THE CHARITABLE UNION.

HISTORY OF THE ORGANIZATION BY ITS PRESIDENT.

Fundamental Principles of Charitable Work. - Organized Twenty Years Ago .- Continued Prosperity. -A Great Variety of Undertakings and Experiences. - Expenditures Small and Returns Certain.

The poor we have always with us; how to relieve without demoralizing them, is the momentous question. The Rev. Dr. Washington Gladden, in his article on "The Problem of Poverty," in a recent number of the Century says, there are two tendencies of the age which go to swell the ever increasing ranks of povertynamely: "The growth of individuality and the consequent breaking away from family ties and mutually supporting duties, and the decay of manly independence which is the substratum of all sound character." These tendencies seem irresistable, and are continually fostered by intemperance, irregularity of work, low wages, physical infirmity, unhygienic environment and last but not least undiscriminating charity The remedies for all but the last must be left to the scientist ; our object is to emphasize a systematic, organized charity, as one of the means to combat the evils of poverty.

It has taken years to convince us that desultory, hap-hazard giving to the poor without investigation only encourages poverty and fosters crime. According to statistics collected by the National Conference of Charities, only one-third of the destitution that appeals to the public attention requires the aid of alms. More than two-fifths of the whole mass of apparent dependence is sufficiently and best relieved by procuring employment for those out of work. Not quite one-fourth of the whole has been adjudged unworthy of confidence, by which may be fairly understood that it properly belongs to the supervision of the police.

In the face of these facts why do men and women respond with money and other alms without so much as a question, to say nothing of a careful looking-up of the matter? The answer is that it is the easiest way to dispose of the annoyance. There is an easier, more effective and consistent way; namely, to send the applicant to his or her ward visitor, who will visit the home and ascertain the actual need. The organized and humanizing agency that would gladly take upon itself this task in our midst is the Woman's Charitable Union.

This "helping hand" had .its origin in the minds of a few largehearted women, representing the

For want of funds wherewith to pay rent, the association has held its monthly meetings in the parlors of churches and in private houses. Since 1887 it has assembled in one of the parlors of Harris Hall, where on the first Thursday of every month may be found the officers and ward visitors and others more or less interested. Reports are given from each ward, expenditures of money accounted for and cases of need reported.

churches the outcome of a plan of instruction in the blessedness of giving.

The organization has had an existence of nearly twenty-five years - never precarious, yet never with an overburdened treasury. Its object is to help the poor to help themselves and to administer relief when need requires. Its resources are its membership dues, the annual Thanksgiving collection and private donations from charitably disposed people. It is a practical, reasonable and definite work and appeals to the community with a certainty of enlisting interest. C. A. J.

Michigan Political Science Association.

As to its general nature and scope the Michigan Political Science Association is a society of lawyers, teachers, editors, bankers, and persons of any business or profession who are interested in the investigation and discussion of questions of Jurisprudence, Politics, Economics, and Sociology generally. The plan in outline is to hold two or three meetings of two days each, during every year, at such places and times as may seem most convenient to the Association. At these meetings papers will be read, reports given on any special investigations which are being carried forward. and such papers and reports d iscussed by the members present. There is a general understanding that at least the most valuable of the papers and reports will be printed by the Association and distributed among the members.

The objects which the Association sets before its members are various,and will, we believe, commend the organization to all thoughtful, public-spirited citizens. It is hoped to stimulate interest in the great public questions which Americans are prone to neglect. to bring to the study of these questions a more truly scientific spirit; to correct by mutual contact the extremes natural to theorists, on the one hand, and to men in practical life, on the other; similarly, to diminish the one-sided way of looking at public questions characteristic of each profession through the exchange of views among men of different professions; and, not least, to carry on some work of co-operative investigation through the help of men from different parts of the State, as for example, to study the actual working various churches in our city, in the year of municipally controlled public works, 1863. Moved by the suffering of the or of different systems of city government, or of different tax systems, etc. Any person may become a member on being approved by the Executive Committee and paying the membership fee of $3.00. As the notice of the meeting for organization reached only a small part of those naturally interested in the project, it was voted at Lansing that all persons joining before the meeting of February 21, should enter as charter members. For further details of organization, see the constitu-tion. For further information with reference to the Association, address:

World's Fair Notes. TRAINED NURSES. The efforts of the Board of Lady Man agers to secure an adequate presentation of the work of trained nurses at the World's Fair led to a great extension of the Medical Director's plans, and to the organization of a fine hospital protection to lvisitors. The plans for medical service contemplate the maintenance of a hospital with an effective ambulance service, each ambulance being accompanied by a trained nurse when called for the removal of a patient to lution.

the hospital. Here the Board of Lady Managers perceived its opportunity. and at once began the foundation of an elaborate scheme, which ultimately assumed national proportions and attracted wide attention from many vitally interested. This was the establishment and maintenance of a series of movable hospitals or relief stations, at various points on the World's Fair grounds. Patients requiring immediate attention can be taken into one of these relief stations and there receive such prompt, expert care as will often render unnecessary their removal to the hospital. Thus a fine opportunity will be afforded for the practical exhibition of the work of trained nurses. The idea has been seized upon by the great hospitals and makers of hospital supplies as furnishing the best kind of an opportunity for their exhibit and they are backing the plan of the Ludy Managers, and will put it through without cost to the Directory. All schools of medicine will be represented in the practice.

THE MOUNT VERNON ASSOCIATION. The Mount Vernon association will oot exhibit in the Woman's Building Virginia is erecting a faithful full-sized reproduction of Mt. Vernon for its State Building and there is where they find their most fitting place.

BUREAU OF PUBLIC COMFORT. The Bureau of Public Comfort announce that provision is being made within the Exposition grounds for several large, handsome buildings conveniently located, to contain spacious reception and waiting rooms, also commodious parlors especially for ladies and children, all comfortably furnished for the enfoyment of visitors; the buildings provided with lavatories and retiring rooms, and all in charge of polite and intelligent attendants; the whole constituting an attractive headquarters for the people-desirable resorts and resting places, free of charge to visitors.

A select number of attendants will be stationed in each reception room to reply, as far as possible, to all inquiries for general or local information; and registers for visitors maintained, in which those desiring may enter their names, home, and temporary address, and term of expected stay in the city, for the mutual convenience of friends acquaintances - information an registers. This bureau has also undertaken a hotel and rooming department, and will supply rooms to people upon written application, cash in advance, and they expect to furnish prices ranging from $1 to $5 a day.

Death of Phillips Brooks. In the death of Phillips Brooks the Episcopal church loses its most distinguished member and the country its foremost preacher since the death of Beecher. He was but 58 years of age and died in the prime of life and in the meridian of his powers. He was descended from an ancient and wealthy Boston family; Peter Brooks, a member of that family, was as famous fifty years ago among Boston merchants as John Hancock was in the days of the Revo-

Bishop Brooks graduated from Harvard. His youth was influenced by the noble teachings of Channing and he had oftened listened, as a boy, to the firey eloquence of Theodore Parker. His whole after life was influenced and in a certain sense, shaped by the broad and unselfish humanity, the generous and liberal religious spirit of these distinguished Unitarian leaders. So he was a "broad church" Episcopalian-an Episcopalian of the stamp of Dean Stanley and Cannon Farrar. So broad and liberal was he in his religious opinions that he came very near being defeated for Bishop by the conservative element in his church because of his supposed heterodoxy. But the noble hearted Bishop pursued the even tenor of his way. He would even officiate at funerals with Unitarian preachers, without fear of contamination, and occasionally occupied the pulpit of King's Chapel. His special intellectual gift was his eloquence. His personal magnetism was wonderful. His words fell from his lips in a torrent so rapid and overwhelming that his audience were borne along irresistably by the flood and the most skilful reporters were almost unable to follow him. For several years before his election as Bishop, he occupied the most beautiful church edifice in America-the finest of the creations of the lamented Richardson-and was listened to by one of the most wealthy and aristocratic audiences in the country, yet he was never "puffed up" and never "behaved himself unseemly." The rich and poor received an equal share of his attention and interest and all alike admired and worshiped him as their pastor and friend. His death is not only a loss to his church, it is a loss to religion, to his country, and to humanity. In these days when Shakespeare is being played in our theatres and lectured about in our churches, we are tempted to apply to the dead Bishop the words which Antony used in describing the ancient Brutas, "This was the noblest Roman of them all, His life was gentle; and the elements price. So mixed in him that nature might stand up And say to all the world this was a man." W. D. H.

Death of a Pioneer.

Mr. Elisha A. Calkins whose death and burial has occured so recently in our midst, was one of that hardy band of settlers whose axes cleared for themselves a home and blazed a path to it. in the midst of Michigan's primeval wilderness. He was born near Lockport N. Y., Apr. 30, 1823. When he was nine years of age his parents brought him to Michigan, his father cutting his way two miles beyond the furtherest settler and locating about that distance east of where South Lyon now is. Here Mr. Calkins spent the greater part of his active life. He was farmer and merchant by turns, and most highly esteemed in the community. In April 1854 he was married to Miss Eleanor P. Arms of Brighton who still survives him. In 1878 he moved to Ypsilanti in order to give his only daughter, now deceased, the opportunity which she coveted of studying in the Normal school. In 1881 he came to Ann Arbor to live where he has since resided. In 1886 he purchased the brick block, No. 34, S. State-st and opened a drug store in partnership with his only son, E. E. Calkins, who bought his father out about two years ago, thus giving him a needed opportunity to retire from the cares of business. In a few weeks more Mr. Calkins would have completed the full term of three score and ten years all spent in an active honorable business poor and the errors of indiscriminate giving, they organized a society known as the Ladies' Christian Union. They appointed visitors for every ward in the city, who were to investigate all calls for aid. Realizing that intemperance, though not the chief, was yet one of the greatest causes of poverty, they made heroic efforts to induce the common council to enforce the law for closing all saloons on Sunday. They established an industrial school, wherein were gathered a few poor children who were taught sewing, and they also made an attempt to establish an intelligence bureau for the benefit of women seeking for work.

The close of the year saw the intelligence bureau and the school abandoned for want of generous support, the common council had not seen fit to act upon the appeal of the society, but the work of the systematic relief for the poor was encouraging and the report showed much distress relieved.

In the winter of 1870 the collection taken at the union Thanksgiving services was given to the society, for the first time. This custom has been continued from year to year, and has added materially to the usefulness of the association. In 1873 it was thought best to change the title and the word "Charitable" was substituted for "Christian." Later on a further change was made by common consent, whereby the word "Woman's was substituted for "Ladies'." In the year 1891 the association lent its name and assistance to a movement to establish, for one year, a free bed in the homœopathic hospital; in this, co-operating with various secret and other societies and private indiv iduals. The required amount of mon ey was collected, the homeopathic faculty contributing largely to the fund.

It has been the custom of the society, for many years, to give its beneficiaries Thanksgiving dinners. To this end contributions of food have been solicited and most cheerfully given, and about fifty families have thus been remembered every year. The society takes great pleasure in acknowledging the receipt of Christmas gifts for the poor from the Sunday schools of the Methodist and Congregational at the house at 10 o'clock.

F. M. TAYLOR, Secy. Ann Arbor, Mich.

Boys. A writer in the Pratt Institute Monthly suspected to be Prin. W. A. McAndrew so well and popularly known in the twin cities of Washtenaw Co., recently organized an inquiry about boys as follows: "Suppose I had an assortment of boys arranged on my shelves for sale and you wrote me an order for one; what are the features my selection for you would have to possess, in order to close a bargain ?" Two replies from prominent Ann Arbor people are given. Pres. Angell answered:

"In addition to a mens sana in corpora sano, I should like in a boy two things : "1. A sense of humor.

The habit of telling the truth in all circumstances. "The first brightens life and lessens the weight of its burdens. The second is the foundation of all virtues. What-ever the other moral weaknesses of a boy, if he is at bottom truthful, I never despair of him. If he is a liar, I know of nothing on which to base a hope that a good character can be built."

Mrs. Elsie Jones Cooley wrote:

"If I were about to buy a boy at your shop I should specify that he be just plain regular, healthy boy-the kind of boy that is the delight and terror, the hope and despair of his family and neighbors, and entirely unadorned with much the bimedic would exclude what the boy himself would probably call 'frills.' For I take it that with all his little deviations from the strictly correct, the real boy-kind of boy is a good safe kind to have about."

Death of Mrs. Sophie Hirth.

Mrs. Sophie Hirth, wife of Mr. Henry Hirth of Lodi, died Tuesday of inflamation of the lungs at the age of 39 years. The funeral will be held Friday The Ann Arbor Organ Co,

At the annual meeting of the stock holders of the Ann Arbor Organ Co., held at their office Tuesday evening, Jan. 24th, the following board of directors were elected for the ensuing year: Fred Schmid, H. Hutzel, F. H. Belser, David F. Allmendinger, Gottlieb Luick, Evart H. Scott and Dr. W. H. Breakey. A communication was received from G. Frank Allmendinger stating that owing to the state of his health and increasing private business, it would be impossible for him to accept re-election as director. Regret was expressed, there being universal appreciation of his past services for the company in this capacity. The amount of business done in the past year has been the greatest of any year in the history of the company. The output of the factory was increased nearly 50 per cent.; two thirds of the entire organs sold were wholesaled to cash buyers; the company paid out during the past year in pay roll and salaries nearly $20,000, for lumber $9,526.20. They did a business of $68,587.55, of career. which upwards of $35,000 was in instruments of their own manufacture. Organs have been sold in nearly every state in the Union, and several have been shipped to foreign countries. The retail department makes an equally fine showing, and in view of the prosperous condition of the company it was decided to increase the capital stock to $100,000, a large part of which will probably be readily sold to the present stock holders. The outlook for present stock holders. The outcook for the company has never been so prom-ising as at the present time. The name "Ann Arbor Organ' is becoming well known, and the demand for the product continually increasing. On the adjournment of the stock holders' meeting the directory mot and on the adjournment of the stock holders' meeting the directors met and re-organized by electing the following officers for the ensuing year: Fred Schmid, pres.; Herman Hutzel, vice-pres.; L. H. Clement, sec.; F. H. Belser, treas. The regular directors' meeting will be held on the second Wednesday of each month of each month.

Tax Asked for State Fair Premiums. At the annual meeting of the executive committee of the State Agricultural society in Lansing the total indebtedness of the society was shown to be $23,000, and while it owns property valued at $75,000 the conditions of its deed are such that it cannot incumber its pos-sessions for any purpose. The com-mittee decided to ask the legislature for state aid, and appointed a commit tee to urge the levying of a tax of 1-100 of a mill, or $11,000 annually, to be used by the society in paying its pre-miums. The question of holding a fair this year was left with the business committee to decide.

STATES MISSING.

The Slipshod Manner in Which the Electoral Votes Are Sent In.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23 .- The certificates of all the states of the votes cast for president and vice president ought to be in the hands of the president of the senate now. As a matter of fact fourteen states have failed so far to comply with the law by sending on their electoral votes by mesenger, and many of those states which have complied with the law have done so in so slipshod a manner that if the late election had been in any way close the official ascertainment of the result under the constitution and the laws might have been made almost im-possible, and the whole government might have been thrown into chaos. Many of the messengers purporting to bring on the action of the states have come utterly unprovided with credentials. Kansas was one of the most conspicuous offenders. Many of the packages brought by the messen gers have had nothing on the out-side to indicate their contents. Two states sent their votes to the "presilent of the United States" instead of to the "president of the senate," and Ideho sent her vote to the secretary of state. It was a marvel of good luck that none of those packages were torn open and thus rendered invalid. The fourteen states which have not yet sent their electoral votes by messengers are: Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Georgia, Indiana, Kentucky North Dakota, Oregon, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Tennessee, Washington and Wisconsin.

Woodruff, it will be remembered, is the man who confessed to the famous trunk story-a yarn which, in the light of events which followed, was generally discredited. In that confession he claimed to have driven the rig which hauled the big trunk in which reposed a dead body concerning the identity of which he claimed to be ignorant. If it was true that Woodruff did not know whose body he was hauling around he was able to give a very good description of it. However, he told so many conflicting stories and made so many alleged

Frightful Result of a Railway Disaster in Illinois. Oil Cars Explode, Covering Bystanders with Blazing Oil-Sixteen Persons Lose

AN AWFUL SCENE.

Their Lives and Many Others Are Terribly Burned. IN FLAMING OIL. ALTON, Ill., Jan. 23.-As a result of the terrible accident at Alton Junction Saturday nineteen dead bodies are lying in the temporary morgue in this city, fourteen people are so badly injured that they are expected to die within a few hours and thirty-one others are dangerously hurt.

Alton Junction, or Wann, is located 2 miles east of this city, and is a transfer station for the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis and Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroads. The latter road joins the Big Four at this point, running into St. Louis over the same track. The fast through train known as the southwestern limited was coming out from St. Louis at 9 o'clock, thirteen minutes late, and making up lost time at 47 mile an hour speed, when it ran into an open switch and collided with a long freight train consist-ing mostly of loaded Union Tank line cars. Engineer Webb Ross, of Mattoon, saw the danger too late, but he threw on the air brakes and staid with his engine, being buried in the wreck and burned to a crisp.

The shock of the collision was such as to split two loaded tanks wide open and the oil immediately caught fire, the flames shooting 50 feet into the air. The locomotive and baggage car were totally wrecked, but the remainder of the passenger train was removed beyond the reach of the flames. Hearing of the wreck, hundreds of people from this city and vicinity were attracted by curiosity to the scene. And then occurred one of the most awful disasters on record. A few minutes past 12 o'clock there was a light explosion of one tank which scattered the debris on all sides, setting fire to the stock yards inclos ures. This one blow-up caused the impression that the danger from explo-sions was past, and the throng of bystanders rushed in to save the stock yards from destruction.

A minute later there was a deafening report that shook the earth for half a minute and spread a sheet of seething, burning oil in all directions. For those within the circle of a hundred yards there was no escape. Some of them were struck dead by pieces of flying iron and scores of them knocked flat on the were ground. Their clothing caught fire from the spreading flames and was burned from their bodies. Those who could rise did so and ran hither and thither making frantic appeals for help. Some of the sufferers ran to the nearest water and plunged in. Others ran through the fields, and a few of them are missing yet.

Of the following list of dead all but the first six and Utt, Miller and Montz died of their injuries after being removed to the hospital. The dead bodies of the last-named were found near the scene of the wreck Sunday morning. The deaths were as follows: morning. The deaths were as follows: Webb Ross, Mattoon, Ill.: Hiram Cornelius, Iowa; Edward Miller, Alton Junction: two uniden@fifed men; William Shattuck, Upper Alton, Ill.; Henry Penning, Wann, Ill.; Willie M'Carty, Alton; John Loeke, Alton; Edward Mauhin, Alton; Daniel Harers, Alton; Edward Mauhin, Alton; Daniel Harers, Alton Junction; William Mantz, Fosterburg, Ill.: Charles Utt, Alton; W. THE BUSINESS OUTLOOK. The Retail Trade Generally Good in the

Large Cities NEW YORK, Jan. 21 .- Dun's weekly review of trade says:

Severe weather appears to account in part "Severe weather appears to account in part for a somewhat general shrinkage in business, in many branches checking purchases and in others output or deliveries. There is a some-what general increase in complaints about col-lections, although money at nearly all markets is comparatively easy, and in supply adequate for lectimate demands. or legitimate demands.

"Chicago reports a general clearing up of winter goods and liberal purchase for the spring with heavy retail trade. Returns of spring with heavy retail trade. Returns of currency from the west are slow, but money is in fair supply. East-bound shipments fall off a quarter. Receipts show a decrease for the week in the more important items, except-ing a large increase in wheat. Milwaukee re-ports similar conditions. At Minneapolis and St Paul jobbing trade is good but collections for a to Owned burger they here low. At Omaha business is better than last ear, and collections good. At St. Joseph rade is good and collections satisfactory. At St. Louis trade is strong and collections fair-iy prompt. Trade is good at Kansas City, ex-cept in produce. Collections are rather close, but live stock receipts are fair and prices weaker. At Denver trade is fair, but at Salt weaker. At Denver trade is fair, but at Salt Lake light. Business is good at Nashville, but affected by the weather at Knoxville and Atlanta, and only fair at New Orleans, though sugar is strong and receipts of rice are large. "Shipments and the mining of coal are affect-ed by the weather and the scarcity is severely felt at some points, chances of legislative inter-ference with the combination having affected purchases for the future. "Wheat is half a cent weaker, with large re-Wheat is half a cent weaker, with large re-wheat is half a cent weaker, with large re-ceipts and small exports, and it is still note-worthy that the western deliveries are incon-sistent with reports of the last crop. Corn is a cent and oats half a cent higher. Cotton fell one-eighth, but recovered a shade with large sales, anti-option reports affecting the trade more than any chance in actual supplies. Port more than any change in actual supplies. Pork products are somewhat stronger, coffee ad-vances with large sales, and scarcity of eggs causes high prices here and at Boston.

"The stock market has been strong, especial-y in Manhattan, Western Union and some of the industrials, showing an advance of nearly 2 per share for the week. It is felt that the failure to secure a pooling amendment of the interstate act may have unfavorable influence. Money has fallen 2½ per cent. on call, with large receipts from the in-terior. While European necessities and foreign sales of stocks have caused further exports of gold, no less than $4,000,000 being re-ported as ordered for shipment during the week, and while bankers feel that such outgoes may cause trouble later, they occasion no pres-ent disturbance. Indeed the confidence regard-ing the future of business is in all parts of the country remarkably strong and general, es-ecially in view of the interest taken in pend-ng measures in Congress. g measures in Congress. "The business failures occurring throughout the country during the last seven days number 332, as compared with 340 last week. For the corresponding week of last year the figures were 328.

DUAL TRAGEDY IN CHIO.

Nicholas Haas Cuts His Wife's Throat and Takes His Own Life.

MARIETTA, O., Jan. 24.-Nicholas Haas, a farmer, 75 years old, after preparing for several days, on Sun-day cut the throat of his wife, Mary G. Haas, from ear to ear. He then locked the house, went to a neighboring farm .house where his children lived, borrowed a shotgun of his daughter, after which he placed the barrel of the gun in his mouth and discharged it by means of a ramrod. Mrs. Haas was 63 years old. In the main room of the house on a table was a paper of arsenic and a letter written in German signed by Mr. and Mrs. Haas. In a large rocker was the body of Nicholas Haas. His head was a shapeless mass, A gun lay on the floor, and the ramrod with which he pushed the trigger was still in his hand. A letter found on a table stated the probable cause of the deed. It was to the effect that Mrs. Haas had stolen $2,500 from her husband, and that she had annoyed and worried him until he could live no longer.

FROM THE MUNICIPAL CLUB'S CONSTITUTION.

SEC. 2. The object the Municipal Club shall be to secure (1) an honest and efficient non-partisan administration of the city goverment; (2) the enforcement of all laws, particularly those relating to gambling, the keeping of houses of ill fame, and the liquor traffic: and (3) the nomination and election to office of men who are pledged to do all in their power to obtain these results.

THE millenium has come-in Ann Arbor! The Courier and REGISTER both support Col. H. S. Dean for the Republican nomination for Regent of the University. He would make a good one, but the united efforts of both papers is strange. Not more so, however, than the lying together of the lion and the lamb of the old Rose-Douglas affair. -Ypsilanti Sentinel. He thinks us wild and you woolly, brother Courier.

THE Detroit Evening News informs us that here in Ann Arbor "considerable interest is already felt in the coming election of circuit judge. The district, although Democratic, elected a Republican judge, E. D. Kinne, by a round majority four years ago. Mr. Kinne's iberal views on many subjects and personal popularity may have an influence in bringing about his re-election. For the Democratic nomination the aspirants, so far as known, are ex-Prosecuting Attorney Michael J. Lehman, T. A. Bogle, a comparatively new comer, and Frank Jones, a young Saline lawyer. There is much talk, too, in favor of J. Willard Babbitt, now probate judge. In Monroe county the names of E. R. Gilday and C. A. Golden are mentioned. Washtenaw county has more delegates in the judicial convention than Monroe, and of course can have the nomination if she insists upon it." Our Democratic friends may rest assured that this district is not ready to part with the services of the ablest district judge in Michigan just yet.

The Farmer's Home. Sing all ye honest farmers In this year of ninety-three Who pay every honest dollar From debts and duns so free, When cold zero blasts are blowing And cold winter nights are long Then the farm house rings with pleasure When young happy hearts come home. When our friends come through the snow drifts And face the northern blast They bring us joy and pleasure Sweet memories of the past. When the farmer does his chores And feeds his stock with care, "His very foot has music in "t As he comes up the stair."

Last year there came two months of rain Then two months the sun shone bright, The corn crop withered in the drouth The wheat was cheap and light, The farmers took no vacation They worked every summer day, And wages, debts and taxes Took all their wealth away.

When cold winter days are dreary When cold winter days are oreary And the sun peeps out at noon, In floral sunny windows Sweet flowers and ruses bloom. Then clear young happy volces. Play and sing a cheery tune As sweet as when the sky larks sung O'er the Banks of Bonnie Doon. W. LANBLE, W. LANBLE, Ypsilanti, Jan. 20, 1823.

HOW MANY ARE THERE?

Would Make a Startling Array of Figures. An Interesting Count Which Would Re-

Some Inside History in Feminine Lives.

Women are great sufferers from nervousness, weakness, nervous prostration and debility. Thousands of girls droop and languish in the close, confined atmosphere of shops, factories or offices, and hundreds of thousands wear out their nerve force and power in household cares, family bereavements and responsibilities and work which never ends.

Here lies the great strain upon the vervous systems of women. Hereis the cause why so many women complain of being weak, nervous, tired and exhausted. They have little or no rest; their life is one continual round of work, duties here, duties there, duties without number. What wonder that such women go to bed at night fatigued, and wake tired and unrefreshed in the morning! What wonder that they become worn out, so to speak, in nerve and vital power! What wonder that they have great weakness, exhaustion, pains in back and limbs, together with the distressing female complaints which are always caused by loss of vital strength and vigor! Of how many thousands of women is tne above a true and exact transcript of daily life? They have worn out and exhausted their nerve force and physical power. They must work, but it follows as surely as the day follows the night that they must receive from some source a renewal of nerve force and physical energies, or the human machine will soon cease to run at all.

No none knows these facts better than women themselves, and the inside history of feminine lives would reveal a story of tired bodies, un strung and excitable nerves, wearied limbs, aching heads and backs, with that exhausted, dragged out feeling which makes their lives miserable.

The well known Etta E. Haven, of New Boston, Conn., writing upon this subject says:

"Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is a wonderful remedy

ed how one vote in the fifth ward is equal two in the first, second, third and fourth, and three in the sixth. This showing ought to be entirely adequate to secure a reform without further evidence. The division of territory into as nearly equal districts as possible for electoral purposes is fundamentally involved in our American political methods. Not only is the existing condition of things in Ann Arbor utterly opposed to these more than century old precedents, but it is also a violation of that soundAmerican foundation principle of equal rights for all men, that the nation has always been ready to fight for to her last man and her last dollar.

Property representation in the United States is abhorred in governmental institutions and the invariable basis of business organizations. Such being the case, as a city partakes of the nature of both kinds of corporation, it may not be out of place to show the division of property between the wards. The following are Assessor O'Hearn's totals for 1892:

First Ward1,717,420
Second "
Third "
Fourth " 914,000
Fifth " 147,325
Sixth " 1,090,400
If property holders in a city were stockholders in the corporation to the amount of their property, and were divided into wards for elective purposes what a cry of injustice would arise.
The first ward is more than eleven times greater than the fifth, while the ward nearest in value is almost four times greater. At a rough estimate if we should let one indicate the size the fifth ward, the other wards would be represented by the figures 4, 6, 6, 7 and

11. Just how a reapportionment to secure an equitable representation of persons would leave the property question cannot be determined off hand, but it is readily apparent that the existing discrepancies would be very materially lessened. The division advocated in the REGISTER of a week ago, which was based on the motion of Aldorman Wines in the last council meeting could not but result in a very much more satisfactory representation of the property interests.

The title is of course odd, and characteristic to a large degree of the author's sense of humor. The piece was written for Mr. Charles Frohman who has this present season fourteen successful organizations under his di-rection, "Mr. Wilkinson's Widows" has brought Mr. William Gillette greater financial congratulations than any previous work in which he was engag-ed. As a matter of course any of Mr. Gillette's comedies might be staged without premeditation and herein lies the secret of the play wright's methods. As a humorous writer he has been the most successful in America for years. When he wrote Wilkinson's Widows he did so under direction and to suit the characteristics of a company of first class comedians. The piece was presented to a New York audience at Proctor's theatre, New York, and held the sway for nearly 200 nights. For a comedy farce a season's run means much The play itself is of a domestic character showing the unnecessary complications arising from the unwarrant-ed jealousy of two husbands. Those two husbands have two young wives; each in her early widowhood. They live in the same flat, and visit each other quite regularly. They are both the widows of the late Mr. Wikinson, unknown to each other, and through the modest flitting of a gentlemen. the modest flirtation of a gentleman acquaintance of both husbands a domestic storm brews in the house of wife No. 1 and terminates in the apart-ments of Mrs. Wilkinson No. 2. It is ments of Mrs. Wilkinson No. 2. It is only at the end of the last act that the dual life of the kind and dear old Mr. Wilkinson is exposed. One is whirled away in the vortex of farcial situa-tions until, having enjoyed several good hearty laughs, we think we begin to see the end of it all, when more and almost endless complications comerush-ing in upon the already burdened sense of the ludicrous. The piece is said to be exceedingly amusing and will be presented with the original cast and for nervous prostration, and those terrible tired, weak feelings that make life a burden, almost too great to bear. I feel that I cannot say enough in its praise for what it has done for me. It gives one the most restful sleep, and in fact does all and more than all it claims to do. I wish every poor, tired woman on the face of the earth could be induced to try it for three days; they would then understand its value, and life would not seem so wearisome and undesirable."

It is a fact that the great nerve invigorant and female restorative is Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. No remedy in the world is so sure to bring back the bloom and color to the wan and faded cheeks, the brilliancy to the hollow and haggard eyes, the lightness and elasticity to the weak and weary step, the strength and vitality to the unstrong, shattered and worn out nerves. It is the greatest of all uterine tonics and regulators, and perfectly and completely cures all female weakness and disease.

If our readers are troubled in this way we should advise them by all means to use this remarkable remedy. We know it to be purely vegetable and harmless and it is within everybody's reach, as all druggists sell it for $1. It is the discovery and prescription of Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th street, New York, the eminent specialist in the treatment of nervous and chronic diseases, and the doctor can be consulted free, personally or by letter, which is a guarantee of the great value of the remedy.

Having sold pianos more or less of the time for twenty years, I at once recognized many superior points in the Guild. It stands in tune well, and its sweet singing tones have proven a surprise and pleasure to all good performers who have tried it. It is a first-class piano in every respect, at a fair price. Yours very truly,

MR. A. WILSEY, Dear Sir:-I enclose the testimonial for which you asked. It gives me pleasure to send it to you, as I like my piano very much. When you can make it convenient, come out and see how it has stood the wear and tear for nine years. Yours truly,

LILLIE BAESSLER.

N. B.-I publish Miss Baessler's kind letter in place of the testimonial refered to. Her piano is the first Guild Upright I ever sold. In the testimonial she says, "its tone is as sweet and mellow as ever. Call and see how it has stood the wear and tear of nine years." THIS IS TRUE OF THE GUILD PIANO. Its tone does not lose its freshness and become thin, hard and "tinny" as is the case with pianos generally.

We could add many such testimonials. Call and see the pianos, and list of purchasers. Send for Catalogue if you cannot call. We sell this piano for $100 less than you can buy any other that will at all compare with it. See it.

LITERARY NOTES.

A series of papers of much practical value on "Pets in the Home," by Olive Thorne Miller, will be begun in the number of Harper's Bazar for January 21st. The same number will contain a charming short story, by Gertrude Smith, entitled "A Lone Old Woman." -Harper & Brothers, New York, N. Y.

The January Arena contains several papers of especial interest. Among them may be mentioned one on Alexander Salvini, with nine illustrations by Mildred Aldrich; a defence of Shakespeare by Prof. W. A. Rolfe; Women Wage-Earners of America and Europe by Helen Campbell, and many others, thus making the number an especially attractive one .- The Arena Pub. Co., Boston, Mass.

Scribner's Magazine, for January, begins its thirteenth volume and seventh year, for which many important features are announced, some of them making their first appearance in this number. Serial fiction will be a feature of the year, with such writers as Frances Hodgson Burnett, H. C. Bunner, Robert Grant, Harold Frederic, and Miss Elliot, the author of "Jerry." In this number the first part of Mrs. Burnett's serial is given, under the title of "The One I Knew the Best of All," which is a charming bit of autobiography, covering the reminiscences of the author's childhood and youth up to the publication of her first story .- Charles Scribner's Sons, New York, N. Y.

Fords, Howard, & Hulbert, New York, will shortly publish a volume entitled "Bible Studies: Readings in the Early Books of the Old Testament, with Familiar Comment, given in 1878-9," by Henry Ward Beecher. Edited, from stenographic notes of T. J. Ellinwood, by John R. Howard.

This series of readings or lectures was the feature of Mr. Beecher's Sunday evening services during the fall of 1878 and the winter and spring of 1879. They cover the early books of the Old Testament, from Genesis to Ruth, and are prefaced by two characteristic sermons. "The Inspiration of the Bible" and "How to Read the Bible."

Mr. Beecher was always known as a master expositor of the Bible, and no one interested in the matter can fail to gain new light and inspiration from these "Studies." The volume(uniform with his "Sermons," at $1.50) will be ready toward the end of December.

IN WOMAN'S BEHALF.

SCHOOL TEACHING. A Calling in Which Girls Find Pleasant and Profitable Employment. A writer in the Arena declared, recently, that "The flaw in our educational system is the overwhelming preponderance of women's interference in our public schools." The French educational commission to the centennial exhibition at Philadelphia, in its report on primary education in the United States, attributed the condition of affairs which the writer in the Arena deplores, to the effect of the war with the south. "The superiority of the female element of the teaching body over the male in point of number," says the report, "dates from the war of secession, the original cause being the voluntary enrollment of all the young men who were teaching, as soldiers."

A very little investigation suffices to show that the cause assigned by the French commission offers by no means an adequate explanation of this feature of the public school question. The majority of teachers were young women as far back as 1844. Between 1848 and 1850 the proportion of female teachers in Massachusetts rose from sixty to seventy per cent of the whole number. This increase was doubtless owing in a large measure to the influence of Horace Mann, who was at that time secretary of the first state board of education in Massachusetts. and who was a most determined advocate for the employment of female teachers. The war had the effect of still further diminishing the number of men in the schools, 5,000 teachers having enlisted from Ohio alone; but the war can not be regarded as the original cause of the withdrawal of men from the teaching service.

The employment of large numbers of vomen was made possible in the first place by the fundamental idea of the American educational system.

In European countries the state concerned itself mainly, in times past, with higher educational institutions, which were frequented by students from the upper classes of society. It was not until the horrors of the French revolution revealed the dangers looking in the social depths that the idea of the education of the masses began to take practical shape in Europe. Primary education has been gratuitous in France only since 1881.

The New England settlers recognized from the first that it was the duty of the state to provide the means for securing intelligent citizenship. Twenty-two years after the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers their representatives enjoined the local authorities to "keep a watchful eye on their brothers and neighbors, and above all things to see that there be no family in which so barbarous a state of things exist as that the head thereof do not endeavor to impart sufficient instruction to his children and to his servants to enable them to read fluently the English language, and to acquire a knowledge of the penal laws under a penalty of tweny shillings for such neglect.

New England held fast to the idea of elementary instruction for all the people as the basis of the American public school system. As the nation developed the existence of a great system of schools which might be taught by persons of comparatively small mental attainments, opened the way for the employment of women as teachers. before there was any cen

The strength of the movement for the higher education of women makes it reasonably certain that the future question will be, not whether women shall study at the universities, but whether they shall teach in them. UNAPPRECIATED WOMEN.

The Part She Plays in the Conventional Fiction of the Day. The cruelty of the scheme which custom applies to the talented woman, is illustrated in every conventional fiction. Our typical hero may be relied on to be endowed with some special gift. Her soul is aftre with ambition, her life embodied in purpose. We know the result; in the closing pages we find her the hapless victim of a conflict between love and ambition. One must conquer to the total demolition of the other. The novelist, if adroit, will allow ambition a headstrong run, a brief whirl, a heavy flounder, to be reeled in by the lovecord. The lover gives the alternative; the heroine revolts at the sacrifice. It is a game fight. Human nature can't help enjoying it. Every one knows she will finally throw ambition to the four winds and collapse into waiting arms, thereby evidencing her supreme womanliness. The novelist endows his heroine with mind, simply to make her game. Her gifts are not intended for development. He never effects a compromise by which she may both marry and cling to her art. A minor character sometimes refuses to make the sacrifice, but she speedily becomes wrinkled and loathes her success. The curtain of course drops as the heroine renounces talent. The people forget that if realistic, the struggle goes on and on through long years after the honeymoon is over, in the open day when a man or woman of talent must feel accountable for its possession. The world is full of work, and full of women of talent who are debarred from doing their share of it, not by housekeeping and domestic duties which, science and social progress have rendered comparatively light, but by conventionality, which obliges them to renounce their talents, turn from their bent, and become a fractional existence divided between husband and children. If the cost of this useless sacrifice made by those women capable of being at the same time good wives, mothers and growing individuals, were known to mankind, there are enough true women to see an end speedily put to it.-Mar-garet N. Wishard, in The Chautauquan Ripans Tabules cure dyspepsia.

eral movement for the higher education of women they constituted a majority cf the teachers in the primary and grammar schools. The fact they received much that compensation for the same service than men was an argument for employing them which could not but have much weight in communities which were directly taxed for the maintenance of the schools

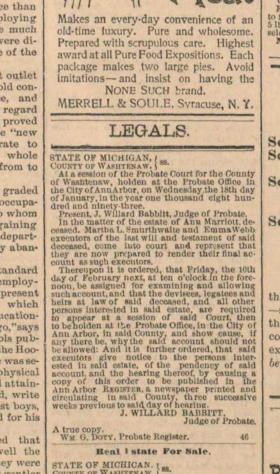

School teaching was the first outlet for American girls beyond the old condition of absolute dependence, and naturally they proved docile in regard to salaries as they afterwards proved teachable when the ideas of the "new education" began to penetrate to America. Young men had the whole new world before them where from to

Room teaching in strictly graded schools was too monotonous an occupation for the young American to whom so many more stirring ways of gaining a livelihood were open, and this department of school work was rapidly abandoned to the other sex.

But if the low educational standard was the opening wedge for the employment of women, they owe their present standing largely to qualities which mark their peculiar fitness for education-al work. "Twenty-five years ago,"says an account of the Indiana schools published in the centennial year, "the Hoosier schoolmaster was a man. He was selected quite as much for his physical prowess as for his intellectual attain ments. If he was able to read, write and cipher, and to whip the largest boys, he was considered well qualified for his work. It was gradually discovered that women could not only teach well the requisite subjects, but that they were generally able to secure order by gentler means than those generally employed by men. In this they were doubtless aided by the high respect in which their sex was held in the community. Silje strom, a Swede, who inspected the American schools in 1848, noted that 'the spirit of freedom which reigns in America gives even to women there a superior degree of independence and de sision, and a greater power of action; and the respect, bordering on submis-siveness, with which she is treated by the other sex imparts to her character a loftiness, I might almost say pride which can not but strike every stranger and which renders it easy for her in her capacity of school-mistress to command the necessary deference."

As to salaries, the discrimination on the ground of sex are bound to disappear. The higher average salaries of men are now due mainly to the fact that their acceptance is limited to pay ing situations.

At last Mark heard the relief coming. The sentinel took his gun and began to pace his beat. The usual form was proceeded with, and the relief marched to the sentinel up the river. Mark observed the man that had been left on post. "I hope this fellow will be more in-

Then there was the morning to come. Mark began to lose that coolness which thus far had characterized him. It was the waiting that was wearing him out. In perhaps an hour after the sentinel came on picket he yawned. This was the first sign of hope for Mark. After awhile he sat down on the log and yawned several times at intervals. He got up and paced for awhile, but at last sat down again. This time he sat longer and his chin sank on his breast, He roused himself and sank away again. He would not go to sleep comfortably in accordance with Mark's muttered prayer, but took short naps. Mark considered the feasibility of an attempt to escape between these naps. Without fancy! Suddenly he trod on a rotten branch. It cracked with a sound which seemed to him like the report of a pistol. Again he paused and turned. He saw the sentinel motionless. He had slipped farther down, and his hat had fallen farther over his forehead.

Thank God!

He moved backward, his eyes fixed on his sleeping enemy, occasionally turning to see where he stepped. He was getting near to cover. In this way he passed to within a few steps of concealment. How he coveted the overhanging bank near to him, yet far enough to be useless should the sentinel awake too soon! Cachew!

This sound was real; it was a sneeze from the picket.

Mark knew that it was a signal of awakening. He darted behind the bank and was out of sight.

He heard the sentinel get up, shake himself, give a yawn, a grunt, as if chilled, and begin to pace his beat. Mark moved away cautiously, a great flood of joy and thankfulness welling up through his whole nature. After going a sufficient distance to be out of hearing, he awakened Jakey. "Jakey! Wake up!"

The boy opened his eyes. 'We're beyond the picket."

"Whar's my gun?" "Oh, blessed childhood," thought Mark, "that in moments of peril can be interested in such triffing things!" "I have your gun here in my hand.

It's safe. Stand on your legs, my boy. We're going on.' Jakey stood on the ground and rubbed his eyes with his fists. Once awake he was awake all over.

They moved on down the river toward the base of Lookout mountain, soon leaving the river margin and striking inland behind some rising ground. Finding a convenient nook in a clump of bushes wherein to leave Jakey, Mark told him to lie down and stay there while he reconnoitered to find a way to get down the river and to cross it.

Mark hunted nearly all night. He could find no practicable route. He did not know how to proceed around Lookout mountain, and could find no means of crossing the Tennessee near where he was. At last, looking down from a knoll, he could see the margin of the river at a place where the bank concealed the shore between the base of the bank and the verge of the water. But what he saw especially, and which gladdened his heart, was a boat moored to the shore and in it a pair of oars. Going back to the place where he had left Jakey he wakened him, and together they returned to the knoll. The boat was still where he had seen it. Leading the way Mark descended to the bank. So intent was he upon seizing the boat that he did not think to approach cautiously. He forgot that where there was a boat with oars in it the oarsman would likely not be far away.

He jumped down to the slanting ground below and landed in the midst of a party of Confederate soldiers.

CHAPTER IX.

WHAT WE OWE OUR FELLOWS.

The Divine Command: "Bear Ye One Another's Burdens.

What is the Christian law? "Bear ye one another's burdens." Do not cause your brother to offend. Do not make your conscience, or intellect, or will, despotie over his. Be tender, considerate, charitable. Do not be impatient of inferior natures. Bear with them, sympathize with them, help them, nurture them into strength. Do not struggle to have your own way in everything; meet them so far as you oan in their own way. Deny yourself to help them. Give, do not exact. In this way you will really benefit, not them only, but yourself also. But the apostle is very guarded in his injunction. I am not simply to please my neighbor, I am to please him for his good. You may not please his sense to lower his moral tone; you may not make him happy at the cost of his moral and spiritual nobility. It is his good, not your own, that you are to seek by pleasing him-which makes all the difference. Your solicitude for his good must be so strong that, instinc-tively, you shall seek, by pleasing him, to make him a better man. What a difference there is in men-even in good men! Some men trritate You know not why or how. There is in them something that finds out and excites whatever is had in youyour temper, your disparagement, your sarcasm, they act as irritants; while other men find out in you whatever is good. You leave them softened, har-monized, gladdened. Men are like magnets; they excite whatever is most in affinity with themselves. If, therefore, our heart be full of genuine Christian goodness and love, we shall excite these qualities in others. We may not speak a word to them that shall be formally religious, and yet they shall feel elevated, purified, edified.

What a blessed ministry of life it would be were all Christian men and women to attain to this! "Helpers of each other's joy," what a great sugges-tive word it is! It would be personal, bounded at the second seco household, social ministry, far more potent than all the sermons that are preached from pulpits -- Watchman.

Truly a Christian Nation.

The church is not going backward. Its prosperity is measured better by spiritual than material results, but it is nevertheless interesting to know that church property in the United States has increased 631 per cent. within forty years. In 1850 it amounted to $87,000;-00, in 1899 it had reached $631,000,000. If to this is added the immense properties of Christian institutions shich as hospitals, colleges, publishing houses and the like, some conception may be de-rived of the immense intellectual and moral force which Christianity is evercising on the life of our people. It is not pretty nearly time to acknowledge that this is indeed a Christian nation? -Interior.

Treading as noiselessly as possible, they passed along the river margin under the overhanging bank till they came to a place where the bank was low. The sentinel sat smoking while Mark meditated. His first thought was, Why did I bring this boy? The situation was perilous enough without an encumbrance. The guard was facing the space over which they would have to pass to escape; there might be a slight chance for life to make a dash were he alone, but with the boy it was not to be thought of, and Mark was unwilling to leave him. It is to be replaced by a handsome iron structure of modern architecture. We would suggest to our city paternals the raising of the abut-ments a few feet and grading Congressst so as to make a gradual slope from the corner of Congress and Huron to the outline of the Chancy Worden property.
