THE LAST MASS MEETING

Before Election, in Behalf of Temperance, was Held Last Sunday at the Baptist Church,

A large number of people attended the mass meeting held last Sunday afternoon at the Baptist church, under the auspices of the Womans' Christian Temperance Union. The president, Mrs. Doig, presided, and the first speaker was W. H. Nichols, president of the Students' Christian Association. He told a long story, the moral of which was that students had great difficulty in getting their names on the pol- lists of this city. He took strong ground in favor of the regular W. C. T. U., as opposed to the 'non-partisan' organization. He ad vanced arguments for woman suffrage, noting the fact that in the last prohibition campaign in Dakota, eighty per cent, of the workers were women.

Mrs. J. T. Sunderland, who spoke next, remarked that the time had come when all Christians should put on mourning, just as they did af er the civil war, for the thousands of men who are yearly going down to drunkards' graves. One hundred, and even fifty years ago, the Moloch of the nine eenth century was curbed to a considerable extent. Now he has regained his power over the people. Today, in every town, his altars are set up, not in the open air, as of old, but behind screens and curtains. The granting of licenses the speaker compared to the sale of indulgences by the Catholic church. Saloon-keepers, like the malefactors of old, are given forgiveness in advance of their sins Mrs. Sunderland called on all the citizens to put down the scourge.

Judge N. W. Cheever reminded his earers that nothing could be accon plished by prayer alone. Christians must organize and elect officers ready to carry out their will. As long as Ann Arbor is considered a city fit to hold a great university, that institution will remain here, but not longer. American city governments are said by many to be the worst in Christendom. What is to be done about it? Nothing can be done by individuals as such; saloons and houses of il!-repute must be looked after by the legally constituted authorities themselves; when individuals interfere they simply create a riot and thus make things worse than they were before. Mr. Cheever maintained that if the evil influences of this city were decreased one-fourth, the attendance of the University would be increased at least one-third. In conclusion, he urged the citizens to vote not only for the best men but for those who were likely to be dominated on the best influences.

Rev. Mr. Bradshaw warned the people present not to consider their work done when election had passed. The temperance people must maintain their organization and surround officers with such influences as will compel them to enforce the laws. After a few remarks by Rev. Mr. Carman, the meeting ad-

Death of M. M. Green.

Shortly after ten o'clock yesterday morning Malcolm M. Green passed away, the immediate cause of his death being pneumonia. Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 at the residence of the deceased, under the anspices of the Knights of Pythias. Mr. Green was born in Yates county, N. Y., June 5, 1845. In early life he held a clerkship in Washington. He was an eye-witness of the assassination of Lincoln, and was wont to relate Miss, Edith E. Atkins, '90, of the many anecdotes appertaining to those served as a postal clerk in the south, and at a still later date he was a traveling salesman. He came to Ann Arbor and engaged in the livery business F. A. Maynard, formerly of this city on north Fourth-ave. He has also time of his death he was the proprietor of the livery on the corner of Fourth-ave day night, to her young friends, in honor and Washington-st. Mr. Green was of her guest, Miss Florence Hascall, of unostentations but highly respected by all who knew him.

A CLOSE ELECTION.

DOTY HAS TWO MAJORITY ON THE FACE OF THE RETURNS.

All of the Democratic City Ticket Elected Except Kline—Republicans Gain Two Aldermen—Returns from the County.

The election on Monday was unusually interesting. Allmendinger made a fine run, but on the face of the returns loses by two votes. The first, second and sixth wards showed large gains, but the remaining wards polled the usual Democratic vote. Probably nine-tenths of the Prohibitionists, as well as a considerable number of Democrats and almost all the Republicans, cast their votes for him. In the second ward ten ballots were found in the state box, eight of which were Republican. In counting the ballots it was found that they exceeded the poll list by two, and accordingly the last two taken from the box were rejected, as the law demands. E B. Pond made a fine run for justice in the first, second and sixth wards. He carries the second over his Democratic competitor by a majority of 43. This reversal is attributed to the enmity felt towards Kline, on account of some reflections which he made against the people of that ward in arguing a recent suit. Mortimer E. Cooley carries the city by 216, which is about the Democratic majority. The sixth ward gives him a plurality of 1. Mr. O'Hearn, of course, wins by an immense majority. I W. J. Miller, democratic candidate for clerk, receives a plurality of but 34, his own ward, the fourth, giving him bu eight more votes than his competitor-A. P. Ferguson, a Republican, is elected alderman in the fourth and both the Republicans are elected in the third. The new conneil stands six to five in favor of the Republicans, with the seat of Miller vet to be filled. In the fith ward the Republicans gain the supervisor. The result in detail is given below:

MURDERED BY HER BOY. BLOOMINGTON, Ind., April 4.-Ward Demarce, 22 years of age, living with his father and mother and two sisters and two brothers on Sixth street in this city, on Friday afternoon cut the throat of his aged mother, who lay sick in bed with the grip, and then cut his own throat from ear to ear, each dying instantly. At the moment when the young man sent his mother's and his own soul into eternity there was in an adjoining room a Miss Green, a boarding student of the State university, and the 8-year-old sister of the matricide and suicide, but they didn't hear a sound of the shocking deed going on so near them. Upon going into the sickroom they were horrified to see Mrs. Demaree with her head nearly severed from her body lying dead in a pool of blood and Ward De maree in a like condition on the floor.

Ward approached his mother's bedside and with one slash of the razor nearly severed her head from her body. The son, after looking at his fiendish work a minute or more, knelt on the floor and with the same bloody weapon cut his own throat. The bed and floor presented a ghastly spectacle to the excited people who soon crowded into the room. The tragedy was enacted in the heart of the city. All parties are highly connected. The family knew of the son's aberration of mind, but had kept the matter a profound secret.

ITALY WON'T FIGHT.

There Will Be No Trouble Over the New Orleans Massacre.

NEW YORK, April 6 .- The Mail and Express' Rome correspondent has had an interview with an intimate friend of Marquis di Rudini. The marquis was asked by this friend how he felt toward the United States at this moment. The prime minister's reply was that he harbored none but the most friendly sentiments toward the United States government, and these had not really been disturbed by the action which he felt called upon to take as the representative of the Italian people upon being officially made acquainted with the New Orleans affair and the position which Blaine was obliged to take in the matter. He said that he had no intention of pushing any demands, and was content with having taken one positive step as a protest against what he was led to believe at the time was neglect on the part of the United States government to protect the lives of Italian citizens in America under the provisions of the treaty. He expressed himself as aware that to do anything more at this juncture would be a grave error on his part, as he has perfect confidence in the sincerity and justice of the United States government. Finally

"I shall now simply wait for further details of the New Orleans affair, of the characters of the slain men, of the action of the Louisiana authorities, and of the intentions of the United States government: but, whatever these may be. I am quite sure that a settlement thoroughly satisfactory to both parties will be found, and that the friendship which binds the two nations will remain unalterable and secure. A TUG GOES DOWN.

Three Men Drowned by an Accident on Lake Erie. CLEVELAND, O., April 4.-The tug Tempest ran out into the outer harbor Saturday afternoon to tow in a raft to the Cleveland Lumber Company's mill.

While attempting to turn the raft at the mouth of the harbor a big wave struck the tug broadside on and rolled her over and she sank like a stone. Two tugs and the lifesaving crew were on the spot in a few moments and picked up Captain Murray and one of the crew. Howard Lewis. engineer, William Hughes, fireman, and Harry Hersey, deck hand, were in the engine-room and were drowned. The bodies were recovered by a diver.

RACE OF 11,000 MILES.

The Ship Trafalgar Beats the Ardencralg Boston, April 7.-The ship Trafalgar passed Highland Light Sunday afternoon. This decides in her favor one of those races so popular years ago-a contest between full-rigged ships over a course 11,000 miles long in which all sorts of weather had to be met and every art of seamanship brought into play. This race was between the ships Ardeneraig. 2,022 tons, and Trafalgar, 1,696 tons. The Ardeneraig left Calcutta December 10 and the Trafalgar salled three days later. Both vessels were jute laden, the Ardeneraig carry-

NINE LIVES LOST.

Fearful Result of a Fire in a Tenement House.

Rochester the Scene of the Horror - A Young Girl Who Leaped from a Window the Only Survivor of a Family of Italians.

A CRUEL FATE. ROCHESTER, Pa., April 7.—Nine lives were lost in Monday morning's fire. Between the Rose build-ing, corner of Brighton and New York streets, and the railroad crossing was a row of frame tenement houses, the first floors of which were occupied as business houses. Shortly after midnight fire was discovered in the tenement building and in a very few minutes all were in flames. In the midst of the hottest part of the fire an Italian girl about 16 years of age appeared at the window of one of the burning buildings and leaped toward the ground, two of the firemen catching her before she struck the ground. Between her sobs she stated that all her father's family were in the burning house, but as the flames now had full control of the building it was impossible to save them and seven persons perished in the Italian family.

The rooms occupied by the Italians were in the center of the building, and when it was found that lives had been lost a careful inquiry was made regarding the occupants of the first building to take fire. It was inhabited a shoemaker named Edward Keene, with a family consisting of a wife and three children. None of the family could be found for a time, but during the height of the excitement Mrs. Keene with two of her children arrived from Pittsburgh. It was then feared that Mr. Keene and his eldest son, Walter, a boy of 8 years of age, were lost. Brave men at once went to work among the burning timbers and soon discovered the charred remains of father and son close together, but burned to an unrecognizable mass. The corpses, with those of the Italians that have been recovered, are lying in a stall at Hayes' livery stable. The names of the victims are: Edward J. Keene, 50 years old; his son, Walter, 9 years; Butteito Ccapio, 45 years; wife Annie, 35 years; son John, 11 years; daughter Risa 8 years; Victoria Ccapio, a brother; Joe All the bodies have been recovered.

They are lying side by side in an ad-joining building. Each body is burned beyond recognition. The sight of the row of blackened bodies is horrible. Annie, the baby, had one foot and arm burned completely off. The others are all fearfully mutilated.

NO SLEEP FOR A WEEK.

John Cunningham Wins the "Stay Awake" Contest at Detroit, Mich. DETROIT, Mich., April 7 .- Of the six men who entered the "stay awake" contest at Wonderland, only one man lasted out the seven days. Simon Townsend, the "tin peddler," lasted until 1 o'clock Monday morning. Then he leaned against the wall near the coal stove. The heat was too much and he dropped into the land of nod. John Cunningham staid awake and continued to look remarkably bright. Even when the 168 hours were completed at 1 o'clock he did not go to sleep, but sat about the museum and talked. Cunningham is a tall man and weighs 170 pounds. He lost six pounds during the week, but his appetite was always good and his face looks rosy and cheerful. He was formerly a railroad man, and staid awake once before for four days and nights. He will take short naps of about an hour with exercise between until he regains his normal condition. . A longcontinued sleep might end in death or insanity. He wins $500. The Monetary Conference Ended. Washington, April 4.—The international American monetary commission which organized here last January in pursuance of a resolution adopted by the late international American conferadoption of a preamble reciting that the fixing of a ratio between gold and silver and the adoption of a common monetary unit does not seem at present feasible. A resolution was passed ending the work of the commission. Michigan Election. DETROIT, Mich., April 7.-Michigan electors on Monday cast their votes for a justice of the supreme court and two regents of the state university. City and town elections were held generally throughout the state. Returns up to midnight were not sufficiently full to LIVE STOCK-Cattle..... $200 0 6 35 make any estimate. BOOTH WILL NOT RETIRE.

Curtain Contradicts a Rumor New York, April 6.—When Edwin Booth, at the close of the performance in the Brooklyn academy of music Saturday afternoon, came before the curtain in response to applause that would not be silenced until he had spoken, he said in a voice that betrayed his emotion: "Ladies and gentlemen, I don't know that I have anything to say beyond my usual speech-'I thank you.' I hope this is not the last time I shall appear before you. Next season I shall pay some attention to my health and I think that I shall return to you strengthened." He bowed. The cheering and the waving burst forth again He bowed again and looked sadly over the audience before he disappeared.

AVENGED HIS SISTER. Fred Bartlett Shoots Three Men and

Then Kills Himself. PEMBINA, N. D., April 6.—One of the bloodiest tragedies in the history of Pembina county occurred near Bowermont Saturday at the resident dence of Robert Irwin, where Fred Bartlett shot and mortally wounded Thomas McConnell and H. G. Hill and shot Irwin in the abdomen, and an hour later blew his own brains out. McConnell was shot five times and Hill twice. It appears that Fred and Thomas Bartlett, knowing that McConnell was at Irwin's house, went there for the purpose of killing him, claiming that he seduced their sister under promise of marriage and then married another woman.

HORROR IN A MINE.

Ten Men Killed by an Explosion in an English Colliery.

London, April 4 .- A disastrous explosion in a coal mine took place at Apedale, Staffordshire. Ten persons were killed outright and several others were severely injured. The bodies of the dead miners have been extracted from the portion of the mine where the explo sion took place. The cause of the disaster is supposed to be the presence of air-damp in the mines, and the fool-hardiness of one of the miners after the presence of the dangerous gas was first Three Crooks Sentenced. EAU CLAIRE, Wis., April 4.-Judge Bundy has sentenced Joe White, the the St. Paul burglar, to two years and a half in the penitentiary, and his accomplices, Larson and Stapleton, to three years. They belong to an organized gang of crooks operating from Chicago to St. Paul. Their offense was robbing a store of $2,000 worth of goods.

LINCOLN, Neb., April 4.-Gov. Boyd on Friday returned the maximum freight rate bill with his veto. The house promptly passed the bill over the veto, but in the senate the governor was sustained, the vote standing 18 to 13, not the requisite three-fifths to pass the bill over the veto.

Death of a Prominent Michigan Man-St. Johns, Mich., April 6.-A. H. Walker, founder of St. Johns, has just died, aged 89 years. In 1852 Mr. Walker was elected to the New York state senate and served two years. He removed to Detroit in 1855 and from there to this village in 1862.

THE CITY ELECTION.

THE almost entire lack of any sort of city government during the past year had its effect in the election last Monday. The contingent of the Democratic party which has been in power was made to see very plainly that such an utter disregard for the enforcement of any law obnoxious to the baser element would not be submitted to without stern protest. A realizing sense of this caused them, much to the surprise of all, to select the very best men which they could find in their party. Even with such men the party barely escaped defeat. By causing both the Democrats and Republicans to put up their best men, the citizen's movement has, in this way, accomplished a great deal of good, and has justified those who were back of it in starting such a move.

THE glorious victory in Michigan this spring shows that the masses of the people of this state are still reliably Republican. Those luke warm adherents to the grand old party who wavered last fall and, by their negligence, permitted the Democrats to elect a governor and seven congressmen have come to realize what they have done. They see that they are responsible for placing in power a party which, permeated with the smell of the saloon, hesitates at nothing when a partisan advantage may be gained. They have seen two senators thrust out of office by methods not only unlawful but contemptible. They have seen a pseudo-senator, guilty of adultery, bravely defying an outraged public opinion. They have seen an utterly unfair gerrymandering bill introduced. They have seen scarcely a measure passed by either house, advancing the best interests of the state. Not only Republicans, but thousands of high-minded Democrats, have seen all these things, and have become disgusted. The reaction thus begun is not temporary. It is growing fast enough to warrant the belief that Michigan will never again be considered a doubtful state-even by such rainbow-chasers as Don M. Dickinson.

By a rigid enforcement of the existing laws the students of this University could be kept away from the saloons altogether. Sec. 14 of the liquor law passed in 1887 provides that "It shall not be lawful for any person by himself, his clerk or agent, to permit any student in attendance at any public or priwate institution of learning in this state, or any minor, to play at cards, dice, part of any building in which spirituous liquors or intoxicating drinks are sold; nor shall it be lawful for any person, by himself, his clerk or agent, to sell or give to any student in attendance at any public or private institution of learning in this state any spirituous or intoxicating drinks, except when prescribed by a regular physician for medicinal purposes; and any person who shall offend against either of the foregoing provisions of this section shall be deemed to have been guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished as provided in section seven of this act." In the perusal of this section there to food for reflection, not only for saloun-acepers out for the authorities as well.

THE mail subsidy bill, passed by the last congress, is already producing good results. Ship builders are increasing the number of their employes and new enterprises are already on foot. Ex-Congressman Farquhar says that six and possibly ten lines of steamships will be put in operation before December next. It will not be many years before the American flag will be as frequently seen on the ocean as it was in the days of

THE extent of the Democratic scare last Monday was evidenced by the number of slips with which they flooded the city. There were enough printed to have elected the whole state Democratic ticket, but the people did not seem to want very many of them.

MR. ALLMENDINGER made an excellent run for mayor, one of which he may well feel proud. It is certainly fully as creditable to run ahead of one's ticket, even though defeated, as it is to run behind and barely pull through.

Ir may yet turn out that Mr. Allmendinger will be declared elected mayor. Would there not be a rattling of the dry bones if he should after all be called to the position?

WORLD'S FAIR APPROPRIATION.

Writer in the Detroit Free Press Forcibly Advocates the Bill Now Before the State Legislature.

We publish below extracts from a communication clipped from the Detroit Free Press of the 23rd, in which the writer sets forth very clearly the duties of Michigan in regard to the World's Columbian Exposition to be held in Chicago in 1893. Strong reasons are also given for the passage of the bill recently introduced into the Legislature for the purpose of creating a comnission and making an appropriation in order that Michigan may present an exhibit worthy of her wealth, resources, products and intelligence. We hope and trust that the members of the Legislature from this county will favorably consider the bill and advocate and vote for the appropriation asked for, C. H. Richmond, of this city, world's fair commissioner, drafted the bill.

An appropriation of $300,000 is asked for from the State Legislature in order that Michigan may be properly repre-sented at the Columbian exposition in 1893. A state which stands so near the front in population and wealth, which is first in the manufacture of lumber and salt and in the production of iron ore and copper, third in wool, fourth in wheat and sheep, and which ranks high in its product of pig iron and steel, which produces even gold and silver and which has resources only as yet in their infan-cy, should not be overshadowed by other sisters of the union while public spirit and local pride remain among its citizens. It is desired to show the world of observers in 1893 what we possess and how we use our great gifts. A complete exhibition of the woods of the state; display of its principal grains, headed by our Michigan wheat; an exhibit of its resources in fruits as due to the skill of the husbandman, and a little of the bundance of our wild fruit, which nature has lavished in greater abundance among us than probably anywhere else in the country; what our fair fields and gardens can show; what our busy people are doing to put to man's use the treas ures of the forest, the field and the mine how they have utilized the products o our great lakes and rivers as well, and finally, how we are advancing in the greater works of education, science, art and philanthropy. To the world re-nowned University at Ann Arbor and the State Normal School at Ypsilanti should be given $15,000, that they might suita-bly illustrate the educational work of the state in every department, from the kin-dergarten up, by an exhibit of the equip-ment, appliances, methods of instruction, etc. In conclusion, it is suggested to the Legislature the unique opportunity here afforded to place our great state before the world. In no other way, for such a sum, can such beneficial results be secured to Michigan. Let us not be out-done in enterprise by states with onehalf the advantages we possess. Let us make a living and moving and real exhibit of the truth of our state motto—a display which shall say to all America and to all the world in 1893—"If you seek a beautiful and rich peninsula, the farmer's and gardener's paradise, look at our Lower Peninsula. If you seek a peour Lower Peninsula. If you seek a peninsula teeming with wealth and beauty, the home of industry and prosperity, look at our Upper Peninsula. If you seek a home where industry, enterprise and thrift will meet their due reward, and where your finer needs will find as full supply as will those of the material man—look around you.

THE DIVORCE LAW.

Opinion of Judge E. D. Kinne, on the Krause Case-Strong Ground Taken Against the Present System.

Judge Kinne has had an unusually large number of divorces to act upon during the last term of the circuit court. and he has been compelled to grant most of them. The case of Caroline Krause vs. Caleb Krause, however, was of such an unusual nature that the judge quite lost his patience, and in his opinion he scores the divorce law in the following words:

The bill in this case is filed to obtain a decree of divorce from the bonds of

This cause presents an extraordinary record, and in my opinion, it demands more than the ordinary consideration.

These parties were first married in 1863, in this country. They have five Children, whose ages range from 27 to 9.

During this period, in this country, they have been married to each other three times, and this is their fourth bill

The decrees of divorce, hitherto granted, have been based upon substantially the same allegations of cruelty as those now presented, they do not perthose now presented, they do not pertain to the same periods of time, but they are the same in character. The complainant has not been deceived by the defendant. No new developments appear, but simply repetitions of their earlier troubles, which perhaps have increased in intensity by reason of averging. In short, when they have experience. In short, when they have mutually been inclined to courtship, they have engaged in that amusement, then married, and when weary in that relation, have sought relief in divorce. Again, when life apart became irksome, they have re-united, and thus this domestic farce has reached its present status.

The question is presented, whether or not, upon such a record as this, the complainant ought to receive any relief.

In my opinion, it is a sad commentary upon the legislation of the state, that such a condition of things as this record exhibits is possible within our borders. Divorce, under certain conditions, is undoubtedly moral, lawful and wise, but, in my opinion, the public good demands that four-fifths of the decrees granted, should never be entertained. Courts, however, with our present legis-lation, are powerless to arrest this alarming social evil. As a rule the case is so presented that the court has no discretion or option in the matter. It needs do dissertation to prove that the welfare and prosperity of this commonwealth depends primarily upon the purity, the sacredness, and the permanence of the marriage relation. Facility to obtain divorce causes parties to enter that most sacred of all human relations without due thought, and, as it would seem in many cases, with no care or expectation for its perpetuity. Among the better classes of society there is undoubtedly a healthy public sentiment upon this question, but it does not reach the halls of legislation, or those classes upon whom moral obligations hang lightly.

In brief, this conceded right of divorce is today most shamelessly abused, and if this abuse is to increase or continue, public interests demand that it be abrogated, except on scriptural grounds.

So far as the pending case is concerned, her counsel insists that she has brought herself within the statute, and that this court has no option but to pro-nounce the decree of divorce. Can it be possible that the legislature ever contemplated the existence of such a record as is here presented? that husband and wife may marry, quarrel, seperate and remarry at their mere caprice, and receive the assistance and approval of courts? Is it expected that courts are to expend their labors in such investi-

It is said that a court is a place where ustice is judicially administered. If he counsel for complainant is right in his case, courts are a mockery and ravesty on justice.

I am not aware of any precedent to guide me in this case. I have no hesitation to create one, that shall be good in this court until reversed by the ap-pellate tribunal. I shall assume that a court possesses the power to maintain its self respect, to protect itself from ridicule and disgrace, and that it has the inherent right to preserve its own integrity.

It is the intention of this decree to instruct the complainant that the maritial bond is something more than a mere brute conjugation of the parties, that it should be assumed with the utmost consideration and solemnity, and that when once established, under all ordinary circumstances, it remains in-

She is further instructed that she has more than once sought the interposition of this court, and in the exercise of its equitable powers, she has been released from her marital obligations, that with the full knowledge of all the responsibilities of the future, she has again delib-erately taken upon herself these same ties and responsibilities, that she has exhausted her remedies in this court and that she will not now be heard to complain of the burdens of a contract of marriage, which she assumed at her

In their moral and legal aspect, these proceedings are contemptuous to the dignity of this court. The relief sought will be denied, and this court expresses its deep regret at its inability to commit these parties to a reformatory during their natural lives.

A Paradox.

Somebody has computed that if thirty-two million people should class hands they could reach around the earth. When a young man is in love he does not need to have more than one person clasp his hand to be able to reach round all the earth contains for him.

"Jimmy," said a visitor at the Jay-smiths', "how is your papa going to build a house? There are no bricks coming to the city now." "Oh," replied Jimmie, "mamma says papa brings home a brick in his bat every night."

An Inconvenient Question.

Ethel had been sitting on the sofa in ilence for half an hour intently watching the lady who had come to visit her mother for a day of two. At last the burden of her thoughts was laid down with a sigh, as she looked up in the vis-itor's face and asked: "Didn't you bring "The Henrietta," the cleverest work of the brilliant author, Bronson Howard, will be presented by Stewart Robson at the Grand Opera House next Tuesday evening. The cleverest of the comedians is Mr. Robson; the ideal of all and a satisfier of all lovers of humor. He will be ably supported by an excellent company of players. The tour this present season with "The Henrietta" has surpassed that of all others. Mr. Geo. S. Woodward, playing the opposite part to Mr. Robson, (Old Nick Van Al-styne) has received but the most favorable encomiums from the press of the country. Stewart Robson is a man of great literary taste, as well as a great actor. In his library at his home at Cohasset, Mass., are found many rare books, and historical relics of various kinds. Among other things, you may see a prompt copy of "Merry Wives of Windsor," date 1623—possibly the very same book from which Shakespeare may have instructed his Globe Theatre actors in "the business" of the play. There is also the rapier with which Quin, the aged actor, accidentally killed Bowan, the comedian, in 1719. And besides these a host of worm-eaten letters of more or less historical value, such as a letter from John Calvin on the wickedness of stage plays. "Hell is neither deep nor hot enough for players," he says, "and the man who would enter a playhouse, will be burned in fires everlasting." The people of Ann Arbor should appreciate such a treat as Robson's production will be, and everyone should attend his performance at the Opera House, April 14th.

AN INTERESTING MEETING

TURAL SOCIETY.

Prof. Winchell a Benefactor - Fru t Trees - Canning of Tomatoes - Our Roads-Best Early Potatoes-Strawberries - Young) Men Welcome - A

President J. Austin Scott conducted the April meeting of the society with his usual promptness and executive ability. The corresponding secretary read the resolutions in memoriam of Prof. Alexander Winchell, published by THE REGISTER on the 19th of March. Mr. Ganzhorn spoke of the good work the professor accomplished by an article on the "Michigan Fruit Belt," published in Harper's Monthly in 1866. President Scott alluded to the noble character of Prof. Winchell, with whom he was personally acquainted, and thanked Emil Baur for the resolutions of condolence and the notes on the publications of the professor, by which the advantages the state of Michigan offers to agriculture and horticulture became known, not only in this country but also in Europe. He hoped that this legislature would recognize these services which the late professor gave to the state, paying for these publications out of his own pocket. This state owes a debt to the memory of Mr. Winchell which was denied him by the legislature of 1871, and ever

The committee on collections for the expenses of distributing fruit at Detroit, sent by the Ann Arbor fruit car, reported eleven shippers that had not paid their dues. The corresponding secretary was requested to address those parties, asking them to settle their accounts at once with Mr. Gruner, and he prays for grace to address these parties without murmur.

Mr. Ganzhorn spoke of the care of fruit trees after planting. So many trees die for want of cultivation during the hot season, and the nursery man gets the blame for it. Many fitting remarks were made by others on this

The president gave a list of apples for general use, based on the best results of his own experience. Sorry we lost it with the rest of our papers after the meeting. We write from memory.

The paper on the profitableness of the tomato, by S. D. Lennon, was highly appreciated, and many questions were answered by this intelligent horticulturist. "It takes knowledge and experience and a good market to succeed. With a canning factory in our midst the growing of tomatoes at twenty cents a bushel would be profitable. A neighboring city has three factories in successful operation, making it pay for the grower. Formerly this vegetable was grown for ornament, now there is scarcely a family that does not use one o five bushels in a single season. Of late years, the growing of tomatoes in the South for our northern markets has become a mine of wealth. In some localities they are shipped not simply by the car, but by the whole train at once, with big pay to growers, shippers

The remarks on our roads by Emil Baur were short. The roads are bad this spring. The damage to man, beast and wheel is great. It would pay to have a better system of road-making. We have not everywhere coarse gravel handy. The road-bed, as shown by Prof. Davis, must be kept dry. A stone crusher is a necessity for city and country roads. Will this legislature give us a uniform system for the construction of country roads as proposed by the petition of this society? The city of Ann Arbor can boast of many things save its wretched roads. Our boarders in the jail seem to be either diminishing or slow in turning out stone. A stone crusher that makes away with sixty-five tons in ten hours would be an "educator," of which even the U. of M. would be proud.

H. C. Markham's discourse, with specimens of the earliest and best potatoes, presented to the meeting, was highly appreciated. The following varieties were shown in their succession: Tonhocks, very early, Sunlit Star, Everitt Summit, Finches' Perfection, E. Pearl, Rose's 74. Those who wish to get perfect seed potatoes and learn all about their culture should consult Mr. Markham.

John Allmand gave his experience on strawberry growing. He was the first grower here and made some money at thirty-five cents a quart, until they came down to five cents, when he lost money. The outlook for a good crop appears favorable now. Very likely some have to ship their berries to a distant market. Haverland, Michel, Bubach and other varieties were recommended.

Committee appointed on the feasibility of selling our fruit through one party—B. J. Conrad, J. Ganzhorn, O. R. L. Crozier.

Committee on diseases of peach trees -A. A. Crozier, J. Ganzhorn, J. J. Par-hall. Both committees to report in shall. Both committees to report in writing to the May meeting.

This meeting was well attended, full of enthusiasm and work. A member of the U. of M. seemed to take a great interest taking notes of the proceedings. Students of the University are very welcome and will profit by the proceedings. Other young men should avail themselves of this opportunity. The progress of our civilization depends on fruit consumption.

LITERARY SOTES.

The battle between Prof. Huxley and the defenders of theology is still going on. The Popular Science Monthly for April will have an essay by the Duke of Argyll, entitled "Professor Huxley on the War-path," in which the professor is charged with treating theological questions inconsistently with his treatment of scientific subjects. D. Appleton & Co.,

The Overland Monthly's April and May articles in its illustrated series descript ive of Coast industries, it is announced, are to be upon Dairying in California. The first article will treat of milk dairying, the second of the butter and cheese industry. Full facts and figures will be given, and the leading dairy regions of the state will be described, with abundant illustrations. "The Old World Judged by the New," is the title of an article by James D. Phelan, in the April number. It will deal with some of the late criticisms of America by Europeans, from Matthew Arnold to Kipling. Overland Pub. Co., San Francisco, Cal.

There is a 11 he sunshire of spring and the fragrance of flowers in the The Ladies' Home Journal for April; the exquisite Easter cover, designed by W. Hamilton Gibson, is a fair index to the charm of the whole number. The pervading Easter spirit finds perhaps its happiest expression in the fiction, Mrs. Whitney's delightful serial, "A Golden Gossip," being continued, while Maud Burton and Caroline A. Mason contribute seasonable short stories. Other articles which will be widely quoted are Amelia E. Barr's "Mothers as Match-makers," dealing with a question of universal interest, and the third of Geo. W. Cable's masterly papers on "Teaching the Bible." The number is complete in every part, and richly illustrated throughout. One dollar a year. Curtis Publishing Company, 435 Arch-st, Philadelphia.

A notable feature of the April Maga zine of American History is its timely frontispiece, a copy of the famous painting of "Columbus at the Court of Ferdinand and Isabella," which illustrates with much force the beautiful "Ballad of Columbus," by S. H. M. Byer, written expressly for this spirited periodical. which always keeps in touch with present affairs. The leading article, "The Chesapeake and Lieutenant Ludlow," by Robert Ludlow Fowler, brings to light some exceedingly interesting unpublished letters about the naval engagements of the war of 1812, and presents numerous valuable and unique illustrations. "A Defense of Capt. John Smith," takes the reader into the beginnings of Virginia life. "The Power to Grant Patents for Inventions," by Levin H. Campbell, gives concisely the proceedings of the framers of the Constitution in 1787, in that line, and is a valuable contribution. "President Lincoln and His English Visitors," is a paper containing some reada-ble anecdotes. This magazine is deservedly popular, and its handsome printing is attracting attention from all parts of the world. Published at 743 Broadway, New York City.

It keeps the children free from humors, my husband says it gives him a good appetite, and for myself I am sure I could never do all my work if it was not for this splendid medicine. It makes me feel strong and cheerful, and I am never troubled with headache or that tired feeling as I used to be."

Its helpfulness in tiding over the perils incident to young womanhood, is universally acknowledged! An Inconvenient Question. Ethel had been sitting on the sofa in silence for half an hour intently watching the lady who had come to visit her mother for a day of two. A STORY OF RETRIBUTION.

BY "WABASH." [COPYRIGHT, 1890.]

They then proceeded to prepare their camp for the night. Lighting a fire, they spread out some coarse blankets to lie upon. As soon as the fire had burnt up they took a long strip of beef from their supplies and cut off pieces in the manner common in that country (where a piece of beef is cut up when required in much the same way that Europe-ans or Americans might cut up a loaf of bread) and toasted it over the fire. This, together with some coarse bread washed down with the vile liquor which they carried, constituted supper. A supper which Percy's delicate stomach was not in a very fit state to receive. Still he felt compelled to eat to keep up his strength, so did his best to swal ow the food they gave him, moistening it with some very brackish water, which was the best that could be found. Soon after cating Percy fell into a sleep, and so sound was it that his keepers, who had intended to watch him in turn during the night, resolved to sleep also, trusting that their captive would be perfectly safe as he was still tightly bound about the legs.

After taking their fill of food and liquor they made fast Percy's hands without awakening him, and laid down to rest themselves.

The next three days were only a repetition of the first, and Percy never had a sight of the country which they were passing through until nightfall.

On the fourth day they came to their destination. The cart had stopped, and, as Percy still lay in the bottom bound hand and foot, his nostrils were offended with the vilest of stenches. From this he at once thought he must be near to a corrall, and when the bellowing of the angry beasts confined therein reached his cars he knew that his surmises were correct.

Pretty soon he heard a medley of voices, and he was immediately taken from the cart and carried into one of the three mud huts, which appeared to be the abiding place that his captors had designated for him. Now, for the first time in five days, his bonds were removed, though his captors still kept a careful watch over him. This, however, was quite unnecessary, for had they left him with the door wide open he could not have escaped. He was too badly cramped after his long, rough ride in the cart to make a move, and it would take many hours of rest to loosen his

Never was a rest more welcome to him, and, notwithstanding that he lay in a dirty, miserable hovel, surrounded with filth and squalor in its worst form, he enjoyed his sleep as well as though he had been in his comfortable room in

New York. He was carefully watched through the night and no chance was given for him to escape in the event of his awakening. His watchers were the vilest-looking men it would be possible to meet even in South America, and a look at them would have been sufficient to drive sleep from most people. Still Percy had not heeded them, but slept as soundly as a man dog-tired could sleep. It was rude awakening for him, however, for the early morning brought all the hands on the farm who could spare the time to take a peep at him. But he heeded them not and longed for but one thing, and that was some one to speak to in English. Yet no one came. At last a burly Hollander, who had charge of the farm (or estancia as it is called in the language of that country), came in. He understood English tolerably well, and asked Percy in the tongue which he so longed to hear if he wanted any thing to eat. Percy told him he was nearly famished, and the Dutchman ordered his wants attended to. These few words were all that Percy heard spoken in English that day, and when the next came he was too sick to listen to any. His head ached and his senses swam. He felt as though some great and severe illness was coming upon him, as, indeed, it was. The privation had been too much for him, and to that, along with his unnatural surroundings of accumulated filth, he finally succumbed. Before another day dawned he was in a delirious fever, and all that his captors

For days did he lie in this terrible state, attended only by a Gaucho, who professed a knowledge of medicine, and who was the person always called upon to administer to the sick whenever such were found about the place.

could hear him cry was: "Armida!

Percy possessed a strong constitution, and, fortunately, pulled through, with the assistance of the Gaucho doctor. But he was a sad wreck of his former self-haggard in appearance and about half his normal weight. Certainly, none of his friends would have known him. It was several weeks after he passed the critical stage of his fever before he was able to walk about, and then his guardians would not permit him to stroll far beyond the door. A rude bench had been constructed just outside the hut, upon which he would sit for hours at a stretch, pondering over the exciting adventures he was passing through and wondering how it was all going to end. He did not know where he was and could not form the slightest idea. From the number of little islands which lay in the river he saw running through the valley about a mile away he judged it must be Rio de la Plata, or River Plate as it is better known to English speaking people. Still, he could form no defin-ite opinion, but thought that in case he was fortunate enough to make his escape it would probably provide the means of carrying him back to Buenos Ayres. There was not an hour during which a little steamer or craft of some kind did not pass.

Thus did he spend many a weary hour until his strength began to return, and he commenced to display more energy in looking for a means of escape. But before he could find one a cloud was thrown over his prospects by the appearance of the tall Spaniard who had acted as Emerick's second at the

It was early in the afternoon when that unwelcome visitor arrived and he at once came to Percy. In a mocking tone he asked after the health of Mr. Huntley, and said that he regretted to hear that he had been ill. To all his inquiries and remarks Percy paid but lit-tle attention and made but brief replies.

After awhile the Spaniard asked Percy what had become of the suit of clothes he wore when he came north, and to this question Percy replied:

"These beasts whom you placed in charge of me took them and with them they took all the money and valuables I

"Ah, yes, that is so," said the Span-"We needed that suit to put on another dead Englishman who died a few miles below San Pedro a short time since. According to my contract with your estimable friend, Mr. Emerick, you were to have floated down that river, but I humanely decided to spare your life, and have resolved to make use of you on this farm. You will, no doubt, make yourself handy when you recover, and these handsome gentlemen by whom you are surrounded will take care that you do not escape."

"I would almost rather have floated out to sea, down that river, than be compelled to make my home among such a set of evil-looking villains as there are here. Even my life will never be safe in -their hands," said

"Never fear, they will not hurt you as long as you behave yourself," responded the Spaniard. "To judge from their looks and ac-lock," said Percy "Oh, no; not one of them dare lay a hand on you unless you attempt to escape, without my orders," was the reply.

"Then you propse to force me to spend the rest of my natural life on this farm among these blood-curdling surroundings?" "Unless you will comply with condi-tions that I will name, I do most certainly," answered the Spaniard. "And what are your conditions?"

asked Percy. "Few and simple," was the reply. "Get your friends to pay me a ransom of ten thousand American dollars and you are free the day they pay it. But should they make the least attempt to effect your rescue I will kill you with my own hands, if need be, to prevent

"If my friends were asked to pay the money they would refuse, knowing that by a determined effort they could re ease me without doing so. As such an effort would only cost me my life, I shall not ask them to take other means to effect my delivery." "In a few weeks you may change your mind, so I will give you a little time to think it over. In the meantime you will remain here and do whatever Mr. Van Nepp deems necessary and proper If you refuse him it will be so much the worse for you." These were the last words the Spaniard uttered as he rode away

Shortly afterwards Percy was well and strong again. He did not devote his time to uselessly bewailing his fate, but went to work at whatever the Dutchman told him to do and en deavored to do his utmost to please. He had an object in carrying out this course of action and after learning a few words of the Mongrel-Spanish spoken by the hands around the place he grew intimate with them as far as his knowledge of the language would permit. He was thus better capable of entering into their work and sport with a vim and earnestness which made him lots of friends among them. While it might have taken him years to have learned to ride a horse with any thing approaching the ease that a Gaucho did it, he soon became very expert and in brief moments, when his thoughts of anxious friends left him, he would really some what enjoy himself.

It was getting to be about time for the tall Spaniard to put in an appearance again when Van Nepp also seemed to be growing friendly to him. In one brief week this friendship had improved and grown to such a degree that he would take Percy with him very often when he drove to the head station about ten miles further north. It was an escape. They were driving home at dusk when, without a warning sign of any kind, one of the wheels came off their vehicle and threw the riders to the ground. Percy turned a summer sault and fell on his shoulders, sustaining no further injury than a rough shaking, but his companion was not so fortunate, for he fell on his side and, in falling, broke his arm. Here was what would have under or dinary circumstances seemed like an unfortunate occurrence, but Percy hailed it with delight. He was not pleased to see the praying old Dutch-man in trouble, but he at once saw a means of escape. He was dressed in the garb of a native, but that made no difference, and once on a river steamer he would be safe. He set the broken arm of the Dutchman as best he could with his limited knowledge of surgery and then presumably turned his attention to the repair of the wagon. Finding that the wheel could not be fastened on without the assistance of a black-smith, as the little pin from the axle was lost, Percy proposed that he should ride back to the head station and bring the smith from there. To this, the Dutchman, anxious to get home, consented, and in a few minutes Percy was riding as fast as his horse could carry him to freedom.

How the Dutchman spent the night Lovel never knew; for himself, he spent most of it in the saddle.

In the morning he reached a small town on the banks of the river, where he sold the horse for an insignificant sum, and with it he boarded a river steamer and took the cheapest passage he could purchase down to Buenos Ayres. All this time Percy was full of hope that the villain who had caused his abduction would still be there, and he had made up his mind to make short work of bringing him to justice.
It would be difficult to describe Percy's feelings when he once more came in sight of the blue and white porcelain domes of Buenos Ayres. He fondly imagined that in a few hours he would be able to exchange the rags which covered his body for clothing which would better become his handsome form.

He walked boldly up to the hotel where he had stayed a few months be fore and introduced himself as the missing Mr. Huntly. In less time than it takes to record it he was being hustled into the street, and as he passed a mirror in the hall-way he at once be came aware of the reason which pre vented him from being recognized. He could not himself believe that the object of which he caught a momentary glance was Percy Lovel. His face was brown and dirty-looking, his uncut hair hung in a disheveled state over his shoulders, and his untrimmed beard helped to make him a most pitiable object such as none would recognize as the genial Englishman whose body was supposed to have been taken from the river weeks before. When he reached the street he wandered aimlessly about and finally decided to go to the American consulate. There he introduced himself, but met with an even worse reception than he experienced at the hotel. The consul was not to be seen, and the young men in charge of the office di nothing but sneer and attempt to still further humiliate the unfortunate Englishman.

Failing in both these quarters, he tried to find Mr. Emerick at his old office. After several ineffectual attempts to gain admission to the building he told the object of it and was immediately informed that Mr. Emerick had gone back to New York long since.

This information sent the hope in Percy's heart down to a low ebb, for it looked as though he would never gain assistance either to find his man or get away from Buenos Avres.

He spent the greater part of the day aimlessly wandering about the streets and squares, but as night came on he began to think of food and lodging. He commenced to walk in the direction of a part of the town where he knew he would find cheap lodging-houses for all nationalities, and as he passed along San Martin street he saw a woman ap proaching him whose peculiar carriage and light, airy step he thought he rec ognized. He eagerly watched her movements and became almost convinced that he had seen her before. As he passed her he at once knew that she was the woman whom he had seen leaving the concert hall with Emerick a few nights after he first reached

Buenos Ayres. He did not immediately accost her. but turned around and followed her. The woman appeared aware that she was being followed, and when Percy cautiously approached to speak she stopped suddenly and faced him. Her attitude was one of defense, but Percy's first words being spoken in clear Er glish, she felt reassured and kindly asked him what she could do for him. "I am searching for Mr. Emerick," he replied. "Can you tell me any thing of "Mr. Emerick!" she said, in astonished tones. "Why, what have you to do with him?"

Under the shadow of a doorway they drew together, and Percy gave a hurried outline of his recent adventures, winding up by asking her if she could help him in any way.

"I can and I will," was the reply. found a welcome opportunity to effect have some influential friends here who will soon restore you to your rights. Come to me at this address to-morrow and I will see that a gentleman who can render you assistance is there to meet

CHAPTER XIX.

On the night when Belle Lorimer was overtaken by Percy Lovel she was on the way to perform her nightly duties at the theater and as soon as she reached her dressing-room she sat down and penned a hasty note which she folded in a sweet-scented envelope and gave to a boy who stood waiting. "Run with this to the Foreign Club, and if the gentleman to whom it is addressed is not there wait until he comes if you have to wait till midnight. Anyhow, deliver it to him with your own hands."
The note was aldressed to "Colonel

Brandon" and it read as follows: "Several years ago I was on the full tide of prosperity in London and half the society men of that city bent the knee to me. At that time you came and asked me to assist you out of a financial dilemma. I did so and you promised to return the favor whenever the oppor tunity presented itself. I noticed your name on the recent list of distinguished arrivals in this city and now have a small favor to ask. Please call at my rooms to-morrow at eleven o'clock a. m.

and hear it. Belle Lorimer." The boy delivered the note within an hour and at the appointed time next day the Colonel, who was a man of his word, presented himself at the somewhat humble apartments of the actress.

She lost no time, but immediately entered into the purpose of the interview, giving him a brief history of the occurences of the past few months, so far as Mr. Emerick Percy, and herself were concerned. She proceeded: "All that I have to ask you is that you will do your utmost to secure this gentleman's identity at the American Consulate and a the hotel. That accomplished I shall consider your obligation towards me entirely cancelled."

"So far as I am able, I will help you in every way," responded the officer. They had reached this point in the conversation when Percy was announced. He was still a pitiable-looking object, but his countryman easily discovered that he was a gentleman and offered him every assistance. It was arranged that Percy should go to the Colonel's room and, after having a bath and his toilet attended to, don a suit of the Colonel's clothes, after which the worthy office, proposed to exert his influence among the city and diplomatic magnates to procure for Percy his baggage and personal effects, which had been left at the hotel, as well as his balance in the River Plate Bank.

Before Percy left with Colonel Brandon, Belle Lorimer drew him aside and asked in earnest tones: "What is the secret of Mr. Emerick's life? I am sure there is one. Can you aid me to discover what it is?"

"I have my own supposition," answered Percy, "but it may be wide of

"Whatever your supposition is, follow it up to the last thread. The man is as bad as mortal man can be. His very touch would befoul a sewer-rat, and there is no crime which he could not commit and smile over. I am convinced that there is a dreadful secret in his life and shall rejoice if the day ever arrives when it can be unearthed. In a few weeks I leave here for London, and should you ever have a communication to make to me concerning that smoothtongued despoiler of a woman's virtue you can address me at Martineau's Dra-matic Agency." Then drawing from her pocket a fancy little purse she whispered to Percy: "I have somehow formed the opinion that Emerick was not his real name, but the only clew which I have to any other is contained in this little package." Here she drew somening carefully wrapped in tissue pape from her purse and handed it to Percy. "Do not examine it now," she said. "Look at it some other time." Percy slipped it into his pocket. In a few ninutes he left the house and stepped into a carriage with the Colonel. About two hours later one would not have recognized in the Mr. Huntly, who walked toward the custom-house building, the dirty, ragged-looking tramp who was so rudely thrust from the hotel. The change of dress, together with a neatly-trimmed beard, made all the difference in the world, and Percy Lovel was once more Mr. Huntly. Under these conditions it was not difficult for Percy to make himself known, and with the assistance of his newly-found friend, Colone Brandon, he was soon in possession of his own clothing, and was able once more to jingle the nimble and necessary dollar in his pocket

Everybody was of course surprised, but no one seemed sufficiently interested in him to demand a complete history of his adventure. Buenos Ayres is happily free from the inquisitorial pests which so often defeat the ends of justice by their ill-timed "interviews." Consequently Percy left the city without a word being sent to the outer world to announce his reappearance in the land of the living. It was a fortunate thing that such was the case, for it gave him the chance to follow up the trail with greater certainty of overtaking the man for whom he was search

He lost no time preparing to shake the dust of Buenos Ayres from off his feet, and in a few days he was bound for New York over precisely the same route which the object of his pursuit had taken a few months before.

In an inside vest pocket of his traveling suit he had placed the little package which Belle Lorimer had given him, but it never occurred to him to examine it There it lay and did not see daylight during the whole of the voyage.

In fifteen years' constant study of these cases, I have never seen a family of moderate drinkers that was followed by robust, healthy children. I have seen some very bright children from such parentage in some cases, but in every instance they died out early, from some degeneration which a more vigorous race would have overcome. I believe no fact can be sustained by more conclusive evidence than this. The children of moderate or excessive users of spirits are always weakly and of more unstable brain and nervous system; more likely to be inebriates, to suffer from nervous diseases, to be insane, to die of consumption, to be defective in every way, and to die early .- T.
