Louis-Hector Berlioz (1803-1869) completed his Requiem on June 29, 1837, and Francois-Antoine Habeneck conducted the first performance on December 5 that year, with Gilbert-Louis Duprez as tenor solist. The first American performance was given under the direction of Leopold Damrosch in New York on May 4, 1881. Tonight's concert marks the first performance of the work by the University Choral Union.

Berlioz begins with chorus and an orchestra of woodwinds, French horns, and strings. He proposes specific numbers—four flutes, two oboes, two English horns, four clarinets, twelve French horns, eight bassoons, fifty violins, twenty each of violas and cellos, eighteen basses, and for the chorus, eighty women, sixty tenors, and seventy basses, but adds that these numbers "are only relative, and one can, space permitting, double or triple the vocal forces and increase the orchestra proportionally. If one had an immense chorus of 700 or 800 voices, the entire group should sing only in the Dies Irae, the Tuba Mirum. and the Lacrymosa, using no more than 400 voices in the rest of the score." Berlioz uses both an expressive cantabile (e.g. Requiem aeternam and Te deum hymnus) and a quiet rhythmic declamation (e.g. et lux perpetua and Kyrie eleison). Indeed, when the voices first enter, he at once suggests both manners, the basses' melody being accompanied by the detached syllables of the tenors, who in turn are doubled by the bassoons playing the same melody legato.

The Dies Irae begins with the same vocal and orchestral forces, and with striking contrast between the stern phrase of the cellos and basses (quite obsessive this will turn out to be) and the plaintive line of the sopranos and woodwinds. With the Tuba Mirum Berlioz, in a dramatic stroke, adds four brass groups, stationed north, east, west, south at the corners of the grand mass of singers and instrumentalists. As the movement proceeds, Berlioz unleashes as well an immense volume of percussion, four pairs of kettledrums, two bass drums, four tam tams, and ten cymbals. As Death and Nature stand astounded, the music falls into silence. (Some of this music is recycled from a Mass Berlioz wrote about 1824, most of which he destroyed.)

The obsessive bass phrase from the beginning of the Dies Irae continues to sound through Quid sum miser, a brief and quiet movement in which the words are assigned almost entirely to the tenors, who are specifically asked to express humility and fear in their singing. English horns, bassoons, cellos, and basses accompany.

Rex tremendae is another conception on a huge scale, and on the words Ne cadam in obscurem! the Day of Judgment brass and percussion intervene once more. But the thought of the fount of mercy brings quiet.

Quaerens me—these are the lines of text that according to Donald Francis Tovey "Dr. Johnson sometimes tried to quote, but never without bursting into tears"—is sung by unaccompanied voices, and very softly throughout.

Sheer terror whips through the "lamentable day" called up by the Lacrymosa. After the gentle interlude of Pie Jesu, the brass choirs and the percussion join to tie this movement to the earlier parts of the Dies Irae. The idea of thus using extra brass went back to 1831 and a never-executed plan for an oratorio on The Last Day of the World; then, too, his letters indicate his concern for presenting this cataclysm with characteristic economy and precision.

The Offertory, Domine, Jesu Christe, is another movement of the greatest delicacy. Almost to the end, the voices sing on two notes, and only the word promisisti releases them.

Hostias is for male voices with instrumental punctuation. But what punctuation it is, that series of chords for high flutes with eight trombones swaying and receding on their deepest pedal notes!

High solo violins, flute, and violas divided into four sections and playing "a very dense tremolo," accompany the tenor solo and the choral responses in the Sanctus. The Hosanna is fugued, and Berlioz implores the chorus to sing "without violence, sustaining the notes well instead of accenting them one by one." For the return of the Sanctus, Berlioz finds yet another of his most extraordinary and new sounds.

In the Agnus Dei, as in several passages of the Dies Irae and the Offertory, Berlioz somewhat reorders the text. This is a movement of summation and of recapitulation of words, musical themes, and textures. Woodwinds, trombones, and voices sing repeated Amens across the pianissimo arpeggios of the strings and the softly thudding punctuations of eight kettledrums.

—Michael Steinberg
REQUIEM ET KYRIE—Grant them eternal rest, O Lord, and let everlasting light shine on them. To thee, O God, praise is meet in Zion, and unto thee shall the vow be performed in Jerusalem.

Hearken unto my prayer: unto thee shall all flesh come. Grant the dead eternal rest, O Lord, and let everlasting light shine on them. Lord, have mercy upon us! Christ, have mercy upon us! Lord, have mercy upon us!

DIES IRAE—The Day of Wrath, that day shall dissolve the world in ashes, as witnesseth David and the Sibyl.

What trembling there shall be when the Judge shall come who shall thresh out all thoroughly!

The trumpet, scattering a wondrous sound through the tombs of all lands, shall drive all unto the Throne.

Death and Nature shall be astounded when the creature shall rise again to answer to the Judge.

A written book shall be brought forth in which shall be contained all for which the world shall be judged.

And therefore when the Judge shall sit, whatsoever is hidden shall be manifest, and naught shall remain unavenged.

QUID SUM MISER—What shall I say in my misery? Whom shall I ask to be my advocate, when scarcely the righteous may be without fear?

REX TREMENDAE—King of awful majesty, who freely savest the redeemed, save me, O fount of mercy.

Remember, merciful Jesu, that I am the cause of thy journey, lest thou lose me in that day.

When the damned are confounded and devoted to sharp flames, call thou me, and from the bottomless pit and the mouth of the lion, deliver me, lest I fall into darkness, lest Tartarus swallow me. Who freely savest the redeemed, save me, O fount of mercy.

QUAERENS ME—Seeking me didst thou sit weary: thou didst redeem me, suffering the cross: let not such labor be in vain.

O just Judge of vengeance, give the gift of remission before the day of reckoning.

I groan as one guilty; Spare, O God, me, thy supplicant.

My prayers are not worthy, but do thou, good Lord, show mercy, lest I burn in everlasting fire.

Thou who didst absolve Mary and didst hear the thief’s prayer, hast given hope to me also.

Give me a place among thy sheep and put me apart from the goats, setting me on the right hand.

LACRYMOSA—Lamentable is that day on which guilty man shall arise from the ashes to be judged.

Merciful, Jesu, Grant them eternal rest.

DOMINE, JESU CHRISTE—O Lord, Jesu Christ, King of glory, deliver the souls of all the departed faithful from torment. O Lord, deliver them from the torments of hell and from the bottomless pit. Deliver them, and let Saint Michael the standard-bearer bring them forth into the holy light, which thou didst once promise unto Abraham and his seed. Amen.

HOSTIAS—To thee, O Lord, we render our offerings and prayers with praises. Receive them for those souls which we commemorate today.

SANCTUS—Holy, holy, holy, Lord God of Sabaoth. Heaven and earth are full of thy glory. Hosanna in the highest.

AGNUS DEI—Lamb of God, that takest away the sins of the world, grant them eternal rest.

To thee, O God, praise is meet in Zion, and unto thee shall the vow be performed in Jerusalem. Hearken unto my prayer: unto thee all flesh shall come.

Grant the dead eternal rest, O Lord, and let everlasting light shine on them. Grant them eternal rest, O Lord, and let everlasting light shine on them with thy Saints for ever, O Lord, for thou art merciful. Amen.

In Memoriam

Tonight’s concert is performed in memory of Jindřich Rohan, who was born May 14, 1919, and died in Prague on February 14, 1978. Mr. Rohan first conducted in Ann Arbor in 1972, when The Festival Chorus sang with his Prague Symphony Orchestra. He subsequently conducted choral concerts in the May Festivals of 1974 and 1977.
