Friday evening Welch Post, No. 173, passed the following resolution unanimously by a rising vote.

Whereas, The condition of affairs difficulties. The subject of this sketch is incident to the coal and other strikes and that of the American Railway Union has developed the fact that there is in our country a growing dis-posi ion on the part of a portion of the people of the United States to disre-gard law and to set at defiance the legally constituted authorities of the look of legally constituted autointies of the land, as evidenced by assaults upon offi-cers of the law while in the discharge of their duty, by bodies of armed men, the seizure and destruction of property by brutal assul s upon and the murder of peaceable citizens while protecting herest labor and the unwarranted honest labor, and the unwarranted interference with and obstruction o. the business interests of the country; therefore,

Resolved, 1. That we regard these exhibitions of lawlessness with deep regret and as a menace to good govern-ment and as subversive of the liberties of the people of our beloved country. 2. That it is the inalienable right government to use every power at its command for the protection of all who desire to earn an honest living by honest work.

3. That we heartly approve of all steps taken by the general and state governments for putting down lawless-on us, that with the extraordinary effort ness, the protection of citizens in the peaceful performance of honest labor and for the arrest and punishment of those who have without warrant of law invaded the righ s of person and property and endangered the liberties in a way that will be a mutual benefit to all be a mutual benefit property and endangered the liberties i of the American people. 4. That we contemp ate with deep sor-row a condition of affairs which would render it necessary to call up in Ameri-can citizens to take up arms for the pur-pose of enforcing law and maintaining order, but if this shall become necess-ary we hereby ender our services to his excellency the governor of Michi-gan for that purpose. 5. That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the post and a copy of same be sent to the president of the United States and to his excel-lency the governor of Michigan. Geo. Geo. Rich telegraphed the following response:

"Your patriotic tender of services, if needed in the present trouble, is hereby acknowledged. In the name of the acknowledged. In the name of the people of this state to whom you have once rendered such valiant service, I extend you sincere thanks and appre-ciation. It is, however, hoped and believed that the necessity will not arise when your services, so gloriously tendered, will be required."

Calling his forces together, Mr. Mack explained to them, that it was his determof every American citizen to engage in honest labor, and that he should be protected in the perfect exercise of that right. That it is the duty of the enough-her resorses are large enough, the people are intelligent, will be ecoon us, that with the extraordinary effort we will make and the splendid merchandising we propose to give them, to all

Having adopted this plan for the sea-son no time was lost in executing it to the fullest extent. With plenty of capital at their command, the markets were ransacked for their best values, great lines of seasonable goods were bought in unbroken lots at prices never before obtainable-nothing that had the merit of a big bargain was allowed to escape and goods were piled up in The Storefilling its great capacity — and this too, with a paralysis of business coming upon them. The goods had to be sold—that was certain. No carrying purchases beyond the season, and to do this they early mean to but one do this they could resort to but one means—tell the people what they have got, let the people know what they have been doing in the way of buying have been doing in the way of buying goods, let them know just what they expected to do in the way of selling them. For this, they relied entirely upon printer's ink. Not in homeopath doses but in gigantic quantities, enough to tell their story in every household of the county. The great trade-tide at once began to flow Ann Arborward, raising higher and higher—each day submerging all previous sale records, all attempts at competition. This all attempts at competition. The Municipal Club. The Municipal Club held a meeting last Friday night in McMillan Hall. There was a good attendance of the active members present. The matter of keeping the club at work during the summer and fall, and of the members rendering assistance to the city officials in carring out the laws, were discussed, and a number of committees appointed for special duties along these lines. A resolution was adopted requesting the under the most adverse condition and ministers to devote at least one Sunday evening each month during the summer to questions bearing on municipal affairs. TROOPS AND STRIKERS MEET IN BATTLE AT CHICAGO.

Leaden Hall Fell Thick and Fast, Mingled With Stones and Iron-Strkers Literally Mowed Down-Many Thousands of Dollars Worth of Property Destroyed.

Chicago: At Kensington, a junction near Pullman, a milk train on the way to Chicago was attacked by a mob of several thousands. There were only a few marshals, but they fired into the mob with great vigor, killing two men outright and wounding several others. This wrought the mob to a terrible frenzy. They rushed to the train and This wrought the first to the train and frenzy. They rushed to the train and began tipping the cars over. They then detached the engine, ran it down the track half a mile, stopped it, re-versed it, opened the throttle wide and drove it back into the mass of overturned freight cars, scattering the debris far and wide and rendering the debris far and wide and rendering the track impassable in any direction. A frantic appeal was sent at once to Chicago for assistance and troops were dispatched to the scene. At Burnside, near Chicago, 50 empty freight cars were standing upon the track. The mob set fire to these and they were all book set fire to these and they were all practically destroyed. Later in the day the deputies guarding an incom-ing passenger train replied to the vol-ley of shots and stones which the strikers showered upon them by turn-ing their revolvers loose, killing four of their assailants and wounding a number of others.

riots" the strikers and the Illinois state troops came together and a pitched battle was the result. The number of killed and wounded will never be known, as the mob carried off a num-ber of men who were seen to fall, and whether they were dead or wounded, or how many of them fell, it is impossible at this time to ascertain. As far as known the causualties were as fol-lows: John Burke, striker, killed by bayonet thrust through his abdomen; Lieutenant Reed, Company F. Second Infantry, L. N. G., struck on head by stones, condition critical; Thomas Jackman, shot in back, will die; John Konderg, stabbed with bayonet, will die; unknown man, shot through liver, will die; unknown boy, 17 years old, shot through abdomen, will die; Tony Gajeuski, shot in right arm; Henry Williams, shot in the left arm; John Kerr, shot in hip; unknown woman, shot in right hip; Joseph Rhineberg, three bayonet wounds, may die; Anton Komisky, shot in right side; Joseph Szcepauski, shot in shoulder; unknown boy, shot in left leg; Martea Bach, a 17-year-old girl, instantly killed by a stray bullet; Joseph Warzowski, fatally shot while watching the battle.

The fight occurred at the intersec-tion of Forty-ninth street and the Grand trunk tracks, a locality which has always had an evil name and which can produce two toughs for every square yard of territory within a radius of a half mile. The troops were called to that point because of threats to burn the Grand Trunk yard. The mob was driven away twice, but finally gathered fully 8,000 strong and began to turn over freight cars and tear up tracks. They ran a car into a turntable pit destroying that machine, and when an effort was made to repair the damage the mob began to throw stones and iron. Lieut. Reed was struck twice on the head and fell like struck twice on the head and fell like one dead. Then Capt Kelly gave the order to charge and the militiamen sprang forward with leveled bayonets. John Burke was standing in the front of the mob throwing coal as fast as he could move his arm. One of the first soldiers in the charge plunged his bayonet clear through his body, the bayonet clear through point coming out at the back. Burke went down like a log and died in a few minutes. The mob broke before the charge, but quickly rallied, and after a short pause came on again, sending a pattering of revolver bullets before it. The troops, the deputies before it. The troops, the deputies and the police waited for no orders, but the rifles came to a level, revolvers were drawn and a storm of leaden death swept in the mob. Men fell right and left, but the militia, depu-ties and the police pressed forward rapidly, driving the crowd before them in the wildest confusion. It was all over in three minutes, and the militia marched into their train and with the deputies returned to the city. They looked as though they had been through a battle when they disem-barked at Dearborn station. Their uniforms were torn, hats gone and they were covered with dust and dirt and many of them badly bruised by flying stones. As the train with military on board As the train with military on board moved off fully 20,000 people crowded about the handful of police left be-hind. From all sides they rushed upon them, hurling stones and iron in their mad assault. The men, realizing their position, drew their revolvers and beaked up against such etc. backed up against each other, prepared for a desperate battle. The work that had been done by the wrecking party was attacked as the police retreated. A car was set on fire, the switch close by broken and rails tore up. An alarm of fire was sent in, and with it a second call for police assistance, to which 25 men responded. The condition of things was now extremely critical. Loomis street, the heart of the anarchist settlement, was crowded the anarchist settlement, was crowded by a howling, shrieking mob. At the sight of the reinforcements the crowd fell back. Each officer thought his life was in danger and without any order they raised their weapons and fired as fast as possible directly into the crowd, which wavered and then heat a retreat first replying to the upbeat a retreat, first replying to the un-expected rain of shot with a shower of stones. As they retreated leaving sev-eral on the ground, the police followed with clubs, showing no mercy. Eushing into saloons the mob barricaded the doors and made a stand, but were driven out through windows and back doors, clubs descending on their heads at every jump. Windows in the houses adjoining were suddenly thrown open and a volley of shot was poured into the police, who returned the fire, and the mob finally scattered into the alleys and side streets, ending the pur-suit. The ground over which the fight occurred was like a battlefield. The men shot by the troops and police lay about like logs. In all 41 shot and bayoneted were taken to a drug store. There a field hospital was improvised and the wounds of the least hurt were drossad dressed.

END OF STRIKE IN DETROIT. Michigan Central and Union Depot Men Return to Work-Situation in Michigan. The trouble in Detroit is practically a thing of the past. All the striking railroad men have gone back to their work, and the probability is that they will remain and take no further part in the Pullman boycott. President Ledyard, of the Michigan Central, gave out an ultimatum that the employes of that road must return to work before a certain hour or be discharged. This had the effect of bringing the men to time, and not one failed to show up on time. The idea worked so well that Super-intendent Smith, of the Union depot, the terminal of the Wabash, the F. The & P. M. and D., L. & N. railroads, adopted it with equally good results, every employe returning to work. The Michigan Central expects no further

After an exciting all day meeting to work a meeting was held by the rest of the employes of the Grand Trunk and it was voted unanimously to stay out until the strike was settled. The day following the "milk train ots" the strikers and the Illinois state coops came together and a pitched more men than they can now handle. The men on the other hand claim that the action of the engineers will not hurt the cause of the rest of the strkers. Word was telegraphed to Danville, and a special train with a company of the state troops started at once for the scene of the trouble. About one mile from Westville a large crowd of miners had collected, and upon the approach of the train bearing the militia began warlike demonstrations. Several pistol shots were fired at the soldiers, who returned the fire, shooting over the heads of the mob, intending to scare them. Miss Clara James, a 17-year-old girl was standing in the doorway of her home. A bullett struck her just below her right breast, and she died almost instantly. Mrs. Michael Glennan, a widow standing in her own vard, was also struck and died in five minutes. An unknown man received a mortal wound and died before morning. The militia then left the train and charged the crowd, securing three prisoners. After this the crowd dispersed, and the soldiers returned to Danville.

V S. TROOPS AT CHICAGO.

But They Do Little Good-Gov. Altgeld

Asks Cleveland to Withdraw Them. When the United States troops stawere called out to aid in lifting the blockade caused by the Pullman boy-cott their first objective point was Blue Island, Ill., south of Chicago, where the most serious embargo was laid and where all endeavors to move trains had been balked by the strikers. One train had been derailed there and other acts of violence had caused Blue Island to become a center of attrac-tion. When the first squad of troops arrived there and read the injunction of the U.S. courts and the orders of President Cleveland for the quelling of the disturbance they were hooted and jeered and could do nothing but await reinforcements. When more await reinforcements. When more troops arrived the excitement sim-Gatling and Hotchkiss guns had a very quieting effect. The troops had no sooner left their train than two coaches were derailed and the engine disabled by shoving coupling pins into the cross-head guides. However, the troops managed to hold the turbulent yards have been filled. Battle Creek: The committee appointed by the Chicago & Grand Trunk engineers to visit Cleveland and confer that moved was well supplied with element at bay while the trains blockarmed deputies.

Blue Island was not the only point where the strikers were having their own way. In fact they divided up into so many mobs and blocked trains at so many points in Chicago that the troops were soon found entirely insufficient. The opening of the way at Blue Island had given the impression that all roads would be enabled to resume at once under the protection of the soldiers, but it was a big mistake. Instead of fleeing in fear before the faces of the veterans, as was expected they would do, the turbulent thou-sands surged about the soldiers, jeered and hooted at them, stopping trains at will, and generally rendering the em-bargo in the military district more effective, if possible, than before. throngs of strikers did not resist Uncle Sam's police. Again and again when there were thousands of them about a train which it was sought to move, and on the track in front of it, they gave way like water before the leveled bay-onets. Like water, too, they closed in again at a point just beyond. They turned switches, derailed freight cars in front of the slow-moving train and played all sorts of railroaders' tricks with which the soldiers were unacquainted.

Great mobs gathered on the Lake Shore, Rock Island, Alton and Western Indiana tracks and proceeded to obstruct them by overturning box cars, breaking switches and the like. At one point they set fire to a switch tower and an interlocking switch box, though the flames were extinguished before serious damage was done. two instances there was bloodshed. On the Western Indiana tracks a hardpressed special policeman fired at his pursuers, wounding a striker in the leg. On the Lake Shore road an officer of that company in charge of a train which he was endeavoring to force through emptied his revolver point blank into the massed strikers shout blank into the massed strikers about him, wounding two or three, it is believed. He was saved from the fury of the mob by his engineer, who put on steam and ran back to the point of starting. Gov. Altgeld does not like the action of Washington authorities in calling out the U. S. troops and sent a lengthy telegram to President Cleveland in which he says: The state of Illinois is not only able to take care of itself, but it stands ready today to furnish the federal government any assistance it may need elsewhere. Our military force is ample and consists of as good soldiers as can be found in the country. They have been ordered out promptly whenever and wherever they were needed. So far as I have been advised the local officials have able to handle the situation. But if any assistance were needed the state But if stood ready to furnish 100 men for every one man required, and stood ready to do so at a moment's notice. Notwithstanding the facts the federal government has been applied to by men who had political and selfish motives for wanting to ignore the state government. Gov. Altgeld con-tinued by saying that at present some of our railroads are paralyzed, not by reason of obstruction, but because they cannot get men to operate their trains. For some reason they are anxious to keep this fact from the public, and for this purpose are making an outcry about obstructions in order to divert attention. He quotes two instances which were investigated and showed that the roads could not secure men enough to man a train, with full pro-tection. He denounces the most of the newspaper stories about violence and serious disturbances as pure fabri-cations or wild exagerations, then turns his attention to the statute under which the U.S. troops were called out and says it was passed in 1861 as a war measure. This statute authorized the use of federal troops in a state whenever it shall be impracticable to enforce the laws of the United States by the ordi-nary judicial proceedings. Such a condition does not exist in Illinois. There have been a few local disturbances, but nothing that seriously inter-fered with the administration of justice, or that could not be easily controlled by the local or state author-ities, for the federal troops can do do. The governor then "gets up on his ear" and says that the state of Illinois has been insulted by calling protests against it and asks the imme-diate withdrawal of federal troops from active duty in the state. In reply President Cleveland said he had acted under the constitution and laws of the United States, to prevent the obstruction of mails and interstate commerce.

A Mass Meeting in Detroit.

Fully 6,000 people crowded into the big Auditorium at Detroit to participate in a labor mass meeting. The meeting was clearly in sympathy with the big A. R. U. strike. The speakers were President McMinn, of the east side A. R. U.; Mrs. M. M. Oderkirk, of the Typographical union; Sam Goldwater, a well-known agitator; L. E. Tossey, president of the Carpenters' union; Edward Keusch, president of the Iron Molders' union, and last but not least the executive of the city, Mayor Pingree.

All of the speakers were applauded frequently, but Mayor Pingree and Sam Goldwater carried the crowds away by their remarks. Mayor Pingree seemed to touch the right chord when he said:

gree seemed to touch the right chord when he said: All corporations and aggregations of men, especially those that derive their powers from the people, like the Pullman Car compuny, should have the interests of the people and the peace of the country, so near at heart, as to be willing to submit the differences between them and their employes to arbitration. (Cheers and voices "That's right.") We are informed by the newspaper reports that the head of the Pullman company refuses to entertain the proposition made to him by men to submit the differences to arbitration; but there are some influences at work which may cause him to look upon the proposition favorably. It is because of such refusal, and invoraer that we may install reason in place of force, that arbitration should be male com-pulsory. If the constitution of the United States and those of the states are not flexible enough to permit of the enactment of laws to compel arbitration under national and state auspices, they can and should be charged. This meeting can take the first step in the accomplishment of this grand and humane pur-pose by adopting a resolution demanding that the congress which is now in session pass an amendment to the federal constitution looking to the establishment of an interstate board, or boards of arbitration, to which shall be sub-mitted all differences between capital and labor. This would make strikes and their dire-ful consequences impossible; and it would give it the may who has only the labor of his lumba

U. S. TROOPS SHOOT.

Hammond, Ind., in the Hands of a Meb -Three Men Fatally Shot.

Hammond, Ind., was in the hands of a wild mob. A west bound freight ran into the town and was at once stopped by the riote's. The fireman leape from the engine and ran into the bushes. The engineer was seized by the leaders of the mob, dragged from his cab and beaten almost to death. He was left lying senseless on the ground by the rioters. He was finally picked up and carries into a hotel where medical attendance was given him. A few minutes later a Monon train pulled in from the east. It was also stopped and the engineer and fire-man badly beaten. Both engines were "killed" and the mob then went to work tipping over loaded freight cars. Both tracks were completely blocked. The rioters broke open the cars and carried away part of the contents. The scene of violence was the west end of the town, which lies on the Illi-nois side of the state line. The author-ities telegraphed to Chicago for aid. Companies D and M, of the First regi-ment, Illinois National Guard, were at once sent on a special train to the scene of the trouble. On their arrival the rioters at once retreated across the state line into Indiana, where the Illi-nois milting aculd not follow them here nois militia could not follow them, being without authority save in their own state. Orders were then sent to Chicago for a company of United States regulars. Thirty-five men were sent out at once. The troops were stationed about the Monon depot, and their presence quieted things for awhile. The blockade on the tracks was finally raised and several passen-ger trains pulled through. This seemed to anger the mob, and with an increase of number its passions grew to a frenzy. Inside of two hours 5,000 men had gathered and finally made a rush at the soldiers. The latter fired two volleys. Charles Fleischer, a latwo volleys. Charles rieischer, a ha-borer, was killed; Victor Vacetter fatally wounded, and William Camp-bell shot through both legs. A num-ber of other people were slightly injured, but were carried away by their friends and secreted, and it will be impossible to learn the exact number wounded. The news of the killing spread with emarkable rapidity and ten minutes afterward the streets in the vicinity were filled with a threatening mob. Men ran from house to house borrowing shotguns, rifles and other firearms. "To arms" was the cry heard on every side and fully 3,000 people responded. Matters looked so threatening that a call was sent to Chicago for reinforcements and two more companies were sent out on a special train. These ad-ditional troops were stationed at the scene of trouble and effectually cowed the rioters for the time being. Major Hartz arrested four leaders of the mob and took them to Chicago with a small detail of troops. While the train was pulling, out of the city a crowd gathered and stoned it, but quickly dispersed on the approach of a computed information company of infantry.

BLUE RIBBON RACES.

ABOUT 250 HORSES WILL TAKE PART IN THE MEETING.

It Will Be the Grandest Harness Meeting Ever Held in Any Grand Circuit City.

For nearly three weeks the new track of the Detroit Driving Club has been the scene of some very fast miles in the work outs taken by horses which are named to start in the Blue Ribbon races beginning next Monday and continuing through the week. Trainers are delighted with the track and express astonishment that it could be put in such perfect shape in so short a time. It is as solid as though it had stood the seasoning of two winters, and still is so elastic that horses do not sore a particle when asked to extend themselves and let go all of their speed through the broad stretch,

Entries for the meeting closed on July 2 and every section of the country sent in representatives to battle for the rich inducements. Including the two consolations there are 248 entries, which makes the average about 14 to a race, insuring even better contests than were those of a year ago. In quality the list is the finest

Detroit Strikers Capture Scabs.

While the strikers at Detroit are doing no damage to railroad property, they are very severe on any "scabs" who may fall into their hands. They captured one Wabash train at Delray, and after drawing the fire and water from the engine left it on the track. engineer and firemen were 'The "scab" roughly handled and sent down the track with a warning never to return to Detroit. Later the same day an incoming Wabash train with a "scab' crew was flagged and the engineer and firemen pulled from the engine, and while the train was taken to the depot by strikers the poor wretches were unmercifully cursed, pounded and jeered by men, women and chil-dren, and after a farewell ducking were sent out of town with an injunction to "make 'themselves scarce.' Trains with union crews were not interfered with.

THE populist state convention was held at Lansing on the 4th. Dr. A. W. Nichols of Greenville was nominated for governor. XXXVI. THE UNIVERSITY; INITIAL ACTION.

In the constitutional convention which Dr. Eli Louis Moore, of Bay City, son sat in Detroit in the spring and summer the Reverend John D. Pierce, in whose family he and his young wife boarded, had carefully studied it. In this convention Mr. Crary was made chairman The floral decorations throughout of the committee on education and reported a provision for an educational system as near like the Prussian as the genius of our government would permit. He was not only a man of push, but of considerable sagacity, as his action both in the state convention and in congress will show, for he was the first representative of Michigan as a state in that body. Before leaving to take his seat in congress, he requested the appointment by the governor of his friend, Mr. Pierce, to the office of superintendent of public instruction, which had been created by the convention and then in congress was the means of revolutionizing the system of land-The bride was most becomingly at-tired in white faille silk, high bodice with a bertha of rich lace, long sleeves, for primary schools, those for Ohio, had been made to the townships, the lands to be held perpetually and leased. It was the superindent's duty, as defined by an act approved July 26th, 1836, to make out an inventory of the lands and other property reserved for educational purposes, give in writing his views of their disposition, and make out a plan of organization of a common school and university system. Mr. Pierce's report on these points was submitted to the legislature in January, 1827, a few days before the admission of Michigan into the Union and the work of carrying the plan into execution was rushed onward. The plan and the hope cherished for ts realization were magnificent and, indeed, looked back upon from the present time seem quite ridiculous and absurd. The plan embraced a branch of the university in each county of the state, and several were established the first year of Michigan's statehood. As I do not intend to give any detailed account of these academies I will close up my treatment of them right here. Those actually set up, seven in number, cost the university fund from 1837 to 1846 $35,935, and then the supreme court decided that the university, as

SHORT TALKS ON ADVERTISING.

No 12.

[Written especially for THE REGISTER.] A great many merchants cut down their advertising in the summer. Some even stop it altogether. In every day life, when a thing is hard to do, it only calls forth greater effort. If the laborer can't move the stone, he gets a crowbar and a block of wood. He makes a lever-and the stone moves. If the crowbar isn't long enough, he gets something longer. He doesn't give up, because the stone has got to be moved. Same way in business. Trade is a stone. The funny thing is that the lighter it gets, the harder it is to move. It can be moved though. You may have to lengthen the lever. Certainly you ought n ot to shorten it. The best business lever is advertising-newspaper advertising is the longest lever and the quickest to move trade. Dull times are the times to put forth the greatest effort and the most money. People don't usually ask for what they have already. Advertising is merely asking for trade. When the store is full every day, then is the time if ever to cut down your space. Don't expect that you will get a big trade in the dull times, but "keep count" and you'll find that the advertising was profitable. Profitable right at the time and enormously profitable after a while. The very fact that only a few merchants are wise enough to advertise in dull seasons, makes it all the more profitable for those who do. You are there when others are not. It gives you greater

A Hunter's Armor.

An Essex, Conn., sportsman is having manufactured for him a complete suit of rubber clothing, by means of which he expects to slaughter numberless black ducks. The head piece is the only part to be left in view, and is made in the form of a wild duck sitting on the water with magnifying glass eyes. The occupant can slaughter game by the wholesale when the ducks come near the decoy object to see what it is. It is quite an original invention and it is expected to work to perfection, the only drawback being that some other sportsman may take the head piece for a real duck and blaze away before discovering his error.

No wonder the poor clerk's heart bluch, red as a peony, mounted to his cheeks every time he met her.

Louis never waited on Theresa when she came to the store on those little Mr. Downs' residence, he glanced shopping excursions which women are so fond of making. He always contrived just then to be very busy, and Mr. Lyman Van Dyke was never displeased that he was left to wait on the lovely Miss Theresa Downs himself

At length he decided that the easiest and most systematic way would be to he thought she must hear it, and it write his charmer a letter, setting made him blush deeper than ever. forth his passion in glowing rhyme. But rhyming was not Mr. Van Dyke's said Theresa, rising, and blushing forte, and he could produce nothing that sounded exactly right. So, after wasting half a quire of paper, he was forced to give up the idea of poetry and confine himself to the plainest prose. He wrote a very moderate letter, as though he hardly dared hope for a favorable answer. He did not wish her to know that he considered her love as already won. He concluded his letter by telling her that he would call that evening at six to receive her answer and ask her of her father. Instead of signing his name in full, he was ruled by a boyish notion that initials were the thing for a love letter, so he wrote: "Your faithful ad-mirer, L. Van D." He sent the letter by an errand-boy, who, as he was not told to wait for an answer, soon returned.

In about an hour and just, as Louis was going out for his dinner, a little urchin in the employ of Mr. Downs entered and handed him a letter enclosed in a dainty white envelope.

"How can it be?" he said to himself. "She so beautiful and rich, accomplished and admired, and I only a poor clerk a d far from being handsome."

At half-past five he found himself trembling from head to feet like a schoolboy in dread of a flogging. The of New York city to be continued time had come for action. Theresa was beautiful, and involunqueenly poise of the head, the graceful ease of the maiden's attitude, and the symmetrical curve of the instep that peeped from under her gored dress.

She saw him in a moment, possibly made aware of his presence by the furious beating of his heart. At least

Why did she not call him Louis, as she did in the letter, he wondered. His knees felt extremely weak as he articulated, feebly:

"Will you sit down again, Miss Downs? I want to talk with you."

Theresa resumed her seat, and Louis ventured to take one too, though, unlover-like, he selected one several feet from the lady, where a cluster of bushes might hold its friendly leaves between them.

Louis pulled up all the grass within his reach, ground the heel of his boot into the sward, and piled bits of stone into the hole; but not a word did he speak. Presently footsteps were heard coming down the walk, and Louis peered around to see the tall form of Mr. Van Dyke approaching.

He passed Louis without observing him, and stood beside Theresa.

and found Louis with his eyes riveted on the open letter.

"No-yes," answered Louis, absently, while his face took the hue of a ripe Spitzenberg.

Then clutching the letter tightly in his trembling fingers, he rushed from the store. Alone in the openair, he read the letter through again. Theresa Downs called him dear Louis; said she should be happy to see him at six that evening. She confessed, too, that she loved him-not in so many words, but the meaning was unmistakable. She did not know, she wrote, what "papa" would say, but he loved his daughter too well to make her unhappy.

As Louis walked homeward, his feelings were terribly mixed. One moment he felt perfectly happy-the next he was completely wretched. First he felt sure his love for Theresa was returned-then he thought he had ding. Louis and Theresa were united, been imposed upon by some sportive and Mr. Van Dyke, with a wife of his wag

"Didn't I say I should come at this time to receive your answer to the question I asked you in my letter? You got that, I suppose?'

"No, I certainly did not."

"What! Didn't get the letter I sent by Willie Day? What became of it, then? I should be glad to know. Well, if you didn't get it, I shall-have to repeat what was in it."

Here the merchant attempted to take Theresa's hand, but she withdrew toward Louis, exclaiming:

"He did not write that letter, did he, Louis? Oh, tell me I have not made a terrible mistake."

Her distress and beseeching gaze dispetled Louis' bashfulness like magic. He sprang to her side and supported her sinking form while he whispered, tenderly:

"I did not write the letter, Theresa, though I can say all that was in it, and more, too, from my heart."

"Ahem! So you thought this precious fellow wrote you that letter, did you? Well, I shall just inform your father how matters stand, and then I guess your poverty-stricken beau will get his walking papers.'

Mr. Van Dyke walked away to the house, looking back once to see Theresa sitting on the bank, with her hands over her face, and Louis bending over and trying to soothe her.

Mr. Downs listened to the disappointed lover's recital, and then destroyed all his hopes of bliss by saying, sensibly:

"Well, Louis is a worthy young man. He is poor, I know; but I can establish him in business and still have plenty for myself. Fheresa is my only child, and I regard her happiness of more importance than wealth."

Mr. Wedemeyer, during his college course, has been appointed to speak at different places. On Febuary 22nd he was sent as the representative from the university to the great Union League meetings in Chicago. In May he went to Madison, Wis., to preside at the Northern Oratorica. League contest. At the commencement dinner last Thursday afternoon he was called on by President Angell to explain the scholar-ship recently established by his class. Among other things Mr. Wedemeyer has been President of the Lecture Association, editor of the Castalian and of M. Daily, University editor of the Washtenaw Times and toastmaster at the Senior Literary class banquet. He will pursue studies in the law department next year.

Margeurite lay back, weary in every joint, a drowsy numbress settling on her pulse. She had faith in her driver. He could bring her safely home. Presently they were at one of the wharves beside the river. Marguerite could hear the gurgle of the water around the piles. Not this way had she ever before gone homeward. She looked out musingly on the swift, black stream. "Just in time. We can go down with the tide," said a voice.

Marguerite Preston would have uttered some protest, but her sluggishness overpowered her. It was as if she could neither lift hand nor foot. The inertia of indifference had pene-against the wharf, heaving on the tide. And, as if it were a part of the play she had just appeared in, the lean old driver, with his dead white face, had the oars in his hands and stood quietly facing her, guiding the dark craft down the stream. The panorama of the river bank kept changing and shifting in the most inexplicable manner, and she was aware of a crowd of pictures ever coming Wm. W. Wedemeyer, who graduated and going before her eyes as if some from the literary department of the subtile magician, standing behind her shoulder, were projecting for her on the huge black screen of night the most marvelous display of memories she had ever contemplated.

SAMPLES OF INGENUITY.

In Russia a lady was saved from premature burial by means of a micro-phone placed over her heart, which enabled a medical man to detect a faint beat, which had escaped the ordinary tests.

An inventor has brought out a rocking chair actuated by electricity. The sitter can at the same time receive gentle currents by grasping metal handles or by resting the bare feet on metal pedals.

The electric light lends itself admirably to household decoration. Among other curious ways is a table decoration in which jelly is illuminated by a light shining through the mass from the center. When the dish, at first hidden by a silver cover and a mass of flowers, is suddenly uncovered the effect is very striking.

What will prove a most useful industrial development is the application of electricity to the cleansing and preservation of boilers. The method employed is the sending of currents periodically through the shell of the boiler. By this means the scale formed on the shell and tubes is disintegrated and easily removed.

A French physician has devised a vibrating helmet for the cure of nervous headache. It is constructed of strips of steel, put in vibration by a small electro-motor, which makes 600 turns a minute. The sensation, which is not unpleasant, produces drowsiness; the patient falls asleep under its influence and awakes free from pain.

FLIRTING.

It Broke Up the School and Led to a Damage Suit.

A pupil at a "provincail school for young ladies" in England had for some time so distinguished herself by her flirting propensities that the institution rapidly emptied. On one occasion, while the girls were out for a walk, she kissed her hand to a goodlooking clerk, and when her companions remonstrated she gayly retorted; 'It's my young man, mademoiselles. As the boys were made for the girls it's only natural."

This speech was duly reported to the pupils' mammas, who, in horror, lost no time in removing them from such contaminating company, much to the dismay of the schoolmistress, who, estimating her losses at the goodly sum of £200, took action against the father of the flirty damsel for the recovery of the money. She has, however, lost her case. It was shown, in the first place, that she had at regular intervals dispatched glowing accounts of the damsel's conduct to her fond parents, and then it was demonstrated with equal clearness that she had not only been all the time aware of a certain clandestine correspondence with a young man. but had permitted the heroine of this adventure to make frequent expeditions with her own niece. So the court found that if the schoolmistress had suffered it was through her own fault. The institu-

Were they sweeping outward, then, to the unknown sea?

It was an unexpected journey, and she had asked to be taken home Presently the air grew full of shapes -shadowy shapes with mournful faces, shapes that hinted secrets, with threatening in their eyes.

If one's sins, she thought, should take to themselves bodies, would it not be in some such guise as this that they would front and terrify her at dead of night?

The figure at the oars was crooning softly. It was like the lullaby her mother used to sing to her when she was a child.

There was a breath of free air-hu-manity lay behind them-they were alone with nature on the vast, dim sea. The numbness crept to the roots of her being. She had no hands to lift, she had no feet to move. Her heart grew sluggish. Her brain seemed paralyzed.

Death stood upright now in the bow before her and in the east she was aware of a widening breadth of gray. Would the blackness freshen into perfect day for her or would the night lie hopelessly on her forever? The figure drew near and laid its hand across her eyes. *

THE GERMAN STOVE.

It Is a Big Affair, But Gives Great Warmth at Small Cost.

Among the foreign articles of interest at the World's fair none attracted more attention than the German stove. It was not recognized by the general visitor as a stove, however, and it was amusing to hear the guesses as to what it was. It was constructed entirely of white tiles, and reached from the floor almost to the ceiling, perfectly straight and plain, with no opening except a small brass door at the bottom. In this opening the fire is kindled with wood and pieces of something black, called presskohle, are laid upon it. These pieces are about six inches long and one inch thick.

The brass door is left open, leaving a little door inside with a grate in it closed until the presskohle is thoroughly kindled and begins to crumble a little, then the whole thing is closed up and left for the rest of the day. The stove gradually becomes hotter and hotter and gives out a good heat. This fire is a curious thing. If you open the door and look in it seems to be entirely out, not a spark being visible. It looks like a mere heap of ashes, but the fire is there just the same, and goes on heating all day. The cost of fuel is almost nothing, being about $2.25 per 1,000, which makes the fire for one day amount to a little over one cent.

Nothing Strange.

Intelligent people, who realize the important part the blood holds in keeping the body in a normal condition, find nothing strange in the number of diseases that Hood's Sarsparilla is able to cure. So many troubles result from impure blood that the best way to treat them is through the blood, and it is far better to use only harmless vegetable compounds than to dose to excess with quinin^o, calonel and other drugs. By treating the blood, with Hood's Saraparilla, scrofula, salt rheum and what are commonly called "humors;" dyspepsia, catarrh, rheumatism, neuralconsumption and other troubles that originate in impurities of the blood or impaired circulation, can be cured.

"While I was stationed there several years ago I saw a sight the thought of which always causes a shudder to creep over me. A lady near where I lived sen*. a little native boy with a letter to a friend at some little distance, with the request to send back a reply. Being a trustworthy little fellow, some surprise was felt when he did not return after a reasonable absence. "After waiting several hours with no sign of the messenger a searching party, of which I was a member, was made up to try to discover his whereabouts. After scouring the country for some time we came to the river bank, and a short distance away saw a dead alligator lying on the shore with its great jaws extended to their utmost. On examining it to discover the cause of so strange an appearance we found, to our horror, that it had devoured the missing boy, and had attempted to swallow his head whole. This, however, it was unable to do, and had been suffocated in the attempt. The boy's head was still covered by his turban, which, when removed, disclosed the answer to his mistress' letter, which he was faithfully bringing back. It was supposed that while attempting to swim the river he had been seized by the alligator, as these huge reptiles are very clever in concealing themselves till their victim is well within reach and then pouncing on their prey."

The Indian Is Fond of Jokes, But Reserved Before White Men.

In listening to the concert given by the young people of the Carlisle Indian school the other night I noticed that all of the selections had a sombre tone. There were some sentimental songs, but nothing bright or 'humorous, and the next day I asked Colonel Garrick Mallery, of the Smithsonian institution, who has devoted his entire time to the study of the Indian character for the last forty years, whether the red race have as keen a sense of humor as the Caucasian or Mongolian. "Yes," said Colonel Mallery, "the Indian has as strong a sense of humor as the white man, although he is usually referred to as an ideal of dignity and stoicism. But those are his company manners. He always stands very straight and looks very sober and maintains a great reserve in the presence of white men or members of other tribes than his own. But when it is among his own people he has his jokes, his puns and gibes and comicalities, that are as rich in humor as those of the Irish race. Some time I intend to prepare a monograph upon Indian wit, I have a great deal of material for it. Some of the wittiest men I have ever known were Indians, and some of the most comical fellows you can imagine. There is a difference in tribes, however. The Northern Indians seem to have their sense of humor more strongly developed than the Southern Indian tribes, which is undoubtedly due to climatic influences."

For eight years I have suffered from catarrh, which affected my eyes and hearing; have employed many physicians without relief. I am now on my second bottle of Ely's Cream Balm, and feel confident of a complete cure.— Mary C. Thompson, Cerro Gordo, Ill.

Effecting a Compromise.

There was a certain bishop of Amiens, who was consulted by a lady as to whether she might wear rouge. She had been with several directeurs, but some were so severe and some so relaxed that she could not satisfy her conscience, and, therefore, was come to monseigneur to decide for her, and would rest by his sentence. "I see, madam," said the good prelate, "what the case is; some of your casuists forbid rouge totally; others will permit you to wear as much as you please. Now, for my part, I love medium in all things, and, therefore, I permit you to wear rouge on one cheek only."

of the opinion that such a thnig as morals could not be in politics.

"I take issue with you on that point," asserted a man, who looked like he wouldn't give a cent for a vote when the market price was $5. "But you can't make your point good." "Just the same," he insisted, "the wickedest man in our county registered a vow not to take another drink, use any more tobacco, swear another oath or make another bet until the man he was backing for congress was elected. He wasn't elected, and he has kept his vow."

"Yes, but in two years' time he may be elected, and then it will be worse than ever.

"I guess not," replied the man with confidence. "That's been ten years ago, and the candidate died six weeks after his defeat."

Internal Temperature of Trees

The internal temperature of trees has been observed for some time past by M. Prinz of Uccle, in Belgium, who finds their mean annual temperature at the heart of the trunk the same as that of air, but the mean monthly temperature of the trees sometimes differs from the latter by two or three degrees centigrade. On certain days the difference in question may be as much as ten degrees centigrade. In very cold weather the internal temperature falls to a few tenths of a degree below the freezing point and then remains stationary. In very hot weather the temperature of the tree stays at fifteen degrees centigrade or thereabouts. A large tree is therefore colder in hot weather and warmer in cold weather than air.

I am an old man and have been a constant sufferer with catarrh for the last ten years. I am entirely cured by the use of Ely's Cream Balm. I is strange that so simple a remedy will cure such a stubborn disease.—Henry Billings, U. S. Pension Att'y, Washington, D. C.

It is well to hope for success, but is much better to deserve it.

It takes some people a long time t find out that it never pays to worry. We ought to find out that condemning other people will never justify us. To be contented with what we have is about the same as to own the earth. To choose time is to save time, and an unreasonable motion is but beating the air.

Don't worry about the opinions of others, but live so that you can always respect yourself.

The man who has the least in him is generally the one who talks the most about himself.

The essence of knowledge is, having it, to apply it; not having it, to confess your ignorance.

Prosperity and prudence are spelled differently, but they generally mean about the same thing.

Mankind's struggle is upwards, in which millions are trampled to death, that thousands may mount on their bodies.

"They are lovely, Jamie. And they are for a lovely girl. I want you to take them to Rockhaven, and give them, with my compliments, to the pretty Miss Madelle.

Jamie felt for his crutch, and pulled himself up out of the bed of soft, young grass, where he had been lying prone, enjoying all the scents, sights and sounds of the afternoon in early spring.

"Til be glad to. There's no flowers good enough for her." "Right you are, Jamie!"

When Jamie stood up, there was something pitiful in the contrast between him and the squire. He was not noticeably deformed, but he was undersized and shrunken. The pale young face was not without a certain girlish beauty, but there was a vacancy about it that induced the assertion of the country folk that Jamie was "not all right." Although there were others, who shrewdly declared he was a great deal wiser than he appeared, or pretended to be. Two years previous, ill and half starved, he had been put off an empty coal car at the depot. "Is she-the pretty Miss Madelle-your sweetheart?" demanded Jamie, with a directness so childlike, it was in no degree impertinent.

"I think-I hope, she will be, Jamie. I admire her very much." "She's sweet and good," averred

Jamie, simply. He was gazing down on the flowers he held. Hyacinths they were, brought from the great city, the very name of which recalled to Jamie one long, miserable, feverish dream. Such delicate waxen bells! rose, white, heavenly azure. Yes, they were the right gift to send to her. He limped off. Hilliard looked after him. He wondered how she would accept his offering-if she would carry them at the dance that night. His breath came more quickly as he recalled her superb, Junoesque beauty. Her Greek profile, her dark, heavylidded eyes, her olive skin, her sumptuous curves of arm and shoulder, her languorous grace of motion.

Many approving glances followed Gwynne Hilliard that evening, when he walked up the crowded hall, where the great local ball of the year was in

She was all in soft, misty white. Her small, irregular-featured face was luminous with the pleasure of sheaf of hyacinths.

"Thank you so much for the flowers," she said. "No one ever sent me a bouquet before, so I am proud as well as pleased."

He murmured a few conventional words. She passed on with her partner. He stood still a few minutes, feeling dazed and bewildered. Then up to "the squire's" Henrietta's face Henrietta Madelle was smiling at him across the room, and he made his way gloomed with ugliness. to her. But, somehow, she failed that night to exercise her usual fascination over him. He was a trifle startled to recollect that she must be fifteen years older than her step-sister. He remembered hearing of men,

"I have been hoping to meet you among our friends," Gwynne said, "but none knew of your whereabouts." "I've been staying with my old nurse, Diane, and working in a millinery store. Henrietta told me how hard-up poor papa was, and that it was necessary I should work for my living, but that no one at home-only she-must know. You will not tell, I'm sure, Mr. Hilliard." His eyes grew moist as he gazed down on the pale, plain, earnest little face. The squire did not go back to his luxurious home that day. He saw Jessie repeatedly during the few weeks that followed, and he marveled progress. But he sought only one dark face of subtle and oriental beauty. "Mr. Hillhard!" said a sweet voice. He started, looked down on the slender, childish figure before him. Mr. and Mrs. Riley of Cincinnati found their daughter, who had been missing for over twenty years, a few days ago. The girl was living but five doors from where the Rileys reside when her identity was discovered. While Martin Larson was digging a cellar on his farm near Earles, Yates county, N. Y., the other day, he claims to have unearthed the skeleton of a man who must have been nearly seven feet high. Further digging showed that Larson had invaded an Indian cemetery, unearthing a mine of aboriginal relics.
