THE ENTIRE ADDRESS GIVEN IN FULL.

The Hand murder trial was concluded last Thursday afternoon and the jury brought in a verdict of guilty, at half-past nine the same evening. The judge passed sentence at once and Hand was taken to Jackson Friday. The most important feature was the address of Hon. A. J. Sawyer which we give in full below.

Gentlemen of the Jury:

It is possible that some may think that I ought to apologize for standing before you as an advocate of the People's cause. You do not expect me to do that. You have spent ten days in the investigation of this subject carefully, patiently. You have listened six mortal hours to the attorneys for the defendant in presenting all they could in behalf of this defendant in this case. I have noticed with what eagerness every single man on this jury caught.

Cord to Mr. Sawyer that privilege it will involve great disorder and it ought not to be done.

Mr. Sawyer: I was about to state to you this fact regarding the law of our land and his honor has finished what I was about to say, that if in the introduction of any evidence in this case a ruling has been made by this court that is prejudicial to this defendant, if any remark of my learned friend who has prejudicial to this defendant, if any remark of my learned friend who has prejudicial to this defendant, if any remark of my learned friend who has prejudicial to this defendant, if any remark of my learned friend who has prejudicial to this defendant, if any remark of my learned friend who has prejudicial to this defendant, if any remark of my learned friend who has prejudicial to this defendant, if any remark of my learned friend who has a ruling has been made by this court that is prejudicial to this defendant, if any remark of my learned friend who has prejudicial to this defendant, if any remark of my learned friend who has a ruling has been made by this court that is prejudicial to this defendant, in the law or if I shall so offend in anything that I shall say and this is gentleman shall be convicted, then friends on the other side. I was glad to see it. It evidedced to me that nothing had happened in this case that had escaped the vigilence of this jury. It evidenced to me that there was a determination on the part of you twelve men in the other side, and I deeply regret that now in the evening of my days my brethern upon the other are side. I was glad to me now. In a practice of 33 years at this bar this is only the second time that I have been called upon by the people of this county to prosecute a criminal case, my lot has fallen with my friends on the other side, and I deeply regret that now in the evening of my days my brethern upon the other are to discharge your duty not partially but impartially and completely, and if in that no amount of earnestness on the the end you found occasion to say this man is not guilty of this crime you could do it conscientiously; and if on the other hand you found from the evidence in this case and the logic of the facts and circumstances that had been had you found from the evidence in this case and the logic of the facts and circumstances that had been had you found from the evidence in this case and the logic of the facts and circumstances that had been had you found occasion to say this part of the learned counsel who is to close this case, no amount of earnestness on the part of the learned counsel who is to close this case, no amount of earnestness on the part of the learned counsel who is to close this case, no amount of eloquence on his part shall drive you beyond the tostimony or against the law. No, gentlement of the learned counsel who is to close this case, no amount of eloquence on his part shall drive you beyond the tostimony or against the law. No, gentlement of the learned counsel who is to close this case, no amount of eloquence on his part shall drive you beyond the tostimony or against the law. No, gentlement of the learned counsel who is to close this case, no amount of eloquence on his part shall drive you beyond the tostimony or against the law. No, gentlement of the learned counsel who is to close this case, no amount of eloquence on his part shall drive you beyond the tostimony or against the law. No gentlement of the learned counsel who is to close this case, no amount of eloquence on his part shall drive you beyond the tostimony or against the law. No gentlement of the learned counsel who is to close this case, no amount of eloquence on his part shall drive you beyond the tostimony or against the law. human being who is jeopardized by what I may do or say, and too much for fearlessly render that verdict in the face of all opposition, and I rejoiced to my own character to endeavor in a case of this importance to drive the jury beyond the facts or to push the court against the law; and if I should be foolmen, I do not feel that you would take it as flattery on my part to stand here and attempt to apologize for my appearance before you. You demand it, you have a right to it. It must have challenged your attention that during all this long and tedious here in the open daylight of this cause, trial the representatives of the people sat still hour after hour and waited when some fact or circumstance was being offered in evidence for my learned friends on the other side to get up and object and argue that fact, not for the court, but for the jury, to break its tall and make it fall as lightly as possible.

here in the open daylight of this cause, you have seen every flickering ray of light that has been shed upon it. Could I lie to you about it if I were mean enough to try? Could I fool you if I should try? Why, gentlemen, is it possible that these men would make such a charge as that against me and look this jury in the face? and do yon believe that while that little man occupies that chair (pointing to the court) any Gentlemen, in my physical condition came in here and that you might not be befogged and kept from seeing what those facts were and seeing their bear-trial as this, but here has been coming upon each other.

I call your attention to another fact. You have heard the defendant's attorneys rise to their feet, or sitting in their chairs, with the exception of one of them, and saying, "I object", "I take an exception to that statement of counsel", "I take exception to that statement." It is the exception to that statement." sel", "I take exception to that statement", "I take exception to that act," You heard it from the lips of counsel for the people only once from the beginning to the end, once I mildly protested and asked that the record might show what my learned friend on the other side said, for I wanted, if he was the protested and punishment him who had committed this crime I did not serving. But if laying a trap or plan to get this convic- feel I had a right to withhold my ser-tion to the supreme court in order to have it reversed, to have the supreme court see what the defense had been doing in order to get a verdict.

It is also proper for me to say to you, gentlemen of the jury, that if you shall make a mistake in your verdict in this case, and should find this man guilty when he ought not to be so found there is a court of review, they may do, I may do and the court may do. when he ought not to be so found there is a court of review, they may do, I may do and the court may do.

Mr. Whitman: I take exception to that statement upon the ground that the supreme court cannot review the finding of the jury, they can only review the rulings of the court, the question of fact is wholly in the hands of the jury.

Court: You are not right in this thing. It will not do for counsel to continually rise and interrupt Mr. Sawyer when he makes a proposition to the jury and attempt to argue it, it is not the fair thing to do. You compel me to say to the jury that if any error is committed here by me or my rulings or the conduct of the prosecution and the prisoner should be convicted, the supreme court would reverse it and send it back for a new trial, I suppose that is what Mr. Sawyer meant.

Mr. Sawyer: That is all I meant.

Court: Counsel for the defense have been allowed to go on with their argument and they must allow Mr. Sawyer to do the same, except that when Mr. Sawyer makes a mistake accidentally or otherwise his attention may be called to it in order to correct it.

Mr. Knowlton: I suppose there is no bjection to our rising quietly and taking an exception to what we consider to be error?

could; and while I say that, and caution you, gentlemen, that nothing should be done in this case except by careful and thoughtful deliberation and you should hough the finding of the guite and thoughtful deliberation and you should thoughtful deliberation and you shou

A Communication.

MR. EDITOR: I am an humble Christian but I respect those who are not Christians when they honestly differ from me. I am not the Pope and may make mistakes, but I always respect honest people. Perhaps the editor of the Bulletin is not a Christian, but why should he be the editor of the official organ of a Christian Association if he is not? And whether he is a Christian or not he ought to be honest. The Bulletin has been agitating college ethics. "Physician, heal thyself."

The S. C. A. Bulletin pretended to be Mr. Mill's friend when he was here. Why does the editor of the Bulletin stab him in the back when he is gone? Does he voice the sentiment of the S. C. A.? But this is not all. He tells a falsehood in giving the Judas kiss. Mr. Mills preached a sermon in which he showed that death bed repentance was not worth much. He showed that Christianity was for living men and women and not for dying ones. I heard that sermon and thought it was hard on dying penitents. I heard him three more times and not once did he appeal to the fear of death, but warned people that serving God through fear was good for

But if the representation of the editor was true, why was he not honest enough to tell Mr. Mills "on the way to the train." That editor is not very modest. Before he tries to reform the University including the fraternities and the faculty, he had better learn a little modesty and honesty. And if he repre- 60c, 75c, 85c and $1.00. sents the S. C. A. the S. C. A. had bet ter take the saw-log out of its own eye before it tries to take cinders out of the eyes of others. I think business men generally would prefer an honest worldling to a dishonest Christian.

Continued from First Page In the argument of this case, my brethren on the other side, said some things to you, the learned counsel have made some remarks to you and taken some positions which do not come, as I understand it, logically, within the purview of the line of thoughts I intended to follow, and therefore, it is my duty to stop now and answer them, not many of them, because most of them will be answered in the course of my argument, but there are some statements they have made, which do not fall within the line of thought I marked out for myself, and to which I think I ought to call your attention, and in doing that I will commence in inverse order. The last man who ar-gued this case to you was Mr. Whitman. He took but two positions that do not fall naturally and logically with-in the line of thought I intended to present to you. The first one of these positions is his allusion to his experience and observation and to Dr Vaughan. It would have been entirely proper for them to produce Dr. Vaughan to you, I have nothing to say against him, I respect him as a man and a scholar, I love him as a deep and thorough thinker, I should have been glad to have what light he could have shed upon this case if he could have shed any, but learned counsel saw fit to tell you that the expert testimony in shed any, but learned counsel saw it to tell you that the expert testimony in this case was wholly unreliable. He cites as an instance the death of Mrs. Miliard. This lady died under all the apparent effects of poison, I believe her husband was a doctor, she died with the agony of poison, and the people of that community attempted to discover, if they could, who was her murderer. They exhumed the body, but the learned They exhumed the body, but the learned and skillful doctor had injected morphine, I think it was, in her veins under the pretence that it was to embalm the body of his beloved wife. The doctor was arrested because morphine was found in her stomach and brain, the testimony was given, and Dr. Vaughan takes the witness stand and testifies that that morphine might have been found in her stomach by reason of the injection made for the purpose of embalming the body, and such learned and distinguished counsel as my friends upon the other side stood and talked to the jury about their duty, and talked and threatened, and argued and said: "What are are you going to and said: What are are you going to do about it? Can you have any doubt upon such a subject as that?" and the jury acquitted the doctor, and he is left at large to day to ply his devilish aris upon a second wife. The jury acquitted him, and no other man or earth has ever hear arrested or tried for that are so easily fooled.

Another peculiarity about my brother Whitman's position is this, he takes ap one circumstance, partially states it, and then says, "Now, gentlemen of the jury, does that show this man is guilty?" He takes another circumstance, discusses, imperfectly states it, calls no attention to its logical bearing at all, and says, "Now, gentlemen, does that show he is guilty?" and so he goes through the eatire list of thirty-three circumstances that have been proven against this defendant in the same way. There comes tearing down the sides of Pike's Peak a river. It plun-ges from one cascade to another, lifting boulders and throwing them out of its course until it has piled them one upon another until they are lifted as high as this building. You follow that stream up the mountain and you find that the melting snow on that snow-capped mountain is the source of that entire river, and that by the perpetual falling of that snow with its numerous entire river, and that by the perpetual falling of that snow with its numerous and minute flakes, and the thawing thereof, this river is formed simply by means of multitudes of little rivulets which gather and combine one after when one did not respond, "We have another into an ever growing attention." another into an ever growing stream no money to assist us but this poor, which by and by goes plunging down, old man seventy-five years of age, we down, lifting whatever comes in its have nobody to assist us but this one way even the solld rocks and throwing brother of the defendant. "Gentleway even the solld rocks and throwing them one side and ending its course at last in a lake that supplies the people assist them." of cities with pure water. Suppose my brother Whitman had gone upon the top of that mountain and as those little snow-flakes fell he caught one of them and said, 'Mr. Sawyer do you mean to tell me that snow-flake makes that great river down there? Don't you know it does not?" and he catches another and another and says, "Do you mean to tell me that is the canse of that great river?" and that is the argument of my brother. No, it is not the single snow-flake that makes the river, but the constant falling and melting of many snow-flakes that produces that terrible current, and it is the codstant falling of those little circumstances like snow-flakes upon the head of this man that finally lifts the presumption of innocence, drives it out of the way, an I points to him as the only man wh could by any possibility have commit-has ever been arrested or tried for that crime, and never will be, and then these learned and distinguished gentlemen write articles for the legal journals, saying that the jury system ought to be abolished because juries

My brother, Knowlton, has taken four and a half mortal hours to argue the defendant's innocence to you. Do not misunderstand me. I have the utmost regard for that man. I believe the University of Michigan is honored by his presence there, I believe that the law students in following his instructions are benefited. Eleven of the best years of my life were devoted to making a good lawyer out of him, and I leave it to you to say how I succeeded. But, gentlemen, there are some things, I think, as I have listened to his argument in this case, I must have omitted or else the peculiar position of a schoolmaster in the University of Michigan has changed my brother somewhat. Do you believe that my learned friend could frighten you out of your judgment in this case? Was it good policy for him to try to frighten twelve great stubborn, full-grown fellows who had held many a bullest. lows who had held many a bullock? He says to you in the very opening of his discussion, "If any man on that jury thinks that man guilty he is peculiarly constituted." Well now, gentlemen, does that reach your understanding and judgment? Is it the cold logic of facts that he is giving you? He says in the next sentence, 'If you find this man guilty when innocent you have committed a worse crime than Pulver's murderer.' Do you believe that such argument as that will swerve your judgment? Are you of such soft and, pliable material, are you so plastic that matters of that kind can drive you from discharging the duty the people of this county have placed upon you? Again, he says to you, gentlemen is a decent man.

Another position taken by all the counsel on the other side is this, if Mr. Hand committed that murder Mrs. Hand knows it. Gentlemen, we have not made that charge. I think that woman has all the burden she ought to bear. If they want to charge that I turn it over to their gentle mercy. Cherge it fyou must, if the stern necessities of this case compel you to make that defense then make it. It in no way wipes out the facts and cir-

those innocent children and that lady, "Gentlemen of the !ury, your verdict cannot bring back to life Jay Pulver." No, gentlemen, no, it cannot bring him back to life, it cannot restore him to that lady who sat at the window of her be that of Cliff Hand. You may not restore Jay Pulver to this family, but you can prevent the death of future

Jay Pulvers by punishing the man who struck down Jay Pulver in his prime.

Another position taken by all mytriends on the other side was, that if Clifford Hand had ever committed any other crime we could have drawn it out of him on his cross-examination. The rule of law is just this and no more, if Clifford Hand has ever been arrested for a crime and convicted of it we can show his conviction by the records. If he has been charged with a crime we can only show so much of it as Clifford Hand may see fit to tell us and the doors of investigation close there. How many rumors have surthere. rounded him, how many charges of his neighbors have ever gone to his doors, how many crimes he may ever have committed we can only prove by asking Clifford Hand, "Didn't you do so and so?" and if he says. "No," that ends the investigation. Oh, I wonder when I think of this array of counsel who surrounded the defendant during this whole long trial, I wonder why gentlimen so learned and distinguished in their profession should have omitted to prove by fifteen, twenty-five or a hundred reputable citizens of Ypsi-lanti, that Clifford Hand's reputation was good, that he was a kind, indulgent man, and that he was never sus-pected of any crime whatever. Why, gentlemen, what do you live honest fives for? There is satisfaction be-yond anything that can be told in feel-ing that you have done your duty well under all circumstences, there is a sat-isfaction that comes to a man himself in having lived a life of rectitude, hon-In having lived a life of rectitude, honesty and respectability. No man can measure in words the grand satisfaction there is in the evening of his life in looking back and saying, "I have endeavored under all circumstances to do the best I could with what little sense and mind I have." But beyond that there is another fact that is of equal importance, whenever clouds overshadow us whenever doubts and overshadow us, whenever doubts and suspicions arise against us, whenever we are charged with having committed this or that crime the law says if we have lived lives of rectitude, if we have been men of respectability in the community and have been above reproach we may bring into the court room the neighbors who have sur-like this. I wonder that my brother who has conducted so ably so many prosecutions in this county should

Mr. Sawyer-I will talk about the money in a minute. If you say Clif ford Hand has not money to pay those expenses all he has to do is to come to this court and make an affidavit to that fact and ask that the county treasury shall be opened and subpoenss issued in his name and placed at his disposal. Now don't lets hear any more about that. All the wealth of this county stands back of him and, thank God, the bosom of that court would have responded to that

Mr. Lehman—An application was made to get witnesses here at the expense of the people.

Mr. Sawyer—If it were so it would have been a great thing to have shown this jury. I protest that the testimony in this case has closed, and therefore the respectability of my brother shall not be thrown in here now and make testimony in this case, that he didn't dare offer when we were on the trial. They say Hand was born in the city of Ypsilanti, that he kisses his babies every morning when he leaves them, would that they had said he includes his wife in that. They tell you he has old father and mother and these little children to support. They tell you every moment of his existence has been spent in this city of light and learning. Now, with the entire treasury of the county of Washtenaw at their command why didn't they bring the mayor of the city here to say, "Yes, I have known Clifford Hand all his life, he is a representable deserted. his life, he is a respectable, decent man, he has never been suspected of crime?" Why didn't they issue subpoenas to all the people down there who had known him favorably and not stand here and carp at us because we do not see fit to ask Mr. Hand, "Have you been charged with larceny, have you not been tracked to your door with the goods under your arm, have you not paid and settled for them?" They had no right to require us to ask these questions. They should have known, if it were true, that Hand had lived an honest, industrious, sober life and produced witnesses to prove it.

Mr. Lehman—We take exception to hat statement. The law presumes that that is true in the absence of

Mr. Sawyer-I say that is true, the law does presume it and hence they might have shown it, but they have charged us why didn't you ask him so and so, in reply I say why didn't you do what the law will let you do, that is produce witnesses to prove that he that lady who sat at the window of her cottage on that Saturday afternoon and saw the retreating form of her husband as he went down the street and beyond the range of her vision, it cannot bring him back again; but, gentlemen, your duty fearlessly done, your verdict honestly rendered will tell to the world at large there must not be another Jay Pulver tragedy, or if there shall be, the story of the murderer will be that of Cliff Hand. You may not tell two or three different kinds of mitted the window she is guilty. Gentlemen, her knows he is guilty. Gentlemen, her woman's heart may have divined the truth and that may account for her truth and that may account for her hat thought had not been thoroughly seasoned by my brother before he threw it out. The excited officers arrest Mr. Hand down there that day?" Well, gentlemen of the jury I think that thought had not been thoroughly seasoned by my brother before he threw it out. The excited officers are threat agreet Mr. Hand down there that day?" well a gentlemen of the jury I think that may account for her truth and that may account for tell two or three different kinds of mitted the murder of Jay Pulver, stories. It may account also for the fact that she states that Clifford Hand had been bonored by official position in got home that night at half-past nine o'clock, it may account for the fact that this defendant also stated that to Mr. Peterson when he was first arrested, the first statement he made on that subject, and Mr. Peterson wrote it down in his book 2.30 and it is there rest Clifford Hand? They had not the city of the city of the warrant was prepared before Mr. Brenner reached the city of Ypsilanti. It was an unfortunate question that my brother asked—"What made them ardown in his book 2.30 and it is there rest Clifford Hand? They had not ments of this man, for it is possible, of course, that when this man left that mill on the 12th day of March, on that Sunday after he had stood around there all day, he says for the purpose of seeing what they thought about the murder, it may account for the fact that when he went into one door of his house and through the house and out of the other door, only staying a moment, he said to his wife I got home at half-past nine o'clock last night. He could not be unconscious of the mutterings in the air, he could not be unconscious of the suspicious looks trousers and the thread upon his coat yet. Why did they arrest Clifford Hand?" They did for the same reason that is running through your minds now, because even then they knew that no man could have got into the mill and perpetrated that crime who was no: perfectly familiar with it; they knew what threats he had made against the officers of the mill; they knew of his elaving that saloon secretly and compute the course. the law were on his track, that the writs were being made out against him for his arrest, he could not be unconscious of the peculiar action he had wife and it may account for the made-up story of half-past nine, it may ac-count for the fact that Peterson had half-past nine in his book as the first statement that the defendant made, and may account for the change in that statement when confronted with witnesses in the saloon who say he did not leave there until after ten o'clock. It may also account for the fact that while in that justice's office when the investigation was going on, that it may account for the fact of her then stating to those officers. "Well if I stating to those officers, "Well, if I must tell, I must, he got home twenty minutes to eleven o'clock. It may account for those facts, it is possible, I make no charge about it, I wish I did not have to think about it. But genlemen, that woman's heart may have divined the truth, she may have seen how he came home that night, she may have observed his conduct and looks, she may have thought about it. Gen tlemen, I make no charges, these are facts, you will weigh them.

> Another position which the gentlemen of the other side have urged to you is this: Mr. Hand has taken the witness stand and has told his story, it is complete and uncontradicted. Well, gentlemen, he has had ten months to think of it since he was arrested, he has gone through one long trial when eminent and distinguished counsel stood here and called his attention to the damning and damaging facts that pointed to his guilt, he sat here all through this trial and heard all the people's testimony in this case and immediately before putting him upon the stand learned counsel distinguished in their profession, idolized as men, spent five living hours in the cell of that man cross-examining him, trying to learn his story, and while they say that Mr. Sawyer did not dare cross-examine him yet he had not opened his mouth five minutes before he contradicted the wife of his bosom, not five minutes had he been on the stand before he swore that he got home at 15 min-utes past 10 o'clock, when his wife has sworn that he got home 20 minutes to 11, that she called attention to the fact that he was out late and that it was then 20 minutes to 11, and his wife swore that she was undressing and geting into bed as the clock struck 11. There is no object in cross-examining a man who, as the boys say, "gave him self dead away" the first time he opened his mouth. Not only that, but in great detail he stated, in reply to Brother Knowlton's questions, he knew butchering was to be done at Grob's a week before it was done and therefore week before it was done and therefore he was there. Cannon and Hickman swore that they had no notion of butchering that animal there, at Grob's. They had started to drive it home to Superior, but it was too fat to get there and they had got as far as the stock yards in Ypsilanti, near Grob's saloon, and went to see if they could not go to Grob's to butcher. How did Hand figure out what had not happened? How did he know a fact was going to exist that did not fact was going to exist that did not exist? Why cross examine such a > man! I now come to a peculiar statement made here. I don't want to call the name of the gentleman who made it I will see if you can recognize it, I will see if it grated as harshly upon your ears as it did upon mine. One of those gentlemen stood before you and said: Yes, we spent five hours in that jail ryes, we spent nive hours in that jail trying to learn this man's story, and he told there just exactly what he has told here. Would the gentleman have been permitted to take the stand and swear to that? No, there is no authority that would allow him to state that as a witness, and if he would not be allowed to state it as a witness what terrible necessity caused him to stand here and make it when no cross-examination could be had? But the defense of this man goes staggering through this court dragging down the respectability and professional standing of those gentlemen on the other side. I would like to put that gentleman upon the stand, cross-examine him; I would the stand, cross-examine film; I would like to have said to him, "My dear boy, will you tell me which story Hand told that is like this one; was it the first one or the one that he told after you had spent five hours in the jail; which one was it? I would like to have asked him some questions about that. We are left entirely in the dark as to when that story had its birth. We as to when that story had its birth. We are left entirely in the dark whether that is the position he took when they first went there or whether it was after long cross-examination as to what was going to be said to this and that fact pointed so and so and argued so and so. When did that statement have birth, down in his book 9:30 and it is there rest Clifford Hand? They had not yet. It may account for all the state-ments of this man, for it is possible, of trousers and the thread upon his coat He could not be unconscious of the mutterings in the air, he could not be unconscious of the suspicious looks that were cast towards him, he could not be unconscious that the officers of down to where he could look across to that mill; they knew that when Ae stood looking at that body he wore a haggard and disturbed look, and looked, as one witness says, as though yone through all day, of the beating of he had been out on a debauch all night; they knew these things, and house and may have said that to his there was no individual ln Ypsilanti upon whom, so far as they knew, centered so many facts. And now my stance that points in any other direc-

They say Mr. Hand furnished us with all the testimony we have boots, overcoat, pants. Beyond that, and what he forgot to state, he furnished us with the blood and brains on the pants. Shall it be said in his favor that he admitted what he could not denote the could be sweather the blood of the could be sweather the cou deny? Could he swear the blood off from those pants? Could he swear the brain back into the skull of Jay Pulver? Wouldn't it have been nonsense to have attempted to? He furnished all, but above all he furnished him self. He furnished us evidence that he had started from the saloon to go over town because he knew we had found the man who saw him go towards the bridge. He furnished us with the evidence that he had gone out to buy tobacco, pretending to do that when in fact he had been up to look at the mill when he knew we had evidence to prove it, and he followed it up by taking the stand and admitting every fact in this case, and he has furnished that too under the advice of eminent and distinguished counsel.

You have noticed that when some witness was about to state something hat pointed with unerring certainty o the defendant these gentlemen would be upon their feet arguing that it did not amount to anything if it was so and objecting of letting it in, attempting to break the fall, and when they could not do it saying "Well, it don't amount to anything anyway." We heard in the trial of this cause when I said to the Court that we would introduce photographs of that mill to it the next day and quietly proved to waste any time, he desires to do particulars regarding those photo- what he does at as early an hour (At this moment Miss Pulver went to it the next day and quietly proved particulars regarding those photographs, showing they were perfect in their character and were fair representatives of that locality and surroundings, and these witnesses recognized them as such, when I had proved them in accordance with the law and the distinguished gentlemen on the other side found I knew what the law. Now that is true let me read to you body to the the distinguihed gentlemen on the other side found I knew what the law other side found I knew what the law actually was and had brought myself squarely within the law, they called for the phographs and made a pretense of examining them and said "We will offer these photographs in evidence." If they had not been legitimate evidence it would have been error for us to introduce them. A cert in Judge McKernan executed a bond in replevin and named as a surety one Jeff Lemn. The suit went against him and they undertook to recover from that bond undertook to recover from that bond and looked around and could not find Jeff Lemn. They said to Judge Mc-Kernan "It looks very much at if there wasn't any such man" and finally they brought complaint against him and prosecuted him for forgery and threw him over the bar. Every little while during the trial he would rise to his feet and cry out "Jeff Lemm, come forward, Jeff Lemm does not seem to be here. Jeff Lemm." He knew there was no such man. It was a performance to make the jury believe there was such a man he was looking for, and they had make the jury believe there was such a man he was looking for, and they had subpoenaed him and he had disobeyed it and stayed away. That performance was gone through with in the hopes that some jurors would be induced to believe that there really was such a man as Jeff Lemm and therefore he was innocent. Do you recognize that? Do you remember seeing somebody get up here and saying "Mr. Clough, Mr. Clough oh" we have nobody except this man 75 years old and this one boy to look after our witnesses, and we the defend to the fires in the furnesse here. boy to look after our witnesses, and we

ant. It in no way shows he is not guilty because that wife has stood by him even though he were guilty. Thank God, there is something in the nature of a woman that clings to the husband whom she loves although she will swear as he stated.

I'doubt whether he will swear as he stated.

My Brother Lehman has taken some positions not taken by the other counsel, and so he waits and wetches through that window, and by and by through the opening from the mill into this stair of wilful, deliberate and premeditated husband whom she loves although she will swear as he stated.

My Brother Lehman has taken some positions not taken by the other counsel, and so he waits and wetches through that window, and by and by through the opening from the mill into this stair of wilful, deliberate and premeditated killing, or which shall be committed in gan provide that "All murder which shall be perpetrated by means of poi-son, or lying in wait, or any other kind of wilful, deliberate and premeditated killing, or which shall be committed in the perpetration, or attempt to perpethe perpetration, or attempt to perpetrate any arson, rape, robbery or burglary, shall be deemed murder in the first degree and all other kinds shall be murder in the second degree." There is not very much difference. The difference consist of the punishment, murder in first degree is punishable, by imder in first degree is punishable by imprisonment in the states prison for life, while murder in the second degree is punished by imprisonment in states prison for life or for any term of years. You are asked to convict this man of murder in the first degree under that

> What is this crime? It has been asked what earthly motive there could be for its commission. Pulver was not killed for robbery, for money, no money was taken from his person, no valuables were taken from his body. or any other place mentioned in the statue with the design of committing the offense mentioned in the statutes in that building. He had been detected in that crime, Jay Pulver had seen and recognized him. Nobody could fail to recognize that face who had ever seen it before, and either Jay Pulver must die or the man who had committed that burglary must go to States Prison for it, he knew that Colvan had been called a dammed old son of a bitch and he had threatened that he would get even with him, he knew that Colvan had his hand on the helm of that business and the man who committed burglary would go to States Prison and he knew also that the only way to escape States Prison was over the dead cape States Prison was over the dead body of Jay Pulver. There can be no donbt about it. The circumstances that have been given you in evidence in this case open the entire case to you like an open book. Will you consent to read that book with me? Do not circumstances in this case prove the facts that I now name to you beyond a reasonable doubt, every one of them, and they are conceded by defendant's counsel in this case. What are they? On the evening of March 11th, 1893, Pnlver left his home and repaired to the Hay & Todd Manufacturing Company's mill for the purpose of engaging in his occupation there, without having had his supper. He was not feeling facts that I now name to you beyond a ing had his supper. He was not feeling well. I sometimes think that coming calamities cast there shadows before. He repaired to the mill, he went in the basement below, took out his old clothes that he did his work in, put them on, he got his tools, came back up stairs where he was to commence his work, waited until one after another of the 300 employes and officers in that mill had departed to their homes, then taking up his little torch repairs to the first section in that mill on the north side and on the west end of the knitting room floor and places the covers over the machines and not over the whole table as these gentlemen said, I pass to you this photograph so you an see there are several machines on each table, then he takes the broom, dust pan and springler and proceeds to do his cleaning, putting the waste that is valuable in one basket and that which is not in another, he progresses in his work down one side and then back upon the other, finishing up upon the other side. As he approaches the end of that floor the man who slays him lies in wait, he knows in what hour he is going to get through, he can tell within twenty minutes or half an hour, Now that is true, let me read to you the testimony of these gentlemen. It has been said here that Jay Pulver was murdered as early as half past nine o'clock. Jay Pulver's son swears when he went by that building after nine o'clock his father was seen at work in that last section on that south side. Had he got almost done or just begun? He did not go into the mill, he saw the light there, and knew he was at work in that section. Had he just commenced, I ask you, or had he just commenced, I ask you, or had he got done? I will show you the answers to those interrogatories by the other testimony. Mr. Adams testified, "at ten o'clock ordinarily he would be through on the first floor, it varied in the time he was through sometimes he had over a westup stairs, he knew he had reached that point where he was about to go up stairs, and that was the time he was and certain. Dr. Gibbes tells you he waiting for. Pulver had not had his waiting for. Pulver had not had his found blood upon the outside, he turned the cloth over and found it turned the cloth over and found it. supper, had not eaten his lunch, or attended to the fires in the furnace below, he has finished that floor at a quarboy to look after our witnesses, and we have no money. And then cry out again Mr. Clough, Mr. Clough! Is Mr. Clough present?" What was the object and purpose of that? You saw that I saw through that performance, and I finally arose after he had perpetrated that for six or seven times and said to his Honor, We will most gradiously consent that if these men can be had at any time they may be put upon the stand and sworn, at any time before the jury go to their room."

Mr. Lehman: I ask the prosecutor if Mr. Clough was not sworn upon the other trail. I take exception to the implication that Mr. Clough was a myth. other trail. I take exception to the implication that Mr. Clough was a myth.

Mr. Sawyer: I have in my poor way given such answers to the positions and conduct of counsel as I though the case would warrant outside the line of did the ba could not seem all the conflict; he must be you from discharging the duty the positions ple of this county have placed upon make that defense then make it. way that goes up into the tower when Pulver came down he saw the flicker-Pulver came down he saw the flickering of the lantrrn as it came down and he supposed he had come down for another load and was going back again. Very soon the lantern was out of sight, and he believed the man Pulver had gone back up stairs again. Pulver was not feeling well, he had not eaten any supper at all that afternoon, it was time for appetite to force its attention upon him. He says to himself, "I have not seen to the fires in the furnace yet," and the testimony shows that he never attended to that, for in the morning the fire was out in the furnace. "I have got to go some time and attend to have got to go some time and attend to the furnace, and put my coffee cup up-on the dome of the boiler to be ready for supper." Instead of going up stairs, the last time, he took the lan-tern, took the coffee pot and went down stairs the light had gone out of sight valuables were taken from his body. He was not killed from anger. There was no sruggle, no fight. He knew too much. He had seen and detected a man in the commission of the crime of burglary, for that constitues a burglary, that is entering a mill, house, store or any other place mentioned in the it on top of the dome and while he was climbing thr ladder to the top of the boiler and stood there this man lifted the window above, stealthily entered and came down the stairs in the glare of this gas jet burning over the stair-way leading to the basement below, he knew where those tongs were he knew knew where those tongs were, he knew what he had gone there for, I do not, I know he went there for a purpose and that purpose could be accomplished with those tongs, and he knew where those tongs were, and he passes into that carpenter shop below, he passes right next to the door that goes to the furnace where the old man was putting the coffee on the boiler, the old man detected something in tTe carpenter shop, he listened, he heard somebody come past that door, feel around and get hold of those tongs and then make toward the valve room in that carpenter shop, quietly he gets down from know he went there for a purpose and ter shop, quietly he gets down from that ladder, snd in seven seconds he had bounded into the carpenter shop to see who had got in there, and there in that corner shine those wild eyes that glare upon me now as I talk about it. Mr. Lehman-I take exception to that. Mr. Sawyer-He had seen and recog-Mr. Sawyer—He had seen and recognized him, and as Jay Pulver recognizes him he says, "What are you doing here at this time of night, I will report you to the officers of the mill." It took but a second for this man to say to himself, "It is states prison anyway, and the only way to escape trom it is over the dead body of Jay Pulver," and he is armed with those tongs he had got for something else, he drew them, sprang for Pulver, he was bethem, sprang for Pulver, he was be-tween Pulver and the door that goes into the room beyond, Pulver was in the carpenter shop facing him, he sprung upon him with the tongs grasped this way, Pulver started partially, turned to the right, looking over his shoulder, he saw murder in the face and yelled "Murder, murder." Across the street the voice of the dogs howled murder back again to the mill and as murder back again to the mill, and as he sprang for him he dodged his tongs, there wasn't room enough to swing them for the pile of lumber upon the east side, and the tongs missed the head and struck upon his back instead of his head. Jay Pulver started to run crying murder, the murder changed the tongs to the other side and brought them down across the head, crushing the skull, and with this instrument breaking in the back part of his head, and Jay Pulver feil to the floor, and the murderer sprang to his side and rained blow after blow upon that de-fenceless head until Pulver's skull was grushed the analysis of the skull was when I said to the Court that we would introduce photographs of that mill down there one of these learned gentlemen springing to his feet and saying "The law will not permit it, will not permit photographs to be introduced in evidence." I said, "Oh, yes, it will, I have examined that question." Then what happened? When I came to it the next day and quietly proved to waste any time, he desires to do hosom of that God who gave it.

> It has taken but a moment, but Jay Pulver has been murdered; the man who murdered him stands in the presence of his victim; he knows it is possible that the cry of the dogs and the cry of Jay Pulver may bring some-body to the mill to see what the trouble is; he steps to the gas jet and turns it off lest someone may step to the window and see the dead body ying there and someone going away rom the mill. He listens a moment; here is nobody approaching; he steps there is nobody approaching; he steps to the carpenter shop door and turns the faucet in the fountain and attempts to wash the blood off his clothes. The finger of God was upon it. He attempted to wash the blood and brains from his pants; it was dark; he could not see to get it all off; he believed and thought he had. To show that I am right about it I hold up to you these pants. You will find show that I am right about it I hold up to you these pants. You will find once in a while a dim spot upon this right leg having somewhat the appearance of blood or paint; the blood spots that Dr. Gibbes found upon these pants a day or two after were upon the inside as well as upon the outside. The water had soaked the blood through them as he stood there rubbing and brushing the blood; it was washed and soaked in deeper and deeper, and told of the crime he had committed. No dog rubbing his bloody nose against his pants could do that; no dropping from the head of some butchered animal could put that blood apon the inside of his pants. No, it was the effort to wash out the stains of crime that made them more deep the law may be upon his track, in his haste he snatches off both his coats at once, overcoat and undercoat, and hangs them upon the wall. He must be seen disrobed, he must have the appearance oi having been in the house for some time. Then his wife says, "Clif, you are out late tonight; you said you would come home early." "Why," he says, "it is not late, it is only a little past ten." "Yes it is, it is twenty minutes to eleven, and I call your attention to the fact." Now in order to pacify that wife, in order to make her think that everything is disrobing and preparing to go to bed the clock in the steeple strikes eleven. That is where Clifford Hand was. Gentlemen, who has accounted for that thirty minutes? He left Max's proven, except by circumstantial evidence? Does the murderer take with him respectable witnesses to see him commit the crime? Will you expect, before you come to the conclusion that this man is guilty, to see the word guilty in letters of living light written across the heavens? No, gentlemen, circumstances are placed before you for you to look after. There never has, in the history of the Christian religion, been but one Paul's conversion, and if all the rest of us stand back and say, "We will not believe until the Almighty has struck us blind and dumb and spoken to us and said, 'Paul, Paul, why persecutest thou me.'" If we wait for that there is another place for us in another direction. We are to be convicted and converted upon circumstances, we are to commune with our souls, and in the communion with the stances, we are to commune with our stances, we are to commune with our mill for ten years does not know what souls, and in the communion with the little thing can be done that will nut and hit him in the back of the neck is out," that man has reached the time souls, and in the communion with the great truths of nature comes conversion, and in the evidence in this, as in every other case, you are to look for that it would take weeks or months those facts and circumstauces that perhaps, to find out, because I do not know that therefore Hand did not know that therefore the perhaps are the perhaps and the perhaps are the perhap would naturally be found where a crime has been committed, and not expect a voice from above to tell you this man is guilty. Sometimes a juror says, "I believe that man is guilty, but I do not believe the evidence is strong that the respectful and respected to the peaceful and respected to the peaceful and respected."

if you are honest with yourself you must admit it, and if you admit it then give the benefit of the admission in the line of duty and not in the line of sympathy.

There is such a thing in the law as mate witnesses that surround the tragedy than from any other sources; they are reliable. We may misstate circumstances, we may misunderstand circumstances, we may initial testand circumstances never lie; they point, if you will follow them, with unerring certainty. No cross-examination can shake them, no impeachment can surround them, and all we have to do is to be certain that we fully understand all the circumstances and all the facts that enter into the event, and then you will have no fear the instrument of death with him. If the had gone there for that purpose, do you think he would have taken the hat it is a murder in the first degree no man questions. The question that remains is "is this the man who committed it." In consideration of that question let me take you beyond the field of speculation and sympathy and let me ask you if in the realm of reason we find that murderers never were born and never had fathers, mothers in following the circument of death with him. If he had gone there for that purpose, do you think he would have taken the had gone there for that purpose, do you think he would have taken the had gone there for that purpose, do you think he would have taken to his old job? Remember wheever were had no thought of committing murder was committed, most for the purpose of doing something in there that should necessitate his recall into the mill and back to his old job? Remember wheever were had no thought of committing murder was committed, most for the purpose of doing something in there that should necessitate his recall into the mill and back to his old job? Remember wheever were had no thought of committing murder, but for the purpose of doing something in there that should necessitate his recall into the mill and back to his old job? The murder is committed, the light is turned out; he attempts to wash the blood from his pants, and then this man, whoever he is, passes through the boxes in the darkness to a door that nobody would have seen except he knew the mill and knew where it was. He opened that door from the inside and escaped along that way. And now gentlemen, where that way. And now, gentlemen, where was Clifford Hand when this tragic scene was enacted? Where was the defendant, what was he doing? In stances. Is that a reason that should stances. Is that a reason that should be urged to you? order to pacify that wife, in order to throw her off from suspicion, in order to make her think that everything is right, with the evideuce of that crime upon his pants, with the cry of murder still ringing through his ears, he says, "I will take some lunch," for no other purpose in the world but to convince the woman who had given him her heart and borne him those children, for no other purpose than to make the same actly where that window was, whether somebody had prepared that window to get in in order that he might go back into employment and get money to keep him alive I do not know. He knew that window had no tastenings to keep it down and when tried that night the window could be lifted from the outside. He knew how to get down those stairs in the dark-look of the control of the cont heart and borne him those children, for no other purpose than to make that wife believe he was not guilty of the crime. A few cookies, a cup of cold tea is poured out, he tasted of it, he took no lunch; he tasted of it and pushed it back, and now he is playing the part of innocence. "Has the paper come?" "Yes, but it is too late to read the paper tonight." "Well, I will take a smoke." "No, we will go to bed, it is too late to read or to smoke." "Very well," snatching off his clothes with his pipe still in his mouth, he climbs into bed and smokes in bed; that is what he does, it is his own story, and while that wife stands there disrobing and preparing to go to bed. seen by anybody and snatched up by accident but they are down in a dark corner by the lumber pile leaning against the case or locked in it, and this defendant had the key on his ring that night that locks the chest in which those things were kept. The man who went into the mill that which those things were kept. The man who went into the mill that night knew where those tongs were, that thirty minutes? He left Max's saloon not later than ten minutes past ten, he goes into that house, which was not three minutes' walk from Max's saloon, at twenty minutes to eleven. Where is Clifford Hand the balance of that time? Where is this man during the balance of that thirty-five minutes'? It has been said to you that this is a case of circumstantial evidence. Don't you know that no crime of murder in the first degree can be of murder in the first degree can be called back to the mill to repair it. He waked down that alleyway, passed around the end of the lumber, found the box where they were and gathered those tools. That was the man that struck Jay Pulver; it was not a tramp who would have brought his own arms with him it was not a tramp who of murder in the first degree can be arms with him, it was not a tramp who proven, or once in a million times is would have brought the instruproven, except by circumstantial eviment of death in his own hands and men trying this case. You came into the jury box swearing you had no prejudice or bias against any. If it it has come to pass in the course of this trial that something makes you think he is guilty, what in the world can it be? It must be the evidence in this case that created that feeling. Are you to say, "I will close my judgment, my mind and all the avenues of conviction and say you have got to where these things point I need not the property of that mill, in his own blood, and they began to surround the mill and wonder who had done that thing and this man thought he could be instrumental in explaining it himself, and began to talk about tramps, that they had probably got into that they were seen running around there the night before, I say that conviction and say you have got to prove his guilt by letters of living light before I will believe it?" If you Every man on that jury can reason do that, then you ought not to be upon this or any other jury. Give this man all the benefit of the doubt, allow all from those facts like a Daniel Webster. The man who went into the mill that night did not go there for the purpose the pity possible for him and his distressed family, yet you are here to try this case, and if something has happened in this case that has brought conviction to your mind it is not for you to say "it is proven." It is proved. of committing any larceny, he did not go there to steal, there was nothing disturbed in that mill of all the valuables that were there, not a dollar's worth of stuff was taken, the money you to say "it is proven." It is proved you to say "it is proven." It is proved as far as you are concerned, and and money of Jay Pulver remained unif you are honest with yourself you disturbed, then the man who went into the mill that night had no purpose of robbery or larceny. Mr. Lehman-His lawyers are big-

Mr. Sawyer-His lawyers must be idiots. Pardon me, you know I do not mean that. That was the first blow administered to this man Pulver, and it was administered in this way, he had gone into the shop, he met this man with the tongs in his hand, he orders him out of the shop, tells him he would report him the next morning. Then what? Gentlemen, will you look at the the cours? Will you do it? at that face now? Will you do it? If there is any evidence on earth look at that face now.

Mr. Lehman-I take exception to that. Mr. Sawyer—If I were sitting here, or I were charged with the crime of murder, and were innocent when these terrible facts were brought to the attention of the jury, I know my soul would sink within me, and so would yours. We could not laugh.

Mr. Knowlton—I take exception to

Mr. Knowlton—I take exception to that remark, there is no reason why the defendant should cry because he does not agree with Mr. Sawyer.

Mr. Sawyer—No, and I do not urge that as a reason, but I say when a man is surrounded by such facts and circumstances, it is anything but a laughing matter. He is the most indifferent man in this court room, and has been from the beginning of this trial. Who has shown less feeling and care as to what shall happen? I need say nothing. I have seen, when one after another of the facts came out, the eyes of the jury the facts came out, the eyes of the jury stray in a given direction. I need not comment. I say then, gentlemen of the jury, let this wound speak for us. What story does this wound tell that strikes across the right shoulder of this man in a diagonal direction and can be seen.

that he said it, if he did he did not intend to commit murder when he went tend to commit murder when he went tend to commit murder when he went into whom do they point? Is there any mistake about it? Does Washtenaw County afford another such a man? And yet these learned counsel brought this fact one and they complete heaves. this fact out and then complain because we say this man whom they are de-fending had so little judgement as to go down their among that crowd the next morning with the blood of Jay Pulver on his pants. It is true they may say to you, "There are other men who know all about that mill, there are other men who could have gone in that darkness into that carpenter shop, that darkness into that carpenter shop, who knew where those tools were and could have got them, there were other men who knew when Pulver would get through with his work below and would have gone upstairs, there are other men who could have handled tongs like this." Yes, but was there an other man who on that Sinder.

what he saw there that night the man would have gone to States Prison, he knew that perfectly well.

Then we find the man who entered that mill did not go there for the purpose of committing the crime of burglary, or larceny or murder, but for the suppose of so disarranging the machinpurpose of so disarranging the machin-ery that he was to be compelled to be called back into the mill to correct it, and then be restored to his old job, not for a day or two, but he hoped that having called him back they would keep him. Let us follow Hand and see what he has been doing. For the ten years he has been receiving $13.50 a week. I am endeavoring now to challenge your attention and see whether Mr. Hand was a man who would be likely to go into that mill if he could get his old job restored. $712 a year he had been receiving in cash from that mill and yet inside of ten days from mill and yet inside of ten days from his discharge we find him borrowing money to live on. What a terrible story that tells. How many a poor, honest, intelligent boy has climbed to opulence and ease on much less salary than that. And we find him on the very day of his discharge sleeping off a debauch on the time of his employers who employed him and were paying him $2.50 a day for services abpaying him $2.50 a day for services, at solutely drunk and sleeping it off in the very building where he ought to have been at work. Who swears to it?

Hand himself.
Mr. Knowlton:—Mr. Hand went

Mr. Knowlton:—Mr. Hand went home and slept.

Mr. Sawyer:—I have a little more respect for a man who if he will get drunk has enough respect for himself to get ont of sight. He was a man who could drink two quarts of beer and not become intoxicated. Is it any wonter the $250 a day went. He says become intoxicated. Is it any wonder where the $2.50 a day went. He says he gave it to his wife. Do you suppose that wife would give it back to him for the purpose of intoxication? Where has that $2.50 a day gone? We find him every Sunday morning down to Grob's saloon. On Sunday gentlemen. When the chimes in the church are inviting him to church we find he diving sarvices in the saloon of Grob holding services in the saloon of Grob, a place where they do not sell beer but simply keep it on ice. Mr. Knowlton:—That was your wit-

Mr. Sawyer:—It was a truthful witness, so Hand says. He says they have not any of them lied, particularly this one. Now you see what I am looking at. I want to know if that man is the kind of man whose life has been such that the finer instincts of his nature have been dulled so that he might not see jnst the bearing of an offense of this character. Now, while I admit that there are a great many men who might have done all these things yet I say to you the man who did commit this act came from that class of men. They are not found at church. One man says that man ought to have rushed to church if he was guilty. Yes, he ought to have huug himself, but he didn't do either. He went where he could be of some service in shifting suspicion upon somebody else and off from his own sholders. So I say if wen look upon him for the if you look upon him for the purpose of seeing whether he was of that class of people who might have gone into that window for the pupose of doing that job is there not many things that will attract the pupose of the defendant to the defendant to What story does this wound tell that strikes across the right shoulder of this man in a diagonal direction, and can to made by nothing else on earth than a left handed stroke, what story does it tell other than this, that as Pulver stood with the lantern in his right hand, confronting that man who had got into that mill, with the tongs in his hand, for the purpose of committing the deed for which he had got into the mill, when he stood there facing the north and his assailant in front of him in that way and saw the gleam of murder in the eyes of his assailant and saw him draw the tongs for the purpose of what he said. The law does not recognize the same thing. They say he was drunk and was not responsible for what he said. The law does not recognized the same thing. him draw the tongs for the purpose of striking, he attempted to turn in this direction, turning to the left, not to the right, and as he came around the blow taimed at his head struck upon this side and hit him in the back of the neck and across the right shoulder, he was running and crying for his life, the striker found he could not strike left. handed because of the lumber, he turned it and drew the blow this way, striking right handed, this blow Pulver received to the right of the top of the head and on the right side of the head and on the floor in this direction as though hit with a right hand blow. Let these wounds speak to you, let them tell their story, to whom do they point? They point to a man who struck a blow naturally left handed, but who had the power to turn and strike it right handed, and it is not the defendant. We have 40000 people in the County of Washtenaw. Have you ever seen a man before in your life who handled a hammer with his right hand but was left handed, and who was a right handed, left handed man, who could strike left the sack of the neck of the lumber, he turned it and drew the blow Pulver received to the right side of the head and on the right side of the lumber, he turned it and drew the blow Pulver received to the right side of the lumber, he turned it and drew the blow Pulver received to the right side of the head and on the right side of the lumber, he turned it and drew the blow Pulver received to the right sold probable with that statement and say Hand even lied about it. Well, he did not blush when he lied, he did not blush when he lied him saying to Russell and to Morgan when they told him if anything should happen in that mill it would be charged to him and it was a dangerous thing for him to have, and they advised him to throw those keys into the river, "Oh, no, they are worth too much to me," he replies. They say the would have thrown them into the river, at all events they would not have been found upon him w handed, and who was a right handed, left handed man, who could strike left handed maturally, but could strike right handed easily, when in the history of your lives did such an experience cover to your mild bit was left. THERE was a meeting of farmers at Sylvan Centre Jan. 4th. The question of a petition to congress protesting against the placing of wool on the free Tist was discussed, and met the approval of every farmer present. Evidently there were no Wilson Bill Democrats at that meeting. Will the Democrat and Argus please copy.

THE democratic press of the country -of which the Argus is a member -is reminding its party's representatives in congress of their duty. The Argus says no member should be scared away from the performance of his duty. What is the matter with them? Why are they scared? Why do they shirk from duty? Will the Argus answer?

ALL England is unanimous for the passage of the Wilson Bill. The Pall Mall Gazette of November 9, 1892, says: "Both the merchants and the unemployed workingmen of England have thing. reason to rejoice at the Democratic victory, as with the possibility of the reopening of the market to the goods of Birmingham, Bedford and Manchester captalists will get a chance to produce some return on their money invested and the workingmen will have an opportunity to get a decent price for their labor without the necessity of striking.' Democrat? It suits your party.

Mr. Haines, (Dem.) of New York, has presented a petition in the House of Herz of the 2nd ward. When a man who seems to have judgement and experience says the dropping of blood upon those pants is to be found soaked through to the other side of those thick woolen pants it is nonesense that no man is going to believe, I do not care to believe it. I don't care to consider the Su-perior matter any longer. It is a fact that the two were compared by the Dr. and he declared them to be identical.

There is no woman in the world who would have permitted her husband to walk out of the house with that yarn on his coat in broad daylight the moment that coat saw daylight and if it had been put upon his arm in daylight somebody would have seen it the wife would have seen it or the baby. Look at it. That is four inches long and is exactly like the sample that was on the coat, how longwould you have worn it without somebody picking it off for you? It is these little things that the Almighty has left to trace the man who committed this ffense. It is these little things that speak in thunder tones and tell who committed this crime. I say look at that little spindle of yarn. How many of you would live half an bour with that upon you? You would see it yourself and brush it off, but if he had got that on as he slid his arm over the table and bryshed it off from the cloth that was over the machine if he got it on in the over the machine, if he got it on in the darkness and night and had gone home and taken off the cort and hung it up without ever looking at it and in such haste that he took off both coats at once so that he might be undressed be fore the officers got there you would have found that raveling on the coat as the sheriff did the next morning. Gentlemen, that raveling des not lie that is not mistaken, that little piece of yarn is found nowhere e'se in this county than in that mill. There is a terrible necessity for finding some way to account for that that would drive so learned a man as Mr. Knowlton to say, "O, well, I don't know what we may claim about it, we may claim before w get done, that was put on there by the officers." Great heavens, look at Chris Brenner and the sheriff and the officers! Do you believe it was in their souls to undertake to manufacture evidence of that character? If not I want to know why Mr. Knowlton felt so hurt about it and said, "O, we may claim, for all I know, that the officers put it on." Gentlemen, this speaks in thunder tones to you. Gentlemen, my duty is done.

have called your attention as best I could to those circumstances and those I have endeavored to discharge the duty you asked me to discharge. I have done it with no malice to this man, I have not the slightes feeling on earth, I wish to heaven it had n ve happened. I have done it nevertheless fearlessly, I have done it because I be lieved it to be my duty. Your verdict will be rendered in this case because you feel just as I do about it. I 'eave this case with you and thank you for the at tention you have given me and I think pou will each thoroughly weigh this case, and do justice by the living and dead. I wish to call your honor's attention to the fact that the only way Mrs. Hand assumes to know the time in by the fact that she heard the clock sirike 11 after she got into bed and that the time he got home was judged by running back from that.

Mr. Sawyer-I undertake to say that Mrs. Hand herself testified that when this man came home she called his at tention to the fact that it was late and it was twenty minutes to 10 or 11 is her own testimony, and I say farther ihan that that when she was down in the justice's office, unless these officers are not to be believed, she said, "Well gentlemen, if I must tell I must, my husband got home at twenty minutes to 11 o'clock," now what is the use in the gentleman standing here after having argued the case and attempting to close this case to the jury.

A BEAUTIFUL DAWNING.

GRAND AWAKENING WHICH SHALL LAST FOREVER.

Brighter Outlook Than the World

Changes are constantly taking place which tend to make the world happier and to cause a feeling of joy and contentment to prevade our lives. One of I call your attention to that little thread of yarn upon that coat, you see it there, it is about the same length that the sheriff says he found four inches long, across the right sleeve as the overcoat nung up.

The state of the last, the greatest blessings which has fallen to mankind and which is indeed the dawning of a new era of life, has just taken place in the well-known family of Mrs. Albert Blanchard, residing at 358 Webster Ave., Chicago, Ill. She writes the following interesting letter:

"My health has been very poor for several years. I would have sinking spells and was so weak that I could not hold my hand up to my head. I would have to lie down on the sofa and was so very nervous that I could not sleep nights.

"My stomach troubled me all the time and my food distressed me so that I was afraid to eat. I had chills most of the time and sometimes chills and fever with trembling and shaking. I was also troubled with catarrh.

"I was so dizzy at times that I nearly fell; I would grab at the chair, and dark spots appeared before my eyes. could not begin to tell how I suffered. I was so sick I did not enjoy life and was told that I would not live long.

MRS. ALBERT BLANCHARD.

"I took many remedies and employed several physicians but received no permanent benefit. I was induced to take Dr. Greene's Nervura remedy, and after using six bottles I found it had done wonders for me. I now feel real strong and well and can walk a couple of miles.

"My stomach does not trouble me and I am not chilly. My catarh has entirely disappeared. I am so well that I am ssisting my husband in the office and help mother when I go home. I hope any one that is not well will try Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve

"My little damghter, Helena, has also been using this remedy with great benefit. She was very delicate and nervous. After taking this wonderful medicine for a short time she gained three pounds and is not near so nervous as she was. I do not feel afraid to recommend Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy for I know what it has done for

The Webster Farmers' Club met last Saturday, Jan. 13, 1894, at H. M. Queal's. It was a beautiful day, but the distance prevented a full attendance. However, a sufficient number attended to have a meeting. A sumtuous dinner was served the guests. About one o'clock, after a good social hour was indulged in, the meeting was called to order by the president.

The first question considered was with relation to sending a delegate to the Lansing convention, comprising delegates of all state clubs. Mr. Ball was in favor of sending one, ane moved to that effect. Mr. E. A. Nordman raised some important points of a hostile nature as well as favorable. Mr Ball intimated that Webster has one of the oldest clubs and a good representative one. Mr. Nordman was elected and instructed to use his judgment for the benefit of the club in any measure brought up at the convention.

YOU CANNOT CURE PILES

By Internal Remedies.

The only sure way to cure every form ly to the parts affected and its wonderful healing effects are apparent from the first application because the medical properties are rapidly absorbed by tissues and sensitive membranes of the rectum, and the cure is made speedily and almost before the patient is aware of it, every trace of piles has left him.

This is one of the reasons why the Pyramid Pile Cure has been so uniformway of the stomach nor by the harsh, barbarous methods of various surgical operations and so called systems.

Direct application to the seat of diease is the only rational way, and this is fully accomplished by the Pyramid

Pile Cure. If the voluntary testimony of thousands who have tried this remedy is worth anything then no sufferer has any excuse for longer delaying in giving it a fair trial, knowing that when you do so The Pyramid Pile Cure will have made one more friend, the best possible advertisement we can have. The chief advantages of the remedy are: It cures without pain, the cure is lasting, it contains no poison, and lastly, it is the cheapest and quickest cure yet found. #### SAWVER'S GREAT SPEECH.

shortly before the murder telling those shortly before the murder telling those ladies "You just wait until those fire escapes get out of order, and then they will have to call upon me for I am the only man this side of Chicago who can fix them." He knew those ladies were working in the mill and as a matter of fact it was rescaled for them to let the fact it was possible for them to let the hint drop that Hand was the only man who could fix those things, and if they who could fix those things, and if they got out of order they might say, "Hand is the only man in Ypsilanti that can fix them." He had that in his mind, he expected to so fix those fire extinguishers that they would have to call him back to fix them. He had mischief in mind before this happened. We find him wearing a peculiar look when Mr. Adams says to him, "I have presented your claim in a way they would not mistrust it to the officers of this mill, I think there is no possible way for you to get back in the employ of this company unless something shall happen to the machinery of this mill that nobody but you can repair."

Mr. Knowlton—We take exception to stating that in that way.

Mr. Sawyer—I say there was a peculiar look on his face when he said that to him. It was then that he fixed in his own mind that he would put something out of order. He had mis-that to him. It was then that he fixed in his own mind that he would put something out of order. He had mischief in his mind. On the evening before the murder we find him at Nick Max's saloon, he plays billiards in the saloon without any apparent consciousness that anything is happening anywhere else until, it being Saturday night, he thought that Pulver might be getting through with his work on that first floor, then he quit playing pool and walked over in the direction in which he could see the mill and was in which he could see the mill and was gone long enough to see but he finds Pulver still at work on that first floor. Pulver still at work on that first floor. He goes back into the saloon. What does he do? The hour was approaching when the deed could be done, he could not play more pool, the whole kingdom of the man was falling in line for preparation, for the attack that was to be made, he could not play any longer. What did he do? He simply stood around waiting, waiting. He waits another half hour or thereabouts, he then goes out again and now says, "I went out after tobacco." The first time he tells you he went intending to go over town. Nobody knows except himself, what he went out for, we cannot prove what the purpose was, we himself, what he went out for, we cannot prove what the purpose was, we can only show the facts. He was gone a little longer than before, he went to see whether Pulver had got so near through that he could see him put out some lights and light others, he waited a little longer until that happened, then he became satisfied just where Pulver was and went back to the saloon. What did he do then? There were cards and card tables where his own companions were about him drinking and carousing. The tables were open to him; what did he do? He stood around, says the bartender, he would once in a while go and take a glass of beer. Was it to keep his courage up to the sticking place? And he stood around and stood around. He had stood where he could see when Pulver turned out the lights and turned on new ones. out the lights and turned on new ones. He knew how long it would take him to finish the last section, and when ten home," and they started, and came together at a point where their ways diverged and there they separated, and that is the last eye that saw Mr. Hand until twenty minutes to eleven o'clock that night. Now, what time was it when he left that saloon? O'Connor says he looked at his watch when Hand asked him to go home and it was ten o'clock; then that they stood five or ten minutes longer. When they started the old man Max says he looked at his clock and it was ten minutes past ten. When they went out it was somewhere between ten o'clock and ten minutes past ten. Is there any doubt about it, he had the time and opportunity to commit this offense, there is no possible doubt about it, he had time, he had thirty minutes of time, he was within five minutes of the mill when last seen.

8. He had it in his mind to go into that very night.

8. He had it in his mind to go into that was one of their companions, and they called Hand; they see him come from the scene of the murden and that? Was there any man in the city of Ypsilanti that morning who would? Not one, not one of yon would have set down and talked with them, you would have set down and talked with them, you would have set town and would have set town and would have set down and talked with them, you would have brooded with them, you would have set down and talked with them, you would have set down and talked with them, you would have set down and talked with them, you would have set down and talked with them, you would have set down and talked with them, you would have set down and talked with them, you would have set down and talked with them, you would have set down and talked with them, you would have set down and talked with them, you would have set down and talked with them, you would have set down and talked with them, you would have set down and talked with them, you would have set down and talked with them, you would have set down and talked with them, you would have set down and talked with them, you would have set down and talked with them, you would ha

Is this circumstantial stuff or the kind of stubborn facts that cannot be sworn out of this case? No, I say here was the preparation for the mischief, here was the design to do the mischief, here were these acts of this man show. was the preparation for the mischlef, here were these acts of this man showing he had it in his mind to go there this very night. Then the evidence shows he was the proper kind of a man made these marks upon pulver's head, no other man could do it?" "O, I have no doubt it would not it." In less than the was capit and that would not do, and he is mant to go to that might, climb into that window, commit that murder, go home and get there at twenty minutes to eleven? He left the saloon not later than ten minutes past ten that night, he reached home at twenty minutes or leven that night. There is one-half hour of the time of this man Hand that is unaccounted for; there can be no mistake about this. His wife says, when she is bottleast the would not forward the whole day in a saloon where there the o'clock, when Nick Max and his bartender had sworn in her hearing that this defendant left that institution later than ten o'clock, then she says, "If I she most o'clock when Nick Max and how the best of the marks upon the window and bear at twenty minutes to eleven? order in which they happened, but is there any man says he lied; will any dare charge him with forger?
There's the book in which he entered what was said at that time. He says he entered "Half' past nine," in his book because Hand so stated. Why should he make that statement? When Hand was confronted with the fact the saloon, then he changed it. Why should he make that statement? When Hand was confronted with the fact that it was known what time he left the saloon, then he changed it. Why should he? But you want me to answord time for a man to leave that saloon, go into that mil, commit what was committed there, wash his clothes and get back to the house at 20 minutes to go from the saloon to the help of the mill. The seven minutes to go from the saloon to the mill, and however relsurely he passed with this man to the corner of 10 aks treet, he made up the difference before he got to that mill. It has been shown here that a man starting from that engine room will plant himself in the door of that carpenter shop in seven second, I will give him a minute to get there, and in a minute Jay Pulver confronts him in that shop. I will give him a minute for them to stand there and for Pulver to tell him to get out of the mill, to go home about his business and tell him he will report him, it does the mill, to go home about his business and tell him he will report him, it does not take a minute to kill him. The blows that were dealt upon that man were done as instantly as the flashing of light. I will give him two minutes to do it. I will give him three minutes to turn out the gas and wash his pants, I will give him seven minutes to sneak back from the mill to his house, and when they are fitted together we had been fooled, he attempted to read and read not, he attempted to smoke and smoked not, he attempted to sleep and slept not. The utes to turn out the gas and wash his pants, I will give him seven minutes to sneak back from the mill to his house, and when they are fitted together we have occupied 28 minutes, and we have two minutes to spare, which I will give him to quietly enter and slip off his boots and put them under the stove to pich. He looks at him as if to study condition of mind, and says, "Why, I don't go your way." He waits a minute, his mind is wandering, he is not exercising good judgment, he is endeavoring to lay a plot by which he can show that he left the saloon. So he attracts the attention of the other man, O'Connor, and says, "Let's go home." He did not expect O'Connor was going to take out his watch and look at the time; that was a little piece of evidence that fate put there. What spirit was it that told O'Connor to take out his watch and see what time it was? It was ten o'clock. "Oh, well," he returned, rather grimly, if you want to defy convention it doesn't matter. You're so popular that you can. Nobody minds. They all accept you and like you the better for being yourself, since it's yourself they're

"Fond!" ochoed Alonzo, and with sc harshly unwonted a ring in his voice that it made his hearer start and stare. He let his flexible frame sink down on the broad arm of an easy-chair near which he had been standing, and his tawny eyes had never shone with stronger seriousness than while he now continued to speak:

"You good, kind-hearted Phil! Don't you see that my popularity is the merest myth? When I do bold or queer things it isn't I whom they laugh at and make believe that they think funny; it's a fellow with a few thousand a year that he squanders on their amusement. Let fate strip me of those, Phil, and they'd think me as ordinary as their morning bath. I don't want to be a cynic, and if I did there are some few things that would save me from it. You're one of

And do you know why that lovely girl has so captured me? Because I believe she's without one speck of sham. It isn't her beauty or her brains or her power of charming you, for she's got all three. It's her mighty genuineness, Phil. She often seems to me, beside the women I meet her with, like a live flower that's lost its way among a basket of false ones. Her petals (the darling) were not purchased at a fancy shop. They came fresh from the loom of Nature, who spun them with her heart in her work. I find there's so much in that, by the bye. Nature's made such crowds and crowds of us while not caring whether Brown was to be a poet or a politician, Jones a deacon or a dentist. It's only when she goes to work in dead earnest that she turns out

Alonzo broke into a high and hearty laugh. "She's worldliness itself!" he served in the most exquisite porcelain cried. "Who doubts it? But she's a very cups; but this potion proved, as it were, picturesque figure. I like to look at her. She sweeps through life so. Her Almost before they knew it the guests chief idea of being happy is to don a new gown and 'meet people.' She's tremendous as an incarnate idea. I should like to paint her as that. If I only could! It would be a great picture. Her eyeglasses would be half lifted, and her head would be a good deal thrown back, and there would be billows of silk or satin below her waist, and she would have her arms and neck bared, for they're really superb, and—well, Fletcher?" These two last words were addressed to his valet, who had just appeared at the open door-way. Guests had begun to arrive, and Alonzo hastened downstairs to receive them. Almost the first greeting he received was one from his sister, Mrs. Van Santvoord.

"Lonz," she said, "what on earth do you mean by turning up in that scandalous coat?"

"It isn't scandalous, Kitty; it's representative." He appealed, in his least reposeful style, to a great lady of fashion who stood at his sister's side. "I'm is-suing an edict," he went on, with that kind of intimate and hysteric loquacity by which he had contrived to shock and yet amuse many associates, "I intend saying: 'Let there be velvet coats at afternoon teas,' and there shall be velvet coats."

The lady, a handsome brunette, grande dame to her finger-tips, gave an obstinate shake of her neat-bonneted head.

"No," she declared, "I, for one, shan't agree to any rule so rowdy." "Rowdy!" shouted Alonzo. He caught one of her gloved hands and peered into her face with his eyes quizzically twinkling. "Lily, you're a horrid thing, and I'll never be friends with you any more. You don't love me, Lily, you know you

It was the madness of silliness, and impertinence as well. Lilian Poughkeepsie was one of the leaders of the most exclusive set. People rarely addressed her except in terms of the strictest courtesy, and her social nod was potent enough to unbar for a strug-gler the gilded and filigreed gates of the Four Hundred.

Mrs. Van Santvoord, who revered Mrs. Poughkeepsie's position, drew back with a gasp of: "Oh, Alonzo, how can you?"

Mrs. Poughkeepsie remained speecheeive everybody else in my shirt-sleeves. He took off the velvet coat and bundled | yours get into the newspapers. They it under one arm. "This," he continued, "is to be my despairing posture for the rest of the afternoon." He struck so ridiculous an attitude that Mrs. Poughkeepsie burst into an unwilling scream of mirth. She forgave him, just as everybody else did-just as he had been forgiven last week at a very select cotillon for pretending drunken-ness and tumbling flat on his back in the middle of the ballroom. And now, while he was re-clothing himself, a number of people pressed about him, principally ladies, inquiring what his last madness had meant, and prepared to roar with laughter at it before they had heard it explained.

But a little group remained apart, and in this was a young man who de-tested him, though glad enough to appear at his festal summons.

"Oh! it's only some new caddish prank," said the young man. "He's always behaving like that."

"But he wakes people up so," said a girl who was not a belle and to whom he had been kind.

"You wouldn't say that of me," re-

The girl gave a pout and a toss of the head. "You're not Alonzo Lispenard," she retorted.

"You mean that I haven't got two millions of dollars," whispered the young man, in her ear, "and that I can't throw away fifty thousand every year of my life in dinners and dances and frolics for my friends." The girl chose to ignore this burst of bitterness. "Look," she said. "There's thing changed. I felt like a trans-formation scene in a pantomime. That mother. How sober he gets as he goes to greet her. They say she doesn't ap-

"Do you think so?" shrugged the girl. "She's too tall for my taste, and then I don't like her eyes. They're like

"Blue ice—or green, if you please—with a blaze of sun on it. Besides, the long curls of their black lashes help them so. And she has a face as delicate as an orchid."

"How can she wear that black velvet trimmed with sables," pursued the girl. "They say these Kennairds haven't but four thousand a year to live on."

"Oh! make it five."

"Nobody really knows just how much. But still they're poor. Do you suppose it's possible that"—and here the girl lowered her voice, which a sweet clash of hidden violins would in any case have drowned an instant later.

Kathleen Kennaird smiled right and left, but it seemed to certain observers that her manner toward her accepted suitor was peculiarly cold. This little afternoon tea, as he chose to call it, was given in her honor. Not more than thirty people had been asked, and these were the ones that Kathleen had specially desired. Tea, it is true, was found themselves seated at little tables, eating terrapin and sipping frozen champagne. Then, in a little while, a soprano voice was heard, singing from Tristan. "That's Lili Lehmann, or Pll be shot," presently muttered Lexington, who knew nothing of this surprise, so characteristic of Alonzo; and soon the great singer appeared, conducted by the host himself, her beautiful face wreathed in smiles. Nearly all the women crowded about her with cries of gratulation and welcome. Amid the genial clamor Kathleen Kennaird took the chance of saying to her lover:

"You have been doing another wild

"What do you mean?" he queried, with infantile innocence.

"Oh, last night at the Gramercey club. You'll not deny, surely, that you blackened your face and went in at dessert to the large dinner Harry Madison was giving, as a negro banjo player, and that nobody found you out until a wisp of your light hair happened to show under your wig."

"That's really delicious!" Alonzo said. "My face was no more blackened than yours is now-and Heaven knows there are roses and lilies enough there! I'd promised to be at the dinner, and reached the Gramercey shamefully late. So I sent from the club for my banjo (which, by the way, I detest as an instrument and play horribly) merely for

It was all Johnny's idea—not the banjo, but the mask. I merely wanted to go in to the dinner with a little music, as I'd got there so scandalously late. Everything else that you've heard is the sheer-est rubbish." Kathleen laid a slim, gloved hand on his arm. "Well, well," she faltered, "allow that you were maligned that When she had Children, she gave them Castoria. time, Alonzo. But your taking off less, with hardening face. But Alonzo didn't mind that. "You see," he exclaimed, appealing to his sister, "Lily doesn't love me, and I'm going to remain and I appeared! Oh, I heard of it; never mind who told me. And these dreadful escapades of me. And these dreadful escapades of

"I don't trust many friends, Kathleen," came the low-voiced answer.
"But I trust you, and you're the only real friend I have in the world. Now, believe me, there shall be a reformation. From this moment I promise one. When you marry me next April you shall marry a man who hasn't kicked up his heels for weeks."

The music burst forth again as Alonzo finished speaking. When the revelers were invited to reenter the two front drawing-rooms, chairs had been ar-ranged for a cotillon. Philip Lexing-ton led the dance with Mrs. Van Santvoord, at Alonzo's request. Through the first figures the participants imagined that it was only an impromptu dance. But suddenly they were called upon to take it more seriously, since before the first figure ended bouquets of the rarest flowers had begun to circulate, and by six o'clock, when the final strains of the music were sounding, jeweled fans had been lavished on the ladies for favors and the gentlemen had received cat's eye scarf-pins set round with tiny pearls.

It had all been a sumptuous and yet charmingly tasteful tribute to the sweetheart of the host. People pressed Alonzo's hand in their ardent praise of his festivity, and told him that the entertainment had been a blended astonishment and delight. Mrs. Kennaird, who had not danced, but who had watched the cotillon with her grand air at its grandest, whispered to her prospective son-in-law, just as he was slipping from the room, having in plied the young man, "if I were to his hand a card which a servant had carry on so outrageously." lately given him:

"Your tribute to dear Kathleen has been perfectly enchanting."

"So glad your like it—so glad," re-turned Alonzo, as he receded from the lofty ady's view.

The card which he held was from his uncle, Mr. Crawford Lispenard, head of the great banking house, Lispenard & Chichester.

"My dear Uncle Crawford," he said, grasping the hand of a big man with iron-gray side whiskers, who stood in the hall. "We meet so seldom, and when we do meet it shouldn't be like this. I know you hate society, dear old boy. Still, you'll come up and see my sweetheart, won't you? I'm giving her a little afternoon dance. You know, Uncle Crawford, you and she must meet, sooner or later. Why, you're sort of pale and queer looking. What's the matter?"

"Alonzo," said Mr. Crawford Lispen ard, in a husky voice, "I-I must speak with you, and speak quite privately." Alonzo's eyes swept the face that he knew so well and dearly loved. This monetary potentate, the prince of finance, his dead father's trusted brother, who had been to himself and his sister such a model of all devoted guardianship, in trouble. It seemed incred-

"You're somehow not yourself!" he exclaimed, momentarily careless of the watching footman. "Oh, Uncle Crawford, it isn't"-and he drew back with a laugh on his lips, but an anxious cloud in his gaze. "It isn't any nonsense of mine that you've been hearing of?"

"No, no, Lonz. Can't we be alone together soon? I'll come back later, or you'll come to me," and the gentleman, a little bewildered, turned toward the door, reaching forth a fluttering hand as if to grasp its knob.

Alonzo caught that hand between both his own. He had held it for an instant before, but not till then had he realized how cold it was.

"Light my studio at once," he said to a servant, recalling that the winter day had now completely darkened. The man sprang upstairs to obey his bid-ding, and Alonzo followed him at his

"The idea of your rushing off like that, Uncle Crawford! You come here so seldom that you're not to be released so easily when you do come."

The long, melodious wailings of the waltz music floated up to them as they ascended the stairs. After several seconds Alonzo suddenly turned to his companion.

"Upon my word, Uncle Crawford," he recommenced, "if there were any bad news that you could bring me, I should imagine you had brought it

Mr. Lispenard paused. They were at the door of the studio. He put a hand on his nephew's shoulder and stared gloomily down into his face.

"I do bring you bad news, my boy. I I bring you horrible news," he said. Alonzo felt himself whiten. In a "But the blackening of the face is all flash he divined what was meant. It could only be one thing. The ground swung beneath his feet as he passed with his uncle across the threshold of ants' mask ball, and happened to be the studio, and closed its door behind

"The Greatest of all our Periodicals."

The foremost men of the world write the literature of contemporaneous activity for THE FORUM. Every great subject is taken up by The Forum when it naturally comes into public attention and is treated by the best authorities, without regard to parties or creeds. It will keep any thoughtful reader informed on the tasks and problems of the time, as no other periodical does. To many thoughtful people, the price of The Forum has hitherto been prohibitory; indeed all the great Reviews have been too high in price for the masses of intelligent readers. But now the number of readers of thoughtful literature men and women who wish really to know what is going on in the world outside the narrow limits of particular sects and parties—is great enough in the United States to warrant so revolutionary a reduction in price. The Forum discusses important subjects, but it is not dull. The literature of contempo raneous activity is, in fact, the most interesting of all literature. American citizenship implies that a man shall know the opinions of the foremost men

LESSON IV, FIRST QUARTER, INTER-NATIONAL SERIES, JAN. 28.

Text of the Lesson, Gen. ix, 8-17-Memory Verses, 11-13 - Golden Text, Gen. ix, 13-Commentary by the Rev. D. M.

8. "And God spoke unto Noah and to his Miss Eva Johnson, who has been sons with him, saying." We have passed visiting friends in this city and Ann over probably 1,500 years since the last lesvisiting friends in this city and Arm over probably 1,500 frame of Cain Arbor, has returned to her home in and Abel had full time to develop and bear fruit. In the line of Seth, who took the place of Abel, his brother, the most notable of those recorded in chapter v was Enoch, the seventh from Adam (Jude 14), who walked with God at least 300 years and was then translated without tasting death. The descendants of Cain, who turned away from God, gave their attention to building cities, inventing musical instruments, working in brass and iron and trying to make this world a happy place without God. The result of Cain's way is seen in chapter vi, 5, and the only remedy was the deluge, which came after long warning, destroying all except Noah and those with him in the ark.

9. "And I, behold, I establish my covenant with you and with your seed after you." This is the first covenant, so called, snake of his father's house. It was a in the Scriptures and is first mentioned in chapter vi, 18. It concerns the whole earth. Then we have some 400 years later the covenant with Abram, Isaac and Jacob concerning the land of Canaan and the people who should inherit it as a center of blessing to the whole earth. These two are unconditional. About 400 years later we have the conditional covenant at Horeb. Compare Deut. v, 2, 3, and Gal. iii, 17. Then some 400 years after that we have the unconditional covenant with David concern. conditional covenant with David concerning the threae and the kingdom. Happy are all who can make the last words of David their own and rest quietly in the faithfulness of God—"Although my house be not so with God, yet He hath made with me an everlasting covenant, ordered in all things and sure" (II Sam. xxiii, 5).

"And with every living creature that is with you, of the fowl, of the cattle and of every beast of the earth with you; from all that go out of the ark to every beast of the earth." The Lord is good to all, and His tender mercies are over all His works (Ps. cxlv, 9). Even the sparrows of which five are sold for two farthings are cared for by Him (Luke xii, 6). And the whole creation which still groaneth and travalleth in pain because of sin shall yet be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God

(Rom. viii, 21, 22).

11. "And I will establish my covenant with you. Neither shall all flesh be cut off any more by the waters of a flood; neither shall there any more be a flood to destroy the earth." The next purification of the earth shall be by fire, after which there shall be a new earth filled with righteous ness to abide forever (II Pet. iii, 6, 7, 10, 18). The earth will not be destroyed—that is, annihilated—but purified from all defilement, loosed (as the word "dissolved" sig-nifies) from its bondage of sin. And as it was in the days of Noah so shall it be in the days preceding that purification (Luke xvii, 26, 27).

12. "And God, said, This is the token of the covenant which I make between Me and you, and every living creature that is with you, for perpetual generations." In great mercy and loving kindness God condescends to give to man outward and visible signs of His faithfulness. The token to Abraham was circumcision: in the pass-to Abraham was circumcision; in the pass-over it was the blood upon the door; to Rahab it was the scarlet cord; to Gideon the fire from the rock; to Ahaz it was the virgin'sson (Gen. xvii, 11; Ex. xii, 13; Joshua" ii, 12, 18; Judg. vi, 17, 21; Isa. vii, 14). The last, even Jesus Himself, is to us the sign that He will do all that He has said.

that we read of the rainbow, and it is only spoken of in four places, here and in Ezek. i, 28; Rev. iv, 3; x, 1. Four in Scripture is the perfect number concerning the earth, and in each of these four places the bow speaks of a redeemed earth. In the other three places as well as in this it is seen in connection with Him who is the only Re-

14. "And it shall come to pass, when I bring a cloud over the earth, that the bow shall be seen in the clouds." The clouds would be more interesting to us if we remembered that He brings them and that they are the dust of His feet (Nah. i, 8). He led Israel by a pillar which was a cloud by day and a fire by night, and which He also spread over the whole encampment as a covering (Ex. xiii, 21, 22; Ps. cv, 39). At the transfiguration a cloud overshadowed Him, when He ascended a cloud received Him, and when He shall come again in His glory bringing His saints with Him it will be in the clouds of heaven (Math. xvii, 5; xxvi, 64; Acts i, 9). Clouds sometimes teach that, though His way be not clear to us, yet we are to trust Him implicitly

15. "And I will remember my covenant, which is between Me and you, and every living creature of all flesh, and the waters shall no more become a flood to destroy all flesh." See also what He will remember in Lev. xxvi, 42, 45, and Ezek. xvi, 60. Con-Lev. xxvi, 42, 45, and Ezek. xvi, 60. Consider what we are to remember in Deut. vii, 18; viii, 2; I Chron. xvi, 12; Eccl. xii, 1; I Cor. xi, 24, 25. Take comfort also in what He will not remember (Isa. xliii, 25; Heb. viii, 12; x, 17). Notice that in the margin of Isa. lxii, 6, 7, we are called "the Lord's remembrances" and observe carefully what we are to remind them of. The R. V. says we are to take no rest and give Him no rest till He does this. He does not need to be reminded, but He condescends to let us do this, and loves to have us plead His promises. us plead His promises.
16. "And the bow shall be in the cloud, and I will look upon it, that I may remember the everlasting covenant between God and every living creature of all flesh that is upon the earth." How many of us ever think when we see a rainbow in the clouds that God is looking specially upon it and is interested in it; that the cloud is His, and the bow is His, and the covenant is His, and when we are interested in that which interests Him then we have fellowship with Him? When the clouds come in our lives, may we by faith see also the bow and re-joice that however things may seem to go we are in the bonds of an everlasting cove-nant ordered in all things and sure.

In mant ordered in all things and sure.

17. "And God said unto Noah, This is the token of the covenant which I have established between Me and all flesh that is upon the earth." The word for "establish" is often translated "raise up." "confirm," "perform," "accomplish," and is the very word used when speaking to Moses of Christ, "I will raise them up a prophet like unto thee." All things that God says or does are established in Christ. When we are in Christ by simple faith, and just taking Him at His word, we, too, become established, but not otherwise (II Chron. xx, 20; Isa. vii, 9).

Sacred Serpents.

A general belief in the divine character and healing powers of the sacred serpent is to be met with all over Egypt. Even the myths which the old Egyptians associated with the snake are still prevalent. Egyptians of all classes still believe that when "a serpent grows old wings grow out of its and that there are serpents body, which kill by darting flames in the victim's face. How old such beliefs are in this country need not be repeated to those who have seen the pictures in the tombs of the kings at Thebes. The seref, or 'flying serpent," and the snake from whose mouth flames issue are among the commonest of the figures painted on their

It is not, however, as Kakodaemon, but as Agathodaemon, that the divine serpent of ancient Egypt still maintains his chief hold on the belief of the Egyptian people. Each house still has its harras, or "guardian snake," commonly known as the harras el bet,"the protector of the house." The snake is fed with milk and eggs, and care is taken not to do it harm. A servant of mine, who was born at Helwan, near Cairo, large one, and used to come out at night for the sake of the food that was offered it and to glide over the bodies of the sleeping family. It never did any of them any mischief, "as it was always treated well." One day a stranger snake made its appearance at the door of the house; the harras at once went against it, and after a short struggle killed the intruder.—Contemporary Review.

Would See Her Later.

Coming over from the east side the other day a University car was filled with all sorts and conditions of passengers, conspicuous among them being some jolly university students. Oppo-site the boys sat a hard featured female, evidently on her way from a meeting. Next to her sat a bright faced woman talking with a friend. Naturally the talk drifted upon the subject of the revival meetings, and the friend asked: "I suppose you have been to some of them?'

"No, I have not," the other replied. 'I haven't had time," and as she spoke she signaled the conductor to let her off the car.

At her words the hard featured female sitting next to her quickly turned, and leaning forward said in solemn 'Haven't had time! Will you have time to go to hell?"

The car had stopped and as the lady reached the door she hurriedly re-"If I have, I'll see you later."

Then she stepped into the street per-fectly conscious of having been able to squelch a woman who didn't know enough to mind her own business.— Minneapolis Tribune.

Novel Manifolding.

An Italian inventor proposes a novel method for duplicating copies of writing. The mechanism for this purpose is provided with two pens, supported by a framework in such a manner that their points are always in the same horizontal plane; a pen at the right is intended for the operator or writer, and the least stroke made by this pen is at the same time duplicated by a pen 13. "I do set My bow in the cloud, and it shall be for a token of a covenant between Me and the earth." This is the first time and hinged that the pens can be moved in any direction, and a counterbalance takes the weight of the frame from the hand, so that the act of writing is made almost as easy as with the usual per and holder.

Two ink wells are provided at the base of the stand, and the dipping of a pen in one well causes the pen to dip in the opposite well; and when the two sheets of paper to be written on are placed parallel to each other and secured the remainder of the work is as simple as ordinary writing. The instrument is designed in especial for furnishing duplicates of contracts and of those legal and other documents which it is often desirable to have duplicated not only in words, but also in the paper and handwriting.-New York

The Cream of Tartar Tree.

The oldest tree now extant is probably the baobab (Adansonia digitata) of Africa, alias the sour gourd or cream of tartar tree (Adansonia Gregorii) of Australia. This remarkable tree has a rather short and branching trunk not more than 60 or 70 feet high, while its (Watch this paper for testimonials of people who have been cured.) girth at the ground is from 85 to 95 feet. One of them has names cut upon it which date back to the fourteenth century, and the naturalist Adanson, who gave the genus its botanic name, calculated from certain data that its age must be upward of 5,000 years. The hollow trunks of these trees, which are capacious enough to hold comfortably 30 or 40 bodies, are used as tombs by the native Africans, where the suspended corpses soon become thoroughly mummified and preserved:-Boston Transcript.

LITERARY NOTES.

The frontispiece of the January number of the New England Magazine is a striking portrait of Edwin L. Bynner, whose historical novels, "Agnes Surriage," "The Begum's Daughter," etc., have been among the most notable rccent contributions to this department of our literature, and whose untimely death is so deeply mourned This number of the New England is very strong in matter relating to Boston antiquities. There is a fully illustrated article by Hamilton A. Hill, on the Boston and Liverpool Packet Lines. The illustrations of the early Cunard boats are of much interest. Very beautiful are the pictures of the Castle of Crayere in Switzerland, which accompany Mr. W. D. McCrackan's interesting little paper on Gruyere. An article which is likely and to be read with still more interest at this time is that on the Swiss Referendum, by Nathan N. Withington. Rev. Joseph H. Crooker writes with force and discrimination upon Matthew Argiven with this article. The most fully illustrated article in the number is that on the city of Springfield, Mass., by Mr. Clarence E. Blake. It is one of the best articles on New England towns and cities which has appeard in the Your nearest ticket agent or magazine.-Warren F. Kellog, 5 Park Square, Boston.

The number of The Living Age for the week ending January 6th begins a new volume, a new year, and a new series. After its successful career of fifty years this standard periodical seems as vigorous and prosperous as ever. Always the chief, it is now the only eclectic weekly of the country. Its distinguishing characteristics are that it presents in convenient form a compilation of the world's choicest literature, encyclopedic in its scope, character, comprehensiveness, and completeness, and with a freshness, owing to its frequent issue, attempted by no other publication whatever; the ablest essays and reviews, the latest results of scientific research; biographical sketches, stories of travel and exploration, literary criticism and every phase of culture and progress in the European world, making an amount of reading of the highest value, unapproached by any other magazine. Some acquaintance with foreign periodical literature is an absolute necessity to every one who desires to keep abreast of the world of thought, to be in touch with the best results of the intellectual activity of the times, and in no other way, that we know of, can this be satisfactorily, cheaply and conveniently secured as through this brilliant weekly magazine. The subscription price ($8.00 a year) is cheap for the amount, nearly 3,300 pages, of the reading matter given; while the publishers make a still cheaper offer, viz: to send The Living Age and either one of the American $4.00 monthlies or weeklies, a year, both prepaid, for $10.50.—Published by Littell & Co., Boston, Mass.

Frank R. Stockton, in his own delightfully humorous way, continues to make the irrepressible "Pomona" interesting in the second installment of We have built sewing machines for more than forty years and have constantly improved them. We build our machines under the title of "Pomona's Travels," her correspondence with her old "Rudcan only be found in the January Ladies' Home Journal. "How I Became an Actress," is the theme of a most valuable bit of autobiography from the pen of Adelaide Restori del Grillo. The second installment of Mr. William Dean Howells' "My Litarary Passions" is as full of interest as the first and as well worth reading. The editor discusses with much earnestness the vexed question of the education of our American girls. The four prize hymns, to which were awarded the prizes in "The Journal's Musical Series" of last year, are given in their entirety. Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett and Mr. Birch continue to delight with fact and picturing concerning "Little Lord Fauntleroy." Women everywhere will be delighted with "Embroideries for a Dining Room," by Mrs. Barnes-Bruce; 'Accessories to a Girl's Room," by Anna T. Roberts, and Mrs. Mallon's fashion pages, which are charmingly illustrated by Frank O. Small. Mothers will be interested in Miss Scovil's "Kindergarden Work at Home," and all housekeepers will be helped by Miss Parloa's "Household Hints." together this New Year Journal is an ideal number, and worth many times its price.—The Curtis Publishing Company, of Philadelphia, ten cents per number, one dollar per year.

Another Courtship Ended. He had been worshiping her for ablaze yet, months, but had never told her, and His Wife she didn't want him to. He had come often and staid late, and she could only sigh and hope. He was going away the next day on his vacation, and he thought the last night was the time to spring the momentons question. He kept it to himself, however, until the last thing. It was 11:30 by the clock, and it wasn't a very rapid clock. "Miss Mollie," he began tremulously, "I am going away to-morrow. "Are you?" she said with the thoughtlessness of girlhood, as she gazed wistfully at the clock. "Yes," he replied. "Are you sorry?" "Yes, very sorry," she murmured. "I thought you might go away this evening." she again gazed at the clock wistfully, and he told her good night.- N. Y.

The War is Over. A Well-known Soldier, Correspondent and Journalist Makes a Disclosure.

ist Makes a Disclosure.

Indiana contributed her thousands of brave soldiers to the war, and no state bears a better record in that respect than it does. In diterature it is rapidly acquiring an enviable place. In war and literature Solomon Yewell, well known as a writer as "Sol," has won an honorable position. During the late war he was a member of Co. M. dd. N. Y. Cavalry and of the 18th Indiana Infantry Volunteers. Regarding an important circumstance he writes as follows:

"Several of us old veterans here are using Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, Heart Cure and Nerve and Liver Pills, all of them giving splendid satisfaction. In fact, we have never used remedies that compare with them. Of the Pills we must say they are the best combination of their nature we have ever known, We have none but words of praise for them. They are the outgrowth of a new principle in medicine, and tone up the system wonderfully. We say to all, try these remedies."—Solomon Yewell, Marion, Ind., Dec. 5, 1822. These remedies are sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on reseipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles $5, express prepaid. Dole and His Comrades Marked for Decapitation-President Cleveland Transmits the Hawanan Correspondence to Congress.

WILLIS INSTRUCTED TO WAIT.

Washington, Jan. 15. - President Cleveland has transmitted to congress all correspondence relating to Hawaii since his last message. The message transmitting additional Hawaiian correspondence is as follows:

"To the congress: I transmit herewith copies of all dispatches from our minister to Hawaii, relating in any way to political affairs in Hawaii, except such as have been heretofore transmitted to congress. I also send copies of instruction sent on January 12, 1894, being the only instructions to him that have not been sent to structions to him that have not been sent to congress. In my former messages to congress, withheld dispatch No. 3 under date of November 16, 1893, and also dispatch No. 70 under date of October 8, 1893. Inasmuch as the con-tents of dispatch No. 3 are all referred to in the dispatch of more recent date, and inasmuch as there seems to be no longer reason for withholding it, the same is herewith submitted. Dispatch No. 70 is still withheld for reasons that seem to be justifiable and proper.

"Grover Cleveland."

The correspondence follows:

Mr. Willis to Mr. Gresham. LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES, HONO-LULU, Nov. 16, 1892—Sir: In the forenoon of Monday, the 18th inst., by prearrangement, the queen, accompanied by the royal chamberlain, Mr. Robertson, called at the legation. No one was present at the half-hour interview which followed her chamberlain having been taken followed, her chamberlain having been taken to another room and Consul-General Mills, who had invited her to come, remaining in the front of the house, to prevent interruption. After a formal greeting the queen was informed that the president of the United States had important communications to make to her and she was asked whether she was willing to receive them alone and in confidence, assuring her that this was for her own interest and series. The answerseld in the effective them alone and in confidence, and safety. She answered in the affirmative.

Presented Cleveland's Regrets.

"I then made known to her the president's sincere regret that, through the unauthorized intervention of the United States, she had been intervention of the United States, she had been obliged to surreader her sovereignty, and his hope that, with her consent and cooperation, the wrong done to her and her people might be redressed. To this she bowed her acknowledgements. I then said to the queen: 'The president expects and believes that when you are reinstated you will show forgiveness and magnanimity, that you will wish to be the queen of all the people, both native and foreign-born; that you will make haste to secure their love and loyaity and to establish peace, friendship and good government.'

"To this she made no reply until after wait-

"To this she made no reply until after waiting a moment I continued: 'The president not only tenders you his sympathy, but wishes to help you Before fully making known to you his purposes I desire to know whether you are willing to answer certain questions which it is my duty to ask?" my duty to ask?"

"I then said: 'I have no further communica-

Dole Prepares for Defense. Another dispatch from Mr. Willis to Secre tary Gresham, under date of December 5, announced that the secretary's letter favoring restoration of the queen created a great sensa-tion. Crowds gathered at all points to discuss the news, but no breach of the peace oc-curred. Protests against the use of force by the United States were presented to the minister by many persons. On November 29 President Dole rescinded the privilege hereto-fore granted Admiral Skerrett of landing his troops for drilling purposes. President Dole had been making active preparations for de fense, fortifying the executive building, and arming all who were willing to be armed, and Minister Willis had fears of an outbreak.

Secured the Queen's Pledge. Under date of December 20, 1893, Minister Willis, in a confidential dispatch to Secretary Gresham, gives a detailed account of his action in finally securing from Queen Lilbokalania pledge of amnesty to members of the provi-sional government in case she should be re-He says:

"Having secured from the queen the written pledge and agreement, which was the pre-requisite to my further actions, I was then, for requisite to my further actions, I was then, for the first time, in a position to make known to the provisional government the decision of the president upon the question that had been submitted to him by the protest of the queen, which protest has been acknowledged and accepted by the provisional government through its president, Mr. Dole, the immediate effect of which was according to the statement of Mr. Damon, another honored member of the provisional government, the queen's temporary surrender of her throne "

The last dispatch received from Minister Willis inclosing President Dole's reply to his demand for the retirement of the provisional government is dated December 23, and is of a formal nature, stating that Dole's answer was just delivered and that he would regly to it on the following Tuesday. Mr. Willis takes occasion to compliment Consul General Mills. President Dole's reply to the United States minister's demand is as follows: "HONOLULU, Dec. 23, 1893—Sir: Your excellency's communication of December 19, an nameing the conclusion which the president of the United States of America has finally arrived at respecting the application of this gov-ernment for a treaty of political union with that country, and referring, also, to the domestic affairs of these islands, has had the consideration of the government.

"While we accept the decision of the president of the United States, declining further to consider the annexation proposition as the final conclusion of the present administration, we do not feel inclined to regard it as the last word of the American government upon this subject. This conviction is em-phasized by the favorable expression of American statesmen over a long period in favor of annexation, conspicuous among whom are the names of W. L. Marcy, William H. Seward, Hamilton Fish and James G. Blaine, all former secretaries of state, and G. Blaine, all former secretaries of state, and especially so by the action of your last administration in negotiating a treaty of annexation with this government and sending it to the sente with a view of its rainfeation.

"We shall therefore continue the project of political union with the United States as a conspicuous feature of our foreign policy. Your information that the president of the United States expects this government to promptly relinquish to the ex-queen her 'con-stitutional authority' might well be dismissed in a single word, but for the circumstances that your communication contains, as it appears to me, misstatements and erroneous concluto me, misstatements and erroneous conclusions based thereon, that are so prejudicial to the government that I cannot permit them to pass unchallenged. We do not recognize the right of the president of the United States to interfere in our domestic affairs. Such right could be conferred upon him by the action of this government and by that alone. "This I understand to be the American doctrine conspicuously announced from time to time by the authorities of your government." In conclusion, President Dole says: "I am instructed to mform you, Mr. Minister, that the provisional government of the Hawaiian is-

Regarding the right of the United States to interfere, Mr. Dole says:

The last instructions to Minister Willis are dated January 12 and are as follows:
"To Willis, Minister to Honolulu: Yours Nos. 14 to 18 inclusive show that you have rightly comprehended the scope of your instructions and have as far as was in your power discharged the onerous task confided in you. The president sincerely regrets that the provisional government refuses to acquiesce in the conclusion which his sense of right and duty and a due regard for our national honor duty and a due regard for our national honor constrained him to reach and submit as a measure of justice to the people of the Hawaiian islands and their deposed sovereign. "While it is true that the provisional government was created to exist only until the islands were annexed to the United States; that the were annexed to the United States; that the queen finally but reluctantly surrendered to an armed force of this government illegally quartered in Honolulu, and representatives of the provisional government, which realized its impotence and was anxious to get control of the queen's means of detense, being assured that, if she would surreader, her case would be subsequently considered by the United States, the president has never claimed that such action constituted him an arbitrator in the technical sense authorized him to act in that capacity between the provisional government and the queen. provisional government and the queen.

San Francisco, Jan. 15.—The City of Pekin arrived from Honolulu bringing the following advices:

"HONOLULU, Jan. 5.—Since our last news, sent per Warrimo on the 1st, all has been quieter. The government has removed all the sandbags from the verandas of the executive building, whence sharpshooters were to pick off attacking naval forces. Should congress order the queen restored by force no resistance would be atternated. The sandbag defenses on would be attempted. The sandbag defenses on the ground are left against a possible royalist insurrection. The government has small fear of such an attempt, but remains on the alert.

Made a Few Exceptions. "It is learned from a prominent royalist that after United States Minister Willis had made his demand upon the provisional government he heard that the ex-queen intended to except several individuals from her guaranty of amnesty. It is reported that there-upon the American minister spent a portion of the evening in question at Washington place, arguing with the ex-queen and urging her to change her opinion. It is said that she rajused to do this and that she excepted from amnesty President Dole, W. O. Smith attor-ncy general; Chief Justice Judd and several Proceedings.

THE SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.—The principal event in the senate yesterday was the speech of Senator Davis (rep., Minn.) in support of the policy of non-interference in Hawaiian affairs. The senator plainly expressed himself as in favor of annexation of Hawaii, and declared that to be the manifest destiny of the Hawaiian islands.

Washington, Jan. 12.—The Hawaiian controversy consumed almost the whole time in the senate yesterday. Senator Davis (rep., Minn.) concluded his speech in opposition to the policy of the present administration. Senator Turpie (dem., Ind.) made an hour's speech that was full of surprises. It was a strong legal argument, based on international and diplomatic law, and took the position that the provisional government, having been once recognized by the United States and the civilized world, it was a fact accomplished and recognition could not be withdrawn.

Washington, Jan. 13.—The greater part of the session of the senate yesterday was devoted to executive business. The nomination of Mr. Preston to be director of the mint was confirmed. Adjourned to the 15th.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.-By a vote of 30 to 24 the senate yesterday rejected the nomination of William B. Hornblower, of New York, to be an associate justice of the United States supreme court to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Samuel Blatch-

The House.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.-In the house yesterday the tariff bill was further discussed and Mr. Johnson (dem., O.) attacked the democrats for the timid manner in which they handled the tariff question and charged them with cowardice all along the line. Mr. Dalzell (dem., Pa.) made a speech in defense of the tariff.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—The time was occupied in the house yesterday in discussing the tariff bill Speeches were limited to one hour and many members took part in the debate.

Washington, Jan. 18.—In the house yesterday a resolution calling upon the president for all information in his possession touching recent reported events in the Hawaiian islands was reported favorably and temporarily laid on the table. The tariff bill was further discussed. Mr. Reed (rep., Me.) will close the tariff debate for the republicans on the 27th and Mr. Wilson (dem., W. Va.) will perform a similar service for the democratic majority. The vote on the bill will be taken Mon day, the 29th.

Washington, Jan. 15.-In the house yesterday a message from the president on Hawaiian affairs was read and referred to the foreign affairs committee. The tariff bill was further discussed.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—The consideration of the tariff bill under the fiveminute rule was begun in the house yesterday, and the debate concluded with a tilt between Mr. Cockran and Mr. Reed.

RAILWAY WRECK IN CUBA. A Cow Derails a Train and Sixteen Persons Are Killed.

HAVANA, Jan. 16 .- A frightful accident occurred on the Timina-Matanzas railway 8 miles from Cumanayagua. A passenger train going at good speed ran into a cow. Auntie's Ignorance

Orders had been given to the policeman to arrest all mendicants whom they found in the streets. In obedience to his instructions a Nineteenth district policeman took into custody an old colored woman whom he found soliciting alms at Eighth and Chestnut streets. When she arrived at the station house, the sergeant in charge looked at her over the desk in surprise. She was old, and her hair had faded to gray, but her eyes shone brightly. She made a queer little bow and said, "Good even', mas'r."

After "auntie" had given her name, the police official asked her age. "Law's sake, I don' know. Been putty long ago since my mammy tol me. I clean gone fo'get." She smiled, and so "Are you married or single?"

"I don' know," came the answer. The ergeant looked up dumfounded. "You don't know?" queried he. "Umpum," said she, shaking her head.

"Why don't you know?" "'Cause I'ze a grass widow," responded "auntie."—Philadelphia Press.

A MOB'S WRATH.

It Is Visited in a Summary Manner Upon Three Kansans.

J. G. Burton, William Gay and His Son, Charged with Murder and Horse Stealing, Become the Victims of Angry Citizens. A KANSAS LYNCHING.

Russell, Kan., Jan. 15. -For two horses, a saddle, a watch, some clothes and $50 four lives have beeen given. The first was that of Frederick Dinelor and stock dealer living near Lucas, ten miles northeast. A mob of one hundred determined men entered the jail here between 2 and 3 o'clock Sunday morning, took out the three prisoners and hanged them to a small railroad bridge a short distance east of the depot in this city.

For Self-Protection.

Doubtless one of the causes that led to this taking of the law into their hands was the fact of an organized gang of thieves, of which these persons were supposed to be members, and Burton one of the leaders among them. It would be easy to procure any testimony that might be needed to clear them. Stockmen especially have been suffering from the depredadations of this gang for several years past by the frequent loss of horses, cattle, grain and other property, and it was not considered safe for any person to cause the arrest and conviction of any member of this gang.

Lynched in Ohio. West Union, O., Jan. 13.—Roscoe Parker, a shiftless colored boy of 16 years, was lynched early Friday morning for the murder four weeks ago of Pit Rhine and his wife, an aged couple living at West Union, who were murdered in their cabin for $10-all they had. A heavy club and a butcher knife had been used.

FOUL MURDER AT ST. LOUIS. Four Negroes Kill an Aged Couple for Their Money.

Sr. Louis, Jan. 18.—Thursday night four negroes entered the home of Frederick Benny, a farmer living half a mile south of Florissant, a suburb of this city, and made a demand for money, which they believed was concealed in the house. The demand not being acquiesced in the quartette beat Benny, who is over 70 years old, and his wife, aged 65, so/severely that the latter is dead and the former cannot recover from his injuries. A hired man, hearing the screams of the old couple, ran to their assistance and was himself beaten into insensibility. The negroes then secured $300 and fled.

Post Office Destroyed.

UNIONVILLE, Mo., Jan. 16.-Fire caused by an explosion destroyed the post office block on the south side of the square Monday morning. The was completely gutted, with several handred dollars' worth of stamped envelopes, postal cards and wrappers burned. All outgoing mail deposited from Saturday afternoon until Sunday evening was destroyed, as was the mail in private boxes. The loss to Uncle Sam is about $5,000.

Costly Fire in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Jan. 13.-Fire destroyed the three elevators and one of the malthouses of the Hales & Curtis Malting company at Bliss and Hickory streets, on Ogden island, Friday night. The elevators contained 200,000 bushels of malt and 100,000 bushels of barley, all sary of its organization. of which were burned or poured out on the ground around the flaming buildings, soaked with muddy water. The loss to the malting company will amount to nearly $300,000.

Over a Million Short.

MILWAUKEE, Jan. 16.—August P. Conrad, the expert accountant who was engaged by Receiver Barth to go over the books of the South side savings bank, gave sensational evidence in the Koetting trial Monday. It shows that the bank was one of the greatest bubbles recorded since the days of the South Sea island venture. In resources the bank has only $244,000, against liabilities of $1,376,040.

Whole Towns Down with the Grip. CONCORD, N. H., Jan. 15 .- A terrible epidemic of the grip is reported from Pittsburgh and Stewartstown. Nearly the whole adult population of both places is prostrated with the disease and eight deaths have occurred within a few days. Thirty men are sick in their camps at Perry and Indian streams, and four deaths have already occurred there.

Lived Over a Century.

JACKSONVILLE, Ill., Jan. 16.-Mary Clancey died at the home of her grandson, Jerry Clancey, in this city. She was 102 years of age, and was a native of Ireland, though she had lived the greater part of the century in this country. She was a devoted Catholic. She had had a large family of children, most of whom are dead.

MONUMENT TO SPINNER.

Women Place a Memoral to the Late Treasurer.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15 .- The women of Washington have raised $9,000 to erect a monument to Gen. Francis Spinner, formerly treasurer of the United States, who was the first official to give women employment in the government service, and they want $1,000 more. There are now over 5,000 women employed in this city by the government alone and probably 20,000 throughout the country. In 1862 there were none. Thirty years ago the sphere of woman was limited to the kitchen and school and the sewing-room, and it is largely due to Gen. Spinner that they have been admitted to business employment. The committee in charge of the erection of the monnment ask that those who are enjoying the benefits of his example contribute one dollar or more to complete their

MURDER AND SUICIDE.

Edward Lewis Kills His Wife and Then Fatally Shoots Himself.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 13.-Edward Lewis, a young carpenter, murdered his wife in a hallway and then turned his revolver upon himself and ended his own life. The couple frequently quarreled and finally Mrs. Lewis had her husband arrested for beating her. She was on her way to the police court, supposing he was locked up. As she descended the stairs and near the street door in the hallway Lewis caught her by the throat and fired a ball through her head. He immediately shot himself and fell across her dead body. Jealously was at the bottom of the trouble.
