Welcome to this University Musical Society (UMS) performance. At the University of Michigan we are proud of UMS and of the world-class artists and ensembles it brings each season to the University and southeast Michigan.

We are also proud of the outstanding educational programs UMS offers to people of all ages and the new works in dance, theater, and music it commissions and premières. Through the U-M/UMS Partnership Program, the University is pleased to provide support to UMS as it carries out its commitment to education, creation, and presentation, paralleling the University's commitment to teaching, research, and public engagement.

UMS offers a variety of programs designed to engage U-M students in the arts. These include programs that provide academic context and background for arts performances, or combine arts performances with social activities; initiatives to make ticket purchases more affordable and convenient; and opportunities for students to gain direct experience in arts administration. The programs include:

- Curricular Connections: The live performing arts can often help illuminate what cannot be taught in the traditional classroom setting. Accordingly, UMS works with its U-M academic partners to offer many points of entry for students to become engaged in the arts through classroom-based events. These include in-class lectures by UMS artists; master classes; panels and symposia; lunches or other informal events with the artists; and opportunities for technical theater students to "shadow" professional counterparts during actual performances. Faculty members have also designed special courses to complement UMS programs.

- Student Discount Ticket Programs: UMS offers students three ways to purchase discounted tickets to UMS events: Half-Price Student Ticket Sales, Rush Tickets, and UMS Rush Bucks. Each year, U-M students purchase more than 17,000 discounted tickets, saving more than $375,000.

- Arts & Eats: Launched during Winter Semester 2006, Arts & Eats is an initiative pairing performance attendance with a social function in hopes that, as students meet new people who are also interested in attending arts events, they will continue to attend more frequently. The popular program combines a pizza dinner, a brief talk about the artist or program (often a graduate student), and a ticket to that evening's performance, all for $15. The project is a collaborative effort between Arts at Michigan, the U-M Alumni Association, and the U-M Credit Union.

- Work-Study and Intern Students: UMS works to provide meaningful mentorship experiences for all of its part-time student employees and volunteers, offering high-quality, high-responsibility positions in each department and unique learning experiences at both UMS and at professional conferences and seminars. Evidence of the program's success can be seen in the commitment of student interns to the field of arts management: 30% of the UMS staff began their careers as UMS interns, and many other interns continue to work in the performing arts field.

In addition to UMS events, I encourage you to attend University performances, exhibitions, and cultural activities offered by our faculty and students across the campus. To learn more about arts and culture at Michigan, please visit the University's website at www.umich.edu.

Sincerely,

Mary Sue Coleman
President, University of Michigan
Welcome to this UMS performance. The entire UMS family is grateful that you’re here. We hope you’ll enjoy the experience and attend more UMS events during our 131st season. You’ll find a listing of events on page 2 of your program insert.

There are lots of things I’d like you to know about UMS, and you’ll discover many of them elsewhere in this program book. Here are four things I’d especially like you to know:

1. Guest artists tell us all the time that they love you, the UMS audience, and that you’re a major reason they want to come back. Why? Because you are knowledgeable, appreciative, open to adventuresome programming, include lots of students, know when to maintain your silence at the end of one piece and when to applaud with enthusiasm at the end of another, and—here’s what amazes them—you constitute the largest audience on most international tours although Ann Arbor is the smallest tour stop by far. These were the very things that the Berlin Philharmonic told us at the end of a tour that included Moscow, Bonn, Paris, London, New York, Washington DC, Boston, Chicago…and Ann Arbor. Look who’s coming back to Hill on November 17.

2. The special relationship between UMS and U-M is greatly admired—and envied—by presenters at other major research universities. Why? A long time ago U-M and UMS leaders saw the benefit of having UMS be a separate non-profit organization with a deep affiliation with U-M, and this unique arrangement has served both institutions extraordinarily well. Over the years UMS has created significant educational partnerships with 57 academic units and 175 individual faculty members, and has developed great relationships with U-M students who now constitute 21% of our audience. UMS rents the remarkable performance venues both on campus and in the Ann Arbor community for most of its events, but has the freedom to create its own venues in alternative spaces, like the Sports Coliseum, Michigan Union, or Arboretum, if these spaces can better serve the artist’s vision.

3. UMS is a significant player in southeastern Michigan’s revitalization efforts. UMS board and staff representatives serve on economic development task forces throughout the region.

“...you constitute the largest audience on most international tours although Ann Arbor is the smallest tour stop by far.”
With arts and culture as a key driver of quality of life, and thus a prime motivator for companies choosing new locations or recruiting new talent, UMS often hosts visiting corporate representatives.

When the Royal Shakespeare Company was here three years ago for an exclusive US residency, UMS, working in partnership with the Michigan Economic Development Corporation, Ann Arbor SPARK, and the Ann Arbor Convention and Visitors Bureau, hosted 10 corporate executives from around the country to familiarize them with the rich cultural, educational, and other quality-of-life assets in our community. The result: two companies chose to locate here.

4. Volunteers are central to everything we do. A 500-person usher corps, a 150-voice UMS Choral Union, a 93-member Senate, student interns, a Teacher Advisory Committee, a National Council, a Corporate Council, and countless others help us with strategic planning, special event planning, fund-raising, project-based assistance, backstage support, and promoting performances. The hours donated by our talented 90-member Advisory Committee equal the effort of four-and-a-half full-time staff members. Among the hardest working volunteers are the 36 members of the UMS Board of Directors. On July 1, UMS welcomed six new members to the board: David Canter, Julia Donovan Darlow, Joel D. Howell, S. Rani Kotha, Stephen G. Palms, and Sharon Rothwell. Also serving on the Board this year is

Advisory Committee Chair Janet Callaway. Newly elected officers are Chair James C. Stanley, Vice Chair David J. Herzig, Secretary Martha Darling, and Treasurer Robert C. Macek. Completing six years of distinguished service are Michael C. Allemang, Aaron P. Dworkin, Carl W. Herstein, and A. Douglas Rothwell. Carl Herstein will remain on the Board as Past Chair for the coming season. We simply couldn’t do business without the support of all of these volunteers, who collectively donate over 45,000 hours each year.

Feel free to get in touch with me if you have any questions, comments, or problems...or if you’d like to become a UMS volunteer. If you don’t see me in the lobby, send me an e-mail message at kenfish@umich.edu or call me at 734.647.1174. And thanks again for coming to this event.

Very best wishes,

Kenneth C. Fischer
UMS President
How fortunate we are to be part of a UMS audience that values and supports the performing arts. That is of little surprise given the role UMS has in inspiring us, enriching our community, and broadening our understandings of each other. Be it the sound of music, the movement of dance, or the voice of theater, UMS has brought high quality performances and new experiences from some of the world’s most distinctive artists to audiences for 130 years. The result is that UMS is regarded as one of the most respected presenting organizations in the country.

The artistic expressions experienced at UMS events occur in diverse venues, all of which create an unusual bond between the performers and audience. The seasoned attendee and the newcomer each quickly grasp this unique connection. When UMS performances conclude, the artists know they have been understood and deeply appreciated by the audience. Lasting ovations and the knowledgeable chatter of those leaving the hall reflect the maturity of our patrons. That atmosphere is not always so visible in other halls, and for the performers it establishes a special tie to UMS. It’s been that way for generations, and for good reasons.

Today’s challenging times of world conflict and economic stresses are not new to us. It is important to remember that our forbearers have sustained their emotional and intellectual health by revisiting their cultural roots, and so will we. UMS plays a critical role in our own well being. The 2009/2010 season provides such an example, be it with the classical music of the Berlin Philharmonic, the moods of Wynton Marsalis and the Jazz at Lincoln Center Orchestra, the singing of Patti LuPone or the Vienna Boys Choir, the movement of Hubbard Street Dance Chicago ensemble, the voices of London’s Shakespeare’s Globe Theatre, or the wit of The New Yorker magazine’s music critic Alex Ross. That’s just a small bit of what UMS is doing for us this season. It just doesn’t get any better, anywhere.

The UMS Board and I encourage all of you to stand with us and the entire UMS team. Engage yourself in the experiences afforded by UMS. Attend many of this season’s UMS performances and dare yourself to be exposed to the different sounds and colors that are part of our ever-shrinking planet. Become a donor and enjoy the pride in being among those that fund more than half the expenses of bringing worldwide performances to our doors each year. Learn about us and talk to us at www.ums.org. We like to listen.

Participate as advocates for the cultural contributions that UMS offers to our greater community. Do it for yourselves and those who follow. We owe so much to the many who preceded us and made UMS what it is today. They have set an exceptional standard. And remember, how very fortunate we are.

Sincerely,

James C. Stanley

Parking
Please allow plenty of time for parking as the campus area may be congested.
• Parking is available in the Church Street, Maynard Street, Thayer Street, Fletcher Street, and Fourth Avenue structures for a minimal fee. Please allow enough time to park before the performance begins. UMS donors at the Patron level and above ($1,000) receive 10 complimentary parking passes for use at the Thayer Street or Fletcher Street structures in Ann Arbor.
• UMS offers valet parking service for Hill Auditorium performances in the 09/10 Choral Union series. Cars may be dropped off in front of Hill Auditorium beginning one hour before each performance. There is a $20 fee for this service. UMS donors at the Concertmaster level ($7,500) and above are invited to use this service at no charge.
• Other recommended parking that may not be as crowded as on-campus structures: Liberty Square structure (formerly Tally Hall), entrance off of Washington Street between Division and State; about a two-block walk from most performance venues, $2 after 3 pm weekdays and all day Saturday/Sunday. Maynard Street structure, entrances off Maynard and Thompson between William and Liberty, $.45/half-hour, free on Sunday.
• For up-to-date parking information, please visit www.ums.org/parking.

Refreshments
Refreshments are available in the lobby during intermissions at events in the Power Center, in the lower lobby of Hill Auditorium (beginning 75 minutes prior to concerts—enter through the west lobby doors), and in the Michigan Theater. Refreshments are not allowed in the seating areas.

Non-Smoking Venues
University of Michigan policy forbids smoking in any public area, including the lobbies and restrooms.

Start Time
UMS makes every effort to begin concerts at the published time. Most of our events take place in the heart of central campus, which does have limited parking and may have several events occurring simultaneously in different theaters. Please allow plenty of extra time to park and find your seats.

Become a fan of UMS on facebook and follow UMS on twitter @UMSNews
Latecomers
Latecomers will be asked to wait in the lobby until seated by ushers. Most lobbies have been outfitted with monitors and/or speakers so that latecomers will not miss the performance.

The late-seating break is determined by the artist and will generally occur during a suitable repertory break in the program (e.g., after the first entire piece, not after individual movements of classical works). There may be occasions where latecomers are not seated until intermission, as determined by the artist. UMS makes every effort to alert patrons in advance when we know that there will be no late seating.

UMS tries to work with the artists to allow a flexible late-seating policy for family performances.

Through a commitment to presentation, education, and the creation of new work, the University Musical Society (UMS) serves Michigan audiences by bringing to our community an ongoing series of world-class artists, who represent the diverse spectrum of today's vigorous and exciting live performing arts world. Over the past 130 years, strong leadership coupled with a devoted community has placed UMS in a league of internationally recognized performing arts presenters. Today, the UMS seasonal program is a reflection of a thoughtful respect for this rich and varied history, balanced by a commitment to dynamic and creative visions of where the performing arts will take us in this new millennium. Every day UMS seeks to cultivate, nurture, and stimulate public interest and participation in every facet of the live arts.

UMS grew from a group of local university and townspeople who gathered together for the study of Handel's Messiah. Led by Professor Henry Simmons Frieze and conducted by Professor Calvin Cady, the group assumed the name The Choral Union. Their first performance of Handel's Messiah was in December of 1879 and this glorious oratorio has since been performed by the UMS Choral Union annually.

Many Choral Union members also belonged to the University, and the University Musical Society was established in December, 1880. UMS included the Choral Union and University Orchestra, and throughout the year presented a series of concerts featuring local and visiting artists and ensembles.

Since that first season in 1880, UMS has expanded greatly and now presents the very best from the full spectrum of the performing arts—internationally renowned recitalists and orchestras, dance and chamber ensembles, jazz and world music performers, and opera and theater. Through educational endeavors, commissioning of new works, youth programs, artist residencies, and other collaborative projects, UMS has maintained its reputation for quality, artistic distinction, and innovation. UMS now hosts over 50 performances and more than 125 educational events each season.

The UMS Choral Union has likewise expanded its charge over its 130-year history. Recent collaborations have included the Grammy Award-winning recording of William Bolcom's Songs of Innocence and of Experience (2004), John Adams's On the Transmigration of Souls with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra (2007), Shostakovich's Symphony No. 13 ("Babi Yar") with the Kirov Orchestra of St. Petersburg (2006), and Orff's Carmina Burana during Maestro Leonard Slatkin's opening weekend.

While proudly affiliated with the University of Michigan, housed on the Ann Arbor campus, and a regular collaborator with many University units, UMS is a separate not-for-profit organization that supports itself from ticket sales, corporate and individual contributions, foundation and government grants, special project support from U-M, and endowment income.
• UMS VENUES AND
BURTON MEMORIAL TOWER

Hill Auditorium
Originally built in 1913, a $38.6-million dollar renovation overseen by Albert Kahn Associates, Inc. and historic preservation architects Quinn Evans/Architects has updated Hill’s infrastructure and restored much of the interior to its original splendor. Exterior renovations include the reworking of brick paving and stone retaining wall areas, restoration of the south entrance plaza, the reworking of the west barrier-free ramp and loading dock, and improvements to landscaping. Hill Auditorium re-opened to the public in January 2004.

Interior renovations included the demolition of lower-level spaces to ready the area for future improvements, the creation of additional restrooms, the improvement of barrier-free circulation by providing elevators and an addition with ramps, the replacement of seating to increase patron comfort, introduction of barrier-free seating and stage access, the replacement of theatrical performance and audio-visual systems, and the complete replacement of mechanical and electrical infrastructure systems for heating, ventilation, and air conditioning.

Hill Auditorium seats 3,575.

Lydia Mendessohn Theatre
Notwithstanding an isolated effort to establish a chamber music series by faculty and students in 1938, UMS began presenting artists in Lydia Mendelssohn Theatre in 1993 when Eartha Kitt and Barbara Cook graced the stage of the intimate 658-seat theater as part of the 100th May Festival’s Cabaret Ball. This season the superlative Mendelssohn Theatre hosts UMS’s Jazz Series concert presentations of the Bill Charlap Trio and The Bad Plus.

Michigan Theater
The historic Michigan Theater opened January 5, 1928 at the peak of the vaudeville/movie palace era. Designed by Maurice Finkel, the 1,710-seat theater cost around $600,000 when it was first built. As was the custom of the day, the theater was equipped to host both film and live stage events, with a full-size stage, dressing rooms, an orchestra pit, and the Barton Theater Organ. At its opening, the theater was acclaimed as the best of its kind in the country. Since 1979, the theater has been operated by the not-for-profit Michigan Theater Foundation. With broad community support, the Foundation has raised over $8 million to restore and improve the Michigan Theater. The beautiful interior of the theater was restored in 1986.

In the fall of 1999, the Michigan Theater opened a new 200-seat screening room addition, which also included expanded restroom facilities for the historic theater. The gracious facade and entry vestibule was restored in 2000.

Power Center
The Power Center for the Performing Arts grew out of a realization that the University of Michigan had no adequate proscenium-stage theater for the performing arts. Hill Auditorium was too massive and technically limited for most productions, and the Lydia Mendelssohn Theatre was too small. The Power Center was built to supply this missing link in design and seating capacity.

In 1963, Eugene and Sadye Power, together with their son Philip, wished to make a major gift to the University. The Powers were immediately interested in supporting the University's desire to build a new theater, realizing that state and federal governments were unlikely to provide financial support for the construction of a theater.

Opening in 1971 with the world première of The Grass Harp (based on the novel by Truman Capote), the Power Center achieved the seemingly contradictory combination of providing a soaring interior space with a unique level of intimacy. Architectural features include two large spiral staircases leading from the orchestra level to the balcony and the well-known mirrored glass panels on the exterior. The lobby of the Power Center presently features two hand-woven tapestries: Modern Tapestry by Roy Lichtenstein and Volutes (Arabesque) by Pablo Picasso.

The Power Center seats approximately 1,400 people.

Arbor Springs Water Company is generously providing complimentary water to UMS artists backstage at the Power Center throughout the current season.

Rackham Auditorium

Seventy years ago, chamber music concerts in Ann Arbor were a relative rarity, presented in an assortment of venues including University Hall (the precursor to Hill Auditorium), Hill Auditorium, and Newberry Hall, the current home of the Kelsey Museum. When Horace H. Rackham, a Detroit lawyer who believed strongly in the importance of the study of human history and human thought, died in 1933, his will awarded the University of Michigan the funds not only to build the Horace H. Rackham Graduate School, which houses Rackham Auditorium, but also to establish a $4 million endowment to further the development of graduate studies. Even more remarkable than the size of the gift is the fact that neither he nor his wife ever attended the University of Michigan.

Designed by architect William Kapp and architectural sculptor Corrado Parducci, Rackham Auditorium was quickly recognized as the ideal venue for chamber music. In 1941, UMS presented its first chamber music festival with the Musical Art Quartet of New York performing three concerts in as many days, and the current Chamber Arts Series was born in 1963. Chamber music audiences and artists alike appreciate the intimacy, beauty, and fine acoustics of the 1,129-seat auditorium, which has been the location for hundreds of chamber music concerts throughout the years.

St. Francis of Assisi Catholic Church

Dedicated in 1969, St. Francis of Assisi Catholic Church has grown from 248 families when it first started to more than 2,800 today. The present church seats 1,000 people and has ample free parking. In 1994, St. Francis purchased a splendid three manual "mechanical action" organ with 34 stops and 45 ranks, built and installed by Orgues Letourneau from Saint Hyacinthe, Quebec. Through dedication, a commitment to superb liturgical music, and a vision to the future, the parish improved the acoustics of the church building, and the reverberant sanctuary has made the church a gathering place for the enjoyment and contemplation of sacred a cappella choral music and early music ensembles.

Burton Memorial Tower

Seen from miles away, Burton Memorial Tower is one of the most well-known University of Michigan and Ann Arbor landmarks. Designed by Albert Kahn in 1935 as a memorial to U-M President Marion Leroy Burton, the 10-story tower is built of Indiana limestone with a height of 212 feet. The carillon, one of only 23 in the world, is the world's fourth heaviest containing 55 bells and weighing a total of 43 tons. UMS has occupied administrative offices in this building since its opening.

Sleight of Hand: How Bodies Fool Minds

“Magic” is a performance art in which the body’s role is often underappreciated. “Sleight of hand,” “legerdemain,” and “prestidigitation”—all terms for performance magic—point to the role of the hand in fooling the mind. And in fact, mastery of sleight of hand requires relentless physical practice comparable to that required to master a musical instrument. But like all performance artists, magicians use their full bodies, both as a property of performance, and in the service of deception and illusion.

According to Penn and Teller, master magician Jamy Ian Swiss "makes one understand what a terrifying art form pure sleight of hand can be." But in this original and surprise-laden presentation, Swiss provides a behind-the-scenes view of the ways in which the magician employs the entire body electric to determine what we see.

At first glance, the combination of Tallis's famous psalm tunes with a collection of Latin motets by Byrd may seem rather like chalk and cheese. The psalm tunes, written for a new metrical psalter by Archbishop Matthew Parker in 1567, represent the epitome of the Protestant musical aesthetic: simple, austere, syllabic, and almost entirely homophonic settings in which the clarity of the words (and their biblical origin) was paramount. Such was the style of music Edward VI had imagined when he decreed to Lincoln Cathedral in April 1548 that "the choir shall henceforth sing or say no anthems of our Lady or other saints, but only of our Lord, and them not in Latin, but choosing out the best and most sounding to Christian religion, they shall turn the same into English, setting a plain and distinct note for every syllable."

Byrd's motets, on the other hand, written for the recusant Catholic community and often setting Latin texts with subversive political overtones surely represent the polar opposite. His music is by no means austere, but it pushes the expressive capabilities of choral polyphony to their limit in response to the emotive qualities of the words, many of which, like Parker's, come from the Psalms.

Yet the two repertoires have far more in common than meets the eye. On a practical level, both were written with the intention that they would be performed by the faithful in the privacy of their own homes, rather than by professional choirs in chapels and churches. One can safely surmise that these would have been fairly small-scale performances, not necessarily one-per-part, but at least by few enough performers to gather round the dining-room table, or—for the very well-off—in a private chapel. They were largely amateur performances, but not necessarily unskilful ones; Byrd himself is known to have joined in on occasions.

More importantly, however, it is sometimes overlooked that the dynamic and expressive musical style of Byrd's Catholic Latin motets owes much more, both directly and indirectly (through continental influence), to the post-Reformation musical language than it does to the pre-Reformation style. What the Reformation forced upon musicians was a subservience to—and an engagement with—the words they were setting which, in due time, was actually to nourish artistic development rather than starve it. It also compelled them to learn the art of articulating their musical ideas in an altogether more focused and concise way. While many had revelled in the florid intricacy and architectural grandeur of the pre-Reformation English style, it represented an insular and old-fashioned tradition. Glorious as its soaring melismata would have sounded when well-performed (which, by some accounts, was not often the case), the music tended to display only the most abstract response to the words, which were in many cases fairly redundant in performance, identifiable to the hearer only by the music to which they were sung, if at all. As the Dutch theologian Desiderus Erasmus reported after various visits to England in the early years of the 16th century: "the whole day is now spent in endless singing...not a single word can be clearly understood, nor is there a free moment for the singers to contemplate what they are singing."

So, while English composers like Tallis may have initially been frustrated by the puritanical limitations imposed upon them by Edward VI in the early days of the Reformation, it was, in retrospect, an inevitable jolt along the enlightenment road for the English musicians of the day. By contrast, the short-lived return to the pre-Reformation Catholic style under Mary in 1553–58, for all the freedom it gave composers to compose splendid, intricate, large-scale antiphons once again, can only really be described as a backward step in terms of musical development. Byrd's mature polyphony bears fairly little relationship to that old style, although he would have experienced it first-hand as a teenage chorister learning his art during Mary's reign. Indeed, his music bears much clearer comparison with the inventive and elegant style pioneered by his elder colleague Thomas Tallis during the early years of Elizabeth's reign. Tallis had been his teacher some years previously, and it is clear that, as colleagues, they became very close friends.

Byrd was also one of the first English composers for centuries to be significantly influenced by his continental counterparts, most notably his near contemporary Alfonso Ferrabosco I, who came to England to serve in Elizabeth's court on a number of occasions during the early decades of her reign. Continental music was also becoming more widely disseminated through the distribution of printed motet books, which were becoming ever more available in England. One way or another, the styles of the leading Italian composers, working under the influence of the Counter-Reformation thinkers involved in the Council of Trent, were now filtering through to England. These Catholic theologians... had finally been forced to take on board many of the same musical issues that had occupied Erasmus (a Catholic) and the Protestant reformers a generation or two earlier. In 1562, for example, an early version of the eighth Tridentine canon on the "abuses of the Mass" decreed that "the entire scheme of singing in modes should be designed not to afford empty delight to the ear, but in such a way that the words may be understood by all; and thus the hearts of the listeners may be caught up into the desire of heavenly harmonies and the contemplation of the joys of the blessed."

Although the final form of the canon was less prescriptive on the matter of words and music, this early version nonetheless shows that "reformed" ideas about music in worship were very much bandied about in Counter-Reformation circles, and the response to them by the leading continental composers, notably Palestrina and Victoria, is evident.

Under the reign of Elizabeth—musically tolerant by comparison with Edward—Byrd and Tallis were both able to use these new ideas to their advantage. For Byrd, the technique of homophony, for example, was not so much an annoying restriction but rather a powerful expressive device reserved for the moments of greatest emotional intensity. One such moment is found in the beseeching "miserere mei" (have mercy on me) passage towards the end of Infelix ego, and the stark portrayal of Jerusalem laid waste ("Sion deserta factus est") in Ne irascaris.

Likewise, for all their homophonic austerity, Tallis's psalm tunes are not without their own expressive possibilities, and their extreme simplicity is simply inherent in their genre: metrical psalms were conceived so as to be performable by as wide a range of people as possible. Much of the musical diversity of these settings depends upon the use of the different modes to characterize each melody. This aside, however, Tallis manages to employ a masterly variety of rhythmic nuances and inflections (within the reasonable boundaries of a metric hymn tune) to give each melody its own unique character. Unfortunately, Parker’s Whole Psalter, printed in 1567–8, never went on sale, though its rival—a metrical psalter by Sternhold and Hopkins containing somewhat inferior and anonymous music—went from strength to strength and appeared in several editions.

The Byrd motets performed here are all taken from the Cantiones sacrae of either 1589 or 1591, with the exception of the Propers for Pentecost, which are to be found in his second book of Gradualia, published in 1607. The two books of Gradualia were the largest portion of a fairly monumental plan to compose music for the year-round cycle of Catholic masses (of which the three famous mass settings, published in the 1590s, were the earliest pieces), and, not surprisingly, the individual pieces are less ambitious and more functional in nature. By contrast, the 1589 collection contains some of Byrd’s most subversive motets, many of which are settings of texts that were used in Catholic propaganda. Popular themes included that of the exile of the Jews to Babylon and the destruction of Jerusalem (Ne irascaris)—events which the Catholics associated with their own plight, as well as that of the coming judgement (Exurge Domine and Vigilate). Penitence was also a very common thread (Infelix ego), as the Catholics believed, with the exiled Jews of the Old Testament, that their suffering was given as a punishment for their sin.

Where dramatic or emotive treatment is demanded by the text, Byrd pulls out all the stops. In Vigilate we hear the crowing of the cock magnificently illustrated, as well as the lethargic believer being lulled to sleep at the wrong moment. In the most madrigalian of all the motets, Laudibus in sanctis, the various musical instruments of praise are jubilantly caricatured in the vocal lines, while a brief foray into triple time characterizes those who “praise him in the dance.” The drama and desperation of Exsurge Domine is characterized by ever wilder ascending leaps on the word “exsurge” (arise) in the final section, including that of a minor ninth in the tenor.

Even in the sunnier and less dramatic motet Quis est homo, Byrd finds the opportunity for a little tongue-in-cheek characterization, where, at the point at which “the eyes of the Lord are upon the just,” the just (“justos”) are portrayed with almost excessive religiosity—a string of falling suspensions followed by a very “churchy” minor plagal cadence. Similar illustrative techniques are at work in Laetentur coeli—the florid melismata of the “heavenly choirs” (laetentur coeli) contrast with a rather more raucous and chaotic response “from the earth” (exsultet terra). The mountains rejoice in a statuesque, “mountain-shaped” point of imitation, while “his humble people” (pauperum suorum) are portrayed with unassuming syllabic counterpoint and somewhat gracious harmonic inflections.

One of the expressive tools which is initially perhaps the least striking to modern-day listeners (perhaps because we are so familiar with its sound) is Byrd’s use of what we would now think of as the major key for some of his most poignant motets. It is perhaps in Ne irascaris that this technique is most powerfully used. In these two pieces the effect of the often diatonic, rich, major sonorities, particularly when low in the vocal tessitura, is to plumb the depths of sorrow and emotive expressivity. For the persecuted and marginalized Catholics in England, one might imagine that, sublime and masterful as it is in its own right, Byrd’s earthly expression of their corporate sorrow mingled with joy and hope might yet have encouraged them to a greater “desire of heavenly harmonies.”

Mephisto Waltz No. 2, S. 515 (1880)

Franz Liszt
Born October 22, 1811 in Doborján, Hungary
(now Raiding, Austria)
Died July 31, 1886 in Bayreuth

In his diary, Liszt's pupil and secretary August Goellerich writes that Franz Liszt made a comment after hearing him play Mephisto Waltz No. 2 in concert with pianist Adele aus de Ohe. He said, "I consider it my duty to reject nothing." Dedicated to Camillle Saint-Saëns, this work is rarely played either in its original orchestral form or in its solo and duo piano arrangements. Written in 1881, 20 years after the first and most popular Mephisto Waltz No. 1, and within five years of Liszt's death, the piece explores new harmonic territories. Its beginning and ending includes an unresolved tritone, a musical interval famous for representing the devil. The piece, for all its dissonance, remains firmly in E-flat until the B-F tritone destroys the work's climax and this harmonic gesture leaves the work's ending unresolved.

Mephisto Waltz No. 2 was originally scored for orchestra and premiered in 1881 in Budapest. After hearing the première, Liszt later extended the work and arranged it for solo piano and eventually into the version we hear now for piano with four hands.

The subject of Mephistopheles was eternally fascinating to Liszt. The following program note, which Liszt took from Lenau, appears in the printed score of the Mephisto Waltz No. 1: "There is a wedding feast in progress in the village inn, with music, dancing, carousing. Mephistopheles and Faust pass by, and Mephistopheles induces Faust to enter and take part in the festivities. Mephistopheles snatches the fiddle from the hands of a lethargic fiddler and draws from it indescribably seductive and intoxicating strains. The amorous Faust whirls about with a full-blooded village beauty in a wild dance; they waltz in mad abandon out of the room, into the open, away into the woods. The sounds of the fiddle grow softer and softer, and the nightingale warbles his love-laden song."

Liszt counseled his students from this period not to program his late works, since he felt the public was not ready for them. Liszt also composed third and fourth Mephisto Waltzes, giving him an extended creative period into this subject which so intrigued him.

Program note by Amy Porter and Louis Nagel.

Graceful Ghost Rag (1979)

William Bolcom
Born May 26, 1938 in Seattle, Washington

William Bolcom wrote Graceful Ghost Rag in memory of his father, who passed away in 1970. The rag is laid out in four 16-bar strains, in the pattern ABCA, plus a closing tag. Each strain repeats, and the texture is rich enough that different inner voices can come to the fore each time through, as in Schumann.

Graceful Ghost Rag has achieved a quasi-iconic status, instantly recognized by musicians and many non-musicians. At a given moment, Romanian violinist Sergiu Luca asked for an arrangement of the piece for violin and piano, and Mr. Bolcom obliged.

Lucy and the Count...Love Letters from Transylvania (1981)

Jon Deak
Born April 27, 1943 in Hammond, Indiana

Jon Deak's greatest influences of his works have come from Salvatore Martirano and John Cage and from the Soho Performance Art Movement of the late 1960s and early 1970s. Many of his works are performance scores in a different sense; the work has a visual and theatrical element that transcends the customary relationship of pitch and rhythm. They are a kind of "Story Theater," to borrow the name of a theatrical performing company of the 1970s that produced elaborate versions of fairy tales in which actors began by narrating (as outsiders observing the story), then, gradually became the characters they had been describing. Similarly in Jon Deak's many concert dramas, there are soloists who both narrate and enact the story, and the instrumentalists themselves take part in various ways, both by word and sound.

On several occasions, Deak has turned to an old story, whether a folktale or a work of literary fiction. Lucy and the Count...Love Letters from Transylvania is based on Bram Stoker's Dracula. Other examples in his output include compositions of The Ugly Duckling and The Bremen Town Musicians. All partly make use of speech rhythm for the music. The words of the tale are turned into music, which sometimes takes over the storytelling entirely and sometimes supplies the background to declamation. The instrumentalists evoke words "woven into the music as a sound event." As the
The origins of this “pan-demonium” go back to the Frankenstein Suite of 1971—a sequence of songs and dances written for the Vienna MOB art and tone ART Ensemble which was then active in the field of instrumental theater. Although the suite was a success, I was unhappy about its improvisatory structure, and also needed the resources of a full orchestra. So in 1976–77, I completely recomposed the work in its present form. It was first performed on November 25, 1978 by the Royal Liverpool Philharmonic Orchestra under Simon Rattle with myself as soloist. For the 1979 Berlin Festival, I wrote an alternative version for soloist and 12 players (first performed that year by the Vienna ensemble “die reihe” under Kurt Schwertsik, again with myself as soloist). Since then, the two versions have happily co-existed, and in 1983, at the Espace Cardin in Paris, Frankenstein!! entered the theater for the first time—an unforeseen development, but one that proved suited to Artmann’s multi-layered fantasy.

The title of the volume from which I took the poems of Frankenstein!!—Allerleirausch, neue schöne kinderreime (Noises, noises, all around—lovely new children’s rhymes)—promises something innocuous; but Artmann himself has described the poems as being, among other things, “covert political statements.” Typically he refused to explain what he meant. But his reticence is eloquent: the monsters of political life have always tried to hide their true faces, and all too often succeed in doing so. One of the dubious figures in the pandemonium is the unfortunate scientist who makes so surprising an entry at mid-point. Frankenstein or whoever we choose to identify with that name is not the protagonist, but the figure behind the scenes that we forget at our peril. Hence the exclamation marks.

Artmann’s demystification of heroic villains or villainous heroes finds a musical parallel in, for instance, the persistent alienation of conventional orchestral sound by resorting to a cupboard full of toy instruments. However picturesque or amusing the visual effect of the toys, their primary role is musical rather than playful—even howling plastic horses have their motivic/harmonic function. In order to do justice to the true significance of the texts it would be enough to provide some extra exercises in structural complexity. By analogy with Artmann’s dictum, my aim was a broad palette combining traditional musical idioms with newer and more popular ones, and thus remaining true to the deceptive simplicity of texts whose forms at first glance suggest a naive and innocently cheerful atmosphere.

his years at U-M and at summer festivals across the continent, including Le Domaine Forget, the Brevard Music Center, and the Meadowmount School of Music. He also served as principal violist of the U-M Symphony Orchestra from 2007–2009, and spent three years as a mentor in the Detroit Symphony Civic Orchestra. This evening’s concert marks Mr. Carter’s UMS debut.

Kathryn Goodson (Piano) joined the U-M School of Music, Theatre & Dance in 2005 as collaborative pianist for the wind and percussion department, and in 2008 her responsibilities expanded to include the voice department. Her previous academic posts were held at the Basler Musikakademie, the Conservatoire de Genève in Switzerland, and Eastern Michigan University. Ms. Goodson received her MM and DMA in Collaborative Piano from U-M working with Martin Katz and Eckart Sellheim, and her BM in Piano Performance from Oberlin Conservatory where she studied with Robert Shannon. She was the recipient of two Fulbright Scholarships for Liedgestaltung study in Germany with Hartmut Höll at the Musikhochschule Karlsruhe, from which she holds the Konzertexamen with highest honors. This evening’s concert marks Ms. Goodson’s UMS debut.

Joseph Gramley (Percussion) is committed to bringing fresh and inventive compositions to a broad public, and each year he commissions and premieres a number of new works. His first solo recording American Deconstruction, an expert rendition of five milestone works in multi-percussion’s huge new modern repertoire, appeared in 2000 and was reissued in 2006. His second, Global Percussion, was released in 2005. An invitation from Yo-Yo Ma in 2000 led Mr. Gramley to join the Silk Road Ensemble. In addition to participating in the group’s extended residencies in American and European cities, Mr. Gramley has toured with Mr. Ma and the Ensemble throughout North America, Europe, and Asia. A 1988 graduate of the Interlochen Arts Academy, Mr. Gramley did his undergraduate work at U-M and his graduate studies at The Juilliard School. This evening’s concert marks Mr. Gramley’s third UMS appearance.

Sandra Jackson (Clarinet) is the former principal clarinet of the Orquesta Sinfonica del Estado de Mexico (Symphony Orchestra of the State of Mexico) in Toluca, Mexico. Other orchestral experience includes performances with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, Grand Rapids Symphony, Michigan Opera Theatre, Kalamazoo Symphony, Flint Symphony, and the Ann Arbor Symphony. Ms. Jackson has been on the faculty of the University of Toledo and served as Interim Clarinet faculty at U-M, Eastern Michigan University, and Western Illinois University. During the summer she teaches at Interlochen Center for the Arts. This evening’s concert marks Ms. Jackson’s second UMS appearance.

Andrew Jennings’s (Violin) principal teachers were Ivan Galamian, Alexander Schneider, Pamela Gearhart, and Raphael Druian. He was a founding member of the Concord String Quartet, an ensemble that quickly gained international recognition by winning the Naumberg Chamber Music Award in 1972 and which performed more than 1,200 concerts throughout the US, Canada, and Europe. The Concord Trio, which Mr. Jennings subsequently formed with Norman Fischer and Jeanne Kierman, debuted in 1993. Mr. Jennings's teaching career began at Dartmouth College where members of the Concord Quartet were engaged as artists-in-residence from 1974–1987, and he later served on the faculty of Oberlin College. He currently devotes his summers to chamber music instruction at the Tanglewood Music Center and to the Musicorda School for Strings in Holyoke, Massachusetts. This evening's concert marks Mr. Jennings's 19th UMS appearance.

Christopher Kendall (Conductor) was the Director of the University of Maryland School of Music from 1996–2005 during a time of extraordinary growth in the stature of the program and its occupancy of the Clarice Smith Performing Arts Center, which combines public arts presentation with the academic disciplines of music, dance, and theater. From 1993–1996, Mr. Kendall was Director of the Music Division and Tanglewood Institute of the Boston University School of the Arts. Prior to this, he was Assistant, then Associate Conductor of the Seattle Symphony from 1987–1992. Mr. Kendall earned his BM from Antioch College in 1972 and MM in Orchestral Conducting from the University of Cincinnati College Conservatory of Music in 1974, where he studied conducting with Thomas Schippers, Leonard Bernstein, Elmer Thomas, Louis Lane, and Robert Shaw, and did extensive study at the Dalcroze School of Music in New York City with Hilda Schuster. This evening's concert marks Mr. Kendall's UMS debut.

Jeffrey Lyman (Bassoon) has established himself as one of the premier performers, teachers, and historians of the bassoon in the US. He has been Associate Professor of Bassoon at U-M since 2006, and, prior to that, held positions at Arizona State University and Bowling Green State University. His principal teachers include Bernard Garfield of the Philadelphia Orchestra and Richard Beene and Hugh Cooper of U-M. He holds an undergraduate degree from Temple University and his MM and DMA from U-M. Mr. Lyman has been a member of numerous orchestras across the country and has performed with ensembles including the Philadelphia Orchestra, the Metropolitan Opera Orchestra, the Opera Company of Philadelphia, the Savannah Symphony, the Pro-Musica Chamber Orchestra of Columbus, the Grand Rapids Symphony, and the Michigan Opera Theatre. This evening's concert marks Mr. Lyman's second UMS appearance.

Louis Nagel (Piano) combines an active concert and teaching schedule and is noted for his lecture-recitals by musicians and non-musicians alike. He has taught at the Interlochen Arts Camp, International Music Camp in Poland, Adamant Music School, and the Amalfi Coast Music Festival in Italy. He is director of the U-M School of Music, Theatre & Dance Outreach Program and advisor to the Bachelor of Musical Arts Degree program. Now that you're in your seat...

At the center of the program are two dark works written in the proximity of death by two 20th-century masters, Benjamin Britten and Dmitri Shostakovich, who became friends through music and understood each other deeply, even though geographical and language barriers prevented regular contact or normal verbal communication. Their profound artistic kinship is evident from this pair of quartets.

They will be flanked by two quartets from the era of Viennese classicism. Schubert was too young to have met Haydn in person, but he certainly built on the older master's musical legacy in his own work. Haydn in 1772 was in what his biographers have called his Sturm und Drang (Storm and Stress) phase, and it is that passionate way of writing that influenced Schubert in one of his most dramatic chamber compositions.

String Quartet No. 25 in C Major, Op. 20, No. 2 (1772)
Franz Josef Haydn
Born March 31, 1732 in Rohrau, Lower Austria
Died May 31, 1809 in Vienna

Snapshot of History...
In 1772:
- The British schooner Gaspee is burned by American patriots off the coast of Rhode Island in an event that prepared the way for the Revolution
- Scottish chemist Daniel Rutherford isolates nitrogen
- Mozart, age 16, writes his three divertimenti for strings (K. 136–38), making the transition from child prodigy to mature genius
- The first partition of Poland
- Johann Gottfried von Herder publishes his influential Treatise on the Origin of Language

Haydn is often called the "father" of the string quartet. While this is not entirely true (there were others, most notably Luigi Boccherini, who made significant early contributions to the genre), Haydn certainly opened a major new chapter in quartet history with his Op. 20 quartets. It would be no exaggeration to say that Viennese classical style as we know it was born in 1772, with Haydn's fourth published set of six quartets. Individualization of the four instrumental parts, a sophisticated way of thematic development, and a prodigious diversity of musical characters are only a few features that distinguish these path-breaking masterworks—features that were further developed in the later works of Haydn, as well as those of Mozart, Beethoven, and Schubert.

Within the standard framework of opening sonata-form—slow movement—minuet—finale, each movement of the C-Major quartet is unmistakably unique. The first, proceeding in an unhurried "Moderato" instead of the usual "Allegro," surprises at every turn with its irregular and quite unpredictable phrases, the simultaneous development of three distinct thematic materials, and many daring key changes. The slow movement is even more extraordinary: it opens with a dark, recitative-like theme played by all four instruments in unison and wends its way through many dramatic interruptions until the recitative receives its "aria"—a soaring, song-like melody played by the first violin which itself breaks down in the middle. The movement's inscription "Capriccio" refers to its highly unusual musical form. In a further surprising move, Haydn doesn't bring this "Adagio" to a full close; instead, he leaves it open with a half-cadence and segues directly into the third-movement "Minuet." Whatever expectations we might have about a minuet, Haydn confounds them here: by the numerous slurs across the barlines, he completely obscures our perception of the three-quarter time, only to suddenly burst into dance a moment later. A brief, enigmatic, and—once again—open-ended trio section does little to help us get our bearings.

This quartet is one of three in Op. 20 to end with a fugue. Haydn marked the C-Major fugue as a 4 soggetti, or four subjects. What this means is that, at various points, the main theme is joined by three different countersubjects. Haydn uses several learned devices from the Baroque era such as thematic inversion and overlapping thematic statements (stretto). At the end, however, counterpoint is replaced by a powerful dramatic unison, similar to what we heard in the second movement. Haydn wrote a Latin phrase into the score: "Sic fugit amicus amicum" (thus friend flies from friend), playing on the word fugue and affording a glimpse into the thought associations evoked in him by his own music.

In 1973:
- Watergate scandal in the US
- Salvador Allende's democratic government is overthrown in Chile
- Yom Kippur war in the Middle East
- Benjamin Britten completes his last opera, Death in Venice
- Bernardo Bertolucci directs The Last Tango in Paris

Shortly after the completion of his Symphony No. 15 in the summer of 1971, Shostakovich suffered his second heart attack. His heart improved, but his physical strength and mobility deteriorated significantly. A year later, while in the hospital for kidney stones, a cyst was discovered in his left lung and he began radiation treatments. (The cause of Shostakovich's death, in 1975, was lung cancer.) What bothered him considerably more than his myriad disabilities and failing health, however, was the creative dry spell that they brought on; throughout his life the need for the sustenance of composing was on par with his need for food. His mood improved markedly in the spring of 1973, when the spell was finally broken with the composition of his String Quartet No. 14.

Dedicated to the one remaining member of the original Beethoven Quartet who had not yet received individual recognition, the cellist Sergey (Seryozha) Shirinsky, Shostakovich personalized the dedication both by featuring his instrument and by embedding a quote from Act IV of his opera, Katerina Izmaylova (Seryozha, my fine one) in the last movement. (The same quotation, incidentally, had already appeared in String Quartet No. 8.) Additionally, in the opening pizzicato motive of the last movement, Shostakovich spelled out the musical equivalent of the dedicatee's name. String Quartet No. 14 was given its première in Leningrad on November 12, 1973.

String Quartet No. 14 is in three movements, the second and third played without pause. In sharp contrast to his previous two quartets, in String Quartet No. 14 Shostakovich makes no use of 12-note writing. Chromaticism is present, but its tonal contexts are more clearly defined; the sound is more “traditional.” The cello introduces both main themes in the sonata-form first movement. The initial theme, with its simple descending, then ascending sequences reflect back to a more innocent, carefree past. Cadenzas for the viola and later the cello lead to a coda that brings the movement to a tranquil conclusion. The opening theme of the second movement is a fluid, expressive melody that evolved over a long span; much of the movement is in rarefied two-part texture. A central episode presents a ravishing duet for cello above the first violin. (Shostakovich referred to this uncharacteristically sentimental departure as his “Italian bit.”) The final movement contains crisp pointillistic fragmentation of themes from both first and second movements and concluded with an extensive reprise of the themes, including the “Italian” duet, from the slow movement.

Franz Schubert

Born January 31, 1797 in Himmelpfortgrund, in Vienna

* Died November 19, 1828 in Vienna*

Snapshot of History...

In 1820:
- Indiana University is founded
- Alexander Pushkin writes Ruslan and Ludmila
- Beethoven composes his Piano Sonata No. 30 in E Major, Op. 109
- Antarctica first sighted by explorers
- The mad King George III of England dies, succeeded by his son, George IV

Two of Schubert’s works were epoch-making events, and both remained mysteriously unfinished at the time of his death. One is the well-known “Unfinished” Symphony No. 8 and the other is the Quartettsatz, or Quartet Movement, composed in 1820, just two years ahead of the famous symphony. The Quartettsatz was meant to be the first movement of a complete quartet, but only a fragment of the second movement has survived. No one knows why Schubert left this work unfinished. There were no finale-key problems as there would have been in Symphony No. 8. The important thing is that the Quartettsatz is unlike any chamber music Schubert had composed up to that time; it opens the door to his maturity and, consequently, the door to early Romanticism.

“Romantic” is one word we could use to describe the introductory measures of this sonata form. “Theatrical” is another. Certainly the tremolo string effect leading to a dynamic climax comes more from the operatic theater than from the chamber domain. Following his brooding first theme, Schubert again takes up the tremolo as a transition to the second theme. Even more romantically, this beautifully sweet melody appears in the unexpected key of A-flat Major. The concluding material, however, reverts to the more usual G Major. After what has been termed a “veiled” development section, Schubert brings back his themes, but out of order. First comes the lyrical second theme (now in B-flat and E-flat Major), then the fiery transition, this time leading to the concluding material in C Major. Finally, allusions to the first theme in c minor lead to a reprise of the introduction that caps the movement.

String Quartet No. 3, Op. 94 (1975)
Benjamin Britten
Born November 22, 1913 in Lowestoft, England
Died December 4, 1976 in Aldeburgh

Snapshot of History...
In 1975:
- The Vietnam War ends as the Communist forces capture Saigon
- Britten’s friend Dmitri Shostakovich dies
- E.L. Doctorow publishes Ragtime
- Miloš Forman releases the film One Flew Over the Cuckoo’s Nest
- Andrei Sakharov receives the Nobel Peace Prize

A valedictory work if ever there was one, Britten’s String Quartet No. 3 was written by a dying man. Ever since his open-heart surgery in 1973, Britten was for all intents and purposes an invalid, requiring round-the-clock nursing care and unable to work for more than a few hours a day. It was also the first composition in a long time that Britten wrote without a commission. The group that premiered the work (after Britten’s death), the Amadeus Quartet, had had a previous connection to the composer who had collaborated with them as a pianist at an earlier Aldeburgh Festival; yet they didn’t start working on the piece until 10 months after its completion. (They played it through for Britten in September 1976.)

Critics have called this work the pinnacle of Britten’s chamber-music output, and pointed out its many connections to the composer’s final opera, Death in Venice, completed in 1973. The opera was based on Thomas Mann’s celebrated short story about the writer Gustav Aschenbach who, at the end of his life, discovers the ultimate image of beauty in the person of the young boy Tadzio. Clearly, this was the most directly autobiographical of Britten’s operas. Britten rarely quoted his own music in his works, but in this case, his preoccupation with the musical material of Death in Venice didn’t end with the completion of the opera, and motives from it appear in the fifth and last movement of the quartet. It is also significant that in November 1975, his friends took the ailing composer to Venice one last time, and it is there that the movement in question was completed.

Throughout the work, the quartet idea—four instruments blending their voices—is contrasted with the idea of individual expression. The first movement is titled “Duets” after its preferred texture; the third movement is “Solo,” with the first violin soaring the heights alone, and the last movement begins as a “Recitative” in which all four instruments take turns as soloists. In between such intense arioso moments, movements two and four (“Ostinato” and “Burlesque”) feature the players as a unified group.

The quartet may be a valedictory work, but it is also a prophetic composition, giving the lie to any notion of Britten as a “conservative” composer. At 62 and with his health destroyed, Britten was more adventurous than ever, both harmonically and in terms of texture. At one point in the third movement, the viola plays arpeggios on the “wrong” side of the bridge; elsewhere, the harmonics of the four instruments produce the most uncommon and eerie combinations. Particularly poignant is the ending, where the note of the cello clashes with that of the other three instruments. As Britten told composer Colin Matthews: “I want the work to end with a question.”

The Belcea Quartet has gained an enviable reputation as one of the leading quartets of the new generation. They continue to take the British and international chamber music circuit by storm, consistently receiving critical acclaim for their performances. The Quartet was established at the Royal College of Music in 1994 and has since been coached by the Chilingirian, Amadeus, and Alban Berg Quartets. They are the Associate Ensemble at the Guildhall School of Music and Drama of London and are Quartet-in-Residence at the Atheneum Concert Hall in Bucharest.

The Belcea Quartet has an exclusive recording contract with EMI Classics and won the Gramophone Award for “Best Debut Recording” in 2001. Their discography for EMI includes Brahms’ String Quartet Op. 51, No. 1 and String Quintet Op. 111, No. 2 with Thomas Kakuska, Fauré’s La Bonne Chanson with Ian Bostridge, Schubert’s Trout Quintet with Thomas Adès and Corin Long, a double disc of Britten’s string quartets, Mozart’s “Dissonance” and “Hoffmeister” quartets, and, most recently, the complete Bartók quartets, for which the Quartet was awarded the title “Chamber Music Ensemble of the Year” by Germany’s prestigious Echo Klassik Awards and nominated for a 2008 Gramophone Award. Their double disc of the late Schubert Quartets and the String Quintet with Valentin Erben will be released on EMI later this year.

The Belcea Quartet’s international engagements regularly take them to the Vienna Konzerthaus and Musikverein, Amsterdam’s Concertgebouw, Brussels’ Palais des Beaux Arts, Lisbon’s Gulbenkian, Zurich’s Tonhalle, Stockholm’s Konzerthuset, Paris’ Châtelet and Opéra Bastille, Milan’s Sala Verdi, New York’s Carnegie Hall and Lincoln Center, and San Francisco’s Herbst Theatre, and to festivals including Luberon, Istanbul, Trondheim, Lausanne, Salzburg, Mecklenburg, and the Schwarzenberg Schubertiaide. In the UK they regularly appear at the Edinburgh, Aldeburgh, Perth, Bath, and Cheltenham Festivals, and at Wigmore Hall where they were Resident Quartet from 2001–2006. They regularly work with leading instrumentalists including Thomas Adès, Isabelle van Keulen, Michael Collins, Paul Lewis, Imogen Cooper, Yovan Markovich, Natalie Clein, Piotr Anderszewski, and Valentin Erben. Recent collaborations with singers have included performances of Fauré’s La Bonne Chanson with Anne Sofie von Otter at the Cité de la Musique, Respighi’s Il Tramonto with Angelika Kirchschlager at the Langeland Festival, and with Ian Bostridge at New York’s Zankel Hall and Washington’s Library of Congress. Next year they will give the world première of Mark-Anthony Turnage’s new work for string quartet—Twisted Blues with Twisted Ballad—at Wigmore Hall, Cologne Philharmonie, Amsterdam Concertgebouw, and the Vienna Konzerthaus.

Tonight’s concert marks the Belcea Quartet’s second appearance under UMS auspices. The Quartet made its UMS debut in March 2006 at Rackham Auditorium with pianist Julius Drake and tenor Ian Bostridge.

We begin with a famous scene from the mythology-inspired opera Alceste by Christoph Willibald Gluck, whose operatic reforms changed the musical landscape of Europe. Another operatic reformer, Richard Wagner, only composed one song cycle after he attained compositional maturity. The Wesendonck Lieder came into being in part because of Wagner's affair with the married woman who wrote the words and in part as studies for one of his greatest operas, Tristan und Isolde.

Three songs by Richard Strauss, famed for his operas but a great song composer as well, follow; these three songs span the course of love from initial passion to death. From Germany, we sidestep into Austria and two songs by Joseph Marx, who described himself as a "Romantic realist" and spurned some of the 20th century's more radical innovations.

At the close, we move to the English-speaking world. In the late 1930s, Benjamin Britten wrote witty cabaret songs for Hedli Anderson, wife of poet Louis MacNeice, on poems by W. H. Auden. For the final group, we hear songs by Frank Bridge, who was Britten's teacher, and five American composers—Samuel Barber's uncle Sidney Homer; Kirsten Flagstad's accompanist Edwin MacArthur; industrialist Harvey Firestone's wife Idabelle Firestone; Paul Sargent; and one of contralto Marian Anderson's teachers, Frank LaForge.

During his years of service to the Habsburg imperial court in Vienna (1752–1773), Gluck achieved major reforms to over-stylized operatic conventions in opera seria (early 18th-century "serious opera" in a format that emphasized solo arias). Along with his collaborators, he desired a moratorium on empty vocal virtuosity; a more syllabic style of text setting; less text repetition; simpler, more lyrical melodic lines; and a blurring of distinctions between lyrical and declamatory passages. Moving to Paris in November 1773, Gluck wrote eight operas for Parisian theaters before returning to Vienna for his final years.

Alceste is the second of Gluck's "reform operas" (after Orfeo ed Euridice); it was first performed at the Burgtheater in Vienna in 1767, and a heavily revised version with a French libretto by François Louis Gand-Leblanc du Roullet appeared nine years later.

At the story's beginning, King Admete of Thessaly is dying. Apollo's oracle declares that he can be saved only at the cost of someone else's life. His wife, Alceste, sings "Divinités du Styx" at the end of Act I after she has resolved to offer herself in Admete's place. Gluck conveys her agitation by means of syncopation (rhythmic patterns that deviate from the strict succession of regularly spaced strong and weak beats). He molds his music to each shift of mood and tone in his text in accord with "reform" principles; one notes the slow, awe-filled invocation of ministers of death and the animated tempo at the words, "I feel a new force; I go where my love calls me."

In November 1856, Richard Wagner wrote Princess Marie von Sayn-Wittgenstein—daughter of the Polish-born Princess Carolyne von Sayn-Wittgenstein who pursued a 40-year liaison with Franz Liszt—to say that while working on the opera Siegfried, he had slipped "unaware into Tristan...music without words for the present." The history of Tristan und Isolde (1865), a work that reformed not just opera but the language of music, is entangled with the genesis of the Wesendonck Lieder. Wagner cared little for Lied after his student years in Leipzig and found no occasion to compose songs until 1857, when he was embroiled in an affair with a silk merchant's wife, Mathilde Wesendonck, who wrote these five sensual-ecstatic or sorrowful poems.

In the first song, "Der Engel," we hear of legends told in childhood about angels whose mission is to comfort souls in sorrow by bearing them heavenwards. Wagner lifts his consolatory music upward in three stages that we might hear celestial elevation enacted. In "Stehe still!," the poetic persona implores the cosmic wheel of time to stop so that the lovers' moment of pure passion might endure forever. For the “Rad der Zeit” (wheel of time), we hear majestic wheeling, circling figures in the piano that lead to the unlocked secrets of “holy nature” in primal, grandiose C Major (music’s most elemental key). In “Im Treibhaus,” the persona compares herself to plants in a hothouse. “Mute witness of sorrows, sweet scent rises upwards,” Mathilde writes, while Wagner’s music rises upward in yearning. The music of this song subsequently reappears in the Prelude to Act III of Tristan und Isolde and again at the beginning of Tristan’s “Weiten Reich der Weltenacht,” part of his great monologue before dying. The final song, “Träume,” is a distillation-in-a-nutshell of the tonal revolution Wagner brought into being, with its chromatic harmonies that refuse resolution, enacting in dream-like motion the ongoing perpetuation of desire; at its beginning and end, it anticipates the love duet, “O sink hernieder, Nacht der Liebe,” in Act II of Tristan.

III

“Actually, I like my songs best,” Richard Strauss once said to the great singer Hans Hotter. Believing that great poetry was too self-sufficient for musical setting, Strauss gravitated to minor poets from a generation or two before his own (Baron Detlev von Liliencron and Adolf Friedrich von Schack), as well as his contemporaries (Richard Dehmel).

The setting of Liliencron’s “Ich liebe dich” is a display-piece whose speaker announces her love for better or worse, whether amidst aristocratic pomp or begging in the streets. The fanfares make clear that this is a proclamation, culminating in an exuberant piano postlude. Johannes Brahms had already discovered the poetry of Count Adolf von Schack for songs such as “Abenddämmerung” (Twilight), and Strauss too would gravitate to his verse for the six poems of Op. 19, including “Breit über mein Haupt dein schwarzes Haar,” a majestic renunciation of the light of sun and stars for the dark radiance of the beloved’s tresses. This song demonstrates Strauss’s ability to concoct vocal melodies that provide sensuous delight for singer and listener alike, with their characteristic rapturous leaps into the vocal stratosphere.

Richard Dehmel’s 1896 anthology, Weib und Welt (Woman and World), caused a scandal for its eroticism; Strauss set 11 of Dehmel’s poems to music, including “Befreit.” Dehmel did not like the song, thinking the music was “a little too soft for the poem.” For this poem in which a lover releases his beloved to the death they both know is coming, Strauss devises a song that begins softly—the two harmonies that go back and forth at the beginning hint at the two different worlds of life and death—but includes climactic moments more than sufficient to thrill the listener, if not the picky poet.

IV

The south Styrian composer Joseph Marx is known primarily for his songs. In the span of four years (1908–1912), he composed around 120 songs; more would follow, all in a style that mixes late Romanticism and Impressionism, with debts to Richard Strauss, Gustav Mahler, Max Reger, and others. “Selige Nacht” is a setting of an original poem by Otto Erich Hartleben, who translated the Belgian poet Albert Giraud’s poetic cycle Pierrot lunaire—the impetus for Arnold Schoenberg’s great song cycle in 1912. Here, a pair of lovers lies in bed, rapt in post-coital bliss, while hand-crossing figures in the piano keep the love flowing; the rich, warm blaze of C Major at the “scent of roses” is one notable moment of high Romanticism in this song. “Hat dich die Liebe berührt” is another hymn to love as the crowning glory of life, to words by Paul Heyse, also a translator whose paraphrases of Spanish and Italian folk poetry were set to music by Schumann, Brahms, and Wolf. This song perfectly displays Marx’s late Romantic lush sound world.

V

The shy Benjamin Britten, like Schubert, enjoyed improvising at the piano on social occasions. These cabaret songs to texts by W. H. Auden were created for singer-disease (a female entertainer who performs monologues) Hedli Anderson, wife of poet Louis MacNeice. In “Calypso,” Auden mimics Afro-Caribbean/Indian rhythms to evoke rushing to Grand Central Station to meet his new lover; Britten sets these words to an exciting imitation of a train in the piano. “Johnny” is a set of variations in which each stanza is in a different style: pseudo-folksong, polka or square dance, opera, slow waltz in French cabaret style, and a bit of blues. No matter what ploy or what music the persona tries, the beloved Johnny always “frowns like thunder” and goes away. “Tell Me the Truth About Love” is in Cole Porter-mode, with classical allusions to remind us that sophisticates created cabaret. The text of “Funeral Blues” became newly famous for its appearance in Four Weddings and a Funeral. Originally composed as incidental music for Auden’s play The Ascent of F6, this lament builds to a peak of tragic intensity.

VI

In 1853, one of Ireland's key cultural figures, Patrick Weston Joyce, transcribed a folk ballad he heard in Limerick, a tale of Ireland's most famous elf: “The Leprechaun.” When it came to publication, however, Joyce could only remember one line of the ballad and therefore wrote the remaining words himself. In his Ancient Irish Music of 1901, he tells those unfamiliar with Irish terms that “cruiskeen” is a small jar and that “mountain dew” is, not a soft drink but “potteen” or illicit whisky. Many decades later, another major Irish cultural figure, Herbert Hughes (father of Spike Hughes and founder of the Irish Folksong Society in 1904) collected hundreds of folk songs, including this one, and published them in his Irish Country Songs, Historical Songs and Ballads of Ireland, and Songs of Uladh; his arrangement of “The Leprechaun” is in volume three of the Country Songs. After an appropriately sylvan, delicate piano introduction, the tale of human being and elf trying to out-trick one another is off and running.

VII

The Boston-born Sidney Homer taught music to his nephew Samuel Barber, who always credited his uncle's gift of song. He composed some 100 songs to poems by William Blake, Christina Rossetti, Longfellow, Yeats, and poet-publisher William Ernest Henley, on whom Robert Louis Stevenson based the character of Long John Silver in Treasure Island. “Sing to Me, Sing” is a full-throated hymn to Homer's wife, the famous Metropolitan Opera contralto Louise Homer.

The Juilliard-trained Edwin McArthur (1907–1987) was a celebrated conductor, pianist, and accompanist for Kirsten Flagstad. His song “Night” is a setting of a poem by Charles Hanson Towne, who edited such publications as Harper’s Bazaar. A hymn to night as “the shadow of God,” it begins quietly and builds to a thunderous climax, with an evocative tonal shift en route to contrast the wonders of noon with nocturnal rapture.

Paul Sargent's songs include “Manhattan Joy Ride,” Robert Frost's “Stopping by Woods on a Snowy Evening,” the wonderfully named “File for Future Reference,” and “Hickory Hill,” on a poem by Harvard poet Robert Hillyer. This beautifully brooding song, with its dissonant stabs of pain and its ghostly rustlings in the treble, tells of bygone voices that linger in those places where love was lost.

Songwriter Idabelle Firestone, married to Harvey Firestone (founder of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company), wrote such popular works as “You Are the Song in My Heart.” “If I Could Tell You” was one of the theme songs for the Voice of Firestone programs that began in 1928 and continued for three decades thereafter.

The one exception to this outpouring of American music is the early 20th-century British composer Frank Bridge, who was Benjamin Britten's composition teacher. He began composing songs as a student of Sir Charles Villiers Stanford at the Royal College of Music; his works in this genre belong almost entirely to his early years, before his turn to modernism in the 1920s. “Love Went a'Riding” is one of the most exhilarating rides in all of English song; the three heaven-storming chords at the beginning are an announcement of audacities to follow. The poetry is by Mary Elizabeth Coleridge, the great-grandniece of Samuel Taylor Coleridge.

Frank LaForge, who studied with Theodor Leschetizky in Vienna, was best known as an accompanist for Marcella Sembrich, Frances Alda, Ernestine Schumann-Heink, and Lily Pons; his students included Marian Anderson and Lawrence Tibbett. “Hills” is a setting of an ecstatic ode to nature by Arthur Guiterman, who was known for his humorous poems.

Ms. Brewer can be heard on the labels Hyperion, Naxos, Chandos, and Telarc in repertoire ranging from Mozart, Schubert, and Strauss to Barber, Britten, and Wagner.

Pianist Craig Rutenberg, "whose playing ranges from sterling directness to expansive beauty," (San Francisco Chronicle) has collaborated with many of the world’s greatest vocalists and is recognized as one of the most distinguished accompanists on the stage today. Having studied piano and interpretation with John Wustman, Geoffrey Parsons, Pierre Bernac, and Miriam Solovieff, Mr. Rutenberg has appeared in recital with Denyce Graves, Sumi Jo, Harolyn Blackwell, Susanne Mentzer, Frederica von Stade, Angelika Kirchschlager, and Dawn Upshaw, and frequently with Thomas Hampson, Ben Heppner, Jerry Hadley, Olaf Baer, Simon Keenlyside, and Stanford Olsen. He performed with Mr. Hampson at the White House under the Clinton administration.

This afternoon’s recital marks Christine Brewer’s second appearance under UMS auspices. Ms. Brewer made her UMS debut in April 2004 singing in William Bolcom’s Songs of Innocence and of Experience featuring U-M School of Music, Theatre & Dance ensembles and the UMS Choral Union, conducted by Maestro Leonard Slatkin. The Naxos recording of this performance won four Grammy Awards in 2006, including the awards for “Best Choral Recording” and “Best Classical Album.”

This afternoon’s recital marks Craig Rutenberg’s third UMS appearance. Mr. Rutenberg made his UMS debut in November 1993 at Hill Auditorium in recital with baritone Thomas Hampson. He last appeared in April 1998 accompanying mezzo-soprano Susanne Mentzer in recital.

What is Body Music?

Body music is music and dance created by clapping, slapping, snapping, stepping, and vocalizing. Body music was most likely the first music and dance. Before people were hollowing logs and slapping rocks to make musical instruments, they were probably stomping, clapping, vocalizing, and making other sounds to express their musical and dance ideas. People still play many forms of body music, including hambone and stepping in the US, to saman in Indonesia, palmas in Spain, and sophisticated new forms derived from all of these.

Body music is accessible to all. To experiment with body music, it’s easy to manifest familiar rhythms such as the 1–2–3 of a waltz or the 2–4 of a reggae beat by playing different parts of the rhythm on different parts of our bodies—for example, slapping knees, stomping feet, and clapping hands. Playing with the rhythm of words or nonsense syllables can also be body music. Accomplished musicians such as Keith Terry have developed body music into a contemporary art form with links to some traditional forms.

The style of body music that Keith Terry has pioneered since the mid-1970s is not a culture-specific style like those aforementioned, but a mixture of many influences: drumming, world music, tap dance, and circus arts. Through the years, Mr. Terry has gained knowledge of many diverse rhythm systems from around the world. As a drummer whose specialty is trap set, his body music initially came directly from displacing what he was playing on the drums onto his body. On top of finding a portable way of playing rhythmic music, Mr. Terry also found mobility, which allows him to move in space, making it a movement art as well as a musical form.

At the time of his initial experimentation, Mr. Terry was playing drums for some of the older generation of tap dancers, most of whom... have since passed on. Charles “Honi” Coles and Charles “Cookie” Cook, two masters in particular, encouraged and advised Mr. Terry to pursue his unique style of body music. He is still following their advice, and the result is some very exciting body music, which combines elements from several world music sources with fresh innovations, forging a now increasingly popular style.

Program note from World Arts West.

The Sounds of Body Music...

Percussion instruments produce their sound when a player hits, scrapes, rubs, or shakes them to produce vibrations. These techniques can also be applied to the human body. The body also presents several unique possibilities including the use of inhaled or exhaled air and vocal sounds.

Traditionally, the four main body percussion sounds (in order from lowest pitch to highest in pitch) are:

- Stomp: stamping the feet against the floor or a resonant surface
- Patsch: patting either the left, right, or both thighs with hands
- Clapping hands together
- Click: clicking (snapping) with the thumb and middle fingers

Numerous other possibilities include hitting the chest, whistling, slapping or flicking the cheeks with an open mouth, clicking with the tongue against the roof of the mouth, grunting, and hitting the buttocks.

Variations of sound are possible through changing the playing technique. For example, clapping the hands in various positions will affect factors such as pitch and resonance.

Keith Terry is a percussionist and rhythm dancer well known for his innovative body music that literally incorporates solid rhythm in a high-energy dance. As Artistic Director of Crosspulse, Mr. Terry has created large-scale cross-cultural performance projects that blur the line between music and dance: the Crosspulse Percussion Ensemble, the Body Tjak projects with Indonesian choreographer/composer I Wayan Dibia, and Professor Terry’s Circus Band Extraordinaire. Mr. Terry has collaborated with numerous artists, including Bobby McFerrin, Robin Williams, the Bobs, the Turtle Island String Quartet, and the original Jazz Tap Ensemble. He has produced several CDs and DVDs for Crosspulse Media. Mr. Terry is the recipient of a 2008 Guggenheim Fellowship.

The SLAMMIN All-Body Band is a powerhouse sextet from Oakland, California with a fresh mix of a cappella singing, beatboxing, and body music. Deeply rooted in jazz, funk, R&B, and world music, the ensemble is known for lightning-fast improvisations. Rowdy, funky, humorous, and vibrant, their material is old school, contemporary, and of-the-moment.

This evening’s performance marks the UMS debuts of Keith Terry and the SLAMMIN All-Body Band.

What Body Music means to me...

Theresa Reid, Executive Director of Arts on Earth

What moves me most about body music is its accessibility. We’re all born with everything we need to make body music. There’s nothing to buy—no obstacle to keep any of us from becoming a body music virtuoso. We carry our instruments everywhere, can play—improvise, create, explore, perfect—at any time. People have been creating body music all over the world since the beginning of time, and fascinatingly, this universal form of expression very often reflects distinct cultural differences in style and technique. I’m excited about raising the community’s awareness of this elemental form through the residency of the amazing Keith Terry.

UMS EDUCATION AND AUDIENCE DEVELOPMENT PROGRAMS

09/10 Season: Breaking Down Walls
www.ums.org/education

UMS's Education Program deepens the relationship between audiences and art, while efforts in Audience Development raise awareness of the positive impact the performing arts and education can have on the quality of life in our community. The program creates and presents the highest quality arts education and community engagement experiences to a broad spectrum of constituencies, proceeding in the spirit of partnership and collaboration.

Both literally and figuratively, the 09/10 UMS education season celebrates the breaking down of walls: literally in the celebration of the 20th anniversary of the fall of the Berlin Wall and events surrounding the presentation of the Berlin Philharmonic; and figuratively, in the attempt to break down walls that impede personal and intellectual growth, participation in the arts, and connections to community. Each event challenges participants to expand the way they think about art, culture, and creativity, and encourages a greater investment in UMS and the arts as a whole.

In this time of economic challenge, the UMS 09/10 education programs "go deeper" with projects that encourage sustained engagement over time, allow a variety of entry points for a wide range of interests and audiences, and explore the diversity of artists, art forms, ideas, and cultures featured in the current UMS season.

I am Michigan.

I am proof that the University of Michigan changes lives.

When I first came to campus, I didn’t know of any black composers and didn’t see many minorities attending classical concerts. With the support of professors at the School of Music, I established an organization to encourage diversity in the classical arts—and I did it while still a student. U-M introduced me to a whole new world of music and allowed me to discover my life’s work.

Being a member of the Alumni Association is how I give back to the University that has provided me so much.

I am proud to say,
I am Michigan.

There are many ways to support the efforts of UMS, all of which are critical to the success of our season. We would like to welcome you to the UMS family and involve you more closely in our exciting programming and activities. This can happen through corporate sponsorships, business advertising, individual donations, or through volunteering. Your financial investment and/or gift of time to UMS allows us to continue connecting artists and audiences, now and into the future.

CORPORATE SPONSORSHIP AND ADVERTISING

Advertising
When you advertise in the UMS program book you gain season-long visibility among ticket buyers while enabling an important tradition of providing audiences with the detailed program notes, artist biographies, and program descriptions that are so important to the performance experience. Call 734.764.6833 to learn how your business can benefit from advertising in the UMS program book.

Sponsorship
As a UMS corporate sponsor, your organization comes to the attention of an educated, diverse, and growing segment not only of Ann Arbor, but all of southeastern Michigan. You make possible one of our community's cultural treasures and also receive numerous benefits from your investment. For example, UMS offers you a range of programs that, depending on your level of support, provide a unique venue for:

- Cultivating clients
- Developing business-to-business relationships
- Targeting messages to specific demographic groups
- Enhancing corporate image
- Making highly visible links with arts and education programs
- Recognizing employees
- Showing appreciation for loyal customers

For more information, please call 734.647.1176.

INDIVIDUAL DONATIONS

We could not present our season without the invaluable financial support of individual donors. Ticket revenue only covers half of the cost of our performances and educational events. UMS donors help make up the difference. If you would like to make a gift, please fill out and mail the form on page P/36 or call 734.647.1175.
Recognized as one of Michigan’s premier law firms, Honigman Miller Schwartz and Cohn LLP works in harmony with our clients to deliver the highest caliber solutions to achieve their objectives.

Honigman is pleased to support University Musical Society.

For more information, please contact Frederick (Fritz) Morsche at 313.465.7040.
The UMS Advisory Committee is an organization of over 80 volunteers who contribute approximately 7,000 hours of service to UMS each year. The Advisory Committee champions the mission and advances UMS's goals through community engagement, financial support, and other volunteer service.

Advisory Committee members work to increase awareness of and participation in UMS programs through the Education Ambassador Committee, a new Community Ambassador project, ushering at UMS youth performances, and a partnership with the U-M Museum of Art (UMMA) Friends Board.

Meetings are held every two months and membership tenure is three years. Please call 734.647.8009 to request more information.

Raising money to support UMS Education Programs is another major goal of the Advisory Committee. The major fundraising events are:

Delicious Experiences
These special events are hosted by friends of UMS. The hosts determine the theme for the evening, the menu, and the number of guests they would like to entertain. Several events are being planned for this season and will be announced soon.

Fifth Annual On the Road with UMS
In 2008, more than 300 people enjoyed an evening of food, music, and silent and live auctions, netting more than $72,000. This year's event was held on September 11 at Barton Hills Country Club.

Ford Honors Program and Gala:
San Francisco Symphony
Saturday, March 20, 2010
This year's program will honor the San Francisco Symphony (SFS) and Michael Tilson Thomas (MTT), Music Director. Founded in 1911, the SFS is widely considered to be among the country's most artistically adventurous arts institutions. Michael Tilson Thomas assumed his post as the Symphony's 11th Music Director in 1995. MTT's 13 seasons with SFS have been praised by critics for innovative programming, for bringing the works of American composers to the fore, developing new audiences, and for an innovative and comprehensive education and community program.

Beginning the evening will be a Gala Dinner at the Michigan League, followed by the SFS concert. After the performance, guests can meet SFS musicians and MTT at an afterglow reception. Please call 734.647.8009 for more information.
The exciting presentations described in this program book are made possible by the generous support of UMS donors—dedicated friends who value the arts in our community and step forward each year to provide financial support. Ticket revenue covers only 47% of the costs associated with presenting our season of vibrant performances and educational programs. UMS donors—through their generous annual contributions—help make up the difference. In return, they receive a wide variety of benefits, including the opportunity to purchase tickets prior to public sale.

For more information, please call the Development Office at 734.647.1175 or visit www.ums.org.
Thank you to those who make UMS programs and presentations possible. The cost of presenting world-class performances and education programs exceeds the revenue UMS receives from ticket sales. The difference is made up through the generous support of individuals, corporations, foundations, and government agencies. We are grateful to those who have chosen to make a difference for UMS! This list includes donors who made an annual gift to UMS between July 1, 2008 and August 1, 2009. Due to space constraints, we can only list those who donated $250 or more. Every effort has been made to ensure the accuracy of this list. Please call 734.647.1175 with any errors or omissions. Listing of donors to endowment funds begins on page P/44.
