France and England

IN REGARD TO THE BUFFER STATE.

Great Britain Sends a Representative to Paris In an Effort to Arrive at Some Satisfactory Understanding-Dr. Stoecker's Opinion of the New World.

LONDON, Oct. 25 .- There is a hitch in the negotiations going on between France and Great Britain in regard to the buffer state which it is proposed to create between the French and British territory in Siam.

A representative of the British foreign office, Sir Thomas Henry Sander-son, has been to Paris in order to make an effort to come to some satisfactory understanding upon the subject. The English diplomats have been successful up to the present, but it is hoped that the negotiations will be resumed in an amicable spirit before long.

He Thinks America Interesting, but Ger-

The German section of the Chicago exhibition pleased Dr. Stoecker more than any of the others. After the Ger-man section, in the doctor's opinion, came the Japanese, French and then the American section. Dr. Stoecker spoke favorably of the American press gen-erally, and wound up his remarks by asserting that while the new world was interesting, Germany was prettier and more comfortable.

LONDON, Oct. 25.-The Standard cor-respondent at Vienna says that the respondent at vienna says that the reichsrath before adjourning showed its hostility to the government by ac-cepting a motion that the committee which is considering the Bohemian measures shall sit in public although the government declared that it could only acquaint the committee with a bit of offenene in Bohemia consided is list of offenses in Bohemia provided it sits with closed doors. LONDON, Oct. 25.-The £1,820,000 issue of 4 per cent preference stock of the Canadian Pacific had all been under-written at 90, and already commands a premium. President Van Horne, who is now in London, says his road does not design any right the Grand Trunk. He believes there is plenty of business in Canada for both roads, Last year the road paid 5 per cent on ordinary stock and had $7,500,000 sur-plus plus.

JOSEPH ADDISON HALLOCK (Octogenarian.) During the last days of the late year, I bought of Dr. Owen two of the Owen Electric Belts. One I have worn, the other a daughter has worn. In either case the remedial has been satisfactory. The rheuma tism of my chest and hips I can no longer find. A limited case of varicoccele, of more than thirty years standing, after two weeks' use of the Belt, has diminished to a mere lump, and a few days later could not be found. A nasal catarrh of years had so affected the substance of the nose that a friend in jest twitted me of brandy. My nose is itself again, and other symptoms of nasal and throat catarrh are fast disappearing, carrying my deafness of seven years with them.

I have studied electricity in its bearings upon mental and physico mental phe-nomena for fifty years, and have seen its wonders in these directions, and, thus pre-pared, my attention was easily turned to its efficiency in controlling the nerves, muscles and motions of the living, as galvanism does those of the recent dead. I have no wish to undervalue any appliance which carries a real electric current from a genuine battery to human nerves with a gentle, a genial force; but I do wish to do my utmost to disarm public fears as to the well-ordered Electric Belts. Last and livliest, the ever successful spectacle of "Old Age and Youth" This brilliant comedy, first presented in Chicago, under Mr. Jack's own su-pervision, combines all the elements of the gayest farce and finest extrava gance. It depicts the adventures of gance. It depicts the adventures of one, Malechreno, an aged sculptor, who, seeking the fountain of youth in fairy land, not only becomes rejuvenated, bit wins the love of the fairy queen, weds her and gains immortality. Meanwhile, his companions, a German baron and an Irish count, meet with many strange mishaps, and are finally ejected from the mystic realms. There are many pleasing diversions woven into the action of the plot. A "polka dot qua-drille"-something new in ihe dancing line - is executed; there are living statues, singing automatons, musicians vocalists, and dancers in plenty, and the show ends in a perfect whirl of fun and merriment. -

THE CHICAGO TARIFF PLANK. Democratic Leaders Shying at the Main Issue,

The democratic organs are assuming that the democratic leaders in congress will proceed, so soon as the silver purchase clause of the act of 1890 is repealed in both houses, to rush a tarifffor-revenue-only bill through to the president. They seem to be mistaken about this. Mr. Wilson has given no intimation that he intends to push things in that way in his committee, and has stated that while the ways and means committee will meet it will not do anything very important during the extra session The democratic leaders know too well that the Chicago tariff plank and the boisterous threat of effectuating it have had an unfavorable effect upon manufactures in several lines, which have been established with brilliant prospects of success under the protective system. Mr. Cleveland himself declined to summon congress last March, at the dictation of the free trade organs, to put in execution the free trade Chicago plank. The organs had under-"the robber tariff" would be that stricken off the statute books as soon as the president was established in the kind was done. After months had passed, the president did call an extra session to repeal the pig silver stupidity, but he, concurrently, told the party that the tariff could "wait."

And it looks as if the tariff will wait some more. Leading advisers of the administration like Edward Atkinson have said that the country can't afford to actualize the Chicago free-trade plank. The revenue tariff will not be constructed at the extra session, and if it is constructed during the regular session next winter and spring, as the freetrade organs say it will be constructed, and if congress should adopt it and Mr. Cleveland sign it, the democrats will have to face the congressional elections of 1894 with the bold avowal that they have given Great Britain the easy run of our markets for manufactures as that country had under the Walker tariff with the concurrent impairment of American manufacturing interests. It looks now somewhat doubtful if the democratic leaders care to snag their party on the eve of congressional elec-We shall see. - Minneapolis Journal.

AWAITING OHIO'S VERDICT.

General Interest Now Centers in the Buckeye State.

Ohio is evidently to be the focal point of public interest in the political campaigns of the year. Already the attention of all who keep watch of current events is largely centered on the Buckeye state. The reason is perfectly clear. Some of the young men of Chelsea nearly walked the soles off their shoes Wednesday evening. They had re-ceived invitations to a "guess where and come there" party. They "guessed where" about morning. — Chelsea many hundreds of struggling manufacturers and to uncounted thousands of workingmen now idle or in danger of being thrown out of employment. The tremendous and far-reaching importance of the question whether protection shall be withdrawn from American industries has been driven home by the general distress of the last few months. Men hitherto indifferent to what they considered mainly a dispute between politicians, now await with painful interest and emotion the first declaration by a great body of voters which will throw light upon the future policy of the American people. Naturally they look to Ohio. Here is a state largely devoted to the industries which, in an especial sense, are under the pro-tection of the tariff system of the republican party. The electorate is above had reached Ann Arbor in a bunch of bananas. It is the largest specimen ever seen in the city, being consider-ably larger than any in the University Mr. Salver has the creature pute. Last, but by no means least, the preserved in alcohol and on exhibition republican candidate for governor so Well, Mr. Salver can come back to protection that no platform is needed embodies the spirit and principles of to make the issue clear to Ohio and to the entire country. With William Mc-Kinley at the head of the republican ticket nothing can obscure or force back from the front of battle the banner of the American tariff system. Personalities can cut no figure in the campaign. The fight will surely be fair and open from beginning to end. For these reasons the eyes of the nation are on Ohio, and men of all parties will turn hither more and more as the campaign progresses to find light upon the political and business future of the country.-Cleveland Leader.

A Champion of the Best Interests of Americans.

William McKinley stands to-day for the foremost issue of American politics. He stands for America against Europe, for industrial independence against industrial servitude, for the enlightenment, prosperity and progress of Americanship against poverty and degradation of democratic free trade. He is a champion of the comfort and contentment that protection has planted in the American home; of the manhood of men that toil; of the advancement and elevation of the masses of the American people. Gov. McKinley represents in the eyes of the whole world all that is most virile, independent and distinctive in Americanism. He is honored with the bitter hatred of foreign monopolists who would gladly see the overthrow of the American republic, who seek the ruin of American industries and who hope to regain control of the American market through democratio treason to the principles of Washing-ton, Hamilton, Jackson and Lincoln. The democratic leaders in looking about for some issue that will unite the party in congress have hit upon the federal election law. They think that they can draw the scattered elements of the party together in favor of a bill to repeal this law which has been a menace to southern bulldozers at the polls. And they are no doubt right in their prediction. The one thing against which the democratic party stands without evasion or equivocation is an honest election with a free ballot and a fair count -- Chicago Inter Ocean.

DEMOCRATIC PROTECTIONISTS. Convincing Evidence in Favor of a High Tariff.

Congressman Wilson, the chairman of the ways and means committee, is a West Virginia democrat and a free trader. Ex-Senator Davis, from the same state, reminded Chairman Wilson that in six counties in Mr. Wilson's congressional district there was a population of seventeen thousand persons dependent upon the production of coal for a living, and all favorable to the continuance of a protective tariff. Mr. Reed, of Maine, ventured to ask the democratic governor of West Virginia what he thought about the tariff on New England's manufacturing interests, and received a reply which must be entirely satisfactory to every friend of republican protection. OF INTEREST TO ADVERTISERS.

"A newspaper has 5,000 readers for each 1,000 subscribers. A merchant who puts out 1,000 handbills gets possibly 300 or 400 people to read them-that is, if the boy who is trusted to distribute them does not chuck them under the sidewalk. The handbills cost as much as a half-column advertisment in the home newspaper. All the women and girls and half the men and boys read the advertisement. Result: the merchant who uses the newspaper has 3,500 more readers to each 1,000 of the paper's readers. There is no estimating the amount of business that advertising does bring to a merchant, but that each $1 invested in advertising brings to the investor somewhere from $5 to $20 worth of business there can be no doubt."-Times, Oskaloosa, Iowa.

THE horrible wreck at Battle Creek last week was one of the worst in the history of railroading in this country, and was one, too, for which there was not the least excuse. The orders to the trainmen were explicit. They were just starting on a run after a rest so there could be no excuse of the men being worn out. The heavily loaded out any limitation upon a senator, expassenger trains should certainly have been a more than usual incentive to watchfulness. Yet, notwithstanding, a terrible collision took place and twentyeight innocent lives were hurled into sternity and the bodies slowly burned to a crisp in plain view of scores of people who were unable to render assist- of some rule of closing debate. ance. Such criminal carelessness on the part of those in charge of the train which was run on another train's time contrary to explicit orders is deserving of the severest penalties which the law allows. It can be nothing less than wholesale manslaughter without a single extenuating circumstance. If the officers of the law do not sift this matter to the very bottom and bring the guilty parties to justice and make a fit example of such acts and thus tend to make railroad employees more careful in the future, they too will be equally guilty with the trainmen whose disobedience to orders caused such a fearful disaster.

THE outbreak of train robbery, which was so prevalent a few weeks since, has led to some changes which will serve to make the business a perilous pursuit. The fact that in every instance but one the robbers were either slain or speedily in the toils itself will be discouraging to evil doers, and with the additional fact that trainmen will be armed on the leading roads will have a deterrent effect. Travelers abroad and on the railroads in Canada and Mexico are familiar with the presence of the military guard that accompanies the trains. The spectacle bids fair to become a familiar one in this country. While Congress is considering a bill intended to prevent these robberies, our leading railroads running west have determined to arm their trianhands with revolvers and Winchester rifles; the principal express companies have also joined in the movement. The result will be that to "hold up" a train will soon become a more difficult matter than it has been, and traffic will become proportionately more secure. This movement on the part of the railways is necessary and timely, and can scarcely fail to prove effective. But congress checking the lawless practice.

will be brought to an end. In the meanwhile there is a movement on foot to establish such government regulation of the relations between the colliers and their employers that a similar strike If some authoritative method can be devised, fair to both employer and employee, which will prevent such struggles in the future, it will be a blessing.

THE recent experiences of the Senate have shown its utter helplessness and powerlessness to proceed with legislation when a few determined men resolved that legislation shall be blocked very few who applaud the course of the obstructionists now, but unless a cure is found, they will find that the prethe future when action that they consider vital is concerned. Recently Mr. Voorhees undertook to keep up a continuous session until a vote, one way or winded speeches continued, interrupted every little while by dilatory motions, until at last in despair Senator Voorhees asked the presiding officer, Senator Frye, of Maine, if there was no by senators that there was no quorum. The reply was that the presiding officer knew of no limitation. Then Mr. Quay said the decision of the chair put it absolutely in the power of any one senator to block legislation, for as rapidly as a last. a computation was made a senator could suggest a quorum and the roll would have to be called. "The Senate of the United States," replied Mr. Frye slowly and with a gavity that caused the galleries to titter, "is the most dignified legislative body in the world. And the framers of its rules did not suppose that any senator would violate the properties or the decencies of the Senate. Therefore, the rule is made withcept his own sense of right." "The theory of the Constitution," said Mr. Quay, "may be stated by the chair, but our recent experience has shown that the Senate is very differently constituted." Perhaps this pitiable helplessness may teach the Senate the need Lucian Rodd, of Whitehalj, N. Y being by me duly sworn, deposes and says that some years ago he suffered very greatly with insomnia, nervous prostration and his body was covered with sores, causing him great pain and ered with sores that he was hardly able to comb or even brush his hair, so great was the pain it occasioned.

That he consulted the local physicians without successful result; that he took quantities of medicine with no benefit whatever; that physicians toldhim his disease was incurable and he had come to the same conclusion himself and had made up his mind to go to a hospital and await death.

That just about this time he learned about Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, which he began to use. That this remedy entirely relieved and cured him, healed and dried up his sores, enabled him to sleep soundly and comfortably, and restored him to his ordinary vigor and vitality, in short, made a sound and well man of him so that he was fully able to work at his occupation, and has done so since that time

That he attributes his recovery to Dr. Social Doings. Mrs. L. H. Clement spent last week Greene's Nervura blood and nerve rem-edy, as it restored him when everybody had been given over to go to the hos-pital and die.

White Metal Senators Concede Their Defeat.

tion-The House Passed Two Bills Tuesday and Then Resumed Consideration of the Bankruptcy Bill.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.-The jig is up, and silver senators now concede their defeat. Senators now concert a vote will be had before the close of this week. This means the passage of un-conditional repeal, and a complete vic-tory for the administration. Southern tory for the administration. Southern silver senators, led by Mr. Harris, have abandoned the fight because the admin-istration pressure is too great to De longer resisted, they say. Senator Voorhees, Harris, Aldrich and Dubois, representing the two fac-tions in each party, have authorized the statement that they believe the fight is ended and that the vote will be taken on unconditional repeal at the earliest on unconditional repeal at the earliest possible moment. This is understood to mean as soon as the silver Republicans have concluded their speeches.

HOUSE PASSES TWO BILLS.

Debate on the Bankruptcy Bill Continues. Repeal Bill In the Senate.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—After some trivial routine business in the house Mr. Mallory of Florida called up and had passed a bill to amend the revised statutes so as to include engineers and assistant engineers in the list of officers of United States vessels required by existing laws to be citizens of this country. The amendment was made neces-sary by a decision rendered when the Atlantic liners Paris and New York were admitted to American register.

A bill was also passed for the re-moval of the Morris Island saving station, near Charleston, to Sullivan's island, after which the debate on the bankruptcy bill was resumed. The bill was opposed by Messrs. Denson, Ray and Bryan and supported by Mr. Dal-

After some routine busihis speech against the repeal bill, but before he had concluded, the senate, upon Mr. Faulkner's motion, took a recess until today.

Dempsey and Robert Beatty, convicted of poisoning nonunion men at Homestead during the great strike last year, were taken up by the board of pardons at Harris-burg and, after consideration, were re-fused. Dempsey and Beatty are now in Riverside penitentiary. Another effort will be made by the executive board of the Knights of Labor to secure Dempsey's release. Dempsey's release.

DYNAMITE IN WHEELING.

Engineer's Office. WHEELING, Oct. 25.-When Mrs. Mary Clancy went to clean the office of the city engineer in the public building Tuesday she found a chunk of stuff on he floor near the door that Chief of VOTE ON REPEAL TO BE HAD SOON. Police McNichols recognized as dyna-mite. Calling in an expert he was alarmed to learn his suspicions were correct and that there was enough of it to blow the top off the building. There is no explanation given how the dyna-mite got into the engineer's office. It is thought that some one may have thrown it through the open window after the office was locked up for the night. The finding of the explosive has caused great alarm among those who occupy the building.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE.

Over $100,000 Worth of Property Dertroyed In San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 25.-A fire that broke out in D. A. McDonald's planingmill and lumberyard on Spear street consumed the entire plant and, burning through the block to Stuart street, destroyed Robinson's wheel manufactory, James Kemp's office and store fixture works, the Swift planingmill, H. Crockard & Son's boat building establishment and several other small build-ing. Total loss over $100,000, with little insurance.

WITHOUT A FLAW.

Warrant and Extradition Papers For the Arrest of Thomas W. Kennedy. SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 25.-Judge Murphy has decided that the warrant and extradition papers for the arrest of extradition papers for the arrest of Thomas W. Kennedy, alias Bailey, wanted in Detroit for kidnaping Jo-seph Perrien, are without flaw. Ken-nedy's attorney is given until Thurs-day to file an answer. Meanwhile Ken-nedy is still in custody, being unable to furnish $6,000 bail required.

Will Probably Not Strike.

TOPEKA, Oct. 25.—There now seems little probability of a strike on the Santa Fe system. The chairman of the grievance committees of the locomotive engineers and firemen employed on the system were in conference with General Manager Frey, and the situation and prospects of a speedy return to regular payment days were fully canvassed. The visitors departed with the under-standing that the employes in their de-partments would wait with patience, until the company could pay.

The Reaper Won the Race.

The Resper Won the Race. New YORK, Oct. 25.—The American clipper ship Reaper and the American bark Western Belle sailed from Astoria. Or., on June 20, to race down the Pacific coast and around the Horn to this port for a wager of $1,000. The Reaper arrived an easy winner. She stopped, too, at Pitcairn island for a day and found the natives enjoying good health and supplied them with a good health and supplied them with a batch of newspapers.

A Great Coal Combine.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 25.—It is gen-erally believed in this city that the se-curing by the Vanderbilts of the con-trol of the stock of the Delaware, Lack-awanna and Western is the first step in the formation of the greatest coal com-bine ever inaugurated in this country and one that before it is finished will be found to include all the coal carrying companies that have terminals in Jersey City.

Street Car Strike at Columbus.

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 25.-Tuesday a general strike was declared here by the street railway company's employes. They allege two motormen were dis-charged for their union principles. On the company's refusal to reinstate them, the men went out. The company claim no communication to that end

The Students' Lecture Association was opened at University Hall Friday evening by Frederick Douglass. A very large audience greeted the famous colored orator. For nearly two generations Douglass has been a prominent figure upon the public stage in this country and is undoubtedly the most distinguished man of his race. His white hair, his feeble gait, the failing voice, the lack of that fire and vigor which electrified his audiences in the old anti-slavery days before the war, all show that seventy-six years or more have told upon the ex-Maryland slave. Those who heard him years ago in his prime must have been disappointed. He probably did not come up to the expectations of the younger portion of his andience who had never heard him before. The written lecture which he read Friday night lacked the stirring appeals-the rich humor-the touching pathos of his old off-hand addresses.

Fred Douglass at University Hall.

His lecture was a plain, common sense argument and plea for the protection of the law and common justice for the negro race in the South which they do not have to-day. His description of how the negro was emancipated and then, without education, without property, without friends and without the means of securing his daily bread was turned loose among his enemies, was very striking and impressive. We may well agree with him that under all the circumstances the conduct and progress of the race has been remarkable. It is safe to say that no race known to history emancipated from slavery under the same circumstances would have conducted themselves with as docile and fine a Christian spirit and with as little malice, hatred and revenge towards their former oppressors as did the negro of the South.

It is no doubt true that most of the charges of crime trumped up against the negro by the "white trash" of the South are false. As all the crimes committed on the Pacific Coast, whose au. thors are unknown, are charged to Chinamen, so all the crimes committed in the South, whose authors are un known, are charged to the negro. The time is soon to come when this generation will have to answer at the bar of history for its shameful, unchristian, inhuman treatment of the negro in the South and the Chinaman on the Pacific loast.

More than fifty-two years ago Frederick Douglass who had then been working for three years since his escape from slavery, as a common laborer apon the docks at New Bedford made his first public speech at Nantucket. That intelligent audience was touched, amazed, overwheimned by the eloquence of the poor, unknown, shabbily dressed fugitive slave. They felt that another Epictitus was in their midst. No sooner had Douglass finished his speech than William Lloyd Garrison sprang to the platform and exclaimed: Have we been listening to a thing? Can a chatlel melt our hearts like this to tears? Can a piece of property utter eloquence like this? No, we have been listening to a man!" From that time forth Douglass was a tireless and unceasing champion of the emancipation of his race. He is the last surviving leader of the abolition movement. In THE ROYAL CAFÉ supporting the unpopular cause Douglass passed through as many trials and perils and dangers as Paul endured in Cor. 5th Ave. and Washington St. preaching the early Gospel. Like the great Apostle "He has fought a good Mrs. John Schneider, Jr., Prop fight," "he has kept the faith." He has earned and secured the respect of every intelligent, fair minded person in the country, North and South, and has gained no insignificant place in the history of his country and of his race.

The Habit of Carelesiness.

In youth men are self reliant, self as sertive and self sufficient. Soon they find themselves mistaken, possibly in little things at first, for the fact is they are still small in knowledge and influence. Hence the chagrin of the first errancy is softened by the reflection that its consequences cannot work much harm. Too often they fail to emphasize the impor-tance of the value of their utterances as their personal influences widen. Hence their testimony without sufficient proof for themselves begins to work mischief for others. Then follow surprises, misunderstandings, alienations, criminations, heartaches and occasionally something worse. Friendships are broken, integrity is wounded, confidence is shaken, human testimony is suspected.

Now all this is not the result chiefly of any essentially bad trait in human nature. It arises rather from carelessness and a sort of insincere habit of condoning the fault on the score of personal insignificance. "Oh, I didn't mean it!" covers a multitude of these sins among our younger friends. But, alas, "younger friends" soon grow into midlife, and the careless habit, once indulged, barnacles itself upon age.-Boston Commonwealth.

ALASI A little thought of doubtful kin Came housed himself my heart within, And spied about, and furled his wings, And tried my heart's long silent strings, And to the sound he wakened there I sang a song upon the air-A song, and songs, and ever more I never sang so sweet before

Until a whisper came and staid The sweetest songs I ever made,

And told me 'twas a very sin Had made himself so snng within!

And so I took that busy sprite, That was my helper and delight,

And drove him far before my fears And cleansed his dwelling with my tears.

But since I turned him out of door I sing my happy songs no more. —Mand Egerton King.

THAT UMBRELLA.

Patter! pat! pat! The rain was pour ing down on the glass portico. A sud den storm had swept up out of a clean sky. Every one was caught unawares. The stray cabs were seized in a moment, the omnibuses crowded before you could look around. There was actually only one umbrella in the stand by the door of the Cafe de Luxe. I stood, in a new hat and a light gray frock coat, and eyed the umbrella speculatively. I knew the owner. He had just gone to lunch. He was a large and long luncher. I was in a hurry. Perhaps the storm would pass. I could send it back by a commissionnaire. I was very apt to take cold, and my appointment was really very important.

Thus prompted of satan, I put forth my hand toward the umbrella. At the moment I perceived, like a stage villain, that I was observed. In fact, I was not alone. A young lady of most attractive appearance stood a few feet from me, also under the portico, gazing wistfully out into the wet. She wore a summer costume. She looked at her watch, then again at the storm, and murmured disconsolately, "Oh, I shall be late." An instinct of generosity overcame me. Without another thought for my sensitive chest or my light gray suit, with a firm proprietary air, I laid hold of Dawson's umbrella. "Allow me," said I, "as cabs seem unattainable, to offer you an umbrella." A glad light leaped into her eyes. "Oh, I couldn't," she said. "What would you do?"

"I don't mind a wetting," I answered heroically. "Pray take it. You can send it back here at your leisure" (Dawson could not have much more than finished his soup).

"I couldn't think of it," she repeated. "You will get soaked through." A sudden thought struck me. After all, I had no business to lose sight of Dawson's umbrella.

"Perhaps," I ventured to suggest, "our roads lie the same way. It's a large um-brella." And I opened it. It was not a very large umbrella, but how could I know that?

"I go this way," said she, with a motion of her head westward. "My way," I cried. "Come, this is providential."

We started.

"If you wouldn't mind taking my arm," said I, "we should be better sheltered." "Oh, perhaps we should. Thank you!"

And she nestled quite close to me. We walked along, talking. My left shoulder got all the drippings, but somehow I was nantly. indifferent to that.

"Are you sure you are thoroughly

"If it costs me £20, I'll bring him to justice!" he declared. Really I dared paign platforms and arguments. They not break it to him just yet. Suddenly from round a sharp corner there came upon us-almost running into us-Lydia Lovelock herself, with Dawson's umbrella in her hand. He had been narrowly scanning every umbrella we passed. He scanned this one and cried, darting forward:

"My umbrella!" With a little scream Lydia turned and fled. Dawson was after her like an ar-I pursued Dawson. Why, oh, row. why, did she run away? Surely she must have recognized me.

It was a very quiet street we were running up, and our strange procession attracted little notice. The chase was soon over. I caught Dawson just as he caught Lydia. For a moment we all stood panting. Then Dawson gasped again: "My umbrella! Thief!"

Lydia seemed very agitated. Of course I came to her rescue. Avoiding Dawson's eye, I hastily told my shameful tale. Lydia's face brightened, but still there was apprehension in her looks. "This lady, believe me," I said, "is en-tirely blameless. Of course she thought the umbrella was my own. My sole consolation, Dawson, is to think that had you been in my place you would have done the same.'

"I don't see," remarked Dawson rudely, "why it consoles you to think me a a thief.'

I preserved a dignified silence.

"However," he continued, "if this young lady has quite finished with my property, perhaps she will be good enough to give it me back." Lydia did not take the hint. She clung to the umbrella.

"If—if you would be so kind," she stammered, "as to lend it to me for to-day—the weather is still threatening—I would return it tomorrow.' "Your request, madam, is a modest one," answered Dawson sarcastically, but, as you observe, the weather is threatening, and I want my umbrella. Kindly give it me."

"Really, Dawson, to oblige a lady"-I began.

'Why don't you buy her an umbrella?" sneered Dawson. "If she would accept it, I should be"-I stopped. To my surprise, Lydia laid her hand on my arm and said: "Oh, do, please! And may I keep this till we get to the shop?" I did not understand her, but we turned round and began to walk, looking for a tariff agitation. She was a very strange girl. She shop. lagged behind. I had to wait twice for her. Once she took a tuyning as though to leave us, and when I called her back she pouted.

Suddenly Dawson looked up. "It rains," he said.

It did rain. "Put up the umbrella," said Dawson roughly.

"Let the lady have it," said I indig-

"We'll share it," grinned Dawson. "You can get wet."

But Lydia did not put it up.

I let reproduction of the statements of fact trial condition of the country. The witnesses are not theorists bent either upon justifying or controverting camare plain business men who know what are the facts respecting the industries with which they are identified. With one consent they have borne testimony to the general paralysis of business caused by uncertainty respecting the tariff policy of the country. With few exceptions they unite in declaring that confidence can be restored and prosperity be regained if congress will defer the revision of the tariff and speedily announce its intentions. Representatives of the iron and steel industries, in which four hundred and fifty thousand men are ordinarily employed, were heard. They gave a lucid account of the deplorable condition of their trade. After thirty years of unbroken progress and prosperity mines have been closed, furnaces and mills have ceased operation, and tens of thousands of workmen have been thrown out of employment. The main cause of this industrial catastrophe has been the menace of radical changes in the tariff. If this were removed, there would be a general revival of business, factories and mines would be operated on full time and thousands of idle workmen would be profitably employed. That is the testimony of representatives of nearly every other industry who have been questioned by the committee on ways and means. The democratic members have attempted without avail to confuse these witnesses. They have sought to wring from them admissions that consumers were burdened by protection, that foreigners could not pay duties when their goods were shut out, and that with free raw materials American manufacturers ought to be satisfied with heavy reductions of the tariff. These practical business men have not allowed themselves to be entangled by hypothetical questions and free-trade olemics. They have known the facts about their own business and have stated them with clearness and precision. They have contended that consumers have not been burdened since prices have been lowered by competition; that foreigners have not been shut out since importations have steadily increased and were never greater than during the year following the passage of the McKinley act, and that free raw materials, while they would destroy many great industries, would not compensate manufacturers for the reductions of duties and the disturbance When Mr. Cobden was advocating free trade in England fifty years ago his great argument was that prices would be cheapened, and that the working classes would be fully em-ployed at higher wages. The tariff hearings are demonstrating that both of these objects have been secured in the United States under protection. Prices have been lowered decade after decade in consequence of industrial WANTED competition, and all sorts and conditions of men have been working at the AGENTS best wages paid anywhere in the world. What, then, has the free-trader to offer to the American people? Even if he could guarantee a further cheapening of prices, it would be no more than has been accomplished under protection; and of 'what advantage would the reduction be if the great body of workers were unemployed and unable to buy at any price? The revenue reformer does not venture to assume that wages will be higher or work more constant than in 1893, the last year of republican prosperity and hope. He cannot do this when the mere menace of his activity has thrown thousands of workmen out of employment.-N. Y.

eltered?" I asked. "Perfectly," she answered. "But you're not, I'm afraid. You're too kind. Mamma will be so grateful," I liked this simple friendliness.

"I thought there was no chance of rain today. You are more careful, Mr. Dawson.

I could not repress a little start. "You know my name?" She laughed merrily.

"It's on the umbrella-half an inch long," she said. "I couldn't help reading it."

There it was-"Joshua Dawson, 4 Calceolaria Villas, West Kensington, W." Somehow the address annoyed me-I myself live in St. James street.

"A strange way to make acquaintance, isn't it?" she asked, with a coquettish glance

"Delightful. But you haven't allowed me to make acquaintance with you yet. Haven't you your name anywhere about you?

"My name is Lydia Lovelock," she said. "Don't you like it? It's prettier than yours."

"Certainly prettier than Joshua Dawson," said I, wishing Dawson had chanced to be a duke.

"Joshua Dawson isn't pretty," she observed, with candid eyes; "now, is it?" "Then you wouldn't take my name instead of yours?" I asked, to keep up the conversation.

"Your umbrella's enough to take for one day," she said, with a blush. As she spoke she slipped and all but fell on the shining pavement. She gave a little cry, "Oh, my ankle!" and leaned heavily up-on me. I held her up.

"I believe I've wrenched it badly," she added. "Oh, what a lot of trouble I'm giving you Mr. Dawson!"

She looked lovely - I give you my word, positively lovely-in her pain and distress. I don't think I said so, but I said something, for she blushed again as she answered:

"That's very nice of you, but how am I to get home?"

'I must come with you," I said.

She shook her head.

"I can manage now.' "But you'll never be able to get out." "Oh, yes. But-perhaps-the rain's almost stopped-may I keep the umbrella? There are some steps to mount to our door, and"----Now, could I do anything else than press Dawson's umbrella upon her? She took it, and with a last bewitching smile vanished from my sight. I turned and almost ran back to the Cafe de Luxe, determined to make a clean breast of it to Stauffer in Kate Field's Washington.

"The rain's not much," she faltered. It was now pouring. With a muttered oath, Dawson snatched the umbrella from her. Lydia shrieked and ran away like a frightened rabbit-ran at the top of her speed up the street again.

"Stop, stop!" I cried. "Stop, my dear Miss Lovelock."

"Holy powers!" exclaimed Dawson. He had opened the umbrella. As he did so there was a thud on the pavementtwo, three thuds. In amaze I looked down. There lay a silver cigarette case, two purses and a gold watch. Dawson burst into maniacal laughter as he pointed at Lydia's retreating figure. That girl could run.

For a moment I stood dumfounded. What a revelation! Dawson chuckled in satanic glee. Sadly I stooped down and picked up the purses, the cigarette case and the watch.

"Great Scott!" I cried, and my hand flew to my waistcoat pocket.

It was my watch!

I did not prosecute Lydia because I could not have overtaken her, and for other reasons. It was altogether too sad, too disheartening, too disappointing a discovery. Dawson, however, observed that it seemed to him an excellent example of poetic justice in real life. -St. James Gazette.

Treatment For a "Wild Hair."

A "wild hair" is the most annoying freak of nature a man can be afflicted with. It grows in from the eyelid, instead of out, and constantly brushing against the eyeball sometimes causes an irritation that results in the loss of sight. To pull it out gives only temporary relief, since in a few weeks it comes back as well grown and strong as ever. The only way to kill it is to destroy the sac from which it springs. This is done by means of the electric needle, which is pressed into the sac and a current turned on. A sharp prick is felt, and the hair is forever dead.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

THE WRECKERS.

The following story told to me in my official capacity as chaplain in one of her majesty's largest convict prisons touched me very much at the time. The narrator having been dead some years, I see no harm in presenting his history to the public in as nearly as possible his own words. By way of preface I may remark that the prisoner was a quiet, well behaved and apparently inoffensive individual, entered in the prison books as H

He had evidently received a fair education. At the time of telling me his story he had the greater part of a 10 years' penal sentence to run, his crime being a barefaced, well planned burglary at a large jeweler's shop in the west His constitution was not one to withstand the severe discipline of the prison, and he lay in hospital on what turned out to be his deathbed as he made his astonishing revelations without any reservation as to secrecy. He said:

I expect I don't seem to you, sir, quite the usual cut of the long term burglar, and you would be quite right in so think-I never did fancy the profession, and that jeweler's shop business was all a sham and an excuse to get here out of the world and safe from a worse fate at the hands of deadly enemies. Aye, sir, you may stare. Few people, I imagine, are so fond of prison that they will stretch a point to get there. No, sir; my offense was a much more serious one than ever transpired at my trial, and as I feel that I am not likely to trouble the prison authorities very much longer I might as well give you the true reason for my being in this place.

I started in life as a respectable middle class tradesman and in due time married the truest and best of women. Shortly after the birth of a son my wife was stricken down with illness, to which she succumbed. My grief was such that I could not go about my ordinary duties. I sent the boy to some friends. I gave up business and became a wanderer on the face of the earth.

I drifted to Paris, and there, destitute and starving, I made the acquaintance of a man who was a prominent member of one of the most extreme socialistic societies in the capital. He took care of me, and partly out of gratitude and partly out of sheer restlessness and a growing distaste for life I agreed to join his society. I found that the principles of this secret association were even more dreadful than I had supposed. It essayed to strike a blow at all monarchies or constituted governments, and the throned heads of Europe were especially marked out for its prey.

From time to time various attempts, though hitherto unsuccessful, had been made to assassinate some of the foreign rulers, and soon after I joined it happened that Great Britain fell under the ban of the society. At a largely attend-ed meeting, secretly held in the out-skirts of Paris, it was resolved that of the high persons surrounding her plans, he dropped his rail and made for deadly and sweeping blow could be dealt if, while on one of its frequent journeys to or from the north, the royal train could be wrecked.

rater side of one rail and on the inner side of the other, replacing them by our specially prepared rails.

The wheels of the engine of the coming train would take those short rails like points, and as the ends curved off toward the parapet of the bridge the whole train would leave the rails and be precipitated from the frightful height into the stream beneath. There would be no escape for a single soul in that train. And so, calmly and in cold blood, we arranged the wholesale destruction of the south bound train which would contain the head and many important members of the royal family.

We knew that every precaution was taken by the railway company and their servants to observe a clear and safe passage for their royal patron, and that extra patrolmen wer out along the route, while to prevent the risk of accident all less important trains were shunted to one side. The contents of all goods trains on the down line were carefully inspected in order that no projections should endanger the safety of the special, and signalmen were more than usually put upon the alert.

The greatest obstacle we had to contend against was the pilot engine. We could do nothing till it passed (the loosened bolts would not affect its passage), and that left only 15 minutes to prepare the rails for the doomed train. Still, we practiced the screwing process on dummy metals and soon got very expert. The night arrived. The previous evening we had managed, unobserved, to loosen the bolts necessary for our purpose near the middle of the bridge, and we could only trust they would not be tampered with before our arrival next evening.

The fateful night was dark and stormy, which favored our purpose. Disguised as railway laborers at a village in the vicinity, and having previously conceal-ed our tools near the bridge, we made for the scene of our enterprise. Ensconcing ourselves within the shadow of the parapet, we waited for the pilot engine to come along. At last her lights appear in the distance, and she thunders safely over the bridge.

Now to work.

Hastily securing our respective rails, we make for the selected spot and com-mence to withdraw the bolts. While thus engaged my companion with a bloodcurdling chuckle remarks:

'We shall bag more of the high and mighty than we first expected. The Duke of K- and his suit are, I understand, on board the train."

"The Duke of K---?" I started and dropped my rail in my excitement. "My boy's master," I gasped, "and he never travels without him."

"So much the worse for your boy, then," said the heartless brute as he proceeded with his work.

In an instant my horrible position flashed upon me. Here was I calmly preparing to slaughter the heads of England (to whom before I had never given a thought), and with them my own flesh and blood. I nearly swooned as the awful revelation burst upon me, but in a moment I recovered, and then my decision was prompt. True, the failure of the scheme meant certain death to my companion and myself, but what of that? There was still time to save ourselves from becoming wholesale murderers. I shouted, while I replaced my bolt, to Scraggs to drop his rail and fly. He, however, had no such scruples

So it was decided.

It remained but to draw lots for the men to do the deed. By a strange fatality Scraggs (the name of my friend) and myself were deputed to carry out the vengeance of the society.

I received the intelligence with a callousness begotten of long enduring misery and want. What cared I now what befell me? Just at this time, tob, I learned of the whereabouts of my son. He had entered the service of a well known Scotch nobleman in the capacity of page and personal attendant and was Even this news did not awaken me to a true sense of my position. The in-structions of the society were clear and to the point.

The train with her majesty on board had to be destroyed in any way we chose. Success would mean a handsome reward and a high position in the society. Failure-and there were no extenuating circumstances-meant sudden and certain death at the hands of the society. A certain period was given us to bring about the desired result, and we lost no time in arranging our plans. Her majesty was at this time, the au-tumn, staying at her usual residence in the north of Scotland, and we found we had some time before us ere we could hope to deal our blow on her return

Crossing to England, we made a careful survey of the railway route and decided upon a likely spot on the system of one of the best known English rail-ways by which royalty usually travels. The place in question was an unusually long bridge spanning at the height of 80 feet a broad but shallow stream. Just before the approach to the bridge the line took a sharp curve, which lent itself to our fell purpose. Our plan was to prepare two short, handy pieces of rail faced at one end like points and the other end curving gradually ontward. The thin ends of the rails would be pierced for bolts of the same size as those used to fasten (by means of a fishplate) the ordinary rails together. We should then, on the night preceding the passing of the train, loosen the bolts of the particular rails we pitched upon, trusting they would be overlooked by the patrolling surfaceman.

On the following night we should con-ceal ourselves in the recess of the bridge, and as soon as the pilot engine (which always precedes the royal train by 15 out the bolts, release the fishplates on the throne must die. It was thought that a me with a knife, the glitter of which as he closed with me I saw just in time through the darkness. As we struggled the roar of the ap proaching train was heard in the distance. Making a frantic effort, as the train was close upon us, I managed to throw Scraggs off. He fell across the off rail. With a rush and roar the royal train swept safely over the bridge, while a stifled shrick from Scraggs prepared me for his fate as I fell in a faint against the stonework of the bridge.

I revived in what must have been a few minutes after the passage of the train. The headless trunk of my late companion was the first object that met my eye. I shuddered to think how nearly the occupants of the train had escaped an equally certain death.

The train had not pulled up, the driver evidently not having felt the obstruction. I hastily replaced the bolts on the other rail, threw the tools into the stream, and with a last glance at the remains of Scraggs fled from the spot. Unsuspected, I made my way to London, but only to live in deadly fear of the swift and sure vengeance of the secret society.

The failure of the enterprise must be already known to them, and hide as I might I knew their hand would ultimately reach me. My money exhaust-ed, I conceived the desperate idea of the daring burglary of which I was convicted. If I failed to enrich myself, my life would at least be safe in jail. I failed miserably enough, got caught red handed and received my sentence.

Before I threw away my liberty I saw from the papers that at the inquest on Scragg's remains a verdict of "accidental death" was returned. The dastardly attempt therefore remained unsuspected by the general public, and since I came here I have heard that the secret society has been broken up and its members scattered. I feel now that I shall escape them after all, but I shall die happy, knowing that my boy's future is as-sured, and that he will never know (I was convicted under a false name) how near to annihilation his own father had brought him and his country's queen.-London Tit-Bits.

WOMEN CANNOT VOTE.

Supreme Court Says It Is Unconstitutional.

THE OPINION OF JUDGE M'GRATH.

Mrs. Coffin's Mandamus Petition Denied and the Kennedy Petition to Prevent Registration Granted-The Entire Bench Concurred In the Opinion.

LANSING. Oct. 25 .- The supreme court in the mandamus proceedings brought to test the constitutionality of the act passed by the last legislature granting school and municipal suffrage to women, has handed down an opinion written by Judge McGrath and consurred in by the entire bench, declaring the law wholly unconstitutional and void.

The proceedings were instituted in Detroit in the name of Mary Stuart Coffin et al., to test the validity of act No. 138, of the laws of 1898, granting No. 138, of the laws of 1898, granting women the right to vote in school, vil-lage and city elections in the state. The petition of Mrs. Coffin was for a mandamus to compel the Detroit elec-tion commissioners to provide women with tickets to vote for judicial and city officers. The petition of Kennedy et al. was for a writ of prohibition to prevent the city clerk from preparing 100 extra registration books for the use of women. f women say: "The general rule is that the basis of all authority to vote at popular elec-tions is the constitution; that the electorate is constituted by the fundamental law, and that the qualification of the electors must be uniform through out the state. To empower the legis-lature to confer the elective tranchise upon classes of persons other than those named, some other provision must be pointed out which confers that author-ity in express terms, or by necessary implication. The power to provide for the incorporation of cities is not unlike that given for the organization of coun-ties and the authority to direct the ties, and the authority to direct the time and manner in which judicial officers shall be elected, and the other officers elected, does not involve the power to determine who shall consti-inte the electorate.

inte the electorate. "The word manner' is one of large significance, but it is clear that it can-not exceed the subject it belongs to. It relates to the word elected. "The constitution had already pro-vided for electors, and when it provides that an officer shall be elected, it cer-tainly contemplates an election by the electorate which it has constituted. No other election is known to the constituother election is known to the constitution, and when it provides that the leg-islature may direct the manner in which an officer shall be elected, it sim-ply empowers the legislature to provide the details for the holding of such elec-tion tion. "It follows that the act in question is invalid, that the mandamus in the first named case must be denied, and the writ of prohibition granted in the case last named.

WEBSTER.

The Webster Farmer's Club met last Saturday at the residence of Geo. W. Phelps. A goodly number were present. A pleasant day had already dawned upon the occasion, so that fortune seemed to smile upon the deliberations of the Club. Everybody remarked what an unusually good fall it was. The meeting was called to order at one o'clock or thereabout. The question box proved to be empty suggesting that no one was thirsty after bits of knowledge or else the busy time prevented any such inquiry as might be dropped into the box in question.

Some parts being absent, the question for the day was soon broached, namely, 'What are some of the causes of the financial depression of the times?"

A Burglary Prevented. MILAN, Oct. 25.—Monday night about midnight Watchman Clifford Gardner came upon five men while making his rounds. They were acting in a sus-picious manner, and he asked them what they were doing. They all started what they were doing. They all started to run, when he opened fire upon them with his revolver, emptying every chamber, and gave chase, but they es-caped. He then got his shotgun and help and searched the town. A trail of blood along the sidewalk in the direc-tion they fled showed that at least one of the shots had taken effect.
