HIS OPENING SERMON.

REV. CHAS. A. YOUNG PREACHES AT THE UNION SERVICE.

The Divinity of Christ Ahy Discussed—An Abstract of a Very Eloquent and Convincing Sermon.

The Rev. Charles A. Young, who has just been called to the pastorate of the Church of Christ, on South University Avenue, made his first appearance before an Ann Arbor audience at the union services held in the Baptist church last Sunday evening. The audience room was filled to its utmost capacity. The services were opened by an anthem by the Baptist church choir, and the Rev. Mr. Bradshaw, of the Congregational church, read the opening Scripture lesson from Matthew xvi. 15-28. The opening prayer was offered by the Rev. Mr. Gelston, of the Presbyterian church. Rev. Mr. Young was then introduced by the pastor of the Baptist church, who extended to him a hearty welcome from the ministers and churches of the city. Mr. Young, in a few brief words, expressed his gratitude for the cordial and hearty welcome which he had received, and called attention to the central motto on the wall back of the pulpit, "One is your master, Christ, and all ye are brethren." He then delivered a clear and forcible sermon, taking for his text John xx. 20, 21. The following is a condensed report of the sermon:

"This gospel of John has not only resisted the attacks of Baur, but is destined to be the bulwark of biblical truth in the battles of biblical theology. Wace has epitomized it in three words: 'Jesus—unbelief—faith.' The opening chapters reveal the person and character of the Son of man—as Jesus in this gospel seems fond of calling himself—who is declared by the spirit of holiness to be the Son of God; the succeeding chapters picture the development of faith and unbelief, and the closing chapters portray the culmination of unbelief in the crucifixion of Jesus, and the culmination of faith in the presence of his glorious resurrection, so that even doubting Thomas exclaimed, 'My Lord and my God.' Without considering the authentic document which bears indubitable testimony to the authorship of the Gospel of John, the gospel closes by distinctly stating the purpose of recording the wonderful words and works of Christ.

"Jesus was his proper name, given by the Holy Spirit, 'He shall be called Jesus, because he shall save his people from their sins.' The Christ means the anointed one—anointed on high to be our priest to absolve us from sin—our prophet to teach us, and our king to rule over us. Both saint and sinner need a high priest to intercede and propitiate.

"Jesus told the ruler who represented the Sanhedrin, 'Ye must be born again. Man is a part of nature, but there is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body.' The testimony of history and conscience, as well as revelation, is, 'Ye must be born again.'

"Who shall teach us? Buddha and Brahma? Wise men like Socrates in Athens, or Spencer in London? Shall nature teach us to pray 'Our Father? Jesus is the Way, the Truth, the Life.'

"Jesus is the anointed king—a king, beloved brethren in the ministry, for whom I never make any apologies—a king whom I love to serve, in whom I have glorious liberty. Let us enthroned him in our hearts, let us 'crown him Lord of all.'

"But Jesus is not only the Messiah of prophecy, the culmination of that divine history so distinct from the annals of Greece and Rome, but he is also 'the Son of God.' The Jew might have accepted Jesus as the Messiah simply, but when he said 'My Father worketh almighty and I work,' they were ready to stone him.

"Here is where I would have you gird up the loins of your faith and be strong. Thank God that the humanity of Jesus is being emphasized as never before. Let the humanity of Jesus is not all of the Christ. In the midst of many misunderstandings he calmly possessed his soul in conscious communion with God. He towers above humanity as Mount Blanc and Mount Chimborazo tower above the plains below. One must stand far away from Christ to think that the Son of God has only the stature of a man, however perfect. The closer we stand to the Son of God, the higher he towers above us. No feeling man can stand close enough to the Christ to be thrilled by the pulsing of his great warm heart, without realizing that while he is human he is also superhuman. No thoughtful man can read his wonderful words, so sublimely simple, without saying with the officers sent to arrest him, 'Never man spake like this man.' No purposeful man can study the work of Christ's personal humanity and historic achievements, without testifying with Nicodemus, 'Rabbi, we know that thou art a teacher come from

God, for no man can do the miracles that thou doest except God be with him.'

"I shall not appeal to his recorded miracles tonight. To those who accept the Bible as the Word of God, they are indubitable evidences of Christ's superhuman power. There are many minds to whom the miracles do not, cannot, appeal directly, as they did to those who witnessed them. We have many more evidences of the divinity of Christ than this Spirit-guided apostle has recorded in this greatest of all inspired books. If Christ be not the Son of God, there is no reason in history. To deny this central truth of the Christian system we must walk backward through the centuries and destroy all that is sacred and sublime. With the hand of iconoclasm we must destroy the poems of Milton and Dante, the paintings and statues of Michael Angelo and Leonardo DeVinci. Yea, we must not only destroy our art and literature but our laws and liberties.

"During the civil war, a noble boy in blue shouldered his musket to fight for the flag we love. He was mortally wounded by a brother in gray, who fought for the state of his birth. While lying in the ward the dying boy kept constantly calling, 'Mother! Mother! Mother!' The physician telegraphed his mother. She came; the doctor met her at the door and forbade her entering the ward, fearing the excitement would cause the instant death of the boy. For three long hours the mother stood outside and heard her darling boy calling for her. At last she said, 'Doctor, I must go in. My heart will break out here. Just let me take the nurse's place. I'll not speak a word.' The nurse passed out. The mother noiselessly took her place, but the first time her delicate hand touched his brow, without seeing her, he said, 'Nurse, that feels like my mother's hand.'

"Jesus, these eyes have never seen That radiant form of thine, The veil of sense hangs dark between Thy blessed face and mine."

"Home-sick for our father's house, when thou dost touch our sin-sick hearts, we know, even in the darkness of sin and death, that it is the Father's hand in the person of Jesus the Christ the Son of God."

A Writ of Habeas Corpus.

In response to a telegram, Sheriff Dwyer arrested on the six o'clock train, Saturday, a gentleman from San Jose, Santa Clara county, California, by the name of William M. Beggs. The latter was accompanied by his wife and child who insisted upon going to jail with him. Mr. Beggs was charged, it seems, with forgery and with obtaining money under false pretences. He claims that his arrest was a conspiracy growing out of business troubles.

The family remained in the jail until Monday morning, when, through their attorneys, Messrs. Lehman Bros. and Cavanaugh, a petition for a writ of habeas corpus was brought before Judge Kinne. Under the circumstances, the writ could not be refused, as no requisition papers had as yet been secured from Governor Winans. It is believed by many that the prosecuting attorney, Mr. Lehman, acted strangely in securing the discharge of the prisoner, when it was his duty to look after the people's interests.

A Railway Collision.

Daniel Collins, of Ypsilanti, lost his life, Saturday morning, in a collision at Lowell between a gravel train and freight train. The former stood partially on the siding, and the freight, coming from the east, crashed into the caboose and locomotive. Although there were fifteen persons on the car, Collins alone lost his life. The engineer, Russell Webb, and the conductor, John Ryan, escaped injury by jumping. The two children of the latter were saved by the alertness of one of the men. They had started out of the door, when the man quickly seized them, threw them on the floor and protected them by placing his own body over theirs.

A coroner's inquest was held in Ypsilanti Tuesday. The verdict laid the blame for the accident upon both conductors and Train Dispatcher Coyne.

School Matters.

The annual school election passed off Monday in the usually quiet way. There were two tickets in the field which were precisely alike, with the exception that one bore the name of Ottmar Eberbach and the other the name of Philip Bach. The former was understood to favor the teaching of German in the ward schools.

The vote stood as follows: Philip Bach, 203; J. V. Sheehan, 323; Evert H. Scott, 335; Ottmar Eberbach, 137; John Bohh, 1.

At the annual school meeting, which followed the election, it was decided to raise $28,000 by taxation for the ensuing year's expenses. The sum of $150 was appropriated for the library. The treasurer's report was read and adopted.

OFF THE TABLE.

THE COUNCIL ORDERS THE SEWERAGE REPORT PRINTED.

An Interesting Meeting, in the Course of which Alderman Herz Walks Out—It Terminates in a Love Feast.

Hush! Bang! A truce. These three words well describe the council meeting of Monday last, which appeared very stormy at one time, but ended in a love-feast. It was the sewerage question, of course, that caused the trouble. Alderman Martin moved that the report of the committee, which had lain on the table for three long weeks, be taken up and discussed. The motion prevailed by a vote of seven to four. Mr. Martin explained that he made the motion simply to satisfy the people, who were talking about the question a great deal and expressing much indignation at the summary action of the council three weeks before.

Alderman Herz claimed that he had seen just as many people as Mr. Martin and that they had talked differently to him. The people in his ward were down on it. Why couldn't the council go slow?

Alderman Martin replied that the people ought to have an opportunity of seeing what the report contained. Let them vote sewerage down if they wanted to.

Alderman Mann was in favor of submitting the question to a vote of the people. He had heard suggestions in some quarters that the city would be bonded in order to build the entire system. He thought that would be unjust to the poor people. As for the charge that the council was going too fast, he reminded the aldermen that it had taken them two years to get as far as they were. He thought the only feasible plan was that suggested by the committee.

Alderman Herz, at this point, became excited and remarked that it was a "nice little trick" to take up the report when three of those that had voted to lay it on the table were absent. He was reminded by Alderman Kitson that only two (Aldermen Ferguson and Rehberg) were present.

In a sarcastic manner, Alderman Wines asked, if that was a "nice little trick," what would he call the action of the majority in refusing to consider their own committee's report, after they had spent weeks of hard labor in investigating the subject. Mr. Wines grew eloquent. Mr. Herz picked up his hat and walked out in high dudgeon. Alderman Wines continued. Even if the report was obnoxious, why could it not be treated decently? But what, under the sun, there could be in the report so obnoxious that people feared to face it, he could not see.

Alderman Martin indignantly denied that any "nice little trick" was being played. He would have offered the motion just the same if the entire council has been present. He then presented a resolution to the effect that the committee's report be received and spread on the records. Space does not permit an account of the discussion which followed. Suffice it to say that the aldermen who had previously voted to lay the report on the table were induced to look at the matter differently. They explained that they were not averse to receiving and printing the report, but that they had been afraid this action would commit the council in some way to the plan suggested. It was thought by them that the whole matter ought to be deferred till spring. Alderman Martin's motion finally passed by a unanimous vote.

THE VETO MESSAGES.

The communications from the mayor, in which he disapproved of the appropriations for purchasing a council map, copying South University-ave and building culverts on Hill-st, Felch-st and Fifth-st, were read. They were all sustained, but the map appropriation was lost by just one vote, the ballot standing eight to two. It was thought that if the mayor had realized the great need of a map, he would not have sent in the veto.

A motion passed, authorizing the board of public works to grade South University-ave and East University-ave, the University authorities having expressed a willingness to continue the stone sidewalk in case of such action.

STREET RAILWAY ORDINANCE.
The ordinance relative to the use of street railways by the public passed to its third reading. It imposes a fine upon persons who jump on the cars while in motion, or run in front of them, within a distance of thirty feet. Considerable discussion ensued, and it was finally decided to re-commit the ordinance.

OPENING FOURTH-AVE.

In response to a petition, signed by a number of residents, Alderman Hall moved that all parties interested in the opening of the proposed extension of Fourth-ave from Madison to Hill-sts be notified to appear at a meeting of the council, September 21. The street is to run through a portion of the F. L. Parker and Lucy W. Morgan property. Alderman Hall's motion carried.

MISCELLANEOUS BUSINESS.

The report of the board of public works, including the plans and specifications for the new bridge and also the bids for repairing bridge No. 2, was read. C. Helber's bid was for $485; Werner & Rentschler's $425. Upon the recommendation of the board, the council rejected both bids and provided that the work should be done by the city, under the direction of the street commissioner.

A communication from the mayor, containing correspondence between the mayor and city attorney, relative to the soldier's relief fund, was read. It appears that the provisions of the charter had not been followed out. The council resolved to proceed according to law, and to meet with the relief commission for the purpose of certifying to lists of all old soldiers who were entitled to aid.

Considerable discussion of unimportant matters was indulged in, but no action was taken. At twenty minutes before eleven, the council adjourned to meet again this evening.

A Crazy Man.

Quite a sensation was caused in various parts of the city, Saturday, by the queer behavior of an insane man. His name was R. E. Moll and he came from Canajoharie, N. Y. Among other places, he visited the store of A. L. Noble. From there he was directed to the office of the mayor, who entertained him pleasantly for some time, in the meanwhile sending for the marshal.

In conversation Moll complained bitterly of a conspiracy into which the entire railway system of the country had entered at his expense. He found great difficulty in traveling. Everywhere false time-cards were posted to deceive him. And depot clerks were instructed not to sell him tickets. The Toledo company, he said, put on a lot of boys as conductors, just to give him trouble. The only rational moment he had was when he was suddenly asked if he had any money. He said he had.

At his own request, Marshal Murray escorted him towards the Michigan Central depot, but before he got there, he suddenly changed his mind and broke into a run. He was taken to jail and locked up until his brother, B. C. Moll, of Flint, came and took him away.

The insane man was a well appearing person. He graduated from the dental department three years ago and knew a number of people in this city.

Under the Cars.

A fatal accident occurred in this city last Thursday, about an hour after THE REGISTER went to press. John Kearney, a resident of Pinckney, who had been canvassing in Ann Arbor for the life of John Boyne Reilly, went to the Toledo depot for the purpose of taking the north bound train. He waited, for some reason, until after the train had started and then attempted to jump on the platform of the second car. In so doing, he slipped and fell under the forward truck, which cut off his leg below the knee. He then attempted to rise and his head was immediately struck by the second truck. Death was instantaneous. The body was taken to O. M. Martin's undertaking rooms and an inquest was held which exonerated the railroad company from all blame.

Mr. Kearney was sixty-three years of age. He leaves a wife, two sons and three daughters—all married. At the time of his death he was deputy-sheriff for Livingston county.

Thrown from His Wagon.

Frank Grail, of Willis, was thrown from his wagon Tuesday morning, at the corner of Packard-st and Fifth-ave, and fell in such a way that his head struck the pavement violently. He had been sitting in the wagon waiting for his companion, who was delivering potatoes, when the team, frightened by a passing milk wagon, suddenly started up. Grail was taken to the residence of A. T. Bruegel, near by, and it was for a time feared he could not live. In the afternoon, however, he had rallied enough to permit of his accompanying his father home, a cot bed being placed on the wagon.

About Tin Plate.

E. F. Mills returned on Saturday from New York City. Said he to THE REGISTER: "I saw something down there that I suppose you never saw." "What was that?" "Why, it was an immense piece of American tin. I should say it was between six and seven feet long and about three feet wide. It was exhibited in the Mail and Express windows, and is said to be the largest piece ever manufactured. That looks very much as if some American tin plate was being made, doesn't it?"

Orders for copies of the special edition of THE REGISTER should come in at once. Otherwise there will be no certainty that they can be filled, as the limit of our edition has been reached already.

NEIGHBORHOOD NOTES.

South Lyon's new mill is grinding flour. Fowlerville is to have a new brick opera house. The Leader desires Dexter to improve its water supply.

Frank Stafford, of Chelsea, is building a new residence on Main-st. Saline's harvest home festival will take place on the 25th and 26th.

The Ypsilanti school board calls for an appropriation of only $9,200 this year.

Over 5,000 bushels of cucumbers have been taken in at the Grass Lake pickle factory.

In Belleville may be seen a prize potato weighing one and three-fourths pounds.

Land in the vicinity of Stony Creek is booming. Farmers are asking $50 an acre for it.

Mrs. E. B. Wilmarth has been soliciting for the Detroit Free Press in various parts of the county.

The building for the centrifugal creamery at Ypsilanti will be completed within a month. It represents an investment of $9,600.

Fred Seeger, of Lima, raised oats this year that yielded 52 bushels per acre, without using Hosses and fertilizer. How is that?—Chelsea Herald.

Editor Paul G. Luckey, of the House-friend, is on his way to Europe—Dexter Leader. He is indeed a lucky man, but his name happens to be Sneyke.

Geo. Beckwith has the contract for building a new house for Dan McLaughlin, of Lyon, and also a new one for Godfrey Luck, of Lima.—Chelsea Herald.

Rev. P. P. Farnham, who has been pastor of the Baptist church of this village for the past three years, will remove with his family to Ann Arbor.—Stockbridge Sun.

Jack W. Howlett, of Lyon, was recently stung in the eye by a hornet, and from the effect of the sting he has had three strokes of paralysis, and is now in a very precarious condition of health since.—Chelsea Herald.

The Rosier Bros. of Webster have a new variety of winter apples that are now a large kind. David Henning relates that one of his wealthy Chicago lady customers says that one apple makes a pie.—Dexter Leader.

A Chelsea chap undertook the other day to eat twenty bananas on a wager. He got away with seventeen of them in fifteen minutes and then he felt so bad in his stomach that he hasn't bananas, where, since.—Adrian Press.

Saline breeders distinguished themselves at the Detroit Exposition. A. A. Wood carried away over two-thirds of the premiums offered for fine wools, and Eugene Helber's Cleveland Bay won a blue ribbon over nine competitors.

A case of a surfeit of fish food was exhibited the other day at the camps. C. T. Still, in trying to change his under-clothing, said he had to give it up, as the fish bones stuck out of his body so far that he was unable to disrobe.—Dexter Leader.

Oscar Simpson, one of Saline's energetic horsemen, last Saturday, made a fine sale of his 3-year old trotter to Toledo parties, for the snug little sum of $1,050. Does it pay to breed good stock? We should say yes, every time, and Oscar will keep right on.—Saline Observer.

The Standard Oil company are now selling oil and gasoline at 2 cents a gallon by the barrel. They ought to sell it cheaper since the Michigan test is done away with. The action of the last legislature, there is no extra expense to the company in refining, as all is alike or nearly so.—Manchester Enterprise.

The officers of the Bridgewater Farmers' Picnic association are: President, Wm. Gadd; secretary, Mrs. Chas. Johnson; treasurer, LaMar Brown; committee, Thos. Van Gieson, John Rentschler, Geo. Holtram, Wm. C. Rogers, Christian Saley, Merritt Martin, Columbus Aulls, Bud Johnson, John Logan, and their wives.

George Sweeney, of Norvell, nearly lost his life recently. He was delivering several hives of bees to customers and unfortunately dropped one upon the ground; whereupon the angry insects pitched into him and the horse, stinging both in a frightful manner. Their lives were saved only by the prompt application of water.

Editor Blosser, of the Manchester Enterprise, being displeased because he can't tell where the supply of fuel will come from in 1925, the Brooklyn Export soothes him with the assurance that by that time he won't need any fuel to keep him warm. This will set him worrying again over the problem of how to get a fan.—Adrian Press.

H. N. Millard, of Glynind, Minn., preached at the Baptist church last Sunday morning, and at the Congregational church in the evening. He is a missionary of the American Sunday School Union, and is laboring in northwest Minnesota and northeast Dakota. Mr. Millard spent 19 years of his early life in Dexter, and left here 36 years ago.—Dexter Leader.

For the past few weeks, Rev. C. A. Clark has enjoyed the society of his only daughter, Miss M. L. Clark. Miss Clark has attained for herself an enviable reputation as a kindergarten teacher and has just returned to commence her fourteenth year of continuous work in an Indiana city. About eighty pupils are under her care and her salary is far from being the smallest in the school.—Dexter Leader.

The Chelsea union schools will open about Oct. 1st, 1891, with the following corps of teachers: Superintendent, Prof. A. A. Hall; preceptress, Miss Ida Hopkins; eighth and ninth grades, Miss Nettie Storms; grammar school, Miss Florence Bachman; intermediate, Miss Libbie Dewey; fourth and fifth grades, Miss Dora Harrington; third grade, Miss Mara L. Wheeler; second grade, Miss M. A. Van Tyne; first grade, Miss S. E. Van Tyne.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

MICHIGAN MINES.

Interesting Statistics Furnished by the Commissioner of Minerals. The report of the commissioner of mineral statistics for the year ending September 1, 1890, has been sent to Gov. Winans. It gives figures as follows: One-half of the iron ore produced in the United States was mined in Michigan, the amount being 7,185,175 tons, valued at $41,000,000. Eighty-two iron mines were operated in Michigan in 1890, and seventeen blast furnaces producing 223,537 tons of pig iron. Six copper mines paid dividends in 1890 amounting to $1,000,000, the Calumet and Hecla paying $2,000,000 alone. The total dividends of this mine are $24,800,000. The Calumet and Hecla's stock is worth $26,000,000. The total production of the copper mines of Michigan in 1890 was 653,899 tons, valued at $18,848,427. The amount of land plaster was 920,435 tons and 2,498,383 barrels of stucco of 300 pounds each. There were nine coal mines producing 71,261 tons. Ninety-seven salt concerns produced 3,838,637 barrels. Sandstone quarrying is on the increase, two companies having dividends amounting to $100,000. The Ropes gold mine turned out a net product of $83,241.67.

FOUND DEAD.

A Mystery Over the Death of Two Persons Near Red Oaks. The body of James Burns was found in his home near Red Oaks by Herman Grostick. A girl who was supposed to be his daughter, but who it was ascertained from papers found in the house was not, was found lying dead across the body. A tight cord around the girl's neck showed that she had been strangled. There were no signs of a struggle and everything in the house was in order. The supposition was that Burns died a natural death and that the girl, on discovering his death, strangled herself. Burns was 45 years old and the girl was 18.

Increased the Revenue.

State Treasurer Brausted has been at work to make the state law for licensing peddlers and hawkers operative, with the result that the resources of the state will be increased fully $15,000 annually hereafter. The name and address of every peddler in the state was secured and all were sent an official invitation to buy a license or submit to prosecution. As a consequence the revenue from this source has been increased 800 per cent.

A Strange Coincidence.

A. H. Whitney and wife, of Toronto, reached the Russell house in Detroit the other evening on route for New Mexico. Mr. Whitney died just as the hack drove up to the hotel entrance. The next morning another A. H. Whitney and wife, of Quincy, Ill., reached the Russell. Mrs. Whitney registered, as her husband was ill. He had been in his room but five minutes when he died. The families were in no way related.

State Treasurer's Report.

State Treasurer Brausted's report, which has just been made to the governor, shows that the balance in the treasury June 30, 1890, was $1,151,239.78; receipts for the year, $8,181,808.91; the disbursements have been $9,107,924.27, leaving a balance in the treasury on June 30 of $1,224,644.32. The expense of the legislature was $128,856.45.

Sloop Capsized.

The sloop Little Harry, owned and sailed by Cornelius Verhoof, left Holland for Muskegon with forty bushels of peaches. The next morning the sloop was found on the beach 7 miles north from the harbor in a dismantled condition. Verhoof's 5-year-old son was found drowned in the cabin. Verhoof's body had not been found.

A Long Trance.

At Whitehall George Beard, aged 21, has been confined to his bed for the last three months. During seven weeks of this time he has lain unconscious, apparently in a trance. He seems to have lost every sense save that of feeling. When he is touched on the arm with a slight downward pressure he will raise his arm.

Fell from a Dizzy Height.

"Jack" Hogan, brother of Aeronaut Ed Hogan, of Jackson, Mich., who lost his life two years ago in experimenting with an airship on Long Island, fell 2,500 feet from a balloon at the Detroit exposition grounds and was instantly killed.

Short but Noisy Items.

John McMann and wife, of Mosher-ville, have separated after forty-three years of stormy wedded life. Superintendent Cooper, of the Calumet & Hecla mine, has been tendered the place in the world's fair commission declined by W. R. Burt.

Clerks in the auditor general's office presented to Auditor General Stone a silver tea set.

Dr. H. P. Mowry, of Ironsboro, has been appointed United States examining surgeon on the pension board in place of Dr. Evers, resigned.

William A. Armstrong, a pool-seller at Romeo, was stricken with paralysis at the Detroit races while selling pools and died almost instantly.

Alderman Dardas, of Bay City, and George Nobath playfully scuffled for the possession of a revolver. Nobath was seriously wounded.

Joan Grandberg, on trial in Menominee for the murder of Gilbert Hall at Cedar river, July 4, pleaded guilty of manslaughter.

Lavinia Swift, of Marquette, 14 years old, fooled with a rifle, and Theora Swift, 9 years, was fatally shot.

Natural gas has been found on the farm of George Ludwig, 2 miles north of Hubbardston, at a depth of 33 feet.

Robert Smith & Co. the present contractors, were awarded the state printing and binding contract for the years 1892-93.

The Jonesville pickle factory has purchased 6,000 bushels of cucumbers this season.

David Ingram's little son at Mariette got a plug tobacco tag in his throat. Things looked blue for him for a time, but a doctor finally succeeded in getting it out.

A big pine was felled on the Osegoe river in Presque Isle county. It was 48 inches in diameter at the cut and 132 feet further up it was 15 inches thick. It scaled 11,294 feet of sound lumber.

SUNDAY CLOSING ASKED.

Sabbatarians Present Their Arguments to World's Fair Commissioners.

CHICAGO, Sept. 4.—Eighty members of the national world's fair commission and 100 members of the board of lady managers listened Thursday morning to the arguments of members of the American Sabbath union for closing the world's fair Sundays. The arguments were presented by Col. Elliott F. Shepard, S. F. Scoville, Gen. O. O. Howard, F. A. Fernley, E. F. Cragin, F. L. Patton, P. S. Henson and L. F. Coffin. The joint body listened respectfully to the arguments, but took no action. The commission has decided not to vote on the question until after the local board of directors shall determine what it wishes to do. Then the national commission in its capacity as a supervisory body will exercise its power to concur or dissent. The general sentiment on Sunday closing appears to be this: 1. All machinery should be stopped. 2. All sales of general merchandise should be allowed. 3. The sales of liquors should be suspended. It is further the general opinion that with the restrictions indicated, the doors should be opened. Ample facilities for church services will, it is said, be provided on the grounds. CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—After a long and earnest discussion the board of lady managers passed a resolution in favor of the closing of the world's fair Sundays by a vote of fifty-six to thirty-six Saturday afternoon.

MORE MONEY NEEDED.

World's Fair Commissioners to Ask Congress for a Loan of $5,000,000.

CHICAGO, Sept. 5.—The national world's fair commissioners at their session Friday afternoon by a vote of 45 to 8 announced themselves in favor of operating with the local board of directors in asking congress at this session for a loan of $5,000,000 in aid of the enterprise.

At Wednesday's session of the national commission was submitted the report of Chairman Jeffery, of the local grounds and buildings committee, showing that $3,000,000 must be spent before the fair will be ready to open.

CHICAGO, Sept. 5.—Miss Susan Gale Cook, who has been acting as secretary of the lady managers of the world's fair since the removal of Miss Cousins, has been formally elected to fill that position.

Our Circulation.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—Secretary Foster has prepared a statement showing the amounts of various kinds of money in circulation in the United States during the past thirty years. This table shows that the lowest mark of the circulation was in 1862, when it was $384,697,744, or $10.23 per capita. It then increased to $20.37 per capita in 1875, from which point it receded till in 1878 the circulation was $729,134,634, a per capita of $15.32. From that point it has steadily risen till in 1891, when the circulation is $1,500,067,535 and per capita $23.45.

Dynamite Was in the Wheat.

FINDLAY, O., Sept. 7.—Saturday afternoon, while a number of men were thrashing wheat, the machine exploded. William Mull was killed and four others seriously injured. On investigation it was found that a dynamite cartridge had been placed in a sheaf of wheat by some person unknown, causing the explosion.

LABOR'S GREAT DAY.

It is Generally Observed Throughout the Nation.

Thousands of Tolders in Many Cities and Towns March in Parades, Attend Picnics and Listen to Speeches.

WORKINGMEN IN LINE.

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—Between 15,000 and 20,000 workmen marched in the labor day parade to the music of thirty forty brass bands. The crowd was too big to be accommodated at one park, and as a result there were various meetings, the one at Shary's park being addressed by Jerry Simpson and the others by lesser labor lights. All manufacturing establishments were closed. [Dispatches from other places in Illinois show that the day was generally observed. At Jacksonville there was a parade a mile long, winding up with exercises at the fair grounds. At Decatur ten trades paraded and addresses were made by Ethelbert Stewart and his wife. At Rockford 1,000 men paraded and business was suspended. C. S. Darrow, of Chicago, and others made speeches at the fair grounds. At Joliet 4,000 men paraded and were reviewed by the mayor. At Ottawa all the labor organizations of La Salle county participated and the workmen were in line. Senator O'Connor and David Ross addressed the crowd afterward at Allen's park.]

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 8.—The labor day parade here was participated in by 12,000 wage-workers. It was the first legal labor day that Indiana has had. The Knights of Labor held a monster celebration at the fair grounds, and were addressed by Senators Turpie and Peffer. At Garfield park the American Federation of Labor had a counter attraction, with Judge Howe, Morris Ross and Philip Rappaport as speakers.

KROOK, Pa., Sept. 8.—Labor day here was magnificently celebrated, the demonstration being the largest and most elaborate ever seen in this city. A monster trade and industrial parade took place during the morning. Every labor organization was fully represented and hundreds of workmen not members of any organized body were in line. It is estimated that fully 10,000 people were at Rand park in the afternoon listening to the addresses of Geo. Boies, Candidate Westfall and Mrs. Lease, of Kansas. All of the speakers avoided any reference to politics, their remarks being upon the labor question.

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 8.—Between 13,000 and 14,000 representing the unions paraded the streets about noon. Floats representing the various trades were distributed through the line. In the afternoon a picnic was held in Schlitz park.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 8.—Twelve thousand men participated in the labor day parade here. A picnic was the feature of the afternoon.

[The day was generally observed in other Michigan towns. At Jackson the labor unions of Battle Creek joined in celebrating the day and sent a delegation several hundred strong. E. Cole, Robert G. Osg and Ralph Beaumont made addresses after the parade, and a monster picnic was held in the afternoon. At Muskegon not a wheel turned in any of the mills or factories, and after a fine parade in the morning, followed by speeches, a picnic was held at Lake Michigan park, concluding with a pyrotechnical display in the evening. At Grand Rapids, after the morning parade a picnic with athletic games was held in the afternoon. Business was virtually suspended in the city.]

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 8.—Labor day was celebrated here with a big parade, followed by a picnic participated in by all the local labor associations of this city, East St. Louis and Belleville.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 8.—All business was suspended here. The advent of labor day was celebrated by numerous labor organizations, singing societies, volunteer firemen and detachments of troops.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 8.—Gov. Hill reviewed the labor parade from the balcony of the Iroquois house. He also delivered an address at the labor picnic in the afternoon.

[In other cities of New York state the day was becomingly celebrated. In New York two parades of the Federation of Labor and the Central Labor union took place. Many women were in the ranks of marchers. In the afternoon Senator Peffer and others made addresses. At Troy there were a mammoth parade and picnic. The city of Buffalo, after the morning parade a picnic with athletic games was held in the afternoon. Business was virtually suspended in the city.]

"Love and smoke are unable to conceal themselves," and so it is with catarrh. No man suffering from this loathsome disease, can conceal the fact from his friends. No matter how cultured, learned, social or brilliant he is, while his ailment may be polite enough to dissemble their real feelings—his very company is loathsome. What a blessing it would be to humanity, if every person afflicted with catarrh in the head, could only know that Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy will positively and permanently cure the worst case. The manufacturers guarantee to cure every case or forfeit $500. The remedy is pleasant to use, and costs only 50 cents.

And He Got It. "I have been particular in giving you my best order," said the guest, "because I have a good deal at stake." "Your remarks, sir," replied the dignified waiter, moving leisurely away to give the order, "are entitled to a great deal of wait."—Chicago Tribune.

SUICIDE BY AMMONIA.

The Terrible Agony Does Not Prevent Its Use. No poison brings death with more maddening agony than ammonia, but that fact does not seem to discourage the suicide.

Cases of slow poisoning from ammonia are of constant occurrence among men who work in its manufacture, or even in decomposing substances which give it off in considerable quantities.

Ammonia, slowly and from day to day taken into the system, causes the complexion to lose its freshness, and the skin of men who get heavily impregnated with it has a disagreeably blotched and discolored appearance.

Taken into the stomach from day to day in even the small quantities used to adulterate food, such as baking powder, it not only injures the complexion but attacks the lining of the stomach, and is the source of much general ill health.

The recent rapid increase in the use of ammonia for various purposes, and the consequent increase in its manufacture, have made it one of the most easily obtained poisons and, although everybody is familiar with it in some form, there is a surprising amount of ignorance of its dangerous qualities.

Chill's Successful Insurgents Bitter Against Uncle Sam. Reasons Given for Their Hostile Feelings.—Nearly All of Balmaceda's Troops Have Surrendered—Quiet Being Restored.

A TALK WITH MINISTER EGAN. SANTIAGO, Sept. 3.—Gen. Balmaceda has issued a proclamation turning over the government to the junta de gobierno and requesting intendentes and officials of all grades to obey the orders of that body until an election can be held, a new president elected and a constitutional government formed.

There is no disguising the fact that there is a bitter feeling against the Americans on the part of successful revolutionists. This feeling is so strong that unless it is placated in some way it may seriously affect American commercial interests in Chili for some time.

The capture of the Itata first created the impression that the United States government was actively unfavorable to the revolutionary cause. This impression was intensified by the action of Admiral Brown when he visited Quintero bay August 20 to witness the landing of Gen. Canto's army.

Then other things have served to strengthen the feeling against the United States. Not the least important among them is the general feeling that Minister Egan has been an active partisan of Balmaceda, and has used his influence in preventing the state department from recognizing the belligerent rights of the insurgents.

While called reformers are journeying around the country bearing the Republican party as the cause of all the farmers' ills, James G. Blaine, its most distinguished son, is seeing the ripe fruit of a policy which cannot but be beneficial to agriculture as well as to every other industry. We refer to reciprocity.

It is no longer the South American republics which yield to his masterly diplomacy, and, by opening their ports to America, vastly increase the farmers' market. This time it is Germany. The German embargo on American hogs and the discriminating duties on wheat and flour which favor Russia at the expense of America, have recently been done away with. Germany has not thus yielded of her own accord. It was a matter of self-protection with her.

She knew that, unless she did so, beet-sugar, of which we import about $36,000,000 worth annually, would very likely soon encounter a high tariff when it came to American shores. The benefit to both countries resulting from the change in the German policy cannot but be great. The demand for American wheat and hogs will be vastly increased, and the price of both will undoubtedly rise. At the same time, the industries of neither country can suffer any loss on account of the removal of duties. Beet sugar is an industry not yet well established in the United States, but no tariff is levied upon it. A system of bounties gives it all the protection that could be desired. The American consumer pays no additional price and the German industry is stimulated. Germany suffers no loss, for she imports large quantities of food from one country or another. There is simply a change in the direction of trade.

Thus Blaine triumphs again. What Democratic free trader could accomplish such results without ruining the industries of his country and pauperizing labor?

The report of the sewerage committee has been taken off the table and is printed this week in the official papers three weeks after it appeared, free of charge, in THE REGISTER. It is to be hoped that every citizen will study the report carefully, for, in the opinion of those able to judge, it effectually disposes of every question regarding sewerage which might arise. As we have before said, there is no reason why this necessary improvement should be longer delayed. Physicians, business men and laboring men alike see its importance. The proposed special tax of $20,000 has been defended with invincible logic, and the disposal of sewage in the Huron river has been proved objectionable by the very best scientific authority in the United States. Why any citizen should oppose the immediate establishment of sewerage it is difficult for a sane man to see.

The action of the prosecuting attorney in presenting a petition for a habeas corpus in favor of Mr. Beggs, while the people, for whom it was Mr. Lehman's duty to appear, were left entirely unrepresented, has called forth considerable unfavorable criticism. But what else can be expected from an official whose favorite Latin expression is nolle prosequi?

The special edition will contain many things that will surprise even people who have lived right here in Ann Arbor, and who do not know how much there is to our prosperous little city. Our subscribers should urge all who do not take the paper to get a copy of this issue and read it carefully and then send it to some friend away from here.

Owing to unavoidable delays the special edition of THE REGISTER will appear on the 24th, instead of the 17th, as was first announced. This issue will be a valuable one in every respect.

It is rather interesting to note the photographic illustrations of the primitive manner in which mails are carried even nowadays in northern Michigan, where the function of the United States post is undertaken by dogs. The latter, in teams of six, draw sledges carrying the letter sacks over the wintry snows.

SOCIAL DOINGS.

RECORD OF A WEEK'S PARTIES, ENTERTAINMENTS AND VISITS.

Prof. A. F. Lange and Miss Caroline C. Penny Happily Wedded—Personal News and Gossip.

A pleasant wedding took place at high noon, Tuesday, at the residence of C. W. Penny on north University-ave. The contracting parties were Miss Caroline C. Penny and Prof. Alexander F. Lange, of the University of California. Rev. R. B. Balcom, rector of St. Paul's church, Jackson, performed the ceremony according to the Episcopal rite.

The parlor was prettily decorated with flowers and golden rods, the former being presented by Jackson friends of the bride.

Only a few intimate friends and relatives were present. There was no bridesmaid or groomsmen. The bride was dressed in figured silk. After the ceremony refreshments were served. Mr. and Mrs. Lange left on the 2:19 train for the west.

Among the guests present were Messdames F. J. Sherswood and J. B. Cotter and Misses Mary Childs and Anna Newkirk, of Jackson, and Dr. George Schemm and Ernest Voss, of Saginaw. No cards were issued by the bride's parents.

Prof. Lange graduated from the University in 1885 and was instructor of English and German for several years. He is now assistant professor of German in the University of California. The bride is also a graduate of the University. She was vice-president of the class of '90 for two years and during her college course was admired both for her accomplishments and social traits.

HIS EYE IN THE RIGHT PLACE.

Story of a Young Man Who Was Bound to Make a Lawyer.

What is the chief characteristic of a "born lawyer?" Some people fancy that it is audacity; but audacity has, perhaps, spoiled a lawyer's success as often as it has made it. Craftiness, another quality often attributed to lawyers as a class, is as likely to get them into trouble as it is to win them cases. The real master quality of a good lawyer, according to many modern authorities, is a "genius for details"—an ability to see through a case to the uttermost particular, and keep everything in mind ready for use at the right moment. The following story has probably been told by more than one lawyer to illustrate this fact.

A lawyer advertised for a clerk. The next morning his office was crowded with applicants, all bright and many suitable.

He bade them wait until all should arrive, and then named the man in a row and said he would tell them a story, note their comments and so judge whom he would choose.

"A certain farmer," began the lawyer, "was troubled with a red squirrel that got in through a hole in his barn and stole his seed corn. He resolved to kill the squirrel at the first opportunity.

"Seeing him go in at the hole one noon he took his shotgun and fired away. The first shot set the barn on fire."

"Did the barn burn?" said one of the boys.

"The lawyer, without answer, continued, "And seeing the barn on fire the farmer seized a pail of water and ran to put it out."

"Did he put it out?" said another.

"As he passed inside, the door shut to and the barn was soon in flames. When the hired girl rushed out with more water—"

"Did they all burn up?" said another boy.

"The lawyer went on without answer, "Then the old lady came out, and all was noise and confusion, and everybody was trying to put out the fire."

"Did any one burn up?" said another.

The lawyer said, "There, that will do; you have all shown great interest in the story."

But observing one little bright-eyed fellow in deep silence, he said, "Now, my little man, what have you to say?"

The little fellow blushed, grew uneasy, and stammered out, "I want to know what became of the squirrel; that's what I want to know."

"You'll do," said the lawyer; "you are my man. You have not been switched off by a confusion and a barn burning, and the hired girl and water pails. You have kept your eye on the squirrel."—Youth's Companion.

Tourist—But I—have already pre-paid you the twenty marks as we—a—a—

Guide—That's all right, but I'm on a strike for higher rates now, and if you don't accede to my demands I'll unbuckle the straps.—Life.

Setting Him Right.

A rather dense British nobleman, who had letters to the best houses in Boston, and who was the recipient of much courtesy, left the Hub after a few weeks' visit for the inevitable expedition to the Rockies, which every Englishman considers an essential part of an American experience. On his return he again visited Boston and again bethought himself of calling at a house where he had frequently dined on his former visit. In answer to a ring the old butler, who had been in the family for many years, came to the door.

"Is Mrs. B— in?" said my lord.

"Oh, sir," exclaimed the faithful old soul with the tears running down his cheeks, "my master is dying!"

Lord G— rather increased a good deal (which rather increased the effect of his fashionable vacuousness), stared at the man an instant as if he did not quite understand him, and then rejoiced with dignity, "I—I didn't ask for M—Mister B—; I asked for Mrs. B—."—Exchange.

American Lace Curtains.

A reporter of one of the oldest and most conservative of our daily papers recently called at the office of The Dry Goods Chronicle for information relating to certain customs matters, and in the course of his questioning remarks incidentally affirmed that there were no lace curtain manufacturers in this country. He was surprised when informed that not only was he mistaken, but that really Nottingham, England, might well look to her laurels, since the Wilkes-Barre Manufacturing company produces as handsome curtains in gipure, Cluny and Brussels lace designs as were ever exhibited on any curtain rod in this city. No importations show more beautiful patterns or finer nets.

YOUTH AND AGE.

When all the world is young, lad, and all the trees are green,
And every goose a swan, lad, and every lass a queen;
Then hey for boot and horse, lad, and ride the world away;
Young blood must have its course, lad, and every dog his day.

When all the world is old, lad, and all the trees are brown,
And all the sport is stale, lad, and all the wheels run down;
Creep home and take thy place there, thy early friends among;
God grant you find one face there you lov'd when all was young.

—New York Recorder.

JENNY.

It was night. The cabin, poor but warm and cozy, was full of a half twilight, through which the objects of the interior were but dimly visible by the glimmer of the embers which flickered on the hearth and reddened the dark rafters overhead. The fisherman's nets were hanging on the wall. Some homely pots and pans twinkled on a rough shelf in the corner. Beside a great bed with long, falling curtains, a mattress was extended on a couple of old benches on which five little children were asleep like cherubs in a nest. By the bedside, with her forehead pressed against the counterpane, knelt the children's mother. She was alone. Outside the cabin the black ocean, dashed with stormy snowflakes, moaned and murmured, and her husband was at sea.

From his boyhood he had been a fisherman. His life, as one may say, had been a daily fight with the great waters; for every day, rain, wind or tempest, out went his boat to fish. And while in his four sailed boat he plied his solitary task at sea his wife at home patched the sails, mended the nets, looked to the hooks or watched the little fire where the fish soup was boiling. As soon as the five children were asleep she fell upon her knees and prayed to heaven for her husband in his struggle with the waves and darkness. And truly such a life as his was hard. The likeliest place for fish was a mere speck among the breakers, not more than twice as large as his own cabin—a spot obscure, capricious, changing on the moving desert, and yet which had to be discovered in the fog and tempest of a winter night by sheer skill and knowledge of the tides and winds. And there—while the gliding waves ran past like emerald serpents, and the gulph of darkness rolled and tossed, and the straining rigging groaned as if in terror—there, amid the icy seas, he thought of his own Jenny; and Jenny, in her cottage, thought of him with tears.

She was thinking of him then and praying. The seagull's harsh and mocking cry distressed her, and the roaring of the billows on the reef alarmed her soul. But she was wrapped in thoughts—thoughts of their poverty. Their little children went barefooted winter and summer. Wheat bread they never ate, only bread of barley. Heavens! the wind roared like the bellows of a forge, and the sea-coast echoed like an anvil. She wept and trembled. Poor wives whose husbands are at sea! How terrible to say, "My dear ones—father, lover, brothers, sons—are in the tempest!" But Jenny was still more unhappy. Her husband was alone—alone without assistance on this bitter night. Her children were too little to assist him. Poor mother! Now she says, "I wish they were grown up to help their father!" Foolish dream! In years to come, when she is with their father in the tempest, she will say, with tears, "I wish they were but children still!"

Jenny took her lantern and her cloak. "It is time," she said to herself, "to see whether he is coming back, whether the sea is calmer, and whether the light is burning on the signal mast." She went out. There was nothing to be seen—barely a streak of white on the horizon. It was raining, the dark, cold rain of early morning. No cabin window showed a gleam of light.

All at once, while peering round her, her eyes perceived a tumbledown old cabin which showed no sign of light or fire. The door was swinging in the wind; the wormeaten walls seemed scarcely able to support the crazy roof, on which the wind shook the yellow, filthy tufts of rotten thatch.

"Stay," she cried, "I am forgetting the poor widow whom my husband found the other day alone and ill. I must see how she is getting on."

She knocked at the door and listened. No one answered. Jenny shivered in the cold sea wind.

"She is ill. And her poor children! She has only two of them; but she is very poor, and has no husband."

She knocked again, and called out, "Hey, neighbor!" But the cabin was still silent.

"Heaven!" she said, "how sound she sleeps that it requires so much to wake her!"

At the instant the door opened of itself. She entered. Her lantern illumined the interior of the dark and silent cabin, and showed her the water falling from the ceiling through the openings of a sieve. At the end of the room an awful form was lying—a woman stretched out motionless, with bare feet and sightless eyes. Her cold, white arm hung down among the straw of the pallet. She was dead. Once a strong and happy mother, she was now only the specter which remains of poor humanity after a long struggle with the world.

Near the bed on which the mother lay two little children—a boy and a girl—slept together in their cradle and were smiling in their dreams. Their mother, when she felt that she was dying, had laid her cloak across their feet and wrapped them in her dress, to keep them warm when she herself was cold.

How sound they slept in their old, tottering cradle, with their calm breath and quiet little faces! It seemed as if nothing could awake these sleeping orphans. Outside the rain beat down in floods and the sea gave forth a sound like an alarm bell. From the old crev-iced roof, through which blew the gale, a drop of water fell on the dead face and ran down it like a tear.

What had Jenny been about in the dead woman's house? What was she carrying off beneath her cloak? Why was her heart beating? Why did she hasten with such trembling steps to her own cabin without daring to look back? What did she hide in her own bed behind the curtain? What had she been stealing?

When she entered the cabin the cliffs were growing white. She sank upon the chair beside the bed. She was very pale; it seemed as if she felt repentance. Her forehead fell upon the pillow, and at intervals, with broken words, she murmured to herself, while outside the cabin moaned the savage sea.

"My poor man! Oh, heavens, what will he say? He has already so much trouble. What have I done now? Five children on our hands already! Their father toils and toils, and yet, as if he had not care enough already, I must give him this care more. Is that he? No, nothing. I have done wrong—he would do quite right to beat me. Is that he? No! So much the better! The door moves as if some one were coming in; but no. To think that I should feel afraid to see him enter!"

Then she remained absorbed in thought and shivering with the cold, unconscious of all outward sounds, of the black cormorants, which passed shrieking, and of the rage of wind and sea.

All at once the door flew open, a streak of the white light of morning entered, and the fisherman, dragging his dripping net, appeared upon the threshold, and cried, with a gay laugh, "Here comes the navy!"

"You!" cried Jenny; and she clasped her husband like a lover, and pressed her mouth against his rough jacket.

"Here I am, wife," he said, showing in the firelight the good natured and contented face which Jenny loved so well.

"I have been unlucky," he continued.

"What kind of weather have you had?"

"Dreadful."

"And the fishing?"

"Bad. But never mind. I have you in my arms again, and I am satisfied. I have caught nothing at all. I have only torn my net. The deuce was in the wind tonight. At one moment of the tempest I thought the boat was foundering, and the cable broke. But what have you been doing all this time?"

Jenny felt a shiver in the darkness.

"It" she said in trouble. "Oh, nothing; just as usual. I have been sewing. I have been listening to the thunder of the sea, and I was frightened."

"Yes; the winter is a hard time. But never mind it now."

Then, trembling as if she were going to commit a crime:

"Husband," she said, "our neighbor is dead. She must have died last night, soon after you went out. She has left two little children, one called Wilhelm and the other Madeline. The boy can hardly toddle, and the girl can only lisp. The poor, good woman was in dreadful want."

The man looked grave. Throwing into a corner his fur cap, sodden by the tempest: "The deuce!" he said, scratching his head. "We already have five children; this makes seven. And already in bad weather we have to go without our supper. What shall we do now? Bah, it is not my fault; it's God's doing. These are things too deep for me. Why has He taken away their mother from these mites? These matters are too difficult to understand. One has to be a scholar to see through them. Such tiny scraps of children! Wife, go and fetch them. If they are awake, they must be frightened to be alone with their dead mother. We will bring them up with ours. They will be brother and sister to our five. When God sees that we have to feed this little girl and boy besides our own He will let us take more fish. As for me, I will drink water. I will work twice as hard. Enough! Be off and get them! But what is the matter? Does it vex you? You are generally quicker than this."

His wife drew back the curtain.

"Look!" she said.—Translated from the French of Victor Hugo for Strand Magazine.

Guides at Vesuvius.

A correspondent writes from Valle di Pompei: "The death of the Brazilian journalist in Mount Vesuvius has rather damaged the reputation of the guides, but it is unjust to blame all the guides and their agencies. It is true that some of them are unfit to accompany strangers, especially in times of eruption, and even the permit of the police is no security that the excursion will be a safe one. But the chief fault lies with the travelers themselves. The guide who accompanied the Brazilian correspondent has been regularly authorized to conduct visitors for the last four years, and was considered no inexperienced guide.

"But, as I have often had occasion to observe, foreign visitors, and especially English young ladies, rebel against the cautions of the guides and often run and jump about on the very edge of danger. It is therefore difficult when some accident happens to define the responsibility of the guides. They are certainly not to blame if the people they conduct will not listen to them."—London News.

Rock Crystal.

Rock crystal is plentiful in various localities of the United States. A mass of it weighing fifty-one pounds from North Carolina was sent four years ago to New York. The original crystal, which must have weighed 300 pounds, was unfortunately broken in pieces by the ignorant mountain girl who discovered it. One very useful purpose to which this mineral substance is put is the manufacture of mirrors, when it can be found in big enough blocks to be sawed into slabs of sufficient size. Its superiority over glass lies in the fact that it does not, like glass, detract from the rosinness of the complexion. Every pretty woman should surely have a hand glass of rock crystal.—Washington Star.

Last Monday night G. W. Phelps was elected director of school district No. 2, and J. H. Boyle director of district No. 1.

In this vicinity threshing will be suspended until after seeding. Some have sown already. Many are afraid of insect work in early sowing.

There will be an ice-cream social at the residence of W. E. Boyden Friday evening, September 18. It will be under the charge of the Y. P. S. C. E., which has secured the Business Men's Quartette of Ann Arbor to render music as a part of the literary program.

Whitmore Lake.

Master Fred Stevens will attend school in Detroit this next season.

Frank Haynes left Saturday to join his father at Gregory. Mr. Spiegleberg moved him.

Mrs. Baxter, guest of the Clifton, has been quite ill with rheumatism, but is convalescing.

Mit Todd has been afflicted with the prevailing disease, rheumatism, but is still "in line."

Master George Todd was called home Thursday by the illness of his father, Chas. Todd, of Kalamazoo.

Mr. Baxter, the merchant tailor, of Detroit, spent the Sabbath with his family, who are guests of the Clifton House.

Miss Ann Kane was the recipient of a beautiful gold heart set with diamonds, presented by Mrs. Bland, of Detroit, last week.

Flete Smith, of the Clifton, was quite under the weather last week, but is around again. Nothing serious is apprehended.

Mr. Rousenberger threshed about 2000 bushels of grain for Mr. Webber last week, besides doing up Fohey, Todd, Barker, Pray and McDonald.

Messrs. Coyle Otto, and Will Spiegleberg, the threshers, are rustlers. They threshed in one day last week, for Hon. Wm. Ball, 1,305 bushels of grain. Next!

There were two picnics at Wiedeman's grove last week. Pretty cool for them, but judging from the sounds wafted to these shores, they had an enjoyable time.

Rev. Jennings will deliver his last discourse for this conference year next Sabbath, 10:30 a. m. We confidently look for his return to this charge next year. He is a very able minister, and we are truly fortunate in getting him back. His hosts of friends will be glad to welcome him.

Salem.

Calvin Wheeler is on the sick list. Miss Ortensia Allen is seriously ill.

Rev. R. E. Manning, of Detroit, was in the village on Monday.

Miss Hyndman, of Glencoe, Ont., is visiting her cousin, Mrs. Frederick.

Mrs. Ed. Naylor has returned from a two weeks' sojourn with her sister at Mio.

Miss F. Tweedale has returned from a week's visit with friends at St. Thomas, Ontario.

The Maccabees are buzzing; two candidates are expected for the next regular review.

Mrs. Tweedale, who has been on an extended visit to friends and relatives in Ontario, returned home last Thursday.

The union public school opened on Monday with a large attendance. We are pleased to state that the staff is unchanged.

Willie Frederick has been awarded a building lot in Florida, as a prize in a rebus contest, offered by the Household Companion Company.

The following were elected public school trustees: Two years, John Vansickle and Frank Ryder. One year, Cody Barnett and James Woodworth.

Ben Adem Division Uniformed Rank K. of P., of Plymouth, will give an exhibition drill on the streets of Salem, at six p. m. Friday. They will be out in full force. Don't miss it.

The father of Edward Crandall passed away last Saturday at an advanced age. He resided with his son-in-law, A. Johnson, from whose residence the funeral took place last Monday, to the Methodist cemetery.

Milan.

Rev. Wm. Buxton is seriously ill. Mrs. D. Chapin is visiting friends in Grand Rapids.

Mrs. Heaton, of St. Louis, is the guest of her mother, Mrs. Coe.

Mrs. A. Fuller returned to her home in Minneapolis the first of the week.

E. M. Fuller will take charge of the intermediate department at the Milan school Monday.

Mr. Fulcher, of Novi, has bought A. Dexter's house on the corner of East Main and Wilcox-sts.

J. Dexter has traded his house on Wash-st for Mrs. Richards' house on the corner of Dexter and Wabash-sts.

Miss Julia King will leave next week for Chattanooga, Tenn., where she intends spending the winter with friends.

The Baptist association was well attended Wednesday morning. The following delegates were present: Rev. A. S. Carman, Ann Arbor; Rev. J. W. Stone, Clinton; Rev. W. A. Rupert, Grass Lake; Rev. H. Burns, Hillsdale; Rev. J. E. Platt, association superintendent, and P. E. Jones, Saline; Deacon Gooding and wife, Mrs. J. U. Fuller, Mrs. Buxton, York; Rev. J. L. Cheney, Rev. Mr. Smith, Deacon Wm. J. Canfield, Mrs. E. Day and Mrs. M. Roberts.

OUR YPSILANTI RAMBLER.

Tells What He Has Seen and Heard in that Burg During the Past Seven Days and Nights.

We are pained to record the death of Mrs. Edwin Crane, who has been widely known and loved. Her funeral occurred last week Monday, Rev. E. P. Goodrich officiating. Our schools have got on a full force of steam and are skimming along at a good rate, with Prof. M. A. Whitney to oversee things in his own practical and decided manner. This reminds us that the annual school election was quite breezy. All day long three or four great strapping men tore' around with carriages carrying men voters to and from the election room. What for? Just because there was a "woman in the case"—or rather she was on the ticket and no man in his semi-sober senses wants to think of a woman fooling around with school matters. Not much! Her place is at home getting the children mended and washed for school. Well, soon after dinner a number of stylish hacks and carriages filled with ladies began to visit the scene of action and then the God of War not only pranced and upset things but he stormed and bore and compelled peaceably minded men to come and "outvote those blankety blanked women." Of course she was left out in the cold, but not so badly but there's hope for another and more successful campaign next year. The state Normal will no longer hide its wealth and valuable papers in the state coal-bin, for it has just received a spic span new safe, double barred and doored and ready loaded with dynamite, warranted to blow itself and the whole building sky high on the slightest provocation by midnight marauders.

The Famous Shenandoah Valley.

In order to accommodate persons who wish to examine West Virginia, Maryland and the famous Shenandoah Valley of Virginia, arrangements have been made to run excursions on September 15th and 20th to points in the Shenandoah Valley, from Chicago, Ill., and all points on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad west of the Ohio River, and from Cincinnati and intermediate points on the Baltimore & Ohio South-Western Railroad and Ohio & Mississippi Railway. The importance of purifying the blood cannot be overestimated, for without pure blood you cannot enjoy good health. At this season nearly every one needs a good medicine to purify, vitalize, and enrich the blood, and Hood's Sarsaparilla is worthy your confidence. It is peculiar in that it strengthens and builds up the system, creates an appetite, and tones the digestion, while it eradicates disease. Give it a trial.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is sold by all druggists. Prepared by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

LITERARY NOTES.
Rudyard Kipling, whose name are apt to associate with tales of Indian Military Life, has written a nautical story, "The Disturbance of Traffic" which appears in the Atlantic for September. Mr. Kipling has never written anything of the kind before, but is as vivid a narrator here as elsewhere.—Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston, Mass.

The Chicago Graphic, a sort of Western Harper's Weekly, is full of news and entertaining reading each week, together with a large number of excellent illustrations. The current number contains among other articles one on "The Far Southwest" and another on Mrs. Bertha Honore Palmer, president of the board of lady managers of the World's Columbian Exposition. A full page portrait accompanies the last. The Graphic Co., Chicago, Ill.

The American painter, Mr. M. A. Anderson, has the honor of the frontispiece in the September number of the Magazine of Art. The editor of the magazine uses this picture, "The Morning After the Ball," to illustrate his argument that one of the most notable characteristics of American figure-painters is the capacity of imitation and absorption of foreign methods and foreign feeling; "originally, perhaps, a virtue, but, in result, disastrous to its American individualism."—Pub. by Cassell & Co., New York, N. Y.

The list of contributors to The Popular Science Monthly for September contains a goodly number of strong names. The opening article, by Prof. John Fiske, is on the Doctrine of Evolution: Its Scope and Influence. There is an essay by Herbert Spencer on The Limits of State Duties, which embodies a strong argument against attempts by governments to mould artificially the characters of citizens. Dr. Andrew D. White continues his Warfare of Science series, describing the displacement of fetishism by hygiene.—D. Appleton & Co., New York, N. Y.

Scribner's Magazine for September contains the concluding article in the successful Steamship Series, entitled "The Steamship Lines of the World," by Lieutenant Ridgely Hunt, U. S. N., a son of the late Secretary of the Navy and Minister to Russia. This number contains three articles on essentially American subjects—"Odd Homes," from the dug-out to the Adirondack cabin; on "China Hunting in New England," particularly along the Connecticut River valley, with an account of many rare American plates, which it was once the custom to make as souvenirs of important events; and (the third) on the "Present Ideals of American University Life," by Professor Josiah Royce, of Harvard.—Charles Scribner's Sons, New York, N. Y.

Harper's Magazine for September will be remarkable for the number and excellence of its illustrated articles. Among these will be Edwin A. Abbey's illustrations of Shakespeare's "Much Ado about Nothing," an article on the New York Chamber of Commerce, by Dr. Richard Wheatley, with portraits reproduced from Trumbull's paintings, besides numerous other pictures; George du Maurier's "Peter Ibbetson," with fourteen characteristic illustrations drawn by the author; Montgomery Schuyler's "Glimpses of Western Architecture," with views of some notable dwelling-houses and other buildings in Chicago; another chapter of Walter Besant's "London," with pictures of the remains of medieval palaces and other remarkable structures; and F. Hopkinson Smith's "Under the Minarets," beautifully illustrated from his own paintings.—Harper & Brothers, New York, N. Y.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.
It is related as a curious fact that Paris, with a population of nearly 2,500,000 souls, has less than 100 negroes within its limits. Statisticians say that the whole of France cannot muster a negro population exceeding 500.
For eight years I have suffered from catarrh, which affected my eyes and hearing; have employed many physicians without relief. I am now on my second bottle of Ely's Cream Balm, and feel confident of a complete cure.—Mary C. Thompson Cerro Gordo, Ill.
Where a face is used on a piece of money it is always in profile, because the cameo is more readily struck with the die in that manner, and if a full or three-quarter face were represented, the nose of the gentleman or lady would get damaged in circulation and produce a ridiculous effect.
I am an old man and have been a constant sufferer from catarrh for the last ten years. I am entirely cured by the use of Ely's Cream Balm. It is strange that so simple a remedy will cure such a stubborn disease.—Henry Billings, U. S. Pension Att'y, Washington, D. C.
The President
Of the bank of Waverly, Iowa, says: Sulphur Bitters saved my life. For ten years I suffered from Catarrh and Liver complaint; I lost forty-five pounds and was growing worse rapidly. I had lost all faith in medicine, but hearing your Bitters so well recommended, I gave them a trial. Six bottles cured me.—Smith P. Hunt, Waverly, Iowa.

An Awful Tragedy!
Thousands of lives have been sacrificed, thousands of homes made desolate by the fatal mistake of the "old school" physicians, still persisted in by some, notwithstanding the light thrown upon the subject of modern research, that Consumption is incurable. It is not. Consumption is a scrofulous disease of the lungs, and any remedy which strikes right at the seat of the complaint must and will cure it. Such a remedy is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is a certain specific for all scrofulous complaints. It is never known to fail if given in a fair trial, and that is why the manufacturers sell it under a positive guarantee that if it does not benefit or cure, the money paid for it will be refunded. The only lung remedy possessed of such remarkable curative properties as to warrant its makers in selling it on trial!

In the City of New York.
Building Inspector (examining large balloon structure of ten stories from opposite side of street)—It looks perfectly safe. I don't think I need go through it. Besides, I want to increase my life insurance first.—Chicago Tribune.

The Best Advertising.
The most efficient advertising in behalf of Hood's Sarsaparilla is that which comes from the medicine itself. That is, those who are cured by it, speak to friends suffering similarly, who in turn derive benefit and urge others to try this successful medicine. Thus the circle of its popularity is rapidly widening from this cause alone, and more and more are becoming enthusiastic in behalf of Hood's Sarsaparilla as it actually demonstrates its absolute merit. All that is asked for Hood's Sarsaparilla is that it be given a fair trial. If you need a good blood purifier, or building up medicine, try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

One of Boggles' Fallings.
Barkon—Boggles is an uncompromising Republican, isn't he?
Bye—Uncompromising? That's exactly what he is. He might have been $50,000 better off than he is if he had only compromised with his creditors.

A Burglar Captured.
This morning about two o'clock, John Wood, the well-known plumber who resides on Main-st., was awakened by hearing glass break. On getting out of bed he perceived a blow on the head. He immediately grappled with the burglar, and after a terrible struggle succeeded in holding him until his wife obtained help. On being searched at the station, Mr. Wood's watch and wallet was found on his person. He gave the name of Robert Terry. The broken glass proved to be a bottle of Sulphur Bitters which had almost cured Mr. Wood of rheumatism.—Exchange. 2

Would Do Just as Well.
Visitor—I have often wanted to visit a lunatic asylum, but I suppose there is none in the city.
Resident—No, but we've got a Board of Trade. (Pronounced) Come along. It's in session. It will do just as well.

On the Threshold.
Standing at womanhood's door is she, Glad in virgin purity,
And like the lilies, ere, how frail:
They are borne to earth when the storms prevail,
And their life goes out in the summer gale.
When we see a frail and lovely creature, standing on the threshold between girlhood and womanhood, we shiver with a fear of what may be, because we have seen so many succumb at this critical period of life. What is needed at this time is a tonic and invigorant—something that will promote proper functional action of the female organs. The only remedy to be depended on is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. The unequalled medicine, which cures diseases peculiar to women, is especially valuable at the period when the girl crosses the threshold of womanhood. Used at such a time, it never fails to produce a most beneficial result, and many a fragile girl has been tided over one of life's most trying periods by it.

What Spectacles Have Done.
Eyeglasses are commonly ground with equal convexity on both sides. The material for their manufacture is both glass and a kind of a stone called Brazilian pebble. It is really a rock crystal of very fine quality and does not resemble a "pebble" in any particular. Spectacles have alleviated more misery than all other human agencies, because there is no sorrow equal to that caused by impaired sight.—St. Louis Republic.

Ladies Try.
Great French Remedy. Dr. Le Duc's Periodical Pills from Paris, France, act only upon the generative organs in females, and positively cure suppression of the menses (from whatever cause) and all periodical troubles peculiar to women. Established in Europe, 1839; England, 1850; Canada, 1875; United States, 1887. A safe, reliable remedy, warranted to excite menstruation, or money refunded. The larger portion of the ills to which ladies are subject is the direct result of a disordered and irregular menstruation. The American Pill Co., proprietors. Price, $2. Sold by Eberbach & Son, druggists, Ann Arbor, Mich.

New Equipment on the Wabash.
The Wabash Railroad has just placed on its day trains between Chicago and St. Louis a line of elegant new Wagner buffet parlor cars. These cars make direct connection at St. Louis with through sleepers for Hot Springs and the Southwest. The night trains on the Wabash running between Chicago and St. Louis have long had the distinction of being the finest in the West, their compartment sleepers being especially popular. This new departure brings their day trains up to the same standard. 517

He Put This and That Together.
A young woman was traveling in a stationer's shop and the elderly proprietor suddenly asked:
"And when does the wedding take place?"
"The wedding? Why, you don't think of it?" the fair customer blushed and hesitated.
"Ah, fraulein, when young ladies buy a hundred of paper and only twenty-five envelopes I know there is something in the wind."—Cologne (Ger.) Gazette.

For Over Fifty Years.
Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhoea. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Sold by all druggists throughout the world.

A Striking Contrast.
What an awfully "bankrupt United States Treasury" it is! The Secretary tells the owners of $50,000,000 of 4% bonds to step up to the office and exchange them for 2 per cent. bonds or take their money. Is that the way bankrupt concerns talk and act? When Republicans took hold of affairs thirty years ago a Democratic Treasurer was paying 12 per cent. and glad to get money at that.—Inter Ocean.

Surprise to All.
After using "Mother's Friend" two months I was so speedily and easily relieved that it was a surprise to those attending me. "Mother's Friend" undoubtedly lessens the pains, shortens the time and restores the mother speedily to health. Will recommend it to all expectant mothers, and advise them to use it. Mrs. J. A. R. Muncie, Indiana. Sold by all Druggists. 74

To The Pacific Coast.
Go to California via the through lines of the Burlington Route, from Chicago or St. Louis to Denver, and thence over the new broad gauge, through car lines of the Denver and Rio Grande or Colorado Midland Railways, via Leadville, Glenwood Springs and Salt Lake, through interesting cities and unsurpassed scenery. Dining cars all the way. 6

Interesting Results from Potato Trials.
From the results of potato raising derived from the experience of specialists and the tests made at the various experiment stations of the country, there seems to be little occasion to doubt that light seeding for the potato crop is followed by a far smaller crop than the use of large seed would give. Director Sanborn, now of the Utah station, summarizes the average of seven years' experiment work of his own on two college farms of the east in seeding for potatoes as follows, in the product per acre:

From seed of whole potatoes, large.....	224
From seed of whole potatoes, small.....	177
From seed of stems and of potato.....	168
From seed of seed and of potato.....	108
From one eye to hill.....	81
From two eyes to hill.....	304
From three eyes to hill.....	300

Later trials with seed cut lengthwise of the potato showed that system was the most economical of any tried. The Ohio station, in commenting on the above, says its own experiments are in general accord with it. The largest crops have come from whole seed, but the most profitable crops have come from large cuttings. Mr. E. S. Carman's experiments led him to the conclusion that the size of the seed to be planted should be determined by the habits of the variety, and not by any fixed rule. He considers the advice to use whole seed as bad, for while with some varieties it may be sound, with others it will result in small tubers every time. He advocates large pieces containing two or three eyes as a good general rule.

Introducing Queens.
Mr. E. A. Morgan, of Wisconsin, writing in The Bee Keepers Review, recommends in introducing queens the plan of first caging the removed queen a few minutes in the cage that is to be used in confining the new queen. The theory is that the old queen leaves a scent in the cage that the bees recognize and thus mistake the new queen for their former sovereign. Mr. Morgan stops up the entrance to the cage with good candy and allows the bees to at once begin the work, eating out the candy. He says he has practiced this method three years, sometimes in terrible dearth, and never lost a queen. He often found a queen laying in three hours from the time that the old queen was removed.

An Important Point in Setting Cabbages.
Many readers have doubtless been troubled with cabbage growing stalky and not heading well. It is told in Country Gentleman that if pains are taken in setting out the plant, to get the tap or main root set down perfectly straight, this difficulty will be overcome. Unlike the tomato plant, which will thrive set down in any shape, I have never seen a cabbage head up well set with the main root cramped and twisted up, says the authority quoted.

FARM AND GARDEN.
AUSTRALIAN SHEEP SHEARER.
A Machine Worked by Compressed Air Instead of Belting or Gearing. Among machines of general interest that attracted much attention at the Royal show lately held at Doncaster, England, was an Australian "compressed air" sheep shearer.

SHEEP SHEARER IN USE.
ed air sheep shearing machine. This implement is worked by compressed air instead of belting or gearing, as is usual in power worked sheep shearing machines.

It is for shearing or clipping animals, or for cutting hair, and consists essentially of a shearing mechanism held in the hand, and actuated by air or other convenient fluid pressure supplied (through flexible or elastic piping) from a suitable power driven air compressor. The machine, of which the first cut gives a general idea and the second shows the construction of the cutting mechanism and manner of holding it, consists of a reciprocating double piston engine having a suitable air valve which controls its action, the piston being connected to a lever which moves the cutter, the cutter being made with several teeth, as is usual in clipping machines.

Wheat Not Always Self Fertilizing.
May wheats cross naturally? It has generally been assumed that they do not—or, nearly so. It was observed that the editor of The Rural New Yorker, as an ample opportunity has been given for observation, we incline more and more to the opinion that the question may be answered affirmatively, though not until now have we been able to offer any positive proof. The first evidence was given by The Rural New Yorker's wheat-rye hybrids; those that were sterile, or nearly so. It was observed that the envelopes about the pistils, stamens and ovaries gaped apart, and remained so for hours, as if asking for something that nature did not supply. We were thus led to watch the flowers of pure wheats. It was seen that the petals do open not only far enough to allow of the egress of the anthers, but occasionally so far as to enable one to see the feathery stigma without further pressing the glumes apart. It would seem that this opening in pure wheats is of very short duration. Were the stigmas of these gaping flowers already pollinated? Were their own anthers pollenless or impotent, and was that the reason they gaped open as in the case of the sterile rye-wheat heads? Suppose the anthers of ordinary wheat heads were removed while green and immature (as in crossing), would any of the emasculated flowers bear kernels? To answer the question five heads were so treated, care being taken to ascertain that the anthers were immature. These heads were examined one day during the past week. It was found that nearly one-half of them bore grain (a much larger per cent. than has ever been obtained by hand crossing, when it is necessary to again open the glumes and paleae for the introduction of foreign pollen) and the grains were better developed.

Winter Fuel.
A provident farmer writes: "The winter fuel should always be stored under a shed of some kind before it is wanted. By timely attention before regular bad weather sets in, a great deal of what would otherwise rot and become rubbish if left out exposed to rain and snow can be gathered up and cut into right length for stove wood. This may include old fence rails that are no longer useful for that purpose, old boxes and barrel staves and the branches of trees that have been blown off in the woods or that have been pruned off in the orchards. A great many farmers who pile up their limbs and brush and burn them in that way have a good deal to learn about the value of apple tree wood as fuel. When seasoned, I consider it much better than the average wood we get out of the forest, and for making a hot fire would place it almost next to hickory. The trunks of old apple trees are well worth cutting up for this purpose, and the branches that are pruned off from the standing trees in the orchard will make good stove wood or kindling wood for coal fires."

And it is further ordered, that said ten o'clock of said day, to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said account, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Ann Arbor Register, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County, three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

Wheat Not Always Self Fertilizing.
May wheats cross naturally? It has generally been assumed that they do not—or, nearly so. It was observed that the editor of The Rural New Yorker, as an ample opportunity has been given for observation, we incline more and more to the opinion that the question may be answered affirmatively, though not until now have we been able to offer any positive proof. The first evidence was given by The Rural New Yorker's wheat-rye hybrids; those that were sterile, or nearly so. It was observed that the envelopes about the pistils, stamens and ovaries gaped apart, and remained so for hours, as if asking for something that nature did not supply. We were thus led to watch the flowers of pure wheats. It was seen that the petals do open not only far enough to allow of the egress of the anthers, but occasionally so

She gave a little smothered cry, her cheeks faded, her breath came quick and unsteady, she grew dizzy, the walls spun around, she heard the invalid shout for help; then darkness blotted out the world. When she awoke she found Windward at her side, the agent bending over her and the assistant bringing water and spirits from the sideboard.

"Excuse me," she gasped, her pride reviving with her life. "A sudden faint," and she tried to smile, but she saw the tablet was in Windward's hand. He was looking at it very kindly, but very soberly; and in his large, pathetic eyes—the soft, blue eyes of old Tom Bassett—she read the truth of her life. Her flushed cheeks paled again, and she grew weak and dizzy.

"Whisky!" cried the invalid, pressing a glass to her lips. "Sorry, very sorry! Awkward! Never mind! All the same! Up stairs! Best awhile! Nancy! Up stairs. Too bad! Fool! Fool!" and he turned his face to the wall with a groan, while Louise let herself be raised and assisted to a bedroom and stretched on a sofa.

"Shall I go?" asked Windward, not wishing to intrude, but anxious for her welfare.

"No, no," she said faintly. "Sit down. Tell me everything."

"In a moment," he said. "You are weak."

"Now!" she exclaimed.

"I don't know much," he said.

"Be frank!" she whispered—"be truthful."

"I will be," he answered, seating himself at her side and taking her hand; it was like ice. "But it is not so painful. Do not be alarmed."

"Tell me!" she cried impatiently.

"As I understand it, Miss Sheffield—"

"I'm not Miss Sheffield," she interrupted. "Who am I? What's my name?"

"It's Louise, any way!" he exclaimed, respectfully.

"That's good!" said the sufferer. "Call me that, then. Go on!"

"As I understand it," said Windward, "you were the only child of poor people, who had one of the French claims, and with whom my uncle Tom got acquainted on his account. It happened that both your parents died while you were an infant, and he had you adopted by his friends, the Sheffieldes. McArdle was with them, and you all grew up together, as you know. I judge you were to be treated as one of the family and never to know or feel a difference. I found out the truth only a few days ago, by accident, while reading over the papers of the agency relating to the claim, interspersed in which are occasional references to family matters."

"Is that all?" asked Louise, as Windward paused.

"Those are the main features as I recollect them," he replied. "What I know I learned, as I say, from incidental references in the correspondence."

"My uncle—" she checked herself—the colonel knows nothing of this—I mean of your knowledge of the secret?"

"Oh, no," Windward replied. "I felt that he wished it kept buried, and I found by an inquiry that you were ignorant."

"I recollect," interrupted Louise.

"So I have said nothing to any one," he said.

"That is right," said Louise. "You spoke of papers—can I see them?"

"I suppose so, certainly."

"Would you mind getting them?" she inquired. "Nancy is here if I want help, but I don't think I shall. Perhaps I'd better rest a moment. I'll send Nancy down shortly."

"Certainly," replied Windward. "Rest by all means, and do not be distressed. Your friends are the same, your life is not affected. This will bind us all the more closely."

"Thank you, Windward," she said, closing her eyes wearily. "I know you will all be kind and good. But it is not the same." Her lip trembled and she added, "I am very lonely!"

A mad thought flashed through Windward's mind. Should he fling himself at her feet and enrich his life by giving it to her?

Had he spoken then and there who knows what might have been! Perhaps, had he never spoken in vain, it might have been. But we learn caution by failure. He paused; he reflected, and he let the one golden moment pass.

"I will be down stairs," he said, gravely and kindly.

"Thank you, Windward," replied she, "I'll feel better directly." And she smiled and motioned him away.

"Nancy, my good girl," she then said to the servant, "won't you fetch me a shawl? I feel chilly."

Nancy—used to the cares and needs of a sick room—had one at hand and threw it over the shivering person of the sufferer.

"If you'll come back in a few minutes," she said, "I'll try to rest a little."

"Yes, miss," the girl replied. "I'll be in the next room, and you can knock or speak if you want me."

Saying this, Nancy arranged the shawl the better to protect the lady, and then softly left the room.

Louise was alone; alone among strangers, alone in life; even memory was false, and the past a myth. One friend, and only one, who knew her, and whom she loved, remained unchanged and unchanging; and to this friend, gracious, faithful and powerful, the special friend of the friendless and the orphan, she went with her crushing load of sorrow.

After a few moments, hearing no sound and fearful lest the visitor might be needing assistance, the watchful servant stepped softly to open the door, but stopped, hushed and awed, on the threshold; for within she saw the strange lady seeking herself the aid she needed on her knees.

CHAPTER XXVI. THE MAGNATE'S PICNIC.

"Yes, I like to see a youngster like Stevens who isn't commonplace."

When Windward was asked to the chamber he found Louise calm and natural, though a little paler than usual. He observed that her eyes showed no trace of tears. She took the fateful package of letters with a listless air, showing no desire to open it, and merely asking if she could be permitted to take it with her to examine at leisure.

"Certainly," the agent said, replied Windward. "And he wished me to express his deep regrets and to beg your pardon."

"It is best to know the truth," said Louise. "Of course it was sudden, but I am much better now. I am sorry I made a scene. Suppose we go, and we'll see the agent and thank him for his attentions. Poor man, our visit wasn't much comfort to him!"

When they entered the parlor office they found the invalid reclining on his sofa, evidently much distressed and excited. "Pardon!" he cried. "Great blunder! Feeling better? No matter! Kind friends! All the same!"

"Thank you," replied Louise, smiling. "I have, indeed, many good friends. It was sudden, and I was upset, but I feel stronger now. You have been extremely kind, and Nancy here is a good girl. I can get home very nicely, and will then look over the papers and try to find out who I am. Meantime, for the present, at least, may I ask you to say nothing of this?"

"Certainly, confidential! Too much said already!" he replied.

"I hope you won't worry," continued Louise. "It is no doubt for the best."

"Hope so! Good luck! That's right!" he said. "Going? Come again! Always welcome! Treat you better next time!"

"Good day, sir!" she replied, smiling her thanks and good wishes. "Good-by, Nancy."

"I don't realize it yet, somehow!" she said to Windward, when they had reached the street; and her native humor breaking through her sadness, she added: "I'm like the old woman in 'Mother Goose,' who woke up considerably altered and exclaimed, 'If I am not I, then who am I?'"

She adopted this playful vein all the way home, assuming to doubt the identity of the most familiar objects, such as the horse cars, the trees and the public buildings, till she reached the doorstep of the colonel's house. Here she thanked Windward warmly for his attentions, and excused herself from asking him on the ground that she wanted to make the acquaintance of her ancestors.

"She has good nerves," thought Windward, as he turned away, "but doctors say those patients suffer less who cry and 'take on' than those who shut their teeth and bear the pain in silence. She's a splendid woman, but she was weak and homesick today. And I verily believe if I had told her I'd give her my name for the one I was the means of her losing she'd have taken it—though I don't suppose any woman likes to wear second-hand clothes, even if they are not quite worn out. Confound that pretty mix! I believe I am a fool. Well, I'll go back and settle down to business. This has been an unlucky winter. I'll leave claims alone after this; I've had enough of it for a lifetime; get into trouble myself and all my friends besides. It don't pay."

With this American criticism on his labors, he changed the course of his thoughts; for now, looking on ahead toward the boarding house which he was approaching, he saw the "Old Man" coming to meet him.

"Now, he has been to the house to see Stevens again. I wish Peter would not be so mysterious, but I suppose I shall know in time."

He did not have to wait long, however, to have his curiosity satisfied as to the object of the millionaire's second visit, for on reaching the house he found everybody in a flutter of delight and excitement and eager to tell the news. The magnate, it seemed, had but just gone after making an extraordinary proposition; and Stevens was again the hero of the hour.

The "Old Man" had called at half-past 4 o'clock. He wished, he said, to see Mr. Stevens, but he had not forgotten the ladies by any means. So, while awaiting the clerk's return from office he chatted affably with Mrs. and Miss Bassett and Miss Sophia to their mutual entertainment and pleasure. "I don't see why he isn't like other people!" thought Sophia.

"You have a very pleasant group here, I'm sure," he said. "My young men are in luck."

"My young men?" Stevens a millionaire's young man; the ladies made a note of it.

"We find them very pleasant," said Sophia.

"Oh, yes," replied Millions. "Atwood's a good fellow. Quiet, don't say much, but level headed. Knows a good thing when he sees it. As for Mr. Stevens, I have seen only a little of him, but he is good timber; a fine, strong man; something to him; a man to tie to. Not like everybody else, either. And that's the trouble nowadays, Mrs. Bassett; all the young men are just alike, as if they were built by the mile, like Dutch ships, and saved off in lengths to suit."

All the ladies laughed at this disparaging remark on the modern young man, and agreed that it was very true.

"Yes, I like to see a youngster like Stevens who isn't commonplace," went on the magnate as innocently as a babbling brook; "a man with some gumption. He is a good looking chap, too, but I don't suppose the young ladies need to be told that!"

Possibly it was necessary, and possibly the "Old Man" knew what he was about. At any rate, now that he had given Stevens a certificate of beauty as well as character, the ladies remembered that he had good features and fine eyes. It is not on the other side only of the ocean ferry that royalty sets the fashion of admiration.

The object of all this extremely casual praise now came in from office looking tired and anxious, but he brightened up at once on seeing his employer among the ladies.

"Ah, Stevens!" exclaimed the magnate familiarly. "Been sitting for you. You must know, now, ladies, I've got up a little picnic."

"A picnic!" exclaimed all the ladies in unison, and Miss Sophia added, in the exuberance of her emotion, "Oh, my!"

"Yes, a picnic," said the magnate. "I shan't use my car to-morrow, and if you say so I'll send you over to Baltimore to to-morrow night to the opera, and back after it is over—that is, if Stevens will look after the party's comfort."

"Why, of course," said Stevens, blushing and confused. "But you are too good."

"Yes," repeated the chorus of ladies, "you are too good."

"Oh, no, I'm not," said the magnate with a grim smile. "I've many favors, but that isn't among 'em. No, I'd merely like to give you all some fun at Stevens' expense if he says so. It will be an easy way for me to pay a debt; that's all."

"Well, I will call it square on that basis," said Stevens; "that is, if the ladies consent."

Consent! Yes, they consented. So that was settled.

"But you are going, too?" asked Miss Sophia.

"Oh, no!" said the magnate. "I'm too driven. I have to take my fun by proxy now. Besides, it's Stevens' party, and I haven't been invited."

"We'll try to arrange that if you'll go," said Floy.

"I have no doubt you have great influence with Mr. Stevens," said the magnate gallantly, "but you must excuse me. Very well, Mr. Stevens, the car is at your service."

He then pleaded an engagement, and took his leave, Stevens accompanying him to the sidewalk to express more fully his sense of gratitude.

"Shall I ask them all?" he said.

"Whomsoever you please; it's your party," was the reply.

"I suppose I ought to ask Lieut. Quire?" he said doubtfully.

"Suppose!" exclaimed the magnate in his nashest tones, but with infinite merriment twinkling in his eyes. "Of course, man! Why, to snub him that way would spoil it all. You'd find your girl too sick to-morrow afternoon to go, and they'd be engaged before you got back. No, take him along and cut him out before his eyes and everybody else's. Tip the wink to that other girl, and get her to pin him down in a corner and talk him to death while you are making love to your girl across the car. Well, you needn't come around to-night. Have a good time at the house. I've fixed everything for to-morrow—car, tickets, supper and so on. You get her some more flowers. I saw she was wearing some today; were they yours?"

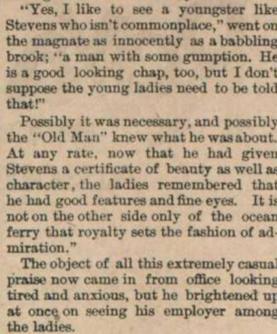

"I—I guess not!" stammered Peter.

"Didn't notice?" exclaimed the magnate. "Well, you're a pretty lover! You don't deserve to get her—so probably you will. Well, I'll meet you at the train."

"You overwhelm me with kindness," said Stevens.

"Oh, that's all right," said the millionaire. "You get the girl; that's all I ask. If you let Buttons run off with her I'll discharge you. Mind the flowers—good night!"

CHAPTER XXVII. ALADDIN.

"I wish," gasped Stevens, "that you'd give me one of those roses to remember it by."

Mr. Stevens and friends, it is needless to say, were promptly and more than promptly on hand at the station the next day, where the ladies openly and the gentlemen secretly grew very nervous as the starting time approached without bringing the magnate. But in the crisis of their fears and at the proper moment he came, all smiles; and then the fun began.

The first triumph was at the train gate, whither, after a moment's chat in the waiting room, the magnate led them; people giving way as they passed and the station employes nudging one another and beckoning—as the guests noticed out of the corners of their eyes. Ah, but it was rather pleasant for a change to live "in the fierce light that beats against a throne!" At the gate the stern faced guardian, so inexorable to common man, uncapped and stood aside to give the king and his guests ample passage.

"Oh, how superior I feel already!" whispered Sophia to Floy.

Just then the three minute gong sounded.

"Oh, hurry!" exclaimed Floy—at which everybody laughed. "As if they would leave us!" observed Sophia with mock haughtiness.

The magnate certainly did not seem hurried or nervous, but quite at his ease walked on with Mrs. Bassett, slightly in advance of the young people, explaining to her certain features of the excursion which, as chaperone, she might wish to know.

"You need not worry, however, madam," he said. "Stevens understands the affair, and if anything unforeseen happens the train people will be at your call. I think you'll find everything smooth. That Stevens is a fine young fellow. He will look out properly for your comfort. It isn't every one I'd let manage a picnic of this sort."

And now the car steps were reached, with the conductor respectfully in waiting, flanked by servants, vigilant and agile in their attentions. Up the steps the ladies hurried, and brushed past the civil porter, impatient to catch a first glimpse of the interior of a palace. And oh, how beautiful, how elegant, how perfect it was!

"Yes, pretty good," replied the king, who had a new and better car making in the shops. "Find seats, ladies? Mrs. Bassett, I think you will be comfortable here. Ah, ladies, all on one side—the sunny side evidently! Here, Mr. Quire, you take Miss Sophia over yonder—and improve your chances! Miss Bassett, here's a cosy corner, and I presume Mr. Stevens won't mind riding backward, under the circumstances. Now, Jim, look out for my friends. If riding makes you hungry, ladies, just let it be known to Jim—he keeps a cracker in the locker."

Just then the starting gong struck, but the train didn't start.

"Isn't this grand!" murmured Miss Sophia to the lieutenant; "we're missing everybody waiting! Aren't we some, though! I hope he'll stay and talk an hour."

But the good king reverses the law. So when he heard the signal the magnate stopped his gossip and prepared to leave them. "Well, you're off," he said.

"I've no doubt you'll enjoy yourselves, Stevens—a moment. Good day, all," and with these parting words he disappeared, followed by Stevens, who expected to receive a string of final instructions.

Just outside the door on the car platform, well removed from the guests on the one hand and the cluster of train hands at the car steps on the other, the magnate stopped; and, once more, he winked.

"She looks fine!" he whispered. "She's wearing flowers—are they yours?"

"I believe so, sir," said the blushing lover.

"That's right!" replied the magnate. "Oh, you'll get her. Buttons is nowhere."

Then turning to the conductor, who stood obediently at the foot of the steps, he exclaimed, in a tone of command, "All right; go ahead!"

The conductor swung his arm, the watchful fireman, in the far away cab, drew in his head, the engine bell rang a warning, the engineer pulled the throttle, and with a puff and groan the train started.

"Oh, we're off!" cried Floy, and jumping up she ran to the rear platform, where, standing on tip-toe behind Stevens, she waved a dainty farewell over his shoulder to the smiling magnate, who lifted his hat in return.

"By—," he muttered between his teeth, "that's a pretty picture! And yet I suppose that by envies me."

He turned away with a frown, and, unmindful of the civilities of the railroad employes in his path to the street, walked rapidly thither, where he, the lord of trade, whose palace was whirling past the great white dome that some discontented people said he owned, boarded a crowded street car, and standing in the aisle hung on by a strap with one hand while he fumbled in his pockets with the other to find a nickel.

Yes, they were off; and never had the regal vehicle held more cubic feet of real happiness than that night. They were much too happy to long conform to that awful grouping which the magnate had arranged, for every one was eager to try each luxurious seat and exhaust the scope of view in every window. Then they made the tour of the car under explanatory Jim, whose narrative and descriptive powers were of a high order. Then for a time they sank on the easy chairs or lounges and enjoyed the simple sense of motion—smooth, swift and silent. But this pleasure was far too tedious to suit the prancing blood of youth; besides, common folks could sit and talk and read on the cars.

"Let's play bezique!" cried Sophia; but Jim confessed with a humbled air that for once his resources failed him; he had not enough cards.

"Well, 'Elements' then!" cried Floy, a proposition that was ratified with a shout; whereupon the friends pulled their chairs into a circle, and the knotted handkerchief was tossed from one lap to another till, tired and coughing with laughter over this nonsense, they exchanged it for hunt the slipper, and finally, in merry madness, for a very tipsy turkey innings of blindman's bluff. Jim meanwhile was busy at the sideboard spreading a tempting lunch which they needed no pressing to attack.

But just then they noticed the speed of the train was slackened and the rattle of switches and the dancing lights told them that they were nearing Baltimore.

"Hurry up, good people!" cried Sophia. "We mustn't lose this lunch!"

"Oh, take your time, ladies," said Jim, blandly. "You can stay in the car as long as you like. We are switched off here on to a siding."

"Oh, to be sure," replied Sophia, laughing. "I forgot we were not common folk."

And now the conductor entered, not to collect tickets—perish such a plebeian thought—but to pay his respects to the ladies and explain to Stevens the return schedule. In another moment the train came to a standstill in the station, when the party found occupation in looking out and down on the anxious, hurrying people, till a pert little bantam locomotive came fuming up behind and drew the car away from the train and to and
