100 YEARS AGO AT YALE.

HOW THE COLLEGE WAS GOVERN-ED BY PRES. STILES.

College life a hundred years ago posesses many curious and interesting features for the student today. Through the kindness of the Rev. M. B. Gelston, the narrator was able to obtain a glimpse at the old times at Yale. The Rev. Maltby Gelston, father of the the gentleman of that name recently deceased, graduated from Yale college in 1791. His diploma as bachelor of arts, is a veritable sheepskin 9 by 9 inches, not much discolored by time but faded except where the india ink of his name retains its original lustre It hears the official seal of Yale in the upper left hand corner, and the signatures of Ezra Stiles S. T. D., LL. D. the president, and of nine members of the faculty besides.

Even more curious than the diploma is the volume of the laws of Yale bearing the name of Maltby Gelston as proprietor. This pamphlett of 36 pages is printed in old fashioned, but large and clear type and was placed in the hands of every student. From this book we learn that in order to matriculate a student "shall be found able to read, construe and parse Tully, Virgil and the Greek Testament, and shall be able to write true Latin in prose, and hath learned the rules of Prosody and vulgar arithmetic, and shall bring suitable testimony of a blameless life and conversation." Once in the student stud. ied Language for three years, and Arithmetic, Logic, Rhetoric, Geometry Geography, Ethics, Natural Philosophy, and Civil Polity. The catechism and confession of faith were also required. In four years an A. B. degree was granted, providing the candidate did not wear gold or silver lace when he came up to get his diploma, and three years later any graduate, who should continue his studies and should come up and deliver an oration of sufficent scholarship was entitled to the degree of M. A. The laws regulating conduct are truly peculiar. Chapel occured twice a day, morning and evening, and attendance was enforced by fine. Absence cost a penny and tardiness a half-penny as did also "egressing" during the services without sufficent reason. Walking abroad on the "Lord's Day" was forbidden, while to "deny the holy scripture or any part | night. thereof to be of divine authority" or to "assert any error or heresy subverting the Christian Religion" or to "continue obstinate therein" was to render expulsion certain after two "admonitions." Playing billiards and several other games was punishable with fines 2s 6d for first offence, 5s for secondand then came expulsion. A student could not go more than two miles away from college without a special permit. One rule of great interest states that "every Freshman is obliged to do any proper errand or message, required of him by any one in an upper class, which if he shall refuse to do heshall be punished." There were some limitations upon the right of command, and if any Freshman celebrated his emancipation on commencement day too noisily, he was liable to have his right to boss the next year's freshmen withdrawn for three months.

Prohibition principles were not at a premium evidently for the butler was allowed to sell"Cyder, Metheglin, Strong Beer, not exceeding twenty barrels in a year, and such like necessaries for the The butler was a monopolist for he paid the college authorities fifty shillings a year for his privilege and "scholars" on pain of punishment might not buy "Cyder and Strong Beer" any where else

Punishments were either rustication, admonition, fine or expulsion usually.

The Chamber Concerts.

The second concert in the chamber music series will be given by Edward Baxter Perry, pianist, and Mr. Frederick Mills, violinist, Tuesday evening, March 14, at Newberry Hall. It will be a unique combination of the functions of lecturer and concert pianist, original with Mr. Perry, which is meeting a general need, and finding universal favor throughout the country. Mr. Perry's purpose in adopting the lecture recital, in place of the ordinary piano concert, is two-fold: first, to add to the benefit derived by music students from listening to his programmes, and second to popularize the best in piano music with the general public. The method he employs is to preface each number of a carefully-selected pianoforte programme with a brief verbaanalysis, calling attention to its originl form, salient characteristics, and descriptive or emotional significance. Admission, 50 cents. Season tickets, (admitting to all faculty concerts as well, and Ashley Pond, jr., are taking a trip

Synopsis of the Work of the Fifty-Second Congress. Candidates Chosen at Their State Convention in Lansing.

A List of the More Important Bills Which Will Be Placed on the Statute Books Some of the Measures Which Falled.

WHAT WAS DONE.

ITS WORK REVIEWED. Washington, March 7.—The silver and tar-iff questions, the anti-option bill and reduction of appropriations were the leading topics of consideration by the Fifty-second congress, which expired by constitutional limitation at 2 o'clock noon Saturday, and secondary only in portance to these matters were measures reing to the world's fair, equipment of rail pads with automatic car-couplers, national unarantine and immigration, Behring sea and prevent two items in the McKinley act taking effect, was actually accomplished so far as respects silver, the tariff or anti-options, the action taken on each of these questions in one branch of congress being negatived by the ac-tion or nonaction of the other branch. Approximately 425 house and 235 senate bills and joint resolutions became laws, making 660 acts put on the statute books as the result of the work of congress. A majority of these measures were of interest only to individuals or localities, being for the relief of citizens, for the bridging of streams, for the District of Co-lumbia, for rights of way, etc. An unusual proportion of the claims bills was for the relief

If southern men.

The house passed in round numbers 625 bills, of which 200 failed of passage in the senate, and in the neighborhood of 625 bills passed by the enate failed in the house, including a long list of public-building bills, many private pension. and other measures involving increased

The pension and census offices, the whisky trust, Panama Canal and Pacific Mail companies, the Watson-Cobb charges, the Pinker-ton system and Homestead troubles, the Maver-ick and Spring Garden bank failures, the Ellis and immigation station were investigated by

Not a single public building bill passed the house and it was only by putting a number of them on the sundry civil appropriation bill that any appropriations whatever for public buildings were secured.

STRUGGLE OVER SILVER The silver question was kept steadily before the attention of congress by the alternate ef-forts of the advocates of free coinage and of the repeal of the Sherman law. The coinage com-mittee of the house in the first session reported a free-silver bill, which, after an exciting de bate, was saved from defeat by the casting vot-of the speaker, but was afterward fillbustered to death, the friends of the bill falling to secure the signatures of a majority of the democrats to petition for a closure rule in its behalf. The senate then passed a free-coinage bill, but when the free silver men renewed their fight in the house they were outnumbered by fourteen votes, and, of course, failed. The anti-silver men met a similar fate in their ef-forts to secure a repeal of the present law, the senate refusing by a decisive vote to consider it, and the house killing the Andrew-Cate bill by declining to yote so as to give its rignds the by declining to vote so as to give its friends the parliamentary right to move closure on it, with out which it concededly could never be forced to a vote in the closing hours of the congress.

TARIFF LEGISLATION.

On the tariff the dominant party in the house adopted a policy of attacking the McKinley act n detail largely for political reasons and part y for the reason that in view of the political complexion of the senate it was practically out of the question to pass a general tariff-re-vision bill through the senate, while special measures might stand some show of passage. The result was the enactment into law of two bills continuing block tin on the free list and fine linen at 35 per cent, ad valorem. Under the McKinley act large duties were to take effect on these items in the near future.

Other separate bills were passed through the house, only to be pigeonholed in the senate, as follows: Free wool and reduction of duties on woolen manufactures, free cotton bagging ties, gins and cotton bagging machinery; free bind-ing twine; free silver lead ores, where the value, not the weight, of the silver exceeds that of the lead in any importation; free tin plate, terne plate, taggers' tin, and the limitation to $100 of the amount of personal baggage returning tourists may bring into the United States.

ANTI-OPTION KILLED.

The anti-option bill passed both houses, but was killed by the refusal of the house to suspend the rules and agree by a two-thirds vote the amendment put on the bill by the senate, the opponents of the measure maneuvering so as to prevent Mr. Hatch making effective his majority in favor of the measure and forcing him at the last moment to try suspension of the

The pure-food bill, the running mate of the anti-option bill, passed the senate, but was never able to get consideration in the house. The following are the more important bills which have become laws:

The car-coupler bill; the Chinese exclusion; the national quarantine; immigration; to grant an American registry to two Inman line steamships; to pension survivors of the Black Hawk and Seminole Indian wars; to increase the pension to veterans of the Mexican war; the intermediate pension bill; the eight-hour bill for adjustment of accounts of men who have worked over time; to enable the president to enforce reciprocal canal arrangements with Canada; to pension army nurses; to increase the pay of crews at life saying stations; the compleme lighthouse at life saying stations; the compleme lighthouse at life-saving stations; the omnibus lighthouse and fog signal bill; to amend the interstate commerce law so as to meet the Gresham and Counselman decisions and correct other defects

Showing up the Bogus Baking Pew-der Tests.

An Exchange referring to the schemes of the baking powder testers, who are going through various sections of the state, gives a letter from a housekeeper exposing the fraudulent character of the performance.

Mrs. Page, says our exchange, writes that she was recently visited by the lady agents of a powder which she did not use, who attempted to show her by boiling and stewing it that there was something wrong about the brand she does use, the Royal. No amount of manipulation, however, succeeded in doing this. The Royal went through il tests triumphantly and without a flaw, and the tester acknowledged her-self beaten. The tester then took a can of Royal from her pocket and from that produced almost anything she called for. She said that she had made this test before many housekeepers, and had by it induced them to throw away the Royal. "My opinion is," writes Mrs. Page, "that this testing is a fraud. It was evident to me that the sample of Royal she drew from her pocket had been doctored for the purpose of making these tests, and I cannot see how any sensible housewife could be so readily fooled. I believe also that where they can they slip some su-stance into the tin in which they boil he water and powder. When they are watched too closely and cannot do it, then they produce the small can expressly prepared for the purpose.

The women who are performing these alleged tests are, perhaps, innocent of the great fraud in which they are paricipants, but no censure is too severe or the employers who thus use them o do illicit work which they dare no themselves perform, and which has brought them before the courts else-

A HOME MISSIONARY.

JOSEPH ADDISON HALLOCK (Octogenarian.)

HIS EXPERIENCE WITH THE OWEN ELECTRIC BELT.

AN OLD MAN WITH PROGRESSIVE IDEAS AND HIS DE-

SIRE TO ENLIGHTEN THE PUBLIC. The winter of 1834-35 was my first experience with rheumatism. I was travel-ing as a home missionary, and with great difficulty and suffering I reached my ap-pointments. It was located in my hips and back. From that time to this year of grace, 1891, I have suffered more or less under the grip of that disease. About three years later, liver complaint, and the calomel taken to cure it, fastened upon the walls and organs of my chest, a rheumatic affection from which I was never wholly free, and at times even a breath was a cruelty. Yet, in a general way, my health has been as good, perhaps better than the average of men. During the last days of the late year, I

During the last days of the late year, I bought of Dr. Owen two of the Owen Electric Belts. One I have worn, the other a daughter has worn. In either case the remedial has been satisfactory. The rheumatism of my chest and hips I can no longer find. A limited case of varicoccle, of more than thirty years standing, after two weeks' use of the Belt, has diminished to a mere lump, and a few days later could not be found. A nasal catarrh of years had so affected the substance of the nose that a friend in jest twitted me of brandy. My nose is itself again, and other symptoms of nasal and throat catarrh are fast disappearing, carrying my deafness of seven years with them.

I have studied electricity in its hearings upon mental and physica mental phenomena.

I have studied electricity in its bearings upon mental and physico mental phenomena for fifty years, and have seen its wonders in these directions, and, thus prepared, my attention was easily turned to its efficiency in controlling the nerves, muscles and motions of the living, as galvanism does those of the recent dead.

I have no wish to undervalue any appliance which carries a real electric current from a genuine battery to human nerves with a gentle, a genial force; but I do wish to do my utmost to disarm public fears as to the well-ordered Electric Belts.

FROM THE MUNICIPAL CLUB'S CONSTITUTION.

SEC. 2. The object of the Municipal Club shall be to secure (1) an honest and efficient non-partisan administration of the city government; (2) the enforcement of all laws, particularly those relating to gambling, the keeping of houses of ill fame, and the liquor traffic; and (3 the nomination and election to office of men who are pledged to do all in their power to obtain these re-

Although THE REGISTER is a Republican paper, it sometimes tells the truth-Argus. Dear Brother Argus, we will return the compliment on the slightest provocation.

It is amusing to see the Republicans squirm and kick over Mr. Cleveland's appointment of Judge Gresham as secretary of state.-Owosso Press. It is a convulsion of glee, dear boy, over the profound gloom and curses long and deep of the old wheel horse Democrat at that same appointment.

Ex-PRESIDENT Harrison, after doing the final duties of courtesy of his late office, hastened to his home in Indianapolis where he was received with a warmth of enthusiam that indicated in a measure the hearty endorsement of his administration which is due him from the whole people. During the past four years the country has enjoyed a wonderfully clean-cut, energetic, business-like and prosperous administra-

CLEVELAND, in his inaugural address, declares for a sound and stable currency, and says that the recent election was a condemnation of protection, of bounties, and of "reckless" pension expenditure. He emphatically pronounces for civil service reform, denouncing appointments for partisan activity, (growls from the Tammany tiger.) He further expressed an anxiety for his party to redeem their campaign pledges. an anxiety that will stay by him and keep right on growing for the next four years, and that would be shared by the Republicans were that party not more interested in having the country prosperous than in seeing those other fellows bury themselves.

THE SPRING ELECTION.

In a very short time the city will undertake to select its officers for another year. A movement is on foot in the city to secure such officers as will result in a more efficient enforcement of the laws and ordinances; is there any reason why every citizen should not identify himself with that movement? The municipal club does not intend to become a partizan organization, and does not desire to run a ticket of its own independent of the regular party organizations. But it does desire to have a full expression of public opinion on the subject "Shall the Laws be Enforced." the expression to take the form of electing men to office regardless of party who can be depended on to do their duty.

In order that the citizens in favor of law and order may not waste their strength in disorganized and undirected efforts the municipal club has been formed, and it will be the duty of the executive committee of that organizaion to give its members due notice of the direction in which their efforts should be made.

THE NEW RUSSIAN TREATY.

Rumors concerning the new Russian treaty not yet made public though confirmed by the senate are creating a lively interest in it throughout the country. It is reported that a clause in this new treaty makes it possible for Russia to extradite her political offenders from asylum under our flag. The clause is reported to have been introduced by secretary Foster, who was a highly favored minister at St. Petersburg, and to be almost identical with that part of the Bayard treaty with the Czar, which aroused such extensive popular indignation six years ago, and which caused the rejection of the treaty. If such be the case, it declares that "attempts to murder the Czar, or any member of the royal family, shall be considered as non-political offences, regardless of what the motive of the criminal may be, and that being nonpolitical offences, they shall be extraditable." At first sight this seems rational enough and that to object is to advocate murder as a legitimate method of political reform. But when the Russian meaning of the words 'attempts to murder the Czar" as embodied in their law and practice, is explained there is seen to be a possible enormity lurking behind this fair exterior. In Russia every political thinker, theorist, or agitator, is held to be a plotter against the life of the Czar. To assemble openly for a political discussion is impossible, and to assemble secretly is a crime. The American constitution is an incendiary document, and a student was hanged a few years ago for having in his possession documents advocating representative government-he was a plotter against the life of the Czar according to the

Such being the Russian situation, if the American courts must yield up every man under this treaty that the Czar demands on that charge, it is a radical and deplorable rupture with our whole past history, and a disgraceful violation of the spirit of American institutions.

It may not be inappropriate to quote Wendell Phillips on the subject of

"In Russia there is no press, no debate, no explanation of what government does, no remonstrance allowed, no agitation of public issues. Dead silence, like that which reigns at the summit of Mount Blanc, freezes the whole empire, long ago described as "a despotism tempered, by assassination." Meanwhile, such despotism has unsettled the brains of the ruling race, as unbridled power doubtless made some of the twelve Cæsars insane-a madman, sporting with the lives and comfort of a hundred millions of men. The young girl whispers in her mother's ear under a ceiled roof, her pity for a brother knouted and dragged half dead into exile for his opinions. The next week she is stripped naked and flogged to death in the public square. No inquiry, no explanation, no trial, no protest, one dead uniform silence, the law of the tyrant. Where is there ground for any hope of peaceful change? Where the fulcrum upon which you can plant any possible

"Macchiavelli's sorry picture of poor human nature would be fulsome flattery if men could keep still under such oppression. No, no! in such a land dynamite and the dagger are the necessary and proper substitutes for Faneuil Hall and the newspapers. Anything that will make the madman quake in his bedchamber and rouse his victims into reckless and desperate resistence. This is the only view an American, the child of 1620 and 1776, can take of Nihilism. Any other unsettles and perplexes the ethics of our civilization."

We never know just how a thing But we are always certain of the results which are left. These reflections were called out by the fact that it is so easy to drift into anything. In this world we must keep our eyes about us or we shall constantly find ourselves driftng into trouble.

We call to mind an instance in which a most estimable lady unconsciously and without knowing when or how, allowed herself to drift into what became to her a most serious matter and caused many years of anxiety and suffering.

This lady is widely known-Mrs. Mary Jane Foster, of 327 West 21st street, New York City, and what she says are true and exact facts, as can be easily and readily ascertained by anyone. If experience is of any use, hers is certainly a revelation to be heeded by all.

Without knowing their meaning she had a dull feeling head, headaches, dizziness, bad taste in the mouth, especially mornings. Her sleep was broken and she would wake mornings feeling tired and exhausted. After a time the appetite became irregular, there was a fullness or bloated feeling after meals, risings of gas, sour stomach, biliousness and constipation,-such symptoms, in fact as people frequently experience during the spring of the

"Even the lightest food caused great pain and distress after eating, and I also suffered with great exhaustion, dizziness of the head, and weakness of the limbs so that I could scarcely stand on my feet.

"But I am now completely cured by the use of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and I take pleasure in giving my experience to the public in order that other sufferers may be cured as I have been."

Look out for such troubles in the beginning. Now, in the spring, when everybody is certain to be more or less out of order and needs a spring medicine, take Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy immediately, for it is the best and surest of all spring medicines. It will invigorate the blood, strengthen tne nerves and give you perfect digestion and regular action of liver, kidneys and bowels. All druggists keep it for $1.00, and it is purely vegetable and harmless.

It is the great remedy recommended by doctors for spring debility and diseases because it is the discovery and prescription of the well-known physician, Dr. Greene, of 35 W. 14th Street, New York, the successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases. The doctor can be consulted without charge by anyone, either at his office or by writing to him.

"What, ho!" the toiling traveler cries;

A story told in accents clear;

Why chime the bells from every tower And why thus shines a happy light In every eye, as hour by hour Day hastens on to meet the night?

"The world is still a haunt of woe. And sin in secret places hides, And still the tender heart must know Where sorrow stings and pain abides."

Forgets not sorrow, shame nor pain; But these are not of life the whole, And earth but waits Love's gentle reign. "I pray you listen to the song

"The world, in truth, O weary soul

That thrills the shining, resonant skies, A song whose message, sweet and strong. Proclaims the joy of sacrifice.

That these shall be, the Christ was born; The sorrow's self may find release, And death be of its terrors shorn.

"Sin wounds the soul but Christ has grace; The faitering heart receives His power, and whose seek His pitying face Shall learn of pardon in that hour.

"Lift up, lift up the voice on high; Give of your strength to peal the bell! Break forth, break forth in joyeus cry, Make haste the blessed news to tell!

"Let worlds on worlds the chorus swell, For Christ has lived and died for them; Yet still He lives—Emanuel! Still rests His star o'er Bethlehem."

-Adelaide Citley Warldron, in Good House keeping.

THE STAR THAT NEVER SETS. To Its Brightness All the Nations of the Earth Shall Yet Be Attracted. The curse and crime of infidelity is that it aims to extinguish the star of Bethlehem, and to overthrow the lighthouse on Calvary. A band of wreckers who should extinguish the great lantern on Fire island, and then hoist a false light elsewhere, to decoy New York bound vessels to destruction. would be merciful in comparison with the skeptics who are striving to destroy man's faith in man's only Saviour. cultured scholar once told an Episcopa bishop that he had read a great number of infidel books and that they might have made him a skeptic, but for three considerations. "First," he said, "I am a man; and I am going somewhere. have read all that those books can tell me, and they shed not a solitary ray of light on the darkness. They shall not take away my only guide, and leave me stone-blind. Secondly, I had a mother. I saw her go down into the dark valley where I am going, and she leaned upon an unseen arm as calmly as a child goes to sleep on the breast of its mother. That was not a dream. Thirdly, I have three motherless daughters. They have no protector but myself. I would rather see them die than leave them in this sinful world if you should blot out from it all the teachings of the Gospel." Well might that thoughtful man declare that nothing sheds a soli-tary ray of light upon the darkness of this life, and the dread mysteries of the future world, except the revelation of

What a comfortless world this would be without Him. We ministers are constantly summoned to the chamber of sickness and the bed of death. For one, I am ready to say that I would not dare to venture into such a trying and responsible situation if I could not carry a Bible, and the offer of a Saviour and the promise of the Divine Comforter with me. That precious fourteenth chapter of the book of John is lamp that I have often held aloft in the room of sickness and the house of mourning. Some of us know for ourselves what such rooms mean; we have had God's truth pricked into our hearts and memories by sharp experiences. To many of our reader this dying year has been a year of dying beds and darkened homes. In some of your nurseries there may be an empty crib, in some of your dwellings there may be an empty chair at the Christmas table that makes your heart ache No human consolation is even a rush light. Every attempted comfort that fails to satisfy the yearnings of your deepest spiritual nature is a cheat, a will-o'-the wisp, a mockery. We want certainty. Amid all the mysteries that overhang death and eternity, is there any Heaven-kindled, infallible and an changeable light that can illuminate the grave and penetrate into the unseen world? Yes, thanks be to God, the star of Bethlehem is the star of Bethany's sorrowing home and rocky sepulcher! "I am the resurrection and the life." "I have the keys of death and of Hades." "I go to prepare a place for you and will receive you unto myself.' These are the sweet consolations that float, with celestial melody, into our houses of sorrow. And our faith, recognizing a truly Divine voice, answers

My Jesus, as Thou will, Though seen through many a tear,

Let not my star of hope Grow dim, or disappear. Through sorrow or through joy, Conduct me as Thine own And help me still to say: My Lord, Thy will be done!

This old sobbing world of ours is one year older than it was when the last Christmas carol was chanted. It has had another twelvementh of experiments and experience-of advancement on many lines of human research and acquisition. But it has not outgrown Jesus Christ. For Him it has discov ered no substitute. The star of Bethlehem is the only star that never sets. Jesus Christ alone can satisfy all human necessities and the loftiest of human aspirations. Christianity is the only universal religion, the only one adapted to all ages of life, to all human conditions, to all races and all nationalities. Other lights have arisen, waned and vanished forever. The Greek mythology is as utterly shattered to ruin as its own splendid Parthenon. The chief religions of Asia, Brahmanical, Buddhist, or Moslem, are all limited and local; they are all moribund; while they make no inroads on Christianity, the religion of Bethlehem and Calvary makes constant inroads upon them. The systems of error which Paul and

Peter fought have vanished out of sight, and the whole east is catching glimpses of the star that first dawned over Judea's sky. The spiritual dynamics blood tells; and God has instructed His Gospel of salvation to the most powerful races on the globe.

To the brightness of Bethlehem's star all the nations of the earth shall yet be attracted. The rulers of the darkness of this world must prepare to abdicate for Jesus Christ. He who bore this world's cross will by and by wear its crown; and this nineteenth century, shod with the sandals of foreign missions, is one of the forerunners of the King. Every system of error, every delusion of skepticism, shall yet pale and vanish out of sight before the Gospel of atoning love which restores fallen man to a forgiving God. The songs which filled that first Christmas night shall yet be heard, with richer harmonies, over a whole ransomed world. The skeptics who stubbornly shut their eyes to the light in this life will be compeled to witness the blazing splendors of Him who sitteth upon His throne and receives the homage of the myriads whom He has brought home to glory! This world's six days of turmoil and toil and travail shall end in a Sabbath of eternal rest and praise. Even so come, Lord Jesus! Come quickly!-Theodore L. Cuyler, in N. Y. In-

PATIENCE AND CONFIDENCE.

The Christian Virtue That Gives Us a Lasting Victory Over the Flesh.

What is patience? What but steadfast constancy and endurance under the pressure of the evil of the world, quiet standing still under the burden and sorrow laid upon us, humble and obedient submission to God's ordering. even when He permits crosses and griefs to be our portion; holding fast the blessing which has been left us in the midst of all this. namely, faith, hope and confidence in better times to come, in God's wisdom and faithfulness, which finally make all things to work together for good for the children of God. Patience is to keep fast hold of the strength which comes from His confidence; it is a fruit of the Spirit (Gal. 5:22), a lasting victory over the flesh, which is ever ready to despair or give way to passion. The patience in which the soul is to possess itself is like the firm iron band round a cask which prevents it from slowly leaking or bursting by reason of the force of the fermentation within. If we cast away confidence and the joyful hope of a better future, all capacity for patience is gone. Thence Paul's answer to the question: "How shall we hold fast patience?" He says: "Cast not away, therefore, your confidence, which hath great recompense of reward. For ye have need of patience, that having done the will of God, ye might receive the promises." (Heb. 10; 35, 36). In substance, he says that we are to hold fast by patience by resist ing the temptation to cast away confidence and joyousness. — Theodore Christlieb, D.D.

THE OLD MAN.

All the world knows, at least by reputation, the great seminary of St. Sulpice, established in Paris near the magnificent church of the same name. This seminary was founded in the time of Louis XIII by a man of admirable virtue and saintliness—

Before settling in Paris M. Olier and his first associates dwelt at Vaugirard, in a community house, and prepared themselves by the practice of penitence, prayer, pover-ty and the care of the unfortunate—in one ord, by the following of a Christian life, to become the proper instruments for the grand design which had been formed among

M. Olier frequently collected his pious comrades into the great chamber and ex-horted them with indefatigable zeal to advance in the paths of perfection, to become saintly priests, and especially to combat, to mortify, to immolate the "old man"—that is to say, the evil inclinations of the corrupt The house was guarded by an elderly gardener named Thomas, who lived with his wife in a little cottage at the end of the garden. Thomas had noticed these secret reunions of the disciples of M. Olier in the great chamber. He had spoken of it to his wife, and both inquired of themselves why the good gentlemen should thus as-

Old Thomas, as suspicious as his wife, resolved one day to penetrate the mystery, and in default of a better method went to listen at the door. On the evening of the day when he had taken this resolution there was to be a meeting at M. Olier's house, which Thomas knew. He advanced upon the tips of his toes, applied his ear to the door and heard talking. Listening, he distinguished the voice of M. Olier, and as the silence of the auditors was profound he heard these "Gentlemen, gentlemen, what awaits us? Let us put ourselves to the work even to-day. For a long time we have held back. olate the old man without pity, without hearkening to his murmurs and his cries. Is not this the price that we must pay? This is an enemy always ready to destroy us, always near to us, who will kill us if we do not sacrifice him with courage. Of what use is it to make resolutions if we do not execute them? There has been enough delay; the moment has come.' enough delay; the moment has come."

Thomas was the only aged person in the house. One may judge of his surprise, his terror, when he heard M. Olier urge his companions not to hesitate to immolate the "old man!" Evidently this threat was directed toward him, and to follow in the same day to fill his place with a young gar-Pale as death, he sought shelter in his own house. "Wife," he said, "wife, we are lost! Quick! save yourself from here! We are among cutthroats! They intend to kill us—I heard them! We have only barely time to make up our bundles! Oh, who could have believed it? Men with so good an air, who have testified so much friendship to me. What can you tell by looks?'

Thus lamenting and recounting to his terror stricken wife what he had heard, Thomas gathered into two or three great baskets what was most valuable. But it was too late. While thus engaged in their preparations for flight the door opened, and

M. Olier appeared upon the threshold.

"Thomas," said he, "you will summon us in five minutes for supper. Do you hear me? But what are you doing? What are these packages? Where are you going?" Old Thomas, believing himself at his last moment, with his hair bristling upon his head, stammered some words. He imagined he saw some weapon in the hands of M. Olier. Then, unable to longer contain himself, he cried: "Wicked man, I know you at last! Hypocrite, traitor, assassin! I have heard all Help! Police! Poor Abbe Olier was stupefied. "What is the matter with you, Thomas?"

said he. "Are you mad?" "No, no, I am not mad!" cried the old gardener. "Sooner to God that I was mad! Police! Police! Help! It is not worth while to pretend longer. I repeat, I heard all. was at the door while you were encourage ing your traitorous companions to kill m this evening. Oh, sir, how wicked of you Me who loved you so well! Why should you kill me? It is only necessary to simply send me away if you have a new servant you wish to put in my place."

"But I know not, in truth, what all this means," responded M. Olier, more and more surprised. "Explain yourself. Who did you think was going to kill you?"

"Yes; you, you! I recognized your voice in your preaching tone harangue when you said, less than an hour ago, to immolate the 'old man' who was ever as an enemy in the house, and not to hesitate to follow your advice".

At these words M. Olier comprehended the misunderstanding, and laughing with all his heart departed from the cottage to tell the story to his comrades.

They came in a body to Thomas' house and after great difficulty made him under stand that they had no animosity against him. But it was for a long period and only after many conversations with the good Abbe Olier that he was convinced of his error and ceased to carry about with him concealed weapons to defend himself.— Translated by O. A. Shaw For New York

Jeffrey's Talk.

Jeffrey's talk was a choice and finished performance—his words abundant, felicitous, and with a picturesque precision never exaggerated. On the contrary, a lit tle depreciatory undertone ran through his conversation; he liked to differ, as perhaps became his profession. If any one gushed about last evening's sunset, he would say, "A few pink clouds, perhaps." His affirmations were rather negative than positive He would rather say "I should not be sorry" than "I should be glad."

All this, with even a touch of the artifi-cial, peculiar to himself and apt to be misunderstood, had rendered him unpopula with his countrymen in his youth. But he sweetened with age, success and independ ence and would say that it was poor win that grew sour with keeping.-Longman's

The Needle of the Yankee.

It was the Yankee who made the needle turn a somersault. All the world since the first fig leaf sewers threaded the needle in one fashion. It was the Yankee who dis-covered that it was threaded at the wrong end. He declared the business end of needle to be, like that of a bee, farthest from its head. Either Elias Howe or the other man, who did not win the lawsuit, was the first man who, like the hero in Greek mythology, held the "eye" in hi hands and put it where he would. He drilled the needle and inserted the thread at the other end and set it in arms of steel, multiplying its potency. As Americans gave the world the sewing machine and a

A LITTLE BOY'S MISTAKES.

Some of the Things That Are Worth More A boy would not be worth much if he never made mistakes, and was never told of them. There is hope for a boy in proportion to the number of mistakes he makes and afterward corrects.

One of the most common mistakes of a boy is what he wants. He is apt to want most things he hasn't, and one of the things a small boy hasn't and hankers after most of all is size. O, how he does pine for size! He waits and counts days, and scratches the wall with pencil marks, and stretches himself up trying to catch up with his big brother. And all the time he may be more of a man than his big brother, if only he would put the right kind of a measure in place of a foot rule.

You have heard of the Irishman who went to market to buy the most for his money, and finding that turnips were so much cheaper than potatoes, bought four bushels, instead of two of potatoes. But he was very much surprised to learn that the turnips were seventy five per cent. water, and that he might have bought a package he could have carried in his vest pocket that would have contained the same amount of nutriment as his four bushels of turnips.

This was a case when size was deceiving, and this is the way the small boy is often taken in. It is not the size of a man's fist, or the breadth of his shoulders, or the height of his stovepipe hat that counts. I have seen a seven-foot bully do a thing so mean and unmanly that a seven-year-old boy ought to blush for it. And I have seen a boy pass along after him and pick the whining dog up that he had lamed by a kick, and treat it with such pity and tenderness that, if we still lived in the days of chivalry (and we do in more ways than one), that boy would have been knighted and spurred and received the applause and smile of fair ladies and noble men and his king, and the hulking giant would have been given to some magician to be changed into a flea or a potato bug, or some petty, noxious insect. If a boy would hanker after the things that ought to go with size, and let size take care of itself, he would make no mistakes.

Another thing the small boy is apt to overrate is physical strength. He is always bragging about what he can do, and the strongest boy in a crowd is sure to have things pretty much his own way. The whole world used to be boys once in that respect. The man who could strike the hardest blow, ride the fastest, jump the farthest, and use his arms and legs the best was the best man; now it is the man who can use his head the best. It is the man who has the best heart. The Indian said when he first heard a pistol fired and saw the deadly effect: "He heap little, heap loud, heap go quick and hit heard." A boy who is little need not be loud, but if he can "go quick," and hit the mark clean through for doing his duty, he is manlier than some men who wear men's clothing. It is not the exhibition of strength, but intelligent and judicious use of strength, that makes great. The horse has more strength than the man, but the man with his less strength and his superior mind makes the horse go as he pleases, and subdues the wildest and most ferocious beast.

Don't ache for size; don't ache for strength. Don't lie awake at night thinking how to get either. Let those things take care of themselves, and be just the kindest, most truthful, patient, industrious, happiest boy you can, and get all the love you can from others, and give all the love you can to them, and men will one day say of you: "What a power he is!" and may be you couldn't lift a five-pound dum-bell. But all I say will be true pevertheless. -Our Morning Guide.

A Practical Soldier.

Prince Bismarck was once about to decorate a private soldier with the Iton Cross for some signal act of valor, and, with his customary contempt for men's motives, determined to test him.

"My friend," said he, "I am about to pin this cross upon your breast as a reward for your courage, but if you happen to be poor I am commissioned to give you one hundred thalers in its

"What is the value of the cross?" asked the soldier

"About three thalers," was the reply. "Well, then, give me the cross and ninety-seven thalers," said the soldier, and he got them .- Detroit Free Press.

ANOTHER WHISKY TRUST.

Wanted to Repeat It. A certain small boy had told a lie. Very sadly his mother had reproved him for it, and to help him to resist temptation she said:

"Now, my boy, if you ever feel like telling a lie again, come to mamma and she will help you fight against it." The lad went off with a sober face. Only a few moments elapsed, however, before he appeared again, and, with an eager smile, said: "Mamma, I want to tell a lie."

"Well, my dear, tell me what you want to say," said the mother. "I want to tell that same old lie over again," observed the boy.-Harper's

THE OPERATOR.

I stepped upon the platform at Baisen-noyen-Cert station, where my friend Len-ileur awaited me with his carriage. While on the train I suddenly recollected comething that required immediate atten-tion at Paris. Upon my arrival at Baisennoven-Cert I went to the telegraph office o send back a message.

This station differed from others of its lass because of the total lack of writing materials.

After a prolonged exploration I finally succeeded in capturing a rusty pen, dipping it in some colorless, slimy fluid. With heroic effort I succeeded in daubing down the few words of my telegram. A decidedly unprepossessing woman grudgingly took the dispersely conviced it and percent the the dispatch, counted it and named the rate, which I immediately paid.

With the relieved conscience of having fulfilled a duty I was about to walk out when my attention was attracted by a young lady at one of the tables manipulating a Morse key. With a slight hauteur the turned her back toward me.
Was she young? Probably. She certainly was red haired. Was she pretty? Why not?

Her simple black dress advantageously dis played a round, agreeable form; her luxuriant hair was arranged so as to reveal a few ringlets and a splendid white neck. And suddenly a mad, inexplicable desire to plant a kiss upon those golden ringlets seized me. In the expectation that the young lady would turn round, I stopped and asked the elderly woman a few questions anent tele-graph affairs. Her answers were not at all

The other woman, however, did not stir.
Whoever supposes that I did not go to the telegraph office the next morning does The pretty, red haired one was alone this

Now she was compelled to show her face, and, sapristi! I could not complain.

I purchased some telegraph stamps, wrote everal messages, asked a number of nonsensical questions and played the part of a chump with amazing fidelity.

She responded calmly, prudently, in the manner of a clever, self possessed and polite

And I came daily, sometimes twice a day, for I knew when she would be alone.

To give my calls a reasonable appearance wrote innumerable letters to my friends and telegraphed to an army of bare acquaintances a lot of impossible stuff. So it vas rumored in Paris that I had suddenly ecome deranged. Every day I said to myself, "Today, my boy, you must make a declaration." But her cold manner suppressed upon my lips the words, "Mademoiselle, I love you."

I invariably confined myself to stammerg: "Be kind enough to give me a 3-sou The situation gradually became unbear

As the day for my return approached I esolved to burn my ships behind me and o venture all to win everything.

I walked into the office and wrote the fol-Coquelin, 17 Boulevard Haussman, Paris: "I am madly in love with the little red haired telegraph operator at Baisenmoyen-I tremblingly handed her the telegram

I expected at least that her beautiful white complexion would effulge.

But no! Not a muscle relaxed! In the calmest anner in the world she said:

"Fifty-nine centimes, please."
Thoroughly nonplussed by this queenly erenity, I fumbled about in my pockets for the coin.

But I could not find a sou. From my pocketbook I took a thousand-franc note and gave it to her. She took the bank note and scrutinized it carefully. The examination terminated favorably, for her face was suddenly wreathed in smiles, and she burst into a charming ripple of infectious laughter, displaying her marvelously handsome teeth. nd then the pretty young mademoiselle sked in Parisian cadence, "Do you want the change?"-From the French of Alphonse Allats in New York Journal.

Where the Date Line Strikes. The international date line is the line at which dates must be made later by one day when crossing it from east to west, and earlier by one day when crossing it from west to east. This great imaginary line passes just west of the Behring straits west of Clarke's island, west of Gore's island, and thence southwesterly between the Aleutian islands and Asia. It then passes southwesterly some degrees east of Cap Lopatka and the Kurile islands, thence st east of the Japan islands, Jesso and Niphon, keeping west of Guadalupe, east of Bonin, Loo-Choo and Patchoo islands. From the last named places the line passes through the Bashee channel, just north of the Bashee islands. It next enters the Chinese sea east of Hong-Kong, then passe south a little west of the Philippine is lands, but to the east of the Palawan islands. It is at this place that it reaches its most westerly point, being about 116 degrees east

From here it takes a southwesterly course again, passing almost exactly through the center of the Sooloo islands. Thence it passes east, nearly parallel to the equator and just north of it, to a point 165 degrees, or just north of Schank islands; hence southeasterly, leaving Taswell island to the northeast; thence through the Samoan islands to about longitude 268 degrees west thence south, keeping east of the Friendly islands and west of the Society group; still south, bearing a few degrees west, so as to cross (according to some authorities) the Chatham islands; thence straight over the great waste of water lying between the last named group of islands and the south pole.—Omaha World-Herald.

Did the Indian Smoke For Pleasure? There are pipes of all possible sizes and shapes, taken from graves, in the archæological collection of Thomas Harper of Al-leghany, and some of these are beautiful. One, grotesque and blackened with use, is the image in miniature of a grizzly bear, with staring eyes and grinning teeth. Another of odd shape has a face rudely sketched on it. The most artistic in shape and decoration is of the red catlenite. This pipe is polished and handsomely inlaid with ome metallic substance resembling lead. "It must not be understood," said Mr Harper, "that smoking was a daily habit with this people. Their prophets and wise men smoked to propitiate the spirits before entering on any new undertaking. Civi lized man has made a habit out of that which was the religious ceremony of a sav-

THE REGISTER and the CHICAGO INTER-

CRINOLINE.

Ambrose Bierce in San Francisco Examiner. The impending "crinoline" calamity is suffering an increase of imminence with every word that is written of it: the surest way to make a woman act like a fool is to point out to her that that is what she is about to do. But some of us, to whom the follies of our species are not altogether displeasing, do not share the general apprehension, and are somewhat more than willing to let nature take her course. There is no reason to doubt the sincerity and intensity of that apprehension; among women, particularly, it is strong and genuine. Yet in a few months, probably, they will all be wearing hoops and defending the practice. That is precisely what they fear-that they will choose to look like frights and argue like idiots of the void. They know they cannot help it. They know themselves vincible to the sussion of their loose caprices and accesible to the contagion of every madness not quarantined by men's imperative interdiction. Themselves devoid of the sense of hnmor, they know in a dim terrifying way that it exists, and that without it people are ridiculons when least conscious of their woeful state. That is the fate which they feel is awaiting them-to look like the devil, yet not know it. In the mean time, by way of showing them with what feelings their imminent impulchritude is regarded by the wisest and best of men, I beg leave to transcribe here the following judgement of my grave and candid friend, Mr. Clough, of the Oakland Times:

A woman in hoopskirts is not indecent, as in clinging garments, or low-cut corsages, but she is more laughter provoking than an organ grinder's monkey or an educated pig, both of which she resembles in point of native intelli-ince. I do not affirm Mr. Clough's judgment; I only cite it. Doubtless in defence of her hoops Lovely Woman will treat us once again to that hoary fiction that represents 'Fashion" as an iron-handed tyrant whose "decree" she is unwilling to obey, yet unable to defy. This ancient trick of personification is singularly fine and poetical, but to men of sense it is insufferable stuff. Fashion is not a thingfar less is it a tyrant having a will and enforcing it by "appropriate legislation." Fashion is an abstraction and there is no "decree" in this matter at all-nothing compelling women to dress other-wise than they would naturally choose to dress. Somewhat to blunt the edge of the ridicule which they are dumbly oncious of deserving without clearly knowing how; somewhat to deflect the malice pointed and wit-feathered jokes that flit about their ears; somewhat to abate the contempt which they suspect us of making with our pretty speeches and playful bandinage, they personify their voluntary folly and ask our com-passion in the misfortune of having to submit to it! If this kind of thing were in need of a name it might prefer a tol-of divine effrontery.

Within the brief period represented by the lifetime of a single generation ince women last trundled their horrible hoops up on everything vertical least, to have made a notable advance along the highways leading to the light. They have been given their "higher education," have taken it in mighty blobs and dollops, and doubtless digested some of it. They have mingled more freely with men, and more and more nearly on the same footing. They have deprived one another of support by driving men out of employment and taking the places themselves. They have stopped having our babies and be gun having our estates They write for the new-papers as badly as the best of us, and when a woman starts in to "stump the State" the boldest hold their breath. We shall now see whether they have or have not grown really wiser than their mothers were when this generation was addicted to suction of its thumb and to kneading of its pudgy knuckles into its browless eyes. In either case—unless, indeed, the improvement is many times greater than even themselves affirm—they will don the unspeakable hoop; but if they have learned anything worth knowing they will spare us the clotted nonsense about "the tyranny of Fashion." And that, like their pericardia, will cover a multi tude of sins.

We shall have abundant discussion

erably fair claim to the "style and title" of underlying causes—of what "compels" women to "follow" fashions that are conspicuously unpleasing: now surmounting their ears with their shoulders, and anon losing their hands in "caverns, measureless to man," of sleeve; at one time muckraking the sidewalks with a foul following of train, at anoth-er getting on fairly well with clean sknts and supportable stockings; in one decade drawing back their hair with so severe a tension that they were unable to shut their eyes, in the next hiding their foreheads with a fringe of toasted fluff as if foreheads were indelicate; now ensausaging themselves in skirts so narrow that to walk 14 a pain and to stand still an offence against the law, and again dispanding their apparel balconly and enacting the role of clapper in a bell; constant only in defiling their faces and accentuating the punitory domain of the maternal slipper—this las-cinating theme of women's motives in making herself variously hideous will receive large attention and copious exthat the female of our species is possessed of, or rather by, a consuming, in-cessant and probably immortal sense of her personal appearance. No explanation is possible except that of an acute active, vigilant and enterprising discontent with her looks, leading naturally and necessarily to perpetual experiment. Between the costuming of man and woman there is seldom, in point of beauty and fitness, much to choose. If woman's is womanly the more unuterable, man's is always a good second. But he is not continually tinkering it.

One year with another it is pretty much the same: the changes are no greater than tailors, hatters and haberdashers

can effect without consulting his taste at all, but relying on his good-natured acceptance; so long as they do not go too far he will not consider "too curiously." The great mu ations require for their full development whole centuries of slow and unnoted growth. This is significant: it proves that man does not give his mind to the matter. Woman does. But that is not a particularly noble example of munificence.

If man, hard-hatted, tail-coated, his arms and legs thrust into tubes, can find it in his conscience to complain of wo-man's circumferruginous expansionand his own hideousness being uniform, that is to say, sufferable, he has the right—let him apply the only practical remedy. All that he can say and write will only magnify the disaster and speed its approach. If God in his infinite goodness, male reader mine, has given you a wife and daughters the thing for you to do is to forbid them to make themselves odious under penalty of severed relations. If the Divine favor has been loss abundantly bestowed, and household angels have not come to glad your life, make it a rule of the life which they have not come to glad never to have anything to do with the household angels of your neighbor un less they are seriously attired, if attired at all. If a woman or a girl choose to exercise her indisputable right of making you ashamed to be seen with her you may justly exercise your equally indubitable right of not being seen with her. If this do not affect the spectacular sex with a lively sense of Mr. Clough's veracity, and fetch them out of the tents of the wicked like rats before the catcher, I'm a nail in a board!

OPERA HOUSE NOTES.

"A Breezy Time."

As a direct refutation of the statement that farce comedies are dead here comes "A Breezy Time," at the Grand Opera House, Saturday evening March 11 It is an out-and-out farce comedy put together simply and solely for the purpose of making as many laughs as possible and leaving altogether out of the question the rise and fall of the American drama, has been thoroughly condensed and rewritten since last year, and although the salient features of 1891 and 1892 have been retained, enough new material has been injected into it to make it well worth seeing, even for a second time. The piece has more pretty women than climaxes, more comic surprises than counter-plots, and more catchy music than ingeniously worked-up situa-tions, but to use American vernacu-lar, "it goes." It not only goes, but it goes with a rush, and the principal causes of this result are E. B. Fitz, the comedian, and Kathryn Webster, the soubrette.

"Surrender." One of the most important dramatic vents of the season will be the introduction at the Grand Opera House on Friday evening, March 10, of the admirable organization which has just been presenting "Surrender" for a long engagement at the Schiller Theater in Chicago. The company brings an entirely new and original play "Surrender" from the pen of Augustus Thomas, whose "Alabama" alone would have made him famous. "Surrender" is a domestic comedy of the render" is a domestic comedy of the war and the comedy includes such players as W. H. Crompton, Clement Bainbridge, Burr McIntosh, Henry Woodruff, W. J. OVER THE WIRES.

I had been traveling all the afternoon, and it was with a feeling of disgust that I alighted at the little station of D—, where I must wait five hours for the train to take me to the city. There was no one in the station but the station master, and as misery loves company we were soon on friendly

As the evening wore on I occupied myself in examining the railway maps and in finishing a novel which I purchased that afternoon on the train. At about 11 o'clock I heard the dull and laborious puff of a freight engine approaching in the distance. Louder and louder the noise became, until suddenly with a glare from the headlight the great locomotive thundered by the little window, and in a moment the heavy train rolled away in the direction from which I had come a few hours before. Silence again fell upon us. We continued our talk, interspersed now and then with moments of quietness, broken only by the frequent clicking of the telegraph instrunt on the table under the window. At last I finished my novel and once more sat idly tossing about my watch charm. The station master was sitting opposite me, with his feet on the edge of the telegraph table, while he carelessly ran over the columns of a newspaper. I was on the point of making some remark, when suddenly there came a sharp clicking of the instrument. My com-panion sprang to the table and answered the call. Instantly I saw that something unusual had happened. As the little brass key clicked off the message I saw the station master's face grow white, then livid. He rose quickly from the chair, placed his hands over his eyes and almost shouted: 'My God! What have I done?"

I sprang to his side, asking him what was the trouble. He rudely pushed me away, and with a look which I shall never forget fairly yelled: "Don't speak to me! Don't speak to me!" Then he sank into the chair with his hands convulsively grasping the arms. But it was only for a moment. Quickly gathering himself, he drew up to the table, and then followed some of the most exciting moments that I have ever ex-wondering what it all meant, yet realizing that something must have occurred in which he was an important actor, I closely fixed my eyes upon kim. No sound save the spasmodic ticking of the machine and the heavy breathing of its operator was audible. He sat bolt upright in his chair, his left hand on the arm, his right busy with the key. His eyes were riveted on the table before him. For a minute he was busy with his message, and then silence. And what a silence! Not a muscle moved; not a sound could be heard. Even the agent's breathing had stopped. He watched his machine with the gaze of a lynx. I stood behind him, my heart throbbing with anxiety and fear.

At last after a silence which seemed ages the machine began to click. I watched him while the message came forth from the wires. It was evidently a satisfactory reply, for he did not appear more agitated. Then the machine stopped. He rose from his chair and came toward me. It needed no words to tell me that he had suffered during those five minutes. Great drops of sweat rolled down his cheeks. His hands shook through anxiety. Placing them both on my shoulders, he addressed me thus in a hurried and impassioned voice:

"I don't wonder that you're surprised. Heaven knows that I was awfully fright ened-but listen. I got orders this afternoon to stop the freight train which just went by here on our turnout. I was to detain it until the Boston express should arrive and then allow it to go on, but some-how or other I forgot the order, as you know, and didn't think about it till a few minutes ago.
"Soon after it went I heard from B-two stations above here, saying that the express had just left there for this station. You see it doesn't stop at A-, the one between here and B-. That message reminded me of my mistake, and now the express and freight had both been running toward the same station. If the express had arrived there first and left before the freight got there, or they had not received my message, then—then"—

He paused in his rapid talk and said in an awful voice: "Then there'd have been a collision, and I'd be to blame, but God knows that I didn't mean to forget to obey that order!" said he impulsively. "There was only one thing to be done—telegraph to A—, telling them to hold over the train that had arrived there first. That I did. For five minutes, as you saw, I waited in mortal agony for the answer to that message. It came just now. Said that neither train had arrived, and that they'd hold over the one that got there first. So thank God! I was not too late and that everything is all right." He sank into a chair and folded his arms on his breast. Hardly had he done this when the ticker began again. He read the message, and then, as the clicking stopped, he bowed his head on his hands and sobbed aloud. The message was: "Have stopped axpress here. Will hold over as directed."

The Boston train reached D- half an now completely calmed down, I boarded the sleeper and soon went rolling toward life and civilization.

Two weeks later I came across a country paper from the vicinity in which my adventure with the ticket agent took place, and I noticed this article:

"Much to the surprise of his friends, Mr. John Huss, the popular and trusted station master of D-, last week resigned his position and has now, we learn, removed to New York. We wish him much success in his new quarters."—Herman Babson in Amherst Literary Monthly.

Where Colonels Congregate.

Many of our older hotels gain renown through association with particular classes of men who frequent them. In this way the National has come to be known as a typ-ical ancient southern hotel, noted for the number of its guests who possess titles, military or civil. "I was conversing with a military friend recently in the lobby of the National," said Senator Dubois, "when he left me, moving but a few paces away to converse with a mutual acquaintance. The lobby was well filled at the time. Desiring to speak with my friend, I called to him, 'Oh, I say, colonel!' and do you know 17 men stepped up."—Kate Field's Washing-ton.

Both Sides Alike.

"Darling," said the young man as he tenderly raised the lovely head from the place where it had rested an hour or more, got up, sat down again on the other side of the beautiful maiden, and once more drew the golden curls to his bosom you have no objection to this slight change of position, have you?"
"No, Alfred," she murmured softly;

'your heart is on this side." "Yes, my angel," responded the young man, his voice trembling with deep feeling, "and my vest will now be soiled alike on both sides."—London Tit-Bits.

HIS CHOICE.

Just at the time when the earth was full of joy and it was hardest to die, for sweet flowers were blooming, two men took the road to heaven, a rich man and a poor one. They had lived next door to each other on earth, the poor man in a hut, while a sump tuous house was the rich man's abode.

But death makes no difference, and so it happened that they both died at the same time, and now they were walking in silence near each other.

But the road was very steep, and the rich man found it hard work and soon fell be-

The poor man reached heaven quicker, but he was afraid to knock, so he sat down quietly and thought: 'Let me wait for my neighbor; perhaps he dares knock at the gate. After a long time the rich man arrived, and finding heaven closed began to shake the gate violently, making such a nois that Peter came running breathlessly, and on seeing the two men said to the rich one: "That was you, no doubt, who could not wait. I should not think you would care to make yourself so conspicuous, for we have no good reports of you in heaven. But we will see what next. Come both in"- and Peter helped the poor man rise. They found themselves in an immense hall, with many doors and benches along

"Sit here and rest," said Peter, "and profit

well by my absence to decide what you wish, for your wish will be fully granted. Only consider well, for there is no chance later, and forget nothing before it is too

When Peter returned, he asked if they had made up their minds. The rich man jumped up at once and said he wanted a magnificent house, better than a king's palace, and the best of foods every day-roasts and vegetables and jams and chocolate then a comfortable armchair, and a beautiful wrapper of green satin, and the daily paper, so he might know the news. Peter looked at him sadly and asked:

"And nothing else?" "Oh, yes; I also want my cellars full of

"Very well," and Peter opened one of the many doors and led the rich man into just such a palace as he had asked for, and told him he would find all as he had wished it

And so it was.

But when year after year had passed, and he had counted all his gold and had every day a good dinner, and the paper had lost its interest because it talked of people and things that were new to him, he found the time long, and he yawned.

"What can I do?" he thought. But he had all he had asked, for and he could have And a hundred, two hundred and then a thousand years passed. At last Peter opened the door again.

"Well," said he, "how do you like it?"

Then the man became very angry, "How do I like it?" he said. "I do not like it at all-I hate it! How could you have such a iserable place in heaven?" "In heaven?" says Peter. "But you are in hell, for you have wished for your own hell. Did you think we burned all sin-ners? Oh, no. Those were old times. We now let people choose their own hell." Terrified, the man sinks in his chair Oh, yes, he knows now he is in hell and eternity before him. He turns pitifully to Peter and says: "And how long is eternity?"

"Without end." He began to weep bitterly, and Peter, feeling sorry, led him to the top of the house, and there through a crack in the wall he saw into heaven, but he had to stand on the tips of his toes and stretch his

There sat God in all his glory and all his angels round him, and all was joy!
"Oh, how beautiful!" cries the poor rich man. "But, tell me, Peter, who is the man sitting at God's feet?"

"This is the poor man who lived near you on earth. After I had given you time to wish and returned to ask him what he wanted he begged for a little bench to sit at the feet of God, and his wish was granted, just as yours was granted to you.

And Peter walked noiselessly away be fore the rich man was aware of it, for he was still gazing into heaven, standing painfully on the very tip of his toes.

And when Peter returned after a thousand years the rich man was still looking longingly into heaven, forgetting all other things and unmindful of pain or fatigue.

He did not hear Peter, who, putting his hand on the man's shoulder, said gently:

Foot Binding In China.

Proof that the Chinese woman is not a labor burdened slave we find in the custom of foot binding. This heathenish attempt to improve on God's best work of creation is said by one tradition to have begun with P'an Fei, a concubine of the Ch'i dynasty, 501 A. D., and by another to have begun with Yas Niang, a beautiful concubine of with Yas Niang, a beautiful concurrent the last emperor of the southern T'ang dynasty, 975 A. D., whose feet were "cramped in the samplance of a new moon." Tradition also says that it originated with a beautiful princess who had club feet, and by resorting to this method completely concealed her deformity.

Still another tradition says it was resorted to by a crusty husband to keep his wife from "going a-gadding," and as it worked so well it was resorted to by others, until, becoming a fashion, it was adopted by all. Wherever the custom may have originated, it is but little worse than the custom o ladies lacing in civilized countries and adds as little in beauty to the person on whom it is practiced. The best evidence attributes to Yas Niang.-Isaac T. Headland in Water Power and Electric Lights.

In nearly all the northwestern states which are hilly or mountainous water powers are abundant. Swift streams are flowing down everywhere. These are just what electricians want. Finding a stream anywhere within 5 or 10 miles of a thriving town, they are ready to light that town and furnish power cheaper than it ever could be furnished by the use of coal. This, to a great extent, is the practical solution of the question of cheap lights, heat and power. It will not be available in many large cities, although it has never been settled as to the distance that this power can be transmitted with economy.-Ex-

THE GUILD PIANO AGAIN.

"Mr. Geo. M. Guild, Boston, has received a special silver medal from the Massachusetts Charitable Mechanics Association for the Guild Piano. This is very strong endorsement for the instrument of Mr. Guild's manufacture. The Association is a prominent one and the findings of its judges are highly respected. Guild's manufactures have won many honors in past years and these distinctions have always been acquired upon the merits of his productions. Inasmuch as there was strong competition in the recent exposition, Mr. Guild must feel elated over walking off with such high honors."

The above is from "The Presto" of Jan. 19, 1893, a leading musical journa published in Chicago.

God gave unto the world a flower, Within a sacred bit of clay: It grew in beauteous form most rare, Increased in sweetness, day by day.

Its beauty was a priceless gem, Its periume, like the dew of peace, Each petal was an attribute Of His own goodness, love and grace.

It gave its sweetness to the world True as the sunshine from the skies, Inspired all souls with happiness, And now it gladdens paradise.

It kissed all things with blessing sweet, Entwined its tendrils 'round each heart, God's hand then plucked the flower from earth For this was His own precious-part.

And Angels now gaze on this flower In wonder at its beauty bright, For with another flower as fair, 'Tis blossoming 'neath Heaven's light. HERBERT RANDALL, Ann Arbor, Mich., March, 1893.

The 25th annual meeting of the Charitable Union was held on Thursday afternoon, March 2. The following officers were elected by ballot for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. Celia Jaycox; secretary, Mrs. M. L. D'Ooge; and treasurer, Mrs. Philip Bach. Mrs. Phebe Steele was elected vice-president by acclamation. Mrs. J. M. Wheeler, Mrs. Eliza R. Sunderland, Mrs. J. C. Knowlton, Mrs. Benjamin Day, Mrs. A. B. Prescott and Mrs. Gilbert were appointed as executive board.

The ward committees were appointed as follows. 1st ward-Mrs. Jaycox, Mrs. Gilbert, Mrs. J. M. Gelston; 2nd ward-Mrs. Bacb, Mrs. Douglas; 3rd ward-Mrs. Junius Beal, Mrs. Riley; 4th ward-Miss Henning, Mrs. R. A. Beal, Mrs. Parker, Mrs. J. C. Knowlton; 5th ward-Miss Brown; 6th ward -Mrs. Butts, Mrs. Steele, Mrs. Dr.

An amendment to the constitution was adopted changing the name from Ladies' to Woman's Charitable Union.

The report of the secretary, Mrs. M. L. D'Ooge for the past year ended March, 1893, was read as follows:

"Another twelve months have passed away and we are brought to the 25th annual meeting of the Charitable Union. During a quarter of a century it has carried on its labors of love and mercy, blessing and may we not also say, receiving blessing. It would indeed be difficult rightly to estimate the good accomplished and the amount of suffering relieved during these

"The past year has been one of less activity than usual. Fewer visits have been made and received and fewer families assisted. We believe however this is due not to any decrease of interest in the work of the Union, but rather to the fact that not so many as heretofore have been in need of assistance. There have always been both money and clothing, which could be distributed if needed.

"By the ward committees 137 visits have been made upon the poor and 74 visits have been received. Between 35 and 40 families have been assisted Second hand clothing valued at $86.50 has been given those in need, in addition to $5.00 worth of new clothing, which was purchased at the sewing school and distributed. During the year $40.00 worth of clothing has been donated to the Union.

"We wish to express our thanks to the Sunday Schools of the Methodist and Congregational churches for gifts at Christmas time. Through the kindness of many friends we were enabled to distribute 29 Thanksgiving dinners. Special donations have been received from Mrs. Angell, Mrs. R. A. Beal, and Mrs. Elisha Jones and from Schairer & Millen. As heretofore the city papers have been most kind in publishing all our notices free of charge.

"During the past 12 months there has not been a great amount of sickness amoung our beneficiaries. Whenever medicines have been needed, they have been bought.

"Owing to home duties Miss Brown has been able to hold the sewing school only five months of the year. It is now again in session and will doubtless b as useful as in preceding years.

"The average attendance at the monthly meetings has been small, numbering but eight. Generally it is only the officers and members of the ward committees who are present. This has doubtless been in part due to the irclement weather and very difficult walking which have prevailed during the winter, but we would gladly welcome a larger number.

"Before closing this report, mention should be made of the serious accident which, since our last meeting, has hap-pened to our vice-president. Mrs. Steele has been connected with the Union from its very beginning, and with the exception of Mrs. Gilbert is the only lady now in Ann Arbor of whom this is true. In 1877 she was chosen secretary and held that office until 1882. In 1883 she was made vice-president and has continued in this position until the present time. She has been one of the executive board or on the ward committees since 1875 and notwithstanding her advanced age, has been active in her labors for the poor. We shall greatly miss her at the month-ly meetings, at which, when possible she never failed to be present. It is sant to remember that she presided at the February meeting.

"We are told that the poor we shall always have with us, and therefore we are sure there will be no lack of work for this organization during the next quarter of a century. We trust abund ant means will be contributed, that the good work will not be hampered by any lack of funds, and also that wis dom may be given to those in charge that they may direct the work as shall be for the best advantage."

Scrofula-Impure Vaccination-Beyond Hope

But Hood's Sarsaparilla Effected a Perfect Cure

Joseph Harper Trenton, N. J.

"Weare as sure that Hood's Sarsaparilla saved our son Joseph's life as that the sun shines Five years ago on board ship our three boys were vaccinated. Joseph had a very sore arm, so bad at one time that we were afraid it would have to be taken off. At length it seemed to get well, but about two months after, he began to complain of soreness and pain in the vaccinated arm. He had occasionally shown some signs of scrofula, but nothing serious. His arm, however, grew worse and worse and became swollen and covered with sores. The inflammation and sores also spread all ever his bedy, and he was a mass of corruption,

We had to cut off all his hair we could, as it was impossible to comb through the mass of hard crust and matter. Physicians did him no good, and three specialists at the Eye and Ear Hospital said

Nothing Could be Done. They said it was a blood disease caused by impure vaccination. One night I happened to be reading in a paper about Hood's Sarsaparilla, and decided to try it. "While taking the first bottle, Joseph did not grow any worse; on the second, we noticed that he was improving, and, slowly but surely, the medicine drove away the disease and won a complete victory. The scales and scabs began to fall off; the sores gradually healed up, and

LITERARY NOTES.

The February Arena contains part two of Helen Campbell's "Women Wage-Earners," and the second paper by Dr. W. J. Rolfe in the defence of Shakespeare. Proportional Representation is discussed by W. D. McCracken, and Compulsory Arbitration by Rabbi Solomon Schindler.-The Arena Pub. Co., Boston, Mass.

Mr. Howells is most certainly to be congratulated upon the felicity of description, and cleverness of expression, with which he is depicting the Bohemian artist life of New York City in his latest novel, "The Coast of Bohemia." This charming story is one of the most noticable of the many features of the March Ladies Home Journal. - The Curtis Pub. Co., Philadelphia, Penn.

The Magazine of American History for February has for its frontispiece a portrait of the late Martha J. Lamb. The opening article is by the new editor, Gen. James Grant Wilson, entitled: "Society in New York City in the Early Days of the Republic." Dr. Washington Gladden is at present taking the place of Phillips Brooks in lectures to students at Harvard University. His "Cosmopolis City Crub," now appearing in The Century, has been particularly timely and useful in communities where a fight for good government happens to be going on. The first article, which appeared a week before the city primary elections in Allegheny, Pennsylvania, is said to have had a de cided influence in the campaign conducted by the Citizen's Reform Association of that city.-The Century Co., New York, N. Y.

The Nation for Feb. 23 contains some excellent comments on Mr. Cleveland's New Cabinet and the consequent flurry it has occasioned in the ranks of "The Machine" and its followers. Under the title; "Americanism" it contrasts true "Americanism" with the" Americanistic" feelings and sentiments of a perverted patriotism as manifested in the hot haste to annex Hawaii without giving the Queens party a hearing-feelings that might much better be expended in extending local and municipal reforms at home.-The Nation, Box 794, New York, N. Y.

As the angling season draws nigh, the interest in the literature of this delightful pastime grows apace, and the fisherman's only organ on the Continent-The American Angler-meets the the demand with an attractive issue for February. All the papers of this number are interesting and instructive. "Autumn Days on Huron Island"(illustrated), by John W. Matthews, describes, with much charm and portrai ture, an outing on the Upper Mississippi. "Fish and Fishing in America" (illustrated), by Wm. C. Harris, is the tenth paper on this subject and treats of that peculiar fish, the Johnny Grindle or dogfish. "A Black Bass Outing on Ohio Waters" (illustrated), by N. C. Morgan, is graphic in description of the wonderful qualities of a fishing chum. "Seining in Albemarle Sound" (illustrated), by Frank A. Hayward, describes the methods of commercial fishing in this fruitful water. "The Grass River Country-New York State" (illustrated), by H. H. Thompson, opens up a new and grand sporting section to tourists. "The Notes and Queries" Department where the editor communes with his readers, is as usual fell of pratical, instructive and entertaining matter. The American Angler, $2.00 a year, 19, Park Place, New York.

"The Bioon is the Life,"

Runs the old saying, and everything that ever makes part of any organ of the body must reach its place therein through the blood. Therefore, if the blood is purified and kept in good con-dition by the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla t necessarily follows that the benefit of the medicine is imparted to every organ of the body. Can anything be simpler than the method by which this excellent medicine gives good health to all who will try it fairly and patiently?

Years ago Dr. Pierce found out that the secret of all scrofula, bronchial, throat and lung trouble lay—in the beginning at least—in impure blood and the weak tone of the system; that the way to cure these effects was to remove by to cure these effects was to remove he cause, that human nature being the ame, the same results might be looked for in nearly all cases. Nature's Surest Ally.

If nature did not struggle against disease, even in weakly constitutions, swift indeed would be the course of a malady to its fatal termination. While nature thus struggles let us, lest worse befall us, aid her efforts with judicial medical help. Experience must be our guide in battles with disease, and that "lamp to our feet" indicates Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as a safe tried and thorough ally of nature. If the blood be infected with bile, if the bowels and stomach are inactive, if the kidneys fail to expel impurities of which they are the natural outlet, a course of the Bitters is the surest reliance of the sufferer, one, moreover, that is sanctioned by professional indorsement and use for nearly half a century. No American or foreign remedy has earned greater distinction as a remedy for and preventative of chronic liver comple malaria, constipation, kidney and rheu-matic trouble and debility.

HOW TO FUMIGATE A ROOM.

Practical Directions for the Performance of an Important Service.

The proper way to fumigate a room is to close the doors, windows, fireplace, etc., pasting strips of paper over all the cracks. Fumigation by burning sulphur is most easily accomplished. Two pounds of sulphur should be allowed for every room from ten to twelve feet square. It is better to divide it up and put it in several pans rather than burn the entire quantity of sulphur used in one pan. To avoid the danger of fire these pans should be set on bricks, or in other and larger pans filled with water or with sand.

After pouring a little alcohol on the sulphur and properly placing the pans about the room, the farthest from the door of exit should be lighted first; the others in order. The operator will need to move quickly, for no one can breathe sulphurous fumes with safety. After closing the door the cracks around it should be pasted up, as was done within the room.

Six hours at least is generally necessary to fumigate a room properly; at the end of that time it may be entered and the windows opened, and they should be left open as long as is convenient, even for a week, if possible. After fumigation, a thorough process of cleansing should be instituted. At least the walls and ceiling should be rubbed dry; much the better way is to whitewash and repaper. The floor, and the woodwork, and the furniture should be scrubbed with a solution of carbolic acid or some other disinfectant.

"Anything I had the courage to be. I would delight in battles, in charges, inheavens!"

The exclamation was occasioned by a horseman who had approached while they were talking. They had not noticed him till he had opened the gate and was half way between it and the house Laura sank into a seat; all color left her cheeks and her heart seemed to stop

'Well, you haven't far to go." "Good night, sir."

"Good night." Mark went back to Laura. She had not recovered from her fright, and he was obliged to wait a few moments before he could get a word from her.

"I suppose you think me a dreadful coward," she said at last. "After all, I'm only a woman.'

"Not cowardly for yourself; for a poor devil whose neck is in a halter."

"Yes, I'm only a girl, but I own the life of a brave man, a soldier, a reckless monster, a fiend, a spy." "Anything else?"

"There are no more words to express what I mean. "Laura," called Mrs. Fain, "if you're going to stay out any later you'd better get a shawl." "I'm going in, mamma."

They walked into the house together. Mr. Rhett, of South Carolina, made a few commonplace remarks to Mrs. Fain and then begged to be excused, as he had been prospecting during the day and was very tired. He bowed low to the ladies and then went up stairs.

CHAPTER XVII. SURPRISED.

The next morning Mark hearing a tap at the door got out of bed and opened it cautiously. As was natural under the circumstances, he saw danger in everything that occurred. He half expected to see through the slight opening he at first made the muzzle of a revolver pointing directly at him. He saw a very different sight. It was a large tumbler, with a straw in it, on a silver tray in the hands of a negro. "Mrs. Fain's compliments, sah," and he handed Mark a mint julep. "Ah!" exclaimed Mark, with intense satisfaction. "Present my compliments to your mistress, and tell her I perceive with pleasure that this noble Virginia custom has found its way into Tennessee, as it has long ago into South Carolina." "Yes, sah!"

"There are alleviating circumstances even in the life of a spy," said Mark, contemplating the beverage, "uncertain as that life is. Why will man not always be a philosopher? Here I am in a beautifully furnished room; have been sleeping between the whitest linen, on the softest of beds. I arise and behold this delicate attention on the part of my hostess, who, if she should know who I am, would bring a dozen bayonets to hedge me in, and I should be waving in the soft summer breeze at the end of a hemp cord in twelve hours. But she does not know who I am, and, considered philosophically, I am Mr. Rhett, of South Carolina, and in clover. Here's to Private Mark Malone, poor devil!" However, Mark desired to keep his head cool, considering the circumstances, and contented himself with a few swallows of the julep, and after completing his toilet joined the ladies at the break-fast table. He praised Mrs. Fain's fried chicken and light biscuit and corn bread, and was about to give the coffee a few words of encomium when, tasting it beforehand, he discovered the prevailing chicory. So he entered upon a

And the worst of it is," she went on, I tirade against the blockade, and ended by hoping that Abe Lincoln would at last be hanged higher than Haman, a reference that gave him a disagreeable sensation about the neck and caused Laura's bosom to heave tumultuously.

The comforts surrounding Mark, the kindness of his hostess, and above all the presence of a girl whose bosom seemed to contain such volcanic forces as would best harmonize with one whose chief object in life seemed to be to get himself hanged, conspired to make him feel a safety that he should not have felt under the circumstances. He had been campaigning for a year, during which period he had experienced no greater comfort than a McClellan saddle, and the women of the country through which he had passed had not received him with any marked evidences of pleasure. Is it to be wondered that he felt approximate content-if one can feel content whose neck is in a halter-in the Fain manor house? But Mark had something else on his mind which he knew was of more importance than his own safety, though its value, if he should possess it, would be dependent on that safety. He wanted some indication of where the enemy would strike. He was not so foolhardy as to think of going back to Chattanooga himself, but he resolved to send a messenger. If he could find some one to go to town that day, the latest news could be brought him in the evening. Then he would assume a disguise and be off in the night.

After breakfast he took his pipe and went out to smoke in the yard. He sauntered around to the barn and found

Daniel at work upon the horses. "Daniel," he said, "good morning." "Mornen, sah," said Daniel, eying him

Mark was standing very near Daniel, and suddenly turned and looked him in the eye, knowingly. "Daniel," said he, "are you all right on the cause of freedom?" 'Reckon I air, sah."

"Suppose you had a chance to favor that cause, the cause which if it triumphs will make all darkies free, would "Reckon I would, sah."

"Never mind who I am, Daniel. I'm a Union man. Now I want you to go into Chattanooga and learn all you can of the latest army news. Don't trust your own eyes, but ask people what's going on. I want to know if troops are eaving Chattanooga, and if so, where they are going. Here are ten dollars. Buy some things for the old woman and

When Mark finished smoking he went into the house. He passed into the library, where he found Laura. She seemed to feel easier than when Mark had been up stairs, but she was in continual dread. Mark asked her to sit on a sofa facing one window while he sat facing another. "Then we'll have the position enfiladed," he said.

Laura did not understand what that meant, but she did as he desired.

They sat thus without suffering the watch to relax during three delightful hours-delightful notwithstanding the danger Mark was in. Laura wanted an account of his adventures in Chattanooga and he gave it. When she came to Souri's part in his escape Laura was visibly affected; indeed so intensely were her feelings wrought upon by this portion of the story that she started at every sound, realizing the more perfectly that Mark's neck was still in jeop-

Then came an account of the trial; the march to the courtroom; the waiting for the counsel; the arrival of Captain Cameron Fitz Hugh.

"Captain Cameron Fitz Hugh!" Then it was all out that Laura's lover had defended the spy, and Laura confessed that she was Fitz Hugh's betrothed. In the midst of the excitement attending all this Mrs. Fain entered carrying a silver tray, on which was a basket of cake and a decanter and glasses. "A little luncheon may not be amiss,

Mr. Rhett," she said. "I don't know your South Carolina customs in such matters, but my daughter and I occasionally take a biscuit at this hour."

Mark rose and faced about. His hand went to his heart and he bowed low. Laura, too, rose and stood looking at her "Madam," said Mark, "can I ever for-

"If you will discover the ore you seek on our property I shall feel amply repaid," said the lady sententiously. "Trust me, madam, I will have diligent search made." "Are you a geologist?"

"None but a geologist would be hunting for ore in the government service." Mark stood with the stem of a wine glass between his thumb and finger, appropriating to himself such impresse ment as would naturally fill the breast of a South Carolina geologist hunting for iron with which to make cannons for the government.

"That is a fascinating study," remarked Mrs. Fain, who was a great reader and a very intelligent woman. Now Mark, though an educated man and born to a taste for the sciences, unfortunately knew less about the profession he had temporarily adopted than any other.

"There are some curious geological facts," Mrs. Fain went on, "which always interest me. I was reading yesterday that a famous geologist has said that centuries-I have forgotten how many -were consumed while Niagara falls were wearing their way from Lewiston to the present site. How long was it, professor? I'm sure you have that title." "It could not have been less than five hundred years, madam," said Mark, laying great stress on the figures as something enormous.

"Five hundred? I thought it was something like twenty thousand!" Mark perceived that he had made a gross blunder, but it would never do for him to acknowledge it. "I am aware," he said, "that such is the opinion of a certain school of geologists with more assurance than brains. I refer to those scoffers who are continuously trying to find evidence against the Mosaic account of creation, but I regard their position untenable. There was a pleased look on Mrs. Fain's countenance. She belonged to the Baptist denomination, and believed thoroughly that the world was made in six days of twenty-four hours each.

"Professor," she said, withdrawing from the room at the same time, "I trust that you will remain in the neighborhood a long while, and I beg you to honor us by making this house your home in the meantime.

Mark was standing with a half filled glass of wine in his left hand, while his right was on his heart. Mrs. Fain made her exit through the door by which she had come, opening into the dining room. As the door closed Mark was bending to the floor, admirably representing a South Carolina gentleman of the olden time.

He heard something like a low cryhalf surprised, half terror-from Laura. Turning quickly toward her he saw her eyes fixed in a stare on some object at the door opening into the hall. Another turn of his head and there stood the figure of Captain Cameron Fitz Hugh. Twice before had Mark seen that face, once when Fitz Hugh had approached the Fain house the morning Mark had left it for Chattanooga, and once when the young Confederate had defended No sooner had Captain Fitz Hugh laid eyes on Mark's face than he recognized the spy he had defended at Chattanooga. "Professor," he said coolly, "you are very adroit."

Mark turned scarlet, and then ashy pale. For a moment it seemed that his legs would not support him. It required time for him to collect himself to make any reply whatever.

"Since you are so good at extricating yourself from difficulties, you have a fine opportunity to show your skill now." Fitz Hugh spoke with his hand on the handle of his pistol. "May I trouble you to throw up your hands, professor?" "It is not necessary" said Mark. "I am unarmed."

A picture of his certain fate flashed across his mind, and he wished Fitz Hugh would shoot him. "On your word of honor?" "Why do you ask such a question?

You know that I am an arch deceiver.' "At any rate, you are a gentleman. Never mind throwing up your hands." Meanwhile Mark had been giving his heart time to cease thumping, and had gathered his wits.

Laura remained silent, staring at them both as though she had lost her reason. Had she a hundred things to say her tongue could not have been made to utter one.

Mark turned toward Fitz Hugh and looked him square in the face. He had conceived an idea; a forlorn hope, it is true, still a hope. Quick to discern peo-ple's peculiarities, he had gotten an insight into Fitz Hugh's character when that officer had defended him at Chattanooga. He now resolved to take advantage of that knowledge.

"Captain," he said, "notwithstanding the position in which you saw me a few days ago, notwithstanding the painful situation in which you see me now, you have on both occasions done me the honor to consider me a gentleman. I assume to a perception in this respect not less keen than yours. Indeed so sure am I of the delicacy, the refinement of your instincts, that I feel perfectly safe under this roof."

"How so?" asked Fitz Hugh, surprised. "I am the guest of that young lady." Mark stood with his arm outstretched, his finger pointing to Laura Fain. Laura gave a glance at Mark as he spoke, which caught the eye of Captain Fitz Hugh. It contained admiration, devotion. Fitz Hugh gazed from one to the other without a word.

"I need not explain further, captain," Mark added. "A gentleman cannot mistake my position; only a gentleman can understand it."

"You mean, sir," said Fitz Hugh, 'that I cannot honorably enter this house and profit or cause my country to profit by what I find here without the consent of the inmates."

"Mrs. Fain is the acknowledged head of this house, and she is evidently deceived. But I concede to Miss Fain the right to speak for her. I acknowledge Miss Fain's right to hold me to this secret, if any one has such a right. But when Miss Fain shall have been fully advised of all the facts"-"Pardon me; she knows all you

"Then when Miss Fain shall have duly considered the interests of her country I am quite sure she will give

The attention of both men became fixed upon Laura, for it was evident that she would be called upon to make a decision between her country and her lover on the one hand and the defenseless Union spy on the other. She was standing near the sofa on which she had been sitting, steadying herself by resting her hand on the back of a chair. It was a moment of intensest feeling to all three. Laura knew the sterling worth, the high sense of honor and duty of her lover. She knew that if she held him to secrecy he would consider it evidence that she permitted her interest in the spy to overwhelm her sense of duty. And would he not attribute her protection to something more tender than an ordinary interest? Fitz Hugh realized her position; indeed there seemed to flash into both of them the feeling that her decision would lie between two men-her lover and the Federal spy. With Mark it was a question of life or death.

"Miss Fain-Laura," said Fitz Hugh, peaking slowly and impressively, "I ask your permission to give up this impostor-pardon me, sir, for the plainness of my language; it is essential—this spy, who desires to carry information north to the detriment of our country; who seeks the defeat of our cause—the cause in which your brother is every day risking his life; lastly-though this may be a matter of small importance—the cause for which I, your lover, would lay down my life as I would lay it down for you. It seems to me that it is a question be tween your duty and your inclination, Does it seem so to you?"

"Then tell me, may I send for a guard to take him?"

Laura's eyes shown like those of a tigress at bay. In a firm, clear voice,

For a few moments there was the stillness of death.

"She has decided in your favor, sir," said Fitz Hugh, whose color left his cheek when Laura spoke the little word that decided his and Mark's fate. "You have nothing to fear from me." Then turning to Laura:

"I can understand the motive, the temptation. The act remains." "You may consider yourself released from all ties with one whose act you do not approve," said Laura. 'Be it so," and he turned to go.

Mark sprang forward and seized him "My God, this shall not be! You believe that this is due to more than an ordinary womanly interest in Miss Fain forme. It is not so. I swear to you, on the honor of a gentleman and a soldier, that Miss Fain has manifested no other feeling than one of commiseration for a man hunted for his life." "Your words do you credit, sir. Miss Fain, will you make my adieus to your mother? And I leave it to you to impart to her whatever, if anything, you may have to say as to the reason for my farewell to you.' He turned quickly and left the room.

Our Municipal Honor.

The approach of the annual city elections brings up again the question of the existence of abuses in our municipal government, grave charges having been preferred on the one hand, and these charges repelled on the other as wanton attacks upon the fair fame of our city.

There are two ways of attempting to protect the honor of a community or of an individual. One is to attempt to prevent all evil reports from circulation, to repel with indignation any suggestion that grave evils exist. The other method is to attempt the discovery of the full extent of the asserted evil with a view to its remedy. One aims to protect the city's reputation directly. The other aims to protect its reputation permanently by securing for it an unblemished character, even though the process may temporarily seem to injure the city's reputation.

It may be conceded that both of these attempts are right enough in their intention. The attempt to prevent the circulation of slanderous reports concerning the city should be as earnest and chivalrous as the attempt to prevent such slanders concerning our own homes. There is a possibility that the mere desire for sensation, or a Pharisaic wish to pose as a reformer may lead one to the grave offense of magnifying the evils which exist and imagining those which have no existence. It is right that we repel false accusation against our city as indignantly as against ourselves. But after all, it must be admitted that the only effective way to protect a city's or an individual's reputation is to protect its character. No amount of care can permanently conceal the evil spots in a city's or a man's character. And so it may be necessary in order to remedy the defects in the character of our city to uncover them to the public view, even though the act may seem at first sight like an act of disloyalty to the city itself.

It is waste of time to be recriminating each other as to our loyalty to the city which is our home. The great majority of our citizens of all parties and classes may be counted on as thoroughly loyal to the city and its interests as they understand them. But let us candidly seek for the weak spots in our municipal character. Turn on the lights to a full blaze and let us see how things really are. That will show us quickly enough how far the city may have been slandered, and will enable us to repel false charges. But it will do what is far more important than the settling of the question who is right in a controversy: it will make it possible to discover any real dangers and to deal with them effectively. So turn on the lights! Give us the facts, the worst of them, so they be facts!

The Official Government Reports:

The United States Government, after elaborate tests, reports the ROYAL BAKING POWDER to be of greater leavening strength than any other. (Bulletin 13, Ag. Dep., p. 599.)

The Canadian Official Tests, recently made, show the ROYAL BAKING POWDER highest of all in leavening strength. (Bulletin 10, p. 16, Inland Rev. Dep.)

In practical use, therefore, the ROYAL BAKING Powder goes further, makes purer and more perfect food, than any other.

Government Chemists Certify:

"The Royal Baking Powder is composed of pure and wholesome ingredients. It does not contain either alum or phosphates, or other injurious substances.

"EDWARD G. LOVE, PH. D." "The Royal Baking Powder is undoubtedly the purest and most reliable baking powder offered to the public.

"HENRY A. MOTT, M. D., PH. D." "The Royal Baking Powder is purest in quality and highest in strength of any baking powder of which I have knowledge. "WM. McMurtrie, Ph. D."

The Government Report shows all other baking powders tested to contain alum, lime or sulphuric acid.

In the event of the legislature's passng the one-sixth mill tax, the requests for 1894 may be stricken out of this estimate, but those for 1893 must be granted, as the proceeds of the mill tax will not be available until 1894.

If the bill for one-fifth mill had assed, the Board of Regents expected to, provide the following buildings, every one of which is a present necessi ty. As one-sixth mill will only provide for the current expenses, the state will be called upon for the buildings needed. These are:-

better and more modern facilities for giving instruction. E. R. Gilday, of Monroe, was nominated for circuit judge yesterday by the Democrats in convention at Dundee. The British section at the World's Fair will be decorated in part by some seventy banners bearing respectively the arms of different municipal corporations in the kingdom, such as London Edinburgh, Dublin, Ayr, Canterbury, etc. The British Royal Commission invited the corporations to furnish the banners, and some loaned those they possessed, while others had their official insignia reproduced for the occasion.
