EARNEST AND HOPEFUL.

WAS THE PROHIBITION COUNTY CONFERENCE ON THURSDAY.

Eloquent Addresses by Mrs. Warner, O. R. L. Crozier, Prof. Steere and others.—Prof. Steere Elected County Chairman.

The adherents to the prohibition party are not given to brass bands and pompous displays, but they certainly are very enthusiastic in a quiet way. Nearly 200 of them, from all parts of the county, gathered at the rink on Thursday morning last. O. R. L. Crozier was made chairman. The address of welcome was given by Rev. A. S. Carman and short speeches were delivered by O. R. L. Crozier, Prof. Steere, Mr. Isbell, of Pittsfield, Mr. Paul, of Ypsilanti town, and others. Reports from the township did not show a large increase of members; in other respects, they were not discouraging. The proceedings in the morning were informal. Those

IN THE AFTERNOON were quite different. Mrs. M. J. Warner, of Ypsilanti, delivered the first paper. She discussed, in a forcible manner, "Work for the Future Voter." She did not accept the ordinary definition of government, that it was designed to protect merely the life and property of citizens, but insisted that morals should be included. The best government was the one which best protected all three, whether it was a republic, or an absolute monarchy. All public evils must be abolished. The voter must be taught that temperance is better than the tariff. He must learn that there is no liberty unless coupled with obedience to law. When right rules, the personal liberty of those who do wrong is necessarily abridged.

Again, the future voter must be taught that no one has any right to do wrong. He must be encouraged to think and act independently. He must be trained to be a total abstainer.

How are these results to be accomplished? Home training is necessary, but its influence is often exaggerated.

The schools, again, should be utilized. The relation of the liquor traffic to political economy and the effect of alcohol on the constitution must both be taught. The church should be first and foremost in every moral reform—otherwise, it will not fulfill its sacred mission. The speaker thought that the church, instead of ignoring political parties, was bound to ally itself to that party which promised prohibition.

The press also should be utilized. In time, it would become popular to be a temperance man—a prohibitionist.

The problem, how to COMBINE THE TEMPERANCE FORCES, was discussed by Prof. J. B. Steere. He first mentioned several characteristics of the typical prohibitionist. In the first place, he is not very enthusiastic for "moral suasion." He is apt to consider the enforcement of the present law not very important. He is absorbed in party work, and when he casts his vote, is likely to say that he has nothing more to do in the matter. He is given to sharp criticism of other parties. The result is that he cuts himself off from the rest of the community and is called a crank. Prohibitionists apparently make no votes except such as are born to them.

How can prohibitionists obtain a better standing? Certainly not by voting or praying less for party success, but by making less sharp speeches—by working all the while to save drunkards and by being ready to ally themselves to all who sympathize with them.

A PLATFORM PROPOSED.

O. R. L. Crozier next suggested several points for a prohibition party platform. They were, in brief, first, a recognition of divine authority as the only safeguard of morals. Second, a declaration that the traffic in alcoholic liquors is incompatible with good government and must be both prohibited and suppressed. Third, free schools and compulsory education, all teachers to take the oath of total abstinence during service. Fourth, an equitable tax system. Fifth, protection of labor from extortion and the suppression of monopolies, trusts and combines. Sixth, a revision of election laws so as to provide against ignorant voting—at the same time securing secret ballot and fair count—also providing for woman suffrage. Seventh, a full legal tender currency, sufficient for the business of the country and issued exclusively by the government. Eighth, government control of railroads and telegraphs. Tenth, support of Columbian world's fair. Eleventh, reciprocity with foreign countries, especially those of the American continent. Twelfth, prohibition of alien land ownership. Thirteenth, liberal pensions. Fourteenth, election of presidents and senators by direct vote. Fifteenth, no avenue for licensing vice. Sixteenth, election of representatives who will work for the people's interests. Seventeenth, state and national "drunks" in the name of patriotism and under the auspices of the G. A. R., are a disgrace to the nation.

Milo J. Sweet, of the Normal school, delivered an oration entitled, Victory our War Cry. It was a creditable production but contained no new thoughts.

ELECTION AND OTHER BUSINESS.

Prof. J. B. Steere was unanimously elected chairman of the county committee. O. R. L. Crozier was re-elected secretary.

It was decided to raise from $80 to $100 by subscription to reimburse Mr. Crozier for money disbursed and to pay Mr. Lathers for five weeks' work around the county. A large sum was immediately pledged.

An Entertaining Reporter.

Capt. Manly tells a good joke on himself. Said he: "They got a good one on me in Grand Rapids that I have always kept to myself. You know the reporters were after me a long time before I told them anything. One day I was superintending the work on the terrace when I was approached by the worst looking tramp you ever saw. His clothing was full of holes and he staggered as if he had been drinking. He told me that he had a brother in the home and he wanted to find out something about it. Well, sir, I will be plagued if that fellow didn't find out pretty nearly all there was to tell. The next morning the Democrat came out with a long interview, which stirred up the board considerably. The fellow came around the next Sunday in his best clothes, but I recognized him and we had a good laugh over it."

Encampment Incidents.

"I find that my estimate was correct," said Col. Dean, "when I said that there would be 300 veterans from this county in line at Detroit. They were exactly that number, not including many who were unable to march. We expected to have a place in the front part of the battalion, but the commanding officer decided to arrange us alphabetically. As Washtenaw came near the end, we were a little fearful. It so happened, however, that a gap was left in the van and when the officer asked how he was to fill it, I stepped up with Washtenaw county. We were thus able to start an hour earlier. The encampment was a grand thing. One young man who stood near me said that he had learned from it more history than he had ever learned from books. When he reflected that twice as many men were killed at Gettysburg alone as they were in that great procession, he got some idea of what war was like. All the reunions were very well attended, but there will never again be so many of the old boys together."

Must Wait Till Next Year.

It is not likely that any of the proposed new University buildings will be erected this season. Secretary Wade has twice asked for bids and each time they have largely exceeded the appropriations, notwithstanding the fact that they left the heating apparatus wholly out of consideration. Bids from the following contractors were opened last Thursday: James Palmer, Detroit; Wm. Biggs, of this city, and E. Mayhew & Sons, of Detroit. The building committee refused to take any action and the regents will not meet again until the middle of October. When asked how the University was to accommodate the large number of students next fall, Mr. Wade could only reply: "Well, you have got me."

By Actual Count.

In the parade at Detroit last Tuesday were one hundred and three bands, consisting of 1658 men. Fifty-nine bands were brass, forty-three five and drum and one bag pipe; of these Michigan had thirty-seven bands, twenty-four brass and thirteen five and drums, 440 men in all. No drum majors are taken. Michigan bands all had a drum major but one, which would add thirty-six to Michigan, and one band from away came without, which would add sixty-five, or one hundred and one in all, making 1759 band men in the parade. The Wish Will Be Gratified.

EDITOR REGISTER: We are glad to see the Business Men's Association moving again, and wish to suggest that they get out a new "Illustrated Ann Arbor." A good beginning was made, but now it should be improved. There is material enough, such as views of charming scenery and beautiful buildings, etc., to make it a thing of beauty. It should be a work of art such as railroads issue. We think there are parties ready to undertake the issue of this on their own responsibility if they were applied to and encouraged. Why not interest some of these parties in it? We think that the recent growth of Ann Arbor is largely the result of the first issue and we should continue in this line. Let us hear from others on the matter. A RESIDENT.

THE GRIM REAPER.

DEATH CARRIES AWAY SEVERAL PROMINENT CITIZENS.

Supervisor Thomas G. Burlingame—Emanuel G. Wildt—Frederick W. Hartmann, J. M. Hallock—Mrs. W. N. Stevens.

On Sunday, after an illness of several weeks, Thomas G. Burlingame, of Ann Arbor town, passed away. He had been suffering from cancer of the stomach, but no one thought that his death was so near.

Mr. Burlingame was born in 1842 in Dutchess county, N. Y., and was the son of the late Peter N. Burlingame. He removed with his father in 1854 to Ann Arbor town, where he has ever since resided. At the time of his death he owned and worked a fine farm in the northeast part of the township. Of late years he had given considerable attention to driving.

For the past three years Mr. Burlingame has been supervisor, he being the first Democrat in his township to hold that position. During the two years previous to his first election he served as highway commissioner.

In 1866 he was married to Miss Kittie Holten, of Ann Arbor town, who, with two sons, William H. and Courtney M., survives his death.

Mr. Burlingame was a man of integrity and honor. He was deservedly popular among all who knew him and was a useful member of the board of supervisors.

Funeral services were held Tuesday morning at the late residence, Rev. S. Bird officiating. The board of supervisors and county officers were present body, and many others followed the to its last resting place in Forest Hill cemetery.

EMANUEL G. WILDT,

one of Ann Arbor's pioneers, passed away Sunday last at his home on south Main-st. He was born eighty-two years ago in Leonberg, Wurtemberg. In 1830 he sailed for America and settled in Ann Arbor, where he engaged in the grocery business. He occupied a store where the Eberbach block now stands. During the 40's he went to California. He returned to Ann Arbor and for several years carried on the grocery business in the store now occupied by Caspar Rinsey. At one time he was a partner of the late August Hutzel.

Mr. Wildt's life was somewhat eventful. He always held a prominent position among the business men of Ann Arbor. During the Toledo war he was captain of the Washtenaw guards.

Four children survive his death; Mrs. N. H. Drake and Mrs. W. A. Clark, of this city, and Mrs. J. B. Kent and Fred Wildt, of Detroit.

The funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at the residence. Wm. Wagner, Philip Bach, Christian Eberbach and John Koch acted as pallbearers. Many of the old settlers were present.

JAMES M. HALLOCK, who died on Saturday last, was forty-six years of age and was engaged in the plumbing business at Holly. The cause of his death, which was somewhat unexpected, was inflammation of the bowels. He leaves a wife and daughter, Miss Mabel, who reside on Thompson-st in this city. It is only a little over a year ago that his son, Warner Hallock, was drowned in Bush Lake.

The funeral services were held Monday afternoon at the late residence, Rev. A. S. Carman, of the Baptist church, officiating.

FREDERICK W. HARTMANN

died Sunday morning at his home on Detroit-st. He was seventy-two years old and was born in Esslingen, Wurtemberg. He held an important official position in his native country for several years. In 1889 he came to America and later in the year he settled in Ann Arbor. He leaves two daughters, Mrs. A. A. Meuth and Miss Sophia Hartman, of this city, and a son who remained in Germany. Mr. Hartmann was a very gifted man. He spoke German, French and English fluently and had a good knowledge of several other languages.

MRS. W. N. STEVENS

passed away on Saturday last at her residence on Ingalls-st. She was born in New York City seventy-six years ago. For many years she lived at Whitmore Lake, but about four years ago she removed with her husband to Ann Arbor. Since that time she has made her home with her son, Major W. C. Stevens. The funeral of Mrs. Stevens took place Monday at 2:30 P. M.

A Proof of Success.

That the normal school is a most excellent educational institution, finds convincing proof in the fact that a young lady aged 14, who recently passed a highly creditable examination there, drove the horses on a reaper last week to cut ten acres of grain. Your theoretical young farmer, who couldn't tell a reaper from a car of juggernaut, is a graduate of the agricultural college, but the practical farmer comes from the normal.—Adrian Press.

The Manly Matter.

The long-expected statement of Capt. Manly relative to the Soldiers' Home trouble was given to the public on Thursday last. He shows that under his administration the running expenses had considerably decreased. He holds that if he was guilty of extravagance the board of managers were equally guilty, for he always asked their opinion before he undertook any great improvement.

It is very odd, he thinks, that the old board should have asked $8,000 to make the grade around the home, while he had nearly completed it for $3,000.

The board was guilty of extravagance in raising the salary of the quartermaster to $1,000, inasmuch as he already worked only half the time.

Quartermaster Shank's insubordination was treated at some length. He was also accused of appropriating sixty yards of the commandant's private carpet.

Manly thus tells the story of his resignation: After hearing his report the board adjourned and took dinner with Shank and Maj. Long. Then returning to the hall they passed a resolution reinstating Shank. This Manly thought illegal, but he made no objection and withdrew to his office for the purpose of writing his resignation. When it was nearly completed the orderly summoned him before the board and Graves read a resolution asking for his resignation. Manly replied, "Aren't you a little fast; would it not be well to give me time to think of this matter?"

"You can have till tomorrow morning."

"Then you have decided this matter?"

"Yes, sir."

The statement contains a letter written by L. A. Sprague to Manly June 16, in which he calls Shank an incompetent and says that he has no confidence in Rutherford.

The members of the board heard the statement in silence, but hurled back a ridiculous charge that Mr. Manly had appropriated $300.52 of transportation money belonging to the state. As the late commandant has a receipt for this, signed by Mr. Sprague, he is not in much danger of being prosecuted for larceny. The whole action of the board looks very much like a conspiracy against Mr. Manly.

German Day.

Great preparations are being made for the German day celebration, which takes place at Manchester next Wednesday. Over $150 have been spent in decorations. Delegations are expected from Adrian, Tecumseh, Monroe and Jackson. A. F. Freeman, of Manchester, will give the address of welcome, and Paul G. Suekey, of the Hausfreund will deliver an oration. A special train will run from Ann Arbor to Manchester, to accommodate the hundreds from this city who will attend the celebration.

West Point.

On Thursday, the 27th day of August, 1891, at 9 o'clock A. M., in the Court House, (Supervisor's Room,) in the City of Adrian, there will be held a competitive examination of candidates for appointment to a cadetship in the United States Military Academy at West Point. Each candidate for appointment must be a resident of the district composed of the counties of Monroe, Lenawee, Hillsdale and Washtenaw; unmarried; between seventeen and twenty-two years of age; at least five feet high; free from any infectious disorder, deformity, disease or infirmity which might render him unfit for military service; and must submit to a rigid physical examination by some competent physician, whom I shall hereafter appoint, with two other gentlemen, to act as a Board of Examiners, and be examined in arithmetic, grammar, geography, history, reading, writing and orthography. Special attention will be given to natural ability, and manifest aptitude for acquiring and applying knowledge, rather than mere scholastic finish and readiness of answer.

Dated at Chelsea, Mich., Aug. 4, A. D. 1891. JAMES S. GORMAN, M. C. Second District.

A Quiet Wedding.

At the residence of the bride's uncle, L. D. Wines, Miss Jennie L. Wines, of this city, and Joseph H. Ingweisen, of Carroll, Iowa, were quietly wedded last evening. Rev. Henry Gelston, of DeLand, Florida, conducted the ceremony. The newly married couple took the evening train for the west. Mr. Ingweisen is a graduate of the University and a prominent attorney of Carroll, Iowa, and the bride has for some time been a successful teacher in the fourth ward school.

Returned from Europe.

Miss Alice Root, returned on Saturday from Europe, where she has been spending the past fifteen months. Mrs. A. B. Palmer, whom she accompanied, will return in a few weeks.

NEIGHBORHOOD NOTES.

Houses are scarce in Chelsea. Don't forget the farmer's picnic on the 29th. Worden now receives its mail by way of South Lyon. The Manchester Enterprise is nearly twenty-five years old. John Tuffs, of Dexter, has purchased a new traction engine. Officer Eaton, of Ypsilanti, raided a gambling hole last week. The new Roman Catholic church at Fowlerville will cost $4,000. The Chelsea cornet band accompanied the Macabees to Jackson, Tuesday. Children's day was observed by the Chelsea Lutheran church last Sunday. Homer Smith, of Dexter, aged seven years, died last Thursday morning. It is said that there is one rabbit to every acre of ground in North Grass Lake. The telephone association of Patrons of Industry hold an open meeting at Chelsea today. Miss Grace M. Smith, of Saline, has been elected preceptress of the Manchester high school. Mary Sager, of Sylvan, a twelve-year-old girl, was struck by a large swinging gate and severely injured. Chelsea carpenters are unlike the Prince of Wales. They never carry their chips with them.—Herald. Elisha Lane, a former resident of Dexter, has purchased a one-half interest in the Chelsea flouring mill. Henry Frey, of Chelsea, pleaded guilty to the charge of keeping his saloon open on Sunday. He paid $20 and costs. Philip Digby, a farmer living about two miles south of South Lyon, lost a barn and its contents by fire. A span of horses were suffocated. Do not be surprised if, in the near future, we have a motor line of cars to Ann Arbor. It is rumored that the contract for laying the track has been let.—South Lyon Picket. Fred Heininger, who is at work for D. F. Reeves, beats the record for heavy loads of wood. Last week he delivered at the school house a load of second growth oak, weighing 9770 pounds.—Saline Observer. While in Stockbridge last week Tom McNamara purchased Garrett, the thoroughbred stallion which won the half mile running race, and before returning home sold him to Mr. Kirby the well known horseman, of Galesburg, for $275.—Chelsea Herald. An old gentleman lives in our village who lacks but a few weeks of being ninety years old. Four years ago he left Dexter about eight o'clock in the morning and rode to near Fowlerville, a distance of thirty miles, before five o'clock. P. M.—Dexter Leader. George Kixane, of Canton, planted seventy-six pounds of oats sent him by a brother, and his harvest is estimated at more than one hundred bushels. A specimen head from his field is on exhibition at Davis & Worden's, and measures nineteen inches and contains more than one hundred and sixty grains.—Sentinel. Charles Wheeler's barn, which was a week ago, is now no more, except a heap of ashes. He went to the barn with a lighted lantern, and in some way which he cannot explain the hay caught fire from the lantern, and the barn and contents soon burned to the ground. Loss about $600; insured in Ohio Farmers' for $300. John Peers was not trying to make a record during last harvest, but put in twelve hours one day and cut twenty acres. He did the whole job with one team. He says he could have cut five acres more if he had thought of it, or in other words, he stands ready to wager he can cut five acres a day without changing teams. Last Saturday a boy whose name we will print if he continues his depravity wantonly shot Tommy Rogers three times with an air gun. One shot struck him about an inch from the right eye and tore off the skin, the others hit him on the leg creating severe but not dangerous wounds. The shot in the face had it struck the eye would have destroyed it forever.—Chelsea Standard. The Ingham farmer's alliance have selected the following officers: President, Samuel Stetler, Onondaga; vice-president, W. O. Bolter, Delhi; secretary, H. E. Falver, Pine Lake; treasurer, Mrs. F. Stocking, Onondaga; lecturers, J. W. Gifford, White Oak, chaplain, M. E. M. Moore; steward, J. W. Clink, Aurelius; door keeper, C. A. Gunn, Delhi; sergeant at arms, Joseph Lake. On the way to Ann Arbor the other day we saw a self-binder going round a large field, leaving the sheaves lying thick in its path, but there its work stopped, several boys were gathering them up in the good old way. This part looked like good old times, and we were glad that the "march of improvement" had not knocked the boys out entirely. We would like to see the Yankee, who can invent the machine to run round the field and shock up the sheaves.—Ypsilanti Sentinel. Charles M. Smart and Samuel Killenbeck, Augusta, are brothers-in-law, but enemies in fact. In a dispute over pasture rights between them, Killenbeck argued a la Sullivan, but Smart took his inning later when he had his relative convicted of assault and battery. Justice Bogardus accepting a fine of $15 and costs to heal the wounds of the people. But Smart had in the dispute made sundry allegations regarding Killenbeck's wife, and Monday the same justice assessed him $92 in all as a punishment. Was the grass worth all it has cost?—Sentinel. Pleasant memories are awakened in the minds of many of the people of Dexter, and especially Webster, at the sight of the genial face of Lucius Ball, who left this, his native place, nearly 30 years ago. It will be remembered that he took about that time as his bride one of Webster's fair daughters, Miss Eliza Cushing. With tremulous voice Mr. Ball tells of the death, a little over a year ago, of their only child, a young lady of 23 years, leaving a little girl baby and loving husband behind. Mr. B.'s home is at Poplar Bluffs, Mo.—Dexter Leader.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS. EXORBITANT LICENSES.

An Important Decision Rendered by the Supreme Court. The supreme court has handed down an important decision in the Bay City case of Dwight Brooks vs. Daniel Mangin and Samuel Catlin, in which it is held that hawkers and peddlers cannot be charged exorbitant license fees, as it makes unjust discrimination between residents and non-residents of a city, practically exempting residents from its provisions, while imposing upon non-residents and unreasonable license upon non-residents. It was also held, in another decision, that officers could not be held for damages for false imprisonment as long as they had acted in good faith. The bench held that it was inevitable, under any criminal proceedings, that innocent persons will sometimes be arrested. An Unlooked for Crop. Ambrose Clouse, a farmer residing near Bronson, cut a crop in his field the other day that had been planted by other hands than his. While cutting wheat with a new binder he ran onto nearly a hundred pieces of telegraph wire that had been cut about as long as the wheat was high and set up in the field. He did not find it out until he had ruined his machine. A short time ago Clouse prosecuted some fellows for stealing his chickens and they said then they would get even with him. Health in Michigan. Reports to the state board of health by fifty-one observers in different parts of the state for the week ended August 1 indicated that puerperal fever, inflammation of the brain, dysentery and scarlatina increased, and typhoid fever, pneumonia and bronchitis decreased in area of prevalence. Diphtheria was reported at twenty-four places, scarlet fever at twenty-seven, typhoid fever at eighteen and measles at ten places. Knights of Labor. The state convention of the Knights of Labor in session at Lansing elected the following officers for the ensuing year: Master workman, Henry T. Allen, Schoolcraft; worthy foreman, W. D. Smith, Fort Gratiot; secretary and treasurer, Theodore H. Holt, Grand Rapids; state director, H. F. Fleming, Hillsdale; Charles H. Lansing, W. E. Adams, New Buffalo; delegate to general assembly, E. H. Baldwin, Horton; alternate, Henry T. Allen, Schoolcraft. A Bank Suspends. The banking house and store of E. J. Landers, at Inlay City, was closed by chattel mortgages. One for $2,000 runs to W. B. Churchill securing county funds; another for $1,345 runs to George Titus, and a third runs to Chester White. This would cover all the assets, leaving depositors in the cold. The event had been expected for some time. Suicide of the Bride of a Month. Mrs. Orville Quick, of Jackson, married one month ago, committed suicide by taking morphine. She was Mr. Quick's second wife, and he had left her, saying that when she died right he would again live with her. Mrs. Quick staggered onto the street after taking the drug and told her sister what she had done, saying she wanted to die. An Old Saw Mill Burned. The Wilson saw mill at Muskegon was burned to the ground. The fire originated from the refuse burner. The loss was in the neighborhood of $35,000, with an insurance of about $30,000. About seventy-five men were thrown out of employment. The mill was one of the oldest on the lake, having been running since 1853. Short but Newsworthy Items. Holland had a slight frost, and by so doing made complete a year no month of which had been without a frost. Track laying on the extension of the Chicago & West Michigan railroad has commenced near Traverse City. Henry Lindsay, of Detroit, was killed in Cambodia by the accidental discharge of a gun while he was shooting fish. Edward Polkinghorne was killed at the Atlantic mine in Calumet by being struck by the rock car. The record of Alcona county for 1890, just completed, shows but fifteen deaths during the year. It was reported that the railroads entering Owosso would combine and build an elegant union depot. Rev. F. Thomas Schneider, priest of the German Catholic church of Muskegon the past six years, died of pneumonia, aged 41 years. John Moody, a railroad employee, was killed at Port Edward. His head was caught between two piles as the steam engine was entering the dock. The friends of Miss Rosalie Lacarte, of Au Sable, have received word from Montreal that she has been cured of inflammatory rheumatism by faith. Elwood Nash, formerly a Bay City boy of great promise, has been called to preach at the Brooklyn Church of Our Father, Universalist. The oldest postmaster in Michigan is Maurice Topping, of Plainfield. He was appointed postmaster by Franklin Pierce April 1, 1853, and has always been a democrat in politics. Peter Peterson, one of the pioneers of Mason county and Ludington, is dead. The state fair directors are not going to issue any free passes this season. C. W. Stevens, of Lansing, was granted a patent recently for manufacturing rock-faced artificial stone. It is now expected that the damages to the approaches to the tunnel at Port Huron will be repaired in time to have the opening not later than October 1. The birthday party given to celebrate the 80th anniversary of Mrs. Penthi's birth at Manistee was a novel affair inasmuch as it was attended by 24 women, the youngest of whom was 60 years old and the eldest 87. The board of directors of the Michigan knights of the grip met in Kalamazoo and decided to hold their next state convention at Jackson, December 29. At present the order has 500 members and is $910 in the treasury.

HOTTEST OF THE SEASON. How the Thermometer Stood in Chicago and at Other Places.

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—Yesterday was the hottest of the year, the mercury reaching 96 degrees at 3 p. m. A refreshing shower shortly after that time cooled the air greatly, the mercury falling to 74 degrees, a change of 22 degrees within fifteen minutes. There were several persons overcome with the heat during the day, three cases proving fatal. ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug. 10.—The last few days have been the hottest experienced in Minnesota and the Dakotas since August, 1880. The thermometer has registered from 88 to 93 degrees in the shade in Minnesota and has run up from 105 to 111 in the Dakotas. NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—In this city yesterday the thermometer registered 97 degrees in the shade and there were twelve fatal cases of sunstroke. Hundreds of horses succumbed to the heat all over the city. On no early August day for the last twenty years have the people of this city, Brooklyn, Jersey City, Newark and all the cities and towns adjacent to the metropolis sweated and wilted as they did yesterday. PLAINFIELD, Conn., Aug. 11.—Monday was one of the hottest in years, and the drought is something startling. All late crops are burning up in the ground and early ones have ripened by the drought so quickly that they are badly dwarfed. The rivers, ponds and old mill streams are lower than for years. PITTSBURGH, Pa., Aug. 11.—Monday was the hottest of the season. At 10 o'clock the mercury stood at 90, 5 degrees and a half higher than on Sunday. Ten prostrations and one death from heat have been reported. RAILWAY STATISTICS. Large Increase in Earnings and Number of Miles the Past Year. NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—The introduction of "Poor's Manual of Railroads" for 1891 has been issued. It shows, among other things, that the total number of miles of railroads in the United States at the close of 1890 was 165,817, of which 5,739 miles were constructed during the year. The total amount of capital invested is figured at $10,123,635,900, an increase over the year previous of $441,693,651. The gross earnings of the roads were $1,096,847,428, equal to 10.5 per cent. on investment. Net earnings were $346,921,318, or 3.4 per cent. on capital. The number of passengers carried by railroads during the year was 529,439,082. A BIG SWINDLE. Thousands Victims—by a Crooked Loan Association. CHICAGO, Aug. 11.—It has been discovered that the National Capital Savings, Building and Loan Association of North America, with headquarters in this city, is a gigantic swindle, and that L. F. Mortimer, the manager, has escaped with $150,000 in his possession. It is charged that the men who have been conducting this association have swindled thousands of people from every state in the union and taken in from $300,000 to $350,000, and given not one penny in return. Iowa's Census Report Completed. We wish to enter a protest against the annual exodus from Ann Arbor in the summer. There is no more charming place in the country in which to spend July and August.

MR. MANLY may have been hasty and dictatorial at the Soldiers' Home, but he certainly was neither dishonest nor extravagant. The board of managers have carried their charges to a ridiculous extreme.

The name of Dr. Andrew D. White is mentioned in connection with the nomination for governor of New York. Vain and fruitless. So long as the lowest elements continue to rule the empire state, no statesman or scholar need apply.

The August returns to the statistician of the department of agriculture make the condition of corn 90.8; spring wheat, 95.5; spring rye, 89.6; oats, 89.5; barley, 93.8; buckwheat, 97.3; potatoes, 99.5; tobacco, 88.5; hay, 90.5. Evidently the crops of this year are not an entire failure.

Since the McKinley act has been in operation, from October 6, 1890, to June 30, 1891, the total value of imports into this country was $630,206,005, as against $588,769,905 for the corresponding period a year before. It will be remembered that Democrats said that the McKinley act would destroy commerce.

The treasury department has prepared a statement of the amount of per capita circulation at different times during the past thirty years. Here are the figures for four chief dates: 1860, $13.85; 1865, $20.82; 1885, $23.02; January 1, 1891, $24.10. These figures destroy the force of the arguments advanced by the advocates of fiat money and free coinage.

The Republican party has but jumped from the frying pan into the fire. It is difficult to see how J. S. Clarkson is an improvement over Quay. His political methods are much the same and he is equally shameless in defending them. The Republican party is committed to civil service reform. It cannot afford to select as its leader a man who is bitterly and openly opposed to it.

The recent meeting of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union at Washington cannot but be full of encouragement to all the friends of temperance. Resolutions were passed, to the effect that there should be no race, no creed, no color, no national distinction in the struggle against the liquor traffic, and Catholic women were asked to co-operate with the Women's Christian Temperance Union. Prohibition is hinted at, but the resolutions wisely lay more stress on the necessity of total abstinence. The union has already done much, and is sure to do still more in the future, for the public morals. In Minnesota, where it is particularly strong, Irish saloon-keepers are rarely to be found. The recent action of the Catholic clergy of New York city in protesting unitedly against the proposed laws in the interest of saloons also shows the influence of the movement. The cause of temperance is daily becoming stronger among all classes of people.

IMMIGRATION is a question which will not "down." The number of those who seek a home in the United States is yearly growing larger. For the year ending June 30, 1891, the number was 555,496, and if the increase continues it is likely to be at least 680,000 for the present fiscal year. This means that probably more foreign-born than native-born citizens will be added to the population of the country before June 30, 1892, a fact which would not be so appalling, were it not for the further fact that the increase comes largely from undesirable races, such as the Italians, Poles, Hungarians, Bohemians and Russians. These people almost invariably settle in large cities and are tending to make them, more and more, hot beds of vice, lawlessness and anarchy. If the policy of almost free admission continues, the United States, like Rome of old, is sure to invite its own ruin, while, at the same time, it will fail to improve the people who flock to its shores. It would be well if the eternal din about the tariff were stopped, and more attention were paid to the question of immigration, which is after all far more urgent.

DOCTORS WHO DISAGREE.

THE PREVAILING UNREST WHICH AGITATES THE CHURCHES.

Rumors About Dr. John Hall—Dr. Patton's Uncompromising Position—The Learned Dr. Philip Schaff—Views of Dr. Rainsford and Dr. Parkhurst.

In these times of theological unrest and heresy trials any minister who takes a new charge or resigns an old position is liable to be called on to state his motives. Recently a rumor arc that the venerable Dr. John Hall was about to resign as chancellor of the University of the City of New York. This was promptly followed by another that it was "because he was in sympathy with the heretics."

DR. W. S. RAINSFORD—DR. JOHN HALL, pathy with Dr. Briggs.

It turns out, however, that Dr. Hall only took the place temporarily when Dr. Howard Crosby resigned; that his duties are but nominal and he draws no salary, the official work being done by the vice chancellor, Dr. Henry M. McCracken.

Dr. John Hall, so long considered the embodiment of pure old orthodoxy, comes of a stock that is noted for that quality, for he is of Scotch descent, and was born in County Armagh, Ireland, July 31, 1829. After winning high honors in Ireland he was called in November, 1857, to his present position in the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church. Another, and usually considered a somewhat severe exponent of the faith of the fathers, is Dr. Francis Landey Patton, who was born in Bermuda, Jan. 22, 1843. He was educated in Canada, and graduated from Princeton in 1865. After serving as minister and professor in various posts he was in 1881 called to the chair of the relation of philosophy and science to the Christian religion, at Princeton. In 1888 he was made president of that institution, and continues to uphold the old standards unflinchingly.

At the head of the creed revisionists and prominent in the so called "liberal school" is the learned Dr. Philip Schaff, whose disciples feel for him a fervent admiration. He was born in Switzerland, Jan. 1, 1819, and at the age of twenty-five was lecturer in the Berlin university on exegesis and church history. In 1844 he was called to a professorship in the German Reformed Theological seminary at Merceburg, Pa., and in 1845 was tried for heresy but acquitted. In 1862 he moved to New York, where his labors in every form of church work have been enormous. His published books form a large library, and in the details of church history his friends claim that he is without a rival on this continent.

Among the younger divines charged with "irregularity" is Dr. William Stephen Rainsford of St. George Episcopal church, New York, who signified his Lenten services this year by inviting non-Episcopal clergymen to serve with him, as did the Rev. Heber Newton. He has since preached a sermon indorsing Dr. Briggs. He was born in Dublin, Ireland, Oct. 30, 1850, and graduated from Cambridge in 1872. After service in Canada he was called to New York in 1883, and received from Trinity the degree of D. D. in 1887. His "liberalism" takes on a slightly humorous tinge, as in this sentence in a late sermon: "Creeds are crutches by which poor, lame humanity can hobble toward God; but it never was intended that they should be used as clubs by Christians with which to break each others' heads."

Last to enter the list, and probably the most severely criticised at present, is Dr. Charles Henry Parkhurst, of Madison Square Presbyterian church, New York, whose recent sermon on "heresy hunting" might, perhaps, be called the sensation of the hour. He was born in Framingham, Mass., April 17, 1842, and graduated from Amherst in 1866. After traveling, teaching and serving six years as pastor to the Congregational church at Lenox, Mass., he was called to New York in 1880.

A Georgia Girl's Remarkable Record. Elberton, Ga., is the home of a young woman who lacks several feminine characteristics. She has never tasted ice cream and knows not the frigid delights of lemonade, soda water or milk shake. She is very popular with the eligible bachelors thereabouts; and has received but refused several offers of marriage.

Mr. Gladstone lately wrote to Lady Florence Dixie, who had sounded him as to his views on the woman question, that he did not think the admission of women to the suffrage would be a change favorable to the Tory party, but that it would help the Liberals.

Rachel Ruyech, living about 200 years ago, was remarkable for her skill in fruit and flower painting. All through a long and busy life—for she was nearly ninety when she died—she was known for "faithful and conscientious treatment of subjects," and to her very last hours touched with grace and precision of execution that was perfectly astonishing the work she loved so well. This remarkable woman was a pupil of the celebrated Willem Van Aelst. Of her, as of another equally famous, it might be written that "she possessed great suavity of pencil."—Harper's Bazar.

Gracious Robert C. Winthrop. A woman reporter says: "The celebration of Robert C. Winthrop's eighty-second birthday reminds me of a very pleasant experience I had with the venerable gentleman some years ago. He had delivered some very important addresses during the day, and when he was through he departed, as has always been his custom, to his home without letting many people know of his going. He lived out in Brookline, and as I had to interview him and hadn't been present at his address, dress, thither I went post haste. Well, he came down stairs slowly in answer to my request, delivered by means of a torn sheet from a note book. When I told him my business he looked at me very severely, as who should say, 'You ought to have been doing your duty today, and I shouldn't be obliged to bother with you now.' What he did say was, 'Madame, I am very unwilling to appear ungracious, but this will cause me much trouble.' 'And he went away, excused himself to somebody up stairs, came back and dictated and chatted for nearly an hour. He was the most sensitive person I ever saw about the possibility of somebody deeming him discourteous; and, great man as he was, he actually made the most contrite apologies to a green young reporter, and audacious withal, such as I was. And when I was going away he appeared very solicitous, and in a genuinely humble tone repeated that he was 'very unwilling to be considered ungracious.' Yet he cares nothing for the newspapers, and doesn't often read them, I am told."—Boston Cor. St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Woman's Dearest Attribute. A party of club men were sitting in the soft twilight of the smoking room at the Penderennis club the other evening. They were chatting, between the puffs of their cigars, in that indolent, easy-going manner that distinguishes every one who can say proudly, "I have dined today." The talk drifted along to the subject of women.

"I have often wondered," said one man about town, "what is really the dearest attribute to man of the modern woman."

"Why didn't you turn your wonder to the question of a future existence?" said the cynical member of the symposium; "it is much the easier subject. For my part, I have always held the answer to be—'Her passion for dress.'"

Then the company proceeded to give its opinion individually. The answers came rapidly. "Her thirst for amusement," "Her vanity," and many attributes of women were given as being dearest to man's purse, until the supply really seemed exhausted.

There was a pause in the conversation, broken at length by the voice of a married man, a great observer, and an un-frequent conversationalist. "I venture to say," said he in a leisurely tone, "that I can name something about woman that costs man dearer than anything yet mentioned."

"Impossible," said the crowd. "Will you bet—a dinner?" "Yes. Now display your rashness. What is the dearest attribute of woman in your deluded opinion?" "Her tears."

He got the dinner.—Louisville Post. A True Fable. A human being met an ass—no unusual occurrence, even in an assemblage composed exclusively of human beings—and observing the usually somber and pathetic expression of the animal's face to be wreathed in radiant smiles, inquired—be he a professional philanthropist, and therefore greatly distressed at any indication of happiness—"Why do you smile, when the hardness of your lot, the grievous weight of your daily burdens, and the severity of your heartless taskmaster should rather compel you to go mourning all your days and some of your nights?"

"Oh, sir," replied the ass, for it was he, "I am light of heart and joyous when I reflect that with oats at seventy-eight and corn at eighty-four cents a bushel, strawberries down to fifteen, and sugar at next to nothing, I am fed on vizards far more costly than are placed upon the table of my master."

For a moment the brow of the philanthropist darkened, and he raised his heavy cane above the back of the erudite ass. But observing that the patient, but not too patient animal was standing on three legs and looking aft with both eyes, his countenance grew brighter. "Good!" he exclaimed; "that will make some men whom I know so utterly unhappy and miserable that cannot sleep." So saying he went on his errand of benevolence, which was to see if he could not send a boy to jail for six months for going a fishing with live worms.—R. J. Burdette in Philadelphia Press.

A Veteran Student. The students of Glasgow university have presented an address to Sir William Thomson congratulating him on his accession to the presidential chair of the Royal Society of London. Sir William, in thanking them for this mark of sympathy, avowed his sympathy with their efforts and objects, and declared himself a student like themselves. "I have been a student of the University of Glasgow for fifty-five years today," said he with characteristic modesty, "and I hope to continue a student of this university as long as I live." The winter session having ended at Glasgow, Sir William comes to London to fulfill his duties as president of the Royal society.—London Globe.

Rachel Ruyech. Rachel Ruyech, living about 200 years ago, was remarkable for her skill in fruit and flower painting. All through a long and busy life—for she was nearly ninety when she died—she was known for "faithful and conscientious treatment of subjects," and to her very last hours touched with grace and precision of execution that was perfectly astonishing the work she loved so well. This remarkable woman was a pupil of the celebrated Willem Van Aelst. Of her, as of another equally famous, it might be written that "she possessed great suavity of pencil."—Harper's Bazar.

The Demands of the Fiatists. The fundamental delusion of Senator Peffer and the crowd he represents is that industrial prosperity depends upon the amount of currency in circulation and that such prosperity will be prolonged in proportion to the rapidity of the issue of fiat money. The fiatists cannot be led to perceive that there would be no credit whatever to do business upon unless the currency had an honest valuation or gold or silver back of it. Let Peffer and the fiatists state why a $1,000 United States note will bring $1,000 in gold and why a $1,000 Argentine note will not bring $300 or $400. The country will not consent to be placed under the heels of the fiatists. Two good crop seasons will make the "cheap money" cry very feeble. The currency in circulation is larger in amount than ever before, and it is being augmented by certificate issues at the rate of $5,000,000 a month. The next Congress may write itself down an ass by passing a free coinage bill; but it is very doubtful. Threats and promises are cheap for demagogues. By next winter the cheap money craze will have lost much of its strength. —Minneapolis Journal.

OUR YPSILANTI RAMBLER

Tells What He Has Seen and Heard in that Burg During the Past Seven Days and Nights.

The one hundred and eleventh new house is nearing completion, and is painted green, of course. The number of green houses in this town has often caused strangers to wonder if it was in consequence of some wholesale slaughter of green paint, or due to the ever vernal verdancy of the contractors, or the invigorating effects of the water works. This is an open question, but we suppose that green houses will continue to grow as fast as the weeds in our streets—and, by the way, have you ever seen a more abundant crop of real healthy burdocks than we have here?

The "Burdock Bitters" man would go off into genuine patent-medicine raptures, could he but behold the harvest here of this wonderful weed. Capt. Allen's brother, Rev. Barker Allen, filled the Presbyterian pulpit Sunday, and gave the folks some genuine eloquence. His evening sermon, "The Symbol of the Flag," has been pronounced one of the best efforts ever heard in this burg. The Michigan Central railway folks are making many improvements on the depot grounds, and if the city fathers don't get too stingy of the city water, the railroad will put up a fountain. Master Cupid seems to have been busy here of late, and to have been eminently successful at target shooting. Consequently there are lots of weddings on the docket. Walter Dennison and Miss Anna Green set out matrimonially last week; F. H. Whielden, of Detroit, and Miss Lillian Hopkins following suit last Tuesday. Geo. Key and Miss Carrie Hawkins will soon follow in line and then will come Miss Florence —, but we must wait, 'cause she said not to tell 'till the cards were out, so we won't say anything, but we know we shall all miss the pleasant young lady who has so successfully filled the position of Normal Librarian so long.

Teachers' Resolutions.
We, the teachers of Washtenaw County, having assembled in the capacity of a County Teachers' Institute at Dexter, conducted by S. T. Morris, M. J. Cavanaugh and J. L. Skinner, do adopt the following resolutions:

First: That the departmental plan of constant work in the manner of academic instruction, which involves the mutual co-operation of teachers and instructors, is conducive to more benefit than accustomed plans of previous institutes, is our unanimous voice.
That the hearty interest of the teachers bears testimony of good work on their part and an appreciated ability and zeal on the part of the conductors.
Second: Be resolved that we tender our most sincere thanks to the instructors for the interest manifested by them in our work and the aid they have given us.
Third: Be it resolved that the grading system of the Washtenaw county schools, as effectively introduced by Commissioner Cavanaugh, secretary of County Board of school examiners, bears good results and is the first step toward a union whereby the district schools will bear the same relation to the high school as the high school to the university.

LITERARY NOTES.

The department of Publicity and Promotion of the World's Columbian Exposition have made an arrangement with the North American Review for the publication of a series of advertisements of the World's Fair. This will give to the advertising pages of the Review for some time to come an interest never before possessed by the advertising pages of a monthly magazine. Published at 3 E. 14th-st, New York, N. Y.

The literary event of the summer in the United States will be the publication in the August Cosmopolitan Magazine of a short novel by Amelia Rives, which she calls "According to St. John." It is said to be the strongest work from the pen that produced "A Brother to Dragons" and "The Quick or the Dead."

During her two years' residence abroad, Mrs. Chanler has written nothing else for the public, and this product of her matured mind may be expected to register with something like exactness, this author's position in the world of letters.—The Cosmopolitan, New York.

Civilization. An Historical Review of its Elements. By Charles Morris, author of "The Aryan Race: Its Origin and Its Achievements," "A Manual of Classical Literature," etc., etc. Two vols. 12 mo. Over 1000 Pages. $4.00. S. C. Griggs & Co., Chicago, Publishers.

This work so attractive in all that goes to make up beauty and excellence of form is not less attractive when its contents are examined. In it, we have given man's progress from a primitive state up to the present age, together with much philosophy, history and science that shows the author's wide acquaintance in these various fields of research. From its very comprehensiveness the work cannot go much into detail. This is no deduction from the merit of the work, however, as such was not its plan. Certainly, no better work could be found for one desiring to get a general review of the world's progress, before pursuing any one line of investigation, for here, he gets a view of the whole field in which man's activity has spent itself with the various parts all in proper subordination to each other.

The style is clear, and easy but condensed, and altogether the work cannot be too highly commended to all interested in man's past and present progress.

Trade Grows Under Protection.

If protection hampers our foreign trade, as the free traders continually affirm, it is singular that since 1880, under a protective tariff, our aggregate of exports and imports has increased from $675,000,000 to $1,647,000,000, or 140 per cent., while the population during the same time has increased only a hundred per cent.—Boston Journal.

Too Late.

Perhaps Tennyson has written nothing which appeals to the hearts of all who read his poems more than the lyric of "Too Late." The burden of the sad refrain comes home with telling force to the hearts of those who have lost friends by that dread disease—consumption. They realize, "too late," the result of neglect. They feel that the dear one might have been saved if they had heeded the warning of the hacking cough, the pallid cheek and weakening system. They feel this all the more keenly because they see others being rescued from the grasp of the destroyer, and they think what is saving others might have saved their loved one. When the first signal of danger is seen, take steps to avert the catastrophe. Be wise in time. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will drive away consumption. Do not wait until too late before putting its wonderful efficacy to the test. It succeeds where other remedies fail.

The Cranky Reformer.

He works, and though for others' sake He seems no lover of his race. He always hews so as to make The chips fly up in some one's face.

New Equipment on the Wabash.

The Wabash Railroad has just placed on its day trains between Chicago and St. Louis a line of elegant new Wagner buffet parlor cars. These cars make direct connection at St. Louis with through sleepers for Hot Springs and the Southwest. The night trains on the Wabash running between Chicago and St. Louis have long had the distinction of being the finest in the West, their compartment sleepers being especially popular. This new departure brings their day trains up to the same standard. 51f

The War Tax Was the Income Tax.

The American Democratic platform "denounces the collection of war taxes after twenty-five years of continued peace." The only "war taxes" that are figuring in contemporaneous politics are the income tax, the collection of which is demanded this year by the Ohio Democracy.—Boston Journal.

Mother and Child are Doing Well.

Mrs. Brown was sick. Her friends said she would never get well. "What's the trouble?" "O, some kind of female weakness. The doctors have given up her case as hopeless. 'She may live for some time,' they say, 'but as for a cure, that is quite out of the question.' " "I don't believe it," said a woman who heard the sad news. "I don't believe she's any worse off than I was five years ago, from the same trouble, and I don't look very much like a dead woman, do I?" She certainly did not, with her red, plump cheeks, bright eyes, and 150 pounds of good healthy bone, blood and flesh. "I'm going to see her and tell her how she can get well," she said so. She advised Mrs. Brown to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Mrs. Brown took the advice, also the medicine, which cures all kinds of delicate diseases, so common among women, and—got well. That was two years ago. Last month she presented Mr. Brown with a ten-pound son, and "mother and child are doing well."

Scotch Thrift. A young Scotchman was once halting between two loves, one possessed of beauty, the other of a cow. In despair of arriving at a decision he applied for advice to a canny compatriot, who delivered himself thus: "Marry the lass that has the cow, for there's no the deference o' a cow's value in any twa weemin in Christendom."

Blood Poison. Is very apt to follow contacts of the hands or face with what is known as poison ivy, especially in hot weather or if the body is perspiring freely. The trouble would subside for a time, only to appear again in aggravated form when opportunity offers. The great purifying powers of Hood's Sarsaparilla thoroughly eradicate every form of poison from the blood, as the cures it has accomplished conclusively show. It also cures scrofula, salt rheum and all other affections arising from impure or poisoned blood.

Unreasonable Jealousy. "Sir," said the husband with some heat, "I do not like the familiar way in which you conduct yourself to my wife." "Familiar, sir, why, less than a year ago she promised to be a sister to me always and things have come to a pretty pass if a brother can't enjoy the society of his sister without her husband getting jealous."

I have been bothered with catarrh for about twenty years. I have lost sense of smell entirely, and I had almost lost my eyes. My eyes were getting so dim I had to get some one to thread my needle. Now I have my hearing as well as I ever had, and I can see to thread as fine a needle as ever I did, my sense of smell is partly restored, and it seems to be improving all the time. I think there is nothing like Ely's Cream Balm for Catarrh.—Mrs. E. E. Grimes, Rendrill, Perry Co., O.

Always a Soft Side for Treason.

The way to find favor in modern Democracy is to get converted from Republicanism. Palmer of Illinois did it; Governor Campbell of Ohio did it; Governor Gray of Indiana did it and Governor Boies of Iowa did it. Renegade Republicans easily kick aside the old wheel horses of Democracy and take the best things in sight.—Inter Ocean.

What It Does.

- Hood's Sarsaparilla 1. Purifies the blood. 2. Creates an appetite. 3. Strengthens the nerves. 4. Makes the weak strong. 5. Overcomes that tired feeling. 6. Cures scrofula, salt rheum, etc. 7. Invigorates the kidneys and liver. 8. Relieves headache, indigestion, dyspepsia.

The Henpecked Man.

"There is no place like home," he said with a sigh and a sad and weary air. "There is no place like home, and that's just why you so seldom find me there."

We Pray Longest.

When in trouble, never thinking we are to blame for our misfortunes. If you have a taint of scrofula in your blood get rid of it. Hibbard's Herb Extract is warranted the best blood purifier in the world. Read of Mrs. Hibbard's case in another column and you cannot help believing it.

Look at Him!

A year ago he was not expected to live. Liver complaint almost killed him. He got great relief from three bottles of Sulphur Bitters, and six bottles cured him.—Editor Weekly Sun.

Great Fun for Thomas B.

There is no man alive today who has as much fun in store for him this winter as the ex-Speaker. The fun will be with the untrained, unwieldy and divided majority in the next House, and no one can see him or hear him without tasting a little of the fun in anticipation.—Philadelphia Press.

A Model Railway.

The Burlington Route, C. B. & Q. R. R., operates 7,000 miles of road, with termini in Chicago, St. Louis, St. Paul, Omaha, Kansas City and Denver. For speed, safety, comfort, equipment, track and efficient service it has no equal. The Burlington gains new patrons, but loses none.

They Dare Not Do It.

Do the Democrats who are talking about attacking the McKinley law in their leading provisions in Congress next winter design to make any assault on the sugar or reciprocity sections? These are the leading provisions of the law, but not a single Democrat in either the House or the Senate will dare to attack either.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

FARM AND GARDEN.

INTERESTING FACTS FOR AGRICULTURISTS.

The Striped Cucumber Beetle.—Various Ways of Protecting Plants from These Troublesome Pests.

There are few injurious insects for which more remedies and "preventives" have been recommended than the striped cucumber beetle—the everywhere abundant "yellow bug" with black stripes along its back, which attacks squashes, cucumbers, melons and similar plants. A large proportion of these remedies are doubtless worthless, if, indeed, not positively injurious.

Obviously the only safe plan to prevent injury is to fence out the insects. Of the various forms of apparatus for this purpose are the ones shown in the accompanying cuts from American Garden. The simplest method, and one largely practiced in some of the great melon growing sections, is that of laying a piece of thin cloth over the hills before the plants are up, covering the edges of it with loose earth. This works very well while the plants are young, but is liable to cripple them if left on too long. To obviate this difficulty Professor Weed, of the Ohio experiment station, tried various methods of holding the cloth up in the middle. One of the simplest and perhaps most satisfactory methods, according to his experiments, is to take two pieces of wire and put their ends in the ground so as to form a croquet arch, like the center arch of a croquet ground. Over this the cloth is laid, the edges being held down by loose earth as before, and as shown in Fig. 4. Or the wires may be twisted around each other as shown in Fig. 3; or a single long wire may be bent as shown in Fig. 1. A half barrel hoop makes a very good substitute for the wire, as may be seen in Fig. 5.

The best cloth found for the purpose is the lightest grade of plant cloth sold by seedsmen. This can be purchased in quantity for three or four cents a yard, and one set of covers properly cared for ought to last at least three seasons. After they have been used on the early squashes and melons they are ready for the late cucumbers. They require little storage room between seasons.

Professor Weed also tried boxes covered with thin cloth (Fig. 2), and found them less desirable than the cloth, because they do not admit sunshine and air as well, so that the plants do not grow as rapidly and vigorously. When the plant reaches the top, also, it cannot lift the cloth with it, while with the cloth alone it can raise it without difficulty.

It is necessary to keep the covers on until the plants have put out five or six leaves, and perhaps in case of cucumbers and melons even longer; for the beetle sometimes attacks them in great numbers after the covers are removed. These appliances are cheaper than the wire screen protectors sold by dealers, and which do very effective work for cucumbers and melons.

Ground Bones as a Fertilizer. In a report on experiments made at the New Jersey station with ground bones as a fertilizer, it is pointed out that ground bone is both a phosphate and a nitrogenous manure, insoluble in water, but when in the soil is decomposed, and yields its constituents to the feeding plant in proportion to the fitness. It varies but little in composition, and is less liable to adulteration than most fertilizers. They, in fact, are usually pure.

Ground bones have a tendency to cake, and to avoid this the manufacturers may use other substances, which, while aiding mechanically, reduce the chemical value of the mixture. Raw bone is most usually pure, but the fat it contains renders it less easily decomposed. Bones having served the purpose of the glazier are low in nitrogen and very high in phosphoric acid. The method now employed of steaming the bones under pressure improves their quality without altering the amount of the plant food ingredients.

As the value of ground bones depends upon composition and their fineness, a mechanical as well as chemical analysis is required to determine their value. The farmer must determine by crop tests which grade he should buy—whether, for example, pay a dollar for ten pounds of phosphoric acid in one condition, or for sixteen and a half pounds in another form. Average wood ashes are worth nine dollars per ton, but the best vary considerably.

Governor Tillman, of South Carolina, who has been taken to task for using railroad passes, explains that he saved money for the State by their use.

WHEN TO CUT GRASS.

How to Make the Best Hay for Milk Cows.

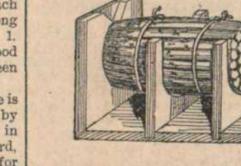

The usual time for cutting grass is so late in the year that most of the juicy, succulent portions of it have escaped, and cows will avoid it even when it is growing in the field. They will leave the patches of full grown grass and search for that of younger growth. Every dairyman knows what a difference the early pastures have upon the milk flow, and how, later in the season, when the grass becomes mature, the milk and butter lose that first fine fragrance and superior flavor. All of this argues that grass loses much of its valuable parts for the dairyman after it has reached a certain stage of maturity. We cannot expect hay made from such grass to be any better. The fine quality in the butter which fresh spring grass produces cannot be obtained in the winter from cows fed on such overripe hay.

The cutting and curing of hay earlier in the season will save for the cows a great deal of this mysterious substance which affects the milk so favorably. The haying season for the dairyman should not be the same as that now adopted by general consent by farmers who raise it for the markets or for general stock. There is no special week or month in which hay should be cut and cured. The cows will be the monitors. When they seem to like it the most it should be cut before it has time to lose this fine, succulent flavor. This necessitates early harvesting, and it also demands a repetition of it. Three cuttings may be obtained from one field in a season, or two cuttings at the least. It is doubtful then if there is any loss sustained in quality if two or three cuttings are taken from the field.

The dairyman, to get the best winter hay then, should cut his grass before it has headed or blossomed. This may not be the best hay for stock of a general nature, but it is certainly the ideal dairyman's winter fodder.—American Cultivator.

Asparagus for Market.

The wise asparagus grower will cut sparingly the first cropping season, and always, and every season stop cutting at the first indication of weakness of the plants. Long continued cutting is a great strain on the roots. The cutting must be done with a careful hand, in order to avoid injury to the tops of other stalks that have not yet reached the surface.

In preparing asparagus for market reject all the ill shaped and undersized stalks. Make neat, firm bunches, about eight or nine inches long, and four or five in diameter, holding two or three pounds of "grass." If not possessed of one of the patented bunchers now for sale at most hardware stores, the asparagus can be neatly bunched by means of a homemade buncher, such as is illustrated plainly as to require no description. Rubber bands are now being used in place of tying material, as these save time and labor and make a neater package. If the product is to be shipped to market, the bunches must be packed in some soft material, and pressed firmly and tightly into the package to prevent injury by jarring or shaking about. Knives for cutting asparagus are kept on sale by hardware dealers. One of the various shapes is here illustrated. On small plots a common, sharp kitchen knife will answer. The above is reproduced from "How to Make the Garden Pay," by T. Greiner.

The Best Layers.

"In my breeding," says a correspondent in The Farm Journal, "I avoid long necks or long legs in birds. With silver Wyandottes, which I have bred exclusively for many years, 'high stationed' birds are particularly objectionable, not alone because they do not conform to the American standard of excellence, but for the reason that I find them inferior egg producers; neither are they as good for table purposes as the type having shorter legs and neck. My ideal of a good layer is that she should have a broad, deep, round body of moderate length; she should not be too chunky."

Robber Bees.

Dr. Miller says in Gleanings in Bee Culture: Robbers sometimes clean out a weak colony in spring. Whatever you do, don't take a hive away that the robbers are at work on. If you do they'll only attack a neighboring colony. They'll move of the contents out of the hive, but leave at least one comb with a little honey to finish. If you must take the hive away, put another in its place with something for the robbers to work on.

Here and There.

The phosphate mining industry of Florida is being rapidly developed. Australia's wool clip this year, it is said, is the largest in the history of the colonies.

It has been estimated that the Vermont maple sugar crop for the season is 17,000,000 pounds. About 40 per cent. is sirup.

It is suggested in The Rural New Yorker that "if the legislature is to do anything for the roads; let them begin by legislating the narrow tires off the heavy lumber and truck wagons."

The permanent exhibition inaugurated by the fourteen southern states, New Mexico and Arizona, is to be opened in Raleigh, N. C., May 15. The object is the display of the states' products and resources. Northern manufacturers and dealers are invited to make exhibits. John T. Patrick, Raleigh, N. C., is the secretary.

Manure for Potatoes.

A fertilizer suited to any soil cannot be prescribed without knowing the particular needs of whatever soil it is applied to. In most cases, the most certain and reliable fertilizer is good barn manure properly applied the previous year. Superphosphates do not always pay cost, but if they have proved decidedly useful on any soil, a few hundred pounds may be applied to the acre. In other instances ground bone, mixed with moderately heating barn manure, has proved beneficial on some land. Nitrate of soda has greatly aided growth on some soils, with no appreciable benefit on others. An extensive manufacturer of potato fertilizers assured us that he could not recommend any for certain named soils. Such special fertilizers have sometimes given the largest known potato crops in the country, but in many cases they have produced comparatively small ones. Every owner therefore must experiment variously on his own land to determine what is needed and to select the best.—Country Gentleman.

Of course, after this there was nothing to do but to present the ladies, a feat Stevens accomplished with a tact and ease surprising to himself, and in the patter of compliments and small talk that followed he again appeared to advantage.

There was something in the magnate's society that aroused what was best in him and brought it into play. As for the ladies, they were delighted and all smiles; while the magnate unbent and was as jolly and noisy as a boy. But it was soon over, for their visitor kept one eye on his watch, and after a few moments excused himself, promising to call soon again. Miss Sophia accompanied him to the door, heard him repeat his directions to Stevens, bade him "sweetly adieu," closed the door slowly and regretfully after a last look at his retreating figure, and then with cunning negligence dropped his card on the top of the collection on the tray, where it staid all that winter in spite of dustings and fresh cards and the havoc of gusts of wind or careless servants.

Miss Sophia and Stevens returned to the parlor to find all tongues wagging in praise of their new acquaintance.

"He is certainly very agreeable," said Mrs. Bassett.

"I say, Stevens," chimed in the lieutenant, gaily, "I've got to go to New York soon. You couldn't get me a pass, could you?"

"Aren't you glad we slipped in?" exclaimed Floy to Miss Sophia. "I think he's charming, and not a bit awful."

"Oh, how funny it felt to shake hands with him," cried Miss Sophia. "It was like taking that $10,000,000 bundle of bonds in your hand at the treasury—only he's alive!"

"I've read in the papers," said the lieutenant, "that he's just as simple and kind and fond of a man in his family as you can imagine."

"I shouldn't wonder," said Miss Sophia, reflectively. "Why, Mr. Stevens, how did you get acquainted with him?"

"Oh, I'm doing some work for him," was the modest reply.

Windward all this time said nothing; but he had noticed everything, and it was beyond him. Something was up, but what?—that was the question. Well, he should know as soon as anybody; and meanwhile he was happy to see Stevens so happy, and he rejoiced to see him showing at length in his fairest colors and to be again taking, as in the old times, a central place. Certain it was, his stock had risen a hundred per cent. within half an hour—such was not an uncommon occurrence in neglected stocks that were suddenly found to be enjoying the magnate's favor and support.

When finally the excitement had died down and the two friends were left alone Windward congratulated Stevens very heartily on his opportunity.

"I fear," said Stevens, "that this will interfere with my evening work on the claim, for I suspect the 'Old Man' is exacting, and I want to do well."

"Oh, of course," replied Windward humbly. "All I ask is, as Quire said, that you give me a pass now and then when you are running the road."

"Seriously," said Stevens—and his face at that moment did not belie his words—"I think this may be my chance. It is possible that here and now is a great crisis in my life." He seemed anxious to say something more; he looked troubled, and a wistful, appealing expression came into his eyes which Windward had noticed there before, and did not understand. But he did not speak; the time was not quite ripe, or perhaps his courage, so dauntless the foregoing night, now failed him.

"As to evening work," said Windward finally, "I don't believe I shall do so much at that myself hereafter. We have got the claim into good working shape, and, besides, there are more important things in life than that."

"Very true," replied Stevens, and looked down. They were both keeping something back. Each felt the other was reserved, but they both knew all would be confessed and made clear in good time. As the case stood they could not talk, but they parted with a smile of confidence and love. It was the memory of such scenes, no doubt, that inspired the great Lord Bacon to write in his essays that "unmarried men make the best friends."

CHAPTER XIX. ONLY FRIENDS.

"Yes," whispered Windward, "you know it is you I love."

It was the claim, therefore, that evening that had the go by. Stevens scratching away again for dear life at the hotel at the dictation of the magnate, who set a furious pace and kept it up for hours. But finally he stopped, and instantly his preeminent manner vanished and was succeeded by the half-amused and yet sincerely kind bearing which characterized him as soon as he touched on the personal relations of his new protegee. Stevens was still gathering his papers together, when the magnate suddenly leaned over toward him, much as he had done in the parlor in the morning, and exclaimed:

"She's a nice girl; very pretty, and looks, too, as if she could bake good bread. I'd go for her. Give her some flowers. Well, be here at eight o'clock to-morrow evening. Good night."

Windward, meanwhile, was spending the evening very differently, though the claim was having no better attention from him than from his truant partner. But, poor thing, it was used to neglect!

Windward, it had appeared that night after dinner, was to devote the evening to Miss Willis and the theatre, not much to Floy's liking, for she wanted to go herself, and she did not care to have her brother take that Willis girl so often. Possibly she intimated as much to the lieutenant, who had followed the ladies into the parlors, or perhaps he divined the unspoken trouble, for Mendelssohn did not write all the songs without words.

At any rate he was the sort of man who when in doubt plays a trump, especially if the suit is hearts, and so he spoke out manfully at once:

"Suppose we don't let Windward have all the fun! Let's all four make a party and go!"—the quartet taking in Stevens, Miss Sophia, Florence and herself, as indicated by a graceful gesture. But then, of course, Stevens had to plead his engagement with the magnate, and Miss Sophia was tied up, it seemed, in a church festival ("He knew it, the hateful thing!" she thought in not a very saintly or festive spirit); so it resolved itself, as it had done before, into a cozy little party of two. Oh, but the lieutenant was shy!

Hence Mr. Quire went one way to dress, and Florence another, and Windward a third, while Stevens and Miss Sophia also went their respective ways, meditating revenge.

Windward made a very careful toilet that night, as we are told was the custom among the Spartan youth, also, when about to face a great danger. Then he set out, with a bunch of flowers hidden in his overcoat, and reported himself in good time at the cozy home of the bewitching Miss Clara. She, too, had been making pretty faces at a twin sister in quicksilver, until at length the sketch in the glass had nodded its approval and declared her perfect to the last ribbon and feathery spray of flossy hair. And then, and not till then, she tripped down stairs as smiling as a May morning, though possibly that comparison is hardly fair, either, for those same May days are dangerous too. Very often they catch men off their guard, so that while they are eulogizing the balmy weather they are contracting influenza colds, pneumonia, pleurisy and a graveyard cough.

But there was nothing chilly about Miss Willis; she danced with delight at the prospect of the good time ahead, petted the dear, lovely flowers and made Windward's cheeks burn with her fond looks and speeches. And off they went into the night, laughing and chatting, Clara throwing back a last, gay defiance to her mother, who stood warning, reproving and admiring her from the doorway; away they went, Clara nestling under her protector's arm and "rattling on" in her own peculiar and delightful style. What a jolly girl! She seemed made, as the Chinese make their portraits, without shadows.

Florence had once slightly called her "useless;" well, what then? So was Florence, so were most girls. "As for me," thought Windward, "as he drew Miss Clara even more snugly under his arm, 'I want a useless girl—as useless as a rose, or a gem, or a song.'"

In truth, he had full time for such dangerous meditations, for Miss Clara's theories on the division of labor in conversation gave her companion ample leisure to muse on the charms of the brisk little lady beside him. As heretofore explained, his part in the talk consisted in exclaiming "Indeed!" and "How very interesting!" at the proper moment, and while to do this well is more difficult than it seems, and, indeed, requires conversational powers of a high order, it still permitted him to dwell with silent rapture on a merry face, radiant with health and good nature, framed in his fluffy aureole of rebellious hair, and to note the other perfections of the plump, jolly, young witch. How very, very cozy such a puss would look in the corner along with the other bric-a-brac!

This evening, however, Windward had a motive for wishing to take a more active share in the discourse, or for at least giving it direction. He wished—in fact, he was resolved—to intercept McCardle into the conversation, and, watching his chance, he at length succeeded, Miss Clara yielding the more readily because if there was any one person more than another of her acquaintance that she liked to talk about it was the laconic colonel. She gossiped about him, therefore, to her heart's content in an odd, vivacious mixture of school girl praise and blame. Her anecdotes and smart speeches failed, however, to shed much light on the colonel's history, and so, hoping to make more progress on the other tack, Windward brought the conversation around to the subject of Louise; and here again Clara had a ready-made theme.

"She's splendid, but she's deep; that's the only trouble with Lou Sheffield; she certainly is deep."

"Ah?" said Windward, anxious for details.

"Yes, she's deep," exclaimed Clara. "For instance, she don't care much for dress. Oh, no! But she knows how to match her complexion the best I ever knew of."

"Oh!" said Windward, with a tinge of disappointment in his voice.

"But hasn't she manners, though?" exclaimed Miss Willis, with genuine enthusiasm. "I remember"—and here she burst into a peal of laughter, "I remember the colonel saying to me once in his solemn way, 'Louise is deeply religious, but a perfect lady, I assure you, a perfect lady.'"

And having thus brought the colonel again to mind she pelted him behind his back with verbal bonbons till the delicious fust of the theatre lobbies and aisles absorbed her whole attention.

After that was over and the vivacious little maiden seated and composed her bright eyes began to count her friends and take the census of the new hats. While thus busied she burst in on some commonplace remark of her escort with the exclamation:

"Why, there's your sister, with Lieut. Quire."

"Where?" asked Windward, giving a little start. "Why, so she is."

"She's real pretty, isn't she?" exclaimed Clara, and added laughingly, "runs in the family—ahem!"

"You can afford to see beauty in other women," replied Windward, gallantly. Whereupon Clara made a mouth and craned her neck as if to see around behind her companion, with the explanation that she was looking after a laugh on the back of his head.

"You won't find it, Miss Willis," said Windward, with impressive gravity. "I am not double faced."

"That's right!" she replied, encouragingly. "That's my way. I talk right out."

"Do you know Lieut. Quire?" asked Windward.

"Oh, yes, some," she answered. "He's—say, I'm prying, I know, but is it true they're engaged?"

"Who?" exclaimed Windward, astonished. "Floy and Quire?"

"Yes, I heard so," said Clara, innocently.

"Why, no," said Windward, casting a rather alarmed look over to where the pair were sitting. "Not that I know of. No, I guess not. Certainly not."

"I didn't know," said Clara demurely. "They're much together."

"Unfortunately that may not always follow," gasped Windward, not daring to look at his seatmate.

"Unfortunately?" she repeated, sweetly befogged. "You mean you would like the match?"

"Come, Windward, be a man!" he thought, and his head swam. But no, this was not the time or place; and, besides, there was that pledge to his mother. He trembled—but at that instant the drums and trumpets struck up, and the crisis was averted. And though the play was tender, and once or twice the talk between the acts grew ominous, the curtain fell on the stage comedy with suspense still reigning outside.

Then Windward proposed a lunch, and as Miss Clara's recreations had fastened upon her the bad habit of a midnight appetite, the suggestion met with favor. They turned their steps, therefore, to a fashionable restaurant, to find, to their surprise, Lieut. Quire and Floy in a cozy corner with the waiter bending over them. There was nothing to do then, of course, but to put on a smile and make a party of it, though it was provoking, and a little awkward all around. Windward—and possibly Mr. Quire also—was anxious, as it happened to be, on this particular occasion, exclusive. But the fates were adverse. So the only thing left was to order a good supper, with no nonsense or sentiment in it, and divide the bill.

The waiter explained that in oysters they had Tangiers, St. Jerome's, Linn Haven Bays, Cherrystones, Seaside's, Absecoms, Saddle Rocks, Morris River Cove, Rappahannocks and Point Look-out, and could serve them steamed, stewed, fried, broiled and roast, as well as raw, or as oyster pie, oyster pastry or chafing dish. The party hesitated, debated and finally quarreled, the ladies choosing a cooked dish, while the two gentlemen showed the true cultus by preferring theirs on the half shell.

Then came a time of waiting, rendered shorter by that same time killer that stole fourteen years of Jacob's life almost before he knew it. Whatever Clara was or was not she was certainly good company; and to-night, excited by the play, the late hours, the surroundings and the interesting possibilities, she sparkled with merry graces. Even Florence was won into laughter and admiration, though she would not and could not think of that girl as a sister.

But must she face that fate? She doubted it. She studied Miss Willis all that hilarious half hour very carefully. Upon the whole she was very glad they had thus met. No; she felt safe, and safe because her keen observation confirmed her woman's instinct that Miss Willis did not love her brother. Further than that, moreover, she believed the hateful thing was trifling with him, the foolish fellow, and she should tell him so plainly on the morrow. He evidently was beguiled, how deeply she could not quite determine. It was unfortunate, and ridiculous also; she would have a frank, sisterly talk with him, and that at once. Whatever happened, that empty-headed Willis girl should not make a fool of him.

And Windward, on his part, was looking over his plate at his sister, wondering what there might be in that absurd query Miss Willis had put to him. He did not think it possible, and yet he decided to have a frank, brotherly talk with her at once. And Miss Willis and the lieutenant had their own thoughts, too, so that in spite of every one's anxiety to be vivacious and entertaining, there came now and then lapses of silence or an absent minded reply to a gay salutation.

The party left the restaurant together, but, as by tacit consent, the homeward paths diverged at an early corner, where the good-bys were exchanged without a very loitering farewell parley at the curb.

And now, for one throbbing heart at least, came a trying time. The moon was up in all her glory, while the sky stars peened through the elish haze to watch the antics of belated lovers.

"Might it not be as well now as any time?" pondered Windward. To be sure, he had promised to do nothing irrevocable without his mother's knowledge and approval, and yet the time and the mood favored. How would it do to follow the vigorous western plan of hanging the prisoner first and trying him afterward? Well, he would see; to plan at such a moment was beyond or below him. He was in the hands of fate.

But how to begin or what to say on any subject but the one that trembles on the lips, but may not pass them! It was fortunate that Windward was expected to sustain only such a negative share in discourse, and yet to-night she, too, now seemed to falter in her gossip, her fertility of odd expression forsook her, and there came stretches of embarrassed silence, till finally in despair Windward began again on McCardle and his relation to Louise—the deference he paid her, the intimacy and the necessity each seemed to be to the other.

Miss Willis agreed it was charming, and then suddenly bursting into a nervous laugh that was half a cry, she exclaimed:

"I believe you are jealous!"

"I jealous?" repeated Windward, amazed.

"Yes, jealous!" she cried, with a pout and a toss of her head. "I believe you're in love with Louise Sheffield yourself and actually jealous of her uncle!"

"Pshaw, Clara!" he began. He had said it—Clara! And it had come as naturally as the breath that bore it. His heart beat wildly. It throbbed against his ribs like an imprisoned thing that must be freed or die. To the winds with reason, prudence, obedience and every halfling and fetter of the soul!

"Pshaw, Clara!" he repeated huskily. "You know better!"

"I know better!" she said, nestling closer on his arm and looking up appealingly in sweet solicitation to have her doubts resolved.

"Yes," whispered Windward, "you know it is you I love; yes, you, fondly—"

"Oh! Mr. Bassett!" she interrupted, with an alarmed look, withdrawing her arm to only a timid touch. "Oh! please don't say that!"

"Yes, I mean it, Clara; my Clara! Oh, you cannot!"—he caught the vanishing little hand in his and pressed it fervently. Speak, Clara! Let us be happy!"

"Oh, Mr. Bassett!" she exclaimed. "I'm so sorry. I didn't suppose you felt that way."

The solid ground was reeling under him. Was it possible—had he failed? "Miss Willis, he gasped, "Clara" no longer coming spontaneously to his lips, "I want you to love me; say yes, say yes."

"Oh, dear!" sighed the little lady. "Who would have thought it? Why, it's dreadful! I like you so much, and I suppose we were just good friends. But don't you know, of course you don't, though, for it's a great secret."

"What is?" groaned Windward.

"Why, Mr. Bassett, I'm engaged," she said. "Yes, there! So you see it couldn't be; but you won't tell, for it's a secret, so you can judge what confidence I place in you, and how much I think of you."

The stars fell from heaven, the birds lost their voices, the perfume faded from the flowers, love had failed, and youth was over.

"Engaged?" he echoed faintly. "No, I didn't know about that."
