ANN ARBOR, MICHIGAN, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1891.

WHOLE NO. 878

TWENTY YEARS PRESIDENT.

DR. ANGELL MAKES HIS TWENTIETH REPORT.

An Important Regents' Meeting—Contract Let for Law and Engineering Buildings—Other Important Business—Campus Notes.

The regent's meeting yesterday was a very important one in many respects. President Angell submitted his twentieth annual report, giving a summary of the changes in the University, since 1871, when he first came to Ann Arbor. In the beginning he gives a list of the appointments on the faculty made during the past year, alludes feelingly to the death of Dr. Winchell and Prof. Wells, remarks upon the large graduating classes and large attendance, speaks of the Woman's League, the crowded buildings and measures for relieving the overcrowded buildings, the purchase of the athletic grounds, the gymnasium project, and the proper place of athletics in the course, the enlargement of courses in the literary department, the policy of encouraging diploma high schools, the value of the graduate department, the changes in the medical, law and other departments, the establishment of the University Record, the new general catalogue, the completion of the McMillan and Newberry Halls, the legislative appropriations, and the condition of the library.

The most interesting portion of the president's report relates to the contrast between the University in 1871 and the University in 1891. Says Dr. Angell after a few introductory remarks: "One who should not have visited the University since 1871 would on coming into our campus be struck at first with the increase in the number of our buildings. Those then here were the two wings of the present University Hall, originally erected for dormitories and recitation rooms, the law building, the chemical laboratory, one story high, forming about one-fifth or one-sixth of the present edifice, the medical college and four dwelling-houses, of which one was used as a hospital, one was occupied by the president and the other two were rented to professors. The astronomical observatory and the dwelling attached to it had also been built on the site they now occupy, half a mile away from the campus.

"Since then the following buildings have been erected on the campus: The large central building connecting the two wings, the scientific museum, the library with the art gallery, the physical and hygienic laboratory, the engineering laboratory or workshop, the anatomical laboratory, the two hospital wards, the two boiler houses. The chemical laboratory has been several times enlarged and a large wing has been added to one of the houses, which thus enlarged has furnished a home for the dental college. In the observatory grounds a small observatory for the instruction of students has been built, and on a site purchased for the purpose two new hospitals have just been constructed.

"In 1871 there were in all the faculties thirty-six persons. In 1891 there were ninety-two resident professors, assistant professors, lecturers and instructors, eleven non-resident lecturers and twenty-seven assistants, many of whom give some instruction, making a total number of one hundred and thirty. The increase has been chiefly in the additions to the literary faculty. The literary faculty, which consisted of twenty-three persons in 1871, now numbers seventy. Only the three departments, of arts, medicine, and of law, existed in 1871.

"Twenty years ago the students numbered 1,110, last year 2,420. The proportionate and the absolute gain has been much larger in the literary department than in any other, as we are glad that it should have been. The law department has, however, in spite of the establishment of numerous law schools in the West, nearly doubled its number.

"Twenty years ago the students were drawn from twenty-six states and territories, but none from foreign lands. Last year they represented forty-four states and territories of our Union and twelve foreign states and provinces. In 1871 Michigan students formed only forty-six per cent of the whole number, while last year they formed forty-eight per cent.

"The law library has grown from 3,000 volumes to over 10,000; the general library from 17,000 to 60,000, containing the McMillan and Shakespeare library of 3,000 volumes and other special collections. The collections in the scientific museum have quadrupled in extent."

The president details the changes of courses in the different departments, the extension of the requirements for admission, the addition of the degree of Bachelor of Letters. He says further of the literary department: "The scope and variety of instruction have been greatly enlarged. In 1871 there were fifty-seven courses of instruction given. In the last calendar no less than 378 courses were announced."

The establishment of different laboratories, the seminary system of instruction, the elective system and the voluntary attendance at chapel was as touched upon at some length. Students are on an average one year younger upon entrance than they were twenty years ago. The president thinks that the morals and order of the University are also much better than they were in 1871.

The diploma system has grown so large that now eighty-two high schools are on the approved list.

The president touches on the wisdom with which the professors have made changes in policy and at some length speaks of the changes in the personnel of the faculty. He rejoices at the growth of the several Western Universities and attributes this largely to the influence of the U. of M.

The most important business transacted by the regents was the letting of the contracts for the additions to the law and dental buildings; the former for $26,591, the latter for $15,428. It was decided to call for bids for erecting the new gymnasium, according to plans already prepared. The sum of $400 was appropriated for finishing the athletic grounds. Professor A. C. McLaughlin was made full professor of American history at $2,200, with the understanding that he is to deliver lectures on constitutional law in the law department. Other important business was transacted, which cannot be mentioned on account of lack of space.

AROUND THE CAMPUS.

Dr. Will Dunn, medic, '91, is seriously ill.

Leroy Southmayd has been elected president of the senior medical class.

H. M. Bridgman, from Natal, Africa, has registered in the dental department.

The first number of the new weekly, the "Yellow and Blue," will appear next Saturday.

President Angell has announced that class rushes are hereafter prohibited. The students are asked not to congregate in large numbers.

The class of '95 on Saturday appointed a committee, consisting of Messrs. Neal, Manley, Hyatt, Bourland and Abbott, to look after foot-ball interests.

There were 445 women in the University last year, as against 369 the year before. In the literary department were 356, medical 60, law 2, pharmacy 4, homoeopathic college 17 and dental 6.

The University of Michigan foot ball eleven was defeated by Albion last Saturday. The score stood 10 to 4. This had record was partially stoned for Tuesday, when the Olivet team met defeat at the hands of the University. Gymnasium practice would go a long way toward improving the local eleven.

The senior laws succeeded in electing a president last Saturday. There were four candidates—J. H. Adams, of Iowa; A. C. MacKenzie, of Ohio; F. A. Sheldon, of Michigan; and J. E. Duffy, of this city. After five ballots MacKenzie was elected, the vote standing: MacKenzie, 134; Duffy, 48; Adams, 33; Sheldon, 3.

Rev. Benjamin Day.

The death of Rev. Benjamin Day, which occurred on Saturday night last, was a severe shock to many Ann Arbor people who had loved and respected him for many years.

Mr. Day was eighty-four years of age. His life was pre-eminently a useful one. He was born and reared in Essex county, N. Y., and gained a good education. He was ordained a Methodist minister in 1832 and was first assigned to the parish in Bloomfield, N. J. After filling several other pulpits with ability and faithfulness, he decided in 1869 to give up active work and removed to this city, where he has continued to reside. His wife, formerly Miss Mary Taylor, and three brothers survive his death.

Funeral services were held yesterday afternoon in the Methodist church. Rev. C. M. Coburn officiated, with the assistance of Rev. Mr. Pope, a former pastor of the Ann Arbor church. Mr. Pope spoke feelingly of his former parishioner. The honorary pall-bearers were J. A. Austin Scott, Dr. W. F. Breaker, Rev. E. Steele, Prof. R. Hudson, Prof. E. I. Walter, Prof. H. S. Carhart; the active bearers, Messrs. W. J. Booth, C. H. Worden, L. D. Wines, T. C. Trueblood, A. H. Roys and E. B. Hall. A large procession followed the remains to the cemetery.

Mr. Day was a man of the highest character. He was called by many the "father" of the Ann Arbor church. Upon his judgment minister and laymen both relied, and his influence was felt strongly outside the church. Benjamin Day will not soon be forgotten.

VISITING DRUGGISTS.

MEETING OF THE STATE PHARMACEUTICAL ASSOCIATION.

The Mayor's Address of Welcome and Other Speeches—Routine Business—The Reception and other Meetings.

During the past few days, a number of gentlemen might be seen on the streets whose badges and gentlemanly demeanor indicated that they were apothecaries. They came to attend the ninth annual meeting of the Michigan State Pharmaceutical Association, which has been holding sessions in the chemical laboratory.

They assembled together Tuesday afternoon for the preliminary addresses. Rev. J. W. Bradshaw offered prayer and Mayor W. G. Doty delivered a speech of welcome. The latter said that he was reminded of the ancient little shop which historians speak of and of the labors of Claudius Gallenus, one of the great apothecaries of ancient Rome. The broad, catholic spirit which pervade the profession at the present time owed its origin, he thought, largely to the efforts of Gallenus. It was with great pleasure that he welcomed the visitors to Ann Arbor. Pharmacists were free, liberal, enterprising, industrious and studious—in short, possessed just such qualities as in Ann Arbor pleased the men and captivated the hearts of the ladies. It was appropriate that they should meet in this classic city, within the walls of one of the largest and finest chemical laboratories of the world.

The president of the association, D. E. Prall, of Saginaw, responded in behalf of the association. He hoped that the meeting would prove just as beneficial as it had been held in a larger city.

The reports of the president and secretary for the past year were then submitted. The latter showed that there were in force, July 7, 1891, certificates for 2,957 pharmacists and 269 assistants.

Drs. Breakey and Prescott, of this city, extended greetings on behalf of the state medical society. President Angell, after a little, welcomed the visitors on behalf of the University. Considerable routine business was transacted. Dr. V. C. Vaughn, in the evening, addressed the association on "The Relations between Pharmacy and Medicine."

On Wednesday routine business was transacted. In the morning, however, the program was varied by the illustrated lecture of Professor J. J. Abel, in which he showed the effects of certain remedies on rabbits.

In the evening a brilliant reception was tendered the visitors in the chemical laboratory.

Killed by the Cars.

Stephen Jacobs was instantly killed, early yesterday afternoon, by a north bound train on the Toledo road. He was walking from his home toward Main-st, when the cars approached. Whistles were blown, but without attracting Mr. Jacobs' attention. He was thrown down and the wheels passed over his right leg, severing it above the ankle. His arm was also broken and his face slightly bruised. The remains were at once taken to Martin's undertaking rooms, and Coroner Clark empanelled a jury. The inquest will be held at two o'clock today.

Mr. Jacobs has been a familiar figure on Ann Arbor streets. He has been very popular not only with the colored people but with the white people. He was over eighty years old. He served during a portion of the war and was a prominent member of the Welch Post G. A. R.

The Catholic Fair.

The rink has been transformed into a veritable palace by the members of St. Thomas parish, who are striving by means of a fair, to raise money for the completion of the new hall. Many beautiful and valuable articles have been donated by members and friends of the church, a list of which, if published, would fill an ordinary newspaper column. A number of outsiders as well as merchants have contributed liberally.

The committee on arrangements, to whom the success of the fair is largely due, consists of David Rinsey, Martin M. Seabolt, Edward Duffy, Ambrose Kearney and Bruno St. James. They have been ably seconded in their efforts by the rector of the parish, Rev. E. D. Kelly.

The ladies, too, have been very active. Miss Sarah Smith for charge of the choir booth, Miss Gertie Clancy of the green booth, Mrs. Ambrose Kearney of the U. of M. booth, Mrs. Martin M. Seabolt winter scene booth, Mrs. David Ross refreshment tables, Miss Katie Irwin flower booth, Miss Ella Meuth lemonade booth, and Miss Kate Foley fish pond.

As the visitor enters the door, his attention is attracted by a postoffice, where for five cents you can receive the nicest kind of a billet doux. In the opposite corner is the fish pond filled with prizes. The winter scene booth is ornamented with beautiful white drapery, with every thing else to match. Next to this stands the U. of M. booth, which is trimmed with the college colors and thatched with bright yellow straw. A picture of President Angell adorns the outside walls. The green booth, as suggested by its name, is adorned with green draperies and back ground. The flower booth is also worthy of mention.

Free articles are sold outright, but chances are given at 5, 10, 15, 25 cents or more. At the rate these are being disposed of, the receipts of the fair cannot but be large.

Musical entertainments are a prominent feature of the fair. Otto's band played Tuesday evening. Last evening instrumental music was furnished by Miss Minnie Davis and vocal music by E. St. James. Minnis' orchestra will play tonight and other attractions are booked for the remaining days of the fair, which will continue till Saturday, October 31.

Bishop Foley and several priests have attended the fair, besides many other persons from this part of the country.

Inspected the Commandery.

E. C. Smith, of Pontiac, grand commander Knights Templar, inspected the Ann Arbor commandery Monday. He was received at the depot by a committee consisting of J. R. Miner, W. G. Doty, C. E. Hiscock, B. F. Watts and J. W. Bennett, who escorted him to the asylum. Lunch was served at the residence of W. G. Doty, B. F. Watts and J. R. Miner.

In the evening the order of the Temple was conferred upon M. M. Reed, of Ypsilanti, after which came the banquet. Responses to toasts were made by Grand Commander Smith, Past Grand Commander Doty, Rev. T. W. MacLean, of Bay City, Samuel Post, Ypsilanti, and several others. Mr. Smith expressed himself as highly pleased with the Ann Arbor commandery.

Adjourned Within an Hour.

Peace and harmony reigned at the council meeting Monday night. The sewerage question was not discussed, and almost all the resolutions offered were unanimously adopted.

The street commissioner reported that he had looked after the construction of sidewalks where residents had refused to build them. The cost of these improvements, with ten per cent. added, were assessed upon the delinquent property-owners.

Wm. R. White, manufacturer of farm gates, asked permission to exhibit his wares on the court house square, offering to pay $50 for four months and promising so to arrange the platform as not to injure the lawn. Considerable discussion took place, in the course of which Mr. White himself took the floor. He said that he had been a school teacher for fourteen years and was sure that the Ann Arbor students would support the council if they gave him the privilege asked. Inasmuch as students have no votes and the citizens are averse to renting the court house lawn to exhibitors, the council decided, by a vote of 6 to 4, not to grant the request.

Permission was given the University authorities to grade Catherine-st from Observatory to Thirteenth-sts, provided they first secure written permission from adjoining property-owners.

A resolution was offered by Alderman Hall, providing for the opening of South Fourth-ave from Madison to Hill-sts and providing for the assessment of benefits upon the property-owners in the vicinity. The matter was laid on the table for one week.

The mayor was authorized to detail one of the policemen as truant officer, the board of education to provide compensation, and Charles J. Conrad and William C. Conrad were detailed as special policemen for the opera house, without expense to the city.

Gabe Wuerthner, an insane man from Dayton, Ohio, attempted on Monday to kill Mrs. Christian Schlenker with a pitchfork. He was taken into custody by the marshal and lodged in jail. His friends have been notified.

DEMOCRATS, good and bad, seem able to perform the most difficult feats of mental gymnastics, but how an honest man can strengthen by his vote and influence the corrupt alliance between wealth, as represented by Roswell P. Flower, and crime, as represented by Tammany, it is hard to see.

Conflicting Theories. Once upon a midnight dreary a detective formed a theory that a man was being murdered in the street a block below.

By the sound his ear detected that the blows must be directed from a man of blond complexion with a blue and gentle eye.

There he met with Mrs. Leary, who herself had formed a theory. For she saw the light between O'Dooley's dog and Grady's goat.

The University in 1859.

A printing office is a receptacle for state secrets. It is also a storehouse of historical material. In this office, the other day, from a dusty heap of the archives of the past, there came to the surface a small green-tinted pamphlet, purporting to be "A Catalogue of the Officers and Students for 1859—State University of Michigan."

There were 430 students in the University, two-thirds of whom were in the department of "Science, Literature and the Arts." The lamented Elisha Jones was then a senior in the literary department as were also Robert E. Frazer and T. A. McGraw, both of Detroit.

If a student was conditioned, he suffered the disgrace of having it so stated in the catalogue. The larger part of the freshman class appears to have been in this unfortunate plight.

The catalogue explains that "the system of Public Instruction adopted by the State of Michigan and its Primary and Normal schools, and in the general organization of the University, conforms to the Prussian system in those liberal and benign points which have made this system to be regarded as the most perfect in the world."

The public is always responsive to suggestions about the food it eats. Great interest has been taken in the investigations made by the United States and Canadian governments and by the different boards of health to show the purity or impurity of milk, baking powders, pices, and other articles of daily use in the culinary department of our households.

Just now the subject of baking powder is claiming public attention. We all desire pure and wholesome bread and this cannot be had with the use of impure or poisonous baking powder.

There can be no longer any question that all the cheaper, lower grades of baking powders contain either alum, lime, or phosphoric acid.

The official analyses by the United States and Canadian governments have therefore been studied with interest and have pretty clearly established the facts upon this subject.

The United States government report gives the names of eighteen well known powders, some of them advertised as pure cream of tartar baking powders, that contain alum.

The report shows that the Royal baking powder was found the highest in leavening strength, evolving 180.8 cubic inches of gas per ounce of powder.

There were eight other brands of cream of tartar powders tested their average strength being reported to be 111.5 cubic inches of gas per ounce of powder.

The Canadian government investigations were of a still larger number of powders. The Royal baking powder was here also shown the purest and highest in strength, containing 129.32 cubic inches of leavening gas per ounce of powder.

Nine other cream of tartar powders were tested, and their average strength was 89 cubic inches of gas per ounce of powder.

These figures are very instructive to the practical housekeeper. They indicate that the Royal baking powder goes more than 33 per cent further in use than the others, or is one-third more economical. Still more important than this, however, they proved this popular article has been brought to the highest degree of purity—for to its superlative purity this superiority in strength is due—and consequently that by its use we may be insured the purest and most wholesome food.

The powders of lower strength are found to leave large amounts of inert matters in the food. This fact is emphasized by the report of the Ohio State Food Commissioner, who, while finding the Royal practically pure, found no other powder to contain less than 10 per cent. of inert or foreign matters.

The public interest in this question has likewise caused to be made investigations by our local authorities. Prof. W. E. Haines, of Rush Medical College, consulting chemist of the Chicago Board of Health, has found results similar to those reported by the national and Canadian authorities. Dr. Haines says:

RUSH MEDICAL COLLEGE, CHICAGO, ILL. I have recently obtained samples of the chief baking powders in the market, and have subjected them to careful chemical examination to determine their purity, wholesomeness and leavening power.

As the result of my tests I find the Royal baking powder superior to all the others in every respect. It is entirely free from all adulterations and whole some in purity, and in baking it gives off a greater volume of leavening gas than any other powder. It is, therefore, not only the purest, but also the strongest powder with which I am acquainted.

WALTER S. HAINES, M. D. Consulting Chemist, Chicago Board of Health.

The statistics show that there is used in the manufacture of the Royal baking powder more than half of all the cream of tartar consumed in the United States thus indicated for the Royal baking powder—greater than that of all other baking powders combined—is perhaps even a higher evidence than that already quoted of the superiority of this article, and of its indispensableness to modern cookery.

OUR YPSILANTI RAMBLER.

Tells What He Has Seen and Heard in that Burg During the Past Seven Days and Nights.

Last Saturday was "yellow and white" day among the Normalists. The athletics appeared with immense neck-ties made of the two colors, yellow and white, and numberless young studentesses (whew! what a word,) recognized the importance of the occasion by donning tiny rosettes made of the same combination of colors. The day was too cold and windy for right smart work but on the whole the Normal field day was a success. We notice Lon Neat in the city again. He has been traveling with a theatrical company for the past year. There was some excitement on the street Saturday owing to a wordy encounter between two of our prominent citizens. One, with his shouting Methodist proclivities, roused the blue Presbyterian blood of the other, and Webster's unabridged hardly furnished words enough to convey their respective "feelinks" toward each other. No bones broken, however and all is serene now. A very large congregation assembled at the Presbyterian church last Sunday to hear Rev. Mr. Morey's dancing sermon. As the reverend gentleman knew nothing about the pastime from experience, he quoted largely from the ideas of prominent Episcopal, Methodist and Catholic bishops on the subject. He seems to think, had not the round dance been introduced, there would probably have been no fault found with the square dances generally. However, as neither the round, square nor any other shaped dance is particularly conducive to the highest Christian standard, he thought it was decidedly better not to indulge in the popular amusement at all.

At the Opera House.

Tomorrow evening the noted young soubrette, Little Goldie, will occupy the stage of the Grand Opera House, appearing as the central figure in the Rocky Mountain Waif. The latter is a sensational drama with an unusual number of striking scenes and incidents and has been one of the genuine successes of its class. The play is a picture of life in the far West, and introduces a great many scenes that are familiar to those who have visited that part of the country, scenes of the Balancing rock, Tower of Babel, Cathedral spire, the Garden of the Gods, Deer Head rock, Pike's Peak and others. The scenery necessary for the proper production of the play is carried by the company, the latter being a superior organization. The piece was especially designed for the young actress and her success in it has been emphatic. A genuine Rocky mountain burro and a handsome pony are among the novel features of the performance. The Rocky Mountain Waif will run Friday evening of this week.—Ohio State Journal, Columbus, O.

Standing room was at a premium at the Park Theatre last week, Little Goldie closing one of the biggest weeks on record in the history of this house. Every performance was the means of packing people from pit to dome. Star and play a howling success. Scenic effects grandest ever seen here.—Columbus Journal, Aug. 20. At the Opera House Friday evening.

Little Goldie in "The Rocky Mountain Waif" will be surrounded by one of the most complete companies that will appear at the Opera House this season.—Dayton Journal.

SCROFULA

Is that impurity of the blood which produces unsightly lumps or swellings in the neck; which causes running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which develops ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or "humors;" which, fastening upon the lungs, causes consumption and death. It is the most ancient of all diseases, and very few persons are entirely free from it.

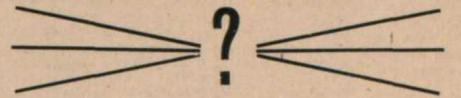

How Can It Be CURED

By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the remarkable cures it has accomplished, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. If you suffer from scrofula, try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Every spring my wife and children have been troubled with scrofula, my little boy, three years old, being a terrible sufferer. Last spring he was one mass of sores from head to feet. We all took Hood's Sarsaparilla, and all have been cured of the scrofula. My little boy is entirely free from sores, and all four of my children look bright and healthy."

The Secret of Fine Pastry.

Is wholly in using Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder.

The only pure Cream Tarter Powder sold on the market. Other brands contain either ammonia, alum or some other adulterant. Ammonia or alum powders dry out, make the dough too porous, leaving a bitter taste, etc.

No agency has assisted so much toward perfection in cookery as Price's Cream Baking Powder. Its ingredients are simple and so blended as to exist in exact chemical proportions, so after use there is never any excess of either left in the food. Hence there can be no impurities whatever left in the finished food. No bitter taste, no taint of ammonia, but food raised with Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder partakes of the natural sweet flavor of the flour and keeps moist and fresh for days. This powder possesses qualities peculiar to it alone. No other makes such delicious pastry. No other contains the white of eggs.

Purify YOUR Blood WITH Hibbard's Herb Extract.
A WONDERFUL CURE.

This is a true likeness of me wearing artificial nose and upper lip after Scrofula had consumed my nose and upper lip, cured by HIBBARD'S HERB EXTRACT. This is not a patent medicine, but a simple preparation of roots and herbs that cured me over 47 years ago, since when I have cured thousands with its use. It requires a powerful vegetable remedy to effect such a cure as my own, and my argument has always been that the remedy that cured me would cure all forms of Scrofula or other Blood and Skin Diseases. Its success has been phenomenal. Send for list of testimonials and printed history of my case, or call on me any day, or write and describe your case. Advice free.

MISS BRETHERTON
By MRS. HUMPHREY WARD,

"Miss Bretherton listened to and laughed at it all, finding her way through the crowd of unfamiliar names and allusions with a woman's cleverness, looking around at all the time in a cloak of some brown velvet stuff, and a large hat also of brown velvet. She has a beautiful hand, fine and delicate, not specially small, but full of character; it was pleasant to watch it playing with her orange, or smoothing back every now and then the rebellious locks which will stray, do what she will, beyond the boundaries assigned to them. Presently Wallace was all advised enough to ask her which picture she had liked the best at the Private View; she replied by picking out a ball room scene at Forth's and an unutterable marvellous thing of Halford's—a troubadour in a pink dressing gown, gracefully intertwined with violet scarves, singing to a party of rosy young women in a light which never was on sea or land." You could count all the figures in the first," she said, "it was so lifelike; so real; and then Halford was romantic, the picture was pretty, and she liked it. I looked at Forth's with some amusement; it was gratifying, remembering the romances with which Wallace and I had been crushed on the night of the 'White Lady' to see him win the admiration of Miss Bretherton's liking of the worst art in England! It is the critical spirit worth something, or is it superfluous in the matters of painting? and only indispensable in matters of painting? I think he evidently felt himself in so no little difficulty.

"Oh, you couldn't," he said, with a groan, "you couldn't like that ball room—and that troubadour, heaven forgive us! Well, there must be something in it—there must be something in it, if it really gives you pleasure—'I dare say there is; we're so confoundedly up in the way we look at things. If either of them had a particle of drawing or a scrap of taste, if both of them weren't so bare as a broomstick of the least vestige of gift, or any suspicion of knowledge, there might be a good deal to say for them! Only, my dear Miss Bretherton, you see it's really not a matter of opinion; I assure you it isn't. I could prove to you as plain as two and two make four, that Forth's men and women are as flat as my hand—there isn't a back among them! And then the taste, and the color, and the clatter of the idiosyncrasy! No, I don't think I can stand it. I am all for people getting enjoyment where they can, with a defiant look at me, and snapping their fingers at the critics. But one must draw the line somewhere. There's some art that's out of court from the beginning."

"Don't listen to him, Miss Bretherton," I cried. "If I were you I wouldn't let him spoil your pleasure. The great thing is to feel; defend your feeling against him! It's worth more than this criticism."

"Forbes' eyes looked laughing daggers at me from under his shaggy white brows. Mrs. Stuart and Wallace kept their countenances to perfection; but I had him, there's no denying it."

"Oh, I know nothing about it," said Isabel Bretherton, divinely unconscious of the little skirmish going on around her. "You must teach me, Mr. Forbes. I only know what touches me, what I like—that's all I know in my opinion."

"It's all very well, as you know," said Wallace, airily. "We begin with 'I like' and 'I don't like,' then we begin to be proud and make distinctions and find reasons; but the thing beats us, and we come back in the end to 'I like' and 'I don't like.'"

"The lunch over, we strolled out along the common, through heather which as yet was a mere brown expanse of flowerless undergrowth and copses which overhead were a canopy of golden oak leaf and carpeted underneath with primroses and the young upturning bracken. Presently through a little wood we came upon a pond lying wide and blue before us under the breezy May sky, its shores fringed with scented fir wood and the whole air alive with birds. We sat down under a pile of logs such out and fragrant and talked away vigorously. It was a little difficult often to keep the conversation on lines which did not exclude Miss Bretherton. Forbes, the Stuarts, Wallace and I are accustomed to be together, and one never realizes what a Freemasonry the intercourse even of a capital is until one tries to introduce an outsider into it. We talked of the theatre, of course; the ways of different actors, the fortunes of managers. Isabel Bretherton naturally has as yet seen very little; her comments were mainly personal and all of a friendly, enthusiastic kind, for the profession has been very cordial to her. A month or five weeks more and her engagement at the Calliope will be over. There are other theatres open to her, of course, and all the managers are at her feet; but she has set her heart upon going abroad for some time, and has, I imagine, made so much money this season that the family cannot in decency object to her having her own way. 'I am going to get to Italy,' she said to me in her emphatic, impetuous way. 'Sir Walter Rutherford has talked to me so much about it that I am beginning to dream of it. I long to have done with London and be off! This English sun seems to me so chilly,' and she drew her winter cloak about her with a little shiver, although the day was really an English summer day, and Mrs. Stuart was in cotton. 'I came from such warmth, and I loved it. I have been making acquaintance with all sorts of horrors since I came to London—face ache and rheumatism and colds—I scarcely knew there were such things in the world. And I never knew what it was to be tired before. Sometimes I can hardly drag through my work. I hate it so; it makes me cross like a naughty child!'

"Do you know, I said, flinging myself down beside her on the grass and looking up at her, 'that it's altogether wrong? Nature never meant you to feel tired; it's monstrous; it's against the natural order of things!'

"'It's London,' she said with her little sigh and the drooping lid that is so prettily pathetic. 'I have the roar in my ears all day, and it seems to be humming through my sleep at night. And then the crowd, and the hurry people are in, and the quickness and sharpness of things! But I have only a few weeks more,' she added, brightening, 'and then by October I shall be more used to Europe—the climate and the life.'

"I am much impressed, and so is Mrs. Stuart, by the struggle her nervous strength is making against London. All my nursing of you, Marie, and of your mother has taught me to notice these things in women, and I find myself taking often a very physical and medical view of Miss Bretherton. You see, it is a case of a northern temperament and constitution relaxed by tropical conditions, and then exposed once more in an exceptional degree to the strain and stress of northern life. I rage when I think of such a piece of physical excellence marred and dimmed by our harsh English struggle.

And all for what? For a commonplace, make believe art, vulgarizing in the long run both to the artist and the public. There is a sense of tragic waste about it. Suppose London destroys her best—there are some signs of it—what a futile, ironical pathos there would be in it. I long to step in, to 'have at' somebody, to stop it."

"A little incident later on threw a curious light upon her. We had moved on to the other side of the pond and were banking in the fir wood. The afternoon sun was slanting through the branches on to the bosom of the pond; a splendid Scotch fir just beside us tossed out its red limbed branches over a great bed of green reeds, starred here and there with yellow irises. The woman from the keeper's cottage near had brought us out some tea, and most of us had fallen into a sybaritic frame of mind in which talk seemed to be a burden on the silence and careful peace of the scene. Suddenly Wallace and Forbes fell upon the question of Balzac, of whom Wallace has been making a study lately, and we soon landed in a discussion of Balzac's method of character drawing. As Eugene de Bastignac, Le Pere Goriot and old Grandet real beings or mere incarnations of qualities, mathematical deductions from a given unit? At last I was drawn in, and the Stuart's; Stuart has trained his wife in Balzac, and she has a dry, original way of judging a novel, which is stimulating and keeps the ball rolling. It was the first time that the talk had not centered in one way or another around Miss Bretherton, who, of course, was the first consideration throughout the day in all our minds. We grew vehement and got full till at last a little movement of hers diverted the general current. She had taken off her hat and was leaning back against the oak under which she sat, watching with parted lips and a gaze of the rarest delight and wonder the movements of a nut hatch overhead, a creature of the woodpecker kind, with delicate purple gray plumage, who was tapping the branch above her for insects with his large disproportionate bill, and then skimming along to a sand bank a little distance off, where he disappeared with the prey into his nest."

"Ha!" said Wallace, who is a bird lover, 'a true to Balzac, and let us watch those nut hatches! Miss Bretherton's quite right to prefer them to French novels!'

"French novels!" she said, withdrawing her eyes from the branch above her and frowning a little at Wallace as she spoke. "Please don't expect me to talk about them. I know nothing about them—I have never wished to."

"Her voice had a tone almost of hauteur in it. I have noticed it before. It is the tone of the famous actress accustomed to believe in herself and her own opinion. I connected it, too, with all one bears of her determination to look upon herself as charged with a mission for the reform of stage morals. French novels and French actresses! Apparently she regards them all as so many unknown horrors standing in the way of the purification of dramatic art by a beautiful young person with a high standard of duty. It is very odd! Evidently she is the Scotch Presbyterian's daughter still, for all her profession and her success and her easy ways with the Sabbath! Her remark produced a good deal of ungenerous irritation in me. If she were a first rate artist to begin with, I was inclined to reflect, this moral enthusiasm would touch and charm one a good deal more; as it is, considering her position, it is rather putting the cart before the horse. But, of course, one can understand that it is just these traits in her that help her to make the impression she does on London society and the orthodox public in general."

"Wallace and I went off after the nut hatches, enjoying a private laugh by the way over Mrs. Stuart's little look of amazement and discomfort as Miss Bretherton delivered herself. When we came back we found Forbes sketching her—she sitting rather flushed and silent under the tree, and he drawing away and working himself at every stroke into a greater and greater enthusiasm. And certainly she was as beautiful as a dream, sitting against that tree, with the brown heather about her and the young oak leaves over head. But I returned in an antagonistic frame of mind, a little out of patience with her and her beauty, and wondering why nature always blunders so where!"

"However, on the way home she had another and a pleasanter surprise for me. A carriage was waiting for us on the main road and we strolled towards it through the gorse and the trees and the rich level evening lights. I dropped behind for some primroses still lingering in bloom beside a little brook; she strolled, too, and we were together, out of ear shot of the rest."

"Mr. Kendal," she said, looking straight at me, as I handed the flowers to her, 'you may have misunderstood something; just now, I don't want to pretend to what I haven't got. I don't know French, and I can't read French novels if I wished to ever so much.'

"What was I to say! She stood looking at me seriously, a little proudly, having eased her conscience, as it seemed to me, at some cost to herself. I felt at first inclined to turn the thing off with a jest, but suddenly I thought to myself that I too could speak my mind."

"Well," I said, deliberately, walking on beside her, 'you lose a good deal. There are hosts of French novels which I would rather not see a woman touch with the tips of her fingers; but there are others which take one into a bigger world than we English people, with our parochial ways of writing and seeing, have any notion of. George Sand carries you full into the mid European stream—you feel it flowing, you are brought into contact with all the great ideas, all the big interests; she is an education in herself. And then Balzac! he has such a range and breadth, he teaches one so much of human nature, and with such conscience, such force of representation! It's the same with their novels as with their theatre. Whatever other faults he may have, a first rate Frenchman of the artistic sort takes more pains over his work than anybody else in the world. They don't shrink, they throw their life blood into it, whether it's acting, or painting, or writing. You've never seen Desforets, I think—no, of course not, and you will be gone before she comes again. What a pity!'

"Miss Bretherton picked one of my primroses, rubbily to pieces and flung it away from her with one of her nervous gestures. 'I am not sorry,' she said. 'Nothing would have induced me to go and see her.'

"Indeed!" I said, waiting a little curiously for what she would say next.

"It's not that I am jealous of her," she exclaimed, with a quick, proud look at me; 'not that I don't believe she's a great actress; but I can't separate her acting from what she is herself. It is women like that who bring discredit on the whole profession—it is women like that who make people think that no good woman can be an actress. I resent it, and I mean to take the other line. I want to prove, if I can, that a woman may be an actress and still be a lady, still be treated just as you treat the women you know and respect! I mean to prove that there need never be a word breathed against her, that she is anybody's equal, and that her private life is her own and not the public's. It makes my blood boil to hear the way people—especially men—talk about 'Mrs. Desforets; there is not one of you who would let your wife or your sister shake hands with her, and yet you rave about her; how you talk as if there were nothing in the world but genius and French genius!'

"It struck me that I had got to something very much below the surface in Miss Bretherton. It was a curious outburst; I remembered how often her critics had compared her to Desforets, greatly to her disadvantage. Was this championship of virtue quite genuine or was it merely the best means of defending herself against a rival by the help of British respectability!'

"Mrs. Desforets," I said, perhaps a little dryly, 'is a riddle to her best friends, and probably to herself; she does a thousand wild, imprudent, bad things if you will, but she is the greatest actress the modern world has seen, and that's something to have done for your generation. To have moved the feelings and widened the knowledge of thousands by such delicate, such marvelous, such conscientious work as hers—that is an achievement so great, so masterly that I for one will throw no stones at her!'

"It seemed to me all through as though I were speaking perversely; I could have argued on the other side as passionately as Isabel Bretherton herself, but I was thinking of her dialogue with the Prince, and of that feeble, hysterical death scene, and it irritated me that she, with her beauty, and with British Philistinism and British virtue to back her, should be trampling on Desforets and genius. But I was conscious of my audacity. If a certain number of critics have been plain spoken, Isabel Bretherton has none the less been surrounded for months past with people who have impressed upon her that the modern theatre is a very

Jacob Lutz, of Saline, has taken a position in the store of the J. T. Jacobs company.

Fresh strawberries were served at tea, Sunday night, by A. L. Alexander, of Webster.

New steel rails are being laid on the Michigan Central, between Detroit and Ypsilanti.

Miss Edith Atkins, lit., '90, is teacher of higher Latin and English in the Manistee high school.

Ed. Roehm, of Roehm & Son, Detroit, was in the city last week taking orders for fraternity pins.

G. H. Pond and S. W. Beakes will attend the meeting of St. Andrew's Brotherhood in St. Louis.

Washtenaw's bill for keeping eight inmates at the House of Correction during the last quarter was $63.55.

A burning chimney in the house of Mrs. Bush on Broadway called out the fire department Saturday afternoon.

Felix Mackin pleaded guilty, Saturday, to assault upon Andrew Hiller and was sentenced to jail for twenty days.

Work will be resumed in the agricultural works next Monday. During the past week an inventory has been taken.

The foundation for the new St. Thomas Hall is completed, and work has commenced on the superstructure.

An unknown person, Thursday evening, fired a revolver shot into the residence of H. Woodward. Fortunately no one was hurt.

The Water Company have finished laying the pipes up to the new hospital and are now at work on Pontiac-st., in the fifth ward.

Mrs. Mary V. Torrans, of the sixth ward, mourns the loss of her little daughter, Lois, who died last Thursday of diphtheria.

Charles Holt, a high school student, was quite noisy on State-st at a late hour Friday night. He was arrested and on the following day paid $5.20 costs.

Mrs. Jane Brewell, widow of the late Chas. Brewell, passed away in Detroit on Saturday. The remains were brought to Forest Hill cemetery for interment.

Mrs. Ella Washburn, of Chicago, formerly Miss Ella Stevens, passed away on Thursday last. She was a daughter of Mrs. James Parshall, of Ann Arbor town. She leaves a husband and one son.

The average yield of wheat in this county per acre is 20.62 bushels. The average weight per bushel, after cleaning, is 61 pounds. Barley yields 24.40, oats 37.49 and corn 66 bushels to the acre.

"I wish you would have my advertisement for a boy taken out," said Mr. Wagner to THE REGISTER a few days since; "my wife has been pestered with callers ever since that advertisement was inserted, so that she hasn't had time to do much except answer the door bell."

Rev. H. N. Allen, Michigan state evangelist of the Church of Christ, will assist Rev. C. A. Young at the Sunday morning service, at the close of which the congregation will be permanently organized. All persons intending to be identified with the Church of Christ are requested to be present.

The members of Welch Post, G. A. R., the Woman's Relief Corps and the Sons of Veterans left for Ypsilanti, Friday evening, to attend the entertainment given by the Woman's Relief Corps of that city. Owing to an accident they did not reach Ypsilanti till ten o'clock and did not return until one.

Mrs. E. T. Sunderland, of this city, delivered an address, Thursday, before the National Convention for the Advancement of Women, in which she insisted that foreigners become citizens too soon and that, in Ann Arbor, they block the wheels of progress so far as the abolishment of the saloon is concerned.

A free piano recital is to be given before the Unity club on Monday evening next, by Miss Fannie Louise Gwinner, assisted by Mrs. W. F. Edwards, soprano; E. N. Bilbie, violin, and Miss Bertha D. Hill, accompanist. It is to be given in the audience room of the Unitarian church. The program will consist of selections from classic and popular numbers.

Col. H. S. Dean, chairman of the World's Fair sub-committee from Washtenaw county, makes the following pertinent suggestion. Country newspapers all receive much printed matter from the bureau of information, which is so long that it is necessarily thrown into the waste paper basket without being used. It would be much better if the bureau would furnish the matter in plate form and send a smaller quantity of it. All of this is endorsed by THE REGISTER.

The supervisors visited the county house Tuesday.

William Kersey, convicted of larceny, goes to Ionia today for a term of a year and a half.

Hon. J. T. Jacobs left Tuesday night for Velasco, Texas. It is both an official and business trip.

The Buckeye engine, recently placed in the electric light building, was started up on Monday.

Joseph Myers and W. F. Keller, Ypsilanti saloonkeepers, were fined $25 apiece in the circuit court Monday.

Rev. Camden M. Coburn delivers next Sunday evening the first of a series of sermons on the wit and humor of the Bible.

The case against Thomas Matthews and John Gow for rape has been continued over the term, bail in each case being fixed at $1,000.

Amanda L. Maurer died last Sunday at the age of thirteen. Her funeral took place Tuesday afternoon, Rev. J. Neumann officiating.

The case of Emily Kulenkamp vs. Frederick Kessler, for breach of promise, was decided Monday, the plaintiff receiving $200 damages.

Wm. R. White, manufacturer of farm gates, is meeting with flattering success. He says that one man has already ordered nine of them.

The Ann Arbor Guitars and Banjo club will play at the social of the Bethlehem parish, which is to be held Friday at the residence of Herman Hutzel.

Anna Mary Armbruster, wife of Anton Armbruster, died on Monday morning of dropsy. Her funeral took place on Wednesday afternoon, Rev. Max Hein officiating.

Willie Hessian and George Ogen, two boys under eleven years of age, broke into the shoe shop of Thomas Speechly Sunday afternoon and stole a number of tools. The boys were traced and the goods returned. Nothing could be done by authorities as both Hessian and Ogen were too young for punishment.

The Ann Arbor lodge of Good Templars will hold a public meeting and social in their hall over J. T. Jacobs' store, next Monday evening. A good program and supper will be given. Mell Gillespie will present and render some selections on the banjo and guitar, Rev. B. F. Brimblecom will make the address of the evening.

Loud screams of "Murder," "Help" attracted the attention of many persons living in the vicinity of State-st Tuesday morning. It was found that they proceeded from the third floor of the Sager building. Officer Tice soon appeared upon the scene. Mrs. Bennett, it seems, had suffered from a fainting fit and her husband, in his attempt to help her, had caught his finger in her set teeth. It was he who had uttered the cries.

The prosecuting attorney's report regarding violations of liquor laws shows that since the last supervisors' meeting he has caused the collection of $6,081.62. Of the amount $2515.00 was paid in by personal solicitation, $2916.62 by suit; $500 is to be paid before the 24th and $350 has been paid in fines at the term of court. The cases against Jacob Dupper, Christian Roth, Herman Hardinghaus, Charles Koerning and John J. Schultz are yet to be tried.

The ladies of the library association are making a great effort to pay the debt on the building. The original mortgage, which was $2,600, has gradually been reduced until, at the last annual meeting in April, it was $900.00. Mr. Henning then offered to give one hundred dollars, on condition that the remainder was raised before the next annual meeting. Since then members of the board and other friends have subscribed on the same conditions such generous sums, that only $525.00 remains to be raised. Prof. Stanley has very kindly consented to give an organ recital next Saturday evening, October 24, in the Congregational church, and it is hoped that the friends of the Ladies' Library will do what they can to make the concert a success.

Royal Baking Powder Has no Equal.

The Royal Baking Powder will make sweeter, lighter, finer-flavored and more wholesome bread, biscuit and cake than any other leavening agent. It is of higher strength, and therefore goes further in work and is more economical. All government and scientific tests go to show this. Royal Baking Powder as a leavening agent is absolutely without an equal.

RUSH MEDICAL COLLEGE, CHICAGO.

"As the result of my tests I find the Royal Baking Powder superior to all the others in every respect. It is entirely free from all adulteration and unwholesome impurity, and in baking it gives off a greater volume of leavening gas than any other powder. It is therefore not only the purest but also the strongest powder with which I am acquainted."

"WALTER S. HAINES, M. D.," Prof. of Chemistry.

CHICAGO COLLEGE OF PHARMACY.

"The Royal Baking Powder, which tests the highest in strength, is free from lime, alum, lime phosphates or other adulterations. Its superlative purity, the entire wholesomeness of its ingredients, the scientific manner in which they are combined, together with its much greater strength, make the Royal unquestionably superior to any other baking powder."

"H. D. GARRISON," Prof. of Chemistry.

As Others See Us.

The Ann Arbor Register Sept. 24th presented its readers with a forty-page paper. It was a very creditable piece of work and should be appreciated by Ann Arbor.—Chelsea Standard.

The Ann Arbor Register issued Sept. 24th one of the most creditable special editions we have ever seen. It contained 40 pages and was illustrated with really good views and portraits.—The Ypsilanti.

The Ann Arbor Register of Sept. 24th was an illustrated forty-page edition setting forth the importance, commercial and educational, of the University city. It is a great paper, and one of which the publisher has a right to feel proud.—Hudson Gazette.

The Ann Arbor Register got out a mammoth issue Sept. 24th. It contained forty pages, finely illustrated with Ann Arbor buildings and prominent citizens and well filled with the advertisements of our best business men. The issue was a highly creditable one to both the Register and the city, and a great deal of work was involved in its preparation.—Ann Arbor Argus.

The special edition of the Ann Arbor Register, containing 40 pages, given to the public September 24th was a credit to that office. In a typographical sense it was very neat and tasty, the composition on many of the 'ads' evincing a 'typo' genius. The illustrations were good, and the 'write ups' in Mr. Snow's best style. It was an undertaking that ought to be appreciated by the Ann Arbor public.—Ann Arbor Courier.
