731 SHEEPSHINS DELIVERED IN THIS BATCE

The Week Opens with a Lesson on St. Paul-Numerous Class Days-Alumni Bennions-Class of '68 Under Demmon's Oaks-Regents Labor Behind Closed Doors-A Magnificient Reception-C. D. Warner Speaks on Irving.

The week began with a magnificent baccalaureate sermon on St. Paul by President Angell delivered to an immense audience in University pleasingly told, that they have been Hall Sunday evening. On Monday the | taken for history; and it is today allaws celebrated their class day in a triumphant manner. A. W. Jefferis, the class president gave an address. A witty class history followed by. C. K. Friedman. The oration was given by J. W. Good, and the prophecy by A. K. Hitchcock. Milton Johnson's address concluded the program.

The Lits celebrated their class day Tuesday in the usual manner. In the morning in University Hall, S. C. Spitzer, delivered the oration, A. H Holmes the poem. Under the Tappan Oak in the afternoon Miss Jennie Eddy read the always interesting class history, and Miss Bedell gave the prophecy. Mr. Hadley Baldwin delivered the presidents address. In the evening at the gymnasium was given the swell society event of the exercises, the Senior reception. It was superb.

Wednesday was alumni Day. Alumni were scarcer than usual this year. Two of the older classes showed up in good shape, '58 and '68. The latter held a reunion, their 25th anniversary, under the oaks at Prof. Demmon's, and roll call found the following present besides the | ion. Nearly 250 people were present, host. Profs. The Commencement oration was demittee on officers for the ensuing year livered by Charles Dudley Warner. of which Prof. L. D. Wines was chair-The subject was Irving, the following abstract of being printed originally in the Brooklyn Standard Union.

Mr. Warner described the customs manners and social life in vogue by which Irving was surrounded in his | Executive committee, Sara Whedon, boyhood days. He also touched upon the sanitary, sewerage and water supply of New York City at that period. Mr. Warner said that in 1784 the fashof a clique of about 300, and although not quite so exclusive as the Philadelphia set, New Yorkers consoled themselves with a higher rate of living. New York was much the smaller city. Although there were 300 in the exclusive set in New York in 1784, it had Mr. Warner said, taken over 100 years to raise that number to 400, which would serve to give an idea of the exclusiveness of New York's present "400." In those days board ranged from $4 to $7 a week, and this included in the bill of fare the dispensation of four different kinds of liquor. Washington Irving came to New York in 1783, and at that time the only literary men in the city were Capt. J. J. Fenno, a sort of rover of those times: Samuel Low, a bank clerk, and William Dunlap, a playwright and dramatist, who managed the theatrical productions of those days. Literary work, evidently, did not pay very well, for it is recorded that Noah Webster sold the exclusive right to a New York publisher to print his spelling book in the States for the sum of $200. Newspaper work evidently prospered, for in 1807 there were nineteen papers in New York, of which eight were dailies. The more prominent of these were the "Evening Post," edited by Alexander Hamilton; the "American Citizen," by De Witt Clinton; and the "Morning Chronicle," by Aaron Burr. It was in the "Chronicle" that Irving first exercised his literary talents. Large theatre hats were just as loudly condemned then as now. The comforts and conveniences of travel were described by Mr. Warner in a humorous way. Irving tried both business and law. He finally settled upon a literary life, but under rather adverse circumstances, for the society of the day could not be called literary. Irving's father was a Scotchman, from Orkney; his mother was the daughter of an English curate. Why Irving did not attend Columbia College, as did two of his brothers, cannot be explained. He obtained his education from private schools in New York. His first literary production that caused extended comment, was his papers signed, "Jonathan Oldstyle," a satire on the social life of the day, which he wrote after a two years' sojourn in southern Europe. He spent

A man named Coffin attended classes in Ann Arbor and jumped into a first medal in Chicago the same afternoon, and cleared two feet further in Chicago than he did in Ann Arbor in practice. In all three alleged students won first prizes for the U. of M. at that contest. The advisory board gave up these medals, voluntarily, and made all restitution in their power, firing said manager from the athletic board. They fired him.

A Wave of Dishonesty.

The most unique of these performances was with Jas. A. Bordeaux, president of the Democratic Club. Charges reflecting on his choice of language, his official conduct, and his use of club funds were preferred against him. A week later he was tried by the Club. His preliminary preparations for the trial disclosed in him unexpect ed resources, and a great capacity for decisive action. He called on law student named Fiske to obtain a sity, Hamilton, N. Y., and Prof. and | copy of the Club's constitution, and upon being denied, he promptly thumped said Fiske, a proceeding that resulted in his obtaining the coveted President Frank Wagner discharged the document. Later, meeting Fiske on the Campus, he renewed the treatment, it is supposed, on general principles. Mr. Bordeaux also issued a dodger announcing his approaching "trial for heresy." as he called it-an allusion to the charge of bad faith brought against him, probably-and inviting everyone to be present. He also engaged stenog raphers to take down what his adverhis attorney.

The charges against him were not so sharply put that they did more than lightly scratch the surface of his reputation. The presecution held one document that furnished some racy reading, and that was a copy of the dispatch sent by Mr. Bordeaux to the Chicago Times giving an account of the until a large fragment of the night had Democratic banquet held here in the young College politicians, he says of himself: "Among these may be singled out one in particular from the whole university. The name of Jas. A. Bordeaux, president of the club, is synonymous with Democrat. He never allows any chance to de party work to pass by without his attention. He is an uncompromising Democrat, but so polite and affable in his way that he has no rival in the University in popularity among his fellows. It was he who planned for and successfully obtained Mr. Cleveland to speak here Feb. 22, '92. It was he who has since so successfully carried out the idea of an annual banquet by the club, in honor of Thos. Jefferson. The Club has largely; been his making, and it has acknowledged this by selecting him for its president."

> Mr. Bordeaux apparently has routed his enemies completely, being acquitted by an almost unanimous vote.

It is said that back of this persecution lay a nefarious design to prevent Mr. Bordeaux from being appointed to train, a special train will leave the T. & a fat office under the present adminishas been too extensively intrested in outside matters to attend strictly to his tration, by injuring his reputation. At the next meeting of the council they will receive the following communication from the Mayor: To the Honorable the Common Council:

GENTLEMEN-I have the honor to return to you without approval an ordinance passed by the common council on the 19th instant, entitled "An Ordinance Relative to Closing Saloons, Bars in Restaurants and Elsewhere," for the reason that said ordinance permits the places designated to remain open during the months of July, August and September until half past ten o'clock in the afternoon.

In my judgment, all places where intoxicating liquors are sold as a beverage should be closed not later than ten o'clock standard time, which means, of course, half past ten local time. Nearly all the work of the world is performed by men who are in bed at that hour. And it is safe to say that any person who is not willing to leave a saloon at half past ten and go home ought to be and that the chances are he would be if he had not already remained there

I regret that there has been a misunderstanding. I am in a measure responsible. My attention was called to this matter by the chairman of the committee on ordinances in the city attorney's office at the time this ordinance was being drafted, and I stated then that I thought there was no objection to an extension of the time of closing during July, August and September. I have not spoken to the chairman upon this subject since. I saw the city attorney, however, soon afterwards, and told him that such a measure was not defensible, and requested him to notify the committee. I saw him a second time upon this same subject and supposed that my position would not be left in doubt. June 22, 1893.

The weekly crop report issued by the Michigan weather service bureau indicates that the warm weather and absence of any excessive rainfall have improved the condition of the ground generally. Even the most indifferent of Sunday's world's fair visitors could not fail to notice the large number of closed and covered exhibits. The number of foreign exhibits that were closed caused surprised comment among the sightseers. All United States government exhibits were closed, whether in the Government building, which was tightly locked, or elsewhere. RELIGIOUS SERVICES.

Strange sights were witnessed in Midway Plaisance Sunday morning. The Mohammedans in the queer street began the celebration of the birthday of the "True Prophet" and the manner of it filled the spectators with wonder and at times with horror. The Mohammedan Christmas brings penance and prayer, in addition to feasting and making merry. The day had been brightened by the sun but a few minutes when the guards and early risers in Midway were attracted to the Algerian village by a mighty hubbub. All the dancing girls and the native attendants of bazars were congregated in the restaurant and they were attired in their most gorgeous costumes. Two lambs were brought into the room by a couple of black men and slaughtered in the presence of the entire company, while the worshipers sang a quaint song and sank to the floor in prayer. A brazier full of live coals stood just outside the door of the cafe. The blood of the lambs was caught in earthen dishes and placed near the brazier. After a half hour of prayer, during which time nearly all the villagers remained prostrate on the floor, the women gathered about the vessels. One after another the girls approached the dishes of blood and dipped finds in the warm red fluid. Some of the women ran to the nearest wall and placed their bloodbesmeared hands against the woodwork so as to leave the impression of their fingers outlined in red. Then they rushed back to the brazier and thrusting their hands into the live coals ran with a handful to the blood marks on the woodwork and actually burned away the red stains with the fire held in their bare hands. A few of them showed that they suffered pain, but the majority of them did not seem to mind it at all. This peculiar ceremony occupied the best part of an hour and was intended to typify the cleansing of the blood by fire after death.

INDEPENDENCE DAY. CHICAGO, June 26.—Patriotic songs by a choir of 100,000 voices is to be one of the features of the Fourth of July celebration at the fair. The singing is to be under the direction of Silas G. Pratt. Trained choirs of 2,000 or 3,000 singers will be placed at the four sides of the grand court and so directed as to sing in unison the following familiar selections, the entire populace joining with them, so as to constitute a vast chorus of at least 100,-000 singers. Each separate section will have a leader and be supported by a large band of musicians, all being con-nected by means of electricity, so that Mr. Pratt may indicate the exact time

1. The doxology—with a salute of cannons to punctuate each sentence. Special ceremonies of the national colors.

2. "The Star Spangled Banner," sung by the populace in unison, with the waving of flags on all buildings and the throng of people present.

3. "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean." 4 "America."

At the conclusion of the ringing of the liberty bell the doxology will be repeated and the new patriotic hymn, "Love and Liberty," by Mr. Pratt, will be sung, also patriotic melodies, such as "Hail Columbia," "Yankee Doodle," "Battle Cry of Freedom," "Dixie Land," "Marching Through Georgia." For the evening it is proposed to invite specially drilled choirs to sing upon the lagoon or grand court songs familiar to American folk.

How it Happened.

The following remarkable event in a lady's life will interest the reader: "For a long time I had a terrible pain at my heart, which flutered almost incessantly. I had no appetite and could not sleep. I would be compelled to sit up in bed and belch gas from my stomach until I thought every minute would be my last. There was a feeling of oppression about my heart, and I was afraid to draw a full breath. I couldn't sweep a room without sitting down and resting; but, thank God, by the help of New Heart Cure all that is past and I feel like another woman. Before using the New Heart Cure I had taken different so-called remedies and been treated by Joctors without any benefit until I was both discouraged and disgusted. My husband bought me a bottle of Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and am happy to say I never regretted it, as I now have a splendid appetite and sieep well. I welghed 125 pounds when I began taking the remedy, and now I welgh 130%, its affect in my case has been truly marvelous. It far surpasses any other medicine I have ever taken or any benefit. I ever received from physicians."—Mrs. Harry Starr, Pottsville, Pa., October 12, 1892.

BEST LINE TO THE WEST

Superb Dining Car Service

As long a time as David reigned, so long has the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway run trains westward from Chicago.

The Rock Island is foremost in adopting any advantage calculated to improve speed and give that luxury, safety and comfort that popular patronage demands. Its equipment is thoroughly complete with vestibuled trains, magnificent dining cars, siecuers and chair coaches, all the most complete with vestibuled trains, magnificent dinng cars, sieepers and chair coaches, all the most

What is the great Eastern termini of the Rock Island Route?—Chicago. What other sub-Eastern termini has it?—Peoria. To what important points does it run trains to the Northwest?—St. Paul, and Minneapolis, Minnesota; and Water town and Sioux Falls, Dakota. To what important Iowa and Nebraska points?—Pes Moines, Davenport, Iowa; Omaha and Lincoln, Nebraska. Does it touch other Missouri River points?—Yes; St. Joseph. Atchinson, Leavenworth and Kansas City. Does it run trains to the Foothills of the Rocky Mountains?—Yes; to Denver. Colorado Springs and Pueblo, solid vostibuled from Chicago. Can important cities of Kansas be reached by the Rock Island Route?—Yes; its capital city, Topeka, and as full hundred others in all directions in the State, and it is the only road running to and into the new lands opened for settlement in the Cheyenne and Arapahoe Reservation.

It will thus be seen that a line tapping, as the Rock Island does, such a varied territory, has much in that regard to commend it to travelers, as all connections are sure on the Rock Island, and passengers can rely on a speedy Journey, as over a bulk of the system through trains are run, and it has become, and rightly too, the popular Line.

The two subjects which are perhaps uppermost in the minds of the American people to-day are the Columbian Exposition and the recent bank failares, and the latter is if anything the nore prominent.

The recent publication by the American Academy of Politica, and Social Science of a monograph on The Banking Question" is therefore very timely, and will be read with interest by every one who is interested in this great question. The book consists of several essays contributed by leading financiers and financial writers as follows: "National and State Banks," by Hon. Horace White, editor of the New York Evening Post; 'American Banking and the Money Supply of the Future," by Hon. Michael D. Harter, Congressman from Mansfield Onio; "State and National Bank Circu-latios," Hon. A. B. Hepburn, ex-Comptroller of the Currency; "Banking Sys-tem-Old and New," by Hon. J. H. Walker, Congressman from Worcester, Mass.; and "Basis of Security for National Bank Notes," by Hon. Henry Bacon, Chairman of the House Committee on Banking and Currency in the 52nd Congress. There is also a report of the meeting held in Philadelphia under the auspices of the Academy to discuss this question. This report contains the speeches of the Hon. Wm. L. Trenholm Ex-Comptroller, and of Hon. M. D. These essays have also been printed in separate editions, for those who desire particular ones.

Gov. Altgeld Grants Pardons to Three Chicago Anarchists.

Mesers. Fielden, Schwab and Neebe Are Once More Free Men-How the News Was Received by Them-A Brief History of the Case.

THE BARS LET DOWN. CHICAGO, June 27.-Three men who for nearly six years have been known as Nos. 8,376, 8,526 and 8,527 emerged from the stone portal of the penitentiary at Joliet at 7 o'clock evening and once more breathed the air of freedom. They were Oscar Neebe, Samuel Fielden and Michael Schwab, the anarchists who had been convicted of complicit in the Haymarket riot May 4, 1886, when seven policemen were killed by the explosion of a dynamite bomb. They owed their liberty to Gov. Altgeld's pardon.

REASONS FOR THE PARDON. Gov. Altgeld's pardon is based on the grounds of a packed jury; that the jurymen, according to their own answers, were not competent; that the prisoners were not proven to be guilty of the crime charged in the indictment; that the trial judge was prejudiced against the prisoners or determined to win the applause of a certain class. THEY HEAR THE NEWS.

E. S. Dreyer, the real-estate man and who has interested himself in behalf of the men, arrived at the prison from Springfield at 3:15 e'clock in the afternoon with the pardons pocket, and also a copy of the governor's statement of his reasons for granting them. Mr. Dreyer was shown into the office of Warden Allen and presented his documents. The warden examined them, found them correct, and at once sent for the three convicts, who were convicts no

Neebe, Schwab and Fielden entered the warden's office dressed in their prison stripes. They were stood up in ine and in the presence of Warden Allen, Chaplain Roth, Clerk Miller and Storekeeper Allen Mr. Dreyer informed them that Gov. Altgeld had signed a pardon for each of them on cer-tain conditions. Tears stood in the eyes of the men to whom this unexpected news of freedom came. Their emotion was apparent, though they made strong efforts to conceal it.

THE CONDITIONS. Mr. Dreyer made a short speech, in which he said executive clemency was extended to them on condition that they promised to be hereafter honest, upright citizens, to go to work and earn living, and forevermore to refrain from associating with men who preached the doctrines which had brought them within the prison walls, and to refrain themselves from again propagating anarchistic theories. He old them how they had been despised by the whole civilized world, and hoped that in view of the mercy that was shown them they would never give Gov. Altgeld nor himself cause to regret the action which set them free.

EAGERLY ACCEPTED. All three of the men unhesitatingly made the promise required of them The warden then presented each with his pardon, which was the usual form in such cases, with the governor's sig-nature attached. Gov. Atgeld's review of the case was not read on account of its length. Samuel Fielden, replying for himself and comrades, assured Dreyer that neither he nor Gov. Altgeld would be given cause to repent their course in the matter. The liberated men then shook hands with Mr. Dreyer and were conducted back into the prison, where they took off their striped clothing and donned civilian suits. Then they were taken to the official dining-room where a dinner of roast beef, ham and eggs, strawberries and iced tea was served, Chaplain Roth, Clerk Miller, Mr. Dreyer, Mr. Allen, the warden's son, and the late prisoners being the guests. When the meal was finished it was nearly time for the train to arrive which was to bear the three liberated anarchists back to Chicago. As they came out into the balmy air of a per-fect June evening one who had known them in former days would scarcely have recognized any one of them. Prison life had left its mark on Mr. Dreyer walked down to the station with the ex-prisoners, and in a few minutes a Santa Fe train came along and all boarded the smoking car.

The party left the train at Twentythird street and boarding street cars went to their respective homes. Fielden to his wife and two children at 117 West Polk street, Schwab to his family, s wife and two children, at 167 Washtensw avenue, and Neebe to his brother's residence on Sheffield avenue. Numerous friends called on them during the evening to offer their congratu-

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE CASE. The case is one of the most remark able in the history of the government and has attracted the attention of the civilized world. On the night of May 4, 1886, a meeting was held in a hall in Haymarket square, Chicago, to protest regarding the killing of two laboring men in trouble which had taken place in an effort to introduce a rule for an eight-hour day for the laboring classes. The meeting was attended by about 1,000 persons, good order being maintained until just as the last were leaving the hall when a detachment of police were called in to quell a disturbance. cAs they approached the hall an unknown person threw a bomb into the crowd which killed several policemen and wounded many persona A number of people were arrested and August Spies, Albert Parsons, Louis Lingg, Michael Schwab, Samuel Fielden, George Engle, Samuel Fischer and Oscar Neebe were indicted. Popular excitement was intense, the press, pulpit and public clamor demanded conviction, and after a long and bitterly contested trial the defendants were found guilty. Neebe received a fifteen years' sentence and the rest were to be banged. The case went to the supreme court and was affirmed. Finally the sentence of Schwab and Fielden were commuted to life sentences. Lingg blew the top of his head off with s bomb in his cell and Parsons, Fischer, Engle and Spies were hanged. It was alleged at the time that conviction was due to public clamor, rather than to the evidence, and ever since there has been a strong element at work for the pardon of the condemned.

TRADE STILL DULL.

The Cause Seems to Be a Combined Lack of Credit and Cash. New York, June 24.-The weekly review of trade says: "The improvement expected from the issue of clearing house certificates, thus utilizing credits instead of cash in local dealings, has not yet been realized. Other cities, especially at the west, have not taken similar measures to relieve the pressure, and the demand for money from the interior continues unabased. The volume of trade is ing materially in comparison with last year. In some departments of business orders for merchandise are deferred, since there is no assurance of ability to carry the goods until they are sold, while in other departments or ders are not received because the future is dis-trusted. The effect on the great industries has been less thus far than might have been feared, as most of the works are employed on orders booked before the trouble began, but many works are now reducing the number of hands and others must some surrend operations we and others must soon suspend operations unless the prospect becomes clearer.

"Speculative markets have been much depressed by monetary stringency, wheat having sold for several days at the lowest price ever known here and at Chicago, though the wide margin between June and September offers strong temptation for use of money in carrying. The movement of grain from the farms is large for the season and by no means indicates exhaustion of stocks, and visible supply decreases so slowly that purchasers are little encouraged. The new harvest already begins and prospects are decidedly brightened by much-needed rain in the northwest during the week. Lower prices have increased the export demand, though it is not large enough to make much improvement on the enormous stocks in sight. Corn has been weak, with more cheering crop prospects and hog products because of monetary stringency.

"Accounts from other cities nearly all show that monetary pressure affects trade materially, that collections are unusually slow, and banks extremely cautious in lending, even where they are strongly fortified. There is hope that July disbursements, the issue of cor-tificates and the increased grain shipment will bring better conditions, but the failures are still numerous and include some of import

"The failures for the week number 287 as compared with totals of 347 last week. For the corresponding week of last year the failures were 180."

A Bank Cashier in Minnesota Surrenders to a Bold Burglar.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., June 27 .- A Moorhead, (Minn.) special to the Journal says that Monday a man presented himself at the cashier's window of the Merchants' national bank, pointed a revolver at the head of Assistant Cashier Van Vlissengen and demanded the money which was refused. The cashier then went to the door and as he did so the robber fol-lowed him up outside the railing and compelled him at the point of the revolver to walk back and give him the noney lying on the desk. The cashier told him to take it. The robber grabbed about $2,000, jumped in a buggy and drove rapidly down a back street to the Jay Cooke stable and fled to the river which he swam. He left $40 in gold in the buggy. A large posse is scouring the woods on both sides of the

HUNDREDS PERISH.

LONDON, June 34. - Her majesty's great twin screw pattleship Victoria, flying the flag of Vice Admiral George C. Tryon, K. C. B., commander of the Mediterranean station, was sunk in 18 fathoms of water off Tripoli, and at least 400 of her officers and crew went to the bottom with her. The disaster was due to the fearful bungling of either her own officers or those of the battleship Camperdown. In broad daylight, during a maneuver, she was run into head on by her companion ship, and in less than a quarter of an hour she had disappeared in the waves, carrying with her all on board. Twenty-one officers, including Vice Admiral Tyron, are reported drowned, and the great fighting ship lies a useless wreck, bottom side up, beneath

SCENE OF THE ACCIDENT Tripoli, near where the accident hap-pened, is about 70 miles from Damasous. It has a small harbor, which is so shallow as to be notoriously unsafe. It is supposed that the Victoria found a lack of sea room in putting about as the Camperdown came on and the latter boat hit the flagship squarely on the starboard side with her ram. The Camperdown was moving under a high steam pressure and the effect was such as would have been made with an ax on a plank.

SANK INSTANTLY.

The plates of the Victoria just for ward of the turret were torn apart and a perfect flood poured into the hold of the flagship. She began to sink immediately. The engines of the Camperdown were reversed at once, but not be-fore she had hit the Victoria a second time and completed the work of destruction. Every effort was made to save the ship, but the Victoria settled so fast that this was seen to be impossible, and the men, losing all discipline cast loose the small boats and attempt ed to reach the Camperdown. Only three of the boats got free of the suction of the sinking ship. The rest were overturned and many of the occupants of these were drowned with the men who were cooped up in the battleship beyon'd all chance of rescue. THE ILL-FATED VESSEL The Victoria was a battleship of 10,-470 tons and 14,000-horse power and mounted fifty guns. She was built by the Armstrongs and was regarded as one of the crack fighting machines of the British navy. Her model is now in Chicago at the exposition. She was selected as Sir George Tryon's flagship when Tryon was made vice admiral, and assigned to the Mediterranean station August 20, 1891. The Camperdown is also of the Mediterranean fleet and is a slightly smaller boat than the Victoria. She is of 10,600 tons and 11,500-horse power.

THE Ann Arbor edition of the Adrian Press tried to do a little original writing asst week, and how it labored. It charged us with having froth on our lips, not of beer but of rage over the action of the council last week, and in the same breath protests against being considered as defending them. It then spretends that the council were making a hard struggle to do just what Mayor Thompson wanted done, and then casts a snarling slur at him to influence him to obey the council. It then figures out that we are responsible for the whole business, on the ground that we claim to have elected Mayor Thompson, beginning the argument by sneering at the absurdity of our making such a claim. 140 Reason, thou art fled to brutish

The Common Council the Servant of the Saloon.

The following are the remarks made by the Rev. Mr. Coburn at the conclusion of his sermound ast Sunday morning.

I have made it my pleasure to visit the common council several times of Jate, not knowing that any alderman supposed it to be a privy council. Ministers, you know, are sometimes accused tof heir one-sideness, their lack of knowledge of local affairs, and it occurred ato me that the presence of ministers might be specially welcomed in the city council by our legislators as giving evidence that ministers were willing to Jearn methods of dignified debate while observing the fairness and breadth and impartially and unselfishness with which the representative men of this university city discuss the great questions that effect the city's interest. A year ago I reached the conviction that minister of the gospel ought to be witally interested in the government of his own city, and use all of his influence on the right side when moral questions were at issue. I believe sincerely that The pulpit is no place for party politics, but I believe with equal sincerity that at is just the place for living questions that touch the morality of the comempnity or the nation. On questions Wike Sabbath desecration, and impurity, and gambling, and intemperance I will t be stient. I will not preach pollitics, but I will preach temperance. I am absolutely free from party bias. I anqualifiedly deny that any one can tell, or ever could tell from the utterance made from this pulpit, whether I am a Republican, or a Democrat, or a party Prohibitionist; but I hope none of you will ever be in doubt whether or not I

At was as a citizen that I exercised my privilege to visit the common council on the evening when the question of sustaining the Mayor's appointments came up. It had been whispered without any good reason so far as I know, but it had been whispered that only one of these appointments was objectionable to the saloon and there. jectionable to the saloon and, therefore, as the servant of the saloon (I say this was whispered on the street with mo good reason so far as I know, but it was whispered, that as the servant of the saloon, the common council would the saloon, the common council would refuse to confirm one of the Mayor's nominations — that of Marshall. I could hardly believe that the conviction of these harsh speaking people would be fulfilled, but it happened just was was prophesied. Only, to my great relief, the reason given for the failure to confirm the Mayor's nomination was not that this man was not acceptable to the saloon keepers, but that he was not acceptable to the saloon keepers, but that he was not acceptable to the saloon keepers, but that he was not acceptable to the saloon keepers, but the place.

"Last Monday evening I visited the "Last Monday evening I visited the council chamber again, for I had heard that somebody was trying to get these good addermen to extend the hours in which the saloons could be kept open this summer until 11 oclock, city time. I there heard some good arguments against the proposition. For example, one argued if it were bad to have the saloons open until 11 oclock because of the students, it would be equally bad for our own boys—we ought to think as much of our own boys as of stranger's sons; and as another argued, if we, er's sons; and as another argued, if we as a community, could let the groceries and barber shops and bathing rooms that up-long-before II o'clock, we might let the saloons close earlier than that if we tried hard, without serious damage to anybody. It seemed as if I were to hear no arguments on the other side. The opposition appeared to think that the reasons for keeping the saloons open after all other decent places of business had closed, was so self-evident. as not to need statement, but finally, being urged to it, the reasons were

"The first argument was that there was a class of suburban citizens who did business at such late hours when they came to the city that they would not have time to get a glass of beer before they went home, if the saloons closed before it struck 11 by the city clock. Who are these thirsty individuals who keep such late hours? The farmers! These country farmers, if we can trust the statement of the honorable aldermen, are the men who cannot able aldermen, are the men who cannot finish selling their eggs to the grocers or buying their muslins from the dry goods stores, in time to get that neces-ary glass of beer if the saloons closed earlier than 11 r. m. It certainly must have taken a great struggle of the imagination to produce that argument agination to produce that argument— especially as it was produced without any petition from the farmers or the farmers' wives stating that they went to bed later than any other class of cit-izens, and therefore special legislation was needed in their behalf.

"The second argument which I will mention in favor of giving longer hou's o the saloon men, was offered by one who had no more right to make an argument on that floor in favor of or in opposition to that measure than I had. I refer to the city attorney. He took occasion of a question asked him relative to the Mayor's opinion of this 11 o'clock ordinance to give, not the Mayor's opinion, although as has since been learned, the Mayor had twice asked him to do this, but his own opinion of the control of the c ion of it. He gave as a reason for keeping the saloons open the alleged fact that "When Dr. Smith, Harriman fact that "When Dr. Smith, Harriman and the purity people ran this town the saloons were open all night" and the saloons now ought in justice to be left open as late as the hour named, "for they have paid their money and must get honest consideration for it."

"Now, I confess, although I used to enjoy the study of logic better than any other in my younger days. I do not any other in my younger days, I do not quite see that the fact of taking out a licens: to sell liquor during legal hours includes the privilege of fixing those hours; nor that the fact that the saloons were once open all night is any valid argument in favor of them being open all night now, or even open until 11 P.M. If the gentleman meant to say that drinking men enforce the liquor laws better than professed temperance men I will say:

1st. Sometimes professed temperance men are liquor men in disguise, and have been elected by the saloon vote 2nd. Sometimes the liquor laws are so full of holes that even a temperance mayor and a temperance council would not be able legally to restrain this bus-

3rd. A temperance mayor alone, with-out a temperance council, or at least a marshall and prosecuting attorney that are willing to enforce the law, is a very helpless individual.

I do not know which of these reasons affected adversely the administrations referred to. I have been told by several men that ought to know—I went to the court house yesterday to verify the statement, but found the clerk's office closed. I have been told that the very gentleman who last Monday night made this criticism of the Dr. Smith administration was himself the prosadministration was himself the pros-ecuting attorney of that administration. It reminded me of a story I once heard of a young lady who, on being asked, when applying for a marriage license, "What is your father's business? What does your father do?" conscientiously replied, "O, he doesn't do anything. He is the prosecuting attorney."

The third and chief reason, as frank-ly said, why the saloons should prolong ly said, why the saloons should prolong their business hours was that the saloon keepers had promised "If you let us legally keep open till 11 o'clock we will really close at 11 o'clock and on Sundays too—we actually will." An alderman distinctly stated that the saloons had acknowledged to him that they did not keep the law now, but that if this concessson were granted they would—and for that reason, as again and again stated, the common council of Ann Arbor passed the ordinance to keep the saloons open till 11 o'clock. to keep the saloons open till II o'clock. It was the most pusillanimous reason I ever knew a body of honorable men to give for their action. In saying this I do not impeach the moral character of any man in the council. I have been told by old residents that there has never been a council composed of men more honest and conscientious. But certainly the reason given for this more honest and conscientious. But certainly the reason given for this action cannot be sustained before the bar of manhood. Remember what the saloon men said in substance to our law makers: "Messrs. Aldermen, we will keep your laws if you will make them to suit us, otherwise not." That is the English of it. They acknowledge even to the law makers themselves that even to the law makers themselves that they are law breakers, and actually urge their law breaking as the reason why the laws should be changed to suit

How could these honorable aldermen f ours listen to that without their blood boiling with manly indignation? Instead of that they humbly replied, "Certainly, gentlemen. We can't make you keep the laws any other way. We will do just as you say."

So blinded were these men to the ig-So blinded were these men to the ignominy of it, that they actually gave as a reason why we ought to be glad to make this new law at such dictation, the pledged word of these same acknowledged law breakers that they would keep the law "if—if the common council will merely consult them as to what laws they will make." In the name of God and good citizenship, I call upon every man and woman here to remember the shame of it when in the near future men representing similar near future men representing similar sentiments call upon you for your suffrages.

I speak with such strong feeling this morning, not because I think the desired extension of saloon hours to be such a vital thing in itself, but because, 1st., it seems to me to show unmistakably that the majority of the common council are willing to serve the saloon instead of the temperance public whenever they get the opportunity; and because, 2nd., it shows how a little less indolence, or a little less partisanship on the part of only nine or fifteen men, perhaps sitting here this morning, would, at the last election, have secured a pledged temperance man instead of one who voted in favor of this stat-ute and thus reversed this legislation. All of this shows the holy, terrible responsibility of citizenship. "To him who knoweth to do good and doeth it not, to him it is sin." Every Christian voter ought to be able to say:

For the cause that needs assistance,
For the wrong that needs resistance,
For the wrong that needs resistance,
For the future in the distance,
And the good that I can do."

Next Sunday evening at the Presbyterian church, there will be a temperance meeting, at which all these questions will be discussed by the other ministers and myself."

Hunting for Democrats. OVID, MICH., June 10 1893, This quiet village was thronged with farmers this P. M. their teams occupying the spaces both sides of the broad main street its entire length. Having some interest in the business outlook in this vicinity. I observed closely the signs of the times-seeing what I could see, and hearing what I could hear. It was generally understood that, after a struggle with the elements, planting was about completed. Then the conversation ran on in the line of the interest of the farmer, the prevailing prices of their products. the low prices that are being paid here for wool (from 5 to 22 cents per lb) caused great indignation, the bulk of the clip so far as marketed having been sold at the medium figure, from 10 to 15 cents, according to quality, only a few clips of the heat to quality; only a few clips of the best cleansed and assorted lots have brought 20-22 cents. Grouped in stores and on the streets, men were talking of tinkered tariffs by the political party in power, and as the campaign is over men ought to talk sense, having to take the consequences of certain incipient "tariffs for revenue only" and "tariff reform." I noticed also signs over business houses like those in Ann Arbor, advertising goods at cost, the business of this village, though supported by an exceptionally fine farming country, being imperilled also. At length a search was instituted for a Democrat, participated in by business men as well as 'farmers, for the mer-chants had plenty of time to join in the search and the best of reasons for doing so. Not a Democrat could be found, so. Not a Democrat could be found, even in the post office he was a minus quantity. Had they found one I don't know but they would have taken him to Corunna. At any rate they would have "pulled the wool over his eyes." Beyond the purchase of a few balls of wool twine the trade of the day did not amount to year much. Some farmnot amount to very much. Some farmers bought a few pounds of sugar at 6% cents per lb., paying in butter at 12 cents and went away talking about reciprocity with Cuba, and that Cleveland does not propose to run the gov-ernment for the benefit of individuals or particular localities, but instead to ship our gold to Europe.

Prospects good for an abundant crop of fruit and berries. Clover and grass

Later in the day however, a typical Democrat appeared his air, was that of a foreigner and he asked to be directed to a saloon, he had come here from Owosso, had participated in the Toledo & Ann Arbor strike. He had a little money which some society had paid him for remaining idle and appeared to be very anxious to help that fellow -who is bigger before than behind-on in hi "bishness," also to put in his protest against the Sunday closing of the World's Fair and the closing of saloons and to advocate free trade in every-thing, reserving only the right of employees to control the capital of employers.

HOW TO CARE FOR CLOTHING.

The Art of Keeping Clothing Fresh and Shapely. When a lady takes a heavy dress off she should shake the skirt lightly, pass a brush through its silk ruffles and remove every particle of dust from both materia and trimmings. It is then slipped over a wire rack to prevent limpness in hanging, a big violet sachet is suspended inside and the whole enveloped in a long. loose, white cotton bag that draws up with strings and keeps it clean, crisp and perfumed for future use. As to the waists of frocks, have roomy pasteboard boxes for every one of them, lined with cotton batting that has been liberally sprinkled with sachet powder and in cased in pink or blue muslin. A slip pasted on the end shows which bodice is in the box, and consequently there is never the least confusion.

After brushing a waist lay it at full ength, pull out its bows, pass the lace through the fingers and smooth every inch of ribbon. Next stuff the sleeves and shoulders with tissue paper, crushed lightly, to hold the garment in good shape. Unless you have tried this scheme you have no idea how it preserves the fine lines and freshness of basque or jacket. Another important rale is never to put a bodice away with tarnished neck ruche or stained shields. One is always less burried when disrobing than dressing, and it is impossible to infuse clothing with that delicious subtle fragrance every woman covets unless she is fastidiously dainty in these details. After every two or three wearings wash the shields in warm water, clouded with ammonia, dry them in the sun, and they

How many remedies there are which nerely relieve without uprooting dis The contrast with sterling mediines which such palliatives afford, not only enhances the dignity of the former but serves to emphasize the folly of em-ploying half-way measures when horough ones are available. A marked instance of this is the effect, on the one and, of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters in cases of chills and fever and bilious re-mittent, and on the other of ordinary remedies and maladies of this type. Hoy the Term "Getting Into a Scrape" Originated.

The red and fallow deer which formerly roamed through the English forests had a habit of scraping up the earth with their fore feet to the depth of several inches, sometimes even of half a yard. The stranger passing through these woods was frequently exposed to the danger of tumbling into one of these hollows, when he might be said truly to be "in a scrape." The college students of Cambridge, in their little perplexities, picked up and applied the phrase to other perplexing matters which had brought a man morally into a fix.

Just as Common Always say that which appears to you to be true at the time without reference to the feelings or interests of the person of whom you speak, and regardless of the good that may be accomplished by what you say. This habit once acquired and actively indulged in will make ene mies of the large majority of one's acquaintances. Liars are despicable persons, and scandal mongers and gossipers are odious, but they are encountered. Each little world knows those of its inhabitants who are afflicted with these dishonorable propensities, and what they say on any given subject is always taken with a grain of salt.

But the truth is respectable and carries weight; candor is honorable and commands respect. It is therefore evident that a candid truth teller who is always talking and uses not a wise discretion as to when he should speak and when he should be silent is likely to be not only a thorn in the side of most of his acquaintances, but an active and dangerous disrupting force in any social

If any good is to be done by telling a truth which disrobes hypocrisy and discovers villainy, let us have the truth on every such occasion. But for a man or woman on all occasions to blurt out all he or she happens to know about neighbors and neighborhood affairs is as justifiable as it would be to call for the police and cry "stop thief" when a congregation had left church, because while is the sanctuary these people had knelt and confessed themselves miserable sinners. The man who is injudicious with his knowledge, or who uses it to anney his neighbors, is sure to be a successful enemy maker.

[CONTINUED.] "There's no denying that. She doesn't seem to be in very deep monrning over the loss of her aunt."

"Still she may be genuinely sorry, even though the death brings a fortune to the younger one."

Had Simpson chosen to tell of the conversation between the young lady and Dr. Maidhoff, in the office of the latter some days before, Manson would have been confirmed in his suspicions of Miss Gilder, but the friend for some reason of his own chose to keep it to himself. At this juncture a knock was heard at the door, and a messenger presented himself with a telegram for Simpson. The latter signed the receipt, gave the lad a fee and when the door was closed read the following:

Close up the case as soon as you can and in your own way. Tell M. to report here by first train in the morning. I have another matter awaiting his attention.

"That eliminates me from this business," quietly remarked Manson. "I don't see that I have been of any help

"You shouldn't disparage your efforts in that manner. It may be that I shall never know any more of this matter than I do now, but I shall do my utmost to clear it up within the present week."

"Before my departure tomorrow," said Manson, "I should like to make a call on Dr. Maidhoff if you have no objec-

"I will be glad to have you do so," promptly responded his friend. "If I gather anything, I will let you

After further and unimportant conversation Simpson withdrew to his room and was not seen until the following morning, which dawned bright and clear. He bade his friend goodby, and Manson, having resumed his former per-sonal appearance, called at the office of Dr. Maidhoff on his way to the station, being fortunate enough to find him in and disengaged.

"Why," remarked the physician in surprise, "I understood you to say that you had given up this affair and gone

"So I did, but Varick thought I had better run down and see whether there was anything I could do for you." "That was kind, but really it seems hardly worth while. I am of the opinion that it is best not to give the matter any further thought. You have done all that you could be expected to do, and you may say to Mr. Varick that the executors will cheerfully pay his bill from the estate as soon as he sends it in."

"I am sure there will be no trouble on that score; but, doctor, do you mean to say that you will make no further attempt to recover this remarkable ruby? From what I can hear it must be worth an enormous sum!

"Yes, fully $100,000, if not more, but what is the use of trying to accomplish the impossible? If you dropped a diamond in the middle of the Atlantic, you would know it was irrecoverably gone. You could not help regretting its loss, but you would be foolish to indulge any hope of recovering it."
"True, but has this gem been dropped into the ocean?" The physician looked keenly at his visitor before replying:

"Not literally so, but it amounts to the same thing. The burglar who broke into her house more than a week ago has had abundant time to hide it where it is as impossible to find it as if it were fathoms deep in the sea."

"The very size and value of the jewel will help to trace it."

"Ordinarily such would be the fact, but you forget that the party who has sent a couple of Thugs hither from the other side of the world does not seek it for the purpose of sale. Let him once get it in his possession, and the queen of England will not be able to take it from

"You speak of those two East Indians as Thugs-that is, members of an organization which the British government stamped out many years ago." "Nominally they did so, but the terrible society still exists."

The doctor paused abruptly and went to his desk, unlocking the drawers from which Folsom Simpson had abstracted the telltale letter some days before. He hurriedly examined a number of letters and papers and showed his surprise in failing to find that for which he was

Doubtless he was looking for the letter which he meant to show to his visitor as proof of what he had just said, but of course he could not place his hand

"That's strange," he muttered; "I am sure I placed it there."

"Was it anything in which I could be interested?" was the innocent question of Max Manson.

"It was a letter that reached Miss Livermore on the same day preceding the robbery and her death confirmatory of what I just remarked about those two

This declaration gave the detective an opening to say what had been in his mind for some time:

"How was it that, receiving this warning, you failed to take such precautions as would have rendered the robbery impossible?"

Dr. Maidhoff again bent his penetrating eyes on his visitor before replying:

"I am not surprised to hear you speak thus, but I may say that one of the conditions on which Miss Livermore held the rajah's ruby so long was that sh should never allow it to go out of her possession. That has been the case with the various owners for more than 200

"Still, admitting those singular provisions of inheritance, it surely would have been easy for you to place guards in the house, so that these miscreants would not have dared to intrude. Cunning as they are, they hold our laws in too much dread to bid them open defiance, and it seems to me there has been a disregard of the most ordinary common sense precautions that almost war-

Dr. Maidhoff turned upon the detective like a flash and indignantly de-

"What do you mean, sir, by such lan-

"I mean to say what every person with a modicum of wit will say. You admit that you received a warning of the intended visit of these two Thugs from the other side of the world with the evident

"I have admitted no such thing, sir." "But what of this missing letter?" asked Manson, with some embarrass-ment, fearful that he had made a faux pas by asserting more than the physician had really said.

"I merely intimated that I had received information which authorized me to regard these men as Thugs or assassins, but I did not say that the letter told me they intended to steal the ruby belonging to Miss Livermore.

"Nevertheless," calmly remarked Manson, determined to force the matter home, "that is what the letter did say." "What authority have you for such words? Did you purloin the letter?"

"Will you deny that it contained the warning I have stated?" "I deny your right to question me in this manner. In other words, it is none of your business." Max Manson rose to his feet, buttoning his coat and looking his man unflinchingly in the eye.

"Dr. Maidhoff, you have not acted honestly with us. You asked Mr. Varick to send a person here to investigate this loss, and you have tried to baffle me at every step, but you have not succeeded to the extent you fancy, inasmuch as I happened to witness a certain interview between you and a young gentleman in the Livermore homestead last evening. Good day, sir. You will probably hear from me later on."

CHAPTER XV.

"Stt down," he said, with good natured carnestness.

Max Manson felt that he had overstepped the bounds of strict prudence, but it cannot be said he regretted it. Knowing as he did that this man had the rajah's ruby in his possession, or at least had it a few hours before, and believing that he was going to escape scot free, he could not resist the temptation of letting him know that he had grounds for his accusing words.

He did not think it worth while to return to the hotel and tell Simpson what had passed. The doctor had admitted nothing, and he did not suspect the identity of his friend; the latter therefore possessed the same opportunity to carry out his schemes and combinations as at Folsom Simpson, finding himself alone followed a singular course, but one which it may be said was in keeping with his conduct since coming to Ellenville to look into the mystery of the rajah's ruby. Paying no further attention to Dr. Maidhoff or the young man whom he had seen in conversation with him at the Livermore homestead the evening before, he took the train to Warhampton, whither he learned Miss Gilder had gone, though she must have returned to Ellenville the previous evening, since she was at the physician's office at that time. Arrived at this country town about noon, he found that it bore a marked resemblance to the one he had just left, having about the same number of inhabitants, though it boasted a couple of dilapidated inns or hotels. Ensconcing himself in one of these he ate his midday meal, and through some guarded inquiries learned that the new home of Miss Gilder, like the one at Ellenville, stood on the outskirts and was an imposing structure, showing considerable wealth on the part of the occu-

Lighting a cigar, Simpson sauntered thither, on the alert as he did so. So far as he could judge the coast was clear, and stepping upon the porch he gave the bell a gentle pull.

It was answered by the servant Martha, who showed pleased surprise on recognizing him. Simpson bowed as courteously as though she were a princess and extended his hand. "I can't tell you how glad I am to see you," he said, as she gingerly accepted the salute. "How have you been, Martha, since your scare the other night?" "Oh, I am well, thank you," she replied, smiling all over her broad countenance: "but, mister, if you want to see Miss Gilder she isn't at home.' "Who said I wanted to see her? I've come to see you, Martha," replied the audacious fellow, stepping into the hall and then making his way into the parlor, which was hardly set to rights as Martha followed him with no little embarrassment, though it was evident that the round faced and genial detective had made an impression on the heart of the young woman.

"Sit down," he said, with good natured earnestness, motioning her to a seat. "Miss Gilder would hardly be pleased if she knew this." "But there is no need of her knowing it. You don't fancy I am going to tell her? Sit down—sit down, I say, or I don't know what I will do," and he made as if he meant to compel her. Thereupon she laughingly complied, and Simpson, holding his hat and cane, said in his most insinuating voice:

"You haven't forgot our meeting the other night, Martha? "Indeed I'll never forget that as long as I live; it was awful." 'Yes, it was rather stirring. I was glad I was able to take care of you." "I'll always remember your kindness. When I catched a glimpse of you as I was a-walkin up the path, I just thought I would faint. I was sure it was that dreadful man." So it was, Martha?"

'What!" she exclaimed, almost falfing from her chair. "Yes, it was he, but I was right by you, ready to pounce upon him on his first motion to harm you "Well, I declare! Did you ever?"

"What did the folks say when you went in and told your story?"
"They couldn't believe me at first, but I said I knowed you spoke the truth, for, scuse me, sir, you looked like a real gentleman that couldn't deceive a lady. The doctor said he would stay all night turb us, as I s'pose you know."

"I judged not. I waited around the outside awhile, ready to rush in if I heard you call for me, but I am glad nothing of the kind happened."
"Oh, the folks asked me all kinds of with us, and he did. Nobody didn't dis-questions," continued Martha, becoming more at ease. "They wanted to know who you were, but of course I couldn't tell 'em, for you see I didn't know." "Did you try to describe me?" "Yes; but, la sakes! I can see now that I got it all wrong. I said you were a tall gentleman, with a mustache and dressed in black, which wasn't as it was

"I should say not! But that was natural in your disturbed state of mind," Simpson was considerate enough to say, glad to find that the description of himself by the servant could not have given the doctor or Miss Gilder any suspicion of his identity. "Now, Martha, since you and I are such good friends, I want to ask you a few questions. I hope you will be willing to answer them."

"If they are proper, sir."
"You don't imagine that I would ask you any other kind? First of all, were you at home the night that the robbers visited the house in Ellenville?"

Her embarassment of face and manner did not escape the notice of the detective. His suspicion that there was something back of this strange business which had not yet been touched upon

"Yes, sir; I was at home," she replied after a moment's hesitation. "Did you see anything of the bur-

"Mercy, no! If I had, I never would have lived." "Yes, you would. You are a braver girl than you give yourself credit for. Did you hear anything of the burglar?" Yes; I heard some strange noises in the night, which must have been made

"And you found your mistress in a deplorable state-very much frightened and distressed because of the visit of the "Yes, indeedy. I never seen her so

Whither Are We Drifting?

It is reported that the butter secret has been discovered. Dr. Vaughan is the man who is credited with having found it, and it is regarded in scientific circles as perhaps the greatest of his discoveries. The thing that he isrepre sented to have got at is the alkaloid which, being created in milk or cream churning, produces butter. Dr. Vanghan it seems, takes a can of fresh milk, drops in some; alkaloid, and presently dips out the fully developed butter without further ado. It is not oleomargarine, or any illegal-unless-labelled substitute, but real butter.

Here is another step taken toward the millennial period when man will press the button and Nature will do all the rest. Dr. Vaughan does away with the churns; the next inventor may be expected to abolish cows. Give him a a pail of rain-water, and he juggles something into it, and you get back real milk. Then an ounce or two of alkaloid, and lo, butter! and all the milkmen and dairymaids are in search of new mployment.

There is something disconcerting about these discoveries, for all their usefuliness. Where are they going to stop? and what is to become of the working people when all the work does itself? Next we may hear that some moddling investigator that discovered. meddling investigator thas discovered the secret of literary style, so that by the adjustment of a simple appliance n at one end, and literature cut off at. the other in lengths and of qualities to suit the market. That is a more terrifyng possibility than even that all the Harvard undergraduates should become proficient writers. It remains for mankind to hope that when it ceases to be possible for the multitude to make a living on Earth, the secret of living without food may come out, or the perfection of flying-machines, or something may provide means of emigration to other spheres.—Harper's Weekly.
