A TERRIBLE DISASTER.

THIRTEEN PEOPLE KILLED IN A MICHIGAN CENTRAL WRECK.

the Hand Jury Disagrees—Letter from Judge Cheever-Jadge Cooley's Opin-ion - Long Distance Telephone -Board of Supervisors-Etc.

A Terrible Railroad Accident.

A horrible rear-end collision of two sections of a west bound excursion rain on the Michigan Central occurred at Jackson last Friday morning. The first, section of a train of seven sections, all easteren people, bound for the World's Fair pulled into Jackson at twenty minutes past eight o'clock last Friday morning and stopped for breakfast. The second section left Detroit thirty-two minutes after the first, but stopped at Grass Lake until the first had been reported at Jackson. When the engineer of the second section, which had left Grass Lake when the first had been reported at Jackson, saw the signal that the first section was still on the track at the Jackson depot, he made an effort to stop his train but for some reason the air brakes refused to work. Although every effort possible wis made to stop the train, it was too late. The train was probably running thirty or thirty-five miles an hour when it dashed into the rear end of the section at the Jackson depot which was loaded with passengers. Two cars were crushed into a heap of ruins with the most appalling results. Twelve people were almost instantly killed while the number of the injured reached nearly fifty, many of them

Mrs. Donavon, Yonawanda, Pa. The Michigan Central officials were ust beginning to congratulate themselves that the greatest traffic in the history of the road was rapidly drawing to a close without a single accident when suddenly they are confronted with one of the worst disasters of the year and evidently all due to the work of a tramp who was stealing a ride and who turned the stop-cock on the air brakes in order to check the train so that he might get off.

Mrs. Chant an Unity Club. Unity Club had a unique experience at its opening lecture last Monday night. For a while it looked as if the audience was to be disappointed, though at last all turned out happily. Mrs Chant was badly delayed on her way from Chicago by a railway accident, so that she did not arrive until a full hour after the time set for the lecture. Fortonately, a number of musicians; were present and in a few minutes a musical program was extemporized which enertained the audience and kept everybody in the best of good spirits until nearly half past nine when the panting horses of the hackman brought Mrs. thant from the depot, and all were rewarded by a lecture of an hour on America as Seen through an English Woman's Eyes", describing her six months journeyings and experiences in the Atlantic cities, the White Mounsins, the West and on the Pacific east, with a keenness of observation, brilliancy of descriptive power, a symbothy with humanity in all its phases, wealth of humor, and an eloquence hat delighted everybody making them wholly oblivious of the lateness of the hour, and only sorry when the end ame. The audience was large packing be church to the doors. Unity Club to be congratulated upon the fine pening of its course.

Long Distance Telephony.

The REGISTER reporter was invited to visit the central telephone station last Thursday afternoon and with a number of other newspaper men and prominent citizens test the new long distance telephone which had just been completed to Ann Arbor. The success of the new phone, especially as com pured with the old way, is beyond description. By the old method it is difficult and very unsatisfactory to talk to a place as far away as Detroit, while it is only in cases of great emergency that one attem ts to cover a longer distance. With the new method one is able, as was fully demonstrated last Thursday, to talk with comparative ease fully a thousand miles. Connections were made with Jackson, Port Huron, Detroit, Chicago, Cleveland and even New York City and conversation was carried on in a moderate tone of voice and was heard clearly and distinctly from all the points mentioned. To business and professional men this new method will be of great value. The rate, too, is not unreasonable, it being seventy dollars per year for private residences and eighty dollars per year for business offices. Some of the funny features of the visit should not be overlooked. Colonel Dean had just finished a talk with

Saginaw when The Register man came in. The latter noted when the next man went to the phone to talk with Detroit that he, wholy absorbed in the workings of the new instrument forgot himself and having nothing special to talk about naturally began talking about those things most common to him and in the language most natural to him. Mr. Beal when he took the phone to speak with Chicago at once began inquiring about the state of the money market and inquired, very earnestly, whether or not the World's Fair would pay expenses and whether or not Exposition stock would likely be worth more than one cent on the dollar; Mr Beal neglected to tell the Chicago man whether or not he held any Windy City Exposition stock. When Cleveland was called up and was told that a number of Ann Arbor gentlemen were present testing the new long distance telephone and that some one of them would like to talk with that city for a few moments, the response came back from the young lady at the phone in Cleveland, "all right, if it makes no difference, should prefer some elligible bachelor." Pres. Angell responded to this call and at once there was a rush for the special phones. The REGISTER reporter, modest as usual, surrendered his chance to more clamorous ones, and as a result, the nature of the conversa. tion following was lost to our readers. If there are any future developements we will report. Next came a conversation between the Times man and New York City. The New York man evidently knew but little of the Wild and Woolly West, while the Times man was nervous, and at once launched out in his usual braggadocia style about the large attendance at our great university. "Wait a minute," gasped the New York man, while Pres. Angell, Secretary Wade and Major Soule remembered pressing engagements else-where—or possibly the fear that they might be called upon to confirm the Times man's statement, which staggered even the Gothamite, may account for

Judge Cooley's Opinion. Concerning the tactics of the minority in the United States Senate in relation to the repeal of the Sherman Silver Bill Judge Thomas M. Cooley in a interview with ex-Mayor Hodges, of Baltimore, recently, said :

"It is a fundamental principle of representative government that the majority shall rule. It was the intention of the founders of our constitution, and embodied in the constitution, that the majority in each house of congress should control the deliberations of that house, any exception to this rule being specifically stated. Now for a majority of the senate to concede, for any reason, that a rule of practice in debate, or of senatorial courtesy, makes it possible for a minority to prevent legislation by indefinitely protracting debate, is equivalent to revolution. It is as much revolution as though accomplished with arm and violence.

"If the minority can postpone legislation for one session they may for a second, and so on. The majority cannot constitutionally concede the existence of a rule or custom which is subversive of their right and duty of leg-

At a meeting of the Michigan Political Science association, to be held at the Hotel Cadillac tomorrow and next day, Judge Cooley will discuss this question at length.

The Jury Disagrees.

The Hand murder trial which has excited so much attention during the past week was brought to a close at nine o'clock last Monday night when the jury which had been out since Saturday night reported that they could not agree. The vote stood nine for conviction and three for acquital. This was the way the jury stood on the econd ballot and no change could be made from the result. The three men who refused to vote for conviction were Cole, Burch and Kalmbach. It is stated that one of these three believed that Hand committed the deed but did not believe that the evidence which was offered proved it. It will now be necessary to go over the trial again. Whether or not a change of venue will be taken is not known, but it will probably not be done, but will be retried here and very likely in the December term. The attorneys on both sides made a hard fight thus adding greatly to the interest taken in the case, especially by the large number of law students who crowded the court room every day during the trial. It is unfortunate that the case could not be de cided, as it is certainly a hardship to keep the accused confined in jail if he is innocent while it will add heavily to the county's expense to go whole ground again as will now be

The New Plan by the S. L. A.

The Students' Lecture Association has decided to try a new plan for reserving seats for the entertainments in university hall as follows: General admission tickets will be sold for $2.00 a piece. All those who wish to have their seats reserved for the full course of entert inments will have the privilege of changing these general admission tickets for others with a seat reserved for the season by paying fifty

So that the plan may be perfectly fair, it will be arranged that every other two rows shall be open to this sale while the rest shall be open to all holding general admission tickets The object is simply to provide for reserving seats for all those who would rather pay a little extra than to stand in line for every entertainment, while just as good seats will be left for those who do not wish to pay the extra fifty cents. All not having these reserved seat tickets will be seated according to the Choral Union plan. It is to be hoped that this plan will succeed and thus do away with the old plan of lining up hours before the boards open, or get a poor seat.

Big Grape Crop.

Jacob Ganzhorn of the third ward probably grows more grapes than any other person in this vicinity. He has been in this particular line of fruit raising for forty years having begun when he was only twelve years of age. He now has twelve acres of vineyard, and with a good crop he has from thirty-five to forty tons of grapes. Being on high sandy ground the late frosts seldom affect his crop. This also enables him in the fall to leave his crop on the vines until it is thoroughly ripe. Mr. Ganzhorn says that the Concord is his favorite and the most reliably variety. He, however, is making a thorough test of some sixty other varieties. Mr. Ganzhorn proposes to have the best, but does not intend to give up one that he knows is good until he is sure he has somegood condition for a successful season. | thing better.

III. THE WEST OPENED.

The settlement at the mouth of the Muskingum was premature, except as preparing the way for the enterprise of a coming generation. It was, indeed, no great hardship for people who had braved the perils and trials of the Revolution that they had to be four months in reaching their destination. To be upset in snow, or to be obliged to walk most of the way, as many doubtless were and be tumbled into the streams, was little more than fun. And it seemed at the time rather a blessing than otherwise that they had almost nothing to transport. And even to be shut up to live within them selves, without an accessible market was a misfortune which they met with wonderful fortitude. The Mississippi offered no opening to traffic. The lower section of that river was in the hands of Spain and the territory which now forms the states of Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi and Alabama, was quite as likely as otherwise to become a Spanish possession. It was at best to be the prize of a contest, if it ever became ours, and to make this great stream a channel of commerce between eastern Ohio and the North Atlantic ports, would involve endeavors almost as formidable as to make instead of each trip a circumnavigation of the globe This river could not by any known process be profitably navigated up stream, so that the purchase of its whole line by Mr. Jefferson in 1803 did not for the time greatly mend the mat-

Nor could the line of the great lakes and the St. Lawrence be used without involving portages around Niagara Falls and between Montreal and Albany. A few articles of merchandise could be transported over the Alle ghanies from Philadelphia in wagors or on pack-horses; but to convey heavy farm-products from Ohio to the Atlantic ports by any then existing process of conveyance would have been to earn them a second time and that at a costly rate. The people had, therefore, nothing with which to pay for the goods they might need from the sea-board, and so got along very much without them.

As to travel, in August 1817 President Monroe, in a tour for inspecting the fortifications of the northern frontier, came up from Buffalo to Detroit, as is supposed, in a little schooner, oc. cupying about a week, and having been entertained in the latter city by a ball and other festivities given in his honor, he set out with Governor Cass, General Macomb and General Brown on horseback from Detroit for Washington Behold these three dignitaries, thus traversing the woods of Eastern Michigan, Central Ohio, and the mountains of Pennsylvania and Maryland, when it would have taken thirty days for the exchange of communications between the Chief and one of his executive servants at the capitol, all which can now be leisurely done in thirty minutes! And yet the gratulatory speeches made in this tour of the President showed about as much elation at our wonderful growth as do speeches of our day, though there was but a semi-weekly mail received at Detroit, and that was carried on horseback. The Gazette of 1817 explains in one in stance its want of news by the drown ing of the postman's horse in swim-

A spark scintillated in this darkness when Robert Fulton invented an application of steam-power to navigation. A miniature specimen of what is called | sor 69c a steamboat appeared on the Ohio in 1811 and one came puffing up from Buffalo to Detroit, not far from the time of the President's visit. But something more definite had been sug. gested in New York for bringing the east and west into nearer relations. It is worthy of a passing remark that conception and execution have generally gone hand in hand in our history. Charles the Great in the eighth century conceived and cherished the thought of connecting the upper waters of the Rhine with those of the Danube by a canal, thus to make a continuous water communication across Central Europe between the North Sea and the Negro pont. In the nineteenth century King Ludwig of Bavoria met this suggestion of the greatest of his regal predecessors and carried it into execution. On the contrary, the hint of a water way from the Hudson to Lake Erie was not suffered to grow cold until the canal was completed, destined to become the channel of such a current of migration as ought ever to make the years following its completion the opening of an epoch in our history.

The Examination of Stonewall J. De France.

IN A CHEERFUL FRAME OF MIND.

Governor Rich Issues the Formal Order For the Investigation of the Lynching of William Sullivan at Corunna-Odd Fellows In Session at Lansing.

DETROIT. Oct. 18 .- The examination of Stonewall J. De France, charged with the abduction of Joseph Perrien, which was to have taken place Tuesday, was postponed two weeks.

Shortly before 9 o'clock De France was taken from the jail by Officer Schemansky and given a seat on the prisoner's bench, which was also occupied by four other prisoners. De France sat as far apart from them as the length of the bench would permit. He ap peared in as cheerful a frame of mind as when he was arrested 10 days ago and shook hands with the officers and others whom he knew as they entered.

A few minutes after 9 o'clock Mr.
Conely, the defendant's attorney, appeared, and soon Prosecutor Frazer and Assistant Mandell came in. Judge Sheahan took his seat on the bench at 9:15 o'clock and at once called the case

Prosecutor Frazer stated that he was not ready to proceed with the examination. He asked for a further continuance. Mr. Conely objected to any further delay unless some showing was made to the effect that it was really

Mr. Frazer stated that all the witnesses were not on hand and that the nesses were not on hand and that the officers in charge of the case were outside of the state. Mr. Conely stated that the officers had left the city after the arrest of De France, and that it was their business to be present. There was no evidence, he said, that any of the many witnesses in Detroit had been subpensed. Mr. Frazer asked that the case be adjourned two weeks, Judge Sheahan ordered the adjournment asked.

Will Investigate the Lynching.

Lansing, Oct. 18.—Governor Rich and Attorney General Ellis were in conference together several hours talk-ing over the charges brought by the latter against Sheriff Jacobs of Shiawasse county in connection with the lynching of William Sullivan at Corunna last May, and the governor has issued a formal order directing the attorney general to take charge of the investigation. The law requires the testi-mony to be taken before the judge of probate or one of the circuit court com-missioners. Judge of Probate Bush, whose home is in Vernon township, three miles from Durand, where most of the lynchers are supposed to reside, says his health is very poor, and the investigation will therefore probably be conducted before Circuit Court Commissioner J. G. Knight of Owosso. The attorney general will proceed in the matter as soon as possible and will make a very searching investigation.

Mrs. Stubb's Strunge Death.

SAGINAW, Oct. 18.-Michigan Central saginaw, Oct. 18.—Michigan Central section hands found the body of a woman lying on the track near the German planingmill. The feet were bare and no headwear could be found. The left arm had been cut off and the head had been badly cut and bruised. The police were notified and an investigation showed the remains were those of gation showed the remains were those of Mrs. F. J. Stubb, living at Walnut and Ninth streets. How Mrs. Stubb came to her death is merely a matter of con-jecture. About two weeks ago her son was arrested charged with maliciously letting down a pair of bars on the farm of a Bridgeport resident and letting out some cattle. A day or so ago the lad was discharged in the police court, but the matter had so preyed on the mind of Mrs. Stubb that the became de-

Four Seriously and Perhaps Fatally Injured.

AN EXPRESS RUNS INTO A FREIGHT.

The Engine Crashed Through Two Rear Cars-Passengers Thrown From Their Berths by the Force of the Collision, but Escaped With Slight Bruises. PITTSBURG, Oct. 18.—The first section of the New York and Chicago limited express, on the Fort Wayre road, was wrecked at Wellsville, ..., 40 miles from this city, at 6:15 o'clock Tuesday morning. Two trainmen were killed instantly, and four others were injured, two of whom will die.

Owing to a freight wreck on the Fort Wayne road, the limited was obliged to come in over the Pittsburg and Cleveland track. Near Wellsville the fog was very heavy and it was impossible to see any considerable distance.

Suddenly, through the fog, scarcely 100 feet ahead, the engineer of the limited saw the lights of a train standing on the track on which his train was remained. He reversed put on the six on the track on which his train was running. He reversed, put on the air, but too late, and before he or his fireman could jump the engine crashed into the freight and their two lives were crushed out. The cars behind were piled up and fell over, broken and wrecked. The engine went through the rear car of the freight, splitting it in two, and climbed part way up the second car.

The passengers were thrown from

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.

An Engine Runs Into a Coach and Injures Several Workmen.

ALTOONA, Pa., Oct. 18.—Fifty employes of the Pennsylvania road were in a wreck in the tower yard immediately under the Red bridge, a short distance east of here last night at 6:50 o'clock which they will remember for some time to come. These men are what are known rs repair hands. There were 70 in the gang and at the hour stated they were coming homeward all naconscious of danger, when they were suddenly and rudely thrown into a heap in one corner of the car with a redhot stove full of live coals in their

When the accident occurred their car was crossing over from the main track to get on a sidetrack and then come on up the yard without interfering with the numerous sections of the Columbian express, which was then arriving. At the same time an engine and train were going west and this engine ran into their car, tearing out the side and one end and throwing the men into a pile in the corner, as stated. The panic among the men lasted but an instant, when those who were unhart extricated themselves from the tangled up mass of humanity, and then turned their attention to aiding those who were unable to help themselves, the car being soon emptied and 17 men being found to be seriously injured. The injuries con-sisted of broken arms and legs, cuts on the head and body, and painful burns. One man was ruptured across the stomach, and another had a cut down his forehead through the skull as clean as though it had been done with

The injured are: James M. Duffy, contused wound of face and burn on right hand; C. R. Sweigert, incised wound in middle of forehead, probable fracture of skull and burns on both hands; James Englehart, head badly cut; John R. Richie, lacerated wound cut; John K. Riche, lacerated wound of forehead, right arm burned, fracture of right knee and general contusion of body; George M. Wyandt, right arm broken at elbow and hands burnt. These men were taken to the hospital, where their injuries were attended to, and they are still there. The others were taken home, and, so far as can be learned, but one, John Hostler, received serious injury. His right leg was learned, but one, John Hostler, received serious injury. His right leg was broken. The following received slight cuts, contusions, burns, etc.: Frank McMullin, Henry Hawk, John Matthews, J. Haas, O. P. Bush, foreman of the gang: C. W. Kreider, Frank Smith, Samuel Crawley and James Leonard.

This Time on the Michigan Division of the Big Four-Two Injured.

WABASH, Ind., Oct. 18.—Southbound express train No. 21 on the Michigan division of the Big Four collided at North Manchester, in this county. The freight train was unable to get onto a sidetrack, and the engine was cut off and run around the rear. The express, running at a high rate of speed, struck the freight engine's tender. Both loco-motives were totally wrecked and the caboose and baggage car were smashed. The passengers were thrown over the seats by the shock. The only ones, injured were: William Barry of Goshen, injured about the head, back and limbs; Woodford Davidson of Indianapolis,

A FRENCH HERO GONE.

Ex-President Patrick Mac-Mahon Dead.

DESCENDANT OF AN IRISH KING.

Served In Several African Campaigns. Commanded a Division In the Crimea and Led the Assault on Sebastopol. Wounded at the Battle of Sedan.

Paris, Oct. 18.-Marshal MacMahon, ex-president of the republic, died at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning. He had been seriously ill since Oct. 9, and his death was not unexpected.

Marshal McMahon died at Cheatu la Foret, on the Loir. During the night the sufferer's strength gradually declined and he grew weaker and weaker until the end came peacefully. The family of the deceased soldier were present at his death.

Patrick Maurice de MacMahon, duke of Magenta, was born in Sully, France, July 13, 1808. He was a direct descendant of Brian Boru, the famous Irish king who conquered the Danes of Clon-tarf. Young Patrick Maurice entered the military school at St. Cyr in 1825. He served in several African campaigns. He succeeded General Canrobert as commander of a division in the Crimea in 1855, and led the assault on Sebasto pol Sept. 8, carrying the works of Mal-akoff.

General MacMahon took a leading part in the Italian campaign in 1859, when he won the baton of a marshal, and was created duke of Magenta in commemoration of that victory. He was made governor general of Algeria in 1864, and attempted to found an Arab kingdom, but failed.

In the Franco-Prussian war Marshal
MacMahon had command of the First army corps. His forces were defeated at Woerth by the army of the Crown Prince of Prussia on Aug. 6, 1870. At the battle of Sedan, on Sept. 1, he was chief in command, but was wounded at the beginning of the engagement, and the command devolved on General

Wimpffen, who signed the capitulation.
Marshal MacMahon was elected president of the republic on the resignation of M. Thiers on May 24, 1873, retiring on Jan. 30, 1879. Little has been heard of him since his retirement. From the moment he returned to the station in life for which nature and habit had fitted him, a certain grace and even grandeur gathered round his retreat. He had left the palace where he had dwelt as lord of French taxes with clean hands. ford of French taxes with clean hands. Afterward he returned to his life of other days—hunting, shooting and traveling. Round his table he gathered many of his old companions in arms, to whom the new government had showed decided hostility, and became content to be a simple spectator of the struggles of the newborn republic.

MADRID, Oct. 18 .- The notorious anarchist Salvochea, who has been imprisoned for some time at Valladolid, was found in his cell with wounds in the neck and groin, resulting from an attempt to kill hi uself with a pair of scissors. Earlier in the day Salvochea had a long conversation with a priest. The latter had offered to secure his pardon, but the prisoner had rejected this friendly offer. He said he wanted no pardon, as in six months anarchism would be triumphant, and he would then be released by his friends. Half of Salvochea's life has been spent in prison. He is a native of Cadiz, where his family is an add and the salvochea's life. his family is an old and respected one. He took a prominent part in the revolution of 1863, and became known everywhere in Spain through his advanced opinions and personal bravery. In 1873 he was sentenced to death, was reprieved, owing, it is alleged, to the efforts of his family in his behalf. His popularity among the poor in Cadiz is unbounded.

United States, and being descended from the famous Marshal Blucher. Count Blucher's gardener, it appears, was desperately in love with a pretty servant girl. This girl seemed to have incurred the displeasure of Countess Blucher, who dismissed her. The lovesmitten gardener took the girl's dismissal very much to heart and went to the Count and Countess Blucher, begging them to reinstate the girl in her former them to reinstate the girl in her former position. This they refused to do, and this refusal appears to have driven the gardener to madness.

Count and Countess Blucher were looking out of one of the large windows of the castle, entirely unsuspicious of danger, when the gardener jumped out from behind a bush, raised a rifle to his shoulder and fired a shot, which struck the count in the head, killing him almost instantly. Before the countess could recover from the horror of the situation the gardener fired a second shot, which struck the countess in the neck. The gardener then committed suicide with the same weapon.

Barcelona, Oct. 18.—An anarchist was arrested here and a search of his lodgings resulted in the discovery of a number of bombs and a mass of the usual anarchist literature. The police have not relaxed their vigilance and every attempt is being made to hunt dangerous anarchists to earth.

Strong Testimony. ELKHART, Ind., Oct. 18 .- In the perjury case growing out of the damage suit against the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway company some strong testimony was placed by the state in the circuit court and something of a sensation caused thereby. The giv-ing in of evidence has consumed much more time than was expected, but it is thought the arguments will be begun in a short time.

Senators Still Talking on the sherman Repeal Bill—House Proceedings.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—The journal of Monday having been read, objection fr. Monday having them rend, objection to it was made by Let Dolph (Rep., Or.) on the ground that it did not show the fact that Senators Kyle (Pop., S. D.) and Allen (Pop., Neb.), who had not answered to a roll call although they were in the chamber, should be entered as present, although he had at the time called attention to the fact. If senators could talk indefinitely and If senators could talk indefinitely and could read from books and newspapers without limit, and if the senate did not amend the rules, they would have to drift down a current of endless talk without accomplishing anything.

The senate was in a ridiculous attitude. A senator would suggest the absence of a quorum, and then when the roll was called he would not answer.

Even if there was no quorum the chair man of the finance committee would rise and recognitions. rise and move that the sergeant-at-arms be directed to request the attend-ance of senators. And all this time there were senators present in the chamber who would not answer to their names. He was "tired" of all this. It was time that the senate showed a little backbone. If a senator refused to vote he should be dealt with. If a senator refused to answer a rollcall it was the duty of the chair to order his name to be put on the journal. If the chair did not do so he (Mr. Dolph) would appeal to the senate.

Mr. Harris (Dem., Tenn.) suggested sarcastically that if the senator from Oregon was tired the best remedy for him was to sit down and rest. It would be a relief to him and a rest to the senate. He argued that the journal

Mr. Butler (Dem., S. C.) taunted Mr Dolph with not having shown "back-bone" when he had got to deal, a couple of years ago, with the newspaper correspondents on the question of execu tive sessions.

After quite a lengthy colloquy be-ween Senators Morgan and Washburn, Mr Sherman took the floor and spoke on the repeal bill. When he had fin-ished a recess was taken until today.

House Proceedings,

Washington, Oct. 18.—In the consideration morning hour in the house Mr. Culberson (Dem., Tex.), from the committee on judiciary, called up the bill amending the revised statutes, so as to dispense with proof of loyalty during the late war of the rebellion as prerequisite to being restored or admitted to the pension roll of any person who otherwise would be entitled thereto under existing laws; and also providing that proof of loyalty shall not be necessary in any application for bounty land where the proof otherwise shows that the applicant is entitled thereto. Passed.

After considerable discussion the Cox bill was passed. It provides that no national banking association shall make any loan to its presidents, its vice president, its cashier, directors, or any of its clerks, tellers, bookkeepers, agents servants, or other persons, in its employ until the proposition to make such a loan stating the amount, terms and se-curity offered therefor, shall have been submitted in writing by the person siring the same to a meeting of the board of directors of such banking association, or of the executive committee of such board, if any, and accepted and approved by a majority of those present constituting a quorum, but only to the amount now allowed by law. The house at 5 o'clock adjourned.

ALL WERE LOST.

The F. C. Leighton Went Down Above Port Colborn. BUFFALO, Oct. 18 .- There is now not much doubt that the schooner sunk above Port Colborn is the F. C. Leighton of Port Huron. The vessel was thought to be the Georger or the W. H Rounds, but both are reported safe. The Leighton left Toledo ahead of the Rounds and with prevailing weather should have reached here long before this, even if she had been in shelter during the gale. There is no chance for the crew having survived. The Leighton was owned by B. Calhoon of Clayton, who sailed her, and was valued

THE REGISTER requests all of the friends, who have business at the Probate Court, to send their printing to this office. Reasonable rates only are charged.

THE Detroit Journal and the Evening News have made a sensible move in deeiding to stop the cut-throat policy of selling their papers for a cent. Next Monday they will both raise the rate to the former price of two cents each. This will give the news dealer and the news boys, who were the principal make a fair profit. Except in cities very much larger than Detroit where the daily sales run over a hundred thousand it is sheer folly to attempt to get up a first class metropolitan paper and sell it for a cent.

A RATHER unexpected newspaper combination was made in Detroit last week. It was the uniting of the democratic Sunday News with the republican Sunday Tribune. It is stated that the conglomerate will be neutral in polities. We do not see how it could well be otherwise without danger of the democratic head and the republican body, or vice versa, continually getting into trouble. The new paper, "The Sunday News Tribune" seems rather odd, but promises much. THE REGISTER hopes that there may be peace and harmony among the strange bedfellows, at least, until the democratic part of the combination is absorbed, swallowed, or, in some way, disposed of.

THE terrible railroad disaster at Jack son last Friday morning was one of the worst, if not the worst, in the history of the Michigan Central road. Evidently there is much yet to accomplish in the science of railroading before perfect safety can be assured. The accident at Jackson, however, seems to have been due to some very unusual cause. The report that a tramp who was stealing a ride turned the valve and thus made it impossible for the engineer to work the alr brakes seems plausible. This would indicate that a change should be made in the construction of cars so that every tramp who wished to steal a ride could not, at his pleasure, manipulate the air brakes and stop the train. This could easily be done by making use of a device which would require a certain tool to open and close them. As it is it is not possible to tell how often this same thing has wrecked trains and sent scores of people to eternity. Such an opportunity is altogether too great a one to leave within the reach of tramps and train wreckers.

WHILE Lieut. Peary of the United States, and Dr. Nansen of Norway are buried in the Arctic wilds seeking for the long and vainly sought pole, the captain of an American whaling ship has been nearer to the mysterious spot than mortal man has ever been before, and has demonstrated the possibility of reaching it under favorable condititions and with proper appliances. News has reached San Francisco that Captain Porter of the steam whaler Newport reached 84 degrees north latitude, the most northerly point ever reached by man. The Newport wintered at Herschel Islands, and this summer, aided by an open sea, particularly free from ice, worked her way north while in pursuit of whales to 84 degress, within 6 degrees of the North Pole. The ship was stopped, but it is believed that had the Newport been supplied with dogs and sledges the North Pole could easily have been reached by traveling over the ice. The Mewport was formerly a coasting steamer and registers only 218 tons. The fact that a ship has sailed within 350 miles of the Pole gives a strong hope that ere long some vessel properly agipped will find an open sea, and that the problem that has cost so much treasure and so many lives will be solved.

THE disgraceful spectacle of the United States Senate being controlled by a mere minority still continues. The great majority of the people of this country desire a prompt vote on the repeal bill and the majority of the Senate desires the same thing, but that majority is so completely enslaved by recedent and its fear of doing something new that it allows a mere handful of its members to defeat a vote on the pretext of the time honored custom of allowing unlimited debate. What is being done may be called debate, but to an observer it scarcely looks like debate, when men talk themselves hoarse merely for the sake of talking, and when they can talk no longer send old newspapers to the clerk for him to read aloud as a part of their speeches while they get a rest ready to go on again. In this way one man will consume days of the Senate's time. Unless the Senate creates a rule for bringing a question to vote after a reasonable debate it will cease to be a legislative body. With the present plan of senselessly adhering to precedent two or three factionists can defeat all legislation. The House adopted a much more sensible rule to have two week's debate and then take a vote. The House, more in touch with the people, acted promptly in response to the country's demands, but the wealthy barons of the Senate refuse to pay the slightest heed in to the demands of the

THE report of the State Railroad

Inter-Commission has an interest for every one in a country where railroads are so interwoven with commercial and domestic life. This is the fifth report issued by the Commission and is in some respects the most complete of the five. The total railway mileage of the country at the close of the fiscal year is officially announced to have been losers by the reduction, a chance to 171,563 miles an increase during the year of 3,160 miles. North Carolina led with 213 miles. There were fewer changes in the organization of railways than during any previous year. The total number of railway corporations in the country is reported to be 1,822, but 43 of them control 57.86 per cent of the total mileage. The railroad stocks and bonds amount to $10,-000,000,000. $2,807,000,000 stocks paid no dividend during the last year, but the dividends on the remainder reached $97,614,745. Some idea of their vast business may be gained from the fact that 560,958,000 passengers were carried in the year ending June 30. There is one part of the report that shows that the railroad question has its sinister aspect as well as its cheerful. There was a decided increase in the number of casualties. One employe in every 29 was injured and one in every 322 killed. The injuries were largely from coupling cars, 378 employes being killed and 10,319 injured while rendering this service. The next report should show a large reduction in this class of accidents, as the railroad companies are now providing their cars with automatic couplers in obedience to a law passed by the last Congress. The risks taken by a railroad employe are hardly less than those of a soldier in time of war, but it is a satisfaction to the traveling public to know that only one passenger in 174,000 was even slightly

There are no words so strong as those spoken by the true minister of the gospel. One knows and feels instinctively that such words come from the heart and are prompted only by the earnest purpose of doing good to humanity.

We do not wonder, therefore, at the great influence with the public of the strong and ringing words of praise which the eminent divine, Rev. C. D R. When he was run down in health, weak in nerve, prostrated in strength, and with his blood badly impaired, he was restored to sound and vigorous health by this marvelous health renewer.

WADHAMS, RYAN & REULE,

There arose in Dewitt Clinton just at the right moment a great executive mind. I shall not sketch its processes. Clinton, then governor of the state was ready in 1817 to begin the work. It was completed in 1825, and was by the Anti-Clintonians humorously, I might even say, derisively called "Clinton's big ditch." A barge was filled out in October, 1825 to convey the Governor. Clinton, other prominent officials over the line from Albany to Buffalo to celebrate the event. An ovation, with discharge of cannon, greeted them at every stopping. This was, however, in the eyes of many an unpardonable sin against the laws of public economy, and the echoes of the moan were long heard, while those who had raised it were moving on to this great Western Canaan by the way which our American Moses had opened.

EARLY HISTORY OF OUR CITY.

Those who know me will not, I trust, reproach me for impiety, if I carry the comparison a step further. The construction of the cannal gave the first grand impulse to the Irish immigration, a real godsend to our country, for how else had our great public works been constructed? I look, therefore, with satisfaction upon the descendants of those whose arms wielded in these constructions the pick and the spade, as I see them settled in peace and comfort along the water and iron ways built by them. How their houses contrast with the shanties of rough boards, the work of an hour, which formed so picturesque a feature of the way from Albany to Buffalo! And then to see the westward moving wave of humanity following the channel thus made for it! I ought not to apologize for hinting a comparison with the migration of Israel; for, as this great people became in their journey mixed up with Amalek, Moab, Ammon and Edom, so the solid substratum of our westward migration carried with it a drift which it took well nigh forty years for us to become will ridded of. In this great movement our city had its birth. We shall follow on to make note of it.

The Wrinkle has made its appearance and is a success. Over eleven hundred copies were sold-within four hours after the paper was put on sale. This is something very unusual in college journalism. College boys like fun and it is a wonder that somebody has not thought of starting a paper of this kind long ago. The Wrinkle is profusely illustrated and the illustrations are excellent. There are some fifteen in all. Light verse is the predominating feature of the paper, and in this line the productions of Friedman and Ryan are the best. Briscoe has written a "Realistic Drama" dedicated to '97 men which is good. The notorious "Prince Mike" has not been forgotten. The co-eds have a showing, being represented by Miss Collins who contributes "A College Sprite." But it would be impossible to mention all the good things in the first issue of the new and worthy publication. Buy a copy of the Wrinkle and you will get ten cents worth of enjoyment out of it.

Railways in America. The destruction of such a large number of very valuable lives by railways this year calls loudly for a reform in the conduct of the passenger traffic. Fearful and destructive rear end collisions have occurred every few days upon nearly all the railways leading to Chicago. With the modern appliances such as telegraph, signal lights, etc., a rear end collision should be an impossibility. What causes them? The first and almost sole cause is too great speed. The second cause is overworked and incompetent operatives. Statistics show that upon European railways, there is less than half the destruction of life in proportion to the numbers carried, than upon vehicles drawn by horses. You are safer upon a European railway train than at home about your ordinary avocations. Why is this? - First, their railroads cost in construction per mile more than four times as much as ours. They are built for safety. Secondly, no European railway is allowed to cross apon a level with any wagon road or other railroad. Third, they are largely under governmental supervision, and managed for the benefit of the people, and not for the sole benefit of a few individuals. It is of course not possible in a new country like ours, to expend as much per mile in the construction of our railways as in England and Scotland. The people have demanded at least two lines of railways for all the towns and cities. With our limited capital and immense mileage of railways, we were The S. C. A. has arranged to have forced to construct them as cheaply as posted in Newberry Hall at least a possible. We were forced also to allow noteholders lost a penny. With effect them to cross wagon roads and other the various ministers will preach the railroads upon the same level. In the craze for more railroads, we have allowed them to build unsaie embankments, poor bridges and unsafe tracks. ture this evening in University Hall | Then the railway managers seem to think that the people demand luxurious cars and great speed of trains. A movement has been started by the | One car in the Pulman or Wagner train at the Exposition, cost more than and fraternity men, and get out a joint an entire train of comfortable and sensible ordinary coaches ought to cost. The fast trains of these coaches with observation car, dining car, barber shop, saloon and other attachments are supposed to be demanded by the public. The speed upon our defective railroads is quite as great as that maintained upon the best European roads. To build and run these extravagant trains at a high rate of speed, requires the expenditure of very large sums of C.A. It is a book of rare merit and money. The fact is, so much money is expended in this useless extravagance, that they do not have sufficient Kent County, was admitted to practice | funds to keep their road beds in proper in the United States Supreme Court at | condition and to properly equip, man, and run the ordinary trains which are the youngest member of that dis- patronized by the masses of the people. Incompetent men are employed, employees are over worked, trains are not provided with proper brakes, and are not sufficiently examined and inspected to insure against preventable accidents. What are the plain remedies for this condition of the railway management in this country. Laws should be passed and enforced as follows: First, to prevent the running of any passenger trains faster than thirty miles an hour. Secondly, requiring all trains to come to a full stop one quarter of a mile from each station at which they are to stop and then run into the station at the rate of six miles per hour. Third, that all the brakes on the train shall be inspected and tested at every station where the train stops. Fourth, that no employee connected with the running of trains shall be allowed to work more than eight hours per day. Fifth, that any ticket purchased of a railway company, shall permit the passenger to ride on any train on the road. It will now

cost you three dollars and a half to ride

This Nabob rail way traffic should be discontinued. It costs so much to maintain it, that the comfort and lives of the masses of the people are seriously sacrificed. You can travel in comfort and safety on any railway in England and Scotland for from one to two cents per mile. It is conceded that their railways cost over four times as much as ours, and we all know that an Englishman will not long run a railroad at a loss. We need in this country less speed, plainer cars, a two cent per mile fare, and very much greater safety in railway travel. Auspicious Opening of Gov. McKinley's Campaign in Ohlo. A remarkable speech by Gov. Mc-Kinley, nominated by the republicans of Ohio for reelection, opens a cam-paign which ought to be memorable its results. Never leader in economic legislation had finer opportunity for effective appeal, for never did any country gain more in prosperity within two years than this country in the two years which followed the enforcement of the McKinley act, and never was there a more sudden and sore reverse than has followed the vote to abandon the policy of that act. If experience ever casts any light on the path of those who seek to govern themselves for their own welfare, assuredly it teaches that the tariff of 1890 brought blessings unnumbered in its train, and that the vote to repeal it has brought a blight to all the industries and the business of America. Few men can use a great opportunity so effectively as Gov. McKinley in his speech at Akron. His review of the unrivaled prosperity attained in 1892, continuing to the very day of the presidential election, and of the astounding prostration which followed before the first half-year of democratic administration had closed, should carry to every mind not darkened by prejudice the conviction that the people owe their grievous change to their votes of November for a change. Gov. McKinley shows, with irresistible logic, that no alteration in the monetary supply occurred to account for the astounding reverse, that the circulation before this disaster came was greater than it ever had been, and not currency but confidence was lacking, and that in two directions grave uncertainties resulted from the same vote, for the party which threatened free coinage of silver was also the party which threatened free trade, and then secured entire control of the government. On the silver question Gov. McKinley declares that the republican party is ready now, as it ever has been, to stand for a sound currency—as good as the best that any other country enjoys. If the silver bill be repealed, it will be the joint work of republicans and democrats, while if it be retained the re sponsibility will rest with the party now in power. He puts the state bank scheme out of court with the single suggestion that while one hundred and twenty national banks have failed this summer, not one of their notes has been discredited nor has one of their the admission of President Cleveland is quoted that disasters sprang rather from evils apprehended than from any evils endured.

It is then shown that the president, his party in the nation and in Ohlo, are fully pledged to a change which, in the language of Mr. Neal, the democratic candidate for governor, "will expunge the foul blot of protection," and will square with the "fundamental principle of the democratic party that the federal government has no constitutional power" to impose protective duties. The words of Mr. Wilson, now chairman of the committee on ways and means, are also quoted as evidence, and the phenomenally blundering prophecy of Senator Brice last January, that "bankers will lend and investors will buy with a greater feeling of security after March 4 than at any time within the past history of the state," because all fear of disorganization of industries had in January already been felt to the fullest extent. The sufficient answer comes in a quotation from "Bradstreet's," stating that 463,000 persons had been thrown out of work between June 1 and August 12 in establishments reported, and no less than 800,000 to 900,000 in the whole country. Mr. McKinley appeals to the people against this policy, and eloquently affirms that "idleness is a much greater tax than any tariff tax which can be imposed. There is no burden so great as unemployed men; no tax so grievous as poverty." To the democrats who are petitioning by the thousands against a radical change of the tariff at a time so unsuitable he gives the warning that votes will count infinitely more than petitions.

It is cruel in the republican leader to demand of his antagonist what he would do with the duties on coal and iron, tinplates and cotton-ties and wool, and other important products of Ohio industry. Whence is to come the needed revenue, he asks, and are the democrats prepared with Mr. Watterson to tax sugar, tea and coffee? It is safe to say that questions like these will not be answered, except by the people themselves when they cast their votes.—N. Y. Tribune.

Grand Opera House.

The most interesting event of the current theatrical season will be the appearance of Modjeska at the Grand Opera house the 21st inst. This great actress has been seen in the widest possible range of legitimate characterization and it may be said without fear of contradiction, that with each por-trayal, admiration for her has deepened. Her work is of the refined kind that shows her to be an artist to the tips of her fingers and the fact that she never sinks her personality is one of her greatest charms. This delightful qual ity is felt distinctively by all who see and hear her. The woman, Modjeska, like the man, Jefferson, gets near to the hearts of an audience and wins at the very outset that supporting sympa-thy so acceptable to the artists, that the audience is always so ready to give. When she appears in this city on the 21st inst., it will be as Portia in Shakes-peare's "Merchant of Venice," which role she has not played since it was given as a companion to the Shylock of the lamented Edwin Booth, four seasons ago. Her leading man, Mr Otis Skinner, has made good all the promise of his earlier work, for he is certainly the best second that Mod jeska could find on the stage. He will play the role of Shylock and, that he will be eminently satisfactory, it is safe to believe from reports of his perform ance elsewhere. A $2,500 Dwelling That Would Make a Comfortable Home. [Copyright, 1893, by American Press Associa-

In designing a dwelling of moderate cost comfort and convenience s_ould be the first important consideration. Too often large sums of money are wasted in useless orna mentation or in some special "odd feature" which is supposed to add so much to the appearance of the building that an actual sacrifice of comfort must be made in order to keep the cost within the prescribed limit The good housewife will in time forgive the architect who plans well, even though he may exceed the limit of expenditure, but inconveniently arranged rooms and awkwardly located fixtures are a constant reminder of his incompetency or careless-ness. It is true that people possess differ-ent ideas in regard to planning a dwelling, and what might seem an ideal arrangement to one person would appear to be very inconvenient to another.

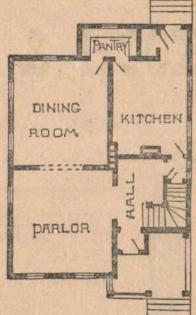

Inexperienced persons usually expect too much and cannot understand why a few feet added here and there in the dimensions of the rooms should make much difference in the cost of the structure. Yet it is the actual area of ground covered by the build ing upon which the cost is estimated.

PERSPECTIVE VIEW.

Here is a modest yet pleasing design for a dwelling suitable for a family in moderate circumstances. The principal rooms are grouped about one central chimney so that each is provided with a flue. A cellar extends under the entire house and has a con-crete floor, outside cellar steps and hatchway and the usual plank stairs leading to the kitchen

In the first story a small porch shelters the front entrance, from which you enter the staircase hall through a small vestibule. the staircase hall through a small vestibule. At the left of the hall is a good sized parlor, with a dining room and kitchen at the rear of the house. The hall, parlor and dining room are separated by large doorways, which are to be hung with pretty portieres, thus omitting the doors which would otherwise be necessary. The curtains and poles cost much less than doors and give a richer effect. The entrance from the staircase hall effect. The entrance from the staircase hall to the kitchen is placed under the main stairs, out of sight as you enter, and is shut off from the kitchen by two doors, which prevent the odors of the kitchen from permeating the front part of the house, an ad vantage which no one can fail to appreciate.

FIRST STORY.

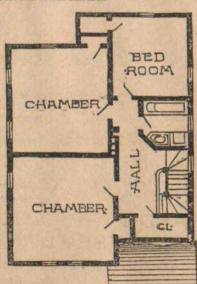

The kitchen is provided with a good sized sloset for stoves and culinary utensils with a pantry placed in a convenient loca-tion and communicating with the dining room in the usual way. The pantry doors are hinged so as to be self closing, thus shutting off all smells from the kitchen.

Some persons may object to this arrangement of rooms because there is no direct communication between the hall and dining room and that there are no back stairs. These objections could easily be overcome in the planning of the house, but would involve considerable extra expense, for an additional chimney would be required and extra space for the stairway and passage to the dining room. Since it is a question of cost, we find that this arrangement here shown is one of the best for the amount of money to be expended.

In the second story we have two large chambers, one small bedroom, bathroom and hall and four closets, which are indispensable to comfort and convenience. rooms all have direct communication with the hall, which is another good feature of the plan. The bathroom is placed directly over the kitchen, so that the supply and waste pipes have the shortest and most direct run to the fixtures.

SECOND STORY A small storage room can be secured in the attic, which may be reached by a ladder from the second story hall if desired. The foundations of the house are of stone and frame above. The staircase is finished in light oak; all other woodwork of white pine painted in two coats. The building can be erected for $2,500 without a furnace. If a furnace is required, it will cost $130 additional. The Fountain Head of Strength

When we recollect that the stomach s the grand laboratory in which food s transformed into the secretions which arnish vigor to the system after entering and enriching the blood; that it is n short, the fountain head of strength t is essential to keep the important supplying machine in order, and to restore it to activity when it becomes in-active. This Hostetter's Stomach Bitters does most effectually, sensorably, regulating and reinforcing digestion, premoting due action of the liver and bowels. Strength and quietude of the nerves depend in great measure ucon thorough digestion. There is no ner-vine tonic more highly esteemed by the medical fraternity than the Bitters. Physicians also strongly commend for chills and fever, rhenmatism, kid ney and bladder trouble, sick headache and want of appetite and sleep. a wineglas- full three times a day.

A Lie Told In School.

It has always been father's purpose to give his children a fair education, but as the family increased in size and numbers and father's salary would not grow in the same proportion, he found it necessary to cut down some of the avenues of expenditure. One of his first thoughts was that of the shoe bill for the family. Said he, "I'll be the cobbler when any shoes need repairing after this." Unfortunate ly my shoes gave out first, and the next day was set for repair day. Father brought from the shop where he was working some of the old belting that had been laid by. This leather was thorough ly saturated with oil, and as I entered the schoolroom next day with new taps on my shoes the oil would form a mark on the floor, just like a footprint on the newly fallen snow, and what good excuse to tell I couldn't think of.

It became an eyesore to the whole school, and I was wishing somehow I might take a vacation. Finally the teacher noticed it. I was called up to the desk, leaving my track all the way, and asked to explain. Shaking like a leaf, I told the story. My brother Jack and I had got to fighting the other day in the cellar, and he threw me in a par of grease that was near by cooling. That lie settled the teacher, but the other element of the school were not satisfied until they stood me on my head and looked at my shoes .- Cor. New York Recorder.

In a City Restaurant.

A trifling incident noted not long ago in a city restaurant tells its own story and needs no spoken moral. Two girls, possibly attendants in a shop, were sit ting together eating their luncheon, and one was holding forth to her companion on an experience which had just befallen

"I came in here," said she, "and got this seat, but wan't long before an old lady came in and sat next to me. She took off one pair of glasses and put oz another. Then she stared and stared at the bill of fare and laid it down. thought first she couldn't read a word Then she turned around to me.

'Will you let me sit next to the window? says she.

"I didn't take any notice, and in a minnte she said it again. Then I answered

" 'No,' says I, 'this is my seat, and I'm going to keep it.' "She turned way round in her chair then and looked me all over. Then she looked away. But I guess she knew I'd got the best of her, for she did have the manners to say:

" 'l beg your pardon.' "She spoke real low, and I noticed she looked kind of surprised."-Youth's Com-

Sticks in Mercantile Life.

Many young men choose a mercantile position for the present only without thought or intention of making it a permanent business. The result is that oftentimes we find these men at 30 years receiving no more pay than they did when only 18. There is an army of this class of young men behind counters today. They are an aimless, pitiable class. They stand listlessly in their departments and are as unobservant of what's going on around them as are the inanimate figures which one sees at the entrance of clothing estab-

Many of them let slip grand opportunities of becoming great business factors in the commercial world and have doomed themselves to the treadmill of common drudgery. A STATEMENT OF THE CASE. CROOK CITY, S. D., Jan. 22, 1892.

The Owen Electric Belt and Appliance Co., Chicago, Ill.:

GENTLEMEN—I have been for some time considering the propriety of writing to you a few lines, relative to my experience with the Owen Electric Belt and Appliance obtained from you about eighteen (18) months ago. Justice to your company, and a desire on my part to make known to others who may be suffering from a similar affliction the relief I obtained from your institution, prompt me to send to you a voluntary

I am a gold miner by occupation, and have been for many years. I crossed the plains to California in 1852, and since then have been in most of the prominent mining camps in the then territories of Oregon, Washington, British Columbia, Idaho, Utah, Wyoming, and at present in Dakota. Leading the rough and exposed life incidental to my occupation, caused me to fall a victim to rheumatism which finally utterly prostrated me in Helena, Mont., in "65." I was under the best medical treatment obtainable in Montana for one year, with but slight improvement, and was finally advised to live among the Indians, and subject myself to their "sweat" treatment. This I did and remained with them about a year, obtaining only temporary relief.

Since that time I have been a chronic sufferer—suffering pain and torture indescribable almost continually. It would be useless to attempt to describe my sufferings. It must be sufficient to state that I suffered from rheumatism in its worst form. I had spent large sums of money, changed climate, visited Hot Springs, lived alternately in Scribable almost continually. It would be useless to attempt to describe my sinterings. It must be sufficient to state that I suffered from rheumatism in its worst form. I had spent large sums of money, changed climate, visited Hot Springs, lived alternately in high and low altitudes, and employed the best medical advice obtainable, hoping to alleviate, if not cure my complaint. It was all to no purpose, and I had about despaired of ever recovering fully my shattered health, when my attention was called to the Owen Electric Belt by a fellow miner, Mr. J. C. Johnson, of Creek City, who was also suffering from rheumatism, and who claimed to have derived great benefit from a belt obtained from you. I had tried so many remedies that I was fairly discouraged and skeptical about obtaining relief from any source, but finally determined it was my duty to give your appliance a trial. I will also state right here that, since coming to the town, I have also suffered greatly from kidney disease.

At last I sent for one of your belts, and applied it carefully, according to the printed directions accompanying the same, and can now truthfully say, as I now do to you, that I am no longer troubled with my kidneys, that I am entirely free from rheumatism, and I consider my health as perfect. All this I consider is owing to your valuable and priceless Owen Electric Belt, and I feel I am only performing a duty and paying a deserved tribute to Dr. Owen in sending this unsolicited statement of my case for his information.

Sincerely your friend,

John Mulvany,

BOUND SADLY HOME.

It was all a fraud. The forage cap on one side of his narrow head, the wornout livery coat with epaulets, even the leathern strap, suspending from his shoulder his box of knavish wares, affected a military air and countenanced his lies and deceptions.

The face was not repulsive even now. Some distinction appertained to the heavy mustache, and the hollow beneath the high cheek bone, the crow's feet around the eyes, the tanned, weather beaten ruddiness of his complexion, might have betokened honorable service in poisonous swamps or under burning skies, instead of shifty, footsore wanderings with alternate hours of want and wickedness.

He dragged himself to the dusty grass beneath the "Five Ashes" at the four crossroads. He was faint, for the hill had tried him, and sat panting with his back against a tree. Then he opened his box and began rolling infallible pills between his filthy finger and thumb. Their composition was a secret, but doubtless they did some people a lot of good. For 20 years his heart had never sofened with a sentiment, his soul never quickened with an aspiration, and now his wandering eye, resting on a finger post across the road, mechanically read:

"Upton. Leigh. Sutton-Darcy."

All so familiar once, and the last his birthplace!

A strange impulse, absolutely unreasonable, for recognition might still be dangerous, took possession of him. An irresistible desire to see the place again, even though it were by stealth at night. From the boughs above his head came the "pink! pink!" of a chaffinch, and through the filth and fog of a quarter of a century of evil, indistinct in the fumes of drink and smothered in its own futility, gleamed a reminiscence clear and sharp as the bird's note:

An old farmhouse thatched and stone built, with mullioned windows. In the garden a tall pear tree, with yellow buds glistening in the early spring, and beneath a youth with a gun peeping to get a shot. Then a man in breeches and hose, elderly, but hale, drawling half humorously: "Why, Jack, my bwoy! Thy shots do het off more buds than all the chaffingers."

The old people must be gone now, for Jack was the youngest and the favorite five and thirty years ago. slung on his box and limped along the Sutton road. At evening he entered "The Cups," an inn on the outskirts of Sutton. Everything was as formerly-the same bench and stools, the same oak settle by the hearth. Two laborers playing at shovel board called each other familiar names, and the singsong of their voices brought back the past.

"What parish may this be, please?" he "Zutton," replied both Abs and Abe.

"A large village?" "'Tidden zo terr'ble large."

"Small?" "Tidden zo wonderful small." Satisfied with the subterfuge of these questions, he sat down and continued eagerly: "Any o' the name of Craddock live here now?" "Craddock, eh?" grinned Abs. "What dost zay, Abe?"

"Noo fear!" said Abe. He hesitated. But the longing to know overcame his judgment like the craving of a vice.

What dost zay, Abe?"
"Noo fear!" said Abe.

John Craddock nervously rose, straightened his back and fell into his familiar patter.

"Yes. I'm an old soldier, wounded in the trenches before Sevastopol and starved at Cawnpoor, and when I'd spilt my blood and ruined a fine constitution in the service of my native land they gave me my discharge and threw me upon the world without a penny. But, happily, among the prisoners taken by the British forces in that memorable war was the private physician to the Ranee of Jhansi. Seeing me writhing with rheumatism—to which, gentlemen, I was then a martyr-his feeling heart confided to me, under an oath of secrecy, the inestimable blessing of a never failing remedy. These pills, gentlemen, taken in time are a reliable cure. If you have ever seen crooked legs, stiff arms or a I ter.

et as a Teaping hook, take a pills-four and twenty in e price is twopence, and trept dry, the contents will to. Thank you, gentle-

I wish you good evening." glioness had been successful; but, ill at ease, he shuffled on to the old house with the pear tree. A silver maned colt was reaching over the paddock rail, the image of the roan mare they used to call Rube. All was quiet and prosperous, and in the garden path stood the familiar figure. He slunk into the shadow of the churchyard wall. Yet it was only Dick, grown into the substantial staidness of his father's place.

He went to the low thatched house standing all askew, with the stalls and the wagon shed where he and Dorothy used to meet. He would sleep that night in one of the wagons. It was scarcely dusk, but the life came back quite clearly. Work was over, and nobody would come, so he went in and climbed up out

He heard a fight step and peeped over the tailboard. There stood the Doll Sanford of years ago, with budding womanhood beneath the open neck of her print frock. She had run out in haste. Her lips were parted. He could see her face looking toward the gate into the orchard. Then came a firmer stepjust as when they said he was too wild for their Dorothy.

"I musn't stay tonight, Jack." "A few minutes, Doll."

"The maid's out. Mother'll miss me." "Doll!" "Jack!"

They kissed close to the wagon wheel and were gone.

He could not help it. Come what would, he must go to the house, and presently he crossed the yard, entered the porch and knocked.

"Nothing today, thank you," said a sharp voice through the partly opened He remembered the Craddock rulenever to give money nor refuse bread. 'Will you give me a bit to eat?" he

Without a word she disappeared, but came back, bringing also a cup of cider. "Isn't this Mr. Craddock's?" "It is."

"I knew one of that name once-Jack Craddock. We were chums. I was by when he was killed. I've got something of his now.'

"Killed?" she echoed, trembling. "Yes. It was in the trenches before Sevastopol"-

She gave a sharp cry and sank into the stone seat in the porch.

A burly figure came from the house. 'What's this? What's this?" he blustered and seized the tramp by the collar and shook him. "Don't, William," pleaded the woman.

'It's nothing. He has done nothing." He shuffled nervously into the high road and stood there in the twilight beneath the pale summer stars. Had she recognized him? He could tramp no farther that day, and again he slunk across the yard and climbed into the wagon. At dawn he would trudge onfar from the village-out of the district. At daybreak came the horses, but they did not wake him. "Here's thik tramp feller. God! He's dead! What dost zay, Abe?"

Abe solemnly said, "Noo fear!"-Walter Raymond in London Illustrated

He Washed the Tiger.

And one sum a word of French. Pezon tried to show mer a son of one of the mill owners was him about his work by motions with a pail and sponge. The moujik watched him closely and seemed to understard. Next morning, armed with a broom, a bucket and a sponge, he opened the first cage he came to and quietly stepped in. He had seen his master step into two cages of harmless brutes, but this one happened to belong to a splendid tiger that lay on the floor fast asleep. At the noise made by opening the door the creature raised its head and turned its eyes full on the man, who stood in a corner dipping his big sponge into the bucket. At that moment Pezon came out and was struck dumb with the sight. What could he do to warn the man? A sound might enrage the great beast. So Pezon stood still. The moujik, sponge in hand, coolly approached the tiger and made ready to rub him down.

The cold water on its hide pleased the tiger, for it began to purr, stretched out its paws, rolled over on its back and offered every part of its body to the treatment of the moujik, who went on scrubbing with might and main. All the while Pezon stood there with his eyes wide open as if nailed to the spot. When he had finished his job, the Cossack left the cage as quiefly as he entered it. But he never did it again.-London Million.

The Farmer and Good Roads.

The saleable value of farm lands is greatly enhanced by the facility with which the mill, store and factory privileges are made available. Manufactories are established in localities where communication is readily had with the farm and market, and any factory established in a farming locality furnishes an additional market for farm produce, and a market that is constant in its demands and sure in its receipts.

Thus the farmer is the one directly interested, for it means to him economical transportation in competition, a market when prices are best, the introduction of factories and increased value of farm lands. Besides this it means a better attendance at schools, more benefit from the town libraries and lectures, and with the greater diffusion of knowledge less desire to leave the farm for privileges and information that will be more available at home.-New York Tribune.

THE BOOMHOUSE MAN.

What appeals to me as my most interesting experience as a writer occurred a winter or two ago in a little lumber hamlet of the hill region of Kentucky. For a moment at least it was quite thrilling-rather too thrilling indeed to be useful as material to me with my straight and simple art standards. have a groveling fondness for reproduc ing only the usual features of life, and this little episode, though it was pitifully commonplace in its setting, had about it something that was not only unusual but nearly sublime.

I had gone down to the village in question with the ambitious design of seeing a "tide" in the river. Tides are peculiar to wintry months. They are useful to lumbermen and incidentally to writers, but they have their unpleasant features. My little hill hamlet, having doffed its green livery, was cowled in dark mud. Rain sheeted the air. The inn seemed to be saturated, and the roar of the river on the skirts of the town corroborated the innkeeper's assurance concerning the magnitude of the special "tide" which was in progress.

"She's booming for all that's in her." declared the innkeeper, an elderly man, who had enjoyed during the previous summer the happy privilege of being useful to me in many ways. "They look for the boom to bust tonight. Thousands of dollars afloat. You see that man by the stove? He's one of the big timber fellers from up north. Just come down. He'll lose heavy if she busts. Say, miss, take a look at that feller! You remember me telling you about the boomhouse man's daughter? Well, that feller-he was the man-he was Idy's bean.

I remembered the story. On a certain day in the previous June I was standing at the head of a mill chute looking down at the sunken river. Suddenly a dugout shot round the bend. The man in the rude thing seemed only half human. He was bent and shrunken, with a clay colored skin, matted red hair and such a woebegone vacuity of face as startled one. The innkeeper had related that this poor creature lived alone in the boomhouse, a shed on the river cliff, and that his duty was to cook for the loggers in time of tides.

"He's seen trouble," said the innkeeper. "Used to own a nice little farm up yonder and live well. He had an only daughter. Pretty as a peach, Idy was. Moscow with his menagerie, he hired a | Slim waisted, with kinky red hair and mer a son of one of the mill owners was down here settling up the mill books, and he took a fancy to Idy, and folks said it'd be a match. The boomhouse man was proud as a peafowl. And after the young feller went north again, why, Idy's paw he narrated around that the wedding was to come off on Christmas day and how't Idy was going up north to live in great style. But the young feller never came back. He never came back," repeated the innkeeper, with a graphic sort of pause. "And Idy -well, I always said if she'd of had a mother things would have been different. I always said she took the best way out of it. For 'bout the time tongues was beginning to wag Idy was missing one day, and they found her tangled up in the river drift vonder where the sand bar reaches across the shallows."

"And what did her father do?" "Do? Oh, he acted like he'd got it between the eyes. Kind of daft. Ain't been just right ever since.' This tragic narrative, which the innkeeper related with the equanimity of an epic poet, recurred to me vividly as I observed the man by the stove.

He was middle aged. The story lay 15 years behind him, but he had a chin which made me believe the innkeeper an

He seemed too vulgar and heavy a type of humanity to invite exceptional treatment of fate, yet I saw him that night in rather a notable situation.

Just after dark the inkeeper and his daughter and I set out across the cliff path to see the river in active operation. We walked in the wind's teeth, with a splitting rain in our faces. It was cold and bleak. Then in an instant the river flashed in sight. Its whole freshet swollen current flamed with red from countless fire baskets and lanterns. Long shafts of vermilion stabbed the packed timber in the boom, struck across the climbing banks and made fiery lances of the pike poles in the loggers's hands.

Men were leaping about on the logs. In a flare of crimson I saw on the wedged in float the man who had been Ida's lover. He was working sturdily as any logman about, handling the heavy cables and shouting directions.

It was worth seeing, that mountain stream as it mouthed at the straining timber in the boom. It was worth seeing, but the air was cold and wet, and in the second hour of our watching the inn keeper's daughter, being upheld by neither hospitality nor ambition, be "thored out." The boomhouse showed its little red window just below us on the rocks.

The two tiny rooms of the place looked warm and bright as we opened the door. Half a dozen men were drinking coffee from tin cups at a table. The boomhouse man, apathetic as ever, with his resinous looking hair in his pale eyes, was frying bacon in a great skillet. The innkeeper joined the throng at the board. His daughter and I sat by the stove in the inner room. I shall never forget that room. The pattern of the homespun coverlet on the boomhouse man's pallet is indelibly with Soothed by the heat, the innkeeper's daughter dozed off, with her feet on the hearth. I remember observing with dreamy interest the yellowness of the teeth exhibited in the graceful abandon of her slumber. I thought of snuff. I think I had a drowsy moment myself. Some one stamped noisily into the other room and asked for whisky. I glanced out. It was the mill man of Idy's infatuation. He flung himself at length on a bench behind the cook stove and lay with shut eyes. His clothes were dripping with thin mud, and an air of utter weariness pervaded his attitude

"He had scarcely looked at the boomhouse man. I glanced at him, however, and became aware that his aspect had changed. Something like life shone in the pale eyes under that unkempt hair. He was standing still, just staring with a half blind gaze at the man on the bench. Suddenly he stepped forward like a shadow.

"It's you, ain't it?" he said. The man on the bench shot round a startled gaze. He saw the revolver in the lean hand leveled toward him. He must have recognized Idy's father in the figure standing over him, sternly poised as to a deed of necessary vengeance.

"I knowed God A'mighty 'd give you up to me soon or late," said the old man simply. "I waited. They ain't nothin You know what you're dyin

The whole thing was singularly passionless and without any aspect of tragedy. On the stove a panful of meat crackled. Noises from outside came distinctly. The candle flickered and cast a thread of light on the lifted face of the man on the bench.

I myself had a sense of inability to move or speak. The innkeeper's girl slept on. Whatever consciousness I had seemed to be in the millman's frame, passively awaiting a sharp, metallic click. There was no chance at all for He seemed to see this and to take him. it calmly.

"Go on," he said. "I wronged you. Pve got-a little daughter-myself. If you've any heart in you-don't say-

His voice broke.

The briefest instant passed. And then there was a sound, but not the sound we waited for. The boomhouse man moved a little. The rigor left his form, and I saw his arm fall slowly against his side.

"I ain't going to kill you," he muttered. "You got a daughter. Go and see as no black hearted villain steals her from you."-Eva W. McGlasson,

Mr. Bogle is a comparatively new member of the Ann Arbor bar. He is, however, rapidly coming to the front as one of our able lawyers. It was conceded by all that in his closing speech in the Hand case, in which all the attorneys did good work, Mr. Bogle made a splendid effort, demonstrating that in the presentation of the law to the court and in the arraignment of facts before the jury he is an able advocate. His whole argument was logical, clear and convincing, and had great weight with the jury.
