THE ASHLEYS WIN.

THE T. & A. A. ROAD STILL UNDER THEIR CONTROL.

Love at First Sight.—County Teachers' Meeting.—An Ann Arbor Boy in Trouble.—Shot at a Tramp.—Mrs. French-Sheldon.

The stockholders, a Lackawanna faction quarrelled with the bondholders or Astor-Ashley faction at the Toledo, Ann Arbor & North Michigan railroad meeting held in Toledo, Ohio, a few days ago.

The Astor faction was waiting for proxies from 2,000 shares which would give them control of the meeting, and accordingly they filibustered for time. Chairman W. R. Burt assisted in the filibustering by recognizing all regular motions in the most approved congressional style.

The Astors made two motions to adjourn and ayes and nays were twice called for. The inspectors became weary of calling the long roll, and said that if the rival interests wished to carry on the fight all night they would withdraw, and accordingly left the room.

An effort was made by the Lackawanna faction to go on with the voting, and Mr. A. Graves moved the appointment of other inspectors. Chairman Wellington R. Burt ruled the motion out of order, and after the secretary refused to put the motion it was put by its author and announced carried.

In the same manner George W. Murray was elected chairman, Burt being declared out of office by his refusal to put a motion. This was more than the Astor people could stand, and General Manager James Ashley, Jr., cried out that bulldozing could not be carried on in his office.

Attorney G. K. Pendleton, of the Lackawanna, seized Ashley and attempted to hustle him towards the door. The Astorites, who had rallied about their deposed chairman, formed a flying wedge, and rescued Ashley. Then followed a fisty battle between Mr. Pendleton and A. W. Scott, of Toledo, attorney for the bondholders. Chairs and tables were overturned, and pandemonium reigned.

The Lackawanna people finally withdrew and elected the following board of directors: James A. Blair, William Mortons, George W. Murray, George R. Sheldon, Joseph Walker, Jr., T. C. Platt, E. P. Goodwin, S. K. Clarke and George N. Crouse, of New York; William Green and E. T. Monigal, of Ohio.

It now transpires that the pitched fight was altogether a characteristic Ashley movement, one of desperation rather than of shrewdness. It had been clearly demonstrated that the Astors and Ashleys had only about 27,000 shares to vote, while the Lackawanna had 2,000 more.

The Ashleys had nothing to lose and by filibustering might gain. Jim and Harry Ashley had a large hand in getting Attorneys Pendleton and Scott to fighting. Jim Ashley pushed Pendleton into Scott, witnesses say. This precipitated the scuffle, the object of which was to eject one or the other faction from the building.

The meeting which was held by the stockholders, at which a set of directors was elected, is believed to be illegal, for the reason that the courts had appointed inspectors to supervise the election, and this meeting named its own inspectors. Had the Lackawanna people managed to name a chairman before they were kicked out this chairman they might have called the special meeting and the proceedings have been legal.

With 31,499 ballots, the bondholders of the A. A. Co. the next day elected their directors. The largest vote of the Walker people was 30,518, which shows a total of 981 in favor of the bondholders. The inspectors delivered a certificate to the meeting in the afternoon showing that the following named had been chosen directors: Amos F. Eno, John Jacob Astor, George W. Quintard, J. Edward Simmons, Robert R. Gallows, Ernest Diehman, H. Livingston Rogers, Alfred De Cordova, Charles E. Quincey, T. W. Childs and S. H. Kismam. It turned out that the Walker crowd voted a large number of proxies that rightly belonged to the bondholders' committee.

Unity Club.

At the Unity Club next Monday evening, the Rev. Chas. Fluhrer, of Grand Rapids, will give a lecture upon the "Tower of London," illustrated by 60 stereopticon views. Dr. Fluhrer spoke in the U. C. course two years ago upon "A day up the Rhine," and all who heard him will remember the able manner in which he handled his subject. The lecture next Monday evening promises to be equally entertaining.

Next Saturday the Detroit Athletic baseball club will play the U. of M. in this city.

LOVE AT FIRST SIGHT.

Marriage of a Young Cincinnati and a Saginaw Beauty.

R. G. Rutter, of Warsaw, Ind., with the Chatfield & Woods Co., of Cincinnati, and Miss Lillian McSherry were married Friday afternoon at the Arlington Hotel. The marriage was rather romantic, the happy couple having met in Saginaw a few days ago for the first time. Both contracting parties are said to be well connected.

A Saginaw correspondent of the Detroit Tribune writes as follows concerning the happy couple:

R. G. Rutter, who travels for the Chatfield & Woods Company of Cincinnati, was married to Lillian McSherry, a charming siren whom he met at a famous bagnio in Saginaw. The affair is one of the most sensational that has ever occurred in the history of the city.

Lillian McSherry comes from a good family in Newark, Ohio, where her mother and sisters reside, one of the latter being the wife of an influential citizen of that place. She is a pretty girl of twenty years, who has a peculiarly fascinating manner. She came here last week from Columbus, Ohio, where she had been an occupant of a disorderly house.

Rutter, who is a handsome youth of twenty-four, whose home is in Warsaw, Ind., visited the bagnio and was fascinated with Lillian. The feeling was mutual and Rutter refused to leave the house until Lillian promised to marry him.

She had half a dozen admirers, one of whom was the son of a prominent merchant here and a leader in society, but Lillian refused the proffered hand of the merchant's son and left Thursday night for Ann Arbor. When Rutter's rival heard of this he became nearly frantic and attempted suicide.

Rutter and Lillian were married in Ann Arbor Friday by Rev. W. L. Craft of Cleveland, Ohio. Rutter's father owns a large hardware store in Warsaw, Ind., and the couple left for that place, where young Rutter will engage in business with his father. Lillian has quite a record as an adventurer in Columbus, Ohio, where she was the mistress of a prominent merchant.

The Saginaw society man is so dependent over the affair that it is feared he may do something rash. He is engaged to marry a rich young lady of the west side who is unaware of her lover's truancy.

SHOT AT A TRAMP.

Mrs. William Gerstner Used a Revolver, but Without Effect.

Friday afternoon a tramp called at the residence of Wm. Gerstner and begged for some money. Mrs. Gerstner gave him a little change. In the evening he called again and demanded more money, but she refused to again comply with his wishes, whereupon the loafer became provoked and insulted her by calling her vile names. Mrs. Gerstner then took a revolver and threatened to shoot him if he did not instantly leave the premises, which he refused to do, and she shot at him. He escaped unhurt.

A number of tramps were begging at the residence of H. F. Frost on Ann-st., Saturday morning. Mr. Gerstner was passing at the time and recognized one of the number as the individual who called at his house on the previous day. He informed the police of the fact, who arrested the gang. Mrs. Gerstner recognized among them the tramp who had insulted her. He was taken before Justice Bennett, who sent him to jail for ten days for vagrancy. He gave his name as Charles Robinson. Pity the justice could not have given him ten years at Jackson.

Ann Arbor Boy in Trouble.

Jackson, Mich., April 24.—J. R. Golden, of Ann Arbor, is in Jackson county jail, charged with burglary and larceny. Five days ago Golden, who is a young man came here claiming he representing the Ann Arbor Stamp Co. He got in with an engraving company here and was to make them agents for the stamps. Golden was let into the office and was there Saturday night.

Yesterday morning the safe was found open and about $12 in silver was gone. The key to the safe was in a wooden desk in the office, but it was found that the lock of the desk had been bored round with a bit until it fell off, the desk opened and the safe key taken to unlock it.

Chief Boyle was notified, and before 9 A. M. Golden was arrested. It was further found where Golden had changed $5 in silver for a bill of like denomination at a Francis-st. saloon. The prisoner was sent to jail on his demand for an examination. He offered to plead guilty to simple larceny, but denied the theft. It is said his relations at Ann Arbor are entirely respectable, and no doubt efforts will be made to pull the young fellow out of the scrape. He shed tears at the jail, and wanted his father sent for.

Death of Mrs. Geo. W. B. Bullis.

Emma D. Briggs, the wife of George W. Bullis, died at their new residence on Washtenaw ave. last Monday morning and her funeral took place on Wednesday afternoon, Rev. J. T. Sunderland officiating. Mrs. Bullis had suffered for some months with a disease known to physicians as Multiple Sclerosis and her death was not unexpected. She was born near Attica in the State of New York fifty-six years ago, and came to Michigan when about twelve years of age with her parents, who settled on a farm at Lacey in Barry county, on which her aged father still resides. Her father was born in eastern Massachusetts and came of good old Puritan stock, and these are now her looms in the family, which came over in the Mayflower.

Mrs. Bullis leaves a husband, Capt. George W. Bullis, and four children, Mrs. N. B. Higgins, Miss Carlotta B. Bullis, Miss Clementina Bullis and Justin Bullis. Four brothers and one sister also survive her. Her death seems an especially sad one as it is but a few weeks since the family moved into their new and beautiful home on Washtenaw ave., planned by Mr. and Mrs. Bullis and erected without regard to expense, as they hoped to spend there together the evening of their days.

Mrs. Bullis was a woman of marked individuality, sound judgment and solid sense. There was no affectation, sham or pretense about her. She was gentle, frank, honest and sincere in all things, unostentatious and devoted to her family and her home. She possessed much of the Puritan spirit of her ancestors, and when her country, at the beginning of the great rebellion, called for the services of its sons, this young wife and mother, forgetting self, cheerfully consented that her husband should respond to the demands of patriotism and duty. Economical and industrious, thoughtful of little things, she was a faithful helpmate to the husband of her youth. Her place in the stricken household can never be supplied, but her virtues, by those who knew her well, can never be forgotten, and to husband, children and friends the remembrance and influence of her unselfish and beautiful life will ever be an inspiration and benediction.

Mrs. French-Sheldon.

Friday, April 27, at 8 o'clock P. M., at the School of Music, Mrs. French-Sheldon, F. R. G. S., the brilliant lecturer, intrepid explorer, philanthropist, author, publisher and sculptor, celebrated throughout both continents, will deliver a lecture on her marvelous African expedition entitled "Sultan to Sultan, the Wonders of Africa."

This wonderful woman in 1891 penetrated 1000 miles into unknown Africa attended by a band of 200 native men and women, herself the organizer and leader of the magnificent expedition and the only white person in it.

Her progress was perfectly marvelous. Through hostile and barbarous nations she passed as an elegant lady would, superbly dressed, luxuriously surrounded, welcomed and feted at the courts of savage kings, with the American flag floating at the head of her triumphant procession and "Good will to man" her password and safe conduct.

Some of our Ann Arbor people met and heard her at the World's Fair, almost all saw her magnificent travelling equipment in the Transportation building. All these will be glad to see her again and hear her exciting adventures.

Tickets are on sale at Wahr's bookstore, Brown's drugstore and at Sheehan's, and also in President Angell's office with Miss Goodrich, price 50 cents, children 25 cents.

Drills in parliamentary usage, and exercises in physical culture as related to temperance work are assured, under the direction of two of our national superintendents. Excellent music will be furnished each day, some of the finest musical talent of Ann Arbor having consented to render assistance in this direction. Every one is cordially invited to attend the convention, both ladies and gentlemen, and to participate in the discussions.

A large delegation is expected, and should any who would like to entertain be overlooked in the canvass, or if any desire particular friends among the delegates assigned to them, kindly notify Mrs. W. W. Wetmore, 84 W. Huron-st., chairman of the entertainment committee.

IN TRADE CIRCLES.

Much Uneasiness Felt Over Strikes and Tariff Uncertainty.

NEW YORK, April 21.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly report says:

"New orders for future distribution are still materially restricted by uncertainty about action at the tariff and about the extent and outcome of labor difficulties. Most of the recovery realized in business has been made possible by the consent of workers to accept lower wages for a time, and if they insist on restoration of wages before consumption has restored prices many works must stop. The great strike threatened by bituminous coal miners, and strikes of associated employees on some railroads, make the future less hopeful. Exports of gold had some influence, and continuing loss in earnings some."

"The failures of the last week have been somewhat more important than usual and were $19 in the United States, against $18 last year, and $45 in Canada, against $22 last year. For the first half of April liabilities reported have been $4,168,416, of which $2,082,550 were of manufacturing and $1,994,367 of trading concerns."

Bradstreet's says:

"With the exception of prospect for a still further extension of strikes and other labor difficulties, no plainly retarding influence is manifesting itself. So far as learned there are about twenty-three additional strikes, involving 21,000 people. This brings the total number of those now on strike or idle because of strikes up to 60,000. The week also furnishes eleven shut-downs of important industrial establishments, more than offset by resumption of thirty-two others, which furnish employment to 5,000 operatives, although seven important establishments announced reduction of wages. The heralded announcement that 200,000 coal miners will strike has occasioned uneasiness among manufacturers at many central and western cities owing to the prospective scarcity of fuel. Cities along the line of the Great Northern railroad, which road is now at a standstill because of a strike of employees, are finding their reduced volumes of business still further curtailed, and at Chicago labor troubles seriously affect the building trades."

"Cincinnati, Louisville, Duluth, Minneapolis and St. Paul report hardly as favorable trade conditions as in the preceding week. The first two announce that business is duller, while in the northwest the railway strike and wet weather are in part responsible. On the other hand, Cleveland, Detroit, Milwaukee and Kansas City announce considerable improvement in the jobbing demand and in several instances among manufacturing industries. At Omaha trade is checked, due to the revival of farm work following the good rains throughout Nebraska, which was to be expected. No material change is reported from Chicago or from St. Louis, the volume of business in staple lines being about an average. A fair summer's trade is anticipated."

MAY BE REVISED.

Probably That the Tariff Bill Will Be Modified.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—The conference of democratic senators on the tariff was continued in the room of the senate committee on appropriations Monday. Senator Cockrell, Jones (Ark.), Gorman, Vest and Harris being among those present. There is abundant confirmation of the report heretofore sent out that the democratic members of the finance committee are considering the advisability of revising the bill in various particulars, and have called other democratic senators into consultation with them. They have asked the dissatisfied element of the party in the senate to put in writing the changes which will make the bill satisfactory to them, and will use this proposition when formulated as a basis for an agreement, which they think can be effected.

AGAINST THE WILSON BILL.

Pennsylvania Workmen Go to Washington with a Protest.

CORUNA, April 21.—The betrothal is announced of the czarowitz (Grand Duke Nicholas) to Princess Alex. Victoria Helena Louise Beatrice of Hesse.

MINERS ARE OUT.

Their Great Strike Is Now Under Good Headway.

The Leaders Claim That More Than 128,000 Colliers Have Laid Down Their Tools in a Number of States—Latest Reports.

FROM MINERS' HEADQUARTERS.

COLUMBUS, O., April 23.—President John McBride, of the United Mine Workers, has watched the newspaper reports of the big coal miners' strike, which began at noon Saturday, very carefully and made comparisons with the information received by him. He estimates the number on strike at 128,100, as follows:

Ohio.....26,000 Kentucky.....4,000 Pennsylvania.....50,000 Iowa.....1,200 Illinois.....24,000 Missouri.....1,300 Indiana.....6,000 West Virginia.....2,000 Alabama.....8,000 Indian Territory.....1,700 Tennessee.....4,000

This estimate does not include Colorado, from which state contradictory reports have been received. A few days ago word was received from northern Colorado that the miners in that state would join the strike. There are about 3,000 miners there. Since that time no definite information has been received.

Strike a Complete Success.

The strike, so far as Ohio and Pennsylvania are concerned, seems to have been a complete success. The results in Illinois also have been much more encouraging than was anticipated.

The advice from the southern Illinois mining region are rather meager up to this time. P. H. Penna, national vice president of the United Mine Workers, is at Pana, one of the largest mining centers in that section of the state, and the latest information from him was to the effect that a majority of the men there had voted to strike.

Fight in Illinois and West Virginia.

It now seems that Illinois and West Virginia will be the battle ground in the competitive district. President McBride estimates that in West Virginia out of about 9,000 miners 2,000 have suspended work. William Fahy, a member of the national executive board, and Edmund Thomas are at work in that state and will address a large number of meetings this week.

A dispatch was received from the miners at Moundsville, W. Va., stating that the miners had been offered the seventy-cent rate demanded, and asking whether they should accept it and return to work. President McBride wired them not to accept under any conditions until further advised. He says that this will be one of the greatest things to be overcome in the present strike, as no doubt in many places offers will be made to pay the prices demanded and the miners will be inclined to accept.

All Out in Ohio.

In Ohio there has not been a single report of a refusal on the part of the miners to join the movement. President McBride says that so far as he can determine there is only one place in Pennsylvania outside of the anthracite and coke regions where the miners have not quit work and that is at Tattle Creek, where about 1,500 men are employed.

Strike Extends to Iowa.

Press dispatches from Iowa indicate that none of the miners there have struck, but President McBride has a telegram from Julius Froh stating that all the southern part of that state is out. There are about 3,000 miners in the section indicated.

Cause of the Strike.

The miners are striking for the restoration of the inter-state wage agreement which was abandoned during the summer, first voluntarily by a small number of miners in the Pittsburgh district, and thus forced a reduction in every competitive district in the United States.

Many operators in this district declare that it is impossible to pay the wages asked by the miners, and say they are satisfied to permit the mines to remain idle. But this does not represent the sentiment of all the operators, many of whom acknowledge that the wages demanded could be paid if all would keep faith and not seek an advantage.

Railroads Affected.

The suspension of work by the miners will seriously affect the business of many railroads, and from one-half to four-fifths of the train crews will be laid off pending the settlement of the strike. Among the roads most likely to be thus affected are:

The Hocking Valley, Toledo and Ohio Central, Ohio Southern, Columbus, Sandusky and Hocking, Wheeling and Lake Erie, Cleveland and Marietta, Cleveland, Lorain and Wheeling, Cleveland and Canton, Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern, and nearly all the lines in Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Illinois, Indiana and other states where the strike prevails.

Effect Will Be Serious.

Should the strike be effective to the fullest extent anticipated, the effect upon the country will be incalculably injurious, as the strike will enforce the suspension of many trades dependent upon the coal industry, and may seriously affect the operation of the railroads of the country in the states where the miners will go out.

Where the Strikers Are.

COLUMBUS, O., April 24.—The great miners' strike continues to grow. Telegrams poured into the national headquarters of the United Mine Workers in this city Monday indicating many additions to the ranks of the strikers and giving assurance that those already out would stand by the order for a general suspension.

President McBride's estimate of the number of strikers in detail is as follows:

Alabama.....8,000 Indian Territory.....2,000 Tennessee.....4,000 Illinois.....24,000 Kentucky.....5,000 Missouri.....1,300 West Virginia.....2,000 Pennsylvania.....50,000 Indiana.....6,000 Michigan.....300 Ohio.....26,000

Forced to Stay Out.

CHICAGO, April 24.—Fifteen hundred miners from neighboring towns marched to La Salle, Ill., and prevented the local men from entering the pits. Several were badly injured.

Gold continues to accumulate in the Bank of England. The stringency in the London money market has vanished.

I have recovered my hearing and am hearing entirely so that I can now hear a watch tick plainly. MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

Hailed with Delight.
The Burtis sawmill at Marquette began their 1894 cut, starting with a gang of sixty men. This is the earliest saws have begun running in many years, and almost a month sooner than last year. The booms are being supplied with logs brought in by rail which will continue until rafting from the Yellow Dog river commences. The Dead River Mill Co. also propose starting their cut. Both mills in engaging help are giving preference to married men, and in this way Mr. Burtis is now furnishing sustenance for forty families, several of which severely felt the dullness of the past winter.

New Way to Pay Old Debts.
A new way to pay old debts developed at Kalamazoo. M. B. Shears, a farmer, owed $198 on a note which he had executed to W. C. Edsell, the Otsego banker. The note originally called for $493, but $300 of this amount had been paid by Shears, who walked into Edsell's office, and, drawing a revolver, demanded the surrender of the note, threatening to kill the banker if he refused. After some parleying the bit of paper was surrendered.

THE COMMONWEALERS.

Authorities at Washington Advise Them to Stay Away.

Gen. Coxey Says He Will Not Heed the Advice—Will Demand Their Rights—Strength of the Army—Nearing the Capital.

BETTER STAY AWAY.
WASHINGTON, April 24.—The commissioners of the District of Columbia took action Monday on the impending Coxey invasion. After a long executive session and consultation with the attorney of the district a manifesto was prepared and given out which calls attention to the fact that the right of petition does not extend to the lengths the Coxeyites appear to imagine. Those who meditate coming to the capital are warned that only hardships and privation await them here, and are informed that no good can come of their proposed pilgrimage.

Coxey Will March On.

NEW YORK, April 24.—Gen. Coxey was angry when he heard of the proclamation of the District of Columbia commissioners issued as the embodiment of President Cleveland's views. "No, no! I shall not heed it!" he exclaimed when asked what he would do. Continuing, he said that the Washington police would not dare to arrest him and his followers. The proclamation would not cause him to desist from encouraging other industrial armies from storming the capital; on the contrary, he should redouble his efforts to bring every unemployed man, woman and child to Washington. He was not afraid of Cleveland, nor would the fear of possible bloodshed deter him. He concluded:

"I do not court a resort to arms, but we will demand our rights, even if it takes physical strength to prevail. I shall not commit myself to that, but will repeat my declaration to bring congress to terms by besieging Washington until justice is done."

Nearing the Capital.

BOONSBORO, Md., April 24.—Coxey's army, under command of Lieut. Brown, reached this place Monday afternoon and encamped for the night. The army was met here by Col. A. E. Redstone, who has been in Washington looking after the interests of the commonweal. Col. Redstone says that when the main army, reinforced by the various branches now on the way reaches the city limits of the capital it will be met and escorted down Pennsylvania avenue by 15,000 men, 500 prominent ladies, the local typographical unions, the entire force of the Grand Army of the Republic in the city, besides a large number of wheelmen. He wouldn't be surprised to see the army welcomed by a large number of senators and representatives. On reaching the capital, the colonel says, Brown will positively speak on the steps.

Ironmolders to Go to the Capital.

CHICAGO, April 24.—The ironmolders have decided that they will go to Washington, independent of the main body of commonwealers. They claim that they will have 20,000 men in their ranks. They say they are confident of reaching Washington by May 2. They have received, they say, from towns along their proposed line of march promises of assistance in the way of food, shelter, transportation and recruits. The western contingent will be met at Baltimore by marchers from the east. Kelly's army will receive in the neighborhood of 300 recruits here.

Must Keep Away from Chicago.

CHICAGO, April 24.—Chief of Police Brennan was ordered by the council yesterday to prevent any of the divisions of the commonweal army entering Chicago.

Brazilian Rebels Are Returning.
MONTVIDEO, April 23.—The Brazilian minister, in an official communication to the Uruguayan government, guarantees life and liberty to all rebel soldiers who wish to return to Brazil. The guarantee has been accepted by 230 men, who will be carried to Brazil at the expense of the government.

DEATH ON A REEF.

The Steamer Los Angeles Strikes a Rock and Several Lives Are Lost.

MONTREY, Cal., April 23.—The Pacific Coast Steamship company's steamer Los Angeles, bound north from Newport, Cal., and way ports to San Francisco, ran on the rocks at Point Sur lighthouse, 30 miles south of Monterey, between 9 and 10 o'clock Saturday night. The steamer sank within a few minutes and the passengers and crew took to the boats. Three boatloads reached shore at Point Sur, and the first news of the disaster was brought here by messenger Sunday. Two other boatloads and a raft containing other passengers and members of the crew were met by the steamer Eureka Sunday evening. The Eureka brought them to Monterey. Several lives were lost in the accident, but how many is not known. Six bodies have been recovered.

LYNCHED THREE NEGROES.

Taken from the Jail at Tusculum, Ala. and Hanged by a Mob.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 23.—At Tusculum at midnight Saturday night Tom Black, John Willis and Tony Johnson, negroes, were lynched for burning the barns of Claud King. A masked mob of 200 men went to the jail and called the jailer out on the pretext that they had a prisoner. They then entered the place forcibly, taking the keys from the jailer's wife, took the three incendiaries out and led them to the Tennessee river bridge, which is in the corporate limits of the town. Ropes were placed about each of the negroes' necks, and with the end tied to the bridge timbers they were compelled to jump off.

SNOWSLIDE KILLS A FAMILY.

F. E. Clarke, Wife and Two Children Crushed and Swept Into a River.

BENNER'S FERRY, Idaho, April 23.—A fatal snowslide occurred 40 miles north of here last Thursday night, killing F. E. Clarke, his wife and two children. Clarke, who was a miner, resided with his family in a little cabin at the foot of the mountains, close to the bank of the Kootenai river. Some time during the night an immense slide of snow suddenly came sweeping down the mountain and crushed the cabin. The cabin, with its dead, was swept away on the river. None of the bodies has yet been found.

THE REGISTER requests all of its friends, who have business at the Probate Court, to be sure and request the Judge of Probate or Probate Register to send their printing to THE REGISTER. Reasonable rates only are charged.

THE Evening News says in a long editorial that this is not the time to strike. When is the time to strike?

"POLITICIAN" in the Detroit Tribune says Junius E. Beal, of Ann Arbor, who is young, rich and popular, is a candidate for congressional honors.

Now we have it! The Adrian Press, the staunchest Democratic paper north of Mason and Dixon's line, says: "No Democrat will defend the present administration unless he is in receipt of pap, or expects it."

How is this, Patrick? The "Hausfreund und Post" says there is only one person in this whole world who thoroughly understands the Irish language, Prof. Rohricht, of the University of California, who is a German. Wonder if this broad assertion is true?

THE Leslie Local is following the footsteps of other numerous enterprising newspapers. It's editor announced in the last issue of the Local that henceforth and forevermore the Local would be republican in politics and everything else. Its principles will be American. THE REGISTER welcomes the bright and newsy Leslie Local to the fold and predicts for it a happy and prosperous life.

THE Detroit Free Press suggests the name of David B. Hill for the presidency on the Republican ticket. Mr. Hill knows that the Republican nomination for the presidency will be a sure thing. If Mr. Hill should be nominated by the Republicans he would be elected, but the g. o. p. will nominate a Republican. In the mean time, let other great Democrats come over to the Lord's side.

THE Jackson correspondent of the Detroit Tribune says Ex-Congressman James O'Donnell is the only republican seriously mentioned for congress in Jackson county. Thomas E. Barkworth, continues the correspondent, will run for congress if his party should nominate him, but as no democrat stands a ghost of a show of being elected, Thomas won't hustle very hard for the empty honor of being defeated.

THE Wayne Review and Pilot have consolidated. It was thought by many that the consolidation of the two papers would make a fairly good business for one publisher but while we were in Wayne one day last week we were informed such was not the case, as another local paper would make its appearance in that village in a few weeks. The publisher who purchased the other's plant has, evidently, been deceived in his calculations.

THE first number of the Wayne County Legal News is on our table. It is a large paper, filled with news of interest to members of the bar of Detroit and Wayne county. The News should also be in the hands of every lawyer in Michigan who wishes to keep well informed upon the decisions of the Supreme court of this state. G. B. Thompson, S. W. Curtis, formerly of this city, and W. E. Warner, of Detroit are the publishers of the Legal News.

THINNING OUT.

The rumor that Junius E. Beal is a candidate for congress has been disposed of by Mr. Beal declaring that he is not in the race. It is also understood that John F. Lawrence will not consent to be considered a candidate. F. P. Allen has also declared that under no circumstances will he allow his name to go before the convention. Whether or not Mr. Kempf will enter the field, is not as yet definitely settled, so far as we can learn. "We are informed, however, that some foreign appointment would be more agreeable to him. This reduces the present Washtenaw county list of possible candidates to two, Hon. A. J. Sawyer and Hon. J. T. Jacobs.

Do not these preach a sermon for hard times? Let all expenses except for schools be cut off and deferred and the rate reduced at least as low as in Grand Rapids, which is six times as large and grows much more rapidly than Ann Arbor. Let us hear from others.

ONE WHO PAYS.

To Wit:

It is generally supposed that the average law student is satisfied by the development of eloquence. The class of '94, however, has proven an exception to the rule and today launches upon the public an annual entitled "To Wit." It is a bound volume consisting of 240 pages, printed on beautiful enameled paper and bound in cloth with the title embossed in silver in a unique design on the front cover. The first fifty pages are devoted to brief summaries of the life of each member of the greatest class which ever entered the university. In this respect the book is eminently complete. Following this are some interesting class statistics. The class numbers 289 members, of which the oldest, Pres. Minahan, is 34, while the babe is E. C. C. Hennings aged 19. Thirty-five states and territories are represented, Michigan being in the lead with 86 and Illinois following, with 37. Politically the class has 12 republicans, 94 democrats, 9 prohibitionists, 1 woman suffragist, and 1 single tax. One reported himself as a "Black Republican" and one as "Democrat in semipiternum." He will probably die young. There are 27 "undecided." Those who have reached their present stage in life in that state will probably always remain "undecided." Following these statistics is a brief biography of each member of the law faculty, including Pres. Angell. With each of these sketches is given a splendid half-tone engraving of the subject. Without exception these cuts are the best that have ever appeared in any Ann Arbor publication. Following these is a cut of the "original faculty" of the law department, with an interesting sketch of the same by Judge T. M. Cooley. Other articles are: Judge T. M. Cooley, by Pres. Angell; Write a Poem for To Wit; by Walter Herman Kirk; Christian H. Buhl, by Dean Knowlton; A Postscript, by Prof. B. M. Thompson; The Practice Court, by Prof. Mechem; Class History, by Pres. Minahan; A Law Student's Dream, by Victor H. Ringer; and "To Wit," a poem by W. H. S. A few brief editorials give the editors a chance to express themselves, which with a list of campus organizations, and a paying lot of advertisements complete the volume. The book is one that will be highly prized by every member of the senior law class and others interested in that department. One of the most interesting articles is the sketch of the life of Christian H. Buhl whose munificent benefactions have made the law library one of the finest in the United States. The only other law school in the country which publishes an annual is that of Yale University. The Register Publishing Company is to be congratulated upon the character of the work done upon this publication, the quality of which has, we believe, never been surpassed by any other office in Michigan.

Bowditch & House have removed their laundry to the new block erected this spring on E. Liberty by Miss Sager. These young men now have one of the most thoroughly equipped laundries in Michigan, and with first-class workmen which they have employed, are prepared to turn out work second to none. The boys have gone to large expense in establishing their plant, but they will no doubt secure ample patronage to make the business pay well.

Sam Wooster, who for many years past has been quite a character in this locality, died near Fowlerville several days ago at the advanced age of 90 years. He had been in this county and other counties as far back as the memory of the oldest inhabitant extends. For many years he had led a roving existence, making his winter quarters at the county houses and with the opening of spring taking to the road again. He was a man of ordinary intelligence, and there is a tradition that disappointment in early life made him dispondent and for many years he had led the life of a tramp.

Ann Arbor is not a particularly wealthy town, but she pays her Mayor the same salary that Ypsilanti pays hers, viz.: to-wit: namely: one dollar a year. Mayor Thompson has served a full year and has received his dollar in gold, suitably engraved by special resolution of the Council. The engraving cost one dollar and a half. Mayor Scovill will complete his year on the first Monday in May and will draw his full year's pay from our city treasury. No one ought to complain at these necessary expenditures. We can't expect to have the advantages of city life, like mayors and such things, without paying for them.—Ypsilanti Commercial.

Ann Arbor is to have a Republican club. It will be used to knock the eternal stuffing out of Washtenaw's Democratic office seekers.—Dexter Leader.

SKETCHES OF OUR CITY.

Outlines and Incidents of Ann Arbor's Founding and Growth. Written Expressly for The Register by Prof. A. Ten Brook.

XXIX. THE PRESS.

This series of sketches could scarcely be deemed complete without some notice of the founding in Ann Arbor of the art which has revolutionized the society of Christendom. But the notice must treat chiefly of origins, not of each separate enterprise in the printer's art. This is, indeed, a distinction which has been kept in view throughout this series. The purpose has been to show how things started and got under way; not to trace their endless details onward towards the present time.

The first newspaper was issued here November 18th, 1829. It was called the Western Emigrant and was published and edited at first by Thomas Simpson, put passed after five weeks of existence into the hands of Judge Dexter, who associated with himself Mr. George Corseus in the editorial work. Mr. Corseus had been employed on the Advertiser in Detroit and had the education of the time in journalistic work.

Since newspapers came into existence a number of an issue floated down from a past age has been the best means of obtaining a stereoscopic view of the condition of the place of publication for the time of the issue, editorials, communications, selections and advertisements all bring noted for the purpose.

To state the political complexion of the Emigrant would bring an unknown world before the vast majority of our people. Few of the present day who have not made a close study of our political history know that from 1827 to about 1840 there was a political party known as Anti-Masons. It grew out of the abduction in 1826 from Canandaigua, N. Y., confinement in the Niagara county jail and later murder of one William Morgan for revealing in a book which he had in manuscript ready for publication, the secrets of the Masonic fraternity. The party grew so strong as to carry generally the elections of some states; Pennsylvania elected the nominee of this party for governor at least once, and in 1832 Vermont gave its electoral vote to William Wirt, of Maryland, and Amos Ellmaker, of Pennsylvania, for president and vice-president of the United States. The Emigrant, the first, and during its existence under that name, the only newspaper of Ann Arbor, with Honorable Samuel W. Dexter as its responsible editor, held up the claims of this party.

It will perhaps not be out of place here to inform the reader that Ann Arbor had among its early prominent citizens a man whom a distinct oral tradition has connected somewhat intimately with the affair of Morgan. I will tell the story by a little diversion into the field of anecdote. It may illustrate the position of the party of the Emigrant.

The late Henry W. Rogers used to beckon me as I passed to a seat on his veranda (corner of Huron and Division-streets) for a talk. At one time it turned upon the late William L. Marcy, Secretary of State under President Pearce. We had both known Mr. Marcy and I made some reference to the classic joke about his making the state pay for mending his pantaloons, upon which Mr. Rogers proceeded to tell me of its origin, as follows:

"The excitement was so great that a western judge could not be trusted to preside at the trial of the men implicated in the affair of Morgan, and Marcy was sent on from Albany. He boarded during the trial at a hotel in Lockport, and at one time directed the landlord to send a pair of pantaloons to a tailor for repairs, the expense of which was charged as an item in his hotel-bill, the whole passed the auditor's office and was paid, the item for repairing the garment not having been noticed. When Marcy was up a few years later for governor, some whig had fished up this item for canvassing purposes and in the little village of Bath, Steuben county, where I then lived, the whigs had suspended by a card drawn over the street a large pair of pantaloons, with a great patch on the part which, with a man on the bench, would be likely to wear through first. I stayed around while the poles were closed for dinner and observed a man from the country who was looking around as though he wished to learn something. He finally came to me to know 'who the man was that wore the patched trousers.' 'I said to him that's Judge Marcy, William L. Marcy.' 'Well,' said he, 'I think I shall vote for a man who wears the patched trousers.' 'I suppose' continued Mr. R. 'he thought that one who wore patched garments would make an economic governor. So you see that the whigs procured one vote and I think they did a great many for Mr. Marcy by using the story of the patched pantaloons in the canvass.'

I then said to Mr. R. "You can perhaps see from here the north side of that old-fashioned red brick house at the corner of Huron and Fifth streets; Judge Kinne occupies it." 'Yes,' he replied, 'what of it?' 'That house,' I replied, 'was built and occupied to the time of his death by William R. Thompson, who was sheriff of Niagara County, N. Y., at the time of Morgan's abduction and was implicated so far as this that he allowed the abductors the use of the jail to imprison their victim, which he had no right to do without judicial action. Although he was safe from any further proceedings against him, such was the excitement in western New York, that his desire for personal comfort brought him to this place.'

It ought to be added here that Mr. Rogers told me at the same time that he himself was a mason and deemed the institution a good one, but had no doubt that masons abducted and murdered Morgan, though not by the action of any lodge.

We had here, then, from 1829 to 1836 one newspaper only and that in the interests of the Anti-Masonic party, and one man who was implicated in the Morgan tragedy.

The Ann Arbor Press will be continued as the subject of my next.

Grand Opera House.

Frank Tucker, who appears at the Grand Opera house next week, carries no band this year. Last year while performing at Lansing the leader of the band was struck by a street car during the parade and died from the effects of his injuries. Ill luck seemed to follow his brother musicians thereafter, and the climax was reached when on Christmas morn. at Woodstock, Ont., the opera house where Frank was playing burned to the ground, destroying all the music, uniforms and nearly all the instruments. It was then dispensed with, and the expense of carrying the musicians was spent in elaborating the stage performance, as after all that is the drawing attraction, with the result that he now boasts of one of the best and most complete popular priced companies ever organized, and one which would stand comparison with many high priced attractions. Frank is in Jackson this week playing to packed houses, a result most gratifying and well earned. The great four act play, "The Outcast," will be the opening bill Monday night.

E. H. Andrews & Son, of No. 9 North Main-st., are in the field with something entirely new for the benefit of their customers. House cleaning, scowls, cross words, "swars," cold victuals and mumps have struck Milan. Just think of it, all in a moment as it were.

Mr. Carlos Allen, near Milan, was seriously hurt Thursday by a premature explosion of giant powder, while out blasting stumps. His hat was blown from his head about 20 feet and his clothing was torn in pieces. He was hurt on the back of the head and his spine and one of his thighs were badly hurt, but there are hopes of his recovery as no bones were broken.

WEBSTER.

Miss Jeanette West, of Ann Arbor, was the guest of Mrs. Scadin last week.

Miss Jennie Latson and Mrs. George Latson, of Howell, spent a day in town.

Mr. Isaac Terry and Mr. and Mrs. Baumgardner attended the Jackson Association of Congregational churches held at Jackson last week.

A large delegation of the Webster Christian Endeavor society attended the county convention at Dexter, Friday. All report a most helpful and enthusiastic meeting.

Mr. Nagamasa Minoda, of the U. of M. spoke last Sunday morning on Japan. He said that the modern improvements in street car, telegraph, telephone, etc., are in vogue there as here. The climate is similar to Michigan. The religion is Buddhist; 300 years ago it was Roman Catholic in parts, but this was soon rooted out. The people, while they now do not persecute Christianity, are somewhat indifferent to any religion. Hence a prospect for Christianity. The Dutch and Spaniards made an opening in 1600.

WHITMORE LAKE.

Fleet Whitmore on the sick list for the past week but we are glad to learn he is now rapidly improving.

Our two popular hotels have undergone a general overhauling and present an inviting appearance. They anticipate a busy summer. May their predictions prove true.

Capt. E. Snell has just completed a new dock and repainted his handsome little steamer, Lizzie Payne, and she is now ready to glide over the foaming tide with timbers stout and strong.

Owing to Mr. C. O. Macham's removal from town, the male quartette was broken up but Rev. Henry Shire filled the link (not that the Rev. gentleman is the missing link) and now there is music in the air.

We see the bills are posted for the drama "Adrift," which will be presented at the Lake House, Saturday evening, April 28, by the Good Templars. Everybody and their families come. The South Lyons Eureka Guards will give an exhibition drill on the green before the performance begins.

All Hope Gone

Eight Years of Suffering—Death Would Have been Relief

But Hood's Sarsaparilla Effected a Perfect Cure.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.: "For about eight years I have patiently suffered from a discouraging and weakening failure of the liver, kidneys and bladder. During this long time I suffered everything but death. Different medicines were taken but without any avail. It was on the fifth of August, 1891, that the doctor told my mother that he

Had Not the faintest Ray of Hope of the recovery of her child. For eight weeks I lived on nothing but brandy and beef-tea. I could not even keep milk on my stomach. In May I was just able to be taken to a hospital, where I remained till January, 1893. The physician declared my case incurable. All hope was gone, but I decided to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. From the day I began to take the medicine I began to feel better. I have taken several bottles and have been able to assist my mother in light household duties. I surely owe my life to that great medicine, Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Words Cannot Express the condition I was in before I took Hood's Sarsaparilla. It can only be realized by experience and few live to pass through and get better from such a complication of diseases." MISS ORTENCIA E. ALLEN, Salem, Michigan.

N. B. If you decide to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, do not be induced to buy any other instead.

Hood's Pills cure liver ills, constipation, biliousness, jaundice, sick headache, indigestion.

NIGHTINGALES.

"Beautiful must be the mountains whence ye come,
And bright in the fruitful valleys the streams wherefrom
Ye learn your song."

"Where are those starry woods? Oh, might I wander there
Among the flowers which in that heavenly air
Bloom the year long."

"Nay, barren are those mountains and spent the streams.
Our song is the voice of desire that haunts our dreams—
A throe of the heart
Whose pining visions dim, forbidden hopes profound,
No dying cadences nor long sigh can sound
For all our art."

"Alone aloud in the raptured ear of men
We pour our dark nocturnal secret, and then,
As night is withdrawn
From these sweet springing meads and bursting boughs of May,
Dream while the innumerable choir of day
Welcomes the dawn."

—Robert Bridges.

A Turkish Wedding.

An artistic mistress of the ceremonies, being congratulated on the success with which she had managed the details of an English wedding, remarked impatiently that there had been one blot on the scene—namely, the bridegroom. She only wished it could have been arranged for him and his black coat to remain outside in the brougham till the thing was over.

Had she received an invitation to a Turkish wedding, as once by good luck did a party of English ladies, among whom was the writer of the present sketch, her wish might have been gratified, as it is quite possible to attend such a function without even catching a passing glimpse of the crimson fez of the husband elect.

The latter spends the hours of his bridal day in getting married to himself—that is, he visits the priest and the notary, takes out and signs his marriage contract, attends a religious service at the mosque, partakes of a sumptuous breakfast with his friends, and as the ceremonies cover a considerable portion of the week I should not be surprised to hear that during the time he even goes on a wedding tour in solitude and on his own account.—London Graphic.

A Searching Examination.

A sailor who desired to re-enlist in the service of the navy for a cruise was rejected by the examining board for defective eyesight. He had made a good record, and naval academy officers, including the surgeons who had been compelled to make an unfavorable report in his case, interested themselves in his behalf. He finally went to Washington and armed with the recommendations from the naval academy urged his claims before the surgeon general. "Do you see the Washington monument out that window?" asked that official. "Yes, sir," promptly replied the sailor. To test his eyesight as well as his honesty another question was propounded, "See that sparrow on the top of the monument?" Without hesitation the sailor replied, "No, sir." "Neither do I," added the chief examining officer. "Your eyesight seems to be good enough, and I shall at once order your reinstatement in the navy."—Baltimore Sun.

Pickwick Revived.

In a corner's court in London recently the following conversation, which reads as if taken directly from Dickens, occurred:

"What's your name, sir?" inquired the judge.

"Sam Weller, my lord," replied that gentleman.

"Do you spell it with a V or a W?" inquired the judge.

"That depends upon the taste and fancy of the speller, my lord," replied Sam. "I never had occasion to spell it more than once or twice in my life, but I spell it with a V."

Here a voice in the gallery exclaimed aloud: "Quite right, too, Samivel. Put it down a we, my lord, put it down a we."—New York Press.

INDIA'S SACRED MONKEY TEMPLE.

An Edifice Where Long Tailed Quadrupeds Live Free From Interference.

Among the thousand or more temples and shrines with which the holy Hindoo city of Benares is endowed, visitors generally find the great temple dedicated to the worship of the goddess Durga one of the most interesting. It is known to Europeans as the monkey temple, because in and around its precincts many hundreds of sacred monkeys roam about without interference. The temple is situated in the southern extremity of the city. It was erected during the last century by the Ranees Bhawani of Natre, in honor of Siva's wife, the terrific goddess who is supposed to delight in death and slaughter, and of whom the poor believers in the various attributes of the deities comprising the Hindoo pantheon stand in the greatest dread. A correspondent of the London Graphic writes as follows regarding the place:

"The Durga Kund is conspicuous in this city of temples for the grace and simplicity of its architecture. It adjoins a tank which is the finest in Benares and occupies the central portion of a quadrangle, the walls being stained red with ochre. The sacred portion of the temple consists of 12 finely carved pillars standing on a marble platform and supporting a heavy roof. The platform is about four feet from the ground and is ascended by a flight of low steps on each side of the square. The temple is well provided with the necessary instruments for creating the frightful noises which emanate from these abodes of idolatry all over India. Drums of huge dimensions, gongs, bells and tom-toms are all at the service of the priests in performing the rites required of them. But the antics of the monkeys which make this temple their home are, next to its architecture, the most attractive feature of the place.

"The goat's blood with which the walls are sprinkled and the sacrifices that are known to take place here to appease the wrath of Siva and his terrifying spouse are rather revolting to a Christian, but the grotesque play of the monkeys, their importunate begging, the pranks they enact on one another and the graceful agility they are constantly displaying supply a perpetual source of amusement which one is apt to think must prove rather distracting to the devout Hindoos who come here to worship. These sacred monkeys are of the genus Semnopithecus entellus, popularly known as the long tailed Indian monkey.

"A few years ago, as no one dared to molest these animals, they not only increased rapidly in numbers, but, growing to be extraordinarily bold, developed alarming thieving propensities. The annoyance they caused amounted to a public nuisance, for no house in the place was safe from their depredations. At last the trouble grew so serious that some reduction in the number of these adept thieves became a necessity, although the prejudices of the people were against any such steps being taken. In the end the government was requested to interfere, and waiving aside all other considerations but that of public policy the authorities had many hundreds—report says many thousands—captured and sent away. Nevertheless there are plenty of them left, and they certainly constitute one of the sights of a city that is probably in many respects the most interesting in the world."

"Until?" said Kathleen, secretly excited, with a lovely rose at full bloom in either cheek.

"Until I have opened the ball with you at the palace next Thursday. It's against precedent. It will shock certain people. It will immensely shock my mother, the princess of Brindisi. But I vow to you that I shall not dance the first quadrille, that all the duchesses and archduchesses and princesses must do without me, provided you refuse this little request of mine. Now, will you refuse, or will you be kind and consent?" She saw that he was greatly excited. She realized that unwittingly she had captivated him, a young man of about her own age and full as was she herself with the power to love, even to worship. She could not, as a woman, fail to understand the tremendous honor that he paid her. For a moment she forgot Alonzo. This man was a king, and womanlike she forgot the man she loved better than throngs of kings.

"Will you consent?" he persisted; and she scanned his face, thinking how manly, how noble he looked. How every inch royal.

"Yes, monsieur," she answered, knowing well the exultant delight of her mother on learning of this brilliant honor, no matter what might be the stern disapprobation of the court.

Just then her mother's voice broke upon her ear. She started, half because the sound was not further away and half because it jarred so on her new, pleased mood.

"My dear Kathleen," her mother began.

But it was too late. Eric, slipping away from two or three ladies with whom he had been at odds in some gay argument, darted forward, but he also found that it was too late.

"Lonz," he said, catching his friend by the arm.

But Alonzo, who had arrived from Munich a day or two earlier than he had himself expected to come, pressed forward, seeing the king and never dreaming of whom else he was destined to see. He had secured two or three really superb pictures in the Bavarian capital, and was anxious to tell Clarimond of this trouvaille. As he reached the king's presence, however, he abruptly perceived the truth and recoiled, growing pale.

Clarimond noticed nothing, however. Kathleen thoroughly controlled herself, as did her mother. In a way they were both prepared for the meeting.

"My friend!" said the king, extending to Alonzo his hand. "You have returned sooner than I expected." Then there was a pause, after which Clarimond, with all his accustomed graciousness, continued:

"Let me present you, Lispenard, to these ladies, who are, I believe, your countrywomen."

And at that point Alonzo quite lost his head. It seemed to himself afterward, that while hurrying away he must have fallen there on the terrace before the palace, if Eric's arm had not strongly thrust itself within his own, and perhaps, too, if Eric's voice had not harshly burst upon his singing brain.

"Lonz! Lonz!" this voice called to him. "You're disgracing yourself before the king."

"I can't help it. Let me get away." "Lonz!—Oh, very well, we're both getting away, it strikes me, as fast as we're able—look here, now, Lonz, if I'd known you were coming—"

"Yes, Eric; I understand. Come right on. When we're at home we can talk it over."

At home they did talk it over. When Alonzo had heard everything, and when his mood was thoroughly calmer, he said, with a kind of dogged dullness, to Eric:

"I suppose it's all up with me. I might as well send in my resignation at once."

"Nonsense," replied Eric.

"What I did, you know, was a great breach of etiquette."

"The king isn't a slave to etiquette." "Still, I rushed off at scandalous haste. What would you do? Write him a letter and confess everything?"

"Yes," Eric said, after a reflective pause. "That's precisely what I would do, my dear friend. And if you want him to sympathize with you, be as untruthful as you can manage."

"What do you mean, Eric?"

"Don't let the full facts transpire. Don't tell Clarimond how badly you behaved to that poor girl."

"Ah, you will have it that I behaved badly!" said Alonzo, as he quitted the room to write his proposed letter.

It was now almost dark, and dinner would be served at eight. Alonzo lighted the studio and then seated himself at his writing desk. The words were slow in coming; he felt the excessive awkwardness of this placating epistle, and yet did he not owe it to Clarimond, his master, his benefactor, his protector? Would not silence in him be churlish at such a time as this?

Suddenly a certain thought crossed his mind, and he rose, flinging his pen aside. In one corner of the room stood his easel, draped. He drew back its covering and looked at the canvas thus revealed. It was the picture of Kathleen.

Just before leaving for Munich he had given the portrait what he felt were his absolutely final touches. He had not known then how good it was—how definitely and vitally the wistful head bloomed forth from shadow. Yes, Eric had been right. His powers were slow and brooding; so:

they were like those of the poet who must "beat his music out" in travail of self distrust. But here was plainly a masterpiece, nevertheless. And yet, as he watched this perfect portrait of a woman whom he still hungrily loved, though she was lost to him forever, a sense of the terrible irony of such a picture pierced him to the soul. The very excellence of its art would be an incessant jeer. Why had he not foreseen this? An abrupt desire to ruin the picture now swept down upon him, oddly blended with the egotism of the creator, an element always potent in every true artist's mind. He actually seized his palette knife and stood undecided as to whether he should rip the work into tatters or spare it for future hours of mingled happiness and grief.

While he thus hesitated, a knock sounded at the studio door. "Come in," he said, startled, casting the palette knife on the floor, and turning to meet, as he supposed, Eric Thaxter.

But it was not Eric. To his very great consternation, it was the king.

Clarimond seemed repose itself. "You must pardon me," he said, "for intruding upon you like this. No doubt I bore you horribly. I do not? That is pleasant to hear. Pray let me take this chair, and you—will you have the kindness to sit near me? That is right. I wanted to stretch out my hand to you and clasp it for a moment—like that. You see, I am certain you are very unhappy, and when my friends are unhappy I am always full of sympathy for them."

The king's hand was dropping his own while Alonzo, with drooping eyes, miserably murmured:

"Oh, monsieur, I have behaved with an immense vulgarity!"

"Vulgarity?" said Clarimond, in a musing voice, which had the effect of giving his listener a chance to escape from the toils of embarrassment, just as the young sovereign's marvelous tact had no doubt suggested to him that it would do. "Vulgarity," he went on, "is the intimate ally of passion. And passion is naturalness. We can't always keep the landscapes of our lives full of clipped shrubs, like an Elizabethan garden. Tell me, now, mon ami, were you not once engaged to marry this Mlle. Kennard?"

"Yes, monsieur."

"So I gathered, from the tumultuous things that her mother said after you left. Mademoiselle scarcely spoke at all. Her mother had an extraordinary amount to say."

"And against myself, of course, monsieur!"

The king stared for a moment down at the carved agate of his cane handle. "Well," he at length said, smiling, "she was not merciful to you. But I did not believe her, and it struck me that mademoiselle did not believe her, either. You will think me a sad busybody—"

"You, monsieur?"

"—But I should be glad to hear your version of the affair. Shall I tell you why?" He spoke with marked eagerness, and yet the instant that his eyes fairly met those of Alonzo he averted his look and went on in a queerly-altered voice. "It is because the young lady, Mlle. Kathleen—is not that her name?—has greatly interested me. After a few seconds he repeated the words: "Greatly interested me. Yes," he soon continued, "if you would tell me just what occurred I should feel most grateful for your confidence."

"Permit me, then, to tell you, monsieur, said Alonzo, and he at once began a recital, in which he adhered to the strictest truth with what might be called a very carnival of conscientiousness. Remembering Eric's harsh judgment of his conduct, he allowed this to cast upon his disclosures a self-accusative gloom. Ending, he said: "I fear that I exacted too much. I am conscious of this now, monsieur, though I once thought myself sternly wronged."

The king rose. "It all seems to me the fault of that very dominating person, the young lady's mother," he said. "You are generous to Mr. Mlle. Kathleen of all blame as you do—but it is like you." He stretched out his hand, which Alonzo sprang forward to grasp with both his own. "I have known for some time that you had a large, humane heart. I did not need Eric to tell me that."

"Eric will rarely see my faults, monsieur," faltered Alonzo.

The king now turned his eyes toward the picture on the easel. "Ah! you have been painting something," he said, same fine security of treatment, the same rich subtlety of color."

"Monsieur! No!" the king replied, almost irritably. He turned toward Alonzo and surveyed him for a moment with an odd, restless, enkindled glance. "Good God!" he hurried on, gnawing his lips, "how I envy you for being able to paint like that—to paint her like that!" There was now a dead silence. Alonzo, with wholly new emotions, watched him while he gave the picture a fresh impetus of survey.

"You can name your price for this!" he suddenly said, turning and facing his companion once more. "I want it. I want it very much."

"I did not wish to dispose of it, monsieur."

"Not wish to dispose of it?" shot the quick and caustic response. "But, man, I will pay you a fortune for it! Come, now. Whatever you please to ask shall be yours by to-morrow morning." And then the eyes of these two men very meaningfully met. Clarimond read in the others' gaze a refusal cold and obdurate—and perhaps he read there the cause of this refusal as well. However it may have been, an abrupt change took place in him. "You spoke of vulgarity not long ago," he said, visibly disarrayed and walking toward the door of the studio. "It is I who am vulgar now. Pardon me." And at once he hastened from the apartment. With his eyes fixed on the portrait, Alonzo sank into a chair. "The king loves her!" left his lips in a hurried whisper. He closed his eyes, clenched his hands and a surge of ungovernably jealous feeling seemed to flood his soul.

CHAPTER X

Clarimond, with scarcely more than a nod and a handclasp to Eric, who waited below, sprang into the carriage which had brought him from the palace and returned there at once. He chose to dine alone in his own suite of chambers, and at dinner drank a little more wine than usual. Afterward he went into his mother's apartments, where she was receiving a very select assemblage that chiefly consisted of the highest Saltravian nobility. Having saluted his mother he moved about the rooms for some time, and at length paused quite a while before Bianca d'Este, who was looking exceedingly handsome in a gown of blue satin embroidered with silver.

"The princess almost gave up expecting you," she said, looking at him very earnestly with her sweet, infantile, china-blue eyes.

"Am I so late?" said Clarimond.

"Not that, monsieur; but we feared—or, I should say, her highness feared—lest other attractions would detain you."

He saw the slip innuendo, but chose to pretend that it escaped him.

"Really, I do not understand," he said. "Other attractions?"

Bianca flushed at her own boldness. And yet the courage of desperation possessed her soul. That soul was no longer in bondage to the church. A new religion had enthralled it. Women have rarely found it difficult to love kings, and Clarimond, if he had no royalty for a background, would have appealed to almost any woman's heart. As it was he fired both the heart and imagination of Bianca d'Este. In spirit she was at his feet with that sort of genuflection which is tinged by a pang of intoxicated recklessness. And yet her mien (ice over flame) was calm enough as she now replied:

"I mean the handsome young American girl, monsieur, whom you honored so greatly this afternoon."

"You saw me?" Clarimond rather lightly said. "And you think I honored her? It seemed to me as if honors were easy, as one says in English whist!"

"Oh, monsieur!" Bianca cried; and while she looked into his face, which of late had grown to her more than kingly—had grown to her, indeed, almost like the face of a god—she ardently persisted: "For you to speak like that! For you to even hint that a mere nobody should not be honored, and very greatly honored, by the least smile from you!"

He watched her for a moment as though she half irritated, half shocked him. "I am a man," he then said, with great simplicity and gentleness. "How can I be more, and why should I not dislike hearing it suggested that I am more?"

"You are a king," replied Bianca. "You are a king with a long ancestry of kings behind you!"

He laughed softly and shrugged his shoulders, glancing about him at the walls of the festal room in which they stood, with its panelings of white and gold, with its huge clusters of wax lights for side chandeliers beaming above other huge clusters of prisms like stalactites, and with its ceilings where cupids drove in chariots drawn by butterflies through gorges and over cascades of rosy and azure cloud.

"It means very little to be a king."

nowadays," he said. "At least it means very little to me."

"I am so sorry," she answered. "I am so intensely sorry!"

"You have been talking with my mother," he replied. "It is easy to see that you are full of her views and prejudices."

"No, they are mine," she averred. "Call them what you please. I—I hate so to address you as 'monsieur,' but this is your command, and what can one do but obey it? You are royal, and 'majesty' is your rightful form of address. And then the way in which you despise and flout all ceremonial! Oh, this is harder to bear still! You should have entered here, just as you should walk abroad, with your equerries, your gentlemen in waiting. Ah, it is terrible, terrible! It saddens me, it wounds me, to see you cast aside the rights and dignities of your great birth. I do not wonder that your mother sorrows. It is not mere pride that makes her feel as she does. It is a sense—oh, pardon me, for I speak from the very inmost depths of my heart!—a sense of your having been appointed by Heaven itself to rule over your people, and of your treating this holy mission as though it concerned some slight and paltry office!"

As Bianca d'Este ended, the king took her hand in his own for a moment. He felt that it was trembling and he saw that there were tears in her bright, wide, childish eyes.

"You are very sincere," he said, with a smile that was not exempt from a certain delicate melancholy. "A great many people, since history began, have been quite wrong and yet excessively sincere." He paused, still holding her hand, and it flew about the great room like wildfire that he was paying this public courtesy to the Italian girl whom his mother so avidly desired him to marry. "Perhaps, my dear Bianca d'Este," he presently resumed, with a faint, enigmatic smile loitering at the corners of his lips, "you are right, practically, after all, and I, practically, am in error. The whole affair of conservatism against liberalism grows harder to manage, I imagine, every new day of my reign. Well, I thank you for your lecture, altis sima; and with his odd smile fading a little, yet not wholly dying, he dropped Bianca's hand and passed from her presence.

He had detested the idea of this entertainment-to-night. Its limitations in the way of asking only certain guests disgusted him. Like all the receptions given by his mother since her appearance in his realm, it positively reeked with what he held to be the worst creeds of caste. There were present several nobles, on this particular occasion, who had only deigned to come, as Clarimond well knew, at the eager solicitation of the princess. They were mostly men past middle age, and their young king had horrified them by his liberalism. They held his person sacred, and were inflexible in their fealty to him, never forgetting that their ancestors, through centuries back, had fought and died in the service of his. But they abhorred his modernity of ideas, and had suffered keen pangs at the audacious changes wrought in their land. Political no less than social and physical, these changes had affected them with mingled melancholy and horror. Two or three of them had chosen to hide their chagrin amid the gayeties of Paris, where their great wealth and princely Saltravian birth had secured welcomes for them among the most exclusive sets. One of these latter, a man about forty years old, with black, flashing eyes, olive skin and a little curly beard and moustache, held an exceptional position as cousin twice removed from the king. His fortune was very large, and he passed most of his year in the French capital, whence he had but lately returned. He had been for a long time past one of the bitterest of the malcontents; he was irascible, and notoriously haughty to all inferiors. While the king had made his first tour through the ball-room every eye had sought his own and every head had bowed. But it had struck him, however vaguely, that this particular nobleman had bowed with a certain distinct stiffness. As Clarimond now drew near his mother, he fixed his eyes full on the handsome, swarthy face at her side, and said, with an accent of quiet good humor:

"Ah, Philibert, so you're back once again?" At the same moment he put forth his hand.

Prince Philibert advanced, and taking the king's hand in his own with a reverent droop of the head, firmly, even resolutely, kissed it. A smile of proud pleasure swept over the face of Princess Brindisi. This was the immortal usage of the Saltravian court—for a peer or peeress, on returning after an absence and being addressed by the king, to give his hand an obsequious kiss.

NEWSPAPER FARMING.

Come, all ye lowly farmers,
Come, all ye granger folk,
Who in the cultivation
Of wheat have gone dead broke;
Since in the rural precincts
You cannot find your luck,
Come here and learn the secret
Of making garden truck.

High up above the pygmies
Who rush along the street
There toils a gifted worker
Upon a morning sheet.
All night he looks at copy;
All night he handles news;
All day he sweats his thinker
And much of wisdom brews.

He grieves to think that farmers
Should play a losing hand
At plowing up the bosom
Of unresponsive land,
And in his grief he murmurs,
"With crops diversified
The farmer would be in it,
With fortune to his aid."

So come, ye lowly plowmen,
Who thirst for something good,
And learn the golden secret,
For be it understood
That here we have a writer
Who deftly does the trick
Of making country butter
By the paragraph or stick.

Relieving Snowbound Passengers.

"I was snowbound in Michigan a few years ago, between Coopersville and Nunica," said a traveling salesman. "The snow was four feet deep on a level and still falling. The passengers had eaten up everything the train boy had, including even mixed candies, and children were crying for food. A grocery salesman offered his samples of tea and coffee, and these were boiled at the engine. Then I started, accompanied by another passenger, to go to a farmhouse to get some bread and butter. We waded through the snow, and by the time we got there were nearly frozen, but we could detect the odor of cooking victuals and felt that our mission would be successful.

"In answer to our knock a woman came to the door and flatly refused to let us have bread at any price. Five large loaves, just baked, were on a table and a jar of butter near it. I told my friend to go to the front door and argue with them while I stole the food. This programme was carried out, and I started back through the snow with the bread and butter. I had not gone far before I could hear the farmer behind swearing at me. Then came a race through the snow. Twice I fell down and soaked the bread in the snow, but I hung on to it and reached the train at the same time the farmer did. There a hundred passengers were ready to help me, and we had one square meal. I had offered $1 a loaf for the bread and started to make the promise good, but the passengers insisted that the man should get nothing except the empty butter jar." —St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Complexion of a Chinese

Is not yellower than that of an unfortunate individual whose liver complaint has assumed the chronic form. The eyeballs of the sufferer assume a saffron hue, there is dull pain in the region of the organ affected, the tongue is coated, breath sour, sick headaches usually but not always occur, and there is sometimes dizziness on arising from a sitting posture. Constipation and dyspepsia are also attendants of this very common ailment, always in its aggravated form, liable to breed abscesses of the liver, which is very dangerous. Hosteter's Stomach Bitters wholly eradicates it, as well as the troubles complicated with it and which it originates. In chills and fever, a complaint which always yields to the Bitters, the liver is seriously involved. This fine alternative tonic removes costiveness and indigestion, rheumatic, nervous and kidney trouble and debility.

ALL ABOUT PENS.

An Interesting Account of Their Invention and Evolution.

Sharp pointed bodkins, made of bronze, of steel or of iron, were the first pens, and they were used for cutting out letters and hieroglyphics in the limestone, sandstone or steatite of eastern countries. Such pens were also used for writing on Assyrian tablets. The tablets were made of soft clay, and after receiving inscriptions were dried in the sun or baked in the fire.

In the far east and in Egypt the camel's hair pencil soon took the place of the metal bodkin. With the pencil letters were painted on the skins of animals and the bark of trees, in much the same manner that the Chinese draw them on paper at the present day.

In Persia, Greece and Syria wax and leaden tablets came into use, and the stylus became the popular pen. The stylus was made of bone, ivory or metal, with one end pointed and the other flattened. The flattened end was used to erase errors made in writing.

The use of parchment and papyrus, however, called for a more flexible pen than either the bodkin or the stylus, so reed pens were invented. For making these pens a peculiar kind of reed was used, which was shaped to a point and split, similar to the pens now in use.

In A. D. 553 it was discovered that quills made much better pens than reeds. The quills of the goose, the swan and the crow were used principally. Several centuries later, when writing paper was introduced into England, the quill pen was still the favorite writing instrument. However, the quill pens had been greatly improved, and those from Russia and Holland were excellent.

In the early part of the present century there was a demand for something better and more durable than quill pens. Accordingly a great many experiments were made with horn, glass, tortoise shell and finally with steel, silver and gold. It was soon found that pens made of horn and tortoise shell softened under the action of the ink and were not so good as quill pens. Nor were the silver pens very good. They were too elastic and too easily worn at the points.

In 1803 steel was tried in Wist's barrel pens, but being poorly made and very expensive they were not a success. At Birmingham, England, in 1830 the manufacture of steel pens began in earnest, and they proved to be excellent. The first gross of steel pens sold in Birmingham brought $36 at wholesale.

They were soon manufactured in great numbers and have been getting better and cheaper all the time, until now we can buy for a trifle the best steel pen made. Europe has always excelled in the manufacture of steel pens, and America is noted for the manufacture of gold pens. —Philadelphia Times.

IN THE QUICKSANDS.

Thrilling and Almost Fatal Adventure of a Pennsylvania Sportsman.

Quicksand swallowed W. A. Finley, a hotel proprietor of Norristown, Tuesday, to the waist, and but for the heroic assistance of two friends he would have met an awful doom.

Finley, William Shine and John Goodwin started out to catch snipe and snappers. They drove to Fairview and then started on foot up the Skippack creek, which flows a mile from the town. They chose this spot for their tour for game because it is rarely visited. Finley and Shine waded in the creek searching for snappers, while Goodwin remained on the bank gunning for snipe.

Without knowing it, Finley walked into a bed of quicksand. He did not realize for some minutes the peril he was in. Rapidly he began to sink, and then the horror of the threatened doom confronted him. He tried to lift his feet, but his legs had sunk to the tops of his boots in the consuming sand, and the water touched his waist. Finley pulled and tugged at his right leg. It yielded, but at the same time his left foot penetrated deeper and deeper into the mysterious substance. Then he reversed his efforts and with all his strength pulled at his left leg. It yielded, but the right leg went down to an alarming depth.

Finley called to Shine for help, and the latter responded quickly. He tried in vain at his own peril to extricate his friend. By this time the quicksand had almost swallowed Finley's legs, and the water was gradually rising and nearing his shoulders.

Then Goodwin was summoned. The victim was sinking more rapidly now, and the water was getting alarmingly near his chin. The combined efforts of the two friends checked the descent. They tugged for 10 minutes before Finley, utterly exhausted, was pulled from the quicksand. For curiosity they afterward tried to reach the bottom of the bed with long sticks. The sand was found to be over six feet deep. —Philadelphia Record.

A Blessing Indeed.

What would this poor, weak humanity do were it not for those noble restless spirits who are ever searching the caverns of knowledge for the good of mankind? Dr. Greene, of 35 W. 14th Street, New York, who a few years ago gave to the world that priceless boon, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, has now introduced another blessing for the sick and suffering. He is the most successful specialist in curing all nervous and chronic diseases, and he offers to everyone, far and near, the opportunity of consulting him, free of charge, through his system of letter correspondence.

Write him about complaint and send for his symptom blank, and he will return at exact explanation of your case with advice, free of charge, and tell you how you can be cured. He gives most careful and explicit attention to all letters, and his answer always gives the sufferer a perfect understanding of the disease. If you wish to avail yourself of this great physician's skill, write him at once about your disease and you will undoubtedly be cured.

A REMARKABLE CURE.

A Case of Piles of Eighteen Years' Standing, Cured by the Pyramid Pile Cure.

There are plenty of pile cures which give relief and sometimes cure a mild case of piles, but there is only one which can be depended upon with certainty to cure obstinate long standing cases, and that is the Pyramid Pile Cure.

Endorsements and testimonials are received daily from men and women whose integrity and reliability are above question and in this connection a letter received from the Rev. Jas. F. Westbrook of Bowne, Mich., may be of interest to pile sufferers who have sought in vain for a cure. He says:

I have used the Pyramid Pile Cure and I know that it is all that is claimed for it. I have been troubled with piles more or less for about eighteen years and I had tried other remedies, but the piles grew worse until about ten months ago I used the Pyramid Pile Cure. I gave almost instant relief and I have been free from piles ever since. Rev. Jas. H. Westbrook.

The remedy seems to act equally well in every form of piles, blind, bleeding, protruding or itching. It stops all pain almost immediately, allays irritation and removes constipation, and anyone who has suffered the annoyance and pain of a rectal trouble will appreciate the excellent results which invariably follow the first application of the Pyramid.

The Pyramid Pile Cure is prepared by the Pyramid Drug Co. of Albion, Mich., and for sale by druggists everywhere at one dollar per package.

Korean Use For Human Hair.

Human hair is in great demand in some of the countries of Europe, and the supply is said to be inadequate. Our consul in Korea points out that there is plenty and to spare in the Hermit Kingdom. "The Koreans," he adds, "have remarkably fine heads of hair, and they put their 'combs' to a use that I have never seen elsewhere. A very large number of the saddlecloths placed under the packs of their ponies are made of hair woven into coarse mats or bags, and the halters and head ropes of their animals are largely composed of the same material. I believe that human hair is largely exported from China to Europe, and Korea could furnish a large and cheap supply did the people know there was a demand for it." Here's a chance for some pioneer of commerce. —Westminster Gazette.

"Four-Track Series" Etchings.

The Passenger Department of the New York Central has just issued a series of eight beautiful etchings, which artistically outrank anything of the kind ever issued by a railroad company, while the absence of any objectionable advertising feature, renders them suitable for hanging in your office, library, or home. The titles are "Washington Bridge," "Rock of Ages, Niagara Falls," "Old Spring at West Point," "Round the Nose, Mohawk Valley," "No 999 and the DeWitt Clinton," "The Empire State Express," "Horse-Shoe Fall, Niagara," and "Gorge of the Niagara River."

These etchings are all printed on fine plate paper, 24 x 35 inches, suitable for framing. Copies may be procured at the office of W. B. Jerome, General Western Passenger Agent, 97 Clark Street Chicago, for fifty cents each, or will be mailed in stiff tubes, secure from injury, to any address, for 75 cents each, or any two of them to one address for $1.30, or any three or more ordered at one time to one address, 60 cents each, in currency, stamps, express or postal money order.

In China the name Chang is pronounced "Jong," with the long sound on the "o." This may account for the nickname "John" as applied to Chinamen.

TRADE MARK.
DR. A. OWEN.

A STATEMENT UNDER OATH.

MOUNT PLEASANT, MICH., August 15, 1892.

THE OWEN ELECTRIC BELT AND APPLIANCE CO.: Dear Sirs:—I now am able today, after having purchased one of your No. 4 Electric Belts with Spinal Appliance about one year ago, that I thank God I have found relief from my terrible suffering through the wonderful healing influence of your wonderful Body Belt. August 29, 1891, at which time I was a great sufferer, and had been for more than four years, from extreme nervous prostration, so much so that, on the least excitement, my whole nervous system would be all of a tremble from head to foot, and unable to control myself in the least, and would affect me to tears like a little child. I am a farmer by profession; in the fields, or at work on the farm, or at any excitement, it had the same effect. I could not lift the weight of five pounds. It so continued with increased suffering until I was unable to help myself, and for eight long months my suffering was intense. My stomach was so weak that I could not take any food but crackers and warm water for the above time. My kidneys were so weak that I could not retain my urine, it would pass from me continually, and I was under the necessity of leaving my couch from six to eight times of a night to void my urine, which was very painful. I was also troubled with severe constipation and piles, so that I was obliged to use injections to produce evacuation of the bowels. It was very distressing, so much so that I had to be lifted in and out of my bed for several months. The doctors could do me no good whatever, and I had made up my mind that there was no help for me this side of the grave. My limbs would become numb and cold, seemingly as ice, and I would try with hot bricks, rubbing and all other methods to restore the circulation and natural feeling, but all to no effect, and then it would pass off. Then again another attack would occur which would leave me helpless, and so continued periodically, and I could get no relief. The doctors told me that I must not do any work, and that it would be three years at least before I would be able to work. I agreed with them, for I could not nor did I ever expect to again. The whole world seemed to me a blank, and my vital forces all had left me, and my life was fast ebbing away from me through the loss of my life fluids, which doctors were unable even to check. I had given up all hope of ever getting help, and death in all its terrible forms stared me in the face, from which there seemed to be no avenue of escape from this living horror, of which no living person is able to know or feel, except his sufferings be as mine has been. In this state of suffering and agony I continued until about one year ago now I met a friend who, on seeing my helpless condition, advised me to try one of the Owen Electric Belts. For several weeks I doubted his statements about what he told me of the wonderful healing properties of it, but he was so earnest and persistent that I finally consented to send for one. He advised me to send for a No. 4 with spinal appliance, which I did, at a cost of $30.00, which is your price for No. 4 and spinal appliance. I will say here that it is the best $30.00 investment that I ever made in my life in the way of doctor's remedies or anything else, as I had spent dollars, up into the hundreds, but could get no relief whatever. As soon as I received the Belt and Appliance, I had it charged and adjusted and put it on, and in a short time after putting it on I began to feel wonderful soothing and gentle currents of its healing power passing all through me, clear to the end of my toes and fingers, a prickling sensation like thousands of needles. Many were the sleepless nights I had passed, unable to sleep but from one to two hours through the whole night for months. On the third night after wearing the Belt I slept until morning and awoke greatly refreshed. I was not disturbed nor did I feel better and weigh more than I have for the past ten years, and it seems I have a new lease of life. I cannot say enough in favor of your wonderful Electric Body Belt. It is far superior to all medicines compounded for the relief and cure of chronic and complicated diseases and broken down constitutions. I would not take $2,000 for my Belt if I could not get another like it. There is nothing like it for relief and cure where all other remedies fail. I can not praise your Belts enough, for what it has done for me words can not express. I will say here that I recommend the Owen Electric Belt to all suffering humanity who fail to find relief from other remedies. It is the messenger of quick relief and certain cure of all nervous debility and other nerve troubles. I know it will cure all diseases which you advertise it to cure.

This you may publish to let suffering humanity know there is relief and cure to be found in your wonderful Belt and Appliances.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 17th day of August, 1892.
D. E. LYON,
Notary Public.

PATENTS FOR INVENTIONS.

Equal with the interest of those having claims against the government is that of INVENTORS, who often lose the benefit of valuable inventions because of the incompetency or inattention of the attorneys employed to obtain their patents. Too much care cannot be exercised in employing competent and reliable solicitors to procure patents, for the value of a patent depends greatly, if not entirely, upon the care and skill of the attorney.

With the view of protecting inventors from worthless or careless attorneys, and of seeing that inventions are well protected by valid patents, we have retained counsel expert in patent practice, and therefore are prepared to Obtain Patents in the United States and all Foreign Countries, Conduct Interferences, Make Special Examinations, Prosecute Rejected Cases, Register Trade-Marks and Copyrights, Render Opinions as to Scope and Validity of Patents, Prosecute and Defend Infringement Suits, Etc., Etc.

If you have an invention on hand send a sketch or photograph thereof, together with a brief description of the important features, and you will be at once advised as to the best course to pursue. Models are seldom necessary. If others are infringing on your rights, or if you are charged with infringement by others, submit the matter to us for a reliable OPINION before acting on the matter.

CHINESE LANGUAGE.

SOME OF THE CURIOSITIES OF THE "EAR SPLITTING JARGON."

Musicians Say It Has an Affinity With the Notes of Birds—No Alphabet and No Parts of Speech—Some Amusing Examples of Chinese Talk.

The superficial observer often refers to the Chinese spoken speech as an "ear splitting jargon" and to the written speech as "hieroglyphics." Frequent visitors to any "Chinese quarter," notably a large "Chinatown" like that of Los Angeles, will soon become so familiar with this so called jargon as to note that it is far more musical than the English speech. Musicians are authority for the statement that the Chinese language has more affinity (when spoken) with the notes of birds than with the tones of any other language. This is perhaps because the Chinese, having no alphabet, must have many tone combinations to give the various expressions and meanings to the thousands of characters.

Having no alphabet, the Chinese language has more symbols than all of the alphabets in the universe combined, and there are more tone combinations for the expression of those symbols than in all other tongues. Each tone is attached to a character, and one character is made to mean several different things, according to the tone used. In Chinese the tone gives the meaning. A word spoken with a falling inflection means one thing, and quite another when spoken with a rising inflection. We often hear a Chinaman, as he walks along the street talking with his companion, utter a word in a falling inflection which sounds like n-go. This means "I." He is talking of himself—perhaps saying how great he thinks himself to be. But if he draws out the sound long and even he is calling some hoodlum a "goose." He gives the falling inflection to the first syllable, and the rising inflection to the last, and in a rather musical voice. This would be a difficult feat for an American.

No matter in what mood he may be, he may not and perhaps cannot change the accent. The voice may be louder or in a minor key, but the tones are as inflexible as written words and must be so used, or the exact meaning is lost. All the expressions of human passions—laughter or sorrow—must be expressed by the same inflexible words and precise accents. There are only five tones in the Chinese voice, but as every word has all of its syllables accented there are 25 permutations, and these are almost always in constant use, even in ordinary conversation. A question may be asked with or without a rising inflection, according to the word used.

Chinese adjectives are nouns. For "many thanks" it is "thank thank." A "great man" is "greatness man." Sometimes a noun is formed of a noun and a verb, as "barber," whom they call "shave-head teacher." The verbs have neither moods nor tenses, and when your laundryman wishes to tell you that "I have washed" he says, "I pass over wash." Their adverbs are mostly formed by joining together nouns and verbs, as "finish day" for "yesterday." To cook is to "eat rice." Every noun is plural and includes all there is of that article, unless it is limited by the expression "one piece," as "one piece house." Instead of "wife and children" they express "family and wife." The word woman means "father man." If repeated, it signifies "scolding." The noun always remains in the same shape, and the verb has but one form instead of the many known to the English language. The Chinese language has no declensions, subjunctions, moods, tenses, prepositions, conjunctions, adverbs, first, second and third persons, no singular and plural, and no gender except by the addition of a few participles in rare instances. It is evidently simple and easy to learn, one of the simplest and most curious things about it being, as above stated, that every noun, unless qualified otherwise, is plural.

There are about 60,000 characters used in the Chinese language proper, but the average Chinaman no more learns all of those characters than the everyday American learns the 100,000 words in the English language. The Chinaman, however, learns on the average more than does an American in a similar position in life. A Chinaman who can neither read nor write is a rarity. Chinese is not a monosyllabic language, as many suppose, and it is impossible to utter in Chinese any but the shortest sentences in monosyllables.

In writing the Chinaman makes one complicated but integral character for each word, but that word may be properly spoken in two, three or four syllables. His syllables are divided by no longer intervals than are his words, and that is what makes his language sound to a foreigner like a singsong jargon. We do not know whether he is telling a story or attempting a song. The Chinese perhaps think the same thing of an American, who bites off his words and swallows them or telescopes one into another.

Business men in this city thrown in contact with Chinese merchants who speak pure Chinese say that it is not difficult to learn. Instead of 26 letters, not including the useless &, the Chinese have 500 or 600 syllables, and these are combined in various forms to make the 60,000 words in their "dictionary." These syllables vary in meaning according to the tone in which they are spoken or the strokes used in writing them.—Los Angeles Cor. New York Post.

Starvation Among the Rich.

Death by starvation is a thing not restricted to periods of business depression nor to the poor. Perhaps there are more ill nourished people in proportion among the rich than among the poor. The number of persons that seek relief from threatened starvation in the exclusive milk diet is constantly on the increase, but it is a remedy almost of necessity confined to those who have sufficient control over their own doings to take a meal every hour and a half, a thing hardly consistent with earning a living at manual labor.—Philadelphia Press.

A D-NGEROUS PLIGHT.

One Old Sailor's Exciting Adventure With a Polar Bear in the Cold Regions.

There is an old soldier named Jake recently returned to San Francisco from an Arctic cruise, who has made up this mind not to go on another whaling expedition no matter what happens. The reason is this: On one occasion during his late voyage Jake was on the watch in the lookout cradle at the masthead, and it was night—that is, as much night as it ever gets up there in summer. The sun had been down about an hour and would rise again about an hour later.

It was a beautiful sight as the ship lay there in the ice, and the air seemed scintillating with a phosphorescent glow that penetrated everywhere and made no shadows. On all sides the pack ice lay close to the vessel and reached for miles in every direction, broken occasionally by a large berg or the faint outlines of another ship. The silence was profound. It seemed to produce a roaring sound like the waves of a distant ocean. Such surroundings will put a person in a semicomatose state, from which the slightest sound will awaken him with a start.

Jake suddenly saw something white in the gloom climbing the mast. His first impulse was to jump to the deck, but before he could act upon it the white object climbed through the lubber hole, and Jake then saw it was a polar bear. Jake realized that he was in a most dangerous position and began to think of means to escape. He called to the watch on deck below, but they couldn't hear. He tried to get out under the canvas, but the bear grabbed him and pulled him back. It began thumping him, and every time Jake attempted to move away it would growl. Suddenly his eyes lighted on a rope hanging to the deck just back of the cradle. By this means he thought he could reach the deck. To swing himself free was but the work of an instant, but the bear made a jump and caught hold of his foot. But a few vigorous kicks freed him, and then began a new terror. Perhaps the rope was not strong and would break, or he might miss the stay and swing against the mast and be dashed to death.

The moment in the air seemed years filled with horror, and several times Jake wished he had taken his chances with the bear. To grab the stay and hold on was the most difficult, and twice Jake's hands slipped and almost lost it.

When he reached the deck, he looked up and saw the rope swing back to the cradle, where the bear grabbed it. It tried to do as it had seen Jake do, but had no sooner swung clear than it slipped and fell to the deck. The crew had breakfast for breakfast.—San Francisco Item.

Nitric Acid—A Tin.

In a paper read before the London Chemical society by C. H. Walker on the action of nitric acid on tin, some of the prevalent ideas on that subject are shown to be singularly erroneous. Among these is the general supposition that metallic tin dissolves in nitric acid with the production of both a stannous and stannic salt, according to the conditions of temperature and concentration of the acid. In these later experiments—made to determine the amounts of stannous salts formed under various conditions of temperature, concentration of acid and mass of tin treated—it is shown that with dilute acids the increase of temperature has but little effect, but with more concentrated acids the effect is more marked, for the alteration of a few more degrees will reduce the amount of stannous salt to nothing, while increase of concentration, other things being equal, decreases the proportion of stannous salt. It is found that the yellowish white substance formed from concentrated solutions is a hydrated stannic nitrate of varying composition, depending on the time between production and analysis, also on the method of purification adopted for eliminating the nitric acid.—New York Sun.

Dismay in the Diplomatic Quarter.

The advance agent of a theatrical company which was to make a visit of three nights in Washington had summonses in legal phraseology prepared and sealed with wax, notifying the receiver that he must appear at the box office and buy at least one ticket of admittance for the play.

They were formally addressed and sent by messenger to the prominent people of Washington. A number of foreigners in the diplomatic corps received them, and not understanding the peculiar methods resorted to by the Americans hastened to the secretary of state to demand protection, protesting that they knew nothing of the matter mentioned in the summonses, and that it was a breach of national law to arrest an accredited foreign representative.

It required the combined efforts of Secretary Gresham and his several assistant secretaries to explain the thing to the foreigners without hurting their feelings or wounding their dignity.—Washington Letter.

New Readings of Old Proverbs.

London Tit-Bits has "twisted" 12 proverbs as follows: "All is not beer that's bitter. The pledge in time saves crime. It's the long cane that cures folk learning. She talks most who talks fast. Who can't be cured should be incured. There's many a tip twist the meal and the lip. The nearer the bed the colder the sheet. When the fuel goes into the fire, the fog flies out of the chimney. Marry for taste—man, rather than treasure. Once bitten, now pie. It isn't the scowl that makes one funk. Half a sofa's better than no bed."

Only Resting.

"You've had 25 years' experience as a farmer? Well, it's pretty hard work, isn't it?" "I thought it was till I came to town once to run a grocery store. I'm back on the farm again. Farming ain't work. It's restin'."—Chicago Tribune.

Non-pull-out

is an arbitrary word used to designate the only bow (ring) which cannot be pulled off the watch.

Here's the idea
The bow has a groove on each end. A collar runs down inside the pendant (stem) and fits into the grooves, firmly locking the bow to the pendant, so that it cannot be pulled or twisted off.

It positively prevents the loss of the watch by theft, and avoids injury to it from dropping.

IT CAN ONLY BE HAD with Jas. Boss Filled or other watch cases bearing this trade mark—
All watch dealers sell them without extra cost. Ask your jeweler for pamphlet, or send to the manufacturers.

When he reached the deck, he looked up and saw the rope swing back to the cradle, where the bear grabbed it. It tried to do as it had seen Jake do, but had no sooner swung clear than it slipped and fell to the deck. The crew had breakfast for breakfast.—San Francisco Item.

Nitric Acid in a Tin.

In a paper read before the London Chemical society by C. H. Walker on the action of nitric acid on tin, some of the prevalent ideas on that subject are shown to be singularly erroneous. Among these is the general supposition that metallic tin dissolves in nitric acid with the production of both a stannous and stannic salt, according to the conditions of temperature and concentration of the acid. In these later experiments—made to determine the amounts of stannous salts formed under various conditions of temperature, concentration of acid and mass of tin treated—it is shown that with dilute acids the increase of temperature has but little effect, but with more concentrated acids the effect is more marked, for the alteration of a few more degrees will reduce the amount of stannous salt to nothing, while increase of concentration, other things being equal, decreases the proportion of stannous salt. It is found that the yellowish white substance formed from concentrated solutions is a hydrated stannic nitrate of varying composition, depending on the time between production and analysis, also on the method of purification adopted for eliminating the nitric acid.—New York Sun.

Disarm in the Diplomatic Quarter.

The advance agent of a theatrical company which was to make a visit of three nights in Washington had summonses in legal phraseology prepared and sealed with wax, notifying the receiver that he must appear at the box office and buy at least one ticket of admittance for the play.

They were formally addressed and sent by messenger to the prominent people of Washington. A number of foreigners in the diplomatic corps received them, and not understanding the peculiar methods resorted to by the Americans hastened to the secretary of state to demand protection, protesting that they knew nothing of the matter mentioned in the summons, and that it was a breach of national law to arrest an accredited foreign representative.

It required the combined efforts of Secretary Gresham and his several assistant secretaries to explain the thing to the foreigners without hurting their feelings or wounding their dignity.—Washington Letter.

New Readings of Old Proverbs.

London Tit-Bits has "twisted" 12 proverbs as follows: "All is not beer that's bitter. The pledge in time saves crime. It's the long cane that cures slow learning. She talks most who talks fast. Who can't be cured should be incured. There's many a tip 'twixt the meal and the lip. The nearer the bed the colder the sheet. When the fuel goes into the fire, the fog flies out of the chimney. Marry for taste—man, rather than treasure. Once kitten, now pie. It isn't the scowl that makes one funk. Half a sofa's better than no bed."

Only Resting.

"You've had 25 years' experience as a farmer? Well, it's pretty hard work, isn't it?" "I thought it was till I came to town once to run a grocery store. I'm back on the farm again. Farming ain't work. It's restin'."—Chicago Tribune.
