Repeal of the "Sherman Act." To Editor of THE REGISTER :

We quote the following from an article in the Literary Digest of July 29th, 1893 by the Hon, Edward O. Leech, late Director of the Mint.

"Because of the danger that this bill would pass the House of Representatives, as a compromise measure, the Act of July 19th, 1890, the present silver law (improperly called the "Sherman Act") was passed, which required the purchase by the Treasury Department, monthly of 4,500,000 ounces of silver.

"The Act required the coinage into dollars, monthly, until July 1st, 1891, of 2,000,000 ounces of the silver purchased "Under the operation of this law, the Treasury has purchased from August 13th, 1390 to June 1st, 1893, 152,413,792 ounces of silver, worth at the present price of silver $126,503,447, an actual loss ef over $17,000,000."

The Government paid for this silver by issuing silver certificates which were payable in gold. The European governments bought up these silver certificates, presented them to the United States Treasury and demanded and received gold for them, and shipped it to their own countries.

In plain Saxon, this government by this act compelled its people, through the taxing power, to purchase 4,500,000 ounces of silver per month and pay for it in gold. Gold, the only international currency went out of the treasury about as fast as silver went in, and the result was a national panic.

The people of this nation were compelled by this act to purchase that amount of silver per month whether they needed it or not for the sole benefit of the few silver producing states and territories.

It is even worse than that, because there are not probably more than five hundred of the leading silver mine owners, so that the people of this nation were forced to furnish a market for this amount of silver per month, for. the benefit of these few large mine owners. The mine owners and their representatives in Congress argue that the government will lose nothing because it only pays the market price for the silver. But when you pay the market price for what you cannot use and must store on a falling market, you will necessarily lose in the transaction. The above article from the Literar Digest shows that the actual loss to the government up to June 1st, 1893 had been seventeen millions of dollars. The loss to the people by the national panic, caused in a large measure by this act, cannot be estimated. Suppose the farmers of this nation, and they constitute a very large portion of our people, should force the passage of an act by Congress, compelling the government to purchase four million bushels of wheat per month and store it, and issue gold certificates in payment for it, how long would the people bear the burden? There would be a rebellion very soon if it were not repealed. No government can long exist, that attempts to force one class of its people to furnish a market for the products of another class. The laws of supply and demand must govern and control matters of this nature. No government is strong enough to furnish a market and control prices. The disgraceful spectacle of a few representatives of the silver mine barons of this nation, blocking the action of the United States Senate, and preventing the repeal of this absurd and dangerous law, ought to be and can be stopped. Judge Waples, in an article in the Detroit Free Press of Oct. 7th inst., shows clearly that the ordinary rules for the government of such bodies, furnish the remedy for such obstruction tactics; and we hope that the Senate will have the courage to enforce them. Respectfully, N. W. CHEEVER.

The Hand Murder Trial. The Hand murder trial was begun last Monday in the Circuit Court, Prosecuting Attorney Kearney is being assisted by Mr. T. A. Bogle. Messrs, Whitman and Knowlton have charge of the defense. Monday was consumed in settling preliminaries and impaneling a jury. The jury agreed upon is as follows, A. B. Cole, Ann Arbor; Peter S. Knight, Bridgewater; John Wedemeyer, John H. Wade, Lima; William Deuble, Lodi; Gottfrey Grau, Emanuel Koch, York; F. A. Wilson, Charles Kalmbach, Clifton Green, Dexter; Horatio Burch, Manchester; Frank Wheeler, Webster, The case will undoubtedly be a hard fought one, it being clearly evident that the defense mean to bitterly contest every inch of the ground. The examination of witnesses began Tues day evening. Rigney and James O'Connor, who discovered the body of the murdered Pulver, described the scene and identified the pipe tongs with which Pulver had been murdered. Other witnesses have been examined by the prosecution, but so far nothing of importance has been produced beyond what was brought out at the coroner's examination. Whether or not the prosecution will be able to weave such a chain of evidence around Hand which the defense cannot break remains to be seen. The defendant has his two bright little children and his wife in the court room with him. The jury is being boarded at the Cook house during the trial and is in charge of Deputy Sheriff Peterson.

A New Ar School.

A meeting of the Ann Arbor Art Club was held last week in their rooms in the Masonic block. A reorganization was effected as an art scaool, and will be incorporated. They now offer advantages to all grades of art workers, beginning with charcoal in outline, and leading on through a course in perspective, light and shade, and cast drawing, to work in water colors and oils. They invite all who desire to enter upon such work to consult any of the officers, as follows: Mrs. W. S. Perry, president; Mrs. Z. P. King, vice president; Mrs. M. L. Walker, secretary and treasurer. For the present instruction will be given on Thursday and Saturday of each week, but the rooms will be open on Friday as well to all members of the club. In this way it is hoped to accommodate teachers and students of the public schools or the University who are engaged during the week. Miss Hunt and Miss Pepple will both give instruction.

SKETCHES OF OUR CITY.

Outlines and Incidents of Ann Arbor's Founding and Growth. Written Ex' pressly for The Register by Prof-A. Ten Brook.

II. ORIGIN OF OUR SCHOOL SYSTEM. The acquisition of the Northwest did not give this Territory to the Confederation of states. Virginia held it by the right of conquest. Other states had claims upon it. But Congress was in a strait for means to carry on the war and to pay the indebtedness already incurred Some states had no ownership of lands, others had great tracts of them. Those which had none were dissatisfied and even threatened to seize forcibly upon the lands of those which held such, for these states, they said, could support their governments by the sale of their lands and needed to levy no taxes upon their people, and thus had an undue advantage over the landless states. To avoid these strifes and pay the war expenses, the cession of the Northwest to the Confederation was proposed and, that I may make the account short, I add only that this followed in due time, Virginia taking the lead. Indeed this state offered its cession in 1781, and the Northwest was not definitely assigned to the Confederation by treaty until 1783. But the cession by the four states was not fully completed and accepted until 1800; yet, after the treaty of Paris in 1783, Congress felt free to provide for the sale of these lands and for the government of the people who should settle upon them. It is worthy of remark that, but for this cession. Congress might never have had a foot of territory over which to exercise its governing power, for all the other wild lands belonged to the indi-vidual states. Nor had it been expected that Congress would ever exercise any territorial jurisdiction. This may, therefore, be re-garded as the beginning of that suc-cession of acquisitions by which our possessions have finally reached the Pacific coast and extended far to the southward and northward

Pacific coast and extended far to the southward and northward. The first attempt to frame a govern-ment for the Northwest Territory was by Thomas Jefferson. This was in 1784. His bill failed of passage and had it become a law would have led to the greatest of misfortunes. It pro-vided, indeed, against the permanent existence of slavery in this section, and yet it permitted this to exist for sixteen years, after which time, as later events plainly show, its dislodge-ment would have been impossible. Manasseh Cutler, fifty-three years pastor of the church in Ipswich, Mas-sachusetts, is now known to have been the author of those provisions of the the author of those provisions of the Ordinance of 1787, which have wrought so beneficiently for our whole country. Mr. Cutler represented a company. Mr. Cutler represented a company, most of its members designing to be actual settlers, and wishing to purchase several million acres of land in this section. They would not make the purchase until a kind of constitutional build a boat. At this point they were overtaken by the next party. These latter, arrested in their passage of the Alleghanies by deep snows, had been obliged to stop and build sleds. On the 2d of April they all embarked, sixty-five in number, and arrived on the 7th at the mouth of the Muskin-gum. Here they were to build their city which they proceeded to lay out. Dr. Cutler had suggested for this the name Cutler had suggested for this the name Adelphia, thus indicating his hope that brotherly love could prevail in it. The people were romantic and called it Mar-ietta, a combination of the two names letta, a combination of the two names of the unhappy queen of France, Ma-rie Antoinette. Pedantry cropped out in other names. The large public square was called Quadranaon; the small one Capitolium; the street leading from the square was called Sacra Viha; the fort with its enclosure, Campus Mar-tins. French, Latin and Grees hence tins, French, Latin and Greek being thas curiously mixed in christening the colonist's capitol. It is refreshing to visit, even in fancy, the scene of this first Anglo-Saxon settlement in the Northwest. There were several generals of the Revolution, more colonels and majors and still more captains in the small number of the settlers. The war had reduced them to poverty. These men number of the settlers. The war had reduced them to poverty. These men lived in log huts, chiefly of one room and a garret. They might have been resen in summer clad in tow trousers and frocks, driving their oxen at log-ging, or plowing, while in winter the peltries yielded by their hunting and trapping were most conspicuous in their raidment. The whole aspect of the place was

An interesting suit has been instituted by Leonard D. Rosier of Webster town, in which he charges his brothers, sisters and other relatives with keeping him in the Pontiac asylum thirteen years for the purpose of defrauding him of his share of his father's estate, which amounted to $22,000.

Soon after his father's death, in December, 1890, the will was probated, but Leonard says he was neither notified of the proceedings nor was a guardian appointed to look after his interests, so all he got was $10. A few weeks ago he escaped from the asylum and was not returned because forty neighbors signed a document to the effect that he was sane.

the U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, D. C., erstwhile from the sun-parched and grasshopper eaten plains of Kansas, is coming to Ann Arbor, coming here to make a speech! He thought at first that he had received an invitation from Pres. Angell and gleefully spread the report about Washington. Later he found that the request for his honor to make a apeech in the Athens of the West came not from the official head of this great University, but from an undergraduate, a mere student. But Jerry had agreed to come, and that settled the matter, then there was a hundred dollar fee and that fixed the matter more firmly, so Jerry will be here on Nov, 4th and will discuss "The Decline of Agriculture and Some of the Causes." "This,"

Jerry says "will give me a wide range and a great chance to say almost anything I please, but I shall devote myself largely to financial and tariff questions.

Sudden Death.

Agnes McCready, the wife of James Clements, of S. State-st, died very suddenly last Sunday morning at 3:30 o'clock, of heart disease. The deceased was sick only an hour. The funeral services were private being held at the residence Tuesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Her husband and five children, Miss Mary, of Ann Arbor, Mrs. Ida Wheat, of Leavenworth, Kas., Henry and William, of Bay City, and James, jr., of Queensland, survive her.

aw should have been enacted for the protection and government of the peo-ple who should settle in the Territory. When Dr. Cutler arrived in New York, where Congress was in session, a bill sketched by a committee of which Nathan Dane was chairman, on which, however, no action was likely soon to be taken, was placed in his hands for such changes as he might see fit to make. It was in the form of a compact between the future settlers of the Northwest and Congress. The third article of the compact has the following clause: "Religion, morality and knowlege being necessary to good government, schools, and the means of education shall be forever encouraged." The compact was enacted July 13, 1787. Fourteen days later an act was passed by which Congress sold to the company 1,500,000 acres of land, making reservations within the tract as fol-

Two entire townships of good land for a University. Lot number sixteen in every township for schools. Lot number twenty-nine in each township for the purposes of religion. Other reservations were made for future disposition.

The precedent here established has been followed ever since, and in it we see the explanation of what our own city has become I shall not trace the ordinance fur-ther than to observe that a passage in its sixth article reads as follows: "There shall be neither slavery nor involuntary servitude in said Terriinvoluntary servitude in said Terri-tory otherwise than in punishment of crimes whereof the party shall have been duly convicted." To justify the remark made above that if Jefferson's bill had become a law slavery could never have been dislodged from this region, I have only to remark that when General Harrison was governor of the Indiana Territory, application of the Indiana Territory, application was made to Congress for permission to introduce the institution of slavery into the Northwest. It was represent-ed that nine-tenths of the people were in favor of it. Congress refused, John Randolph, chairman of the committee to which the matter was refered, having reported against granting the prayer of the petitioners. So we see how narrow a chance this whole section twice ran of being slave Territory. A few touches of the word painter's brush would show how alien was the life of this colony to the conceptions of our day. The advance party of of our day. The advance party of twenty-two set out early in December, having fired a salute in front of Dr. Cutler's house at Ipswich. They were mechanics, including some boat-build-ers. They reached about the end of January a place called Sumrill's Ferry, near Pittsburg, where they began to times, especially in evening rowings on the river, sending their merry songs floating over its surface, when their anxious mammas at home were in tor-ment at their venturing so far, in times of Indian hostility, from the protection of the Campus Martius. If readers shall ask what this all has to do with the history of our city, I have only to entreat their patience with me until they shall learn that, besides having procured the enactment of the fundamental law, men of this settlement were most prominent in the first measures looking to our own Uni versity. Nor do I hesitate to affirm that no other removal of our people that from the Atlantic westward has had so deep a significance as that which founded the settlement on the Mus-

An Old Resident Gone.

Stephen Webster, who came to Ann Arbor upwards of 35 years ago, died at his home in Detroit last Thursday, at the age of 86 years, and his remains were brought to this city for interment last Saturday morning. The funeral occurred in Detroit and the remains were taken directly from the depot to Forest Hill cemetery, being accompanied only by a few immediate relatives. The deceased was well known in the city. He was a member of the banking firm of Mill and Webster, whose bank failed in 1872. After his failure in business he went to Detroit, where he has since resided and where he died on Thursday. His connection with the city is well remembered by old settlers, many of whom were well acquinted with him.-Times.

The board met last Wenesday night. City Clerk Miller reported that there were several miles of sidewalk which had been ordered built but which had not as yet been touched although due notice of the order had been served in every case. The Summit-st matter came up and street commissioner Sutherland was instructed to get the opinion of the city attorney and to stop Mr Hiscock from laying a side-walk in the street if the city attorneys opinion would sustain such a proceedure. Prof. Greene came in before the board adjourned and his opinion was asked in regard to a number of matters relative to the sewer business and a number of questions were referred to him for de-

It is shown that almost the entire southern coast on the Atlantic seaboard is absolutely unpro-tected and at the mercy of a foreign foe. Forts have been allowed to crumble away, cannons have rusted and cannon carriages rotted. To quote Inspector General Breckenridge in his statement, the forts and their armaments "now serve the single purpose, apparently, of reminding us of the high estate from which we have fallen and that we are not well protected," assault upon James Ahern and a scene of wild applause followed the verdict. The parties live in northern Kent, Ahern, it is said, ruined Haines' sister years ago under promise of marriage and then left the country. He returned a year ago and has frequently twitted Haines upou his sister's misfortune. At a game of base ball last summer Ahern taunted Haines in the presence of his friends and Haines having a bat in his hand hit Ahern over the head, fracturing his skull. Ahern has recovered.

Found In a Strawstack.

DETROIT, Oct. 11.—The body of an unknown man was found under a strawstack on Belle Isle near the super-intendent's residence. He had apparently been dead two or three days. The deceased was about 35 years old, word a brown suit of clothes and had a beard and mustache. He was greatly emaci-ated, apparently from consumption. Employes at the park have noticed him several times during the past few weeks strolling about the island. There was nothing in his pockets to tell who he was, and no marks of violence were found on the body.

It is stated that Mr. Mills is engaged to marry Marie Afong, daughter of a prominent Chinese merchant of Honolulu.

Charges Against England.

PARIS. Oct. 11.—A portion of the French press continues to make charges to the effect that the rebellion of the Moors against the Spahish authorities is instigated by England in order that the latter country may have the oppor-tunity of intervening in Morocco. This causes the Rappel to remark that Spain will not allow herself to be bulldozed and that France and other pow-ers will support her in the stand she will make against English interference.

A Big Meat Company

TORONTO, Oct. 11.-E. B. Osler & Hugh Ryan of Toronto, Senator Fergu-son of Niagara Falls, Senator McLaren of Peth and others have formed the Canadian Meat and Packing company, with a capital of $250,000. They will establish abattoirs in the northwest and make an effort to secure the entire Canadian market and also to crowd American rivals out of the English market.

Received With Satisfaction

BERLIN, Oct. 11.—The news of the Hungarian government's victory over the Nationalists in the lower house in the division on Count Appony's motion of "no confidence," was received in official circles with satisfaction, as any sign of weakness of the government would certainly have been a severe blow to Austria's position in the triple alliance.

Plundering and Killing.

BUENOS AYRES, Oct. 11 .- Scattered parties of insurgents in Santa Fe are plundering and killing foreign settlers. In response to representations made by the German consul, the authorities have promised to restore security of foreigners. The national party has been reorganized under the direction of Senor Reque Saenz Pena, a son of the president.

FIVE PERSONS ARE UNDER ARREST. No Marks of Violence on the Corpse, Except That the Knuckles of His Left Hand Were Bruised and Blackened-A Suspicious Case. NEW YORK, Oct. 11.-Has that dreaded society of vengeance among the Italians, the Mafia, found another victim? Circumstances surrounding the death of a young and handsome Italian found dying in a hallway at 51 Mul berry street, just before 2 o'clock Tuesday morning, lead to the belief that such is the case. While the police of the Sixth precinct refuse to express opinions, the fact that five Italians have been arrested is proof that they have suspicions suspicions. At 1:40 o'clock in the morning Police-man James E. Downing was leisurely patroling his beat along Mulberry street. When opposite No. 51, an Italian rushed out of the door and pointing into the hallway said excitedly: "Mana deada inside." The policeman hurried into the hallway and lighted a match. It was as dark as the black hole of Calcutta. Lying upon his back the policeman saw a dark complexioned young man with strikingly handsome features, not at all like the common horde of Italian laborers who infest that neighborhood. His black mous-tache was carefully trimmed and his hands were as soft and white as those of a woman. He was breathing when which are made of two plates of gold soldered to a plate of composition metal. Look equally as well as solid gold cases, STRUCK HIS MOTHER, And the Latter Charges Him With Being a Murderer.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 11 .- A son arrested for striking his aged mother and the latter charging him with the murder of a companion some months ago, but immediately withdrawing the charge, constitutes the unusual cause for holding Frank Moore at the county jail, and may lead to the solution of a murder mystery which the police had abandoned as impossible to solve. Eight moths ago a man named Young was moths ago a man named Young was found dead at the foot of a stairway on West Washington street, and it was clear that he had been attacked in the house and thrown down stairs. Two women were in the house at the time and quarreling was heard in the rooms on the second floor.

The two women charged a painter named Seibert with the murder, but the accused proved an alibi so clearly that he was discharged, and it became evident that the women were trying to shield the real murderer. A man was observed leaving the scene just before the body of Young was discovered, but beyond the fact that he was heavy set no clew to his identity could be ob-tained. The mother charged her son Frank with the murder of Young, but afterward denied that she had done so, but the police are holding him while but the police are holding him while the matter is being investigated. Moore refuses to say where he was on the day of the murder, and appears very nervous and uneasy.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11 .- In the house Tuesday Mr. Outhwaite (Dem., O.), from the committee on rules, reported. a resolution for the immediate considsideration of the bill amendatory of the Geary Chinese exclusion act. He gave notice that he would call the resolution up in the future.

At 1 o'clock the house proceeded, under the special order, to the consid-eration of and vote on the Tucker federal election bill and amendments thereto. The first vote was on Burrow's amendment to Lacey's amend-ment and it provides for the retention of Sections 2005, 2006, 2007, 2008, 2009 and 2010. On a standing vote there were 81 in the affirmative and 183 in the negative. The amendment was re-jected-nays, 100; yeas, 198. The next vote was on the Lacey amendment, which strikes from the repealing clause the criminal sections of the statutes. The bill finally passed the house by a vote of 200 ayes, 101 nays. At 2:45, immediately after the passage of the Tucker bill, the house adjourned.

BLOUNT's proposition that the question of Hawaiian annexation be submitted to vote of all the coolies and ignorant natives who could never by any possibility express intelligently their own desires in the matter is a pretty good measure of Georgia statesmanship. Why isn't the principle of white rule just as good in Hawaii as it is in the south? No coolie denomination!

THERE was a good deal of talk in the senate last Friday on the silver question, but the best speech was made by Senator Blackburn, who said: "Mr. President-The people are demanding a settlement of this question. The people are impatient and have a right to be impatient." And it is worthy of remark, too, that the senator was not called to order for reminding the senate of the people.

THE New York Sun recently published an article on the wheat crop of the world, which shows from carefully collected statistics that the world will consume this year, if it can get it, a quantity of flour which will require 2,414,450,000 bushels of wheat to produce. The Sun points out, however, that there will be a harvest of only 2,217,550,000 bushels so that there will be a deficit of 196,000,000 bushels. It is stated that the crop in the United States will be 6,500,000 bushels less than is required for home consump. tion. To offset this we have a supply of old wheat on hand, left over from the harvests of 1891 and 1892, of 100,-000,000 bushels. According to these figures, therefore, the United States will have over and above its own requirements, 93,000,000 bushels to partially meet the deficiency of 196,000,000 bushels in the entire world. This defi ciency in the supply ought to send wheat up to a price which, would remunerate the farmer, and would under former conditions. Now, however, the great rings have such undisputed control that the markets are not likely to rise higher than is necessary to induce the producer to part with his crop, at any rate until after grain has passed out of first hands.

GROVER CLEVELAND in reply to a letter from the Governor of Georgia, him unless some bold stroke was made and should prove successful. As he had everything to gain and nothing to lose he was willing to take the risk. It is further explained that Norris at once began to cultivate the friendship of the Mayor and found the task a very easy one. This was followed up, so the story goes, with an arrangement between Norris and the democratic wing of the council, and with the acquiescence of the Mayor, that only a part of the appointments should be sent in; and that only a portion of the men nominated by the Mayor should be confirmed. For this | the council would be blamed and not the Mayor. "And your honor," we can imagine we hear the honorable city attorney saying to the Mayor, "we" will then have a good democratic city government and your new-found friends who worked so hard for your election will not blame you in the least, but instead, will use mild swear words at the council. See!"

The whole article referred to above sounds very much as if it might have been inspired by our honorable city attorney himself, were it not that in the light of the past six months developements the article contains vastly more truth than we should expect from such a source.

Mme, Rhea,

Mme. Rhea's engagement at the De-troit Opera House in "The Queen of Sheba" is one of the most dignified, worthy and interesting theatrical incidents of the year. A matinee will be given today. The robe which the queen wears when she appears on King Solomon's throne is a thing to make women gasp for breath.—Free Presse Press.

Mme. Rhea won the applause of a large audience at the Detroit last night in her new play, "The Queen of Sheba," and it may be said that her latest effort is a success. She has seldom ap peared to better advantage in any proluction.

The play founded upon the biblical story of the visit of Tamar, queen of Sheba, to Solomon's temple, is essentially spectacular. Rhea has staged it magnificently.

The scenes between Hiram and the queen in the second and last acts are the strongest parts of the play. The situation is particularly effective in situation is particularly effective in the fourth act, when Hiram refuses the proffered hand of the queen because in accepting he would make it neces-sary for her to give up her throne and desert her people. The introduction of the dancing girls after the arrival of the queen would be quite appropriate if the dance were only a good one. The same might be said of the male quar tet who serenade the king and queen. tet who serenade the king and queen. Mme. "The Pretty Puritan."

This musical production, which is to be presented at the Opera House on Thursday evening, Oct. 19th, is a story of New England Puritanism, and the time the latter part of the seventeenth century. The principal characters in the opera are Priseilla, a Puritan maiden; Hezekiah Help, an old Cromwellian soldier; Barnaby Binks, the village bellman; William Maygeld, the rustic lover; Matilda, the village coquette, and Lady Pendergast, Pris-cilla's aunt. The story treats of the ove of the Puritan maiden for William Mayfield. A call for volunteers to suppress an Indian outbreak, and the donning of the attire of a so dier by Priscilla in order to save her lover; her Prischia in order to save her lover; her subsequent appearance at the home of her rich aunt in Boston, and of course the ultimate ending in happiness to all. The piece is full of bright and catcl y music and lots of fun, and is stagen finely by Mr. Fred Dixon, who has here with the famous Bestonias are been with the famons Bostonians ever since their organization, being considered the best in his line in America We can look forward to one of the most enjoyable evenings of the season.

explains his attitude on the inancia questions now under discussion. We quote a passage which will give a good idea of his position: "I want a currency that is stable and safe in the hands of our people. I would not knowingly be implicated in a condition that will justly make me in the least degree answerable to any laborer or farmer in the United States for the shrinkage in the purchasing power of the dollar he has received for a full dollar's worth of work, or for a good dollar's worth of the product of his toil. I not only want our currency to be of such a character that all kinds of dollars will be of equal purchasing power at home, but I want it to be of such a character as will demonstrate abroad our wisdom and good faith, placing upon a firm foundation our credit among the nations of the earth, I want our financial conditions and the laws relating to our currency so safe and reassuring that those who have money will spend and invest it in business and new enterprises instead of hoarding it. You cannot cure fright by calling it foolish or unreasonable, and you cannot prevent the frightened man from hoarding his money." He adds: "Within the limits of what I have written I am a friend of silver, but I believe its proper place in our currency can only be fixed by readjustment of our currency legislation and the inauguration of a consistent and comprehensive financial scheme.] think such a thing can only be entered upon profitably and hopefully after the repeal of the law which is charged with all our financial woes." This does not sound much like democratic doctrine!

LAST week's Democrat has a long article explaining how it was, after the better element in both the Republican and Democrat parties, in alliance with the Independents and Prohibitionists elected Thompson Mayor, no change worthy of note was made in the management of our city affairs. The Democrat goes on to explain that Norris, who actually worked, and worked hard, to defeat Thompson saw in the professor's election that it was all up with

So high! So grand! And yet with all So sweetly, delicately fair. We had believed if one had said, "A dream, a phantom of the air

I was sitting in a tiny shoeshop, erched high and dry on the sea wall, ratching my friend, the "cap'n," stitch oes-little children's shoes. I called un "cap'n" by way of compliment, s queer old fellow with his bald pate d oily, mackerel face. Truth to tell, loubt his having arrived even to the mity of mate, and it was many a long ar since his desertion of the Mary Lib nd her crew for the safer but less lucrae occupation of making shoes.

The bay before us glinted and sparkled meath the pale, sunlit sky like a moner diamond, and away to the left retched the green waters of the Atlanmysterious and enchanting.

Did yeh know thet some summer ks had bought the islun?" casually rearked the cap'n as he paused to rewax ad roll his thread.

"Which island?" I proceeded to inire, for there were some half dozen ck heaps dotting the bay. "Why-er, the one alongside of Jilly's

"I'm waiting, cap'n," was the only response. And quietly at first, with many a pause for a long pull at his clay pipe but with ever increasing emotion, he re-lated the following story, which has haunted me ever since:

"Et were 16 year ago come this fall thet a big feller, named Sam Weston, come ashore with wife 'nd little un. He were mate on the Breezy, a fishin wessel bound fer the banks. He come to fa ther 'nd said: 'Will yeh rent me thet little house o' yourn over on th' isluni Can't seem to fin no berth in the town. He were werry jolly, 'nd father, he said: 'Aye! She seemed a bit down hearted at fust, but she were too joyful a creatur' to stay that ways yarns-Lord, no! I didn't unbolt the door, but called out low: 'Who is it? What d'yeh want?" "No answer. Then agin, a little loud-er: "Who is et? Tell me what yeh want." Nd a strange voice answered: 'It's me,

Jess. Let me in.' 'Nd I threw open the door. In she walked with the boy in 'er arms. It were Jess, 'nd yit it warnt Jess. I didn't dare to speak. A fearful look was in 'er eye. Mother was up by this time 'nd in the room. The gal walked straight up to 'er 'nd put the boy in 'er arms. 'Mis' Jameson,' said she in thet cold, strange voice, 'Mis' Jameson, I've killed Sam. He wanted to strangle my baby. See! See! The black marks on his soft little neck. I drove a knife deep, deep, into the cruel heart,' 'nd with thet she seemed to let go o' 'erself, fell right down on the floor screamin, 'nd et was all Peter 'nd I c'd do to keep 'er from banging 'erself to pieces.

'er be, 'nd et warn't long afore she lef' this world o' 'er own accord. Poor creatur'! Poor suff'rin creatur'!"

"And the little fellow, what became of him?" I ventured to ask, breaking the long pause that followed the cap'n's last words

"The little feller?" repeated my friend. raising his bowed head and mechanically rolling a bit of thread. "Well, d'yeh see a green dory over by the lighthouse? "Yes, cap'n."

"And a fine, strappin boy in 'er settin a lobster trap?

"Yes.

The Varied Value of Silver.

Silver, in its relative commercial value to gold, has varied greatly at different times since the two metals were first used for coins. In the days of Abraham the patriarch it was 8 to 1; B. C. 1000, it was 12 to 1; B. C. 500, 13 to 1, and at the beginning of the Christian era, about 9 to 1. In the year 500 A. D. it was 18 to 1, in 1100 it was 8 to 1, and at the time of the discovery of America only 7 to 1. In the year 1500 gold was only six times more valuable than the precious white metal, and within the next 100 years two pounds of silver could be exchanged evenly for one of gold. In 1616 gold was again on the boom, being 10 times more valuable than its paler brother, and in 1725 it was 13 times more valuable than silver, just as it was 500 years B. C. At the beginning of the present century silver was at a lower figure than it had been at any time since the year 500 A. D.-viz, 15.98 to 1. In 1876 the ratio (commercial) of silver to gold was 20 to 1, and in 1892 it was at the lowest point it has ever reached since the discovery of America-24.24 to 1. The figures for the present year are wanting .-St. Louis Republic.

shall carry the odors, if any there be, in the opposite direction. In style the stable should harmonize with the architecture of the house. A stable should be made warm and have good ventilation in order that the animals shall remain in a healthy condition. The drainage must not be forgotten, for pure air cannot be had without good drain-age. The best way to drain a stable is to construct a water tight manure pit in the yard to receive the liquids and litter from the stall. This manure pit should be pro-vided with a cover in order to prevent the escape of the ammonias from the manure when it is desired to use it for fertilizing purposes. The dry litter will absorb the iquids, and the rotting process will proceed more rapidly. The waste pipe from the stalls to the manure pit should be of iron, tightly calked with picked oakum and molten lead.

Water should be supplied inside the building conveniently near the stalls and should have a separate waste from the manure pit, as should the carriage wash Where it is necessary to house horses and cattle under the same roof, they should be separated completely for sanitary causes.

FIRST STORY.

The harness room also should be shut off from the stable and be well ventilated. as the ammonia destroys the leather in the harnesses.

The accompanying illustrations repre sent the design of a small stable suitable for a country residence or the suburbs of a city. The building is in the old colonial style of architecture and presents an at-tractive appearance. PT ED 6351 SECOND STORY

The building has a stone foundation and a concrete floor. Above the foundation it is of frame, sheathed and covered with strong waterproof paper and shingled. The cornice, doors, window frames, etc., are all of white pine, all painted two coats of suitable colonial colors. A chimney is provided for the purpose of heating the carriage room and coachman's room when desired. The loft is ventilated by means of louvres placed in the gables. This building can be erected for from $2,800 to $3,500, according to the finish desired. D. W. KING.

Pleasure In the Heavens.

There is a satisfaction in learning the names and positions of the stars that does. not belong to the study of the planets. The stars apparently never change so far as their position relative to each other is concerned. The planets are always moving, and to those who de not watch the heavens with particular attention it is a cause of surprise very often to find a "new star," adorning a certain section of the heavens. If, however, this newcomer be carefully observed from night to night, it will be found to change its distance from the fixed stars, and the observer will discover that it is a planet and at liberty to wander about from place to place under the sole condition that it obeys certain rules of motion. When the bright stars that grace the heavens become familiar to observers, they will know just what to expect on each succeeding season.-New York Times.

Overfastidious Taste.

Men overfastidious in their choice of tea have been victims of their too vivid imaginations. One man objected to a brand of tea purchased by his wife, pronouncing it "weeds," and accordingly selected a choice kind. His next cup of tea was pronounced perfect. The color was good, and "That's a cup of tea for you" was said with emphasis as he drank the second cap made from the "weeds" his wife had bought .- Good Housekeeping.

Times Have Changed.

Thieves who entered the house of the pastor of St. James Methodist Episcopal church in Harlem stole $800 worth of silver. The surprise is not that they stole it, but that the minister had it. Times have changed since the apostolic itinerant said, "Silver and gold have I none." -Brooklyn Eagle.

SKILLFUL INDIANS OF THE NORTH HAVE QUEER METHODS.

They Cut a Hole In the Ice, Build a Hut Over the Hole and Let Down a Decoy Through the Ice-Fooling Innocent Creatures of the Deep Lakes.

"You have heard of shooting game by means of decoy birds often enough no doubt," said an old sportman the other day, "but I doubt if you ever heard of fishing by means of a decoy fish, where the decoy was not used for bait. I never saw it done myself till I visited Georgian bay, a part of Lake Huron, in Can-ada, one winter. There I found that the half breed Indians erected huts on the frozen bay and fished through holes cut in the ice by means of a queer decoy.

"In order to facilitate matters, some of them had little stoves in their huts to keep them warm while they fished. The huts had only one opening, a door, and when the fisherman had entered and closed the door no light entered the hut except what came up through the floor, reflected through the ice outside and the water underneath it. This made it possible for the fisherman to see deep down into the water and difficult for fish to see him in his dark hut. The fisherman has a chair or bench to sit upon, food and drink to keep life in him during his long watch and a little stove to prevent chill. Now comes the decoy busine

"The half breed takes out of his kit a queer looking stick, painted and shaped roughly to look like a fish, he avers, though it would hardly be breaking the second commandment to worship it, for it is the likeness of nothing in the heavens above, or on the earth beneath, on in the water under the earth: but if the fish think it is the main object is accom-plished. This wooden counterfeit of a fish is loaded with lead, so that it sinks and lies in the water the right way when suspended from the middle of the back by a string attached to a short fishing pole. The Indian lets this decoy down into the water and by means of the string gives it a series of short, sharp jerks, which make it a dart hither and thither in a remarkably lifelike manner, although, of course, its range is exceedingly limited, about a yard in any direction.

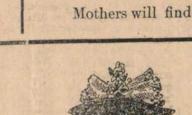

"The thing is provided with tin fins and tail and is weighted with lead most heavily at the head. The string is at-tached neaver the head than the tail, upon the back, and the skill with which these fishermen make the queer thing shoot about in a triangle under their feet, through a hole in the ice, is truly remarkable. I did not succeed in acquiring the art myself. I should say from trying it that it is rather more difficult to learn than fly casting.

"Presently a few fish, noticing this decoy darting about as if in active pursuit of his food, swim that way to see if there is not something there for them also. They may be fresh water herring, salmon, trout, whitefish or less valuable game; but none of them, big or little, is refused by the half breed. Fine fish he sells; the coarse ones he or his dogs or his children or his squaw eat readily.

"Pulling up his decoy, the fisherman lets down a baited hook and tries his luck on the newcomers, seldom in vain. These men fish with all sorts of queer bait. I saw one man make a splendid haul one day, using for bait only a big white bone button without any hook. The fish swallowed it greedily, and he would jerk them out of the water before they could get it out of their throats. By and by a pike or dogfish, seeing the shoal of fish around the pole, darts after them. They scatter in a hurry, and the fisherman lets down his decoy again to attract the pike. "Now all the skill at his command must be employed to make the decoy work well, for if it lags in the water long enough for the pike to suspect its genuineness he will turn away in disgust. If the decoy deceives the wily pike he dashes at it, and the fisherman jerks it away before the pike can grabit in his strong jaws. The pike turns to pursue, and as he halts to turn the fisherman drives at him with a long forked spear. If his aim is accurate, the pike is transfixed and is brought bleeding to the surface in a jiffy. "These men are skilled hunters and know many curious habits of the creatures they pursue. They say that muskrats, for instance, are able to swim long distances under the ice in this manner: Taking a long breath, the muskrat dives from his pursuer and swims as far as he can. When he can go no longer without a fresh breath, he comes up under the ice, and pressing his nose against it breathes out all the air in his lungs. This forms a big bubble under the ice, and the Indians say that the ice has the power of making that bubble of air fresh again, oxygenizes it in fact, and that the little fellow then breathes it in again and dives once more. This he can do half a dozen times, the Indians say, before the air he took with him becomes so foal that the ice cannot freshen it again. "Whether this property of the ice is true or not I cannot say, but the Indians firmly believe it, and I know that muskrats can travel a long way under the ice, and I have seen them come up under the ice, press their noses to it awhile and then dive again. Perhaps some scientist might explain the case."-New York Tribune.

The Southerner at Home.

The southerner at home is prone to neglect his headgear for the sake of having his feet well shod, and he will go about in public places wearing a battered and soiled slouch hat, but scrupulonsly neat as to his footwear. The peculiarity perhaps arises from family pride, a besetting southern sin, coupled with the belief that aristocracy is evinced in the shape and size of the feet. It is worthy of note, however, that the southern slouch hat is often a costly article of the finest and most durable felt. Such a hat for winter and a costly and indestructible Panama straw for summer are the proper headgear for a southern country gentleman .- Chicago Herald.

The Opening Reception.

The S. C. A. reception to the freshmen, last Friday evening, was a very enjoyable event. Fully eight hundred students were present, and many of the older members of the faculty mingled among the students and helped make it pleasant for the freshmen. The program was far removed from the ordinary dull one usually given at such events and when at the end all joined in singing "The Yellow and the Blue,' the walls of Newberry Hall rung as they have not done for many years. The features of the program were: Mr. F. A. Manney's welcoming address and Mrs. Trueblood's recital. Prof. Kelsey's address on behalf of the directors of the hall was indeed a hearty

The merry students did not break up till a late hour. As they left the hall a crowd of Sophomores appeared before the building in the drizzling rain to invite the freshmen to a rush. But the rain seemee to dampen the freshmen's spirits .- U. of M. Daily.

LITERARY NOTES.

"The Psychology of Crime" by Henry Wood is a notable feature of the October Arena, which also contains able contributions on religious, social, political and economic issues. Among other questions are "A Ready Financial Relief." "Silver or Fiat Money," and "Irrigation." The last subject is discussed by Richard J. Hinton, and will be read with interest by thousands who appreciate the growing importance of this great question .- The Arena Pub. Co., Boston, Mass.

In a helpful article on "City Pavements," Mr. William Fortune, of Indiajanapolis, will give the readers of the October Century the latest data in regard to the cost and durability of the different kinds of pavements now being laid in the most enterprising towns and cities of the United States. Several full-page pictures by Castaigne, of notable New York streets, showing the result of different methods of streetpaving, will accompany the article .--The Century Co., New York, N. Y.

Harper's Weekly opens with a striking picture, "On the Deck of the Vigilant," by M. J. Burns, and inside there is a page of the former defenders of the America's cup. Thomas Bailey Aldrich contributes a sympathetic article on Old Portsmouth (N. H.) days, entitled "Old Strawberry Bank," which is appropriately illustrated. Thulstrup has a strong double-page drawing of "The Midway Plaisance at Night"; and Farny has a picturesque drawing of a dance in the Dahomey village at the World's Fair,-Harper & Bros., New York, N.Y.

The Columbian Exposition is made the theme of two articles in the forthcoming October Popular Science Monthly. Mr. Charles M. Lungren is to open the number with an illustrated account of Electricity at the World's Fair, describing the enormous ten thousand lamp generators, the marvelous electric fountains, the electric railway and launches in operation, and other wonders of the most wonderfel of scientific arts. Under the title Household Arts at the World's 'Fair the exhibits relating to the daily life and labors of the home will be described by Mr. Frederik A. Fernald .- D. Appleton & Co., New York, N. Y.

The Readers of the October Review of Reviews, will find its most remarkable feature in the article on the "Irrigation Idea and Its Coming Congress." The writer of this important paper is William E. Poisoned by Scrofula

Is the sad story of many years lives made miserable through no fault of their own. Scrofula is more especially than any other a hereditary disease, and for this simple reason: Arising from impure and insufficient blood, the disease locates in the lymphatics, which are composed of white tissues; there is a period of foetal life when the whole body consists of white tissues, and therefore the unborn child is especially susceptible to this dreadful disease. But there is a remedy for scrofula, whether hereditary or acquired. It is Hood's Sarsaparilla, which by its powerul effect on the blood, expels all traces of the disease and gives to the vital fluid the quality and color of health. If you decide to take Hood's Sarsaparilla do not accept any substitute.

Robert Louis Stevenson's Story Writing Mr. R. L. Stevenson says that he begins work every morning at 6 o'clock and sometimes keeps at it all day in spite of an impression that three hours of. writing is enough. "I am a laborious writer," he avers, thereby encouraging the worthy band whose motto is "Labor Omnia Vincit" and who have faith that nothing is beyond the reach of hard work. But straightway he dashes their hopes when he says, "I inherit a taste for story telling from my father, who used to tell a story every night before he went to bed." Is not that a most unfair advantage for a romancer to take of his contemporaries, to burst upon the current story market with the prodigious endowment of descent from a Scotchman who out of mere love of yarning was used to tell a story every night? Frankly it seems a worse blow to ordinary competitive endeavor than for an Astor to take up the business of publishing magazines.-Harper's Weekly.

A HERO.

At about 2 o'clock on a raw, blustery March morning the inhabitants of the little village of Shickshinny on the upper Susquehanna were roused from sleep by hoarse shouts and by the violent ringing of the church bell. Men and boys dressed in haste, and a crowd soon congregated on the river shore.

There was good cause for excitement. The ice, which seemed comparatively firm on the previous evening, had broken during the night. The yellow tide, already swollen to many feet above its normal level, was almost hidden by the heaving, grinding cakes. And worst of all this unexpected event had placed an unknown human being in peril. From Scrub island came hoarse shouts for help and at intervals the discharge of a gun. The red flashes could be plainly seen. Scrub island lay in midchannel directly opposite the village. It was hardly more than a bar, for nothing grew upon it but bushes. Near the lower end was a small cabin, which some of the village boys built for amusement out of driftwood. Here the castaway had probably taken refuge, and his situation was extremely critical. In a short time the cabin would surely be carried off by the rising flood and ice.

As the crowd were speculating on the unknown one's identity and discussing the hopelessness of rescue, Squire Tyson, the most wealthy and influential man of the village, came running down the

"Jasper is on the island," he cried, wringing his hands in agony. "He went over this afternoon to shoot ducks and has not returned home. He must have fallen asleep in the cabin, and the ice has carried away his boat. Will no one save my, poor boy? Are you all cowards?" The unhappy man grasped a boat that lay bottom up on the shore and tried to drag it into the water. Half a dozen men caught and held him.

"You will only throw your life away," they cried. "No boat could move a dozen yards in that ice. We could save your boy if there was any chance at all." The squire suddenly realized that this wastrue. Hestood gazing mutely toward the island, his face rigid with despair. A groan of pity burst from the crowd as another gunshot was heard, followed by hoarse appeals for help. The tide rose higher and higher, but now clear spots were visible here and there, and all at once the river seemed to become free of amp in. Here comes the ice, we have a slim chance of dodging Too late. Even as Jasper sprang to the boat the water heaved and tossed, and the rumble of the dread avalanche deepened to a roar. Half a dozen cakes of ice swirled by, rising and falling with the waves. Curt pulled straight down stream, while his companion crouched in the stern of the boat, helpless with terror. But the race could end in only one way. The line of broken ice came grinding on like a race horse, growling with fury. It smashed the cabin to fragments and sped after the frail little craft that was striving so hard to escape. Jasper cried out with terror and held his hands before his face to shut out the awful sight. Curt stuck to the oars, but he knew nevertheless that escape was out of the question. His brave heart sickened at the thought of what would happen when the crashing ice cakes reached the boat. Suddenly he saw something that roused a glimmer of hope. Twenty yards toward the left shore and slightly in advance of the avalanche floated a huge tree, evidently torn bodily from the soil. Its broad end, bristling with snakelike roots, was turned down stream, and here and there it thrust out thick limbs that served to steady it, like outriggers on a boat. The opportunity was a good one, for the tree looked sufficiently strong and massive to hold its own against the turbulent ice. If the castaways could reach it, they stood a fair chance of escaping Curt's resolve was instantly death. formed. He roused Jasper from his stupor of fear and briefly explained what he intended to do.

"Now," cried Curt. Jasper caught the dangling roots and pulled himself to a place of safety. An agile spring landed Curt beside him, and the next instant the boat was whirled off into the gloom. As the lads crept higher up the trunk, Jasper slipped and was precipitated into the water. In his struggles to keep from sinking he seized one of the roots and clung to it frantically, crying for help.

At the risk of his life, Curt crawled down, and with some difficulty rescued his companion. They lost no time in choosing positions among the heavy limbs and then had barely settled themselves when down the shock came. The towering masses of ice surged around the tree, burying the trunk from sight at times and rocking it to and fro like a cradle. The peril was frightful and imminent for half an hour. The boys were beyond the reach of the ice, however, and happily the outriggers prevented the tree from rolling over.

The night wore on, and when it broke the tree stranded on one of the piers of the Catawissa bridge. Willing hands rescued the castaways with ropes, and when they had recovered from their exposure they were sent home by rail, whither the glad news had already preceded them.

It need hardly be said that Curt was never called a coward again .- William Murray Graydon in Hartford Courant.

'Our Religious Denominations." A comparative study will be made of the origin, history and doctrines of the various churches and important religious movements of Christendom. The teacher will be Mrs. Sunderland who for many years has made a special study of history, religious as well as secular.

The Social Circle receptions which have proved such an attractive feature in the past at Harris Hall will be continued this year. The entertainment committee expects to have more funds at its disposal this year for this purpose, so that members may feel assured of even more pleasant evenings than in years past. The first reception will be given in the latter part of this month. Membership of the Social Circle is open

The Faculty Concert given last Thursday night was a complete success. The hall was full to overflowing. The program showed good judgment both as to where hackmen may solicit passengers the character of the music selected and its length. The new teachers were all well received, The songs by Miss Bailey were especially good. If she can teach as well as she can sing she will certainly become very popular. Mr. Zeitz did most excellent work upon his violin. He certainly is a master upon his instrument. Miss Loudon also showed much natural ability as well as thorough training.

township trustees and district officers of several adjacent counties will be invited to attend a day's conference with the state superintendent. The third district will be known as Washtenaw, Wayne and Monroe.

A New Book. Professors Fulton and Trueblood, oint compilers of "Choice Readings" have gone farther and become the authors of a very attractive book of over 400 pages entitled "Practical Elements of Elocution." Ginn & Company, Boston, are the publishers and the mechanical part of the work is most excellent. The book will commend itself to teachers of the art of expression because of the successful efforts its authors have made to harmonize the various systems of elocation and to place them on a scientific basis, and because of the fact that it embodies some fifteen years of study and actual experience in the class room. The whole is well arranged, not in set lessons but according to the various general elements of the subject.

Prof. R. I. Fulton has the chair of Elocution and Oratory in the Ohio Wesleyan University and is a lecturer on the same subjects in the Ohio State University. Prof. Trueblood of our own University is becoming more and more widely known as a most successful teacher of, and writer upon elocution and oratory. The book just issued reflects much credit upon both men and will no doubt win the recognition it deserves.

The postoffice department at Washington has ruled the writer has a right to gain possession of a letter providing he prove to the satisfaction of the postmaster at the office from which it was sent that he was the writer of it. Even if the letter has arrived at its destination and before it has been delivered to the person to whom it is addressed it may be recalled by the writer by a telegram through the mailing office. The reason assigned is that the United States is only the agent of the writer while the letter isintrans it. This decision is important to business men as well as to private individuals .- Ex.
