

A PLEASANT LITTLE STORY.

How Chandler Fixed Conkling. Washington Cor. of the Pittsburg Leader. I do not care to say that Chandler drinks to excess; he might arrest me for libel, but I think I may venture with impunity the statement that he is not a strictly temperance man, and that after dinner he inclines to become occasionally garrulous.

Chandler loves to boast of his strength. Upon this particular occasion he raised up his arm over his head. "See my muscles," said he, "I can lick any man my size anywhere, if I am an old man; that is because I am scioned in the business. But I won't lick a man unless he is a gentleman. Now when a man tells me about me, my way is to go and lick him if he is a gentleman. Now look at Don Pott (Pitt); he tells more damnable lies about me, and I would lick him, but Don Pott is a gentleman. George Townsend is going to lick me for telling a lie about the best lawyer in the country over a week, but before I found him, I learned that he was no gentleman, and so his hand was saved."

Chandler's great hobby is his skill as a pugilist. Roscoe Conkling is also a great boxer. He has a private gymnasium in his residence at Washington, where after dinner he invites such of his friends as are gymnastically inclined for a friendly little bout with the gloves. Conkling is a very good amateur, and as he is a very large, powerful man, he generally has it all his own way with the guests who are bold enough to put the gloves on with him. For some time it was an open dispute between Conkling and the latter, which was the better boxer of the two. Chandler would, after every dinner party of which he was a member, calmly assert that he could lick any man of his weight in the United States.

After the dinner of Chandler dined with Conkling, and the latter inveigled the great war Senator into the private gymnasium. The gloves were donned and the two doughty champions began to make graceful sentimental passes toward each other, according to the most approved rules of the F. R. The bout, however, was of very short duration. Chandler suddenly received a blow between the eyes, which caused the huge senatorial form to go over backward, and his trusty legs failed him and then he sat down so hard that tears came out of his eyes. It took four men to get the war senator up on his legs, but he threw up the sponge at once, without any further effort to come to his feet. The remark that he was heard to make was, "Damstrange," and "I'll fix him yet."

HOW HE FIXED HIM. Conkling and Chandler were much together in a social way, and it was not long after the above occurrence when Chandler received another invitation to come to his room, and to get his legs under Conkling's social boot.

Chandler sent back word that he regretted very much his inability to be present, but he had at his house a guest, a friend of Conkling's, and could not leave him. Conkling sent back word, "Bring your friend along."

With this form of invitation, Chandler consented to come up. He brought his friend with him, and introduced him as "Howard," Detroit, Michigan. Howard was a sad-eyed man of diffident manners, who contented himself with paying very close attention to the themes of the bill of fare, rather than join in the general conversation at the dinner table. Conkling was not a little pleased at the dinner. He told over and over again the story of Chandler's discomfiture as a boxer, and never seemed to tire of asking him what he thought about his ability to lick any man in the United States. Conkling told all these remarks in an absent-minded way, as if, suddenly, he had become lifted above any such petty ambition of considering himself a fine athlete.

At the dinner, Conkling led his guests into the gymnasium for a general smoke and chat. "Come," said he, pleasantly, to Chandler, "don't you want another bout with the gloves?" and then Conkling laughed again in his most cheerful and glib style, as he put on a pair of gloves. "No, I don't want to box," said Chandler, "but, perhaps, my friend here would consent to amuse you." Turning to Mr. Howard, Chandler remarked, "You box, do you not?" Mr. Howard still looked sad-eyed and absent-minded. He did not know something about it, but it was such a long while ago.

"Come," said Conkling, "let us have a friendly bout; I won't hurt you." Evidently the great New York senator was pining to knock some one down. The sad-eyed Mr. Howard, evidently flattered at being knocked down by so distinguished a man began to slowly put on a pair of gloves. As he was drawing on the gloves Chandler was observed to walk down a little to the back ground. A righted look was upon his face, and every now and then he would raise his huge right foot up upon his swaying voluminous coat-tail, and give himself a congratulatory kick, expressive of rapture.

The sad-eyed man now came forward, and the round began. Conkling was for proceeding at once to knock his opponent down, and would have done so had he not found great difficulty in getting any where near the sad-eyed man. The affair was managed by the referee, and the man, suddenly rushing forward and landing a thunderbolt of a flat between Conkling's eyes. The senator went over like a great tree, and rolled into the corner of the room, where he remained in the moment stunned by the concussion. He was heard to say afterward that he thought a house had fallen on him. Conkling had enough of boxing for once.

Chandler took several pleasant little remarks about the skill of his friend Conkling, which were not received in the most cheerful way.

Quick Passage to New York. The Detroit Free Press of Monday says: The Great Western Railway commences to-day to run a fast through express train leaving Detroit at 11:20 a. m. for Buffalo and points east. The train will run six Glencoe and the Air Line, which makes the Great Western Railway sorter by twenty six miles than any other line to the east, arriving in Buffalo at 9 o'clock p. m., where direct connections are made with both the Erie and New York Central Railways for all points east, arriving at New York at 12 o'clock noon the next day, and in Boston at 3:30 the next afternoon. Pullman parlor car from Detroit to Buffalo without change. The above train also makes a stop at Massena Falls at Glencoe that runs over the main line, arriving at Toronto at 11:20 p. m. and at suspension Bridge at 11 o'clock p. m.

Wreckers on a Strike. PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 13.—The employees in the five carpet mills known as the Dobson mills, at the falls of Schuylkill river, numbering 1,700 persons, struck this morning on account of the contemplated reduction of wages. Masses of men adhere to their intention of reduction, and no resumption will be made unless the hands yield. These mills are the largest of the kind in the United States, and their suspension will probably have a serious effect.

How About that Third Term? The Kalamazoo Gazette says: It will be remembered that Chandler in his speech in the Hall on the 20th of November last, party chose to elect President Grant for a third term they would do it, and not ask the Democrats either. Just try it on Zach. Democrats weigh more to the pound than they did a few days ago.

Michigan Argus. FRIDAY MORNING, NOV. 20, 1874.

ALL SORTS OF PEN-SCRATCHES. —Some Republican organs imagine their party may again get into power by the blunders and errors of the Democratic Congress in prospect. In that they will be mistaken. In point of brains and parliamentary ability, the men just elected by the people will compare favorably with those who have to take back seats, while their honesty is yet to be doubted. There is one thing, however, the Administrationists will learn in good season; and that is: the Forty-fourth Congress will investigate matters and things in such a manner as will cause the people to rejoice that they brought about such a radical change of government; and two years hence the few states that did go Republican will fall into line, and we shall once again have a government of the people, by the people, and for the people.

—A Republican Congressman from Kentucky is such a rare thing that the journals of that party are excusable in giving biographies of the gentleman who now enjoys the distinction of being the only Republican Congressman from that State. From one of these now going the rounds, we ascertain that Michigan is so slightly claimed upon the successful candidate, he being a graduate of the Law School at the Michigan University, having previously graduated at the Kentucky University. The name of the Congressman is John D. White, and he is about twenty-six years of age, so that he will probably be the junior member of the House of the Forty-fourth Congress. His grandfather served for ten years in the National House of Representatives, being its Speaker during the Twenty-fourth Congress.

—Bonamy Price, the professor of political economy in Oxford university, lectured in Chicago Monday evening, to a large audience, on Commercial Crisis. The chief cause of these monetary calamities, the professor asserts, is the destruction of capital in unremunerable undertakings, and these unprofitable undertakings are due, he holds, to the unnatural and unhealthy stimulation given to business by the issue of an inconvertible paper currency. Prof. Price thinks it would be better for the part of the United States to issue more greenbacks, and that the only road to commercial prosperity lies through a return to hard money basis.

The full returns of the vote of New York, shows that Tilden's majority is somewhat higher than it was made by unofficial estimates, reaching nearly 55,000. The Democratic vote in the State this year has only once been exceeded—at the election in 1868, when Hoffman, for Governor, received some 439,000 votes, and Seymour, for President, 429,000. The Republican vote, on the other hand, is comparatively small. The temperance vote this year—10,841—is larger than was ever before cast by the temperance party in the State, though scarcely more than one and one-third per cent. of the whole.

—Charles H. Thompson, who has immortalized himself by defeating Butler, claims to occupy an independent position, and announces the principles upon which his victory was won as follows: "First, opposition to the centralization of power in the Federal Government; second, no currency but gold on demand; third, no discrimination in favor of the white race, no discrimination in favor of the colored race, but perfect equality of rights, liberal and just laws for all; fourth, the necessity of rebuking Federal office-holders in caucuses and elections." That is good enough Democracy for anybody.

The canvass of votes for officers of the Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows was made at Grand Rapids Tuesday. The following are elected: Grand Master, Geo. Dean, Detroit; Deputy Grand Master, John N. Ingersoll, Corunna; Grand Warden, D. B. Tracy, Petersburg; Secretary, E. H. Whitney, Lansing; Treasurer, R. H. Morrison, Sturgis; Representative to Grand Lodge, Geo. W. Griggs, Grand Rapids.

—Mark Tapley, the chap who was always the jolliest in the midst of the greatest misfortune, is evidently now editing the Toledo Blade. That journal says: "No better time could have been presented for a Democratic victory than the present fall." Exactly, and the same will be true two years hence. But how singular it is that the Blade did not discover the fact until after election.

—S. B. McCracken, formerly of this city, we learn from an announcement, will commence the publication of a daily paper at Lansing, the first week in January. The paper will be independent, and will contain editorial criticisms on Legislative topics, in addition to local and general news.

—How pleasant must be the task of figuring out in the face of overwhelming majorities against your party, that it was not a very bad defeat after all. This is now the delightful occupation of our Republican contemporaries. —Col. William Wilson, who gained much notoriety at the beginning of the war by raising the regiment known as "Billy Wilson's Zouaves," from among the roughs of New York city, died on Friday last. —Of the thirty-seven States in the Union twenty-two will now have Democratic Governors and fifteen, Republican.

Thanksgiving Proclamation. In compliance with the custom established by the reverence of our fathers, and sanctioned by the gratitude of their children, I invite the people of the State to observe THURSDAY, the 27TH DAY OF NOVEMBER, as a day of Thanksgiving and Praise. The generous response of the earth to our daily needs again reminds us of that old yet newly illustrated truth, that to every "Oh! my Father" there comes a "Here, my child." While we rejoice in the evidence of a Divine Fatherhood, let us remember when gathered together on that day in our places of public worship, or at our firesides, that honest thanksgiving and praise find their true expression in charity of thought and deed, one to another, which gives promise and proof of the Divine brotherhood of man. Given at the Executive Chamber, in Lansing, this sixth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four, and of the Independence of the United States of America the ninety-ninth. JOHN J. BAGLEY, By the Governor. DANIEL STRIKER, Secretary of State.

Pioneer Letters. Extract from letters presented to the Washnetan County Pioneer Society, by Mrs. Julia Wilson, written by Deacon Ezra Maynard to his son, Wm. S. Maynard at Whitesboro, New York.

FIRST LETTER. DETROIT, June 6th, 1824. DEAR SON: Believing that you will be pleased to know what we have done, and what we intend to do, I will inform you that after we left Buffalo we had a very pleasant ride in the Steam Boat to this place, and, after examining many places in this Territory, we have taken up half a section of land on the lower Huron forty miles west of this place, 2 1/2 miles south of the County seat in the County of Washnetan but not in the same town. As we are the first family that has commenced a house in that town, we have taken the liberty to name the town Richard (now Pittsfield). Though there is a lack of timber generally we have on our lot both timber, water and stone plenty. There is on it perhaps 100 acres of oak openings, and 40 or 50 acres (now about ready for the plow) of black loamy soil. The water of the Huron is clear and good, and all the tributary streams made by springs (of which there is plenty on our farm) are pure and cool to drink, so that I feel confident the place must be healthy. The county seat was begun in March last by Messrs. Allen & Rumsey, now there are about 100 lots taken, several houses commenced, mechanics of all most all kinds on the spot. The county seat, which has been established by the Governor since we came here, I presume that it is the most delightful place for a county seat and an extensive village or city in the West. No man that has viewed it says to the contrary. 400 village lots are already staked out and many of them sold and given to mechanics, who are building frame houses. Two saw mills are commenced, and a grist mill is to commence soon. The Huron will admit of the most good mill sites of any river I ever saw, although the law forbids of the navigation being obstructed for 150 miles from its mouth.

Owing to the great emigration into this place, provisions are high and we shall have to pinch a little perhaps till we can raise them ourselves, shall immediately plant some potatoes, garden aude, and sow some turnips; and calculate to put in some wheat, and clover as much as possible for spring crops. We have but one yoke of oxen and not money to buy another, which if we had I think we might do well, for we have pasture plenty, and calculate to cut 30 or 40 tons of hay. I have made a bargain with Mr. Stiles to help me put up a thing to live in, next week, and work with us one year. His wife will do our washing and cooking. They are recommended to me as a very nice, honest, though poor folks. I should prefer my own family but think it the best we can do at present. With love to all friends, I remain, Your father, EZRA MAYNARD.

I wish you to let some one that is coming to you to loan bring my best wagon to Buffalo, and send to Detroit care of D. B. Cole. We shall want it very much before long. SECOND LETTER. July 17th, 1826. The 50th anniversary of American Independence was celebrated at Ann Arbor I think in as solemn and regular order, and pleasant style as ever I saw it done in any place. More than 300 dined at Mr. John Allen's. Exercises—Prayer, by Dea Maynard; Declaration of Independence, by Col. James Allen; Oration, by Samuel Dexter, Esq., together with a Band of Music. Our family enjoy good health, except a little of the ague and fever. We have a prospect of a sufficiency of all necessary staples and some to spare. Yours with affection, EZRA MAYNARD.

THIRD LETTER. January 25th, 1827. You will, I think, be pleased to hear that an Ecclesiastical Society is organized here. A church of 30 members, and a Mr. Page is settled here as our minister, and is much esteemed as a smart and very faithful man. I hope that he will be an instrument in the hand of God of doing much good. At any rate the society in the region around us already wears a very different aspect. In our neighborhood we have a school house and a good school commenced. To-night our prayer meeting is to be held in the school house for the first time. Mr. Page will give us some of the time, Sunday preaching and one evening weekly, so you see that we are not wholly without the means of grace, and of course none of us here shall have any excuse to make if we do not obtain an interest in the great salvation offered in the Gospel. Our county is organized, all the officers commissioned, and to-morrow the first Court is to be held at Ann Arbor, in the County of Washnetan. All the formalities must be attended to, but I hope no one case will be placed on the docket. Some people mentioned yesterday that it was best to indict one man for living with another man's wife, but I told them that it would be commencing a business that would perhaps never come to an end, for I can name a number both male and female who had come here from the States and from Canada who were in the same situation, and if they demeaned themselves as good wholesome inhabitants, and no complaints come from those more interested, I thought we had better let them alone.

Manufacturing Fraudulent Returns in Louisiana. NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 16.—A Underwood, supervisor of registration, and Cohen, clerk of the court of St. James Parish, were arrested to-day by Deputy United States Marshal Flood, charged with being engaged in altering election returns. In the room where the parties were arrested on Barramp street a quantity of tally sheets, statements of votes, several thousand Republican tickets and the seal of the court of St. James Parish were found. Commissioner Craig bound the parties over in $1,000 each to appear. Underwood and Cohen both assert that the only purpose in view was to make out copies of the returns to file with the clerk of the court of the parish, as required by law. Given at the Executive Chamber, in Lansing, this sixth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four, and of the Independence of the United States of America the ninety-ninth. JOHN J. BAGLEY, By the Governor. DANIEL STRIKER, Secretary of State.

Water—Will It Purify Itself? EDITORS OF ARGUS: How and from what source shall the city of Ann Arbor be supplied with pure water, is a question that has been a matter of discussion among her citizens for a number of years, and up to this time with no definite result.

Annie Hackett, a half idiotic girl, aged 15 years, was killed Saturday morning, by a falling tree, near the dam of the water works on the river near McMahon's dam; another, from the river below the town; one from small lakes on the west of the city; and still another from springs on the south. We do not propose here to discuss the merits of either of these projects, but call the attention of your readers to the views of J. Lucas, F. G. S. of the Geological Survey of England, in a work recently on "Horizontal wells"—a new application of geological principles to effect the solution of the problem of supplying London with pure water." Mr. Lucas's views, it will be here seen, are greatly at variance with many celebrated scientists in regard to water purifying itself by exposure. He says: "More chemical analyses of waters with and without organic impurities being of little use, if unaccompanied by medical statistics of results following their use, and organic matter in water arising as it does from various sources, some of which may be innocuous and others poisonous, it is probable that we shall never arrive at the exact influence on health of the percentage of organic matter contained in Thames water. That considerable sewage contamination may take place without indication of its presence by nitrates and nitrites is a fact that deprives chemical analyses of any claim to value as indications of the unwholesomeness of water, more especially as the noxious part of sewage exists there in the form of minute germs so small that they are as yet beyond the reach of chemical science: with microscopic living organisms especially, chemistry is incompetent to deal. It would appear, therefore, that testing drinking-water is perfectly useless. We learn that when water is once contaminated with sewage, there is no process to which it is afterwards subjected that will effectually remove all that sewage contamination from the water, and that though sewage in water may become nearly entirely oxidized, we cannot infer ourselves of the amount that remains. The natural good sense of the greater part of the population of London who avoid drinking Thames water as much as possible is therefore fully borne out by the investigations of science.

Water obtained from permeable strata by means of series of subterranean galleries is necessarily free from all sewage or drainage contamination, being perfectly filtered by nature; its advantages for drinking purposes over all water obtained by surface collection, and from rivers liable to any contamination, are perfectly evident. If, then, a large town requires water supply, and at no great distance from it there lies a formation containing alterations of porous and impervious beds which rise above the level of the town, there should be no difficulty in supplying water to it at high pressure on a constant system. Gladstone on Infallibility. NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—A Herald cable special gives details of a controversy between Gladstone and Archbishop Manning. A pamphlet recently issued by the former, reiterates the views expressed in his article "On Ritualism" in the Contemporary Review, and centers upon the proposition that no one can become a convert to Rome without renouncing his moral and mental freedom, and placing his civil loyalty and duty at the mercy of another. He declares that the Vatican Council established even a wider claim than infallibility, viz: Entire obedience. He therefore calls upon the Catholic clergy to demonstrate to the contrary or to regret it. He expresses a decided opinion that the real object of the Vatican policy is to renew the struggle for the temporal power. He ridicules such a project, but adds that it is difficult to over-estimate the effects of the strife. It would probably jeopardize the peace of Europe. It closes with an appeal to the citizens of the 19th century to follow the example of their forefathers of the 16th, when marshaled to resist the Armada, declaring that England's stout-hearted race is not to be hindered by the foreign influence of caste from accomplishing her mission in the world.

Archbishop Manning's Letter. Archbishop Manning, in a letter of November 10, to the Herald, asserts that he assisted in framing the Vatican decrees, which have not changed one jot or tittle the obligations of civil obedience to the government. He says that the doctrine of infallibility was a divine truth before the Vatican Council was held; that the Council announced no new dogmas, but simply declared an old truth; that the papal claim to temporal power is a civil allegiance, and that civil allegiance is precisely as before that the civil powers of the Christian World hitherto have lived in peaceful relations with the infallible church, and this relation was often recognized and declared in the course of the church before the Vatican Council, and that council made no decrees in regard to the civil powers, nor on civil allegiance, this subject being never even proposed. The archbishop says that the church rests on natural law, revealed truth, as the law of God for society, is founded in nature, and subjects are bound in all things which are lawful to obey their rulers. Mr. Gladstone's argument hangs upon an erroneous assumption, and can only suppose him to have been misled by a misplaced trust in Dr. Dollinger and his friends. But for my belief in Gladstone's sincerity I should say it was an act of injustice out of the question to claim the great statesman's life, and unless the provision of God and the good sense of Englishmen avert its evil consequences may tarnish his great name.

VIEW OF THE "TIMES." The Times sides with Gladstone, saying that the pope's question was in law the full one according to the archbishop, only to be decided by the Pope. THE "TELEGRAPH." The Telegraph says that the pamphlet has revived the nation's confidence in Gladstone. "THE PALL MALL GAZETTE." The Pall Mall Gazette contends that Gladstone is not right in fingering a firm on an account of frauds attempted by the canvassing board of election returns. They make returns giving the Radical candidates for the Legislature a majority of two votes. The City of Millon and adjacent parts of the religious community, saying it was none of his concern whether Catholic principles lead to disloyalty. It is no part of a statesman's duty to raise a popular outcry while the dangers remain theoretical. "THE POST." The Post says that reverence for our institutions is not Gladstone's strong point. This is not his misapprehension.

Radical Basality in Florida. BAIRDAD, Fla., Nov. 16.—We are getting through with the day's work of election returns, and the canvassing board of election returns. They make returns giving the Radical candidates for the Legislature a majority of two votes. The City of Millon and adjacent parts of the religious community, saying it was none of his concern whether Catholic principles lead to disloyalty. It is no part of a statesman's duty to raise a popular outcry while the dangers remain theoretical.

Water—Will It Purify Itself? (Continued) The dry good store of Mr. G. J. Key's Coldwater was broken into on Friday night last and $107 in currency and a draft of $200 were taken from the safe, and a large quantity of ready-made clothing was stolen. The safe was carelessly left unlocked that night, consequently the contents of the safe were easy to get at.

Mrs. J. All were dead when found. Many rumors are afloat, but nothing is definitely known of the cause.

A man named Wm. Butler, foreman in T. North Co's mill at Vassar, was instantly killed Saturday. He was instructing a new man how to run the feed-lever, when in some manner, it struck him on the back of the neck, dislocating it. He was President of the village and was highly respected. He leaves a wife and two children.

The Wyandotte Courier of the 12th says: During the month of October the Silver Smelting Company received twenty-two tons of Lake Superior silver ore and 176 tons of Colorado ore. They shipped in the same month 40,058 ounces of fine silver, valued at $55,080 30; and 176 tons and a half tons of nickel speiss (Regulus) to the United Royal Smelting Works of Prussia and Saxony. The value of the nickel is $400 per ton.

Mrs. Kant, a laundress, who lives in Flint, was visited in her room a few nights ago by several rats that got into her bed and made a fierce attack upon her. She was awake by their gnawing at her face, which is badly torn by their teeth, and in case of her husband, who is a farmer, he has a large number of sheep, and his loss will be sorely felt and hard to make good, but his state of health renders it imperative that a warmer climate should be sought, hence his final decision.

Terrible Accident at Ypsilanti. Tuesday morning Dr. E. H. Drake, of Detroit, a physician of many years practice and a citizen highly esteemed by all who knew him, went to Ypsilanti to hold counsel with the prominent physician in the case of a patient. After a consultation had been concluded, the two gentlemen walked down to the depot, where Dr. Drake was to take the train back to Detroit. Having a few minutes to spare they walked up and down the track in front of the depot, and just as the eastern bound express whistled the station, Doctor Drake was left alone by his companion. The train coming in whistled several times, but the doctor, who was on the track alone, was not alarmed, and he carried steady on his way, and he stepped in front of the express. The engine saw the dangerous situation and pulled the whistle, but the unfortunate man looked this way and that, as if he did not know which way to move, and the next moment he was struck by the front of the locomotive. He was lifted off his feet pitched forward on to the pilot, remained there a moment and then rolled off. A dozen persons ran to him at once, but the Doctor gasped two or three times, and was dead. In picking forward on to the pilot his skull was crushed in by contact with the heavy iron bar used in coupling the locomotive to a car. The body was taken to an undertaker and placed in a casket. News of the accident reached Ypsilanti at once, and a large crowd gathered in the city, and it was generally talked about on the streets.

HOME. It is not my walls, but my humble and grand. That the dearest of words in our tongue we define.

No measure, or lesser or larger of land. Can hold by its firm an acre or a dime. Who is it that sweetest of sweetness has won?

Nay—the lord in his palace, though smooth acres sweep. To the verge of his vision, his own—all his own.

Who is it that sweetest of sweetness has won? Who is it that sweetest of sweetness has won? Who is it that sweetest of sweetness has won?

How to Fatten Cattle. The price of cattle fattened for market depends on the symmetry of the animal, as well as the fat style, as shippers

PHRASES OF PUNKIN PI.—Punkin pi is the sass of Nu England. They are viles and drink, they are joy in the half shell, they are glory even for one day.

EGGS VS. MEAT. Would it not be wise to substitute more eggs for meat in our daily diet? About one-third of the weights of an egg is solid nutriment.

POULTRY-RAISING BY LADIES. A writer in the Poultry Journal very properly says that poultry raising affords an agreeable relief from household care, by enabling one to spend an hour or two
