on a winter's day. Step by step he had risen from the lowest ranks, until he had finally attained the mighty distinction of being a millionaire, said millions having been acquired by the practical application of the science of turning tallow into soap.

In his early days he had known Mr. Wilcox intimately, and the acquaintance had recently been renewed with pleasure on both sides. Consequently Mrs. Delaro and her daughter felt it incumbent upon them to entertain the gentleman when he called.

Since converting his soap-boiling business into a stock company and then selling out his interest at an enormous profit, Mr. Blodger had found a great deal of time on his hands. His wife had long since passed to the "better land," and as he had no relatives to hamper him he devoted his time pretty much to his own company and that of his fifteen year old boy, who was, at least physically, following in his father's footsteps bidding fair to outrival the celebrity of the Fat Boy in Pickwick. The elder Blodger had, like many of his ilk, in these his laterdays of wealth and leisure, turned his attention to books and study in the fond hope that he might pass for an educated man in that society toward which his inclinations and ambition now led him. The result was that smattering of superficial knowledge which is so exceedingly dangerous; for in his unguided search in the higher realms of knowledge Stephen Blodger had not deemed it necessary to improve his grammar, and as a conse quence his conversation oft-times embodied a strange conglomeration of the classic sciences and fine arts, dished up in miserably bad English.

Recently this genius had developed into a poet and he was never seen out without his scrap book under his arm, in which he had pasted his own efforts, written on foolscap in a large, round hand, together with numerous choice pieces which he had clipped at odd times from the columns of the Sunday papers. As this worthy individual entered the parlor he bowed low and said with a broad smile, precisely as Armida had mimicked him a moment before: "Good morning ladies; Mr. Stephen

Blodger at your service." The two ladies returned the greeting and the usual every day questions regarding health and the weather having followed, Mr. Blodger drew from the side pocket of a loud-patterned tourist jacket which he wore, a tablet, and said: "Ladies, I have been sitting in quiet seclusion upon the sands shadowed by a large sun umbrella and my thoughts. As my eyes wandered across the broad expanse of ocean, the muse took possession of my soul and I was at once inspired to write an ode to the Atlantic. Here is the first stanza in its unfinished state:

"Atlantic, broad and vast expanse
Of seething, boiling foam—"
Here Armida interrupted the reader, saying: "You will pardon me, I know, Mr. Blodger, because you have come here to court criticism, but do you not think that 'Seething, boiling foam' reminds one rather unpleasantly of a soap

By day and night do roam."
"There," said Mr. Blodger, as he completed the first stanza, "I think that will work up into something very neat, not to say beautiful."

"Very," said Armida and her mother in unison; but whether they were in earnest or not would have been difficult to determine from the manner in which they gave their assent. "You did not know that I am also a poet, did you?" said Armida to Mr. "Indeed I did not. But I am really not surprised that we can add poetry to your many accomplishments," he gallantly, if awkwardly, responded.

"Well, I can not exactly be called a poet," was the reply, "but I occasionally indulge in clothing my thoughts in rhyme. Sometimes I really do feel sentimentally poetical, and again at other times I am afraid my crude efforts are the result of indigestion or something equally unpleasant. However, I write my verses and leave my friends to judge of the propelling power."

Armida passed into the adjoining room and soon returned with a scrap of paper on which were penciled a few lines.

"Here," said she, "is something I jotted down last night after you left. Shall I read it to you?" And comehow there was a merry twinkle in the girl's eye, which passed unnoticed, however, by the sedate Blodger.

"I shall be delighted to hear you do so," was Mr. Blodger's response. So in a clear, sweet voice, in which the slightly mocking tones could only have been discerned by far sharper ears than Blodger possessed, Armida read, as fol-

I have lovers and beaux half a dezen, Who pester me day by day— Not to mention a gay, handsome cousin,

Who is always, alack! in my way, But they bore me so much with their chatter And worry me haif to death, Till it's really a wonderful matter

I possess e'en one spasm of breath For, you know, your young, highly-dressed dandy

Is not my ideal of a man
(Although I confess he comes handy
When we wish some amusement to plan);
I fancy a man who is portly, Whose hair has a tinge of gray, Who makes his bow slowly and courtly, Gives his arm with "Allow me, I pray."

I man who can never be twitted With being too fresh or too green; A man who need hardly be pitied For fewness of years he has seen; A man who can love like a father As well as a heart-broken swain, With experience that tells him 'tis rather Unwise to "stay out in the rain."

When the soft light of evening is fading And hushed is the noisy earth, When darkness old ocean is shading And fied are the voices of mirth;

When the stilled hum of nature is soothin my ears.
And naught through the silence sounds, I long for my lover of fifty years, With his solid two hundred pounds.

During the reading Mr. Blodger sat enraptured, and as she finished he murmured:

"Bee-autiful." Then, continuing in a louder key: "Why don't you send that to Harpers', Miss Delaro; they would jump at the chance to publish it. The sentiment is admirable and magnificently expressed." "Oh, I'm not at all anxious to rush into print," was the reply. "On the contrary, you ought to be de-lighted to give such literary treasures to the world," responded the old widower, who secretly felt that Armida had taken a graceful way of paying him a compliment, never dreaming that he was the butt of a joke in rhyme. "The world would be all the better off if not oppressed with such effusions," she quietly replied.

During this time Mrs. Delaro had remained in passive silence, but she now spoke up quietly and asked: "Do you ever have your poems published, Mr. Blod-"Well, I have sent many in for consideration, but I fear that they do not get the attention which they merit and are cast aside," he answered. "That appears strange. Surely your name in itself should command a fair and impartial examination of your literary work?" "Yes, that may be; but you see, mum (Mr. Blodger was lapsing into the soap business again), I'm only known as a soap boiler, and editors have no use for such as we. We may, and do, have matter to send in which possesses merit, but no money can make those ink-sling-ers print it with a name like Blodger at "That is a pity. I fear the reading public in that way is the loser of some rare gems," said Mrs. Delaco. "True enough, but there is no help for it," sadly replied the poet. Then he continued: "Some day I will publish my collection at my own expense, and so give it to the world With these words he picked up his hat and bade the ladies a courteous adieu.

As soon as he had departed Armida burst into a fit of immoderate laughter. "His earnestness is too much for me; 1 can not help laughing. Pardon me, mamma," she said.

Mr. Blodger had not been gone very long when the bell-boy again came to the door and handed in a telegram for Mrs. Delaro. She opened it eagerly and, as she read the contents, she sighed almost noiselessly.

"What is it, mamma?" anxiously asked Armida.

"It is from Mr. Wilcox, my dear. He and Percy will be here in two days, and we go to New York."

But she made no allusion to the fact that they had been lead off on a false clew, and for the fiftieth time had scattered her gathering hopes.

CHAPTER VII. Another fruitless search. Days of anxiety passed only to prove in the end that the new clew was a false one. The amateur detectives had been to New Orleans, had watched for several days a man with an iron-gray mustache and beard resembling Velasquez whom they found in that city. From New Orleans they had followed him to Cuba only to discover that he was an innocent Cuban who had been out on a protracted spree.

It was one more added to the many disappointments they had already experienced; so with sad hearts they left the Crescent city and returned to join Mrs. Delaro and her daughter at Long Branch.

Their presence was never more welcome, for the widow was secretly longing for a change of scene, while Armida had openly expressed the same desire. It was about an hour after dinner of the day on which they returned. Mr. Wilcox was up in the parlor relating his useless adventures and fruitless chase after the innocent Cuban to Mrs. Delaro, and Armida was keeping Percy Lovel company while he smoked a cigar on the piazza. The two last named sat near to an open window of the ballroom, and, as they talked, watched the couples who were already assembling to take part in the German that evening. During the interval which had elapsed since Percy met Mr. Wilcox in San Francisco the Englishman had grown quite stout and had very much improved his appearance by cultivating a beard.

As he sat near to the lovely girl tonight no one would have remarked that there was a great disparity of age between them-that is to say the fact

would not have struck a casual observer

very forcibly. Percy had grown into a handsome, broad-chested man, and possessed a healthy appearance which denoted that he had forsaken most of the foolish

BLE IN THE BALL-ROOM. ways of his youth and was living as a reasonable-minded man should do. He was a pleasant and fluent conversationalist, though he never unpleasantly obtruded his opinions. He conducted himself with that sang froid for which most Englishmen are, for some reason or other, said to be celebrated.

If he had any sorrows he never expressed them. Armida had tried once or twice to get the affable "secretary" to give her an account of some of his early history, but she soon discovered her questions pained him and now forebore to touch upon the subject.

Between Armida and Percy a bond of friendship seemed to have been formed, which, although the expression may be considered stereotyped, is best de-scribed as that of an older brother to a

They had long called each other by their first names and had both drifted into the habit quite unconsciously and in an unnoticeable, innocent manner. Percy had just finished his cigar and they had each risen to promenade a little while before joining the older Just as they moved away Armida laid her hand on Percy's arm and said: "Do you see that elderly gentleman stand-ing near the musicians?" "The tall one with the dark beard?" asked Percy.

"Yes, that is the man I mean."
"Why?" said Percy. "Do you know him? "I was introduced to him the other evening and he has pestered me with attentions ever since. He came here first the day after you left for New Orleans." "Is there any thing very unpleasant about his attentions?" was Percy's next question. "Decidedly so. He is a man toward whom I formed a dislike at first sight, and besides, he dyes his beard. Somehow I never could like a man whose beard was black all over except at the roots.' "You must be of an ultra-observing nature," remarked Percy.

"That is one of the things any woman will observe," was the reply. Then she continued: "His attentions are the more objectionable because they are so marked. Were he to see me now he would be out here in a moment asking me to dance. I really imagine, if the truth were known, that he is at an age when dancing is one of the last things which would be expected of him."

"Who is he?" asked Percy. "He was introduced to me as Mr. Emerick, and he volunteered the information that he is engaged in the shipping trade with South America. His place of business is in New York, I believe.' Percy had been intently watching Mr. Emerick during the conversation and was getting interested.

"Is he an American?" he now asked. 'No, he is not, but it would be difficult to tell what his nationality really is. He speaks perfect English, but there is just a touch of foreign accent in his speech. Myself, I should judge him to be Italian."

"Do the people who introduce you to him know any thing of his history?"
"I never asked," answered Armida. "When we were introduced the lady who performed the ceremony did not speak very clearly, and he persists in addressing me as Miss Marlow. Up to the present I have no intention of correcting the error, thinking his occasions for speaking to me likely to be very few, and indeed they will, as we are going away in a day or two."

"MISS MARLOW, WHERE HAVE YOU BEEN HIDING?

"It may be imagination," said Percy, "but there is something familiar to me in that man's movements; at times he moves in a manner which I recognize, and then, again, he seems to act as though in an unnatural manner. However, I suppose it is, if anybody at all, some one I met in Paris in the days of long ago. Any way, there is no reason why we should watch him; your interest in him is only slight and I have none whatever. So let us move on." With these words they moved away.

WHO SHALL BE MAYOR?

Let Every Man and Woman Designate

In order to excite interest in the approaching city election THE REGISTER introduces a novel feature. The office of mayor is the most important one in the city. It should be filled by one who is the deliberative choice of the people. In order to find out who this person is, THE REGISTER invites every man or woman in this city, whether he be a democrat a republican or prohibitionist, to write his choice on the coupon which is printed below, and send it to THE REGISTER Every person must sign his name on the ballot in order that no one may be able to vote twice. The result will be announced every week.

In speaking of this distinguished physician, the Flint, Mich., Journal says: It s no longer a matter of doubt, with the intelligent class of our community, of the reliability of Dr. Fruth in the successful treatment of all forms of chronic and nervous diseases. His success is due to thorough training in the principal centres of medical learning coupled with the important fact that he recognizes that there is a power which controls the action of every organ in the body; this great power is impaired; thence disease is invited to the weakest organs; by correcting this, disease can be cured with positive certainty.
