Dr. W. B. Smith called the convention to order. Wirt Newkirk, of Dexter, was made temporary chairman, and Seth Randall, of Ann Arbor, secretary. The committee on credentials was then appointed consisting of Messrs E. H. Scott, A. F. Freeman, J. W. Blakeslee, A. Schumacher, Wm. Judson. Committee on Resolutions: John Lawrence, W. P. McKinstry, T. Birkett, T. L. Sears, and H. C. Waldron. Each delegation was requested to hand in the name of one member for the county committee. The convention then adjourned until 1:30 p. m.

The afternoon session was even better attended than the morning session. The first thing was the report of the committee on credentials which showed the delegates as above with a very few changes by proxies. The committee on resolutions reported the following:

"Whereas the republicans this day in convention assembled point with pride to the administration of the Hon. John T. Rich, and believe that it commends itself to all right minded men, therefore;

Be it resolved, that the delegates chosen this day to represent Washtenaw county be instructed to use their best efforts to secure the renomination of the Hon. John T. Rich for governor."

Capt. E. P. Allen placed in nomination John F. Lawrence as delegate at large to the state convention, which resulted in Mr. Lawrence's unanimous election. The convention then resolved itself into two bodies representing the north and south halves of the county and each body elected ten delegates to the state convention as follows: Northern district; H. S. Dean, Evert H. Scott, J. E. Beal, F. C. Brown, H. Wirt Newkirk, G. S. Wheeler, Jas. L. Gilbert, Wm. Judson, Henry Dodge and Edwin Ball. Southern district: E. P. Allen, John Thompson, C. P. McKinstry, A. F. Freeman, Andrew Campbell, E. B. Stone, A. M. Humphrey, G. D. Wiard, R. H. Marsh and John W. Blakeslee.

The delegation was authorized to fill any vacancies which might occur.

The following men were then elected as the county committee for the ensuing year:

Ann Arbor City—1st ward, G. F. Allmendinger. 2d ward, A. C. Schumacher. 3d ward, C. E. Hiscock. 4th ward, Geo. H. Pond. 5th ward, Norman D. Gates. 6th ward, Fred C. Brown.

Sylvan township—Wm. Judson, Chelsea.

Ypsilanti township—Geo. Scotney, Ypsilanti.

Lima township—Frank Ward, Lima Center.

Webster township—Edwin Ball, Dexter.

Scio township—C. H. Stannard, Dexter. Saline township—Geo. Burkhardt, Saline.

Following this Col. Dean, Hon. E. P. Allen, Hon. A. J. Sawyer and Andrew Campbell made strong speeches. The convention then adjourned.

ONLY 10 OF 'EM.

Republican Congressional Candidates in the Second District.

Gen. George Spalding, of Monroe, one of the numerous second district candidates for the republican congressional nomination, is in Detroit.

"The races are a first rate event to attract politicians," he explained, with a smile, "and I thought I might as well make a little hay while the sun shines."

Asked regarding his candidacy, Gen. Spalding said:

"The republicans of Monroe county will, I think, stand as a unit in the presentation of my name. There are a great many candidates in the field from the other three counties, though. Lenawee has Henry C. Smith, of Adrian and possibly a young man named Grant Fellows, of Hudson. Washtenaw has so many candidates that they are falling over each other, including ex-Congressman E. P. Allen, of Ypsilanti, and J. T. Jacobs, of Ann Arbor. Then there are ex-Congressman O'Donnell and Brooks, of Jackson. I haven't counted them up lately, but I think there are, in all, not less than 10 republican congressional candidates in the second district. You see, they regard the election this trip as sure, and that naturally makes them more ambitious than they might otherwise be. Monroe county, however has not been honored with a congressman since Willits, and we naturally think we are justly entitled to a show this time."—Evening News.

Stole a Bicycle.

He was a smooth fellow and called upon H. J. Brown to look at a wheel. Would Mr. Brown allow him to try a wheel? Certainly. After a spin about town he returned stating that he liked the wheel very much, but he was not quite ready to buy. A little later he came again saying that he had about made up his mind to take the wheel, but would like to try it again to test it as a hill climber. Mr. Brown accommodated him again. At last accounts the fellow is still climbing hills, at least he has not returned the wheel. Mr. Brown has offered $25.00 and the sheriff offers to duplicate it for the return of both the fellow and the wheel.

The Suker-Dunster Wedding.

What might have been a brilliant society affair, had the parties interested seen fit to have made it such, took place Thursday night in the quiet marriage of Miss C. B. Dunster to Dr. Geo. F. Suker. Only the immediate friends of the contracting parties were present. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's mother at 23 S. Division-st. The rite was performed by Revs. Mr. Bradshaw and Tatlock. The happy couple have gone for a trip around the lakes, after which they will locate in Toledo, where the doctor expects to practice.

Farmer's Picnic.

The Farmer's annual basket picnic will be held at Whitmore Lake on Saturday August 25th. It is expected the nominees for Governor of all the political parties represented in Michigan will be present. Half fare rates will undoubtedly be given by all railroads. A cordial invitation is hereby extended to every one.

By order of the committee.
HENRY C. WALDRON,
R. C. REAVES, President.
Sec.

DOINGS AND HAPPENINGS IN MICHIGAN.

A Muskegon Youth Horsewhipped for Trifling—Nesard, the Grand Rapids Murderer Guilty in the First Degree—Train Wreckers.

Intimidation and Dynamite.

Ironwood: The intimidation of miners still continues, but the sheriff and his deputies are making wholesale arrests, which are having a strong effect on the lawless gang that is trying to terrorize the city.

Wreckers Failed—The Tunnel Guarded.

Two unsuccessful attempts were made by train wreckers on the Grand Trunk railroad in one night to derail trains. They were pilled across the tracks near the Agricultural college.

Michigan's Crops.

The monthly report of the statistician of the U. S. department of agriculture gives the following percentages of condition of the various Michigan crops: Corn, 93; wheat, 92; rye, 93; oats, 90; barley, 90; potatoes, 88; beans, 98; sorghum, 88; clover, 78; timothy, 86; apples, 70; peaches, 72; grapes, 70.

A Whole Town Burned.

Mosstown, a suburb on the northern outskirts of Manistee, was completely destroyed by fire. It is a Polish settlement. Twenty houses with barns and buildings were burned, leaving 150 homeless people.

Horsewhipped by a Woman.

Mrs. George Walroth gave A. J. Mason, a young clerk at the Hub grocery store, Muskegon, a most thorough horsewhipping in the store. His hat was smashed, his collar torn off his neck and great welts were raised on his face and shoulders.

In the First Degree.

In January Mrs. Mary McKendrick was found dead, bound and gagged, in her home at Grand Rapids. It was soon discovered that she had been murdered and robbed of several hundred dollars.

The court of common pleas at Columbus, O., refused to appoint a receiver for the Fraternal Mystic Circle, holding that the order was solvent.

Forest fires about Egg Harbor, N. J., devastated many thousand acres, destroying one town, Greenbush, and burning out many farmers' homes.

Advices from Honolulu says that a republic was proclaimed in the Hawaiian Islands, July 4.

Chicago papers publish long articles showing that there is a big exodus of foreigners from that city and the west to Europe, because of the serious condition of industrial affairs in this country.

Washington E. Irving, a nephew of the famous author, was supposed to have died at Escondido, Cal., and his funeral was held.

Fred Cuthbert, aged 10 years, of Bay City, while hunting eggs in his father's barn, fell 15 feet to the floor and was internally injured.

The Chicago & Grand Trunk shops at Battle Creek have resumed work.

George Coates, aged 88 years, of near Adrian, was struck by a barn door blown by a strong wind breaking his hip bone.

The Cincinnati, Jackson & Mackinaw express was dethatched by a washout one mile east of Battle Creek.

William Diedrick, a respectable young man of Jackson, picked a peanut from Raphael Legrier's stand.

A doctor being called and the neighbor had to thrash him into submission.

CONGRESSIONAL NEWS.

SENATE.—17th day.—A resolution introduced by Mr. Vest reciting that charges of favoritism and fraud had been made by exhibitors at the recent Chicago World's Fair exposition against the committee on awards, and directing the committee on the quadricentennial to investigate the charges was referred to the committee on contingent expenses.

SENATE.—19th day.—Mr. Carey called up the Senate bill to reserve for ten years in each of several states 1,000,000 acres of arid lands to be reclaimed and sold in small tracts to actual settlers, and it was passed.

SENATE.—18th day.—Mr. Allen (Pop., Neb.) introduced a resolution calling on the secretary of state for information as to whether any office or bureau has been established on Ellis Island, New York harbor, or any other property of the government for the purpose of furnishing information to Italian or other immigration relative to emigration.

FIRES HOT SHOT.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND ON TARIFF REFORM.

Says Congress Must Redeem the Promises of the Democratic Party—Free Raw Materials Demanded, but Sugar is a Proper Subject for Taxation.

Executive Mansion, Washington, July 12, 1894.

My Dear Sir:—The certainty that a conference will be ordered between the two houses of congress for the purpose of adjusting differences on the subject of tariff legislation, is a matter of which I have no doubt.

In these circumstances they cannot do otherwise than to look with confidence to you and those who with you have patriotically and sincerely championed the cause of tariff reform within Democratic lines and guided by Democratic principles.

Every Democrat and every sincere tariff reformer knows that this bill, in its present form, and as it will be submitted to the conference, is in the interest of the country.

It is quite apparent that the tariff reform subject which can hardly fail to be troublesome to the conference, I refer to the adjustment of the tariff taxation on sugar.

While no tenderness should be entertained for trusts, and while I am decidedly opposed to granting them under the guise of tariff taxation any opportunity to further their pecuniary interests, I suggest that we ought not to be driven away from the Democratic principle and the tariff reform subject.

We all know that a tariff law, covering all the varied interests and conditions of a country as vast as ours, must of necessity be the result of honorable adjustment and compromise.

Both Legs Cut Off by a Reaper. The 3-year-old child of a farmer named Labb, living north of Durand, had both its legs cut off by a binder while playing in a field of grain.

Fred Cuthbert, aged 10 years, of Bay City, while hunting eggs in his father's barn, fell 15 feet to the floor and was internally injured.

The Chicago & Grand Trunk shops at Battle Creek have resumed work. All the old men, with the exception of 30, were taken back.

The total gain in Saginaw county since the federal census was taken is only a trifle over 3,000.

W. S. Slagle purchased strychnine for mice poison and two days later his wife died suddenly. A post-mortem examination disclosed the fact that poisoning was the cause of death. The coroner's inquest decided that it was either a case of accidental poisoning or that she took it with suicidal intent. She was 23 years of age and would have been a mother in a few weeks.

The upper section of the Wyandotte rolling mills, known as the rail mill, burned, entailing a loss of about $20,000, upon which there is no insurance, as the plant has not been operated for a number of years. The property was owned by the Eureka Iron company and is now useless, the only portion remaining being the puddling mill. Last winter the bar mill was burned and both fires are supposed to have been the work of an incendiary.

A soldiers' monument was unveiled in Littlefield park, Farwell. Hon. Washington Gardner delivered the oration. Gov. Rich was to have been there but mixed his dates.

A HEAD-END COLLISION.

Three Men Killed by the Error of an Engineer Near Cincinnati.

There was a head-end collision on the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis railway at Griffith's Station, 15 miles from Cincinnati. Three were killed and ten injured. The express from Chicago was on time, but the St. Louis express, which runs 15 minutes ahead of the Chicago incoming train, was an hour late. At Griffith's Station a light engine was running down to the gravel bank in charge of Engineer Hart. He forgot his orders, knowing the St. Louis express was late, pulled out and was met by the Chicago express. Hart will probably die without being able to tell how he made the mistake. Frank Taylor, of Indianapolis, his fireman, was killed outright, also Charles Sherman and another tramp, who were stealing a ride. There are ten injured, none fatally except Engineer Hart. No passengers were seriously injured. The engineer and fireman of the express train saved their lives by jumping.

Disastrous Fire at Minneapolis.

The most serious fire of the year in Minneapolis and the largest in the history of the city, was that of the building owned by the New Market company and was erected at a cost of $290,000 and opened about the time of the Republican national convention in 1893. In addition to its purposes as a market it was used by 50 commission merchants, 138 stands, 200 market gardeners. The structure was entirely destroyed, involving a loss including the original cost and value of the stocks contained therein of $475,000. Thirty horses and thousands of fowl were burned. The fire spread to a livery stable, store and three residences which were destroyed and a number of other business and private buildings were damaged. The total loss is $500,000.

The only fatality resulting from the fire was the death of Miron Finley, a lineman, who was handling some wires after the fire was nearly out and caught hold of a telegraph wire which became crossed with an electric light wire. The result was almost instant death.

Mattie Goff, a colored woman of Manchester, committed suicide with rough-on-rats. Family troubles.

How it Was Managed.

James Payn tells of a friend of his who had avoided jury duty for some time by the assistance of a government official in acknowledgment of a certain douceur; but he got tired of paying an annuity, and wanted it to be done with for good and all. "For ten pounds," said the official, "I will guarantee that you shall never be troubled again," and the money was paid. When the day came for his attendance at the court, John Jones, let us call him, could not resist the temptation of seeing how his money had been invested. He described the sensation of hearing the name "John Jones" called out as rather peculiar; it was called out a second time, and he could hardly resist answering to his name; when it was called out a third time, he felt quite eerie, and much more so at what took place in consequence. A person in deep mourning and with a voice broken with emotion, exclaimed, "John Jones is dead, my lord." And his lordship, with a little reflected melancholy in his tone, observed, "Poor fellow; scratch his name out.—Argonaut.

Each ward will be entitled to delegates as follows: First ward..... 10 Fourth ward..... 8 Second ward..... 9 Fifth ward..... 4 Third ward..... 9 Sixth ward..... 8 By Order of Ward Committees.

The Monroe Commercial gave General Spalding a two column send off last week. Evidently the general knows the value of newspaper publicity and in his case has a friend at court.

If large attendance, enthusiasm, and perfect harmony means anything it means that the republican county convention held Tuesday points to the success of the party in Washtenaw county this fall.

The old twenty-second Michigan infantry will have a special cause for rejoicing at their reunion at Lapeer on Aug 31st. On that occasion it will have back its old battle flag which saw some of the hardest fighting in the great rebellion. The finding of the old and beloved flag and its return to the regiment have been largely due to the efforts of Col. Henry S. Dean.

The friends of W. K. Childs are bestirring themselves in the interests of his candidacy for County Clerk. Mr. Childs' clerical ability taken in connection with his wide and favorable acquaintance throughout the county would make him a very strong candidate. His position as secretary of the Washtenaw Mutual Fire Ins. Co. for the past seven years has probably made him acquainted with more people than any other one man in the county today.

ONE thing, above all others, that the republican party needs to do in the county this fall to insure the election of its candidates is to put up men who, besides being representative men, and men who are competent to fill acceptably the offices for which they are nominated, are willing to get out and do some hard work. There can be no question that victory is in sight this fall, but it is not a victory that is going to come to the party for the waiting. Put men in the field who are willing to work and then let every republican in the county come out on election day. If this is done THE REGISTER predicts that the county will be carried by from 200 to 500 majority.

THE feeling toward the great "I am" of the democratic party is shown in a very emphatic way by the leaders in his own party in the following remarks by senator Gorman (dem) from Maryland in speaking of Cleveland's letter concerning the Wilson bill:

"In patriotism, the democrats of the senate had gone to work to save the country and keep their party in power when suddenly, in the midst of the struggle, came the president's letter. It was the most uncalculated, the most extraordinary, the most unwise commission," said he in bitter tones, "that ever came from a president of the United States. It placed this body in a position where its members must see to it that the dignity and honor of this chamber must be preserved. "It places me," said Mr. Gorman, "in a position where I must tell the story as it occurred. The limit of endurance has been reached."

Congressional Possibilities.

"The Politician" of The Detroit Tribune has the following to say in regard to the situation in this district:

The Second District congressional contest becomes more interesting every day, and is likely to prove a puzzle to even the best informed men within its limits up to the time the convention declares its choice. S. L. Wallace, of Carleton, said yesterday: "Though the convention is several weeks ahead of us, yet it is almost certain that Washtenaw will present three candidates, Lenawee two and Jackson and Monroe one each. The lower end of Wayne is said to be solid for Monroe's candidate. The only possible solution of the problem is that the break which must come before a selection can be made will come in one of the counties which are unable to agree upon a candidate. A smash in Lenawee would doubtless mean a considerable gain for General Spalding, of Monroe, and while a few votes from the former might go to O'Donnell, of Jackson, a break-up in Washtenaw would add a few to General Spalding's following. The press of Washtenaw and Lenawee are trying to concentrate their respective forces, but even then the diversity of choice between the counties remains. The Monroe delegation is composed of energetic and experienced men, who will prove tireless Spalding workers. No, there is no ill feeling in the contest, and the nominee will receive a united support that is sure to elect him."

A Washtenaw County man, who has traveled over the district a good bit of late, but whose position would not allow him to be quoted, took a different view of the case. "Washtenaw won't go into the convention with a split delegation," said he. "She will unite on some one of her candidates and personally I am of the opinion that it will be A. J. Sawyer, of Ann Arbor. He is as good a man as any other in the race and that's saying a good deal. The contest between ex-Congressman O'Donnell and Mayor Brooks in Jackson may force that county to present another name. When I was there the other day I heard a number of influential men express a desire that General George Devlin's name might be used in the convention. I don't know that he's a candidate, but he could get strong support throughout the district if he had the nomination. For that matter there is an excellent chance in the district anyhow. The prevailing republican sentiment of the country is going to count and some of Congressman Gorman's disappointees are very bitter I don't mean to say that we can elect anyone we nominate, but there's plenty of good timber and a good man can win."

Sewer Committee Meeting.

The meeting of the sewer committee last night to discuss the engineer's report on the Liberty st. lateral system and hear from citizens interested in the work was a quiet, harmonious affair. No one made any objection to any part of the work, but one citizen when going away said they would hear from him before the work was done.

The Liberty st. lateral system will be a little over one mile long. It goes from State st. to the main sewer and the branches extend 470 feet on the cross streets toward William st., but there are no branches on the cross streets north of Liberty. This is on account of the lay of the ground. The committee discussed the specifications which seem strong enough to satisfy anyone and proposed a few minor additions. The principal discussion was over a proposition to put a clause in the contract compelling the contractor to employ Ann Arbor labor. The committee was unanimously of the opinion that there should be such a clause, but how to get it in without working a hardship to any one was the question. Ald. Manly proposed at first that the contractors should pay not less than 15 cents an hour for common labor, but as it was shown that there were men who could not earn that who would be glad to work for what they could earn this proposition was modified. There was a general feeling that no contractor would be allowed to bring in cheap outside labor and the contract will undoubtedly be made on the basis of fair pay to Ann Arbor labor.—Saturday's Times.

Prof. Hinsdale left yesterday for Provo, Utah, where he will deliver a course of lectures at a summer school to be held there. Mrs. Hinsdale will accompany the professor.

Among the Politicians.

"The best laid schemes of mice and men, Gang aft a-gley." —BURNS.

"Have you heard those three 'good and sufficient' reasons why Geo. Clarken should not be nominated for sheriff?" said the oldest of a coterie of court house politicians in one of the court house corridors last Saturday? "I tell you they are clinchers and will consign Geo. to everlasting political oblivion, sure. Clarken better draw out of the race before he is everlastingly crushed, teetotally ground into the earth as it were. Haven't you heard them? Well I'll give them to you.

First, because. Second, Because. Third, Because, if he's nominated he'll beat us, that's dead sure.

"Maybe General Spalding thinks it cute to pretend to totally ignore the existence of Washtenaw's leading candidate for the republican nomination for congress in his interview in the Evening News last Friday" remarked a "dyed-in-the-wool" republican to a crowd on H. J. Brown's corner yesterday afternoon. "Then, too, did you notice that Gen. Spalding's organ, the Monroe Commercial, put the Hon. A. J. Sawyer in the list of Democratic candidates recently? Such tactics are vote getters—for the other man."

"It beats the world," remarked a Fourth Ward politician to a group of Third Ward heeleders on Detroit-st. last Tuesday, "what's got into you fellows this fall. You know our chances are fearfully slim this year, so much so that we can't be so liberal. Boys, this is a season of retrenchment. You act as though you suspected it was your last chance to bleed us fellows who happen to be in office. Guess we are all right for one more year any how. Any how hurrah for the democratic party and free trade, especially free wool."

"It just makes me smile to see that court house ring hustling to prevent the nomination of Geo. Clarken for sheriff, said an anti-republican democrat to another anti in the hearing of ye scribe Saturday night. "Guess they have come to the conclusion that a worker like Geo., who is on to the tricks of the gang in milking the county, would make things altogether too hot for them should he secure the nomination. From present indications they will squirm worse than that before they are done. Guess I'll kodak a few of the squirms."

"Do you know," said an Ypsilanti statesman to THE REGISTER last Monday, "that the Supreme Court of Michigan is not 'in it' when Capt. Allen gets right down to business. Just think of it, only last week, by the depth of his logic, he succeeded in persuading an intelligent Ypsilanti jury to reverse a decision of Michigan Supreme Court. I tell you that's a feat to make one proud. I see that the Captain is receiving a goodly number of votes for Prosecuting Atty. in THE REGISTER contest. That great effort ought to get him a hundred votes, unless other candidates stir up their latent energies with a great and mighty stir and perform some mighty act of legal prowess. If they don't, they will soon be wishing they never had been born."

Declared a Main-st. hustler last Saturday night. "I was over at Ypsilanti and had a pleasant chat with Carlisle McKinstry, the affable clerk of our down-stream neighbor. Is he in the race for a nomination this fall? Well he has trained his guns upon the office of Register of Deeds and you may be assured that a bullet will strike in that particular spot at both convention and election time this fall. Mac. is a hustler and I know he will get there."

"Have you caught on to the beautiful and intricate nature of that tricornered fight that's on for the democratic nomination for clerk?" said a Huron street politician this morning in the Cook House lobby. "If there isn't blood shed there before the convention is over then I'm no prophet. Jim Bach has the backing of the court house ring and is positive that lightning will strike his real estate agency. Capt. Schuh has also been promised that particularly bright and shining prize by Buffalo Jim Gorman, a promise that was given to placate what few if any German democrats there are left in the party, and the Capt. means fight until the last ditch is crossed before he will surrender. The other corner of the triangle is being held down firmly by John Baumgardner. He sees that war is on to the death between the other two and he has reason to believe that the eschems in the party will see the danger of two headlights in the party being put out, and so will call the first two off before life is extinct in either, in order not to loose their votes, and thus he will be able to step to the front. Great head John has—never been defeated yet—why should he now?"

"Let me give THE REGISTER a pointer," said one of Ann Arbor's shrewd republican politicians in a Washington street store last Monday. "The dems are on the run, sure, this fall, and one of the things that would help to make the aforesaid run a complete rout in Washtenaw county, would be to nominate the Honorable E. P. Allen of Ypsilanti for prosecuting attorney. Do you remember that he was in that office once and all who know anything about it, say we never had a better prosecutor. Then too he was elected when the county was at least 300 democratic. I wonder why somebody has not suggested this before. I say give the Captain a send off. He certainly would add strength to the ticket."

"It is said that several of our local politicians," said an ex-county official to THE REGISTER yesterday, "have been attending the races in Detroit during the past week 'catching on' to training methods for fast steppers! As a result we may expect some new and novel methods in the pending campaign. Stand aside, gentlemen, unless you are onto the latest tricks of the track and don't want to get run over."

National Boards of Arbitration.

Do we need more courts and how shall they be established, is the question often asked in these troublesome times. Many answer that we have courts enough now, to meet every requirement of all classes of citizens. This might seem to be so, still the poor men complain and declare, that it is very difficult, if not quite impossible, for them to get justice in suits against very wealthy men and corporations.

I see very clearly that one should be slow to cast any reflections upon our courts of justice. They are the last bulwark of American liberties. We turn to them when all other resources fail. If they will not or cannot right the wrongs between individual citizens, or between citizens and corporations, then the citizen will be inclined and strongly tempted to resort to force.

I am also well aware that exact and perfect remedies for all wrongs cannot be furnished by human tribunals. Like everything human the courts are fallible. We may, however, justly demand and expect that the courts will do approximate justice in nearly all cases. Notwithstanding all these considerations and many others that were mentioned, still we must not cloak the truth, even to protect reputation of the most valued institutions. Can the poor man then reasonably expect to obtain approximate justice in a majority of cases which he may have against rich corporations? We are compelled to say that he cannot. This is not so because Judges or Jurors are not favorable, but especially in the Circuit Courts they lean, if anything, towards the cause of the poor man. The difficulty arises from the great power of wealth under the machinery of our judicial system. The corporations are able to employ and do employ the ablest counsel. These counsel can, and usually do, object to nearly every question asked by opposing counsel, and except to the ruling of the court if against them. If the court refuses their requests to charge the jury upon matters of law, or gives the requests of the opposing counsel, they except to the ruling. These rulings have to be made in haste and generally without examination of the authorities, and if a Solomon sat upon the bench, it would be impossible to keep out all error.

A Co-Ed Strike.

To the Editor of THE REGISTER:-

I clip the following from the Democrat, July 13th, 1894:

Young ladies who come to Ann Arbor to attend college are puzzling their brains to find out why the women who rent rooms (with few exceptions) charge them the same rent that they do the young men, and then refuse to take care of their rooms. As a general thing rooms occupied by young men require twice the amount of work to care for them as those occupied by young women. Again, the time of the young women is certainly much more taken up than that of the young men, for they not only have to get just as many lessons but have to spend a vast amount of time in entertaining the young men, themselves. This is a very fine opportunity indeed, for women to confer equal rights upon their dependent and less fortunate sisters, and for the dependent ones to assert their independence and demand equal rights.

This lady "Debs" would have the girls go on a strike. Don't you do it, girls. Why? Because it would bring into prominence the only true argument against co-education. The girls need not "puzzle their brains." A glance at the Democrat will explain it all. I. e. "the time of the young women is certainly much more taken up than that of the young men, for they not only have to get just as many lessons but have to spend a vast amount of time entertaining the young men themselves." The supposition is that parents send their children here to school to be taught the higher branches of education and not for the purpose of "entertaining the young men themselves." The Democrat certainly knows but little about the work necessary to take care of the rooms occupied by the young men," otherwise she would not make mention in comparison with those of the young ladies. Young men are seldom in their rooms except for study and sleep. Since old Mother Eve got Father Adam into trouble, the boys have had a hankering after girls and so long as they can spend their leisure time with the girls, they are going to do it; for this reason it is often doubtful just who is actually the occupant of the room or rooms as they come in and go out at will any hour between 8 A. M. and 11 P. M. The girls, when they lease a room, assume that they have presented every right belonging to the house, kitchen, dining room, wash and ironing room and halls, and no member of the household has any authority to question that right.

For this convenience, as it is, develops the longer they stay. All those who have rooms to lease prefer gentlemen rather than have their house turned into a restaurant as it were. Cooking and frying for the purpose of "setting a spread" for the young men themselves by the young ladies who come to Ann Arbor to attend college.

FRUIT JARS.

Did it ever occur to you that there is a big difference in fruit jars, even in Mason's. Some are made in Ohio, Ohio glass is brittle at least in Ohio, Ohio glass jars cost a fraction more, but last twice as long. A little more of an apiece in first cost is small but it will make the jars last twice as long. Andrews & Son 9 North Main-st., keep the Lockport jars, also everything in the line of first class groceries.

We can give you satisfaction both in price as well as workmanship if you wish to have any upholstering done. Always glad to make estimates.

Arthur S. Henion.

Arthur S. Henion, after two weeks illness of typhoid fever, died yesterday morning. His death was a surprise to his friends, although his attack was severe from the first. He was a young man of excellent qualities and bright promise, and his untimely death came as a crushing blow to his family, who, though they are comparative strangers, have the sympathy of the entire community in their bereavement. Their former home was Ann Arbor, Mich., whither the family departed, with the remains yesterday afternoon, where the interment will take place near other of his kindred. A brief service, conducted by Rev. S. N. Wilson, was delivered before the departure of the family and friends for the train.—Anderson, Ind. Herald.

I. C. Handy.

I. C. Handy, of 52 S. Division-st., one of our old and respected citizens, died last Sunday of heart disease. Mr. Handy had been in poor health for a long time, but his death was not looked for so suddenly. Mr. Handy has, for several years, carried on a carriage painting and repairing business, and had become well known and highly respected. He was past 70 years of age at the time of his death. He leaves a daughter and two sons. Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at the residence. Rev. Mr. Bradshaw conducted the services which were in charge of the Masons.

AS BIG AS PIGEON EGGS.

Hemorrhoids that Make Life Miserable.

How often you hear people complain of "only a slight case of piles," often claiming that the trouble is merely temporary, induced by costiveness, long standing or sedentary habits. It may be very well to console yourself in this way, but it is much better to check the trouble at once. You can't do it too soon. In time these little rectal tumors will grow from the size of grapes until a knot of them results as large as pigeon's eggs. These become inflamed and exquisitely tender to the touch and are filled with throbbing, burning and stinging sensations. And thus the disease continues growing from bad to worse until finally the victim can only endure it by remaining in a horizontal position. Pyramid Pile Cure is a certain remedy for piles in any of these stages. It goes to the very source of the trouble and drives out all inflammation, causing the tumors to subside and the various distorted membranes to resume their natural places. The disease leads to too many complications to admit of experiment. Pyramid Pile Cure is manufactured by the Pyramid Drug Co. at Albion, Mich., and is sold by all druggists. The remedy is a positive cure for either itching, aching or bleeding piles. It is not an experimental venture, but is a tried and true cure, having been formulated by specialists who are famous in the field of medicine. If you are a sufferer you should not delay. This remedy requires no supplementary treatment. It is perfect and complete in itself. Simply follow directions and a cure is certain to follow.

HOPE FOR THE HAIRLESS.

Professor Birkholz, of Chicago, gives hope to those afflicted with Baldness. "A No Cure, No Pay" Treatment.

Prof. G. Birkholz, of Chicago, the eminent German specialist, who for years has devoted his time and talent to the study of the hair follicles, and has evolved the most successful treatment for baldness the world has ever known.

He will carefully examine each case and candidly inform the inquirer whether his baldness can be cured and the hair be restored. These examinations are made without charge.

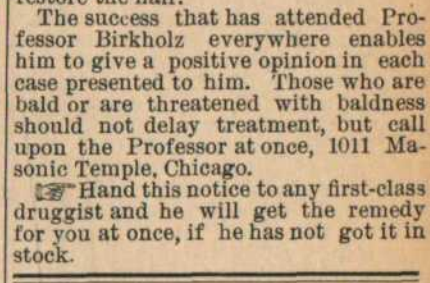

In all cases where there are any hair follicles remaining undestroyed by age or the disease the Professor will undertake a cure, and if he does not effect a restoration of the hair he will ask no pay.

The remedy is an important one, and the treatment given by the Professor is his own, and cures where all others fail. If your case has been pronounced incurable do not take it as a final answer until you have seen Professor Birkholz and received his opinion.

Many persons have small bald spots through the hair. These increase in area and in time produce complete baldness. In such cases the hair follicles need nourishment. Prompt treatment will bring them in activity and restore the hair.

The success that has attended Professor Birkholz everywhere enables him to give a positive opinion in each case presented to him. Those who are bald or are threatened with baldness should not delay treatment, but call upon the Professor at once, 1011 Masonic Temple, Chicago.

Send this notice to any first-class druggist and he will get the remedy for you at once, if he has not got it in stock.

WOMAN'S WILES

MISS Wardour will be here today. My wife glanced up from the letter which she was reading, in her comfortable seat behind the silver coffee-urn, with a look of mild surprise in her blue eyes.

she said—and you—"Were once betrothed lovers?" "Is that it, Daisy? Well, yes; it is true; but Florence—Miss Wardour, I mean—saw fit to break it off. I am sure I am under obligations to her, for, had she not done so, I should never have had you, dear."

Daisy looked uncomfortable. "But, Charlie, isn't it a little unusual, to say the least, for a lady to visit at a gentleman's house, when she was once his intended wife? And to come without an invitation from me, seems odd at least."

Now I—Charlie Dane—six months a benedict, a popular lawyer, and with a pretty home and lovely wife, knew that Daisy was perfectly correct. But some perverse spirit took possession of me. Surely I was master of my own house. And Miss Wardour's visit was merely a business affair.

The result was that one day Florence returned my ring and announced to me that she had changed her mind, and was going to marry Mr. Cheswicke. Of course I released her. That was three years ago, and I had since met my Daisy, and we had been married half a year. Our home was in Philadelphia, and we were living happily, when old Mr. Wardour died at his home in the suburbs, and Florence was summoned to his death-bed.

At last, Daisy was brought over to my way of thinking, and Miss Wardour was received and made welcome. She was a tall, handsome brunette, as unlike my blue-eyed, sunny-haired Daisy as possible. As my gaze fell upon the graceful figure in deep mourning, I was pleased to discover that my heart did not thrill, and I felt none of the pleasant sensations experienced when one cares for another. Thank heaven, my love was entirely dead, every trace and vestige of it.

My eyes wandered toward Daisy. She was welcoming her self-invited

"WHY DID YOU JILT ME?" guest with easy grace, and I said to myself, "My darling little wife! I never loved that other woman as I love her!"

"Ah, Charlie!" cried our guest, putting both gloved hands in mine, and letting her glorious dark eyes rest upon my face with a deep, intense gaze, "it's quite like old times to see you again! And you have not changed one bit!"

It was, to say the least, in decidedly bad taste—this reference to the dead and gone days; but I merely smiled and uttered some common-place nothing.

What could I do then, but tell her to remain as long as she chose? Time passed, and Florence and I were constantly thrown together. Daisy pleaded household affairs and absented herself continually. I went on, unconsciously treading in a dangerous path; my feet were upon the edge of a swirling vortex; one swift movement and I would be lost.

It was certainly very pleasant for me to have the beautiful face of our guest opposite me when I sat down to read at night—to read aloud; with Daisy in a corner, quiet and unobtrusive, keeping out of the way, because she was too proud to interfere. And I—blind fool—never dreamed the truth.

One night, Florence sat at the piano, in the moonlight which flooded the room. She had begged that the gas should not be lighted; and there she sat, her white fingers touching the keys, while her sweet, low voice sang, softly, tenderly, meaningly, the words of a sad old song—A Life's Regret:

"Turning the leaves in an idle way, Of a book I was skimming the other day, I found a line at the end of a song, Which keeps on haunting me all day long 'Oh, love, my love, had you loved but me! Sadder a burden could never be— Than, 'Love, my love, and you lov'd but me!'"

"Few words and simple; but, oh, how much The singer had told in that little touch! How hard a story of chances lost, Or bright hopes blighted, and true love crossed, Is heard in the whispered melody: 'Oh, love, my love, had you loved but me! To many a sorrow the key may be: 'Oh, love, my love, had you loved but me!'"

Her eyes met mine with a look in their depths which made my heart leap. It was not love—thank God for that!—but gratified vanity, which more than one man has mistaken for love.

"Florence!" I murmured, "why did you jilt me? Why did you cast me off?" Her head drooped. "I will tell you frankly," she said. "I was mercenary, and you were not rich. Mr. Cheswicke was a millionaire—and—and I madly threw aside your love for his gold! Oh, Charlie! Charlie darling, I have regretted it ever since! My heart has wept tears of blood over my mad mistake!"

Now, it happened—or had a kind Providence directed it?—that I had heard a different version of this story that day—had heard it from no less a person than old Mr. Cheswicke himself. She had engaged herself to him, but he distrusted the disinterestedness of her motives, and had come to her one day and told her that his fortune was gone—lost in a mad venture, and he was a poor man. She had promptly released him from the engagement.

So, I knew just what value to set upon the fair lady's "tale of woe." But some devil prompted me—and I stooped and kissed her upon the shining, dark hair, which she wore in a huge knot at the back of her head.

There was the rustle of skirts, a flash of white drapery, and, with a gasp, I realized that my wife, standing unobserved beside the open window, had overheard and witnessed the scene.

With a muttered imprecation over my own madness, I dashed through the open window and followed her. "Daisy!" I called aloud, "wait, dear! I wish to speak with you!"

But she never stopped, never turned to left nor right, and I followed in mad pursuit. On, on, slight and frail as she was, I overtook her and caught her in my arms.

"Now tell me, my wife, what were you going to do?" I whispered. She struggled to get free. "I am going away," she cried, indignantly. "You love that 'bad woman, Charlie! I will go and leave you to your own devices."

"You will do nothing of the sort," I returned, firmly. "Come back to the house with me, my darling. We will cast out the evil spirit, and henceforth only love and peace shall reign within our home."

With Daisy on my arm, I re-entered the house, and there I told Miss Wardour in a few well-chosen words, that I had fathomed her scheme to bring discord and ruin into a happy home.

She listened in sullen silence; then she arose and coldly withdrew. The next morning she entered my waiting carriage and was driven to the nearest station. She has gone to Canada to live, and nobody here misses her. But, remembering her subtle fascination—the fascination of the serpent, I feel very grateful that old Mr. Cheswicke had appeared in time to keep me from falling into her wicked net. For even the strongest man is not always proof against a wicked woman's wiles.

Northern Michigan Resorts.

Few places offer so many advantages for tired people as do the popular resorts on the shores of Lake Michigan and its tributary bays are peculiarly inviting during the hot weather. The bracing air, cool nights and freedom from dust contribute to make this region a natural sanitarium, for the recuperation of exhausted energies.

The Way To Reach These Resorts is via the CHICAGO & WEST MICHIGAN

Railway, which runs through the entire region, and is known as "The Scenic Line," on account of the beautiful scenery through which it passes, traversing the shores of lakes, rivers, and bays, for miles, which, with the splendid service offered by this line makes the trip a delightful one.

Through parlor and sleeping cars from Detroit to Petoskey and Bay View are run during July, August and September, via the DETROIT LANSING & NORTHERN Railroad to Grand Rapids thence via the C. & W. M. Tourist tickets at reduced rates are sold at principal stations on these and other lines from June 1st to Sept. 30—good to return until Oct. 31.

LITTLE GABE'S JOURNEY

FROM my windows we could look across the courtyard into the interior of the entresol, in which little Gabriel's family lived—little Gabe, they called him in the house. The father was a cutter in a cloak house, the mother, worn down by much bearing of children, white-haired, though she was but fifty-five, and feeble, looked after the household with such strength as she had left. Of their five children, the three oldest had gone out into the world to earn their living. The two youngest were left at home, a girl of eighteen, who was a dressmaker, and little Gabe, who was a hunchback.

The child of parents who, like so many others among the Paris working classes, had passed half their life in the unwholesome atmosphere of dark, ill-ventilated back-shops, little Gabe was hopelessly deformed in every way. His thin, little, feeble legs scarcely supported his warped and stunted body; his head, which had developed out of all proportion, was sunken between his shoulders. But the child's face had an exquisite delicacy, and an expression that haunted one's memory. He was 8 years old, but from his height one would not have taken him to be 5; yet, with his prominent forehead, his two large, meditative, dark-brown eyes, so sad, so precocious in their thoughtfulness, the face of little Gabe was almost that of a man of 20. His father, his mother and the elder sister, worshipped the child on account of his gentle ways and his intelligence, which was very unusually advanced.

One evening, after school hours, I saw him sitting near the porter's lodge, at the door. His mother had gone out to buy something, and, as his sister had not returned from her work, he had found the rooms locked and was waiting, leaning against the wall, with his eyes hungrily turned toward the street, and on his face a look of resigned patience. I stopped to speak to him and he answered me with long, frightened, observing glances. At that moment his sister came in, breathlessly.

"Ah, my poor Gabe," she cried. "I kept you waiting! You were getting impatient, were you not?"

"No," replied little Gabe, quietly, in a voice as clear as a silver bell. "I was only thinking that perhaps you were tired of me and would not come back. I am so ill and give so much trouble."

"Oh, you naughty boy!" exclaimed the young girl, covering him with kisses. She turned to me with her eyes full of tears.

"He is so intelligent and so lovable! He is like a grown person in his ideas. If only he had a little health and strength! The doctor said that if we could take him to Berk this summer the sea air and the playing in the sand might do him good. But Berk is far and it costs so much to go! All the same, I must try to earn the money in some way."

And the young girl worked morning and evening to get the necessary sum together. She beat for hours over her machine, plaiting, piping, cutting, basting, sewing almost without a moment's rest.

"THEY USED TO STOP THE BOY."

Every one in the house knew little Gabe's history, and the tenants' wives on the different floors provided the young seamstress with work. They used to stop the boy when they met him in the courtyard or on the landing. They caressed him, spoke gently to him and sent him sweetmeats. But the child was very shy and reserved. Instead of giving him pleasure, all this interest which people took in him seemed to make him more thoughtful.

"The lady on the third floor gave me some toys," he would say to his sister. "I don't understand why, since she does not know me." Then, after ruminating a moment, he would add with a keenness which gave a heartrending insight into the workings of the childish brain: "It must be because I am a hunchback."

Work had been plentiful and in a corner of the bureau drawer the little savings bank was rapidly filling up. July was near and preparations were already being made for little Gabe's journey. A new leather trunk had been bought; a new suit had been made for him, and the child talked of nothing else to his schoolmates but of that journey of his to the seashore. Yet at the last moment, an accident came which upset all these plans. The young wife of the government employe on the fifth floor had given the little seamstress her wedding dress to trim and revamp in the fashion of the day. It was a dress which had cost something in the first place, and, of course, one wanted to make it do for little dances, etc., the following winter.

One evening while little Gabe was playing with the inkstand, it slipped from his thin hands and the contents poured themselves over the satin of the dress.

They did not scold him. The consternation on his face was hard enough to see, as it was. The sister smothered a scream, and began nervously, silently, to sponge the stuff, and calculate the extent of the damage done. The ink had ruined eight breadths of the satin. Eight breadths at fifteen francs a metre—that made a total of 120 francs. This was much to take from the little savings bank, much to take from the money set aside for little Gabe's journey. It must be given up for this year. That journey to the seaside so long talked of. The seamstress kissed little Gabe, and set to work again.

The following winter was a hard one in the entresol. The autumn had been rainy and little Gabe's health had suffered. He had pains in his bones, fever and headaches. The doctor auscultating him, had shaken his head and insisted again that the child should be sent to Berk as soon as the warm weather came. This time there was to be no question about it. No matter what it might cost, they would go to the seashore at the end of May. The sewing machine whirred more swiftly than ever, and the light down there burned later into the night. They had bought little Gabe a picture book with nothing but sea views in it; sketches of ports with a forest of masts in a line along the quays; rocky cliffs with white waves breaking at their feet; fishermen's barges scattered over the sea like a flight of white-winged birds.

The child seemed now to talk of nothing but the sea. He dreamed of it at night, and sometimes during the day, he had strange, sick hallucinations, in which he saw, in the gray fog that filled the courtyard, the vision of a coast beaten by the tides, of expanses of water on which sailed ships with swelling sails.

The winter turned out to be unusually cold and damp, and I now never met little Gabe in the porte-cochere. The doctor had absolutely forbidden his going out. From time to time I saw him at his window, back of the raised curtain. His sorrowful eyes, which were sunken in their sockets, looked out wonderingly, and his thin little fingers seemed to be tracing vaguely the outlines of ships against the pane. Then suddenly his glance would fall upon the casement at which I stood, and feeling that I was watching him, he would draw the muslin curtain down with nervous shyness. Toward the middle of March I ceased seeing him at the window. His bones ached more and more, his enfeebled limbs seemed no longer able to carry him, and the pains in his head were growing worse. He spent whole days stretched out in his little bed, turning over the leaves of that picture book, where for the hundredth time, he could see the sea and the great ships with their white sails. He had not given up the idea of his journey.

"When shall we be going?" he would ask his sister. And when the young girl explained to him that they must wait for spring, he would insist in his shrill little voice:

"But I am in a hurry; I want to get well quickly, very quickly, so you may not cry any more."

And, in the meantime, he wanted always to have near him the large pink shell whose pearly edges, when he layed his ear against them, made him hear the far-away sound of that sea which was to cure him of all his ills.

Toward Easter I no longer heard the dull hum of the sewing machine in the entresol. There was no more work done down there, but the lamp-light that streamed from one window till late into the night showed that watchers were sitting by the sick child's bedside.

"He is very low," murmured the porter's wife, instinctively drawing a fat little urchin of her own closer to her skirts. "It won't be very long now. Poor little fellow, it would be a happy release."

One morning at the door I passed a narrow box carried by two undertakers and followed by the mourners. It was little Gabe, who had left at last, for his journey toward the measureless sea of the unknown.

Forty Winks for Insomnia.

"I have a new remedy for insomnia," said the nervous member, as he entered the club-rooms. "If it is good, tell us about it." "It is very simple. Just go to bed and take the most comfortable position for sleeping. Then slowly open and close your eyes. If after forty winks you are not asleep then try forty more. The great difficulty with the victims of insomnia is that they almost always fall to thinking of the events of the day. This may be prevented by persistent counting, but that itself is a mental effort and wakes one up. Not so, however, with winking. I defy any of you to think of anything else while you are engaged in this simple exercise."

Natural as Life.

They were having some private theatricals, and Mr. and Mrs. Bingley gave the scene from "The School for Scandal," in which Sir Peter berates and reproaches Lady Teazle for her extravagance and other shortcomings. Edith Bingley, aged 8, was in the audience, and when asked at the close of the entertainment how she had enjoyed her parents' acting, she electrified her hearers by saying, in a tone of disappointment: "Acting! They were not acting. That is the way they do all the time at home!"

RIPPLES OF LAUGHTER

Freddy, lighting a cigarette—You—aw—don't mind my smoking, do you? Stranger—Not at all, sir. I work in a glue factory.

"I challenge you to a duel." "Accepted." "Your choice of weapons—dagger or pistols?" "Neither. Winter ascent of Mont Blanc—rotten rope—three feet distance."

Hicks, in the graveyard, reading a tombstone—Sacred to the memory of Thomas Slendermind. Wicks—Yes; isn't it ridiculous? Slendermind was the most forgetful fellow that ever lived.

Mrs. Numother—Look at the baby; doesn't he seem really different from most babies of his age—he is so—Mr. Crusty—Yes—er—I think very often they are quite attractive, but, as you say, he is different.

Mean Man—Say! run for the doctor! A neighbor of mine had some of your sausage last night and he is very sick. Butcher—Mein cracious! It can not be he has trichinosis? Mean Man—No-o; I think it's more like hydrophobia.

"Papa," asked Tommy Goodman, "who was Cain's wife?" "Caroline," said the Rev. Dr. Goodman, after an ominous pause, addressing his wife, "will you please hand me my heaviest slipper and leave the room? There is going to be a trial for heresy right here and now."

"Remember, witness," sharply exclaimed the attorney for the defense, "you are on oath!" "There ain't no danger of my forgettin' it," replied the witness, sullenly. "I'm tellin' the truth fur nothin', when I could have made $4 by lyin' fur your side of the case, an' you know it."

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhoea and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.
"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
Dr. G. C. Osmond, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
Dr. J. F. Kincheloe, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.
"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. Archer, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

BOWDISH & MATTESON,

32 South State Street.

We were, this week, unavoidably obliged to omit Prof. Ten Brook's article. We regret this since so many of our readers are interested in this series of papers.

Eli R. Sutton, one of Pingree's right-hand men, was in the city last Thursday for a few minutes looking after the mayor's fences here. He was on his way to Grand Rapids to arrange headquarters for the Pingree forces at the state convention.

Last Thursday was the hottest day so far this summer and hotter than any day last year. Ninety-seven in the shade at the Observatory, the coolest place in town, means that down-town it was fully 102 or 103. We believe it was even worse than that in THE REGISTER office.

John F. Lawrence, of Ann Arbor, has fully determined after much time given to erect a consideration of the matter, to a new office. He intended to build it on a lot at the corner of Fourth ave. and Ann-st., but the Argus says he has decided to build it on reflection.—Adrian Press.

The fire department was called out at nine p. m. Tuesday by an alarm from G. H. Wild's tailor shop on E. Washington st. It was caused by some charcoal in the work-room catching fire. No damage was done as the fire was put out without the necessity of turning on the water.

Low H. Clement left yesterday for the East. After a short stop in Cleveland he will sail for England to look after the interests of the A. A. Organ Co. He will probably be gone about a month. The increasing demand for the Ann Arbor Organ in England makes the trip necessary.

Edgar Warner has been arrested, charged with brutally whipping his little 5 year old stepson. In default of $1000 bail he was remanded to jail, where he will have to remain until his trial. The Humane Society is pushing the case and will very likely succeed in having Warner sent up for a term in state's prison.

The Ypsilantian editor can't understand how it is that when farmers are seeking help in vain, strong able bodied men, hold down the iron railings in public places, and expatriate on the paralyzed condition of the country due to democratic rule. Friend Osband, they are working up a congressional delegation for Bro. Allen. They are living examples of the depressed condition of labor.—Adrian Press.

In 1884, Ann Arbor had a population of 7912, in 1890, 9431, and 1894, 11071. This shows a gain of 1519 between 1884 and 1890 and 1640 between 1890 and 1894. The towns which have gained since 1890 are: Augusta, 53; Lima, 2; Salem, 21; Sharon, 41; Superior, 9; Sylvan, 90, and Ypsilanti, 77. The thirteen other towns have fallen off in about the same proportion. The city of Ypsilanti has lost 18, while Ann Arbor has gained 1640.

There came near being an accident, which might have proved serious, at the home of F. S. Gaige. Through a mistake in the cans, gasoline was poured into an oil stove.—Ann Arbor Times.

That's right. Lay it to the cans. They either make a mistake or have a mistake in them. These cans get up and make mistakes purposely, and pour the wrong fluid into stoves. It's a burning shame for cans to do this.—Adrian Press.

THE REGISTER voting ballot is receiving more and more attention each week. Ballots are being sent in from every voting precinct in the county so that the result from week to week shows quite definitely the drift of opinion as to candidates. Some of the candidates are talking of having boxes placed at convenient places throughout the county where these ballots may be deposited. If you are a candidate get your friends interested. It is the best possible method to get your name before the public.

The young people's societies of the city will unite during the month of August, services to be held in the church selected for the union evening services. The meetings will begin at 6:30. A cordial invitation is extended to all. The following topics and leaders have been chosen: Aug. 5, Companionship with Jesus; Acts 4:13: Mr. Wm. Hull. Aug. 12, Am I needed? Matt. 9:35-38; Mr. Geo. Stimson. Aug. 19, The World for Christ; I. Cor. 15: 24-25; Miss Wier. Aug. 26, Consecration meeting; John 15:1-11; Mr. J. A. C. Hildner.

For years upholstering and making over parlor furniture has been my great specialty—to fill up time and keep all my help busy during the dull summer months I have decided to do upholstering work at greatly reduced prices for the next sixty days. While huckleberrying in the McMahon—Herman marsh on Tuesday, Jacob Dresser of this village stumbled and in falling struck his hand against a barb wire fence, inflicting a bad wound. He fainted and lay there about an hour and finally came to and walked home, but he has an ugly wound on the wrist and is much weakened by loss of blood.

CHESEA HERALD.

Rev. C. S. Bullock, of Saline, who filled the pulpit for the Congregational Society for several weeks, has invented an electric heater that is attracting considerable attention.

The school board met Wednesday and elected the following officers for the ensuing year: Director, F. P. Glazier; Moderator, H. S. Holmes; Assessor, W. P. Schenk.

Last Sunday being Chas. Steinbach's 50th birthday, his relatives gathered at his pleasant home on West Middle street and assisted him in celebrating it. The following persons from Ann Arbor were present: Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Frueauff, Mrs. Plina Wurster and Mrs. Plina Hutzel.

CHELSEA STANDARD.

The date of the Farmers' Picnic at Whitmore Lake has been changed from August 18th to August 25th.

There is said to be in some parts of the state, a small black or brown beetle that has for its mission the destruction of eggs for the potato bug. It is working so industriously as to threaten the annihilation of this long endured pest. This sounds like too good news to be true.

The Cavanaugh Lakers organized a ball team and descended upon Chelsea last Thursday afternoon. The natives met the visitors and strove most mightily for the honors of the diamond. When the smoke had cleared away, the score loomed through the gathering twilight showing that the Chelseians had won the day by the juicy score of 31 to 11. The campers stole away in the darkness, ruminating on the picture of a vanished dream.

YPSILANTI COMMERCIAL.

Nobody has alighted at the Ann Arbor depot in the last half-dozen years and run the gauntlet of the sun-dance savages who preside over the busses there, who will not rejoice that the city Marshal has cited the whole gang to appear in the police court and answer to the charge of over-persuasion. We hope they'll give a double dose to the big fellow from the Cook House who shatters people's tympanums with his columbiad voice.

A Man Who Remained Composed in a Railroad Disaster.

Reading an article in which were described the experiences of two men in a railroad wreck, where a car rolled over and over down an embankment into a river, reminded a New Yorker of a similar accident.

"There isn't anything in the world that I know," he said to a New York Tribune man, "that makes a man lose his sense so completely as being tumbled over and over in a falling car, and yet I met a man once who seemed to be the personification of coolness in just such a situation. As soon as our car left the track we were all shot from our berths in various directions, being tumbled up and down and around as the car kept turning somersaults. Like the people I read about, we landed in the water, and then the car came to a standstill, after its terrifying bumping and crashing, I was so frightened that I could scarcely move my arms to keep my head above water.

"Near me, however, was a man who kept his head.

"Don't splash around so," he said. "You'll cut yourself. The car is full of broken glass, lamps, wrenched rods, and rails, and you'll hack yourself to pieces."

"But I thought I was drowning and I shouted my fears to him.

"Oh, no," he said, "we are not drowning; we'll get out of this easily."

"But it was not so easy to escape as my cool friend assured me. The whole inside work had been shattered, and there was nothing by which we could climb to the windows, which were high above us, as our car was overturned, lying on its roof.

"We made so many efforts to jump up, always falling back into the water, that I became exhausted. My friend, however, kept on encouraging me.

"Finally, with his assistance, I managed to clutch a window frame, and I got out. He followed me shortly afterward.

"The first thing he did when he climbed outside was to examine himself for cuts and other wounds.

"Well, I guess I'm alive," he said with a laugh.

"After we had sat there for awhile watching with shivers the wreckers working out to us, my friend declared that he was going to crawl back into the car.

"Great heavens! I begged, 'don't do that; we were lucky to get out once. You might get pinned there, or drowned by the rising water.'

"I have a waistcoat in there," he answered, "and in the inside pocket there is over $1,000. I am going back for that waistcoat. My berth was at an end and I might be able to find it."

"In the face of my protests he crawled back through the window, and when he dropped down with a loud splash I was as 'rattled' as if I had been there again myself. I could hear him puffing around in the water down there for a long time, while he fished for his waistcoat. Finally his wet head came through the window once more, and I was never more glad to see a man.

"I got it," he said with a triumphant laugh. "Pretty wet, but the bills seem to be here. Watch is gone. Too bad too—it was given to me, but one can't expect to save everything out of a railroad wreck," he added cheerfully.

"He was a cool man, that fellow, and nothing could disturb his good humor."

The Kodak in Discipline.

Courtney has invented a new method of coaching the Cornell crew, which seems to be productive of good results. In explanation of his scheme he said: "I have long had this in mind, and concluded to put it in practical operation this spring. I have a snapshot camera, and at various times when this or that rower is in a very ungainly position, or the whole crew is at fault, I take a shot. Then I go into the dark-room and develop the picture, making a blue print upon a sheet, and then take the boys in there. That picture does more practical good than two hours talking and explaining. You may take a man who has a particular fault and explain to him what his trouble is, and yet he fails to discover it, and finally becomes discouraged, thinking you are picking at him. But with my present plan he sees the trouble in an instant and can soon remedy it. I never have to show the same picture twice; the boys destroy them."

Her Rights.

Kosciusko Jones was engaged to be married to a Harlem belle, Miss Esmeralda Longcoffin, and for a while they used to be very affectionate. Of late he has neglected her. Her father asked him why he had given her the cold shake.

"Her money was mostly invested in the Madison Square bank. She is only worth half as much as I thought she was," replied Kosciusko Jones.

"Well, Kosciusko," said the old man, "she is entitled to fifty per cent. of your devotion anyhow. You should remember that when you go courting some other girl."

Complimentary.

Mrs. Newcome invited young Mrs. Smith to step into dinner.

"Hain't I better go home and make myself pretty?" said Mrs. Smith.

"Oh, no, dear—come just as your are!"

CYNTHIA CHIFFON'S CAPRICE.

An August sun was rousing the spires of the cathedral as Miss Cynthia Chiffon rattled up 5th avenue in a cab with her maid.

Miss Chiffon had run over from Narragansett to do some shopping for Mamma Hortense.

It was with great misgivings that Chiffon mere had seen her hope and pride depart from the pier. One of the patrician traditions inherent in the minds of those who make their millions in oil or hogs is that their young women must be chaperoned properly and as befits blue blood.

Little recked she that Miss Cynthia proposed to turn this harmless, needles-and-pins expedition into adventure. The young woman resolved to see a little life on her own account as well as to replenish mamma's boxes and trunks. In this intention she was aided and abetted by Hortense, her maid, a singular mixture of dexterity and diablerie.

There were two men at the pier who had dangled after the pretty girl all summer, but who, thanks to mamma, had had no opportunities commensurate with their respective abilities to make love to her. Miss Cynthia proposed to help them out a bit, and to that end Hortense contrived to let each man know that her young lady was to spend three or four days alone at the Chiffon town house.

Miss Chiffon had not been in her papa's palatial mansion two hours when the card of Mr. J. Townsend Tobasco, was brought up by Hortense. Fifteen minutes later Miss Chiffon had accepted Mr. Tobasco's invitation to dine with him on the following evening. Twenty minutes later Mr. Rene Risque was shown into the drawing room.

Thirty minutes, Tobasco departs with a scowl; forty-five minutes, Mr. Risque goes with Miss Chiffon's promise to dine with him on the next evening but one.

Miss Cynthia knew perfectly well that she was utterly reprehensible. What she did not realize, however, was the dangerous folly of her conduct.

"I have a caprice," said this young woman, who was pleased to speak after the fashion of a French heroine, "to see how they will act. It is high time I were in love. Now, unless symptoms fail, both these objects are in love with me. The man who proves himself an adept in love-making, who is most tenderly in earnest, stormy, savage even, I shall love. I must be carried away by the intensity of his passion. Women love to be mastered," and a lot more of this sort of rubbish which Miss Chiffon had imbibed from a certain class of literature and from whispers over a cup of tea in the boudoir of her frivolous friend, Mrs. Percy Poppycock.

On the next evening Mr. J. Townsend Tobasco rang the Chiffon bell. Mr. Tobasco was a young man of excellent social position, some money, a few brains. Though a man of pleasure, he made it his policy to conceal his dissipation. He was a vestryman of a fashionable church and by his circle was considered a paragon of respectability. He was big, brawny, dully audacious. He fancied he understood women. Especially did he flatter himself he had taken the measure of this little sylph, who in distracting summer costume fluttered into the cab with him and turned a delightfully joyous face expectantly toward him.

It was dusk. The electric lights were flashing out, one by one. Broadway, though deserted, was yet fascinating. The summer night breeze was rising.

"Just fancy!" cried Cynthia, in her jubilant, silvery voice. "Think! I have never been out like this before. What an adorable bat! By the way, where are we going to dine?"

"At a famous Italian restaurant on the East side. That will be another experience. It wouldn't do to go to Del's you know," was his answer.

"No-o," with a delicious pout, "I fancy not. But what is the name of this famous cafe?"

"She cannot possibly know," said the man to himself; then aloud carelessly, "Confetti's."

The girl's face froze disdainfully. "Tell the man to drive home at once," she said.

"I will not," he retorted savagely. "You have chosen to dine with me unchaperoned. I don't propose to have my evening spoiled by your caprices."

The blood of all the dead and gone Chiffon pork-packers burned in the girl's face, and she shook a diminutive but defiant fist right under Tobasco's patrician proboscis: "Take me home, you cad," she said, "or I'll make a scene that will ruin you in all your clubs."

Tobasco looked at the furious little face and succumbed. The butterfly, he might have crushed between his thumb and forefinger, had worsted him.

In utter silence they returned to the Chiffon house. Miss Cynthia marched in, leaving her discomfited wooer to sneak back in the cab, a hissing and a byword to the sophisticated driver who had taken in Tobasco's defeat with great glee.

"Mon Dieu, ma'amselle," stammered Hortense, "you are back already—"

"Get me a cup of tea—"

"Mais, M. Tobasco, ma'amselle," spluttered the maid, foreseeing with the passing of M. Tobasco a stringency in the money market.

"Hold your tongue!"

"Oui, ma'amselle."

"I fancy it served him right," was her sensible conclusion, "but it was odious. And Tobasco! Who ever would have dreamed he is so vile a beast? I was rather fond of him, too—quite seriously thought of loving him—good family, expectations, unexceptionable tailor. Bah! Ah, well, if Tobasco, the respectable, will act like that, what will Rene Risque do?"

She was a little bit frightened when she started out the next evening on her second escapade. But Risque, was an entertaining, winsome chap, talked so charmingly that she soon forgot her nervousness. On and on, away up Riverside they drove. The evening was perfect, her companion clever and thoughtful of her comfort, and Cynthia began to enjoy her stolen fun immensely.

It was nearly 8 o'clock when they stopped at a funny little old-fashioned road-house, where dinner tete-a-tete was awaiting them on the balcony. It was served by Risque's own man, a miracle of discretion, and when Cynthia was shown into a charming room upstairs she found a maid as trim and respectful as Hortense ready to do her bidding. Nay, more. On the toilet table was everything she could possibly desire—powder, hair-pins, maniere implements and a great corsage knot of violets.

"Very correct," thought Miss Chiffon, "very good form, indeed."

Presently she joined Risque on the balcony below. A huge tree threw its heavy shade over the table. The stars looked through its branches. A far off was the glimmer of the Hudson. The perfume of Cynthia's violets drifted across the board to Risque. The Chateau Yquem was heady and the girl's beauty made his senses reel.

"You may go, Pierson," he murmured to his man, who bowed gravely and withdrew. Risque leaned his head on his hand and stared greedily at Cynthia. For an instant she returned his glance steadily, then her eyes dropped.

"Why do you send him away?" she asked.

"That I may be alone with you."

She gave him one helpless, appealing, frightened look. "I was wrong to come," she cried; "I see now how foolish I have been. But, indeed, it was only a bit of fun I wanted—just a caprice, you know. I have always been so environed, you see; I only wanted to know something different—out of the rut—"

She stopped, stammering, blushing, trembling.

Risque drew a long breath. Was this acting? Was it possible she had not realized her imprudence? Was she really the ingenue she looked to be, standing there in her soft, white frock, with his bunch of violets on her sweet, young breast?

Risque had started in with the intention of playing his accustomed role of conqueror, but something—what was it—suddenly possessed him. She looked so forlorn, so lovable, so young, so like a child faltering out its naughtiness. Something besides mere animal fascination stirred him. Was it pity? Was it—

"Take me home," she said suddenly, stretching her hand to him with an indescribable pleading grace. "Take me home and forget my folly—if you can."

He suddenly crushed her—laces, perfume, violets, all—in his arms.

"Yes," he said, "yes, Cynthia, I will take you home—for—I love you."

A month later, the engagement of Miss Cynthia Chiffon to Mr. Rene Risque was announced. Cynthia's caprice was matrimony.

Tears as a Medicine.

The Persians are the only people in the world that still adhere to the old custom of bottling tears. In that country it constitutes an important part in the funeral ceremonies performed over the dead. Each of the mourners are presented with a sponge with which to mop the face and eyes, and after the burial these are taken by a priest who squeezes the tears into bottles. Mourners' tears are believed to be the most efficacious remedy that can be applied in several forms of Persian diseases. The custom of bottling tears is mentioned in the Bible.

Pulled the Queen Over.

The "Marquise de Fontenoy" relates the story of an accident to Queen Victoria when an awkward boy, the son of Lord Montmorres, was kneeling in her presence. In attempting to kiss the royal hand he somehow lost his balance, and, clutching the sleeve of her majesty's dress he brought the stout little lady sprawling to the floor, and she injured her knee. The queen mildly rebuked the boy and did not make him a page as she had intended.

MAJORITY VERDICTS.

Civil Cases May Be so Decided in Most European Countries.

In Scotland, since 1854, it has been provided that in civil cases, after six hours' deliberation, a verdict of three-fourths may be taken. And in British India the code of criminal procedure of 1892 makes a similar provision, and goes even so far as to declare that after due deliberation the opinion of six concurred in by the judge, shall prevail. In most countries of Europe trial by jury is used only in criminal cases, and in France, Italy and Germany a simple majority is sufficient. There is nothing in the reason of the thing, nor in the experience of civilized nations, to justify American persistence in this rule, says Frank Leslie's Weekly.

The constitutions of three of our states provide that in civil action, three-fourths of a jury may render a verdict; these are California, Nevada and Texas. In Texas it provides that the same rule shall apply to criminal cases below the grade of felony. In Connecticut the law provides that a legal verdict may be rendered by any number not less than nine in civil cases, where the parties shall agree to it in writing before the rendition of the verdict. In New Jersey, in 1882, the house of assembly passed a bill providing for similar verdicts in civil cases, but it failed to become a law. But this seems to be the extent to which the efforts to change the rule of unanimity have reached. As long ago as 1869 ex-Governor Koerner, of Illinois, made this suggestion: "A verdict returned within six hours should be unanimous and signed by every jurymen; after that time and within six hours thereafter a verdict signed by eleven jurors may be given; after twelve hours, and within six hours thereafter one signed by ten; after eighteen hours and within six hours thereafter one signed by nine, and after twenty-four hours one signed by eight may be given."

PALPITATION OF THE HEART. Shortness of Breath, Swelling of Legs and Feet.

"For about four years I was troubled with palpitation of the heart, shortness of breath and swelling of the legs and feet. At times I would faint. I was treated by the best physicians in Savannah, Ga., with no relief. I then tried various Springs, without benefit. Finally I tried

TO HOLD 4,000,000 VOLUMES.

The New Library Building at Washington the Largest Known of Its Kind. In round numbers the national library of the United States contains 760,000 bound volumes and 200,000 pamphlets, all of which at present are crowded into a room in the capitol—a room which was full fifteen years ago, according to Kate Field's Washington. Yet the accumulation has gone on until there is barely room to walk about in the library itself, while a dozen rooms elsewhere in the building are filled to overflow. With the need in plain sight it took congress several years to make up its mind to erect a library building, but finally in April 1886, it decided to do it. A site was chosen on Capitol Hill directly east of the capitol itself, and $550,000 was appropriated for its purchase. Forty or fifty buildings had to be removed before excavation could be made for the foundation. It took 2,700 feet of fencing twelve feet high to enclose the ground, and it was nearly four years after the fence was built before any part of the building was visible over its top. There is a great deal of the library—470 feet long by 340 feet wide. It covers 111,000 square feet of ground and will be 140 feet in height from the ground to the top of the dome when finished. That is, next to the capitol, it will be the largest edifice in Washington and the largest library building in the world.

When congress did decide to do the work it was pleased to have it done well. The utmost care was used in securing a firm foundation, and the best of material has been put into the superstructure. All the material is of home manufacture except the white enameled brick. When the contract was made in 1888 no enameled brick was made in this country—certainly not in sufficient quantities. Several states are represented in the construction of the library building. New Hampshire and Maryland furnish the granite; the structural iron work came from Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Indiana, the ordinary brick are made within the District of Columbia, and the floor-tiling comes from Massachusetts and Vermont. "The new library building," declares Mr. Spofford, "will suffice for 150 years to come. When finished it will hold 4,000,000 volumes—nearly fifty per cent more than are now embraced in any library in the world." In national libraries France now leads the world. Hers contains a full million more volumes than that of Great Britain—the next largest. Germany is next in rank and Russia is fourth. The United States comes next in order.

Gigantic Leaves.

What trees bear the largest leaves? An English botanist tells us that it is those that belong to the palm family. First must be mentioned the Inaja palm, of the banks of the Amazons, the leaves of which are no less than 50 feet in length by 10 to 12 in width. Certain leaves of the Ceylon palm attain a length of 20 feet and the remarkable width of 16. The natives use them for making tents. Afterwards comes the cocoanut palm, the usual length of whose leaves is about 80 feet. The umbrella magnolia of Ceylon bears leaves that are so large that a single one may sometimes serve as a shelter for 15 or 20 persons. One of these leaves carried to England as a specimen was nearly 36 feet in width. The plant whose leaves attain the greatest dimensions in a temperate climate is the Victoria regia. A specimen of this truly magnificent plant exists in the garden of the Royal botanical society of Edinburgh. Its leaf, which is about feet in diameter, is capable of supporting a weight of 395 pounds.

In the Beeriest City in Germany.

There has been organized in Munich, which is known as the beeriest city in Germany, a branch of the National association against the abuse of alcoholic drinks. Privy Councillor von Pottenkoffer has been elected its president and Professors Dr. Voit and Bollinger are the vice presidents. Noted ecclesiastics, including the Archbishop von Thoma and high military officers are among the promoters. The leader of the movement emphasizes the fact that the use of beer when it reaches a point such as it has in Bavaria gradually undermines the restibility of the body and the mental energy, and that therefore both from an economical and humanitarian point of view the consumption of beer ought to be restricted.

STATED THEIR NEEDS.

And If His Appeal Was Not Eloquent, It Was Effective.

Many amusing stories are told of an old gentleman who lived in New Jersey many years ago, and who had a warm and philanthropic heart, but a tongue which was easily twisted. He was always ready to speak a word for any good cause, however, and some of his remarkable appeals have been handed down to the present day. On one occasion there was a large public meeting at Newark, and this old gentleman arose to address the people on the subject of a proposed Sunday-school for colored children, says Youth's Companion. He spoke of the new enterprise with earnestness, but evidently became conscious of a slight confusion of speech as he progressed. "Ladies and gentlemen," he said, "in the old Stumptown district there's a good openin' for a Sunday-school, and it's needed, too. We've already got a colored room, and fifty children, some more or considerable less, most of 'em young, and we want a teacher for a class of girls, mostly female; and we want shoes, either male or female, whatever for children, most of 'em either boys or girls."

Here the good man sat down hurriedly and mopped the perspiration from his forehead. There were smiles on many faces, but the female and male shoes and the teacher for the colored room were secured before the meeting was over, in spite of the merriment.

Caught It on the Fly.

In Broadway the other day," said a stroller, "I saw two young men walking together and talking earnestly; one of them was smoking. The smoker was the more earnest of the two. Pretty soon he looked at his cigar which was about two-thirds smoked up, and lighted a fresh one. Instantly he went on talking. 'Pooh!' he began, and in his animation, instead of throwing the discarded cigar into the street, he tossed it into the air. It was caught as it came down by a tramp, who was walking behind him, and who, betraying no surprise whatever, went right on smoking it as though it had been his own."—New York Sun.

Nearing the Grave.

In old age infirmities and weakness hasten to close the gap between us and the grave. Happily scientific research and pharmaceutical skill have allied themselves in furnishing us a reliable means of ameliorating the ailments incident to declining years, and of renewing waning physical energy. Its name is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a widely comprehensive remedy in disease, and an inestimable blessing to the elderly, the feeble and the convalescent. Rheumatic ailments, troubles with the kidneys and lumbago are among the more common ailments of the age. These are effectually counteracted by the Bitters, which is likewise a prevention and curative of malarial complaints, dyspepsia, constipation and biliousness. It is highly promotive of appetite, sleep and the acquisition of vigor.

A Bad, Bad Reporter.

"I was never quite thrown off my equipoise," said a well-known bishop of the Methodist church, "except on one occasion and that was by a Chicago reporter." "They are a sharp lot," suggested a listener. The bishop smiled. "On this occasion," he went on, "I had delivered a sermon at an important church meeting, and I concluded it by quoting the Lord's prayer. After the service this reporter came around to see me. 'That sermon was one of the finest I have ever heard,' he said, 'and I've got all its main points for the paper, but I want the full text of your peroration, and would like to ask you if it was entirely original.' I did not answer him directly," concluded the bishop, "but gave him a copy of the bible with the passage marked in it, and told him to take it home with him; and you should have seen that young man's face when he had fully comprehended the situation."—Detroit Free Press.

A Remarkable Man.

A New York paper says that the Massachusetts penitentiary contains a remarkable character in the person of a young forger. This prisoner has not only refused a pardon, asserting that justice demanded that he should serve out his sentence, but during his imprisonment he has earned several thousand dollars by working overtime, all of which has been handed over to the victims of his crime. The case is one of psychological interest. It would be instructive to learn what the motives and influence were that led a man possessed apparently of such a keen sense of moral responsibility to commit so grave an offense as that which he confesses. The incident shows anew that there is sometimes a large residuum of good in those who are often regarded as the foes of society, and is a fresh argument in behalf of a system of prison discipline that will tend to re-establish self-respect and self-restraint.

An Old Compliment.

One of the neatest and most adroit compliments ever turned out was probably that of Ceresus to Cambyses. That hare-brained monarch once, when the Persians and Ceresus were sitting with him, asked what sort of a man they thought him compared with his father Cyrus. The Persians, of course, like courtiers, replied that he was better than his father, for he had all Cyrus' possessions and Egypt and the sea as well. Thus spoke the Egyptians. Ceresus, however, not being pleased with their opinion, spoke as follows: "Now to me, O son of Cyrus, you do not seem equal to your father, for you have not such a son as he left behind him in you."—The Westminster Review.

Mr. Bruce, of the Dundee Antarctic whaling fleet, describes the whole of the drifting south of 60 degrees south latitude as strewn with icebergs, which become very numerous south of 62 degrees. The base of the bergs was colored pale brown by marine organisms and other brown streaks were seen beyond the water level. No luminous glow was observed. Clothed in mist they raise their mighty snow-clad shoulders to a stately height, or shine forth brilliantly in the sun. Although they are of the purest white yet they glow with color. The crevices exhibit rich cobaltic blue and everywhere are splashes of emerald green.

Australia's Immigration Problem.

Australia is greatly bothered just now by an Indian question akin to our Chinese problem. The Chinese immigration evil has been checked by strong and restrictive measures and the imposition of a heavy head tax. Sealed Letters Thrown Overboard.

The practice of throwing overboard from ships letters inclosed in sealed bottles is centuries old. Hollow copper spheres and oaken barrels have also been used as sea letter carriers in an attempt to trace the direction of ocean currents or to send word from persons at sea to friends on land. Barrels readily attach themselves to these drifting letter holders and sink them. Only a very few of the many messages that have been thrown into the sea have ever been recovered.

Philadelphia Women in Smoking Cars. A conductor of one of the trolley smoking cars on the Thirteenth and Fifteenth streets line, in speaking of the popularity of the cars, said that it was a peculiar fact that they are being used more by women than by men. "The ladies frequently occupy all the seating room," he remarked, "and the man who wants to smoke, for whom the accommodation was really provided, has to enjoy his cigar standing up." When asked how he accounted for this the conductor replied: "Well, I asked a woman acquaintance about it and she told me that so far as she was concerned she liked to have men around her and added, and, as a rule, all real men smoke."—Philadelphia Record.

MY STORY.

But really, Louise, this is unpardonable. I ask the most serious question I ever asked any woman before, and you answer by questions about Arthur Winston."

"I beg your pardon, Mr. Van Alstyne," I returned, humbly, for if I lost his interest altogether, I trembled to think of the prompt paying pupils whom he might influence to leave me. For even then I comprehended the extreme selfishness of the man's nature.

His face cleared.

"You will give me your answer soon?" he asked eagerly. "Here we are at your door. Let me come to-night, Louise?"

I shuddered. Upon that one point I had always been as adamant. I had never permitted Mr. Van Alstyne to call upon me. I never would, unless—I felt a cold chill of aversion run over me.

"Oh, no; not to-night," I cried. "Elsie is not well; and besides, I never receive gentlemen callers, Mr. Van Alstyne."

"Then, when am I to look for your answer?" he persisted.

"I have answered you, sir. I do not love you, and, of course—"

"Stop! Reflect a little. I will leave you alone for a week—a whole week. During that time I shall expect you to make up your mind. To-day is Thursday—next Thursday you will give me your answer."

"Very well," I returned, but feeling quite well what that answer would be.

Seven days. Seven whole days of respite and relief from his presence. I went into our shabby sitting-room feeling almost glad. I came to a halt in helplessness. Elsie lay upon the worn sofa very ill—that was evident at a glance. It was diphtheria—that dread scourge. The landlady gave me immediate notice to have my sister removed to a hospital where such diseases were treated. I could only obey her, and the transfer was made at once. By offering my services free, I was received at the institution to nurse my sister and assist about the building. My pupils, of course, were lost to me forever, and I took up my place at Elsie's sick bed, thoroughly crushed in mind and body.

Days passed in this dreary retreat. The 23rd day of my convalescence had come and gone, but Mr. Van Alstyne did not trouble me with his presence. He did not call to inquire after Elsie, or to ask me to become his wife. But Arthur Winston was one of the visiting students at the hospital, and I soon learned to find in him a help and a comfort. He remained at the hospital altogether, and gave all his time and attention to diphtheria cases, and especially Elsie's case. Under his care and skill she began to improve; and, strange to say, I did not take the disease.

Elsie looked upon Doctor Winston—as she would—with reverence, for she knew his skill had saved her life. And I—I had long ago begun to look upon him with something more than reverence for all the love of my heart was poured forth at his shrine. I knew that he loved me, but we were both very poor, and marriage seemed far from us to contemplate.

One day, while going to the nearest drug store on an errand for Elsie, I met Mr. Van Alstyne face to face. He recognized me and held out his hand.

"Hello," he said. "I could not give up my own life by coming to you, but now that your sister is well, I can trouble myself to come at all." He looked haughtily. "Your conduct has proven your selfish base nature. I do not love you, and would not carry you were you the last one left on the earth."

"I am sorry," I muttered imprecations, and I went for nothing, and hastened back to the hospital.

I met Arthur Winston in the hall outside the ward where Elsie lay. Something in my face made him start; then he took my hand and led me into a private room.

"Here, dear, sit down and rest yourself," he said, in that sweet, gentle way which always wins with a woman. "Something has occurred to annoy you. Tell me, will you?"

And I did. I began at the beginning, and told Arthur my whole story. His face was very pale when I had finished.

"My love of loves!" he cried. "Oh, Louise, I have loved you so long and dearly. I have loved you ever since the time—how long ago it seems—when we used to meet on the street. That Van Alstyne is a wicked man. There is some ulterior reason, some hidden object in his asking you to marry him—I am convinced of it."

A golden hour followed, and when we parted I had promised to be Arthur's wife—poverty and all—in a day's time. Elsie was nearly well—all danger over; no reason for delay. And besides, I was afraid of Mr. Van Alstyne—secretly afraid.

But after all, he could not harm me. I became Arthur Winston's wife, and then soon after discovered the secret of Mr. Van Alstyne's affection for me. Elsie and I proved to be heirs-at-law to an immense estate belonging to my mother's father, and no one in the city but Mr. Van Alstyne, who was a shrewd, scheming lawyer, knew anything about it. And so I won the love of my life, and Providence has blessed us with wealth also. Is that not a satisfactory ending to my story?"

"Tell me, will you?"

of the question to marry a man I do not love.

"But—you love no one else," he persisted—"and will learn to care for me in time. Be my wife, Louise, and I will wait for love to come to you."

Just then I lifted my head, and my eyes chanced to meet the gaze of a pair of dark, handsome eyes. A young man was passing; a young man whom I had met many times upon my way home, and the expression of his eyes, bent upon my face, seemed full of interest and a sort of warning. He looked as though he knew and disapproved of my companion.

I noticed that Van Alstyne nodded slightly to the gentleman.

"Who is that young man?" I asked, curiously. "I meet him so often, he seems almost like an acquaintance."

My companion frowned.

"Only a medical student," he returned, shortly. "He is connected with one of the city hospitals. His name is Winston—Arthur Winston"

Can't Answer a Civil Question.

A curious defect in French law was brought to light in the suit of the ex-king of Naples against his brother, Count de Bari, and Richard, the recognized son of the latter. The question was, whose son is Richard? It might have been thought that Richard's mother would be a useful witness. But, as the affair is a civil one, Richard's mother cannot be questioned; for in French law a woman is considered incapable of answering a civil question.

REV. FATHER CLARKE, Sec'y to the Rt. Rev. Bishop of Columbus, Ohio, writes:
"Gentlemen—I cannot say enough for your powder. It has cured me of an aggravated attack of catarrh when nothing else could help me. Am delighted with it. All my friends to whom I administered samples are quite enthusiastic over it. The good sisters speak most encouragingly of their use of it in the hospital under their care. I will do anything to speak a good word for the remedy to help others who are suffering."
M. E. FENIMON, Custodian U. S. Appraiser's Store, Chicago, writes:
"Gentlemen—Being almost entirely deaf for a number of years past and getting no relief from many so-called cures which I had used, including a trial to try Dr. Birney's Catarrh Powder for my deafness. Have recovered my hearing entirely, so that I can now hear a watch tick plainly, it being held in motion from my ear. I look upon it as a positive cure for deafness and have recommended its use to many of my friends and can say I have never heard of a case where it has failed to relieve."

Non-pull-out

is an arbitrary word used to designate the only bow (ring) which cannot be pulled off the watch.

Here's the idea

The bow has a groove on each end. A collar runs down inside the pendant (stem) and fits into the grooves, firmly locking the bow to the pendant, so that it cannot be pulled or twisted off.

It positively prevents the loss of the watch by theft, and avoids injury to it from dropping.

IT CAN ONLY BE HAD with Jas. Boss Filled or other watch cases bearing this trade mark

All watch dealers sell them without extra cost. Ask your jeweler for pamphlet, or send to the manufacturers.

AN ILL WIND THAT BLEW GOOD.

It has become a subject of gossip. Lieutenant Lyons was thinking uneasily, as he stood and faced his handsome reflection in the mirror. He knotted his tie carefully, while knitting his brows, and frowning as if his reflections were anything but pleasant. "Hang it all!" he thought, "it's time I was brought to my senses. Evil tongues work good sometimes. I've carried this liking for the wife of a brother officer far enough. The freedom we enjoy here, has proved a snare, in my case. And yet,—confound their evil thoughts,—in spite of her fondness for gaiety, she's devoted to her husband and child, and I'd cut off my hand sooner than syllable a word of my feelings to her. I'll get out of this to-morrow, and send in my resignation. I'll take up with that business offer in San Francisco. I don't belong here. I wish I had made up my mind a month ago."

He found no difficulty in getting leave of absence for a few days. He recalled the overheard gossip, sensitively, as he went about his preparations. Lieutenant Palmer had gone on leave of absence to visit his aged father in New Hampshire. Lyons, always on intimate visiting terms at Mrs. Palmer's apartments, went there more than ever, during Palmer's absence. Flossie was much attached to him. She was rather weakly, and was the object of her mother's tenderest solicitude. Every day, Lyons was to be seen, in the handsomest turnout he afforded himself, with Mrs. Palmer and Flossie, out for an airing. Of course, comment was to be expected, at the fort, but Lyons was quite unprepared for the malicious remarks that met his ear accidentally. He knew he was no favorite, that the officers called him foppish, because he had the means to indulge tastes and fancies that they were forced to suppress, and that he was considered a flirt among the ladies, but all this was trifling, compared with hearing his name linked with that of his friend's wife, in a dishonorable fashion.

He decided to slip away without good-bye, without even sending a note. Too many notes had passed the last few weeks. He knew now that every movement was watched, that prying servants had become suspicious and the consciousness of his own sentiments, which must be carefully repressed, made him more keenly sensitive. He would write a frank, open letter from New York, and offer his excuses. But his conscientiously laid scheme was to be frustrated. He took his seat in the car, at the last moment. When the train glided out of the dim depot, into the broad sunlight, there across the aisle, three seats before him, sat Mrs. Palmer and Flossie.

Had the Fates conspired to head him off? Mrs. Palmer was bending over Flossie, anxiously. The next moment her eyes met his, with a bright glad look of recognition. He crossed to her side, in a moment. "You on the train?" she said, as she crowded up the boxes and wraps on the seat opposite her, to make room for him. "I sent you a note, and expected you over. The doctor ordered Flossie away this very day, and I made no delay. She has been drooping dreadfully, with the heat. I have to take the train from New York to Equity, N. J. I don't want to alarm her father, and spoil his vacation if I can avoid it."

"I am going to New York also, in the morning's paper, was electrified by the startling headlines and the sensational article, that chronicled the elopement of Lieutenant Lyons and Mrs. Palmer! It came upon him like a thunder-clap. He winced under the minute circumstantial details, the references to his own domestic life, the opinion that he and his wife did not "pull together" very well, the conjectures regarding his absence, since he had gone off two weeks ago, and left Lieutenant Lyons in possession of the field. Such spicy breakfast salad loses its flavor for the parties who are served up for public delectation. To Palmer, it was maddening. He could not reason. His mind was in a whirl. Falsification never occurred to him, yet how could the thing be possible? Her last letter, written in her usual vein, was but two days old. He had a deep reticent nature, while his wife was social, and demonstrative. He had unbounded faith in her, and had granted her large freedom in her male companionship, with a fearlessness, that seemed to challenge his social world to think ill of her. Had he made a mistake? Had he seemed to sometimes neglect her? Had she so far forgotten the dignity of wifehood and motherhood, as to become infatuated with Lyons, who was so much more social and attractive than himself? He took the 11 o'clock train for home. Along the route he fancied he was regarded curiously. He was the centre of a widening ripple, which was fast embracing the whole land in its circle. In answer to his rather haughty questioning, he got information from the servants, that Mrs. Palmer had gone away with Flossie very suddenly. Their shrugs and significant glances, humiliated him. He forbore sensitively to question, except to make sure at the depot that the pair had taken the train for New York together. He followed them there. He haunted the hotels and the Central depot. He wondered if he should not kill Lyons. He thought of Flossie growing up to blush for her mother, and was glad for the two lying under the daisies. By a curious chance he succeeded in tracing them to the train for Equity. He found it a slow place, behind the times, and that the party he was in search of, were at Mrs. Hickson's four miles from the station. He hired a team and driver. Under cover of a stretch of woodland near the house, he paid the man, dismissed him, and walked up to the low-roofed, rambling, roomy country-house, with doors and windows wide open. He stepped over the low, worn front threshold, into a broad hall. A tableau met his eyes through an open door on the right. Lieutenant Lyons sat by the open window, with Flossie in his arms. The mother stood waving a fan gently before the child's flushed face, and ominously brilliant eyes, her glance full of grave and fearful solicitude. Another woman, and a man with the air of a doctor, stood near. Palmer had no time to analyze the situation. His wife caught sight of him, and flew to greet him, with a kiss. "Did you get my second telegram?" she questioned. "O, Fred," and she burst into tears upon his shoulder, "I—I am afraid Flossie is going like the others. I delayed day after day to take her away, in spite of the doctor's warning."

Feeling rather unreal and shadowy, Lieutenant Palmer shook hands with his brother officer, who transferred Flossie to his arms. With their hearts throbbing as one, the three watched the little life fluttering on the borders of the shadow land. At the end of twenty-four hours she was given back to their arms. In the intervals, it came out, how the doctor had recommended Equity, and also the chance meeting on the train. "Would I like to sue the entire press of America for defamation of character?" exclaimed Lyons wrathfully, when Palmer showed him the staring headlines. "Give gossips no chance hereafter to say you neglect your wife," Lyons dared to say, as the two men stood eye to eye fearlessly, "your wife is most true and womanly, but she is fascinating, and men are—susceptible, and the world is uncharitable."

A frank, meaning glance, which Palmer understood, accompanied the words. "I am proud to call you my friend," he said, as he offered his hand. Leaving Mrs. Palmer with Flossie, the two officers went back to the fort together in a few days. The scandal mongers were at their wits' ends, for a solution of the matter, but the interested parties held their peace. The press found a new sensation in denying the elopement. Newly born domestic peace reigns in the Palmer household. The husband has not forgotten his lesson. Lyons is living down his infatuation amid new surroundings.

His mind was in a whirl—something of a hurry," he explained. Had she heard the gossip? Her unembarrassed manner and clear glance did not betray such knowledge. How sweet and true and womanly she looked, as she bent over Flossie anxiously. She had lost two darlings, and Flossie looked dangerously flushed and feverish. Lyons, watching them, cursed the idle gossip of the fort, felt resentfully certain that Palmer did not half appreciate his wife, called himself an idiot, and ended by sharing the mother's anxiety over his little favorite. "Won't you take me in your arms?" Flossie asked, and at his ready compliance she laid her head against his breast contentedly. He meant to see them aboard the train for Equity, and then leave them, but Flossie seemed worse, and clung to him so piteously, because, as she said: "Mamma's arms were not strong enough to hold her," that he felt that he must accompany them to their destination. Lieutenant Palmer opening the next

The Philosophy of It. Pa and ma were sitting quietly near the fireplace. Pa was reading a paper and ma was knitting. Presently ma looked up over her glasses. "Pa," she said, "I believe our Henry is in love."

"What makes you think so?" "Well, he ain't et nothin' for a week past, to speak of."

Pa laid his paper down in his lap, folded his hands over it and gazed into the fire reflectively. "It's kinder queer 'bout bein' in love," he said, slowly. "When people is courtin' they never seem to keef for victuals, but just as soon as they git married victuals is about the only thing they'll hustle for seven days in the week."
